Hebreus 6:1, 2 mostra que a "doutrina primária" inclui o "arrependimento de obras mortas e a fé para com Deus", seguidos pelo ensino sobre batismos, a imposição das mãos, a ressurreição e o julgamento eterno. As "obras mortas" (expressão que aparece ainda apenas em He 9:14) evidentemente significam, não apenas as obras pecaminosas do erro, obras da carne decaída, que levam a pessoa à morte (Ro 8:6; Gál 6:8), mas todas as obras que em si mesmas são espiritualmente mortas, vãs, infrutíferas.

Isto incluiria as obras de justificação de si mesmo, esforços feitos pelos homens de estabelecer sua própria justiça, à parte de Cristo Jesus e seu sacrifício de resgate. Assim, a observância formal da Lei, por parte dos líderes religiosos judaicos e de outros, constituía "obras mortas", porque lhe faltava o ingrediente vital da fé. (Ro 9:30-33; 10:2-4) Isto os fez tropeçar em Cristo Jesus, que era da parte de Deus o "Agente Principal . . . para dar a Israel arrependimento e perdão de pecados", ao invés de se arrependerem. (At 5:31-33; 10:43; 20:21) Também a observância da Lei, como se esta ainda vigorasse, tornar-se-ia "obras mortas", depois de Cristo Jesus a ter cumprido. (Gál 2:16) Similarmente, todas as obras que, de outro modo, seriam de valor, tornam-se "obras mortas", se a motivação não for o amor, o amor a Deus e o amor ao próximo. (1Co 13:1-3) O amor, por sua vez, tem de se expressar "em ação e em verdade", harmonizando-se com a vontade e os modos de Deus, comunicados a nós mediante sua Palavra. (1Jo 3:18; 5:2, 3; Mt 7:21-23; 15:6-9; He 4:12) Aquele que se volta para Deus com fé, mediante Cristo Jesus, arrepende-se de todas as obras corretamente classificadas como "obras mortas", e depois as evita, purificando-se assim a sua consciência. — He 9:14.

O batismo (a imersão em água), exceto no caso de Jesus, era um símbolo divinamente provido, associado com o arrependimento, tanto da parte dos que se achavam na nação judaica (a qual falhara em guardar o pacto de Deus, enquanto este vigorava), como da parte das pessoas das nações, que 'deram meia-volta' para render serviço sagrado a Deus. — Mt 3:11; At 2:38; 10:45-48; 13:23, 24; 19:4; veja BATISMO.

Impenitentes. A falta de arrependimento genuíno resultou no exílio de Israel e de Judá, em duas destruições de Jerusalém, e, por fim, na completa rejeição daquela nação por parte de Deus. Quando repreendidos, não se voltaram realmente para Deus, mas continuaram a 'retornar ao proceder popular, qual cavalo que se arroja à batalha'. (Je 8:4-6; 2Rs 17:12-23; 2Cr 36:11-21; Lu 19:41-44; Mt 21:33-43; 23:37, 38) Visto que no seu coração não desejaram arrepender-se e 'retornar', aquilo que ouviram e viram não lhes dava entendimento e conhecimento; havia um "véu" sobre seu coração. (Is 6:9, 10; 2Co 3:12-18; 4:3, 4) Infiéis líderes religiosos e profetas, bem como falsas profetisas, contribuíram para isto, fortalecendo o povo em seu erro. (Je 23:14; Ez 13:17, 22, 23; Mt 23:13, 15) Profecias cristãs prediziam que a futura ação divina, repreendendo os homens e concitando-os ao arrependimento, seria similarmente rejeitada por muitos. Predisseram que as coisas que eles sofreriam somente os endureceriam e amargurariam a ponto de blasfemarem de Deus, muito embora fosse a sua própria rejeição dos caminhos justos Dele que seria a raiz e a causa geradora de todas as suas dificuldades e pragas. (Re 9:20, 21; 16:9, 11) Tais pessoas 'armazenam para si furor no dia da revelação do julgamento de Deus'. — Ro 2:5.

Além de arrependimento. Os que 'praticam o pecado deliberadamente', depois de terem obtido conhecimento exato da verdade, ultrapassaram o ponto do arrependimento, pois rejeitaram a própria finalidade pela qual o Filho de Deus morreu, e, assim, juntaram-se às fileiras dos que o sentenciaram à morte, na realidade, "de novo pregam para si mesmos o Filho de Deus numa estaca e o expõem ao opróbrio público". (He 6:4-8; 10:26-29) Isto, então, é um pecado imperdoável. (Mr 3:28, 29) Teria sido melhor que tais "não tivessem conhecido de modo exato a vereda da justiça, do que, depois de a terem conhecido de modo exato, se desviarem do mandamento santo que lhes foi entregue". — 2Pe 2:20-22.

Visto que Adão e Eva eram criaturas perfeitas, e visto que a ordem de Deus para eles era explícita e foi entendida por ambos, torna-se evidente que seu pecado foi deliberado e não era desculpável à base de qualquer fraqueza ou imperfeição humanas. Portanto, as palavras de Deus, dirigidas a eles depois disso, não incluem nenhum convite ao arrependimento. (Gên 3:16-24) Assim, também, se deu com a criatura espiritual que os induziu à rebelião. O fim dela e o fim de outras criaturas angélicas que se juntaram a ela é a destruição eterna. (Gên 3:14, 15; Mt 25:41) Judas, embora imperfeito, vivera em íntima associação com o próprio Filho de Deus, e ainda assim se tornou traidor; o próprio Jesus se referiu a ele como "o filho da destruição". (Jo 17:12) O apóstata "homem que é contra a lei" é também chamado de "filho da destruição". (2Te 2:3; veja ANTICRISTO; APOSTASIA; HOMEM QUE É CONTRA A LEI.) Todos os classificados como "cabritos" figurativos, no tempo do julgamento régio da humanidade por Jesus, semelhantemente "partirão para o decepamento eterno", não lhes sendo feito nenhum convite ao arrependimento. — Mt 25:33, 41-46.

A Ressurreição Oferece uma Oportunidade. Em contraste, quando Jesus se dirigiu a certas cidades judaicas do primeiro século, ele se referiu a um futuro dia de julgamento em que elas estariam envolvidas. (Mt 10:14, 15; 11:20-24) Isto dá a entender que pelo menos algumas pessoas daquelas cidades seriam ressuscitadas, e embora a sua anterior atitude impenitente lhes tornaria muito difícil arrepender-se, elas teriam a oportunidade de manifestar um humilde arrependimento e "dar meia-volta" em conversão a Deus por meio de Cristo. Aqueles que deixarem de fazer isso receberão a destruição eterna. (Compare isso com Re 20:11-15; veja DIA DO JULGAMENTO.) No entanto, aqueles que seguirem um proceder semelhante ao de muitos escribas e fariseus, os quais deliberada e intencionalmente combateram a manifestação do espírito de Deus por meio de Cristo, não terão ressurreição, e por isso não poderão "fugir do julgamento da Geena". — Mt 23:13, 33; Mr 3:22-30.

O malfeitor na estaca. O malfeitor na estaca, que mostrou certa medida de fé em Jesus, pregado numa estaca ao lado dele, recebeu a promessa de estar no Paraíso. (Lu 23:39-43; veja PARAÍSO.) Ao passo que alguns se têm esforçado a interpretar esta promessa no sentido de que o malfeitor recebeu assim a garantia de vida eterna, a evidência dos muitos textos já considerados não permite isso. Embora ele admitisse o erro da sua atividade criminosa, em contraste com a inocência de Jesus (Lu 23:41), nada mostra que este malfeitor tivesse chegado a 'odiar a maldade e a amar a justiça'; por ocasião da sua morte, ele obviamente não estava em condições de 'dar meia-volta' e produzir "obras próprias de arrependimento"; ele não havia sido batizado. (At 3:19; 26:20) Portanto, parece que, na ressurreição dentre os mortos, ele receberá a oportunidade de adotar tal proceder. — Veja Re 20:12, 13.

Como pode Deus, que é perfeito, "deplorar" algo?

Na maioria dos casos em que se usa a palavra hebraica na·hhám no sentido de "deplorar" ou "ter lástima", a referência é a Jeová Deus. Gênesis 6:6, 7, declara que "Jeová deplorou ter feito os homens na terra e sentiu-se magoado no coração", pois a iniquidade deles era tão grande, que Deus decidiu eliminá-los da face do solo por meio do Dilúvio global. Isto não pode significar que Deus o deplorou no sentido de ter cometido um erro na sua obra de criação, porque "perfeita é a sua atuação". (De 32:4, 5) Deplorar algo é o contrário de ter satisfação e alegria prazerosas. Portanto, Deus deve ter deplorado que, depois de ter criado a humanidade, a conduta dela tornou-se tão má, que ele se viu então obrigado (e de direito) a destruir toda a humanidade, com exceção de Noé e sua família. Porque Deus 'não se agrada na morte do iníquo'. — Ez 33:11.

A Cyclopædia (Ciclopédia) de M'Clintock e Strong comenta: "Diz-se que o próprio Deus se arrepende [na·hhám, deplora]; mas só se pode entender isto como a alteração de sua conduta para com suas criaturas, quer em conceder-lhes o bem, quer em infligir-lhes o mal — mudança esta, na conduta divina, que se baseia na mudança em suas criaturas; e, assim, falando-se na maneira dos homens, diz-se que Deus se arrepende." (1894, Vol. VIII, p. 1042) As normas justas de Deus permanecem constantes, estáveis, imutáveis e livres de flutuações. (Mal 3:6; Tg 1:17) Nenhuma circunstância pode fazê-lo mudar de ideia sobre elas, nem desviá-lo delas ou abandoná-las. Todavia, a atitude e as reações das suas criaturas inteligentes para com essas normas perfeitas e para com a aplicação delas por Deus podem ser boas ou más. Se forem boas, isso agradará a Deus; se forem más, fazem com ele que deplore isso. Ademais, a atitude das criaturas pode mudar de boa para má, ou de má para boa, e visto que Deus não muda suas normas para acomodá-las, seu prazer (e as bênçãos acompanhantes) concordemente pode mudar para lástima (e a acompanhante disciplina ou punição), ou vice-versa. Assim, os julgamentos e as decisões dele são totalmente isentos de caprichos, volubilidade, inconstância ou erro; portanto, ele está isento de toda conduta errática ou excêntrica. — Ez 18:21-30; 33:7-20.

O oleiro talvez comece a fazer um tipo de vaso e depois mude para outro estilo, se o vaso for "estragado pela mão do oleiro". (Je 18:3, 4) Com este exemplo, Jeová ilustra, não que ele seja como um oleiro humano em 'estragar pela sua mão', mas, antes, que ele tem autoridade divina sobre a humanidade, autoridade de ajustar seus tratos com ela segundo o modo em que ela reage ou deixa de reagir favoravelmente à justiça e à misericórdia dele. (Veja Is 45:9; Ro 9:19-21.) Ele pode assim "deplorar a calamidade que [pensou] em executar" sobre uma nação, ou "deplorar o bem que disse [para si mesmo] fazer-lhe para seu bem", tudo dependendo da reação da nação aos seus anteriores tratos com ela. (Je 18:5-10) De modo que não é que o Grande Oleiro, Jeová, erre, mas, antes, que o "barro" humano passa por uma "metamorfose" (mudança de forma ou de composição) no que se refere à condição de seu coração, fazendo Jeová deplorar isso ou mudar de ideia.

Isto se aplica tanto a pessoas como a nações, e o mero fato de que Jeová Deus fala de 'deplorar' algo a respeito de certos dos seus servos, tais como o Rei Saul, que se desviou da justiça, mostra que Deus não predestina o futuro de tais pessoas. (Veja PRESCIÊNCIA, PREDETERMINAÇÃO.) Deplorar Deus o desvio de Saul não significa que tê-lo Ele escolhido como rei fora um erro e devia por isso ser deplorado. Antes, Deus deve ter deplorado que Saul, como pessoa de livre-arbítrio, não fizera bom uso do esplêndido privilégio e da oportunidade que Deus lhe oferecera, e que a mudança de Saul exigia uma mudança dos tratos de Deus com ele. — 1Sa 15:10, 11, 26.

O profeta Samuel, declarando a decisão adversa de Deus a respeito de Saul, disse que "a Excelência de Israel não se mostrará falso e não terá lástima, pois Ele não é homem terreno para ter lástima". (1Sa 15:28, 29) Os homens terrenos frequentemente se mostram infiéis à sua palavra, deixando de cumprir as suas promessas ou não vivendo à altura dos termos de seus acordos; sendo imperfeitos, cometem erros de critério, causando-lhes lástima. Isto nunca se dá com Deus. — Sal 132:11; Is 45:23, 24; 55:10, 11.

O pacto de Deus, feito entre Deus e "toda a carne" após o Dilúvio, por exemplo, garantiu incondicionalmente que Deus nunca mais traria um dilúvio de águas sobre toda a terra. (Gên 9:8-17) De modo que não há possibilidade de Deus mudar no que se refere a este pacto ou de 'deplorá-lo'. De modo similar, no pacto que fez com Abraão, Deus "interveio com um juramento" como "garantia legal", a fim de "demonstrar mais abundantemente aos herdeiros da promessa a imutabilidade do seu conselho", sendo sua promessa e seu juramento "duas coisas imutáveis, nas quais é impossível que Deus minta". (He 6:13-18) O pacto juramentado que Deus fez com seu Filho, para um sacerdócio semelhante ao de Melquisedeque, também era algo que Deus 'não deploraria'. — He 7:20, 21; Sal 110:4; compare isso com Ro 11:29.

Entretanto, ao declarar uma promessa ou fazer um pacto, Deus pode estabelecer requisitos, condições a serem satisfeitas por aqueles a quem se faz a promessa ou com quem se faz o pacto. Prometeu a Israel que a nação se tornaria a sua "propriedade especial" e "um reino de sacerdotes e uma nação santa", desde que obedecesse estritamente à Sua voz e guardasse o Seu pacto. (Êx 19:5, 6) Deus cumpriu fielmente a sua parte no pacto, mas Israel falhou; violou vez após vez este pacto. (Mal 3:6, 7; compare isso com Ne 9:16-19, 26-31.) Portanto, quando Deus finalmente anulou esse pacto, fez isso com plena justiça, cabendo a responsabilidade pelo não cumprimento da promessa dele inteiramente aos israelitas violadores. — Mt 21:43; He 8:7-9.

Da mesma maneira, Deus pode "deplorar" a execução de alguma punição ou 'retornar [recuar]' dela, quando seu aviso sobre tal ação produz uma mudança de atitude e conduta por parte dos violadores. (De 13:17; Sal 90:13) Retornaram a ele e ele 'retorna' a eles. (Za 8:3; Mal 3:7) Em vez de 'penar', ele se alegra então, porque não tem prazer em causar a morte de pecadores. (Lu 15:10; Ez 18:32) Ao passo que Deus nunca se desvia das suas normas justas, oferece ajuda para que as pessoas possam retornar a ele; elas são incentivadas a fazê-lo. Convida-as bondosamente a retornar, 'estendendo as suas mãos' e dizendo, por meio de seus representantes: "Por favor, recuai . . . para que eu não vos cause calamidade", "por favor, não façais esta espécie de coisa detestável que tenho odiado". (Is 65:1, 2; Je 25:5, 6; 44:4, 5) Ele concede amplo tempo para uma mudança (Ne 9:30; compare isso com Re 2:20-23), e mostra grande paciência e indulgência, visto que "não deseja que alguém seja destruído, mas deseja que todos alcancem o arrependimento". (2Pe 3:8, 9; Ro 2:4, 5) Ocasionalmente, ele cuidou bondosamente que sua mensagem fosse acompanhada por obras poderosas, ou milagres, que corroboraram a comissão divina dos seus mensageiros e ajudaram a fortalecer a fé dos ouvintes. (At 9:32-35) Quando sua mensagem não é acatada, ele emprega a disciplina; retira seu favor e sua proteção, permitindo assim que os impenitentes passem privações, fome, opressão por parte de seus inimigos. Isto pode fazê-los cair em si, pode restabelecer seu temor correto de Deus, ou pode induzi-los a dar-se conta de que o proceder deles foi estúpido e que o conceito deles era errado. — 2Cr 33:10-13; Ne 9:28, 29; Am 4:6-11.

Entretanto, a Sua paciência tem limites, e quando estes são atingidos, ele 'se fatiga de sentir lástima'; então, sua decisão de aplicar a punição é imutável. (Je 15:6, 7; 23:19, 20; Le 26:14-33) Ele não mais apenas 'cogita' ou 'forma' uma calamidade contra tais (Je 18:11; 26:3-6), mas chega a uma decisão irreversível. — 2Rs 23:24-27; Is 43:13; Je 4:28; Sof 3:8; Re 11:17, 18.

A disposição de Deus, de perdoar aos arrependidos, bem como abrir ele misericordiosamente o caminho para tal perdão, mesmo em face de repetidas violações, estabelece o exemplo para todos os seus servos. — Mt 18:21, 22; Mr 3:28; Lu 17:3, 4; 1Jo 1:9; veja PERDÃO.

ARROGÂNCIA. Veja SOBERBA.

ARRUDA [gr.: pé·ga·non]. A variedade comum de arruda (Ruta graveolens) é um subarbusto perene, de cheiro forte, de talos penugentos, que atinge cerca de 1 m de altura. Tem folhas verde-acinzentadas e corimbos de flores amarelas. Nos dias do ministério terrestre de Jesus, a arruda talvez fosse cultivada na Palestina para fins medicinais e como tempero para alimentos.

Esta planta é mencionada somente em Lucas 11:42, com referência ao pagamento escrupuloso do dízimo pelos fariseus. Em vez de dizer "arruda", o relato paralelo em Mateus 23:23 menciona o "endro", assim como faz um manuscrito do terceiro século (P^{45}) em Lucas 11:42.

ARTAXERXES. Nome ou título aplicado na Bíblia a dois reis persas.

1. O governante persa que causou a paralisação da construção do templo de Jeová em Jerusalém. (Esd 4:7-24) Entre o reinado de Ciro, o Grande, que permitiu que os judeus voltassem a Jerusalém (537 AEC), e o de Dario, o Grande, o qual em 520 AEC removeu a proscrição imposta à construção do templo, possivelmente reinaram três reis: Cambises II, seu irmão Bardiia (ou possivelmente um mago conhecido como Gaumata, que se diz ter fingido ser Bardiia e que governou por sete meses), e Nidintu-Bel (que foi derrotado e morto por Dario, depois de apenas dois meses). Cambises evidentemente é representado pelo "Assuero" mencionado em Esdras 4:6, a quem os opositores da construção do templo fizeram o primeiro protesto. Portanto, a partir de Esdras 4:7, o governante chamado "Artaxerxes" é Bardiia, ou então Gaumata, cujo governo durou apenas sete meses (522 AEC).

O povo das cidades de Samaria escreveu a este rei persa uma carta contra os judeus. (Esd 4:7) Isto aconteceu enquanto os judeus se atarefavam em construir o templo. (Esd 4:1-3) Para atingir seu objetivo, os adversários dos judeus recorreram a mentiras, declarando que os judeus estavam então reconstruindo a cidade de Jerusalém, inclusive suas muralhas. (Esd 4:11-16) Em resultado destas falsas acusações, "parou a obra na casa de Deus". — Esd 4:24.

2. Artaxerxes Longímano, filho de Xerxes I, é o rei mencionado em Esdras 7:1-28 e em Neemias 2:1-18; 13:6. Ao passo que a maioria das obras de referência dão seu ano de ascensão como 465 AEC, há motivos sólidos para situá-la em 475 AEC. — Veja PÉRSIA, PERSAS (Os Reinados de Xerxes e de Artaxerxes).

Artaxerxes Longímano concedeu permissão a Esdras, o sacerdote, e também a Neemias, para viajarem a Jerusalém. (Esd 7:1-7; Ne 2:1, 7, 8) Antigos historiadores atribuem-lhe uma personalidade geralmente benigna e generosa. Isto coincide com as suas ações durante o sétimo ano do seu reinado (468 AEC), quando Longímano concedeu a Esdras "tudo o que solicitou", num decreto que proveu prata, ouro e vasos para uso no templo, bem como provisões de trigo, vinho, azeite e sal. (Esd 7:6, 12-23; 8:25-27) Esta contribuição generosa talvez explique por que Artaxerxes está incluído junto com Ciro e Dario, em Esdras 6:14, como um daqueles cujas ordens contribuíram para 'construir e acabar' o templo, embora a construção propriamente dita já tivesse sido completada 47 anos antes, em 515 AEC. O decreto do rei autorizou Esdras até mesmo a nomear magistrados e juízes para ensinar a lei de Deus (bem como a do rei) e a usar a pena capital contra violadores, sempre que necessário. — Esd 7:25, 26.

No 20.º ano do seu reinado (455 AEC), Artaxerxes Longímano concedeu a Neemias permissão para voltar a Jerusalém a fim de reconstruir as muralhas e os portões da cidade. (Ne 2:1-8) Visto que isto é mencionado em Daniel 9:25 como relacionado com o tempo da prometida vinda do Messias, a data do 20.º ano de Artaxerxes é muito importante.

Neemias 13:6 refere-se ao "trigésimo segundo ano de Artaxerxes", isto é, a 443 AEC, quando Neemias retornou por um tempo à corte deste rei.

ARTE. A arte, conforme se relaciona com pintura, escultura e desenho, recebe relativamente pouca atenção na Bíblia. No entanto, a vida do homem não começou num campo ermo, mas num jardim, num paraíso com árvores que não só eram 'boas para alimento', mas também "de aspecto desejável". (Gên 2:9) O homem foi feito para saber apreciar o que é belo, e a insuperável beleza, arte e estilo manifestos na criação — flores, árvores, montanhas, vales, lagos, cachoeiras, aves, animais, bem como a própria forma humana — promovem louvores para o seu divino Criador. (Sal 139:14; Ec 3:11; Cân 2:1-3, 9, 13, 14; 4:1-5, 12-15; 5:11-15; Ro 1:20) A arte, conforme considerada aqui, subentende, basicamente, a representação de tais coisas por meio de diversos materiais e pelo uso de formas e expressões diferentes.

A Bíblia menciona, já no tempo de Abraão, presentes de "uma argola de ouro para as narinas", pulseiras de ouro, e outros objetos de prata e ouro, presenteados a Rebeca. (Gên 24:22, 53) Os Túmulos Reais de Ur, cidade em que Abraão antes morava, renderam muitos ornamentos primorosos de alta perícia artística. Todavia, muitos dos objetos de arte recuperados por meio de explorações arqueológicas nos países do Iraque, de Israel, do Egito e das regiões adjacentes, têm alguma relação com as idólatras religiões pagãs ou com os orgulhosos governantes políticos, indicando assim logo cedo uma deturpação do uso da arte.

Variedade de Materiais. O vidro parece ter sido produzido já no segundo milênio AEC pelos egípcios, e talvez pelos fenícios. No entanto, evidentemente, originou-se na Mesopotâmia, onde se encontraram peças de vidro bem feito, que se crê remontarem até ao terceiro milênio AEC. Jó (c. 1600 AEC) mencionou o vidro como muito precioso. (Jó 28:17) Embora fosse opaco, era usado na fabricação de estatuetas de animais, caixinhas de perfumes, colares e outras joias. Os romanos estavam entre os primeiros a produzir vidro transparente. — Compare isso com Re 4:6; veja VIDRO.

Os antigos artesãos trabalhavam com uma considerável variedade de materiais, inclusive argila, terracota, madeira, bronze ou cobre, ferro, ouro, prata, pedras preciosas e semipreciosas, vidro, marfim, calcário e mármore. — Veja SELO.

Arte Hebraica. Resta pouca evidência material para fornecer um quadro claro da arte hebraica, mas o apreço pela arte se manifesta no registro bíblico. Ao saírem do Egito, as pessoas levaram consigo objetos de ouro e de prata obtidos dos egípcios. (Êx 12:35) Contribuíram esses objetos de bom grado para a decoração do tabernáculo no ermo. (Êx 35:21-24) A obra da produção do tabernáculo com suas decorações e equipamento proveu-lhes vazão para a sua habilidade artística em trabalhos de madeira, de metal, em bordados e joalheria, nos quais especialmente Bezalel e Ooliabe tomavam a dianteira e instruíam. É notável que se atribui o mérito pela sua habilidade artística a Jeová. — Êx 35:30-35; 36:1, 2.

Antes do trabalho no tabernáculo, Arão havia usado a habilidade artística para uso perverso ao empregar um buril na fabricação duma imagem fundida dum bezerro para adoração. (Êx 32:3, 4) Moisés (ou alguém designado por ele) também mostrou tal habilidade, embora de modo correto, ao fazer a serpente de cobre numa época posterior. (Núm 21:9) Todavia, as provisões da Lei que proibiam fazer imagens para adoração, embora não proibissem toda a arte representativa, sem dúvida, exerciam uma influência restritiva sobre a arte da pintura e da escultura entre os hebreus. (Êx 20:4, 5) Em vista da crassa idolatria, tão prevalecente em todas as nações, e do amplo uso da arte para fomentar tal idolatria, é evidente que pinturas ou esculturas de figuras, humanas ou animais, seriam encaradas como suspeitas por aqueles que guardavam as provisões da Lei, e pelos encarregados a fazê-la vigorar. (De 4:15-19; 7:25, 26) Até mesmo os querubins do tabernáculo eram cobertos com um pano ao serem transportados, e assim ficavam ocultos ao olhar da população (Núm 4:5, 6, 19, 20), ao passo que os do templo posterior só eram vistos pelo sumo sacerdote num único dia por ano. (1Rs 6:23-28; He 9:6, 7) Além disso, após a sua entrada e seu estabelecimento na Terra da Promessa, a vida dos israelitas, basicamente agrícola, raras vezes era tal que lhes permitia tempo de folga e os fundos necessários para extensas obras de arte.

Durante o período dos juízes, as únicas obras de arte indicadas envolviam práticas religiosas apóstatas. — Jz 2:13; 6:25; 8:24-27; 17:3-6; 18:14.

Obras de arte sob a monarquia. Embora a antiga nação de Israel não seja hoje famosa por suas obras de arte, não obstante a evidência indica que, quando surgia a oportunidade, eles conseguiam produzir obras de qualidade artística que granjeavam ampla atenção e admiração. O profeta Ezequiel descreve a maneira em que Jeová adornou e embelezou Jerusalém, de modo que "'um nome começou a sair para ti entre as nações por causa da tua lindeza, pois era perfeita devido ao meu esplendor que eu tinha posto sobre ti', é a pronunciação do Soberano Senhor Jeová". (Ez 16:8-14) No entanto, os versículos seguintes (15-18, 25) mostram que essa lindeza era usada de modo perverso, visto que Jerusalém se prostituiu com nações políticas circunvizinhas. Também Jeremias descreve aqueles que olhavam para Jerusalém depois da sua queda diante de Babilônia como dizendo: "É esta a cidade da qual se dizia: 'Ela é a perfeição da lindeza, uma exultação para toda a terra'?" (La 2:15; compare isso com Sal 48:2; 50:2; Is 52:1.) O templo construído por Salomão foi evidentemente uma obra artística de extrema beleza e é chamado de "casa de santidade e beleza". — Is 64:11; 60:13.

Referente à construção do templo no tempo do Rei Salomão, diversas obras de referência têm feito muitos comentários sobre a suposta falta de perícia artística dos israelitas, a ponto de atribuírem praticamente todo o mérito aos fenícios. No entanto, o registro mostra que Salomão solicitou apenas um artesão fenício, além dos lenhadores empregados nas florestas do Líbano, do próprio Rei Hirão, e os talhadores de pedras. (1Rs 5:6, 18; 2Cr 2:7-10) Este artesão, também chamado Hirão, era um fenício-israelita perito em trabalhar com metais preciosos, tecelagem e entalhes. No entanto, o registro menciona os homens peritos do próprio Salomão, e também o Rei Hirão falou destes e dos homens peritos do pai de Salomão, Davi. (2Cr 2:13, 14) O plano arquitetônico do templo e de todas as suas particularidades foi dado por Davi a Salomão, provendo "perspicácia para a coisa inteira, por escrito, da parte da mão de Jeová . . ., sim, para todas as obras do plano arquitetônico". (1Cr 28:11-19) Em contraste, o infiel Rei Acaz afeiçoou-se do altar pagão em Damasco e mandou "o desenho do altar e seu modelo" ao sacerdote Urija, para fazer uma cópia. — 2Rs 16:1-12.

O Rei Salomão fez também um grande trono de marfim, recoberto de ouro, de projeto ímpar, com figuras de leões ao lado dos braços do trono e enfileirados nos seis degraus de aproximação. (1Rs 10:18-20) O extenso uso de marfim no palácio real é indicado no Salmo 45:8. No reino setentrional de Israel, com sua capital em Samaria, entalhes de marfim em mobília, painéis e objetos de arte parecem ter sido populares nos dias do Rei Acabe, e depois. (1Rs 22:39; Am 3:12, 15; 6:4) As escavações arqueológicas descobriram grandes quantidades de peças, placas e painéis de marfim no que se crê ter sido a área palacial. Incrustações de ouro, lápis-lazúli e vidro ocorrem em algumas peças. Em Megido, encontraram-se umas 400 peças de marfim, inclusive painéis belamente entalhados, caixas com marfim incrustado, e tabuleiros de jogo, calculados como datando aproximadamente do século 12 AEC.

Ezequiel, numa visão, observou representações esculpidas de répteis, animais e ídolos numa parede da área do templo, na Jerusalém apóstata (Ez 8:10), e fala-se da simbólica Oolibá (representando a infiel Jerusalém) como vendo entalhadas numa parede imagens de caldeus, pintadas de vermelhão, um pigmento de vermelho vivo. — Ez 23:14; compare isso com Je 22:14.

Relação com o Cristianismo. Paulo era testemunha do esplendor artístico de Atenas, o qual girava em torno da adoração dos deuses e deusas gregos, e ele mostrou a ouvintes ali quão ilógico era que humanos, que devem a sua vida e existência ao verdadeiro Deus e Criador, devessem imaginar que "o Ser Divino seja semelhante a ouro, ou prata, ou pedra, semelhante a algo esculpido pela arte e inventividade do homem". (At 17:29) Demonstrou assim novamente que a beleza artística, não importa quão impressionante ou atraente, por si só não recomenda nenhuma religião como a adoração verdadeira. — Veja Jo 4:23, 24.

Não há registro nem evidência existente de obras de arte entre os cristãos do primeiro século EC. Foi somente no segundo e no terceiro séculos EC que apareceram algumas pinturas e esculturas nas catacumbas, atribuídas a cristãos nominais. Depois da união de Igreja e Estado, no quarto século, porém, a arte começou a receber um destaque que com o tempo se igualava ao que recebia nas religiões pagãs, e muitas vezes se relacionava com tais religiões ou era uma imitação direta delas, tanto nos simbolismos como nas formas. Louis Réau, que ocupou a cadeira de História da Arte da Idade Mé-dia na Universidade de Sorbonne, na França, demonstra na sua obra Iconographie de l'art chrétien (Iconografia da Arte Cristã, 1955, Vol. I, p. 10) que tal paganismo há muito tem sido reconhecido pelos historiadores da arte, e que a responsabilidade disso não pode ser atribuída apenas aos artistas, mas também às diretrizes seguidas pela própria igreja. Ele salienta (p. 50) que, em vez de realmente converter os pagãos das suas antigas práticas e formas de adoração, a igreja preferiu respeitar "os costumes ancestrais e continuá-los sob outro nome".

De modo que não surpreende encontrar os signos do zodíaco, tão destacados na antiga Babilônia, exibidos em catedrais, tais como a de Notre Dame de Paris, onde aparecem na porta esquerda e cercam Maria na enorme rosácea situada no centro. (Veja Is 47:12-15.) De modo similar, um livro-guia da catedral de Auxerre, também na França, declara que na entrada central da catedral "o escultor misturou ali certos heróis pagãos: um Eros [deus grego do amor] nu e dormindo . . . um Hércules e um Sátiro [um dos demiurgos gregos]! O registro na parte inferior à direita representa a parábola do Filho Pródigo."

Similarmente, na entrada da Catedral de São Pedro, em Roma, não só aparece a figura de Cristo e da "Virgem", mas também de Ganimedes "levado pela águia" para tornar-se o copeiro de Zeus, rei dos deuses, e de "Leda [que deu à luz Castor e Pólux], fecundada pelo cisne" Zeus. Comentando adicionalmente tal influência pagã, Réau pergunta: "Mas o que se deve dizer então do Juízo Final da Capela Sistina, a principal capela do Vaticano, onde se vê o Cristo nu, de Miguel Ângelo, emitir um relâmpago igual a um trovejante Júpiter [o romano pai dos deuses] e os Malditos cruzarem o Estige [o rio através do qual os gregos criam que os mortos eram transportados] na barca de Caronte?" Conforme ele declara: "Um exemplo provindo de tão alto [isto é, aprovado pelo papado] não poderia deixar de ser seguido."

Conforme se viu, a arte não recebia grande atenção por parte do Israel carnal, e está virtualmente ausente dos registros da primitiva congregação do Israel espiritual do primeiro século EC. Em vez disso, era no campo da literatura que eles sobressaíam a todos os outros povos, sendo usados por Deus para produzir uma obra de sublime beleza, não apenas em forma, mas principalmente em conteúdo: a Bíblia. Os escritos inspirados deles são "como maçãs de ouro em esculturas de prata", com verdades cristalinas de tal brilho, que rivalizam com as melhores joias, e com descrições que transmitem visões e cenas duma grandiosidade e beleza além da capacidade de artistas humanos retratarem. — Pr 25:11; 3:13-15; 4:7-9; 8:9, 10.

ÁRTEMAS. Companheiro que Paulo pensou em enviar a Tito, em Creta (Tit 3:12), talvez como substituto, para que Tito se pudesse juntar a Paulo em Nicópolis. Visto que Paulo devia fazer a escolha entre Ártemas e Tíquico, é evidente que Ártemas era muito estimado, conforme indicado pelas observações de Paulo a respeito de Tíquico, em Efésios 6:21, 22.

ÁRTEMIS. A deusa-virgem grega da caça é conhecida como Ártemis; ela era identificada pelos romanos com Diana. Equipada de arco e flechas, esta Ártemis é retratada como perseguindo a caça, especialmente veados. Embora os gregos identificassem a sua própria Ártemis com a Ártemis de Éfeso, adorada em cidades por toda a Ásia Menor, esta última tem pouco a ver com a deidade grega da mitologia clássica. (At 19:27) A Ártemis efésia era uma deusa da fertilidade, representada como sendo adornada com o que tem sido identificado de forma variada como múltiplos seios, ovos e os testículos de touros sacrificados. A metade inferior do corpo dela, parecida a uma múmia, era adornada com diversos símbolos e animais.

A Ártemis efésia, deusa da fertilidade; a cabeça é cercada por grifos, e abaixo da grinalda em volta do pescoço aparecem signos do zodíaco.

A Ártemis adorada em Éfeso tem sido intimamente relacionada com deusas destacadas de outros povos, e tem-se sugerido que elas têm origem comum. A Dictionary of the Bible (Um Dicionário da Bíblia, Vol. I, p. 605), observa: "Ártemis apresenta analogias tão próximas à Cibele frígia, e a outros enfoques femininos do poder divino em países asiáticos, tais como a Ma capadócia, a Astarteia (Astarte) ou Astarote fenícia, a Atárgatis e a Milita sírias, de forma a sugerir que todas estas são simples variações de uma concepção religiosa fundamental, apresentando, em países diferentes, certas diferenças, devido ao desenvolvimento variado, segundo as circunstâncias locais e o caráter nacional." — Editado por J. Hastings, 1904.

Os antigos classificavam o templo de Ártemis de Éfeso como uma das sete maravilhas do mundo. Era uma estrutura imponente, feita de cedro, cipreste, mármore branco e ouro.

Para as grandes festas realizadas no mês de artemísio (março-abril), os visitantes, às centenas de milhares, chegavam a Éfeso de toda a Ásia Menor. Uma modalidade dessa celebração era a procissão religiosa, com a imagem de Ártemis sendo levada num desfile pela cidade, de forma muito jubilosa.

A fabricação de santuários de prata, de Ártemis, mostrou-se um empreendimento lucrativo para Demétrio e outros prateiros efésios. Portanto, quando a pregação do apóstolo Paulo, em Éfeso, fez com que um considerável número de pessoas abandonasse a adoração impura dessa deusa, Demétrio incitou os outros artífices, dizendo-lhes que a pregação de Paulo não somente representava uma ameaça à sua segurança financeira, mas também havia o perigo de a adoração da grande deusa Ártemis ficar reduzida a nada. Isto culminou num motim finalmente disperso pelo escrivão da cidade. — At 19:23-41; veja ÉFESO.

ARTESÃO. Veja ARTÍFICE.

ARTÍFICE. Alguém hábil em trabalhos manuais ou artesanais. A palavra hebraica hha·rásh é mais frequentemente traduzida pelo termo geral de "artífice", mas, por exemplo, quando ocorre em conjunto com determinado material, é vertida mais especificamente por "trabalhador em madeira e metal" (De 27:15), "trabalhadores em madeira e trabalhadores em pedra" (2Sa 5:11), "escultor de ferro", "escultor de madeira" (Is 44:12, 13), também por "ferreiro" (1Sa 13:19) e "fabricantes". (Is 45:16) Ilustrando ainda mais as muitas especialidades que vêm sob a classificação de "artesanato" é a descrição de Bezalel, o qual, junto com Ooliabe, trabalhava com metais, pedras preciosas e madeira, e era tecelão e tintureiro, perito "em toda sorte de artesanato". — Êx 35:30-35; veja também 2Rs 12:11, 12.

Muitos ofícios, tais como a ferramentaria, a carpintaria, a fabricação de tijolos, a fiação, a tecelagem, o acabamento de tecidos, e a fabricação de cerâmica e de joias, eram antigamente simples tarefas domésticas realizadas por homens e mulheres comuns. A vida comunal estabelecida, porém, ocasionou a especialização. Mesmo já antes do Dilúvio, certos homens eram conhecidos como artífices especializados. (Gên 4:21, 22) Nabucodonosor levou cativos artífices junto com os príncipes e os engenheiros militares, de Jerusalém para Babilônia, em 617 AEC. (2Rs 24:14, 16; Je 24:1; 29:2) Em algumas cidades, os artífices de determinado ofício moravam juntos no mesmo bairro, onde com o tempo se associavam em grêmios e se tornaram conhecidos pela sua profissão, e exerciam grande influência nos assuntos da cidade. (Ne 3:8, 31, 32; 11:35; Je 37:21; At 19:24-41) Não foram muito bem preservados os pormenores sobre como esses artífices especializados exerciam sua profissão, exceto nos escritos e nas obras de arte procedentes do Egito, e que descrevem e ilustram vividamente os diversos artífices em ação.

A proibição da idolatria, incorporada na Lei de Moisés, mantinha os judeus afastados da maior parte da então comum arte de fabricar estatuetas e similares objetos de devoção. (Êx 20:4; De 4:15-18; 27:15) De fato, a adoração de imagens e o desenvolvimento da arte e da escultura avançaram lado a lado em nações tais como a Assíria e a Babilônia. (Sal 115:2, 4-8; Is 40:19, 20; 44:11-20; 46:1, 6, 7; Je 10:2-5) Demétrio e seus coartífices (ou: artesãos; gr.: te·khní·tai), em Éfeso, ganhavam a vida por fabricar santuários de prata para Ártemis. — At 19:24-27.

Quanto a considerações pormenorizadas dos diversos ofícios, veja tópicos específicos, tais como BORDADO; CARPINTEIRO; CORANTES, TINGIR; CURTIDOR; ESCULTURA; FIAÇÃO; OLEIRO; PEDREIRO; TECELAGEM; TIJOLO; TRABALHADOR EM METAL.

ARUBOTE [Janelas]. Uma cidade que serviu de centro administrativo sob um dos 12 prepostos designados pelo Rei Salomão para prover alimentos à casa real. Ali atuava o filho de Hesede, supervisionando Socó e a terra de Héfer. (1Rs 4:7, 10) Arubote é atualmente identificada com a moderna ʽArraba, situada perto de Dotã, e a cerca de 14 km ao N de Samaria, portanto, no território de Manassés.

ARUMÁ [Altura; Lugar Exaltado]. Uma cidade no território de Efraim, na qual morava Abimeleque, filho de Jerubaal, e da qual lançou seu ataque contra os siquemitas. (Jz 9:41) É experimentalmente identificada com Khirbet el-ʽOrmah (Horvat ʼel-ʽUrmeh), a cerca de 8 km ao SE de Siquém. Alguns sugerem que se trata de Ruma, mencionada em 2 Reis 23:36. — Veja RUMA.

ARVADE. Na endecha profética de Ezequiel a respeito de Tiro faz-se referência a homens de Arvade, que serviam como exímios remadores na marinha de Tiro e como valentes guerreiros no seu exército. (Ez 27:8, 11) Arvade é identificada com a pequena ilha rochosa hoje conhecida como Arwad, situada a uns 3 km ao largo da costa da Síria setentrional, a cerca de 186 km ao NNE de Tiro. Os habitantes eram descendentes de Canaã. — Gên 10:15, 18.

ARVADEU [De (Pertencente a) Arvade]. Membro da família descendente de Cã e que evidentemente habitou Arvade, uma ilha ao largo da costa setentrional da Síria. (Gên 10:6, 15, 18; 1Cr 1:16) A única outra menção deles ocorre na referência de Ezequiel a arvadeus como exímios marujos e valentes soldados para Tiro. — Ez 27:8, 11.

ÁRVORE GRANDE [hebr.: ʼe·láh; ʼe·lóhn], ÁRVORE MACIÇA [hebr.: ʼal·láh, ʼal·lóhn]. Estas palavras hebraicas são diversamente traduzidas por "carvalho", "azinheira" e "olmeiro" na edição revista e corrigida da versão Almeida, e também por "arvoredo" e "terebinto" na edição atualizada desta versão. Entretanto, muitas autoridades reconhecem que estas palavras talvez se aplicassem nos tempos bíblicos simplesmente a árvores grandes em geral.

Em Amós 2:9, os amorreus foram comparados a "cedros" quanto à altura e a "árvores maciças" quanto ao vigor. Estas "árvores maciças" eram especialmente abundantes em Basã, ao L do Jordão, e são usadas em comparações junto com os cedros do Líbano. (Is 2:13; Za 11:1, 2) Da sua madeira faziam-se remos. (Ez 27:6) Débora foi enterrada debaixo de tal árvore em Betel, o que resultou no nome de Alom-Bacute, que significa "Árvore Maciça de Choro". (Gên 35:8) A localização de tais árvores em morros e colinas tornava-as lugares populares de sombra, onde os seguidores da adoração falsa se empenhavam em práticas idólatras. — Os 4:13.

Sem dúvida, as árvores maciças de Basã incluíam o carvalho. Os carvalhos, famosos pela sua resistência e força, atingem uma idade muito elevada. Diversas espécies de carvalhos continuam a crescer em Basã, bem como nas partes altas de Haurã, Gileade, Galileia e Líbano. Alguns deles são sempreverdes, ao passo que outros são decíduos (quer dizer, perdem as folhas no outono). Seu fruto, a bolota, encontra-se dentro dum receptáculo e é rico em tanino. Acredita-se que a cor para os panos 'carmíneos' usados no santuário (Êx 25:4; 26:1) fosse obtida duma cochonilha que infesta os ramos de certa espécie de carvalho. — Veja CORANTES, TINGIR.

Uma árvore considerada como provavelmente estando entre "as árvores grandes" da Bíblia é o terebinto (Pistacia palaestina ou Pistacia atlantica). (Gên 12:6; 14:13) É uma árvore comum na Palestina, e ela tem um tronco grosso e ramos extensos. Algumas variedades dele podem atingir a altura de até 15 m, provendo uma excelente sombra. Por meio de incisões feitas na casca, pode-se obter uma resina aromática, da qual se produz a terebintina.

ÁRVORE OLEAGINOSA (OLEASTRO) [hebr.: ʽets shé·men]. A identificação desta árvore é duvidosa. A expressão hebraica indica uma árvore de "madeira gordurosa", rica em óleo ou em uma substância similar. Por muito tempo tem-se achado ser ela o oleastro (Elaeagnus angustifolia), uma árvore pequena ou arbusto, comum na Palestina, com folhas verde-acinzentadas, similares às da oliveira, e que produz um fruto do qual se obtém óleo, muito inferior ao azeite da oliveira. Embora sua madeira seja dura e de grão fino, tornando-a adequada para entalhes, dificilmente se parece ajustar à descrição do "oleastro" em 1 Reis 6:23, 31-33. Ali se declara que, na construção do templo, os dois querubins, cada um com a altura de 4,5 m, bem como as portas do Santíssimo e as ombreiras "quadradas" da entrada principal do templo, foram feitos de madeira de "oleastro". O oleastro parece pequeno demais para se enquadrar adequadamente nestes requisitos.

A versão Almeida e a do Pontifício Instituto Bíblico mencionam madeira de oliveira em 1 Reis 6:23, e sugere-se que os querubins talvez fossem feitos de diversas peças juntadas, visto que o tronco curto da oliveira não fornece madeira de grande comprimento. Todavia, o fato de a oliveira ser mencionada como distinta da árvore oleaginosa (oleastro) em Neemias 8:15 parece excluir esta sugestão.

Por este motivo, alguns peritos recomendam o pinheiro-de-alepo (Pinus halepensis), que acreditam ser talvez chamado de árvore oleaginosa por produzir alcatrão e terebintina. Este alto pinheiro é uma das mais comuns sempre-verdes da Palestina, e há evidência que mostra que a região em torno de Jerusalém antigamente tinha uma grande floresta dele. Ele atinge a altura de 20 m, com casca lisa, cinzenta, agulhas de um verde claro e pinhas de marrom-avermelhado. Sua madeira é considerada de qualidade quase igual à do cedro. Portanto, esta árvore poderia ajustar-se às necessidades da construção do templo; todavia, em vista da falta de evidência positiva, a Tradução do Novo Mundo deverá traduzir a expressão hebraica apenas por "árvore oleaginosa".

Os ramos da árvore oleaginosa, junto com os da oliveira, da murta e da palmeira, eram usados em Jerusalém na Festividade das Barracas. (Ne 8:15)

A árvore oleaginosa é também uma da árvores preditas a embelezar o ermo, na profecia de Isaías sobre a restauração. — Is 41:19.

ÁRVORE RESINOSA [hebr.: gó·fer]. Uma árvore, cuja madeira Noé usou na construção da arca, mas que não pode ser identificada com qualquer grau de certeza. (Gên 6:14) A versão Almeida, edição revista e corrigida, simplesmente translitera o nome hebraico. À base da similaridade entre este nome hebraico e o termo hebraico para "alcatrão" ("betume", Al; hebr.: kó·fer), alguns a relacionam com algum tipo de árvore resinosa. Os peritos geralmente preferem o cipreste, que é uma árvore muito durável, extremamente resistente à decomposição. — Veja CIPRESTE.

ÁRVORES [hebr.: 'ets; gr.: dén·dron]. A grande variação no clima da Palestina e das terras vizinhas tornou possível o crescimento mui diversificado de árvores, desde os cedros do Líbano até as tamareiras de Jericó, e as giestas-das-vassouras do deserto. Cerca de 30 diferentes espécies de árvores são mencionadas na Bíblia, e estas são consideradas nesta publicação sob o respectivo nome da árvore.

O problema de se identificar a árvore específica indicada pela palavra hebraica ou grega original é frequentemente difícil, e, em vários casos, a identificação é apenas uma tentativa. Tal identificação depende do grau de descrição fornecida no próprio registro bíblico a respeito das características da árvore (às vezes indicada pelo significado da raiz da qual o nome deriva), e da comparação dessa descrição com as árvores que se sabe que agora crescem nas terras bíblicas, especialmente nas regiões indicadas no texto bíblico, quando estas são assim mencionadas. Ajuda adicional provém dum estudo de palavras cognatas (isto é, de palavras que, por sua forma, evidenciam ser aparentadas e derivar da mesma raiz ou fonte original) em outras línguas, tais como o árabe ou o aramaico. Em alguns casos, parece ser mais sábio simplesmente transliterar o nome, como, por exemplo, no caso da árvore chamada algum.

Conforme salientam Harold e Alma Moldenke, no seu livro Plants of the Bible (Plantas da Bíblia, 1952, pp. 5, 6), muitas das árvores agora encontradas na Palestina talvez não crescessem ali nos tempos bíblicos, visto que, conforme declaram, "a flora muda, especialmente em regiões como a Palestina e o Egito, onde o homem, notório por sua aptidão de transtornar os equilíbrios delicadamente ajustados da natureza, tem estado muito ativo" durante milhares de anos. Declaram adicionalmente: "Muitas plantas que cresciam em abundância na Terra Santa ou nos países das cercanias, nos tempos bíblicos, não mais existem ali, ou, então, crescem em números muito menores." Alguns tipos foram exterminados ou grandemente diminuídos pelo excessivo cultivo da terra ou pela devastação das florestas devido às forças invasoras da Assíria, de Babilônia, prosseguindo até às de Roma. (Je 6:6; Lu 19:43) A destruição de árvores e florestas permitiu que o solo fértil fosse levado pela chuva e isso resultou em aridez e desolação, em muitas regiões.

Já nos dias de Abraão, árvores foram alistadas num contrato de transferência de propriedade. — Gên 23:15-18.

Na Lei. Mais tarde, Jeová Deus conduziu Israel a Canaã, uma terra de "árvores para alimento em abundância". Prometeu prover a necessária chuva, se Israel lhe obedecesse, e requereu que se reservasse um décimo dos frutos para o uso do santuário e do sacerdócio. (Ne 9:25; Le 26:3, 4; 27:30) Quando invadiram a terra de Canaã, os israelitas receberam instruções de não destruir árvores frutíferas ao atacar cidades, embora, séculos mais tarde, os reis de Judá e de Israel fossem autorizados por Deus a devastar as 'árvores boas' do reino de Moabe. A razão parece ser que Moabe ficava fora da Terra da Promessa. Tratava-se duma guerra punitiva contra Moabe, e a ação israelita visava a proteção contra a revolta ou a retaliação moabita. (De 20:19, 20; 2Rs 3:19, 25; compare isso com Je 6:6.) Ao plantar uma árvore, o dono não devia comer os frutos dela durante os primeiros três anos, e, no quarto ano, os frutos deviam ser devotados ao uso do santuário. (Le 19:23-25; compare isso com De 26:2.) Depois disso, os primeiros frutos maduros anuais deviam ser semelhantemente dedicados. — Ne 10:35-37.

Uso Figurativo. No jardim do Éden, Deus utilizou duas árvores com objetivos simbólicos: a "árvore da vida" e "a árvore do conhecimento do que é bom e do que é mau". Não respeitar o decreto de Deus referente a esta última árvore resultou na queda do homem. — Gên 2:9, 16, 17; 3:1-24.

O significado da "árvore do conhecimento do que é bom e do que é mau", e da restrição baseada em seu fruto, muitas vezes tem sido incorretamente relacionado com o ato sexual por parte do primeiro casal humano. Este conceito é refutado pela ordem expressa de Deus a eles, como homem e mulher: "Sede fecundos e tornai-vos muitos, e enchei a terra." (Gên 1:28) Antes, por representar "o conhecimento do que é bom e do que é mau", e pela declaração de Deus, decretando-a fora dos limites para o casal humano, a árvore tornou-se símbolo do direito de Deus, de determinar ou estabelecer para o homem os padrões do que é "bom" (aprovado por Deus) e do que é "mau" (condenado por Deus). Constituía, assim, uma prova do respeito do homem pela posição de seu Criador e da disposição do homem de permanecer dentro da área de liberdade decretada por Deus, área que, de forma alguma, era restritiva, e que permitia o maior usufruto da vida humana. Por conseguinte, transpor os limites da área proibida, por comer da "árvore do conhecimento do que é bom e do que é mau", seria uma invasão do domínio e da autoridade de Deus, ou uma revolta contra estes. — Veja SOBERANIA.

As árvores eram também usadas para simbolizar pessoas, governantes e reinos, como na profecia que assemelhou a queda de Faraó e sua massa de gente ao corte dum majestoso cedro (Ez 31), bem como na profecia de Daniel relativa à enorme árvore que representava o domínio "no reino da humanidade". (Da 4:10-26) O homem justo é assemelhado a uma árvore plantada junto a correntes de água (Sal 1:3), cuja folhagem é luxuriante e cujos frutos continuam a crescer até mesmo na seca. — Je 17:8.

A promessa de que os dias do povo restaurado de Deus serão como os duma árvore (Is 65:22) torna-se mais significativa pelo fato de que algumas árvores da Palestina vivem séculos, até mesmo mil anos ou mais. Na visão de Ezequiel, uma corrente que fluía do templo visionário estava perfilada de árvores frutíferas, de folhas curativas, e uma visão similar é apresentada no livro de Revelação. (Ez 47:7, 12; Re 22:2, 14) A expressão "árvore da vida" é usada com respeito à verdadeira sabedoria, aos frutos do justo, à realização de uma coisa desejada, e à calma da língua; também é associada com a coroa da vida. (Pr 3:18; 11:30; 13:12; 15:4; Re 2:7, 10) Menciona-se árvores em associação com as condições frutíferas, pacíficas e jubilosas, que resultam da realeza de Jeová e da restauração de seu povo. — 1Cr 16:33; Sal 96:12; 148:9; Is 55:12; Ez 34:27; 36:30.

Jesus usou árvores em algumas das suas ilustrações, destacando a necessidade de se produzir frutos em verdadeira justiça, como João, o Batizador, fizera antes dele. (Mt 3:10; 7:15-20) Visto que as árvores frutíferas eram tributadas na Palestina, naquele tempo, uma árvore improdutiva (virtualmente morta) era uma carga indesejável para o proprietário, e, por isso, devia ser cortada e destruída. (Lu 13:6-9) Em Judas 12, as pessoas imorais que se infiltram na congregação cristã são comparadas a árvores infrutíferas no outono, que já morreram duas vezes. Serem descritas como "duas vezes mortas" talvez seja um modo enfático de expressar que elas estão completamente mortas. Ou, poderia significar que estão mortas de dois pontos de vista. Elas (1) são estéreis ou infrutíferas, e (2) estão literalmente mortas, não possuindo nenhuma vitalidade.

A palavra hebraica para árvore é também usada com relação à estaca ou poste em que se pendurava um corpo. (Gên 40:19; De 21:22, 23; Jos 8:29; Est 2:23) Ao aplicar Deuteronômio 21:23, o apóstolo Paulo usou a palavra grega xý·lon (madeiro). — Gál 3:13; veja ESTACA DE TORTURA; árvores específicas, por nome.

ARZA. Mordomo da casa de Elá, rei de Israel (c. 952 AEC), sendo que foi na casa de Arza, em Tirza, que o rei estava "bebendo até ficar bêbedo" quando foi assassinado por Zinri. — 1Rs 16:9, 10.

ÁS, CONSTELAÇÃO DE. O fato de que as palavras hebraicas 'Ash e 'Á·yish, bem como outros termos, são usados em associação com sol, estrelas e céu, em ambos os casos indica que se referem a alguma constelação celeste. (Veja Jó 9:7-9; 38:32, 33.) Atualmente é impossível especificar a que constelação se referem, e assim é mais seguro transliterar o nome (como no nosso verbete), em vez de traduzir o hebraico por nomes específicos, tais como "Arcturo" (gr.: Ar·ktoú·ros, que literalmente significa "Guardião da Ursa") (So), ou "Ursa" (Al).

O fato de Jó 38:32 mencionar Ás "ao lado dos seus filhos" reforça a base para se crer que envolvia uma constelação. A Ursa Maior é a constelação mais frequentemente sugerida, com sete estrelas principais, que poderiam ser "seus filhos". O ponto importante no texto não é a identificação precisa da constelação, mas a questão ali suscitada: "Acaso podes guiá-los?" Jeová Deus incutiu assim em Jó a sabedoria e o poder do Criador, visto que é totalmente impossível ao homem governar os movimentos desses imensos corpos estelares.

ASA.

1. O terceiro rei de Judá depois de se dividir a nação em dois reinos. Asa era filho de Abijão (Abias) e neto de Roboão. Ele reinou por 41 anos (977-937 AEC). — 1Rs 15:8-10.

O Zelo de Asa pela Adoração Pura. Judá e Benjamim haviam mergulhado na apostasia durante os 20 anos após a divisão da nação em dois reinos. Asa, "igual a Davi, seu antepassado", demonstrou ter zelo pela adoração pura e empreendeu corajosamente eliminar do país os homens que se prostituíam no serviço dum templo, e os ídolos. Removeu sua avó, Maacá, da posição duma espécie de 'primeira dama' do país, por ela ter feito "um ídolo horrível" para o poste sagrado, ou Axerá, e queimou o ídolo religioso. — 1Rs 15:11-13.

O registro em 2 Crônicas 14:2-5 declara que Asa "removeu os altares estrangeiros e os altos, e destroçou as colunas sagradas, e cortou os postes sagrados". No entanto, 1 Reis 15:14 e 2 Crônicas 15:17 indicam que ele 'não removeu os altos'. Por conseguinte, pode ser que os altos a que o relato anterior de Crônicas se refere fossem os da adoração pagã adotada, que infetava Judá, ao passo que o relato de Reis se refere aos altos em que o povo se empenhava na adoração a Jeová. Mesmo depois de ser erguido o tabernáculo e do posterior estabelecimento do templo, ocasionalmente se ofereciam sacrifícios a Jeová em altos, o que era aceitável a Ele em circunstâncias especiais, como nos casos de Samuel, Davi e Elias. (1Sa 9:11-19; 1Cr 21:26-30; 1Rs 18:30-39) Todavia, o lugar costumeiro, aprovado para sacrifícios, era o autorizado por Jeová. (Núm 33:52; De 12:2-14; Jos 22:29) Formas impróprias de adoração nos altos talvez tenham continuado, apesar da remoção dos altos pagãos, talvez porque o rei não procurou eliminá-las com o mesmo vigor com que removeu os locais pagãos. Ou é possível que Asa realmente tenha feito a completa remoção de todos os altos; mas, neste caso, estes surgiram de novo no decorrer do tempo, e não haviam sido removidos no término de seu reinado, o que permitiu que fossem despedaçados pelo seu sucessor, Jeosafá.

O zelo de Asa pela adoração correta trouxe bênçãos de paz da parte de Jeová durante os primeiros dez anos de seu reinado. (2Cr 14:1, 6) Mais tarde, Judá foi atacada por uma força de um milhão de guerreiros, sob Zerá, o etíope. Embora grandemente sobrepujado em número, Asa saiu ao encontro dos invasores em Maressa, a cerca de 38 km ao OSO de Jerusalém, na baixada da Judeia. Sua fervorosa oração, antes de a batalha ser travada, reconhecia o poder de libertação de Deus e suplicava a ajuda de Jeová, dizendo: "Em ti nos estribamos e em teu nome viemos contra essa massa de gente. Ó Jeová, tu és o nosso Deus. Não deixes que algum homem mortal retenha força contra ti." O resultado foi a vitória total. — 2Cr 14:8-15.

Depois disso, o profeta Azarias veio ao encontro de Asa, lembrando-lhe: "Jeová está convosco enquanto mostrardes estar com ele", e, "se o abandonardes, ele vos abandonará". Relembra a destrutiva luta dessa nação quando apartada de Jeová, e insta com Asa a que continue corajosamente em suas atividades a favor da adoração pura. (2Cr 15:1-7) A pronta resposta de Asa e seu fortalecimento da nação no verdadeiro serviço de Jeová resultam em que grande número de pessoas do reino setentrional abandonam aquela região para participar numa grandiosa assembleia em Jerusalém, no 15.º ano do governo de Asa (963 AEC), assembleia em que se faz um pacto, declarando a determinação do povo de buscar a Jeová, e estabelecendo a pena de morte para aqueles que não guardarem tal pacto. — 2Cr 15:8-15.

Intriga e Guerra Contra Baasa. O Rei Baasa, de Israel, passou a bloquear o caminho de qualquer pessoa inclinada a voltar a Judá, por fortificar a cidade fronteiriça de Ramá, situada na estrada principal para Jerusalém e apenas a curta distância ao N daquela cidade. Asa, por algum processo de raciocínio humano, ou devido a acatar maus conselhos, deixou então de estribar-se unicamente em Jeová, e recorreu à diplomacia e a manobras conspiratórias para remover tal ameaça. Tomou os tesouros do templo, e os da casa real, e os enviou como suborno ao Rei Ben-Hadade I, da Síria, a fim de induzi-lo a desviar a atenção de Baasa mediante um ataque contra a fronteira N de Israel. Ben-Hadade I aceitou isso, e sua incursão contra cidades israelitas ao N interrompeu a obra de construção de Baasa, e provocou a retirada de suas forças de Ramá. Asa recrutou então todo o potencial humano disponível no inteiro reino de Judá, e removeu todos os estoques de materiais de construção de Baasa, usando-os para reforçar as cidades de Geba e Mispá. — 1Rs 15:16-22; 2Cr 16:1-6.

Por causa disso, Asa se viu confrontado com Hanani, o vidente, que ressaltou a incoerência de Asa em não se estribar no Deus que o havia libertado da enorme força etíope, lembrando a Asa que, "quanto a Jeová, seus olhos percorrem toda a terra, para mostrar a sua força a favor daqueles cujo coração é pleno para com ele". Por causa de sua tolice, Asa enfrentaria então guerras contínuas. Ressentido de tal correção, Asa encarcerou injustamente a Hanani e mostrou-se opressivo para com outros do povo. — 2Cr 16:7-11.

A declaração em 2 Crônicas 16:1, de que Baasa subiu contra Judá "no trigésimo sexto ano do reinado de Asa", tem suscitado algumas dúvidas, visto que o governo de Baasa, que começou no terceiro ano de Asa e que durou apenas 24 anos, já tinha terminado uns 10 anos antes do 36.º ano do governo de Asa. (1Rs 15:33) Ao passo que alguns sugerem ter havido um erro de escriba e creem que a referência seja ao 16.º ou 26.º ano do reinado de Asa, não é preciso presumir que houve erro para harmonizar os relatos. Comentadores judaicos citam o Seder Olam, que sugere que o 36.º ano foi contado desde a existência do reino separado de Judá (997 AEC), e correspondia ao 16.º ano de Asa (Roboão governando 17 anos, Abias 3 anos e Asa estando então no seu 16.º ano). (Soncino Books of the Bible [Livros da Bíblia, de Soncino], Londres, 1952, n. sobre 2Cr 16:1.) Este era também o ponto de vista do arcebispo Ussher. Assim, também, a aparente discrepância entre a declaração em 2 Crônicas 15:19, no sentido de que, quanto à "uma guerra, não ocorreu até o trigésimo quinto [realmente o décimo quinto] ano do reinado de Asa", e a declaração em 1 Reis 15:16, no sentido de que "sucedeu haver mesmo guerra entre Asa e Baasa, rei de Israel, em todos os seus dias", pode ser explicada no sentido de que, uma vez iniciados os conflitos entre os dois reis, eles depois foram contínuos, assim como Hanani predissera. — 2Cr 16:9.

Doença e Morte. Os últimos três anos de Asa trouxeram-lhe sofrimento devido a uma enfermidade dos pés (talvez gota) e ele insensatamente procurou antes a cura física do que a espiritual. Ao morrer, foi-lhe dado um enterro honroso no túmulo que ele mesmo preparara na Cidade de Davi. — 1Rs 15:23, 24; 2Cr 16:12-14.

Apesar da falta de sabedoria e de perspicácia espiritual que ele ocasionalmente demonstrava, as boas qualidades de Asa, e manter-se ele livre da apostasia, evidentemente pesavam mais do que seus erros, e ele é considerado um dos reis fiéis da linhagem de Judá. (2Cr 15:17) O reinado de Asa, de 41 anos, coincidiu em parte ou em todo com os reinados de oito reis de Israel: Jeroboão, Nadabe, Baasa, Elá, Zinri, Onri, Tibni (que governou uma parte de Israel em oposição a Onri) e Acabe. (1Rs 15:9, 25, 33; 16:8, 15, 16, 21, 23, 29) Ao morrer Asa, seu filho Jeosafá tornou-se rei. — 1Rs 15:24.

2. Filho do levita Elcana e pai de Berequias, alistado como morando "nos povoados dos netofatitas" após o retorno do exílio babilônico. — 1Cr 9:16.

ASÃ [possivelmente: Fumaça]. Uma cidade na Sefelá ou terra baixa de Judá. Originalmente designada a Judá, foi depois concedida a Simeão, porque o território de Judá era grande demais. (Jos 15:42; 19:7, 9; 1Cr 4:32) De Simeão passou para a família levita dos coatitas. (1Cr 6:54, 59) Primeiro Samuel 30:30 menciona "Borasã" como uma das cidades na região geral à qual Davi enviou depojos depois da sua vitória sobre os amalequitas, e alguns acham que esta cidade seja Asã. Em Josué 21:16 apresenta-se a lista das cidades entregues aos coatitas, correspondente àquela de 1 Crônicas 6:59, mas na lista de Josué aparece "Aim" em lugar de Asã. A obra Soncino Books of the Bible (Livros da Bíblia, de Soncino, Londres, 1950), comentando este texto, sugere que o nome inteiro da cidade talvez fosse Aim-Asã.

Muitos identificam Asã com Khirbet ʽAsan, situada a cerca de 2,5 km ao NO da moderna Berseba, ao lado de Nahal ʽAshan. Yohanan Aharoni sugere a identificação de Asã com Tel Bet Mirsham, a 25 km a NNE de Berseba.

ASAEL [Deus Fez].

1. Filho de Zeruia, irmã ou meia-irmã de Davi, e irmão de Abisai e Joabe; portanto, sobrinho de Davi. (1Cr 2:15, 16) Honrado por estar entre os 30 guerreiros notáveis sob Davi, Asael era especialmente famoso por sua ligeireza, "como uma das gazelas que há no campo aberto". (2Sa 2:18; 23:24) Isto mostrou ser sua desgraça. Após o teste de combate junto ao reservatório de Gibeão, e a subsequente derrota das forças israelitas sob Abner, Asael perseguiu persistentemente o fugitivo Abner. Depois de instar duas vezes com Asael para que desistisse, o poderoso Abner enfiou o conto da sua lança no abdome de Asael, e Asael morreu na hora. Embora o irmão de Asael, Joabe, finalmente recolhesse as forças judias em resposta aos apelos de Abner, a morte de Asael causou amargura a Joabe, de modo que, numa oportunidade posterior, ele ardilosamente se colocou em posição para matar Abner com a espada. — 2Sa 2:12-28; 3:22-27.

Em 1 Crônicas 27:7 alista-se Asael como comandante de uma divisão no rodízio mensal de tropas. Visto que Asael morreu antes de Davi se tornar rei sobre todo o Israel, sua menção aqui talvez seja mais com referência à sua casa, representada por seu filho Zebadias, mencionado no texto como sucessor de Asael. Outra sugestão é dada por The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible (Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete, editado por G. A. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 1, p. 244): "É possível que tenhamos aqui o protótipo da milícia davídica, organizada no início da regência judaica do rei, e que esta lista original tenha sido atualizada pela inclusão de Zebadias, filho e sucessor de Asael neste comando." — Veja 1Cr 12.

2. Um dos levitas designados a ensinar a Lei em toda a Judá, a partir do terceiro ano do reinado de Jeosafá (934 AEC). — 2Cr 17:7, 8; compare isso com De 33:8-10.

3. Comissário que serviu no templo durante o reinado de Ezequias (745-717 AEC), em conexão com as contribuições e os dízimos. — 2Cr 31:13.

ASAFE [Ele (Deus) Ajuntou].

1. Descendente de Levi mediante Gersom. (1Cr 6:39, 43) Durante o reinado do Rei Davi (1077-1038 AEC), Asafe foi nomeado pelos levitas como um dos principais cantores e tocadores de címbalos, acompanhando a Arca à medida que ela era trazida do lar de Obede-Edom para a "Cidade de Davi". (1Cr 15:17, 19, 25-29) Depois disso, Asafe, junto com Hemã e Etã, serviu diante do tabernáculo na regência da música e do canto. (1Cr 6:31-44) Como Hemã e Jedutum (talvez o mesmo que Etã), Asafe é chamado de "visionário" que 'profetizava com a harpa'. — 1Cr 25:1-6; 2Cr 29:30; 35:15.

Os filhos de Asafe continuaram a constituir um grupo especial nos arranjos orquestrais e corais, desempenhando um papel destacado no tempo da inauguração do templo e quando se trouxe a Arca de Sião para o local do templo (2Cr 5:12); no tempo das reformas do Rei Ezequias (2Cr 29:13-15); e no tempo da grande Páscoa celebrada durante o reinado do Rei Josias. (2Cr 35:15, 16) Alguns de seus descendentes também se achavam entre o primeiro grupo que voltou do exílio babilônico para Jerusalém. — Esd 2:1, 41; Ne 7:44.

Os cabeçalhos dos Salmos 50, e de 73 a 83, atribuem estes cânticos a Asafe. Entretanto, parece provável que o nome seja ali usado como se referindo à casa da qual ele era o cabeça paternal, visto que alguns dos salmos (Sal 79, 80) evidentemente descrevem eventos posteriores aos dias de Asafe.

2. Descendente de Coate, filho de Levi. Seus descendentes eram porteiros no serviço do tabernáculo, no tempo do Rei Davi. — 1Cr 26:1; Núm 16:1.

3. Entre os oficiais do Rei Ezequias (745-717 AEC) menciona-se "Joá, filho de Asafe, o cronista". (2Rs 18:18, 37; Is 36:3, 22) Embora a Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature (Ciclopédia de Literatura Bíblica, 1880, Vol. I, p. 233), de John Kitto, aplique o termo "cronista" a Asafe, a maioria dos peritos acham que se aplica a Joá (portanto: Joá ben Asafe, o cronista). Visto que o termo "filho" muitas vezes é usado no sentido de "descendente", alguns sugerem que este Asafe seja o mesmo que o N.º 1.

4. "Guarda do parque", do Rei Artaxerxes, no tempo do retorno de Neemias a Jerusalém (455 AEC). (Ne 2:8) O parque era uma área florestal, talvez no Líbano, que também se achava sob controle persa. O nome hebraico do guarda do parque talvez indique que ele era um judeu que ocupava este cargo oficial, assim como Neemias servira no cargo relativamente importante de copeiro do rei. — Ne 1:11.

ASAÍAS [Jah Fez].

1. Descendente de Merari, terceiro filho de Levi, e cabeça duma casa paterna. Foi um dos chefes entre os levitas, que constituíam parte do grupo de 862 escolhidos para participar em levar a Arca do Pacto para Jerusalém, no tempo da segunda (e bem-sucedida) tentativa de Davi. — 1Cr 6:29, 30; 15:4-12.

2. Um dos maiorais da tribo de Simeão nos dias do Rei Ezequias (745-717 AEC). Encontrava-se entre os simeonitas que participaram em conquistar um rico vale na região de Gedor, até então ocupado por camitas e meunins. — 1Cr 4:36-41.

3. Chamado de "servo do rei", fazia parte duma comissão de cinco, chefiada por Hilquias, a quem o Rei Josias mandara à profetisa Hulda para indagar de Jeová sobre o significado do recém-descoberto livro da Lei (em 642 AEC). — 2Rs 22:3, 8, 12-14; 2Cr 34:20, 21.

4. Primogênito dos silonitas (1Cr 9:1-3, 5), alistado entre os que retornaram de Babilônia após o exílio. Em Neemias 11:5 faz-se menção de Maaseias como "selanita" descendente de Judá, e por causa do sentido similar dos nomes (Maaseias significa "Obra de Jeová") alguns acham serem eles a mesma pessoa e descendente de Selá, filho mais moço de Judá mediante a filha de Sua, o cananeu. — Gên 38:2, 5; veja MAASEIAS N.º 17.

ASAREL. Um dos quatro filhos de Jealelel, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:16.

ASARELÁ. Filho de Asafe, que serviu nos grupos de serviço de músicos e cantores na casa de Jeová, no tempo de Davi. (1Cr 25:1, 2) É provável que Jesarela, do versículo 14 , seja uma variante do seu nome.

ASBEIA [Faça Eu Alguém Jurar (Prestar Juramento)]. A casa de Asbeia descendia de Selá, filho de Judá, e era famosa pela produção de tecidos finos. (1Cr 4:21) Os Targuns acrescentam que o linho que fazia destinava-se a reis e sacerdotes.

ASBEL, ASBELITAS. Asbel era filho de Benjamim, alistado como terceiro em Gênesis 46:21, mas como segundo em 1 Crônicas 8:1. Em 1728 AEC, ele entrou no Egito junto com a família de Jacó. Parece ser chamado de Jediael em 1 Crônicas 7:6, 10. Os asbelitas, descendentes dele, foram registrados no censo feito nas planícies desérticas de Moabe, por volta de 1473 AEC. — Núm 26:38.

ASBUQUE. Pai do príncipe Neemias, que viveu na mesma época do governador e escritor bíblico, mas não se trata da mesma pessoa. — Ne 3:16.

ASCALOM [possivelmente: Lugar de Pesagem (Pagar)]. Porto do Mediterrâneo e uma das cinco principais cidades filisteias. (Jos 13:3) É identificada com ʽAsqalan (Tel Ashqelon), situada a cerca de 19 km ao NNE de Gaza. A cidade se encontrava num anfiteatro rochoso, de formação natural, cuja parte côncava dava para o Mediterrâneo. A região campestre é fértil, produzindo maçãs, figos e a pequena cebola conhecida como echalota ou cebolinha-branca, que, pelo que parece, deriva seu nome dessa cidade filisteia.

Ascalom foi designada à tribo de Judá e foi capturada por esta, mas, aparentemente, não permaneceu sujeita a ela por muito tempo. (Jz 1:18, 19) Era uma cidade filisteia no tempo de Sansão e de Samuel. (Jz 14:19; 1Sa 6:17) Davi a menciona no seu lamento pela morte de Saul e de Jonatã. (2Sa 1:20) Quando o Rei Uzias conquistou cidades filisteias, Ascalom não foi alistada entre as tomadas. — 2Cr 26:6.

Na profecia de Amós (c. 804 AEC), fez-se a predição da derrota do governante de Ascalom. (Am 1:8) A história secular mostra que, no século seguinte, Tiglate-Pileser III, da Assíria, fez de Asqaluna (Ascalom) uma cidade vassala. Jeremias (depois de 647 AEC) proferiu duas profecias que envolviam Ascalom. Embora Jeremias 47:2-7 possa ter tido certo cumprimento quando Nabucodonosor saqueou a cidade, no início de seu reinado (c. 624 AEC), a profecia em Jeremias 25:17-20, 28, 29 indica claramente um cumprimento subsequente à queda de Jerusalém em 607 AEC. A profecia de Sofonias (escrita antes de 648 AEC) também predisse uma vindoura desolação de Ascalom, junto com outras cidades filisteias, após o que o restante de Judá finalmente ocuparia as "casas de Ascalom". (Sof 2:4-7) Por fim, por volta de 518 AEC, Zacarias proclamou a destruição de Ascalom, em conexão com a desolação de Tiro (332 AEC). — Za 9:3-5.

ASCALONITA [De (Pertencente a) Ascalom]. Habitante da cidade filisteia de Ascalom. — Jos 13:3.

ASCENSÃO. O retorno de Jesus Cristo ao céu, 40 dias após a sua ressurreição.

O cenário da ascensão de Jesus foi o monte das Oliveiras (At 1:9, 12), perto da cidade de Betânia (Lu 24:50), cidade que ficava no lado oriental do monte das Oliveiras. Os que presenciaram a ascensão foram um grupo limitado, os fiéis apóstolos dele. (At 1:2, 11-13) O registro declara que, "enquanto olhavam, foi elevado e uma nuvem o arrebatou para cima, fora da vista deles". Eles continuaram a olhar para o céu, até serem avisados pelos anjos, que os informaram: "Este Jesus, que dentre vós foi acolhido em cima, no céu, virá assim da mesma maneira em que o observastes ir para o céu." — At 1:9-11.

É preciso notar que os anjos referiram-se à "maneira" (gr.: tró·pos), não à forma (gr.: mor·fé) em que Jesus partiu. À medida que a nuvem o arrebatava, ele se tornava invisível aos olhos humanos. O relato de Atos mostra que a ascensão dele foi sem ostentação ou pompa, discernida apenas por uns poucos seguidores fiéis, e isto só na parte inicial da ascensão. A maneira da sua ascensão era tal que habilitaria os apóstolos a servir de testemunhas deste fato, assim como foram da ressurreição de Jesus. (At 1:3) Portanto, ele não simplesmente 'desapareceu' diante deles, assim como fizera anteriormente diante de dois discípulos em Emaús, ou como o anjo que apareceu a Gideão "desapareceu da sua vista". (Lu 24:31; Jz 6:21, 22) Até certo ponto, sua ascensão foi mais como a do anjo que apareceu a Manoá e sua esposa. Ele mandou que estes preparassem um sacrifício, e, "ao subir a chama do altar para o céu, então o anjo de Jeová subiu na chama do altar enquanto Manoá e sua esposa olhavam". — Jz 13:20.

Visto que Atos 1:3-9 mostra que a ascensão de Jesus ocorreu 40 dias após a sua ressurreição, há um espaço de tempo entre os eventos registrados em Lucas 24:1-49, como ocorrendo no dia da ressurreição de Jesus, e a ascensão de Jesus conforme descrita no versículo 51 deste capítulo. Pode-se também notar que as palavras "começou a ser levado para o céu", que aparecem neste versículo, faltam em alguns manuscritos antigos, e, por isso, são omitidas em algumas traduções modernas (NE, AT). No entanto, elas constam no Papiro Bodmer (P^{75}), no Manuscrito Alexandrino, no Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209, e em outros manuscritos antigos.

Efeito sobre os Discípulos. Até o dia da ascensão de Jesus, parece que os discípulos ainda pensavam em termos de um reino terrestre regido por ele, conforme depreendido de sua declaração em Atos 1:6. Por iniciar sua ascensão de forma visível e permitir que seus discípulos testemunhassem a parte inicial dela, Jesus assim lhes tornou óbvio que seu Reino era celestial e que, diferente de Davi, que "não ascendeu aos céus", a posição de Jesus dali em diante seria "à direita de Deus", conforme Pedro testificou destemidamente no dia de Pentecostes. — At 2:32-36.

Esta ação devia igualmente trazer-lhes à mente as muitas declarações anteriores de Jesus, que apontavam para tal posição celestial, e ajudar os seus discípulos a compreendê-las. Ele havia chocado alguns por dizer: "Que seria, portanto, se observásseis o Filho do homem ascender para onde estava antes?" (Jo 6:62); e ele dissera aos judeus: "Vós sois dos domínios de baixo; eu sou dos domínios de cima." (Jo 8:23) Na noite da sua última reunião com seus apóstolos, ele lhes disse que 'iria embora para o Pai, a fim de lhes preparar um lugar' (Jo 14:2, 28); enquanto estava entre eles, na sua última noite de vida como humano, ele relatou ao seu Pai que tinha 'terminado a obra na terra' que lhe fora designada, e orou, dizendo: "Glorifica-me junto de ti com a glória que eu tive junto de ti antes de haver o mundo", dizendo também: "Eu vou para ti." (Jo 17:4, 5, 11) Quando preso, ele forneceu um indício similar perante o Sinédrio. (Mt 26:64) Depois da sua ressurreição, ele disse a Maria Madalena: "Para de agarrar-te a mim. Porque ainda não ascendi para junto do Pai. Mas, vai aos meus irmãos e dize-lhes: 'Eu ascendo para junto de meu Pai e vosso Pai, e para meu Deus e vosso Deus.'" (Jo 20:17) Todavia, apesar de tudo isso, é evidente que o significado dessas declarações só foi entendido pelos discípulos por ocasião da ascensão. Mais tarde, Estêvão teve uma visão de Jesus à direita de Deus (At 7:55, 56), e Paulo sentiu o efeito da glória celestial de Jesus. — At 9:3-5.

A Inauguração dum "Caminho Novo e Vivente". Embora Jesus iniciasse a sua ascensão numa forma física, sendo assim visível aos discípulos que o observavam, não há base para se presumir que continuasse a reter uma forma material depois de a nuvem se interpor. O apóstolo Pedro declara que Jesus morreu na carne, mas foi ressuscitado "no espírito". (1Pe 3:18) Paulo declara a regra de que "carne e sangue não podem herdar o reino de Deus". (1Co 15:50; compare também a declaração de Jesus em Jo 12:23, 24, com 1Co 15:35-45.) Paulo assemelha a ascensão de Jesus, para chegar à presença de Deus nos céus, à entrada do sumo sacerdote no compartimento do Santíssimo do tabernáculo, no Dia da Expiação, e especifica que, em tal ocasião, o sumo sacerdote só levava o sangue (não a carne) das vítimas sacrificiais. (He 9:7, 11, 12, 24-26) Paulo compara então a cortina, que separava o primeiro compartimento do compartimento do Santíssimo, à carne de Cristo. O sumo sacerdote, ao passar para o Santíssimo, para a presença típica de Deus, não levava a cortina consigo, mas passava por tal barreira e ia além dela, de modo que ela ficava atrás dele. Assim, Paulo declara que "temos denodo para com o caminho de entrada no lugar santo, pelo sangue de Jesus, que ele inaugurou para nós como caminho novo e vivente através da cortina, isto é, sua carne". — He 9:3, 24; 10:10, 19, 20; compare isso com Jo 6:51; He 6:19, 20.

A ascensão de Jesus ao céu, a fim de apresentar o valor resgatador do seu sangue vital a Jeová, inaugurou o "caminho novo e vivente" de aproximação a Deus em oração. Que também abriu o caminho para a vida celestial harmoniza-se com a declaração do próprio Jesus, no sentido de que, antes disso, "nenhum homem ascendeu ao céu, senão aquele que desceu do céu, o Filho do homem". (Jo 3:13) De modo que nem Enoque, nem Elias, inauguraram este caminho, assim como tampouco Davi o fez. (Gên 5:24; 2Rs 2:11; At 2:34) Conforme Paulo declara: "O espírito santo esclarece assim que o caminho para o lugar santo ainda não fora manifestado enquanto a primeira tenda estava de pé." — He 9:8; veja ELIAS N.º 1; ENOQUE N.º 2.

Termo Certo. Alguns suscitam objeções ao relato da ascensão, dizendo que transmite o conceito primitivo de que o céu está "acima" da Terra, manifestando assim ignorância da estrutura do Universo e da rotação da Terra. No entanto, para satisfazer a tais críticos, seria necessário, na realidade, exigir a virtual eliminação das palavras "em cima", "acima", e assim por diante, da linguagem humana. Até mesmo nesta era espacial ainda lemos de os astronautas "subirem" a uma "órbita de 184 milhas de altitude" acima da Terra (The New York Times, de 19 de junho de 1983), ao passo que sabemos que, tecnicamente, eles se distanciaram ou afastaram da superfície da Terra até aquela distância. É interessante que o relato da delegação angélica que fez coro ao anúncio do nascimento de Jesus diga que, quando sua missão foi cumprida, "os anjos se afastaram deles para o céu". (Lu 2:15; compare isso com At 12:10.) Assim, a ascensão de Jesus, ao passo que se iniciou com um movimento ascendente, do ponto de vista dos seus discípulos, poderia depois ter tomado qualquer direção necessária para levá-lo à presença celestial de seu Pai. Foi uma ascensão, não só em sentido direcional, mas, o que é mais importante, quanto à esfera de atividade e nível de existência no domínio espiritual, e à elevada presença do Deus Altíssimo, domínio não governado por dimensões ou direções humanas. — Veja He 2:7, 9.

Por Que Era Essencial. A ascensão de Jesus ao domínio celestial era essencial por diversos motivos ou propósitos. Ele declarara que era necessário que 'fosse embora', a fim de poder enviar o espírito santo de Deus como ajudador para seus discípulos. (Jo 16:7-14) O derramamento desse espírito por parte de Jesus, no dia de Pentecostes, foi para os discípulos uma demonstração evidente de que Jesus chegara à presença de Deus e apresentara o valor do seu sacrifício resgatador a Ele. (At 2:33, 38) Esta apresentação do valor do seu sangue vitalício também tornou imprescindível tal ascensão, pois não havia de ser feita na Terra, no Santíssimo do templo em Jerusalém, mas somente no "próprio céu . . . perante a pessoa de Deus". (He 9:24) Também, tornara-se necessária por Jesus ter sido designado e glorificado como o "grande sumo sacerdote que passou pelos céus". (He 4:14; 5:1-6) Paulo explica que, "então, se ele estivesse na terra, não seria sacerdote", mas que, uma vez que "se assentou à direita do trono da Majestade nos céus", Jesus "obteve agora um serviço público mais excelente, de modo que ele é também o mediador dum pacto correspondentemente melhor". (He 8:1-6) Por causa disso, os cristãos sujeitos ao pecado herdado são consolados por saber que "temos um ajudador junto ao Pai, Jesus Cristo, um justo". — 1Jo 2:1; Ro 8:34; He 7:25.

Por fim, a ascensão era necessária para Jesus administrar o Reino, do qual se tornou herdeiro, ficando-lhe "sujeitos anjos, e autoridades, e poderes". (1Pe 3:22; Fil 2:6-11; 1Co 15:25; He 10:12, 13, compare isso com Da 7:14.) Tendo 'vencido o mundo' (Jo 16:33), Jesus tomou parte em cumprir a profecia do Salmo 68:18, 'ascendendo ao alto e levando consigo cativos', sendo o significado disso explicado por Paulo em Efésios 4:8-12.

ASDODE. Uma das cinco cidades principais dos filisteus sob seus "senhores do eixo", e, evidentemente, o centro religioso da Filístia, com sua adoração do deus falso, Dagom. As outras cidades eram Gate, Gaza, Ascalom e Ecrom. (Jos 13:3) Asdode é identificada com Esdud (Tel Ashdod), a uns 6 km ao SSE, e para o interior, da moderna Asdode na costa.

É primeiramente mencionada em Josué 11:22 como moradia, junto com Gaza e Gate, dos remanescentes dos gigantescos anaquins. Devido à elevação em que foi construída e sua posição na estrada militar ao longo da costa, desde o Egito e através da Palestina, Asdode ocupava uma estratégica posição militar. No tempo da conquista israelita, ela, junto com suas aldeias suburbanas, foi designada a Judá (Jos 15:46, 47); mas, evidentemente, seus habitantes estão incluídos entre os "habitantes da baixada", que não puderam ser desapossados "porque tinham carros de guerra com foices de ferro". — Jz 1:19.

As cidades filisteias parecem ter estado no auge de seu poderio durante o tempo do Rei Saul. Antes do reinado de Saul, os filisteus infligiram uma esmagadora derrota aos israelitas em Ebenezer e capturaram a Arca do Pacto, que então transportaram para Asdode e colocaram no templo de Dagom, junto à imagem do seu deus. Depois de duas humilhações miraculosamente impostas à imagem de Dagom, os asdoditas começaram a sofrer uma praga de hemorroidas de tamanha gravidade, que gerou o pânico entre eles. Uma conferência dos senhores do eixo filisteus resultou na transferência da Arca para a cidade de Gate, com a resultante extensão da praga até lá. Em questão de sete meses, a Arca estava em caminho de volta a Israel, acompanhada de uma oferta de ouro. — 1Sa 5:1-6:18; veja FILÍSTIA, FILISTEUS.

Embora o Rei Davi infligisse várias derrotas aos filisteus, as cidades principais deles, evidentemente, continuaram independentes até o tempo do Rei Uzias (829-778 AEC). Uzias é descrito como fabricante de "máquinas de guerra" (2Cr 26:15), e 2 Crônicas 26:6 nos conta que Uzias "passou a sair e a lutar contra os filisteus, e a romper pela muralha de Gate, e pela muralha de Jabné, e pela muralha de Asdode, construindo depois cidades no território de Asdode e entre os filisteus".

Evidentemente, o território de Asdode não continuou sob o controle de Judá, pois, em períodos posteriores, há inscrições que mostram que o rei assírio Sargão II depôs Azuri, rei local, e empossou Ahimiti em lugar dele. Uma revolta fez com que Sargão realizasse uma campanha contra a Filístia, conquistando Gate, "Asdudu" (Asdode) e "Asdudimmu" (Asdode-à-Beira-do-Mar, evidentemente um lugar separado, situado à beira-mar). Esta pode ser a campanha mencionada em Isaías 20:1, e um cumprimento parcial da profecia de Amós 1:8. No século seguinte, Heródoto (II, 157) registra que Asdode (Azoto) foi submetida a um cerco que durou 29 anos, armado contra a cidade pelo Faraó Psamtik (Psamético).

Um prisma de pedra, de Senaqueribe da Assíria, diz que "Mitinti, de Asdode", lhe trouxe dádivas dispendiosas e lhe beijou os pés, e adiciona a respeito do Rei Ezequias, de Judá (745-717 AEC): "As suas cidades, que eu saqueei, tirei de seu país e dei-as a Mitinti, rei de Asdode." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. B. Pritchard, 1974, pp. 287, 288.) Asdode parece ter estado numa condição debilitada no tempo de Jeremias (depois de 647 AEC), de modo que ele falou do "restante de Asdode". (Je 25:20) Nabucodonosor, cujo governo começou em 624 AEC, menciona o rei de Asdode como um dos presos na corte babilônica. — Veja Sof 2:4.

No período pós-exílico, Asdode ainda era um foco de oposição aos israelitas (Ne 4:7), e Neemias repreendeu severamente os judeus que se haviam casado com mulheres asdoditas, resultando em filhos que 'falavam asdodita, e não havia nenhum deles que soubesse falar judaico'. (Ne 13:23, 24) Durante o período dos macabeus, a idólatra Asdode (chamada Azoto) passou a ser atacada por Judas Macabeu, por volta de 163 AEC, e, mais tarde, pelo irmão de Judas, Jônatas, por volta de 148 AEC, o templo de Dagom sendo incendiado neste segundo ataque. — 1 Macabeus 5:68; 10:84.

É digno de nota que a profecia de Zacarias apontava para o tempo em que Asdode seria tomada por estrangeiros. Evidentemente, porque não haveria mais nem população nem governo filisteus, nativos, a palavra profética era: "Será realmente um filho ilegítimo que se sentará em Asdode." — Za 9:6.

A cidade foi reconstruída pelos romanos por volta do ano 55 AEC, e era geralmente conhecida pelo seu nome grego, Azoto. Filipe, o evangelista, passou por Asdode em sua viagem de pregação, registrada em Atos 8:40.

ASDODITA [De (Pertencente a) Asdode]. Habitante da cidade filisteia de Asdode. (Jos 13:3) Iguais aos outros filisteus, os asdoditas eram descendentes de Cã por meio de Mizraim e Casluim, chegando a Canaã evidentemente procedentes da ilha de Creta. — Gên 10:6, 13, 14; Am 9:7; veja ASDODE; FILÍSTIA, FILISTEUS.

Em Neemias 13:24, o termo "asdodita" é também aplicado à língua deles. Em vista da ausência de qualquer registro a respeito da sua língua, não se pode determinar se ainda falavam a antiga língua filisteia, ou um dialeto resultante de séculos de domínio estrangeiro.

ASENAPAR. Este nome aparece numa passagem do livro de Esdras (4:10), registrada em aramaico, e é evidentemente uma versão apocopada do nome do rei assírio Assurbanipal, e, igual ao idioma persa, que não tem a letra l, substitui o l final pelo r. Os habitantes de Susa (capital de Elão) foram transplantados por Asenapar para Samaria. (Veja 2Rs 17:24-28.) A história mostra que Assurbanipal foi o único rei assírio em condições de executar tal ação com respeito aos habitantes de Elão.

Assurbanipal era filho de Esar-Hadom (Esd 4:2) e neto de Senaqueribe. Era contemporâneo do Rei Manassés, de Judá (716-662 AEC), cujo nome é encontrado num prisma de Assurbanipal, alistando uns 20 reis como tributários da Assíria. (Veja 2Cr 33:10-13.) Debaixo dele, a Assíria atingiu seu apogeu. Evidentemente designado príncipe herdeiro uns três ou quatro anos antes, Assurbanipal assumiu o trono da Assíria quando seu pai faleceu, ao passo que seu irmão, Samas-sum-iuquin, era rei de Babilônia.

Assurbanipal sufocou um levante no Egito, conquistando e saqueando a cidade de Tebas (Nô-Amom; compare isso com Na 3:8-10). Mais tarde, travou um conflito prolongado com seu irmão, o rei de Babilônia, e, depois de subjugar Babilônia, destruiu Susa, capital de Elão. Esta conquista é que constitui a base histórica para relacioná-lo com o Asenapar de Esdras 4:9, 10.

Assurbanipal é mais conhecido, porém, por seus interesses literários, tendência ímpar entre os imponentes monarcas assírios. A partir de 1845 EC, as escavações revelaram uma grande biblioteca constituída por Assurbanipal em Nínive, com umas 22.000 tabuinhas de argila e textos. Além de encantamentos, orações e hinos, os milhares de escritos cuneiformes incluem tratados sobre história, geografia, astronomia, tábuas de matemática, medicina, gramática, bem como documentos comerciais, envolvendo contratos, vendas e empréstimos. São considerados como fonte valiosa de informações sobre a Assíria.

ASENATE. Filha do sacerdote egípcio Potífera, de Om, dada por Faraó a José como esposa. Ela tornou-se mãe de Manassés e de Efraim. — Gên 41:45, 50-52; 46:20.

ASER [Feliz; Felicidade].

1. O oitavo filho de Jacó e o segundo de seus dois filhos com Zilpa, serva de Leia. (Gên 35:26) Assim, o único irmão germano de Aser era Gade. Os quatro filhos e uma filha de Aser são alistados em 1 Crônicas 7:30, embora o nome da sua esposa não seja mencionado. Ele não se destacava entre os 12 filhos de Jacó. No entanto, na profecia do leito de morte de seu pai, prometeu-se a Aser uma vida abençoada, com uma abundância de ricos alimentos (Gên 49:20), e a história dos seus descendentes demonstra o cumprimento desta predição.

2. O nome se aplica também à tribo que descendeu de Aser. Um ano após o Êxodo do Egito, os descendentes varões adultos desta tribo ascendiam a 41.500 (Núm 1:41), e, cerca de 39 anos mais tarde, tinham aumentado para 53.400, tornando-se a quinta tribo mais numerosa. (Núm 26:47) No acampamento de Israel, Aser ocupava uma posição do lado N do tabernáculo, junto com as tribos de Dã e Naftali. — Núm 2:25-30.

Antes da entrada em Canaã, a bênção profética de Moisés predizia novamente uma parte próspera para Aser. A tribo, em sentido figurado, iria 'mergulhar seu pé em azeite'. (De 33:24, 25; compare isso com Jó 29:6.) Seu quinhão de território estendia-se pelas planícies costeiras mediterrâneas, desde abaixo da cidade de Dor, ao S do monte Carmelo, subindo até o limite N da Palestina, em Sídon. (Jos 17:7-11; 19:24-31) Isto incluía algumas das terras mais férteis em todo o Israel, onde as oliveiras produziriam abundante azeite, ao passo que outras frutas também proveriam petiscos dignos de enobrecer uma mesa real. (Gên 49:20; De 33:24) Os territórios de Zebulão e de Naftali ficavam ao longo dos limites E de Aser, com Manassés e Issacar ao S e SE.

Aser é mencionada em Josué 17:7 como tendo fronteira com a tribo de Manassés. Aser é também mencionada neste mesmo relato, no versículo 10, onde se refere claramente ao território tribal de Aser.

ASERITA [De (Pertencente a) Aser]. Descendente de Aser, segundo filho de Jacó com a serva de Leia, Zilpa (Gên 30:12, 13); membro da tribo de Aser. — Jz 1:31, 32; veja ASER.

províncias da Capadócia, do Ponto e da Panfília. (At 2:9, 10; compare isso com 1Pe 1:1.) Ele ali alista a Frígia à parte da Ásia, como o faz de novo em Atos 16:6. Plínio, o Velho, autor romano do primeiro século EC, também fez isso. (Natural History [História Natural] V, XXVIII, 102) O relato em Atos 16:6, 7, declara que Paulo foi 'proibido pelo espírito santo de falar a palavra dentro do distrito da Ásia' quando viajava em direção O, na sua segunda viagem missionária (c. 49-52 EC). Portanto, passou pela Frígia e pela Galácia, em direção ao N, rumo à província da Bitínia, mas de novo foi desviado para o O, através da Mísia, até o porto marítimo de Trôade, o ponto natural de embarque para a Macedônia. Aqui, Paulo teve sua visão, convidando-o: "Passa à Macedônia e ajuda-nos." (At 16:9) Assim, ainda que Paulo realmente passasse pela parte setentrional da província da Ásia, ele não gastou tempo ali, senão na sua viagem de volta, depois de terminar seu trabalho na Macedônia e na Acaia. Passou então um curto tempo em Éfeso, pregando na sinagoga, e, ao partir, prometeu voltar. — At 18:19-21.

Durante sua terceira viagem (c. 52-56 EC), Paulo passou mais de dois anos em Éfeso, com o resultado de que "todos os que habitavam no distrito da Ásia, tanto judeus como gregos, ouviram a palavra do Senhor". (At 19:1-10, 22) Foi evidentemente nesta ocasião (c. 55 EC), em Éfeso, que Paulo escreveu sua primeira carta aos coríntios, aos quais ele enviou saudações das "congregações da Ásia", destarte indicando bom progresso. (1Co 16:19) Quando escreveu a sua segunda carta aos coríntios, mais tarde, da Macedônia, ele fez referência às dificuldades e ao grave perigo passados na Ásia. (At 19:23-41; 2Co 1:8) Na sua viagem de retorno, não desejando gastar mais tempo na Ásia, Paulo velejou ao largo de Éfeso, tocou na ilha de Samos, e, desembarcou em Mileto, na Cária, parte da província da Ásia, ponto ao qual convidou os "anciãos" da congregação de Éfeso, para terem uma reunião com ele. — At 20:15-18.

ASGADE [Forte É Gade]. Cabeça duma casa paterna, da qual alguns membros retornaram a Jerusalém com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC (Esd 2:12; Ne 7:17), e outros com Esdras, em 468 AEC. (Esd 8:12) Foi provavelmente um dos seus descendentes que atestou o "arranjo fidedigno" negociado por Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 14, 15.

ÁSIA. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, o termo "Ásia" é usado para se referir, não ao continente da Ásia, mas à província romana que ocupava a parte ocidental da Ásia Menor.

A Província Romana da Ásia. A província romana da Ásia incluía os países mais antigos da Mísia, da Lídia, da Cária, e, às vezes, parte da Frígia, bem como as ilhas adjacentes. Era assim limitada pelo mar Egeu e pelas províncias da Bitínia, da Galácia (que abrangia parte da Frígia) e da Lícia. As fronteiras precisas, contudo, são difíceis de definir, devido a repetidas alterações.

Inicialmente, a capital era Pérgamo, na Mísia, mas, durante o reinado de Augusto, foi transferida para Éfeso, mais para o sul. No ano 27 AEC, a província foi tornada senatorial, e, depois disso, foi governada por um procônsul. (At 19:38) Foi também dividida em 9 distritos jurisdicionais e subdividida em 44 distritos-cidades.

Lucas, ao descrever as regiões das quais os judeus vieram a Jerusalém na época de Pentecostes do ano 33 EC, alista a Ásia junto com as pro-

Quando viajou para Roma, para seu primeiro julgamento (c. 60/61 EC), que resultou das ações de uma turba em Jerusalém, instigada pelos "judeus da Ásia" (At 21:27, 28; 24:18, 19; compare isso com 6:9), Paulo inicialmente embarcou num navio que iria a "lugares ao longo da costa do distrito da Ásia", mas, então, passou para outro navio em Mirra, na província vizinha da Lícia. — At 27:2-6.

As palavras de Paulo em 2 Timóteo 1:15, evidentemente escritas em Roma por volta do ano 65 EC, podem indicar que a forte perseguição que então começara a grassar contra os cristãos, movida pelas autoridades romanas, tinha agora movido muitos 'homens cristãos da Ásia' a evitar associar-se com o encarcerado apóstolo Paulo, desviando-se de Paulo num tempo crítico. A expressão "todos os homens do distrito da Ásia" não subentende um desvio total de todos os cristãos da Ásia, porque Paulo, logo depois, elogiou a Onesíforo, que era evidentemente habitante de Éfeso. — 2Ti 1:16-18; 4:19.

A continuidade da fé cristã é também manifesta no livro de Revelação e nas sete mensagens enviadas por João a sete congregações em cidades destacadas da Ásia: Éfeso, Esmirna, Pérgamo, Tiatira, Sardes, Filadélfia e Laodiceia, a maioria destas congregações sendo elogiadas por terem perseverado em tribulação. (Re 1:4, 11; 2:2, 3, 9, 10, 13, 19; 3:10) João estava então (c. 96 EC) na ilha de Patmos, a uma curta distância da costa da província da Ásia. Crê-se, em geral, que o relato evangélico de João e suas três cartas foram escritas em Éfeso, ou nas suas proximidades, após a sua soltura de Patmos.

Outras cidades da província da Ásia, mencionadas biblicamente, são Colossos, Hierápolis, Adramítio e Assos.

ASIEL [Feito por Deus]. Antepassado simeonita de Jeú, e maioral nos dias do Rei Ezequias. — 1Cr 4:35, 38, 41.

ASIMA. Deidade adorada pelo povo de Hamate, que o rei da Assíria estabeleceu em Samaria depois de levar os israelitas ao cativeiro. (2Rs 17:24, 30) Asima, segundo o Talmude Babilônico (Sanhedrin 63*b*), era representado por um bode sem pelo, e por este motivo alguns identificaram Asima com Pã, deus pastoral da fertilidade. Outra sugestão é que o nome Asima seja uma alteração deliberada de "Axerá" (deusa cananeia da fertilidade), para combinar com a palavra hebraica 'a·shám ("culpa"; Gên 26:10). Todavia, não se pode afirmar nada com alguma certeza fora do que está contido na Bíblia.

ASÍNCRITO [Sem Comparação]. Um cristão em Roma, a quem o apóstolo Paulo enviou cumprimentos na sua inspirada carta aos romanos, escrita em Corinto por volta de 56 EC. (Ro 16:14) As Escrituras não fornecem informações adicionais sobre Asíncrito; no entanto, a evidência arqueológica em inscrições e papiros indica que o nome Asíncrito costumava ser usado naquele tempo.

ASMAVETE [Morte É Forte].

1. Um dos homens valentes de Davi, que era barumita (baarumita). (2Sa 23:31; 1Cr 11:33) Possivelmente o mesmo que o N.º 2.

2. Pai de Jeziel e de Pelete, da tribo de Benjamim, que estavam entre os poderosos que se juntaram às forças de Davi em Ziclague. (1Cr 12:1-3) Possivelmente o mesmo que o N.º 1.

3. Filho de Adiel, e, nos dias do Rei Davi, encarregado dos tesouros do rei. — 1Cr 27:25.

4. Descendente de Saul, e sexto na linhagem deste, mediante Jonatã. — 1Cr 8:33-36; 9:39-42.

5. Cidade situada dentro do território de Benjamim, também chamada Bete-Asmavete. Exilados dali estavam entre os que retornaram depois do exílio. (Esd 2:1, 24; Ne 7:28) Na inauguração das muralhas da restaurada Jerusalém, essa cidade forneceu alguns dos cantores para esta ocasião. (Ne 12:29) Ela é identificada com a moderna Hizmeh (Hizma), a uns 8 km ao NNE de Jerusalém, entre Geba e Anatote.

ASNÁ.

1. Cidade de Judá, na Sefelá, mencionada junto com outras cidades, inclusive Estaol e Zorá. (Jos 15:33) Uma identificação provisória é a aldeia de 'Aslin, entre Estaol e Zorá, perto da beira da planície costeira da Judeia.

2. Segunda cidade de Judá, alistada entre nove cidades, e evidentemente mais ao S do que a primeira Asná. (Jos 15:43) A identificação é incerta; um lugar sugerido é Idhna, a meio caminho entre Hébron e Laquis, e a uns 8 km a ESE de Maresa, que aparece na mesma lista.

3. Chefe de família de certos netineus que retornaram do exílio babilônico a Jerusalém, junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 50) Todavia, são omitidos na lista similar de Neemias 7:52.

ASNAPAR. Veja ASENAPAR.

ASPATA. Um dos dez filhos de Hamã. — Est 9:7, 10; veja HAMÃ.

ASPENAZ. Nome do principal oficial da corte em Babilônia, durante o reinado de Nabucodonosor. (Da 1:3) Pelo visto, ele chefiava o corpo de eunucos, mas não necessariamente era ele mesmo eunuco. Um dos seus deveres era treinar jovens para servir de pajens do monarca.

ÁSPIDE [gr.: a·spís]. Nome usado popularmente hoje em dia para várias cobras venenosas não aparentadas.

A palavra "áspides" só aparece uma vez na Bíblia Sagrada, em Romanos 3:13, onde o apóstolo Paulo, falando de pecadores, diz: "Veneno de áspides está atrás dos seus lábios." O apóstolo cita aqui o Salmo 140:3: "A peçonha de víbora-cornuda está sob os seus lábios." Portanto, as áspides mencionadas em Romanos 3:13 devem ser víboras-cornudas. — Veja VÍBORA-CORNUDA.

ASQUENAZ.

1. O primeiro mencionado dos três filhos de Gômer, filho de Jafé. — Gên 10:3; 1Cr 1:6.

Em escritos judaicos dos tempos medievais (e mesmo depois) aplicou-se o termo "Asquenaz" à raça teutônica, e mais especificamente à Alemanha. Assim, mesmo hoje, judeus de países germânicos são chamados de asquenazis, em contraste com os sefarditas, os judeus da Espanha e de Portugal.

2. Jeremias 51:27 menciona um reino de Asquenaz como aliado aos reinos de Ararate e de Mini contra Babilônia, no tempo da queda dela (539 AEC). Visto que se crê que Ararate se encontrava na região do lago Van, e Mini (chamado de "Manai" em inscrições assírias) é tido como situado ao SE do lago Van, é provável que o reino de Asquenaz ficasse perto destas regiões, possivelmente um pouco ao N da região entre o Mar Negro e o mar Cáspio.

O nome Asquenaz é considerado por arqueólogos como equivalente ao assírio Ashguzai, termo evidentemente aplicado aos antigos citas da região do Mar Negro e do mar Cáspio. Tabuinhas cuneiformes registram uma aliança entre esta tribo e os manais (minis) numa revolta contra a Assíria, no sétimo século AEC.

ASRIEL. Descendente masculino de Manassés, que se tornou cabeça da família dos asrielitas. Números 26:29-31 indica que ele era bisneto de Manassés mediante Maquir e o filho deste, Gileade. De acordo com 1 Crônicas 7:14, Asriel era filho de Manassés, que sua concubina síria lhe deu à luz. No entanto, parte duma aparente declaração parentética que segue reza: "Ela deu à luz Maquir, pai de Gileade." Portanto, conforme não é incomum em genealogias bíblicas, Asriel talvez fosse aqui chamado de "filho" de Manassés apenas no sentido de ser um dos seus posteriores descendentes (por meio de Maquir, filho de Manassés com sua concubina síria). Mas, é possível que Manassés tivesse tanto um filho direto como um bisneto com o mesmo nome. "Os filhos de Asriel" estavam entre os descendentes de Manassés aos quais Josué distribuiu lotes de terra na Terra da Promessa. — Jos 17:1-4.

ASRIELITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Asriel]. Uma família manassita descendente de Asriel. — Núm 26:29, 31.

ASSAR. Veja COZER (ASSAR), PADEIRO.

ASSASSINATO (ASSASSINAR). Veja ASSASSÍNIO (HOMICÍDIO).

ASSASSÍNIO (HOMICÍDIO). As palavras da língua original traduzidas variavelmente por "matar", "assassinar" e "golpear" referem-se a tirar uma vida, determinando o contexto ou outros textos se está envolvido tirar a vida de outra pessoa de modo deliberado e não autorizado, ou ilícito. Por exemplo, no mandamento: "Não deves assassinar" (Êx 20:13), a palavra hebraica para "assassinar" (ratsáhh) aqui se refere claramente à matança deliberada e ilícita. Mas, em Números 35:27, o mesmo termo denota um ato que o vingador de sangue estava autorizado a realizar. Por conseguinte, a ordem: "Não deves assassinar", tem de ser entendida na estrutura da inteira Lei mosaica, que autorizava que, sob certas circunstâncias, como no caso da execução de criminosos, se tirasse a vida humana.

Primórdios Históricos. Quase que desde o início da história humana conhece-se o assassínio. O primeiro homem, Adão, por meio da sua desobediência, transmitiu à sua descendência o pecado e a morte, deste modo, efetivamente, mostrando-se assassino. (Ro 5:12; 6:23) Foi o Diabo quem deliberadamente contribuiu para tal resultado, por induzir Eva, a esposa de Adão, a pecar, ele mesmo tornando-se assim homicida, assassino, no começo da sua carreira de caluniador de Deus. — Gên 3:13; Jo 8:44.

Menos de 130 anos depois, ocorreu o primeiro assassínio violento, um fratricídio. Caim, filho primogênito de Adão, motivado por ódio invejoso, assassinou o seu irmão justo, Abel. (Gên 4:1-8, 25; 5:3) Por tal ato, Caim foi amaldiçoado com o banimento, para ser errante e fugitivo na terra. (Gên 4:11, 12) Não foi senão depois do Dilúvio dos dias de Noé que Deus autorizou os humanos a administrar a pena capital no caso de assassínio. — Gên 9:6.

Sob a Lei. Séculos mais tarde foi dada aos israelitas a Lei mosaica, e ela incluía extensiva legislação sobre o tirar a vida humana. Estabelecia uma diferença entre o homicídio deliberado e o acidental. Fatores considerados como tendo peso contra aquele que afirmava ser homicida acidental eram: Se ele (1) já odiava antes a pessoa morta (De 19:11, 12; compare isso com Jos 20:5), (2) se tinha ficado de tocaia contra a vítima (Núm 35:20, 21), ou (3) se tinha usado um objeto ou implemento capaz de infligir um ferimento mortal (Núm 35:16-18). Até mesmo os escravos, se fossem mortos ao serem espancados por seus amos, deveriam ser vingados. (Êx 21:20) Ao passo que se prescreveu a pena de morte para os assassinos deliberados, e não se permitia resgate em seu caso, os homicidas não intencionais podiam preservar sua vida por se valerem da segurança concedida a eles nas cidades de refúgio. — Êx 21:12, 13; Núm 35:30, 31; Jos 20:2, 3; veja CIDADES DE REFÚGIO.

Certos atos deliberados que indiretamente causassem ou pudessem causar a morte de outra pessoa eram considerados equivalentes ao assassínio deliberado. Por exemplo, o dono de um touro escornador, que desconsiderasse anteriores avisos para manter tal animal sob guarda, podia ser morto se seu touro matasse alguém. Em alguns casos, porém, podia-se aceitar um resgate em lugar da vida do dono. Sem dúvida, em tais casos, os juízes levariam em conta as circunstâncias. (Êx 21:29, 30) Também, aquele que maquinasse fazer com que outra pessoa fosse morta por apresentar falso testemunho, deveria ele mesmo ser morto. — De 19:18-21.

A Lei permitia a autodefesa, mas restringia o direito de a pessoa lutar por sua propriedade. Culpa de sangue recaía sobre aquele que, embora pegando o ladrão no ato de penetrar na sua casa, matasse o violador da lei durante o período diurno. Isto se dava, evidentemente, porque o roubo não resultava em pena de morte, e o ladrão podia ser identificado e levado à justiça. À noite, porém, seria difícil de ver o que se passava e averiguar as intenções do intruso. Por conseguinte, quem matasse um intruso na escuridão era considerado inculpe. — Êx 22:2, 3.

No primeiro século EC, os que procuravam matar Jesus foram identificados como 'filhos do Diabo', o primeiro homicida. (Jo 8:44) Os escribas e os fariseus decoravam os sepulcros dos justos, afirmando que não teriam sido partícipes em matar os profetas. Todavia, eles manifestavam o mesmo espírito assassino para com o Filho de Deus. — Mt 23:29-32; compare isso com Mt 21:33-45; 22:2-7; At 3:14, 15; 7:51, 52.

Ódio Igualado a Assassínio. Os assassínios procedem do coração da pessoa. (Mt 15:19; Mr 7:21; compare isso com Ro 1:28-32.) Portanto, quem odiasse seu irmão seria homicida, assassino. (1Jo 3:15) Cristo Jesus associou também o assassínio com atitudes erradas, tais como a pessoa continuar irada com seu irmão, dirigir-se a ele de modo ultrajante, ou julgá-lo e condená-lo erroneamente como "tolo desprezível". (Mt 5:21, 22) Tal ódio pode levar ao próprio assassínio. Parece que as palavras de Tiago (5:6), "condenastes, assassinastes o justo", podem ser entendidas nesta luz. Os ricos iníquos que mostraram ódio aos discípulos genuínos do Filho de Deus e que adotaram medidas opressivas contra eles, em alguns casos até mesmo assassinaram tais cristãos. Visto que o tratamento dispensado aos irmãos de Cristo Jesus é considerado por ele como dispensado a ele, tais pessoas, em sentido figurado, também assassinaram a ele, e evidentemente era isso que Tiago tinha em mente. — Veja Tg 2:1-11; Mt 25:40, 45; At 3:14, 15.

Embora os seguidores de Cristo talvez fossem perseguidos e até mesmo assassinados pela causa da justiça, não deveria suceder que sofressem por terem cometido assassínio ou outros crimes. — Mt 10:16, 17, 28; 1Pe 4:12-16; Re 21:8; 22:15.

ASSEMBLEIA. Jeová Deus, como Soberano Universal, tem o direito de decretar que seus servos se reúnam em assembleia e de especificar o tempo e o lugar da assembleia. Age assim em benefício deles. As assembleias do povo de Deus, nos tempos antigos, variavam no objetivo. Todavia, elas certamente contribuíam para a unidade, porque todos os presentes tinham a oportunidade de ouvir as mesmas coisas, ao mesmo tempo. Tais reuniões resultavam em muitos benefícios espirituais e frequentemente eram ocasiões de grande alegria.

Termos Hebraicos e Gregos. Na Bíblia, usam-se diversas palavras hebraicas e gregas para indicar um ajuntamento. Uma palavra comum no texto hebraico é 'e·dháh. Ela deriva da raiz ya·'ádh, que significa "designar; determinar", e assim indica um grupo reunido por designação. (Veja 2Sa 20:5; Je 47:7.) 'E·dháh é muitas vezes aplicado à comunidade de Israel e é usado nas expressões "a assembleia" (Le 8:4, 5; Jz 21:10), "assembleia de Israel" (Êx 12:3; Núm 32:4; 1Rs 8:5) e "assembleia de Jeová" (Núm 27:17).

A palavra hebraica moh·'édh deriva da mesma raiz que 'e·dháh e significa "tempo designado" ou "lugar designado". (1Sa 13:8; 20:35) É usada 223 vezes nas Escrituras Hebraicas, em expressões tais como "tenda de reunião". (Êx 27:21) Moh·'édh é empregada em conexão com festividades periódicas, ou sazonais. (Le 23:2, 4, 37, 44) Aparece em Isaías 33:20, onde Sião é chamada de "a vila de nossas festividades".

O termo hebraico miq·rá', significando "congresso", deriva do verbo radical qa·rá' (chamar). Ocorre em Isaías 4:5, que menciona o "lugar de congresso" do monte Sião. Frequente é o uso desta palavra na expressão "santo congresso" (Êx 12:16; Le 23:2, 3); durante tal santo congresso, não se devia fazer nenhum trabalho secular.

Outra palavra hebraica usada para designar reuniões é qa·hál, aparentada com um verbo que significa “congregar; convocar”. (Êx 35:1; Le 8:4) Frequentemente é usada para representar uma congregação como grupo organizado. Ocasionalmente, qa·hál (congregação) é usada junto com ‛e·dháh (assembleia). (Le 4:13; Núm 20:8, 10) Formas de ambas as palavras aparecem na expressão “congregação da assembleia de Israel [hebr.: qehál ‛adhath-Yis·ra·’él]”. — Êx 12:6.

Ainda outra palavra hebraica é ‛atsa·ráh, traduzida por “assembleia solene”. Este termo é usado em conexão com a Festividade das Barracas e a Páscoa. — Le 23:36; De 16:8.

Reuniões íntimas de diversas espécies são designadas pela palavra hebraica sohdh, que significa “palestra confidencial; intimidade”. (Sal 83:3; Jó 29:4) É traduzida por “grupo íntimo” no Salmo 89:7, que declara: “Deve-se ter espanto reverente ante Deus entre o grupo íntimo dos santos; Ele é grandioso e atemorizante sobre todos em volta dele.”

A palavra grega ek·kle·sí·a (de ek, “de [dentro]”, e klé·sis, “chamada”) usualmente é usada na Septuaginta para traduzir a palavra hebraica qa·hál (congregação) e é às vezes empregada para ‛e·dháh (assembleia), embora para esta última se use também a palavra grega sy·na·go·gé (que significa “ajuntamento”, de syn, “junto”, e á·go, “trazer”). Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, ek·kle·sí·a geralmente é vertida “congregação”. Em Atos 7:38, ela é usada com referência à congregação de Israel. A palavra grega sy·na·go·gé aparece em Atos 13:43 (“reunião da sinagoga”) e em Tiago 2:2 (“reunião”). Outra palavra grega, pa·né·gy·ris (de pan, “todo” e a·go·rá, designando qualquer espécie de assembleia), é vertida “assembleia geral” em Hebreus 12:23. — NM, VB.

As Escrituras têm muito a dizer sobre assembleias espiritualmente edificantes, embora também mencionem assembleias de caráter iníquo ou injusto. Partidários do rebelde Corá são chamados de “toda a sua assembleia”. (Núm 16:5) Davi disse em oração a Jeová: “A própria assembleia dos que são tirânicos tem procurado a minha alma.” (Sal 86:14) Também, quando o prateiro Demétrio fomentou oposição a Paulo, em Éfeso, e se ajuntou uma multidão, “alguns estavam clamando uma coisa e outros outra; pois a assembleia estava em confusão, e a maioria deles nem sabia a razão por que se tinham reunido”. — At 19:24-29, 32.

Deve-se notar que prevalecia a ordem nas reuniões do povo de Jeová; essas assembleias eram bem apoiadas, e eram ocasiões de benefício espiritual, muitas vezes ocasiões de grande alegria.

Em harmonia com a vontade divina, Moisés e Arão ajuntaram todos os anciãos de Israel no Egito. Transmitiram-se as palavras de Jeová, realizaram-se sinais, e o povo creu. (Êx 4:27-31) Depois, conforme Deus mandara, os israelitas reuniram-se ao sopé do monte Sinai (Horebe), presenciaram um emocionante espetáculo e testemunharam a promulgação da Lei. — Êx 19:10-19; De 4:9, 10.

Enquanto os israelitas estavam no ermo, Jeová mandou que Moisés fizesse duas trombetas de prata, que deviam ser tocadas para reunir a assembleia e para levantar o acampamento. Quando ambas eram tocadas, toda a assembleia mantinha seu encontro com Moisés; quando apenas uma era tocada, somente os maiorais eram então convocados. No ermo, o lugar específico da assembleia era a “entrada da tenda de reunião”. (Núm 10:1-4; Êx 29:42) Mais tarde, era da vontade de Jeová que os israelitas se reunissem regularmente junto ao templo em Jerusalém, congregando-se ali para as três grandes festividades anuais. — Êx 34:23, 24; 2Cr 6:4-6.

Assembleias Representativas. Em certas ocasiões, o povo de Israel era representado nas reuniões pelos “maiorais da assembleia” (Êx 16:22; Núm 4:34; 31:13; 32:2; Jos 9:15, 18; 22:30), ou pelos “anciãos”. (Êx 12:21; 17:5; 24:1) Quando havia assuntos judiciais que exigiam atenção, talvez diversas pessoas se reunissem junto ao portão da cidade. Todavia, quer se reunissem ali, quer em outra parte, nem todos votavam sobre o caso em consideração, à moda democrática. Antes, de maneira teocrática, anciãos respeitados examinavam os assuntos à luz da lei de Deus e então anunciavam sua decisão. (De 16:18; 17:8-13) De maneira similar, a primitiva congregação cristã era representada em tais assuntos por aqueles que, pelo espírito santo, ocupavam cargos de responsabilidade. (At 20:28) Em Israel, quando a transgressão exigia a sentença de morte, esta talvez fosse executada pela assembleia inteira. — Le 24:14; Núm 15:32-36; De 21:18-21.

Assembleias Gerais. As ocasiões de assembleias gerais em Israel incluíam festividades religiosas, assembleias solenes (2Cr 34:29, 30; Jl 2:15), ou eventos de grande significado nacional; a população era às vezes convocada por correios. (1Sa 10:17-19; 2Cr 30:6, 13) O sábado semanal, um dia de “completo repouso, um santo congresso” (Le 23:3), era uma ocasião de se considerar a Palavra de Deus, como se fazia nas posteriores sinagogas, onde ‘Moisés era lido em voz alta, cada sábado’. (At 15:21) Havia também a observância da lua nova (Núm 28:11-15), o dia de toque de trombeta (Núm 29:1-6), o anual Dia da Expiação (Le 16), a Páscoa (comemorando a libertação de Israel do Egito; Êx 12:14), e, mais tarde, a Festividade de Purim (comemorando a libertação dos judeus da ameaça de aniquilamento no Império Persa; Est 9:20-24), bem como a Festividade da Dedicação (em lembrança da rededicação do templo em 25 de quisleu de 165 AEC; Jo 10:22, 23). Além disso, havia três anuais "festividades periódicas [sazonais] de Jeová": a Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados, a Festividade das Semanas (mais tarde chamada de Pentecostes) e a Festividade das Barracas (Le 23), festividades a respeito das quais Deus decretou: "Três vezes por ano, todo macho teu comparecerá perante a face do verdadeiro Senhor Jeová." (Êx 23:14-17) Reconhecendo o elevado valor espiritual destas festividades, muitos homens cuidavam de que toda a sua família estivesse presente. (Lu 2:41-45) Também, Moisés declarou expressamente que a cada sete anos, durante a Festividade das Barracas, os homens, as mulheres, as crianças e os residentes forasteiros de Israel deviam congregar-se no lugar que Jeová escolhesse, 'para que escutassem e para que aprendessem, visto que teriam de temer a Jeová, seu Deus, e cuidar em cumprir todas as palavras desta lei'. (De 31:10-12) De modo que se providenciou que os israelitas se reunissem com bastante frequência para considerar a Palavra e os propósitos de Jeová. — Veja FESTIVIDADE.

Após o término do templo, Salomão convocou uma grande assembleia em Jerusalém em conexão com a dedicação deste esplêndido edifício religioso. Esta assembleia durou muitos dias, e quando o povo foi dispensado para casa, este foi embora "alegre e sentindo-se bem de coração pela bondade que Jeová havia feito a Davi e a Salomão, bem como a Israel, seu povo". — 2Cr 5:1-7:10.

As multidões congregadas junto ao templo durante as festividades anuais sentiam grande deleite e usufruíam muitos benefícios espirituais, como na celebração da Páscoa no tempo do Rei Ezequias, quando "veio a haver grande alegria em Jerusalém". (2Cr 30:26) Nos dias de Neemias, convocou-se uma assembleia que se mostrou uma ocasião de "muitíssima alegria". (Ne 8:17) Esdras leu para o povo reunido em Jerusalém o livro da Lei de Moisés, fazendo-o perante "todos os suficientemente inteligentes para escutar", e estes estavam atentos. (Ne 8:2, 3) Em resultado da instrução então transmitida por Esdras e por outros levitas, todo o povo se alegrou, "porque tinham entendido as palavras que se lhes deram a conhecer". (Ne 8:12) Depois comemoraram a Festividade das Barracas, e, no oitavo dia, "houve uma assembleia solene, segundo a regra". — Ne 8:18; Le 23:33-36.

Sinagogas Como Locais de Reunião. Durante o exílio dos judeus em Babilônia, ou pouco depois, passaram a ser usadas sinagogas, ou prédios que eram locais de reunião dos judeus. Com o tempo, estas foram estabelecidas em diversos lugares, havendo mais de uma em cidades grandes. As sinagogas eram primariamente escolas onde se liam e ensinavam as Escrituras. Eram também lugares de oração e para se dar louvor a Deus. Era costume de Jesus Cristo e de seus discípulos frequentá-las para instruir e encorajar os presentes ali. (Mt 4:23; Lu 4:16; At 13:14, 15; 17:1, 2; 18:4) Visto que nas sinagogas se liam regularmente as Escrituras, Tiago pôde dizer ao corpo governante cristão em Jerusalém: "Desde os tempos antigos, Moisés tem tido em cidade após cidade os que o pregam, porque ele está sendo lido em voz alta nas sinagogas, cada sábado." (At 15:21) Os aspectos básicos da adoração na sinagoga passaram a ser adotados nos locais de reunião cristãos, onde havia leitura e explanação das Escrituras, encorajamento, orações e o oferecimento de louvores. — 1Co 14:26-33, 40; Col 4:16; veja SINAGOGA.

Assembleias Cristãs. Em diversas ocasiões, reuniram-se diante de Jesus Cristo grandes multidões, derivando disso muitos benefícios, como no caso do Sermão do Monte. (Mt 5:1-7:29) Embora não se tratasse de assembleias especialmente providenciadas, houve ocasiões em que duraram muito tempo, o que tornou necessário alimentar as multidões congregadas, uma situação que Jesus resolveu com a multiplicação milagrosa de alimentos. (Mt 14:14-21; 15:29-38) Frequentemente, Cristo reunia seus discípulos e dava-lhes instruções espirituais, e, depois da morte dele, seus seguidores reuniam-se, como no dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, quando se conferiu o espírito santo a tais reunidos. — At 2:1-4.

Era costume dos primitivos cristãos reunir-se, em geral em pequenos grupos. No entanto, às vezes, nestas reuniões, ajuntava-se "uma considerável multidão". (At 11:26) Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus, achou apropriado aconselhar os israelitas espirituais contra demonstrar favoritismo para com os ricos numa reunião pública (gr.: sy·na·go·gé) da congregação. — Tg 2:1-9.

A Importância de se Reunir. A importância de se aproveitar plenamente as provisões de Jeová para se reunir, a fim de tirar proveito espiritual, é salientada em conexão com a celebração anual da Páscoa. Todo varão limpo, que não estivesse de viagem, mas que negligenciasse guardar a Páscoa, devia ser decepado na morte. (Núm 9:9-14) Quando o Rei Ezequias convocou os habitantes de Judá e de Israel a Jerusalém para a celebração duma Páscoa, sua mensagem foi, em parte: "Filhos de Israel, voltai a Jeová . . . não endureçais a vossa cerviz, assim como fizeram os vossos antepassados. Dai lugar a Jeová e vinde ao seu santuário que ele santificou por tempo indefinido, e servi a Jeová, vosso Deus, para que a sua ira ardente recue de vós. . . . Jeová, vosso Deus, é clemente e misericordioso, e não desviará de vós a sua face se voltardes a ele." (2Cr 30:6-9) Deliberadamente deixar de comparecer certamente indicaria que se abandonava a Entalhe no palácio setentrional em Nínive. O rei e sua rainha numa recepção no jardim; na árvore diante do harpista está a cabeça dum rei conquistado.

Deus. E, embora festividades tais como a Páscoa não sejam celebradas pelos cristãos, Paulo apropriadamente exortou-os a não deixarem de lado as reuniões regulares do povo de Deus, declarando: "Consideremo-nos uns aos outros para nos estimularmos ao amor e a obras excelentes, não deixando de nos ajuntar, como é costume de alguns, mas encorajando-nos uns aos outros, e tanto mais quanto vedes chegar o dia." — He 10:24, 25; veja CONGREGAÇÃO.

ASSENTO, CADEIRA. Veja CADEIRA DE JUIZ.

ASSINATURA. Sinal identificador duma pessoa. A palavra "assinatura" traduz a palavra hebraica taw, nome da última letra do alfabeto hebraico. (Taw é também vertido "sinal"; Ez 9:4 [veja n.], 6.) A assinatura às vezes talvez fosse a impressão do anel de sinete ou do selo cilíndrico da pessoa, ou talvez fosse um sinal escrito, peculiar da pessoa, ou um sinal escolhido por ela como identificação.

Ao protestar sua inocência diante de seus três "companheiros", que o acusavam de sofrer por causa de seus pecados contra Deus, Jó apresentou evidência e argumentos no sentido de ser inculpe. Invocou a Deus para que ouvisse sua causa e lhe desse uma resposta, dizendo: "Quem me dera que eu tivesse alguém para escutar-me, que o próprio Todo-Poderoso me respondesse segundo a minha assinatura! Ou que a pessoa em litígio comigo tivesse escrito um documento!" (Jó 31:35) Jó expressou ali a sua disposição de apresentar sua causa perante Deus, apondo sua própria assinatura a ela como confirmação.

ASSIR [possivelmente: Prisioneiro].

1. Levita nascido no Egito, que era um dos filhos de Corá. — Êx 6:24; 1Cr 6:22.

2. Primeiro Crônicas 6:23, 37, parece indicar um segundo Assir como filho ou descendente de Ebiasafe.

A versão Almeida, revista e corrigida, usa o nome Assir em 1 Crônicas 3:17; todavia, muitas traduções modernas (ALA, BJ, CBC, IBB, PIB) não encaram a palavra hebraica aqui como nome próprio, mas, antes, como uma expressão que descreve Jeconias (Joaquim) como cativo ou prisioneiro em Babilônia. (2Rs 24:12-15; 25:27-30) A Tradução do Novo Mundo reza apropriadamente: "E os filhos de Jeconias, como prisioneiro ['as·sír], foram Sealtiel . . ."

ASSÍRIA. Nome aplicado ao país que antigamente ocupava a extremidade setentrional da planície mesopotâmica, ou a parte do extremo N do que é atualmente o moderno país do Iraque. Basicamente, estava situada num triângulo formado pelos rios Tigre e Pequeno Zab, rios que constituíam, em geral, suas fronteiras ocidental e meridional, ao passo que os montes da antiga Armênia formavam a fronteira setentrional, e a cadeia montanhosa Zagros e a terra da Média a sua fronteira oriental. Deve-se notar, porém, que essas fronteiras eram bastante flexíveis, visto que a Assíria se estendia ao S do Pequeno Zab quando a Babilônia ficava enfraquecida, mas recuou quando a sorte política assíria estava em declínio e a de Babilônia em ascensão. Tal flutuação se dava também com as demais fronteiras e especialmente com a do Tigre, visto que a Assíria logo cedo estendeu sua influência ao O daquele rio. O Império Assírio, naturalmente, veio a abranger uma região muito maior. — MAPA, Vol. 1, p. 954.

Havia uma contínua relação íntima entre a Assíria e a Babilônia em toda a sua história. Eram estados vizinhos que ocupavam conjuntamente uma região sem nenhuma divisão natural real para servir de fronteira entre seus territórios. A região da Assíria propriamente dita, contudo, era na maior parte altiplano, em geral terreno agreste, com um clima mais revigorante que o de Babilônia. O povo era mais ativo e agressivo do que os babilônios. É representado em relevos esculpidos como tendo físico forte, tez escura, sobrancelhas e barba cerradas, e nariz saliente.

A cidade de Assur, situada ao O do Tigre, é em geral considerada como tendo sido a capital original da região. Posteriormente, porém, Nínive tornou-se sua capital mais destacada, ao passo que tanto Calá como Corsabade foram em certas épocas usadas como capitais por monarcas assírios. Uma rota comercial até o Mediterrâneo e a Ásia Menor seguia ao longo da parte setentrional da Assíria, e outras rotas se ramificavam até a Armênia e a região do lago Urmia. Grande parte das guerras da Assíria visava obter ou manter o controle sobre tais rotas comerciais.

Militarismo. A Assíria era, essencialmente, uma potência militar e o quadro histórico dos seus feitos é de grande crueldade e cupidez. (FOTOS, Vol. 1, p. 958) Um dos seus monarcas guerreiros, Assurnasirpal, descreve da seguinte forma a punição que infligiu a diversas cidades rebeldes:

"Construí um pilar em frente da sua porta da cidade e esfolei todos os chefes que se haviam revoltado, e recobri o pilar com sua pele; a alguns emparedei dentro do pilar, a alguns empalei em estacas sobre o pilar, . . . e cortei os membros dos oficiais, dos oficiais reais que se haviam rebelado. . . . A muitos cativos dentre eles queimei no fogo, e a muitos levei como cativos vivos. De alguns decepei as mãos e os dedos, e de outros decepei o nariz, as orelhas e os dedos(?), de muitos arranquei os olhos. Fiz um pilar dos vivos e outro de cabeças, e prendi suas cabeças a postes (troncos de árvores) em torno da cidade. Queimei no fogo os seus rapazes e suas moças . . . Capturei vivos a vinte homens e emparedei-os no muro do palácio dele. . . . O resto deles [seus guerreiros] consumi pela sede no deserto do Eufrates." — Ancient Records of Assyria and Babylonia (Registros Antigos da Assíria e de Babilônia) de D. D. Luckenbill, 1926, Vol. I, pp. 145, 147, 153, 162.

Os relevos amiúde mostram os cativos deles conduzidos por cordas presas a ganchos que traspassavam o nariz ou os lábios, ou com os olhos sendo arrancados à ponta de lança. Assim, a tortura sádica era um aspecto frequente da guerra assíria, a respeito da qual se jactavam desavergonhadamente e que registravam com meticulosidade. A fama da sua crueldade sem dúvida lhes propiciava uma vantagem militar, assolando de terror o coração daqueles que estavam em sua linha de ataque, e não raro fazendo com que desintegrasse a resistência. A capital da Assíria, Nínive, foi aptamente descrita pelo profeta Naum como "guarida dos leões" e como a "cidade de derramamento de sangue". — Na 2:11, 12; 3:1.

Que espécie de religião praticavam os assírios?

A religião assíria foi na maior parte herdada de Babilônia, e, embora seu próprio deus nacional, Assur, fosse encarado como supremo pelos assírios, Babilônia continuava a ser encarada por eles como o principal centro religioso. O rei assírio servia como sumo sacerdote de Assur. Um selo, encontrado por A. H. Layard nas ruínas dum palácio assírio e agora preservado no Museu Britânico, representa o deus Assur com três cabeças. A crença em tríades de deuses, bem como num grupo de cinco deuses, destacava-se na adoração assíria. A principal tríade era formada por Anu, representando o céu; Bel, representando a região habitada pelo homem, pelos animais e pelas aves; e Ea, representando as águas terrestres e subterrâneas. Uma segunda tríade compunha-se de Sin, o deus-lua; Xamaxe, o deus-sol; e Ramã, deus da tempestade, embora seu lugar frequentemente fosse ocupado por Istar, a rainha das estrelas. (Compare isso com 2Rs 23:5, 11.) Daí, seguiam-se os cinco deuses que representavam cinco planetas. Comentando sobre os deuses que formavam os grupos trinitários, Unger's Bible Dictionary (Dicionário Bíblico de Unger; 1965, p. 102) declara: "Tais deuses são invocados, às vezes separadamente, em frases que parecem elevar cada um, por sua vez, a uma posição de supremacia sobre os demais." Seu panteão, contudo, incluía inúmeras outras deidades inferiores, muitas servindo de padroeiro de cidade. Nisroque é mencionado como adorado por Senaqueribe no momento em que este foi assassinado. — Is 37:37, 38.

A religião praticada em conexão com tais deuses era animista, isto é, os assírios criam que todo objeto e todo fenômeno natural fosse animado por um espírito. Era um tanto diferente de outras formas de adoração da natureza, prevalecente nas nações circunvizinhas, no sentido de que a guerra era a expressão mais genuína da religião nacional. (FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 956) Assim, Tiglate-Pileser I disse sobre sua luta: "Meu Senhor ASSUR instou comigo." Nos seus anais, Assurbanipal diz: "Por ordem de ASSUR, SIN e XAMAXE, os grandes deuses, meus senhores, que me protegeram, entrei em Mini e marchei vitoriosamente." (Records of the Past: Assyrian and Egyptian Monuments [Registros do Passado: Monumentos Assírios e Egípcios], Londres, 1875, Vol. V, p. 18; 1877, Vol. IX, p. 43) Sargão invocava regularmente a ajuda de Istar antes de ir à guerra. Os exércitos marchavam atrás dos estandartes dos deuses, aparentemente símbolos de madeira ou de metal afixados numa haste. Atribuía-se grande importância aos presságios, deduzidos do exame do fígado de animais sacrificados, do voo das aves ou da posição dos planetas. O livro Ancient Cities (Cidades Antigas), de W. B. Wright (1886, p. 25), declara: "Lutar era o negócio daquela nação, e os sacerdotes eram fomentadores incessantes da guerra. Eram sustentados principalmente pelos despojos da conquista, dos quais uma porcentagem fixa era invariavelmente destinada a eles, antes de outros partilharem deles, pois esta raça de saqueadores era excessivamente religiosa."

Carros assírios carregam estandartes religiosos à batalha.

Cultura, Literatura e Leis. Os assírios construíram impressionantes palácios, revestindo as paredes de placas esculpidas que representavam, com vívido realismo, cenas de guerra e de paz. Touros alados, com cabeça humana, esculpidos de um único bloco de calcário, pesando até 36 toneladas, adornavam as entradas. Seus selos cilíndricos mostram intricadas gravações. (Veja ARQUEOLOGIA.) Sua fundição de metais indicava considerável conhecimento de metalurgia. Seus reis construíram aquedutos e desenvolveram sistemas de irrigação; produziram parques reais, botânicos e zoológicos, que continham plantas, árvores e animais de muitas terras. Seus prédios palacianos não raro evidenciavam um sistema bem planejado de drenagem e medidas sanitárias muito boas.

De especial interesse têm sido as grandes bibliotecas reunidas por certos monarcas assírios, contendo dezenas de milhares de tabuinhas, prismas e cilindros de argila, escritos em cuneiforme, delineando os principais eventos históricos, dados religiosos, e assuntos legais e comerciais. Certas leis que datam de determinado período da história assíria, porém, ilustram de novo a dureza que tão frequentemente caracterizava aquela nação. Para certos crimes, o castigo estipulado era a mutilação. Assim, uma escrava não tinha permissão de sair em público com véu, e, por violar tal ordenança, suas orelhas deveriam ser decepadas. A ausência de proteção legal para a mulher casada é evidenciada por uma das leis, que declarava: "Deixando de lado as penalidades relacionadas com a mulher casada, que estão inscritas na tabuinha, um homem poderá açoitar sua mulher, arrancar-lhe os cabelos, dilacerar e ferir as orelhas dela. Não existe nenhuma culpa legal (envolvida) nisso." — Everyday Life in Babylonia and Assyria (A Vida Cotidiana em Babilônia e na Assíria), de H. W. F. Saggs, 1965, p. 152.

História Bíblica e Secular. A primeira referência à Assíria no registro bíblico acha-se em Gênesis 2:14, onde o rio Hídequel (o Tigre), originalmente uma das quatro cabeceiras do rio 'que saía do Éden', é descrito por Moisés em seus dias como 'indo para o leste da Assíria'. — Gên 2:10.

O país derivava seu nome de Assur, filho de Sem. (Gên 10:22) Assim, parece ter sido primeiro povoada por semitas, pouco depois do Dilúvio. No entanto, ficou logo cedo sujeita à infiltração, quando o neto de Cã, Ninrode, penetrou na Assíria e construiu "Nínive, e Reobote-Ir, e Calá, e Resem, entre Nínive e Calá: esta é a grande cidade". (Gên 10:11, 12; compare isso com Miq 5:6.) Não se declara se isto se deu depois da construção da Torre de Babel e da resultante confusão de línguas (Gên 11:1-9), embora neste capítulo dez de Gênesis já se mencionem "línguas" diferentes. (Gên 10:5, 20, 31) Não obstante, ficou estabelecido que Nínive, capital da Assíria, se desenvolveu a partir de Babilônia, e a história secular se harmoniza com isso. Numa data posterior, as tribos que descenderam de Ismael, filho de Abraão, são descritas como alcançando a Assíria em suas migrações nômades. — Gên 25:18.

O período entre cerca de 1100 e 900 AEC (depois do governo de Tiglate-Pileser I) foi um período de declínio para a Assíria, e sugeriu-se isto como uma circunstância favorável para a ampliação das fronteiras da nação de Israel sob o governo de Davi (1077-1038 AEC), e a extensão adicional da sua influência sob o reinado de Salomão (1037-998 AEC). O êxito dessa expansão, naturalmente, devia-se em primeiro lugar ao apoio de Deus, e, assim, não dependia da debilidade assíria. — 2Sa 8, 10; 1Rs 4:21-24.

Assurnasirpal II e Salmaneser III. A agressão assíria começou a acercar-se de Israel durante o governo de Assurnasirpal II, que era famoso por suas campanhas bélicas implacáveis e por sua crueldade, já mencionadas. As inscrições o apresentam cruzando o Eufrates e tomando a Síria setentrional, e exigindo tributo das cidades da Fenícia. Seu sucessor, Salmaneser III, é o primeiro rei que registra contato direto com o reino setentrional de Israel. Os registros assírios mostram Salmaneser avançando até Carcar, às margens do rio Orontes, onde, ele afirma, lutou contra uma coalizão de reis. O resultado da batalha não foi decisivo. O Obelisco Negro de Salmaneser, em Nimrud, alista Jeú (c. 904-877 AEC) como pagando-lhe tributo, e apresenta uma escultura em relevo que possivelmente representa o emissário de Jeú entregando o tributo ao monarca assírio. — Veja SALMANESER N.º 1.

Adade-Nirari III e seus sucessores. Depois de Xanxi-Adade V, sucessor de Salmaneser III, ascendeu ao trono assírio Adade-Nirari III. As inscrições relatam seu ataque a Damasco e receber ele tributo de Jeoás, de Samaria. Talvez fosse por volta de meados do nono século AEC (c. 844), que o profeta Jonas foi enviado numa missão à capital da Assíria, Nínive, e, em resultado do seu aviso sobre uma vindoura destruição, a cidade inteira, inclusive seu rei, reagiu com arrependimento. (Jon 3:2-6) Pode ser que o rei assírio daquele tempo fosse Adade-Nirari III, mas não há certeza disso.

A história registra que os reis que seguiram Adade-Nirari III incluíam Salmaneser IV, Assurdã III, e Assur-Nirari V, todos filhos de Adade-Nirari III. Este era um período de declínio no que se referia à agressividade assíria.

Tiglate-Pileser III. O primeiro rei assírio a ser mencionado nominalmente na Bíblia é Tiglate-Pileser III (2Rs 15:29; 16:7, 10), também chamado "Pul" em 2 Reis 15:19. Em 1 Crônicas 5:26 são usados ambos os nomes, e isto levou alguns no passado a encará-los como reis distintos. No entanto, as Listas de Reis babilônicos e assírios dão os dois nomes para o mesmo indivíduo. Alguns sugerem que este rei era originalmente conhecido como Pul e que assumiu o nome de Tiglate-Pileser ao ascender ao trono assírio. — Veja PUL N.º 1.

Foi durante o reinado de Menaém, de Israel (c. 790-781 AEC), que Tiglate-Pileser III entrou nos domínios daquele reino setentrional. Menaém lhe fez um pagamento de mil talentos de prata (US$ 6.606.000) e assim conseguiu a retirada do assírio. (2Rs 15:19, 20) Mais tarde, porém, o Rei Peca, de Israel (c. 778-759 AEC), uniu-se ao Rei Rezim, da Síria, contra o rei judeu Acaz (c. 761-746 AEC). Apesar da profecia de Isaías, predizendo a eliminação certa desta ameaça siro-israelita através do poder do rei da Assíria (Is 7:1-9, 16, 17; 8:3, 4), Acaz preferiu o proceder insensato de enviar um suborno a Tiglate-Pileser, a fim de que atacasse essa coligação e assim aliviasse a pressão sobre Judá. O monarca assírio respondeu por capturar certo número de cidades na parte setentrional do reino de Israel, bem como as regiões de Gileade, da Galileia e de Naftali. Anteriormente, em seu reinado, Tiglate-Pileser III tinha iniciado a política de trasladar as populações das áreas conquistadas, para assim reduzir a possibilidade de futuras insurreições, e então passou a deportar alguns dos israelitas. (1Cr 5:6, 26) Adicionalmente, Judá en-contrava-se assim em posição subserviente em relação à Assíria, e Acaz, de Judá, viajou a Damasco, que também tinha caído diante dos assírios, e evidentemente prestou homenagem a Tiglate-Pileser. — 2Rs 15:29; 16:5-10, 18; 2Cr 28:16, 20, 21, compare isso com Is 7:17-20.

Salmaneser V. Salmaneser V sucedeu a Tiglate-Pileser III. Oseias (c. 758-740 AEC), que usurpou o trono de Israel, de início submeteu-se à exigência de tributo por parte da Assíria. Mais tarde, conspirou com o Egito para libertar Israel do jugo assírio, e Salmaneser iniciou um sítio de três anos da cidade de Samaria que por fim resultou na sua queda (740 AEC) e no exílio de Israel. (2Rs 17:1-6; 18:9-11; Os 7:11; 8:7-10) A maioria das obras de referência declaram que Salmaneser morreu antes de terminar a conquista de Samaria e que Sargão II era rei na ocasião em que a cidade finalmente caiu. — Veja, porém, SALMANESER N.º 2; SARGÃO.

Sargão II. Os registros de Sargão falam da deportação de 27.290 israelitas a locais no Alto Eufrates e na Média. Fornece-se também a descrição da sua campanha na Filístia, em que conquistou Gate, Asdode e Asdudimmu. Foi na época desta campanha que o profeta Isaías foi mandado avisar sobre a futilidade de depositar confiança no Egito ou na Etiópia como meio de proteção contra o agressor assírio. (Is 20:1-6) Foi talvez pela primeira vez durante o reinado de Sargão que pessoas de Babilônia e da Síria foram trazidas a Samaria para repovoá-la, enviando o rei assírio mais tarde um sacerdote israelita de volta do exílio a fim de instruí-las na "religião do Deus do país". — 2Rs 17:24-28; veja SAMARIA N.º 2; SAMARITANO.

Senaqueribe. Senaqueribe, filho de Sargão II, atacou o reino de Judá durante o 14.º ano de Ezequias (732 AEC). (2Rs 18:13; Is 36:1) Ezequias se rebelara contra o jugo assírio imposto em resultado da ação de seu pai, Acaz. (2Rs 18:7) Senaqueribe reagiu por levar de varrida a Judá, alegadamente conquistando 46 cidades (veja Is 36:1, 2), e daí, de seu acampamento em Laquis, exigiu que Ezequias lhe pagasse um tributo de 30 talentos de ouro (c. US$ 11.560.000) e de 300 talentos de prata (c. US$ 1.982.000). (2Rs 18:14-16; 2Cr 32:1; compare isso com Is 8:5-8.) Embora esta soma fosse paga, Senaqueribe enviou seu porta-voz para exigir a rendição incondicional de Jerusalém. (2Rs 18:17–19:34; 2Cr 32:2-20) Ter Jeová causado, subsequentemente, a destruição de 185.000 das tropas do jactancioso assírio, em uma só noite, obrigou este a retirar-se e a voltar a Nínive. (2Rs 19:35, 36) Ali foi mais tarde assassinado por dois de seus filhos e substituído no trono por outro filho, Esar-Hadom. (2Rs 19:37; 2Cr 32:21, 22; Is 37:36-38) Estes eventos, com a exceção da destruição das tropas assírias, estão também registrados num prisma de Senaqueribe e num de Esar-Hadom. — FOTOS, Vol. 1, p. 957.

Esar-Hadom. Durante o reinado de Manassés (716-662 AEC), os chefes do exército assírio tiveram a permissão de Jeová de levar cativo este rei de Judá para Babilônia (então sob controle assírio). (2Cr 33:11) Alguns acham que isto talvez se desse na época da campanha vitoriosa de Esar-Hadom contra o Egito. De qualquer forma, Menasi (Manassés), de Judá, é mencionado em inscrições como um daqueles que pagavam tributo a Esar-Hadom. Manassés foi mais tarde restabelecido em Jerusalém. (2Cr 33:10-13) À base de Esdras 4:2, parece que a trasladação de pessoas do reino setentrional de Israel, e para ele, ainda continuava nos dias de Esar-Hadom, o que pode explicar o período de "sessenta e cinco anos" na profecia de Isaías 7:8. — Veja ACAZ; ESAR-HADOM.

Assurbanipal. Antes de Esar-Hadom falecer, ele nomeara seu filho Assurbanipal como príncipe herdeiro da Assíria, e outro filho, Samas-sum-iuquin, como príncipe herdeiro de Babilônia. Samas-sum-iuquin rebelou-se mais tarde contra seu irmão, e Assurbanipal sufocou a rebelião e saqueou a cidade de Babilônia.

Assurbanipal causou a maior expansão do império. Acabou com uma rebelião no Egito e saqueou a cidade de Tebas (Nô-Amom). As fronteiras do Império Assírio abrangiam então as regiões de Elão, parte da Média até o Ararate, tanto ao O como a Cilícia, na Ásia Menor, passando pela Síria e Israel (mas não Jerusalém), e descendo ao Egito, e a Arábia e a Babilônia. Ele, evidentemente, é "o grande e ilustre Asenapar" mencionado em Esdras 4:10. — Veja ASENAPAR.

Painel de Nimrud, mostrando soldados assírios levando embora os deuses duma cidade conquistada.

A queda do império. A Crônica Babilônica M.B. (Museu Britânico) 21901 relata a queda de Nínive, capital da Assíria, após um sítio pelas forças conjuntas de Nabopolassar, rei de Babilônia, e de Ciaxares, o Medo, durante o 14.º ano de Nabopolassar (632 AEC): "A cidade [eles transformaram] em montes de ruínas e em pi[lhas (de escombros)]." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. B. Pritchard, 1974, p. 305; os colchetes e parêntesis são deles.) De modo que o feroz Império Assírio teve um fim ignominioso. — Is 10:12, 24-26; 23:13; 30:30-33; 31:8, 9; Na 3:1-19; Sof 2:13.

Segundo a mesma crônica, no 14.º ano de Nabopolassar (632 AEC), Assur-Ubalit II tentou prosseguir com o domínio assírio tendo Harã por capital. Esta crônica declara, sob o 17.º ano de Nabopolassar (629 AEC): "No mês de du'uzu, Assur-Ubalit, rei da Assíria, (e) um grande [exército do] E[gi]to [que viera em seu auxílio] cruzaram o rio (Eufrates) e [marcharam] para conquistar Harã." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 305; os colchetes e parêntesis são deles.) Na realidade, Assur-Ubalit tentou reconquistá-la, depois de ter sido expulso. Este registro está em harmonia com o relato a respeito da atividade do Faraó Neco, registrado em 2 Reis 23:29, atividade que resultou na morte do Rei Josias, de Judá (c. 629 AEC). Este texto declara que "Faraó Neco, rei do Egito, subiu contra o rei da Assíria junto ao rio Eufrates" — evidentemente para ajudá-lo. "O rei da Assíria" a quem Neco se dirigiu pode muito bem ter sido Assur-Ubalit II. Sua campanha contra Harã não foi bem-sucedida. O Império Assírio chegara ao fim.

O título "rei da Assíria" era aplicado ao rei persa (Dario Histaspes), que dominou a terra da Assíria no tempo da reconstrução do templo em Jerusalém (completada em 515 AEC). — Esd 6:22.

Assíria na Profecia. A Assíria consta na profecia proferida por Balaão, por volta do ano 1473 AEC. (Núm 24:24) Diversas referências à Assíria são encontradas nas profecias de Isaías, Jeremias, Ezequiel, Miqueias, Naum, Sofonias e Zacarias, estando o aviso sobre a Assíria desolar o reino setentrional de Israel intercalada na inteira profecia de Oseias. Condenou-se frequentemente a confiança depositada em tais nações pagãs pelos apóstatas Israel e Judá, que muitas vezes vacilavam entre o Egito e a Assíria, "igual a uma pomba simplória sem coração". (Je 2:18, 36; La 5:6; Ez 16:26, 28; 23:5-12; Os 7:11) Os resultados desastrosos de tal proceder foram vividamente descritos. (Ez 23:22-27) A humilhação dos assírios e o restabelecimento dos israelitas exilados na sua pátria também foram profetizados. (Is 11:11-16; 14:25; Je 50:17, 18; Ez 32:22; Za 10:10, 11) Por fim, predisse-se até mesmo quando haveria relações pacíficas entre as terras da Assíria e do Egito, e que ficariam unidas com Israel no favor de Deus, e constituiriam "uma bênção no meio da terra". — Is 19:23-25.

ASSOCIAÇÃO. O apóstolo Paulo usou o substantivo grego ho·mi·lí·a ao advertir os cristãos contra o perigo das más "associações". (1Co 15:33) Esta palavra grega é aparentada com o verbo ho·mi·lé·o, que significa "conversar". (At 20:11) Denota associação ou relacionamento com outros, usualmente por meio de conversa, mas, às vezes, por meio de relações sexuais. A Septuaginta grega usou esta palavra para traduzir a hebraica para "persuasão", em Provérbios 7:21, e para "direito conjugal", em Êxodo 21:10.

Os que desejam ter a aprovação de Deus preferem ter por companheiros aqueles que estão devotados à justiça e à verdade. (2Ti 2:22) Param também de se "associar [literalmente: misturar-se]" socialmente com membros da congregação, cujo modo de vida resultou em censura oficial da sua conduta desordeira. Embora continuem a mostrar amor para com tais, tornam claro que não aprovam a conduta desordeira deles. (2Te 3:6-15) Ao passo que bons companheiros podem ser de verdadeira ajuda para se continuar a andar em harmonia com a sabedoria divina, não se pode negar o efeito prejudicial das más associações. O provérbio inspirado declara: "Quem anda com pessoas sábias tornar-se-á sábio, mas irá mal com aquele que tem tratos com os estúpidos." (Pr 13:20; compare isso com Pr 22:24, 25; 28:7; 29:3.) A palavra hebraica ra·'áh, traduzida por 'ter tratos com', em Provérbios 13:20, também é vertida por 'associar-se com', e é aparentada com a palavra hebraica ré·a', que significa "próximo; companheiro". — Jz 14:20; Le 19:18; Sal 15:3.

Que companheiros impróprios realmente podem prejudicar o bem-estar de alguém é evidente em muitos exemplos bíblicos. Diná, filha de Jacó, imprudentemente escolheu por companheiras moças cananeias, e isto resultou em ela ser violentada por Siquém, filho dum maioral heveu. (Gên 34:1, 2) Amnom, filho de Davi, acatou o mau conselho do seu companheiro Jonadabe e estuprou sua própria meia-irmã Tamar. Incorreu assim no ódio de Absalão, irmão germano dela, que mais tarde providenciou que ele fosse assassinado. (2Sa 13:3-29) Contrário às ordens de Jeová, os israelitas começaram a associar-se com os cananeus, formando alianças matrimoniais com eles, e adotando sua degradada forma de adoração, o que resultou no desfavor de Jeová e em serem abandonados por ele. (De 7:3, 4; Jz 3:5-8) Até mesmo Salomão se desviou da adoração de Jeová, quando tomou por esposas adoradoras de deuses falsos. (Ne 13:26) Foi a influência da adoradora de Baal, Jezabel, que tornou Acabe pior do que todos os reis israelitas anteriores ao seu tempo. (1Rs 21:25) A íntima associação com a casa real de Acabe quase custou a vida ao piedoso Jeosafá, e a aliança matrimonial que formou com Acabe quase que destruiu mais tarde a casa real de Davi. — 2Cr 18:1-3, 29-31; 22:10, 11.

O corpo unido dos verdadeiros cristãos, embora composto de pequenos grupos, congregações ou pessoas fisicamente isoladas, constitui uma 'associação de irmãos', ou uma fraternidade, designada pela expressão grega a·del·fó·tes. (1Pe 2:17; 5:9) A fim de continuar a fazer parte desta fraternidade, os verdadeiros cristãos evitam toda a associação com todos aqueles no seu meio que se tornam promotores de ensinos falsos, divisórios. (Ro 16:17, 18) O apóstolo cristão João orientou concristãos a nunca receberem em casa tal instrutor falso, nem o cumprimentarem, porque isso daria a este a oportunidade de apresentar sua doutrina deturpada, corrupta. Cumprimentar a tal indicaria certa medida de aprovação e tornaria a pessoa partícipe das "suas obras iníquas". (2Jo 10, 11) Apesar da sobrepujante evidência a respeito da certeza da ressurreição dos mortos, o apóstolo Paulo sabia que a associação com aqueles que haviam rejeitado este ensino cristão seria destrutiva para a fé. Por isso escreveu: "Não sejais desencaminhados. Más associações estragam hábitos úteis." — 1Co 15:12-22, 33; veja APOSTASIA.

ASSOS. Cidade portuária da Mísia, no litoral N do golfo de Adramítio, portanto, dentro da província romana da Ásia. O lugar é hoje conhecido como Behramkale (antes chamado Behramköy).

O apóstolo Paulo, na sua terceira viagem missionária, estava retornando a Jerusalém e tinha parado em Trôade. Dali enviou Lucas e outros, de barco, para Assos, onde planejava juntar-se a eles. O barco tinha de contornar o cabo Baba (Lectum) para chegar a Assos (do outro lado do promontório, desde Trôade), e isto possibilitou a Paulo andar a pé a distância mais curta (c. 32 km) e ainda assim chegar a Assos em tempo para tomar o navio, o qual partiu então para Mitilene, na ilha de Lesbos, ao S de Assos. — At 20:6, 13, 14.

ASSUERO. Nome ou título aplicado nas Escrituras Hebraicas a três governantes diferentes.

1. O pai de Dario, o Medo, mencionado em Daniel 9:1. Atualmente não é possível fazer uma identificação conclusiva deste Assuero com alguma pessoa da história secular.

2. O Assuero de Esdras 4:6, no início de cujo reinado foi redigida uma acusação contra os judeus, da parte dos inimigos deles, talvez fosse Cambises, o sucessor de Ciro, o conquistador de Babilônia e libertador dos judeus. Cambises reinou de 529 a 522 AEC.

3. O Assuero do livro de Ester, segundo se crê, é Xerxes I, filho do rei persa Dario, o Grande (Dario Histaspes). Mostra-se que Assuero (Xerxes I) governava 127 distritos jurisdicionais, desde a Índia até a Etiópia. A cidade de Susã era sua capital durante grande parte do seu governo. — Est 1:1, 2.

No livro de Ester, os anos de reinado deste rei aparentemente são contados a partir da corregência com seu pai, Dario, o Grande. Isto significaria que o ano de ascensão de Xerxes foi 496 AEC, e que seu primeiro ano de reinado foi 495 AEC. (Veja PÉRSIA, PERSAS.) No terceiro ano do seu reinado, num suntuoso banquete, ele ordenou que a linda Rainha Vasti se apresentasse e exibisse sua beleza ao povo e aos príncipes. A recusa por parte dela fez com que se acendesse a ira do rei e ele a dispensasse como esposa. (Est 1:3, 10-12, 19-21) No sétimo ano do seu reinado, ele escolheu Ester, uma judia, como a eleita dentre as muitas virgens que lhe foram trazidas como prospectivas substitutas de Vasti. (Est 2:1-4, 16, 17) No 12.º ano do seu reinado, ele permitiu que seu primeiro-ministro Hamã usasse o anel de sinete do rei para assinar um decreto que iria resultar na destruição genocida dos judeus. Esta trama foi frustrada por Ester e seu primo Mordecai; Hamã foi enforcado, e se emitiu um novo decreto, concedendo aos judeus o direito de lutar contra seus atacantes. — Est 3:1-11; 7:9, 10; 8:3-14; 9:5-10.

Subsequentemente, "o Rei Assuero passou a impor trabalho forçado ao país e às ilhas do mar". (Est 10:1) Esta atividade se enquadra bem nos empenhos de Xerxes, que terminou grande parte das construções iniciadas pelo seu pai Dario em Persépolis.

Xerxes I também parece ser o "quarto [rei]" mencionado em Daniel 11:2, os três anteriores sendo Ciro, o Grande, Cambises II e Dario Histaspes. Ao passo que outros sete reis sucederam a Xerxes no trono do Império Persa, Xerxes foi o último imperador persa a travar guerra contra a Grécia, cuja ascensão como potência mundial dominante é descrita no versículo seguinte. — Dan. 11:3.

ASSUR, I. [possivelmente: Negrume]. De acordo com o texto massorético, filho de Esrom, nascido após a morte de seu pai; bisneto de Judá. (1Cr 2:4, 5, 24; veja ESROM N.º 2.) Teve sete filhos com as suas duas esposas. (1Cr 4:5-7) É também mencionado como pai de Tecoa, o que parece significar que era o fundador da cidade deste nome.

ASSUR, II.

1. Filho de Sem, o segundo mencionado em Gênesis 10:22 e em 1 Crônicas 1:17. Era o antepassado dos assírios, e a mesma palavra hebraica é vertida tanto "Assur" como "Assíria" ou "assírio". Ezequiel 27:23 ou se refere à nação deles ou a uma das suas cidades principais, Assur (a moderna Qal'at Sherqat).

2. A principal divindade dos assírios, seu deus de proeza militar, a quem este povo guerreiro orava em busca de ajuda. Assur era uma espécie de "patriarca deificado", e, ao venerá-lo, os assírios podem realmente ter adorado seu antepassado Assur, filho de Sem. O nome Assur se acha incorporado em muitos nomes assírios, tais como os de Esar-Hadom e de Assurbanipal.

Acreditava-se que o deus falso, Assur, era o principal protetor dos assírios, sendo representado na arte deles pelo disco alado do Sol. Era no nome de seu deus Assur e com a aprovação dele (indicada por presságios favoráveis) que as tropas assírias entravam em batalhas, carregando o símbolo sagrado dele à luta. Seus reis atribuíam as vitórias "à ajuda de Assur". — Veja FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 529; ASSÍRIA.

ASSURBANIPAL. Veja ASENAPAR.

ASSURINS. Descendentes de Dedã, filho de Jocsã, um dos filhos de Abraão com Quetura. (Gên 25:1-3) Usar-se no texto hebraico o sufixo indicativo do plural (im) em conexão com este nome, as·shú·rim, talvez indique que representava uma tribo ou um povo. Uma identificação específica não é possível, mas provavelmente se refere a alguma tribo árabe setentrional. No entanto, eles não devem ser confundidos com os assírios, que eram descendentes de Assur, filho de Sem.

ASTAROTE. Cidade na região de Basã, hoje geralmente identificada com Tell ʽAshtarah, a uns 32 km ao L do mar da Galileia. A colina baixa existente ali está cercada por uma planície bem regada. Seu nome talvez indique que era centro de adoração da deusa Astorete.

As referências bíblicas a ela são principalmente com respeito a Ogue, rei gigante de Basã, mencionado como reinando "em Astarote, em Edrei". (De 1:4; Jos 9:10; 12:4; 13:12) O território conquistado do reino de Ogue foi originalmente designado aos maquiritas, da tribo de Manassés, mas Astarote passou mais tarde para os gersonitas, como cidade levita. (Jos 13:29-31; 1Cr 6:71) Em Josué 21:27, que corresponde ao relato em 1 Crônicas 6:71, a cidade é chamada de Beesterá.

A cidade é mencionada em inscrições assírias e nas Tabuinhas de Amarna.

ASTERATITA [De (Pertencente a) Astarote]. Habitante de Astarote. Apenas Uzia, um dos poderosos de Davi, é chamado assim. — 1Cr 11:44.

ASTEROTE-CARNAIM. Lugar da derrota dos refains por Quedorlaomer, rei de Elão. (Gên 14:5) Alguns presumiram que se tratava do nome completo de Astarote, e que a adição de "Carnaim" (chifres) se referia aos dois chifres da lua crescente, simbolizando a deusa Astarte (Astarteia), ou aos dois picos adjacentes à cidade. Todavia, sugere-se também que o nome signifique "Asterote Perto de Carnaim", e que se refira assim à cidade de Astarote, mencionando-se Carnaim como cidade separada, mas adjacente. Carnaim é considerada como situada em Sheikh Saʽad, que fica na vizinhança do lugar aceito geralmente para Astarote (Tell ʽAshtarah). — Veja ASTAROTE.

ASTORETE. Uma deusa dos cananeus, considerada a esposa de Baal. Astorete é frequentemente representada na forma de figura feminina desnuda, com órgãos sexuais rudemente exagerados. A adoração desta deusa achava-se muito difundida entre diversos povos da antiguidade, e o nome Astorete era comum, em uma forma ou outra. Seu nome grego é Astarte (ou Astarteia). Entre os filisteus, Astorete evidentemente era encarada como deusa da guerra, conforme indicado pelo fato de que a armadura do derrotado Rei Saul foi colocada no templo das imagens de Astorete. (1Sa 31:10) Pelo visto, porém, Astorete era principalmente uma deusa da fertilidade. A parte mais destacada da sua adoração consistia em orgias sexuais nos templos ou nos altos devotados à adoração de Baal, onde homens e mulheres serviam por prostituir-se. — Veja CANAÃ, CANANEU N.º 2 (Conquista de Canaã por Israel).

A adoração de Astorete existia possivelmente em Canaã já desde o tempo de Abraão, pois uma das cidades ali era chamada "Asterote-Carnaim". (Gên 14:5) Também é mencionada na Escritura a cidade de Astarote, morada do gigante Rei Ogue de Basã. Seu nome indicaria que esta cidade talvez fosse centro de adoração de Astorete. — De 1:4; Jos 9:10; 12:4.

A forma singular ʽash·tó·reth (Astorete) aparece primeiramente na Bíblia com referência ao desvio do Rei Salomão, perto do fim de seu reinado. Naquele tempo, os israelitas começaram a adorar a Astorete dos sidônios. (1Rs 11:5, 33) A única outra ocorrência da forma singular se acha relacionada com a derrubada, por parte do Rei Josias, dos altos que Salomão construíra para Astorete e outras deidades. (2Rs 23:13) O plural, 'ash·ta·róhth ("imagens de Astorete", NM; "astartes", BJ; PIB) refere-se, provavelmente, às imagens ou manifestações desta deusa pagã. — Jz 2:13; 10:6; 1Sa 7:3, 4.

ASTRÓLOGOS. A palavra ga·zerín só ocorre na parte de Daniel que foi escrita em aramaico (Da 2:4b–7:28), e sua raiz tem o significado básico de "talhar", achando-se que a referência é àqueles que dividem os céus em configurações. (Da 2:34) Algumas versões (Al; Fi; IBB; So) vertem a palavra aramaica original ga·zerín por "adivinhadores (adivinhos)" ou "agoureiros". (Da 2:27; 4:7 [v. 4, So]; 5:7, 11) Este culto astrológico se compunha dos "que, à base da posição das estrelas na hora do nascimento, por diversas artes de cálculo e pela adivinhação . . . determinavam a sorte das pessoas". (Gesenius's Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon [Léxico Hebraico e Caldeu de Gesenius] traduzido para o inglês por S. P. Tregelles, 1901, pp. 166, 167) A astrologia é essencialmente politeísta; sua origem, no vale inferior da Mesopotâmia, remonta provavelmente ao tempo de pouco depois do Dilúvio, quando os homens se desviaram da adoração pura de Jeová. O nome caldeu, com o tempo, veio a ser praticamente sinônimo de "astrólogo".

Nesta pseudociência da astrologia, cria-se que um deus diferente governava cada setor dos céus. Cada movimento e fenômeno celeste, tal como o nascer e o pôr do sol, os equinócios e os solstícios, as fases lunares, os eclipses e os meteoros, supostamente eram atos desses deuses. Por isso, esses movimentos cósmicos eram regularmente registrados, elaborando-se cartas e tabelas complexas das suas ocorrências, e, à base destas, prediziam-se assuntos humanos e eventos terrenos. Cria-se que todos os assuntos, tanto públicos como particulares, eram controlados por esses deuses dos céus. Em consequência disso, decisões políticas ou militares só eram tomadas depois de se convocarem os astrólogos para ler e interpretar os agouros e dar seu conselho. Desta maneira, a classe sacerdotal passou a ter grande poder e influência sobre a vida do povo. Afirmavam ter poder sobrenatural, perspicácia e grande sabedoria. Não havia nenhum templo importante, erigido entre os babilônios, que não estivesse equipado com seu próprio observatório celeste.

No oitavo século AEC, o profeta Isaías, predizendo a destruição de Babilônia, desafiou os conselheiros-astrólogos daquela cidade condenada, que contemplavam as estrelas, a que a salvassem: "Fatigaste-te [Babilônia] com a multidão dos teus conselheiros. Que se ponham de pé, pois, e que te salvem, os adoradores dos céus, os contempladores das estrelas, os que divulgam conhecimento nas luas novas a respeito das coisas que virão sobre ti." — Is 47:13.

No decurso da História, Daniel e seus três companheiros tornaram-se cativos nesta terra de astrólogos. Quando postos à prova "quanto a todo assunto de sabedoria e de compreensão", o rei babilônio achou que estes hebreus eram "dez vezes melhores do que todos os sacerdotes-magos e os conjuradores que havia em todo o seu domínio real". (Da 1:20) Depois disso, Daniel foi chamado de "chefe dos sacerdotes-magos" (Da 4:9), mas é importante notar que ele nunca renunciou à adoração de Jeová para se tornar 'divisor dos céus', contemplando as estrelas. Por exemplo, Nabucodonosor ficou tão enfurecido quando os astrólogos e os demais "sábios" não conseguiram revelar-lhe seu sonho, que exclamou: "Sereis desmembrados e as vossas próprias casas serão transformadas em latrinas públicas." (Da 2:5) Daniel e seus companheiros estavam incluídos nesta ordem abrangente, mas, antes de se realizar a execução, Daniel foi levado perante o rei, a quem ele disse: "Há nos céus um Deus que é Revelador de segredos", mas, "no que se refere a mim, não é por meio de qualquer sabedoria que haja em mim mais do que em quaisquer outros viventes que este segredo me foi revelado". — Da 2:28, 30.

Quem eram os magos que visitaram o menino Jesus?

Astrólogos (gr.: má·goi; "magos", Al; PIB) trouxeram presentes ao menino Jesus. (Mt 2:1-16) Comentando quem eram estes má·goi, The Imperial Bible-Dictionary (O Dicionário Bíblico Imperial, Vol. II, p. 139), diz: "Segundo Heródoto, os magos eram uma tribo dos medos [I, 101], que professavam interpretar sonhos, e eram os encarregados oficiais dos ritos sagrados . . . em suma, eram a classe erudita e sacerdotal, e, conforme se supunha, tinham a habilidade de derivar dos livros e da observação das estrelas a perspicácia sobrenatural de prever eventos vindouros . . . Investigações posteriores tendem a fazer de Babilônia, antes que da Média e da Pérsia, o centro da magia plenamente desenvolvida. 'Originalmente, os sacerdotes medos não eram chamados de magos . . . Dos caldeus, no entanto, receberam o nome de magos para a sua casta sacerdotal, e é assim que devemos explicar o que Heródoto diz sobre os magos serem uma tribo meda' . . . (J. C. Müller, na Encicl. de Herzog)." — Editado por P. Fairbairn, Londres, 1874.

Assim, Justino, o Mártir, Orígenes e Tertuliano, lendo Mateus 2:1, consideravam corretamente os má·goi como astrólogos. Tertuliano escreveu (em "Sobre a Idolatria", IX): "Sabemos da aliança mútua entre a magia e a astrologia. Os intérpretes das estrelas, então, foram os primeiros . . . a apresentar a Ele [Jesus] 'dádivas'." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers [Os Pais Antenicenos], 1957, Vol. III, p. 65) O nome magos tornou-se comum "como termo genérico para astrólogos no Oriente". — The New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia (Nova Enciclopédia de Funk & Wagnalls), 1952, Vol. 22, p. 8076.

De modo que há forte evidência circunstancial de que os má·goi que visitaram o menino Jesus eram astrólogos. Assim, O Novo Testamento (em inglês), de Charles B. Williams, reza "contempladores das estrelas", com uma nota explicativa ao pé da página: "Isto é, estudantes das estrelas em relação com os eventos na terra." Apropriadamente, portanto, traduções modernas rezam "astrólogos" em Mateus 2:1. — NE; NM; veja BLH; BJ nota.

Não se revela quantos desses astrólogos "das regiões orientais" trouxeram "ouro, olíbano e mirra" ao menino Jesus; não há nenhuma base concreta para a ideia tradicional de que eram três. (Mt 2:1, 11) Sendo astrólogos, eram servos de deuses falsos, e, quer o soubessem, quer não, foram guiados por aquilo que lhes parecia ser uma "estrela" que se movia. Alertaram Herodes a que havia nascido o "rei dos judeus", e Herodes, por sua vez, procurou matar Jesus. No entanto, a trama falhou. Jeová interveio e mostrou-se superior aos deuses demoníacos dos astrólogos, de modo que, em vez de voltarem a Herodes, os astrólogos retornaram por outro caminho, depois de receberem "em sonho um aviso divino". — Mt 2:2, 12.

Hepatoscopia e Astrologia. A prática de 'examinar o fígado' (hepatoscopia) parece ter sido um aspecto especial da astrologia. (Ez 21:21) Numa escola-templo de Babilônia foi encontrado um modelo de argila dum fígado que remonta ao tempo de Hamurábi. Um lado dele estava dividido em áreas representativas do "dia" e da "noite". A beirada estava dividida em 16 partes, tendo-se dado a cada seção os nomes correspondentes das deidades dos céus. Portanto, assim como este ramo de vaticínio dividia o céu de maneira puramente imaginária, assim dividiam de modo similar o fígado de suas vítimas sacrificiais. Quando ofereciam tais sacrifícios, examinavam o fígado, considerando-o um reflexo em miniatura dos céus, para ver que agouros os deuses lhes revelavam. — Veja ADIVINHAÇÃO.

Moloque e a Astrologia em Israel. Há evidência que indica que a astrologia estava intimamente associada com a adoração de Moloque, deus que às vezes era representado com cabeça de touro. O touro era adorado pelos babilônios, cananeus, egípcios e outros, como símbolo das suas deidades — Marduque, Moloque, Baal, e assim por diante. O touro era um dos mais importantes signos do zodíaco, Tauro. O deus-sol frequentemente era representado por touros, os chifres significando os raios, e o forte poder reprodutivo do touro representava o poder do sol como "dador da vida". A fêmea, a vaca, recebia honra igual como símbolo de Istar ou Astarte (Astarteia), variantes do seu nome. Portanto, quando Arão e Jeroboão introduziram em Israel tal adoração do touro (a adoração do bezerro), isso era deveras um grande pecado aos olhos de Jeová. — Êx 32:4, 8; De 9:16; 1Rs 12:28-30; 2Rs 10:29.

O apóstata reino de dez tribos de Israel foi denunciado por adotar este culto da astrologia, porque "continuaram a abandonar todos os mandamentos de Jeová, seu Deus, e passaram a fazer para si estátuas fundidas, dois bezerros, e a fazer um poste sagrado, e começaram a curvar-se diante de todo o exército dos céus e a servir a Baal; e continuaram a fazer seus filhos e suas filhas passar pelo fogo e a praticar a adivinhação, e a procurar presságios". — 2Rs 17:16, 17.

No reino de duas tribos, ao sul, o iníquo Rei Acaz e seu neto Manassés tomaram ambos a dianteira na adoração dos deuses estelares e em cruelmente oferecer seus filhos para serem queimados vivos como sacrifícios. (2Rs 16:3, 4; 21:3, 6; 2Cr 28:3, 4; 33:3, 6) O bom Rei Josias, porém, "acabou com a atividade dos sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros" que faziam "fumaça sacrificial a Baal, ao sol e à lua, e às constelações do zodíaco, e a todo o exército dos céus", e ele derrubou os altos e tornou Tofete impróprio para adoração, "para que ninguém fizesse seu filho ou sua filha passar pelo fogo para Moloque". (2Rs 23:5, 10, 24) Jeová, por meio dos seus profetas Sofonias e Jeremias, denunciou-os pelas suas práticas astrológicas como "os que se curvam nos terraços diante do exército dos céus", e os que estão "fazendo juramentos por Malcão [Moloque]". — Sof 1:5; Je 8:1, 2; 19:13.

Mostrando adicionalmente a interligação entre a adoração de Moloque, a adoração do bezerro e a astrologia, há o relato de Estêvão sobre a rebelião dos israelitas no ermo. Quando clamaram a Arão: "Faze-nos deuses para irem na nossa frente", Jeová "os entregou para prestarem serviço sagrado ao exército do céu, assim como está escrito no livro dos profetas: 'Será que foi a mim que oferecestes vítimas e sacrifícios . . . Mas, acolhestes para vós a tenda de Moloque e a estrela do deus Refã.'" — At 7:40-43.

Condenação Divina da Astrologia. Uma grande verdade é declarada de modo simples: "No princípio Deus criou os céus e a terra", inclusive os planetas do nosso sistema solar e as estrelas fixas nas suas constelações. (Gên 1:1, 16; Jó 9:7-10; Am 5:8) Nesta grandiosa criação, porém, não era da vontade de Jeová que o homem constituísse essas coisas em deuses. Por isso, proibiu estritamente ao seu povo a adoração de "semelhança de algo que há nos céus em cima". (Êx 20:3, 4) A astrologia, em todas as formas, era proscrita. — De 18:10-12.

ASURITA. Um povo sujeito ao reinado de Is-Bosete, filho de Saul. Em 2 Samuel 2:9, está alistado entre Gileade e Jezreel. A Vulgata latina e a Pesito siríaca rezam aqui "gesuritas", ao passo que os Targuns dizem "aseritas". (Veja Jz 1:32.) O nome assurins é usado em Gênesis 25:3; mas ali se refere aos descendentes de Abraão por meio de Dedã. — Veja CIPRESTE.

ASVATE. Homem da tribo de Aser, casa de Jaflete. — 1Cr 7:33.

ATADE [Espinheiro-de-Casca-Branca]. Um lugar de localização incerta na região do Jordão era chamado de "eira de Atade". O cortejo fúnebre de Jacó parou ali para sete dias de luto, em caminho do Egito para a caverna do campo de Macpela, em Canaã. Atade talvez fosse uma pessoa, mas o próprio nome parece indicar um lugar. A comitiva de luto incluía servos de Faraó, bem como anciãos do Egito, e quando os cananeus viram os ritos de luto, exclamaram: "Este é um grave luto para os egípcios!" Por isso, o lugar foi chamado de Abel-Mizraim, que significa "Luto dos Egípcios". — Gên 50:7-13.

Diversas traduções (por exemplo: Al, CBC, So) dizem "além do Jordão" em Gênesis 50:10, 11, e alguns concluem disso que a eira de Atade se encontrava ao L do rio Jordão. Isto significaria que o cortejo não tomou a rota direta, mas contornou o Mar Morto, talvez para evitar contato com os filisteus. No entanto, a expressão hebraica be'é·ver, traduzida por "além", pode referir-se a uma região quer a L quer a O do Jordão. Do ponto de vista de Moisés, na terra de Moabe, na época de completar o Pentateuco, "além do Jordão" podia significar ao O do rio. Entretanto, a Tradução do Novo Mundo supera todas as dificuldades por traduzir com exatidão o texto hebraico destes versículos por "na região do Jordão".

ATAI [forma abreviada de Ataías].

1. Neto de Sesã, descendente de Judá por meio de Esrom. Sesã só tinha filhas, uma das quais deu em casamento ao seu escravo egípcio Jara, que gerou Atai. Atai, por sua vez, foi pai de certo Natã. — 1Cr 2:25, 34-36.

2. Um dos 11 valentes gaditas que cruzaram o Jordão quando transbordava, a fim de se juntar ao exército de Davi no ermo. — 1Cr 12:8, 11-15.

3. O segundo dos quatro filhos de Roboão com sua esposa favorita, Maacá, neta de Absalão. Portanto, Atai era neto de Salomão e irmão do rei Abias (Abijão). — 2Cr 11:20, 21.

ATAÍAS. Homem da tribo de Judá, descendente de Peres, alistado junto com outros habitantes de Jerusalém no tempo de Neemias, após o livramento do exílio babilônico. — Ne 11:4-6.

ATALIA. Rainha de Judá, filha do Rei Acabe, de Israel, e de sua esposa, Jezabel; neta de Onri. (2Rs 8:18, 26) Era irmã do Rei Jeorão, de Israel, e irmã, ou meia-irmã, dos outros 70 filhos de Acabe, a todos os quais Jeú mandou matar. (2Rs 3:1, 2; 10:1-9) Atalia foi dada em um casamento de conveniência política a Jeorão, o filho mais velho de Jeosafá, de Judá. (2Rs 8:25-27; 2Cr 18:1) Era mãe de Acazias, que com o tempo se tornou rei de Judá.

Atalia, assim como sua mãe Jezabel, instigava Jeorão, seu marido, a fazer o que era mau aos olhos de Jeová durante o reinado dele de oito anos. (1Rs 21:25; 2Cr 21:4-6) E igual à sua mãe, Atalia impiedosamente derramou o sangue dos inocentes. Quando Acazias, seu filho iníquo, morreu, depois de reinar um ano, ela matou todos os outros da linhagem real, exceto o menininho Jeoás, que tinha sido escondido pelo sumo sacerdote e sua esposa, tia de Jeoás. Depois disso, Atalia empossou-se como rainha, por seis anos, c. 905-899 AEC. (2Cr 22:11, 12) Os filhos dela roubaram do templo de Jeová as coisas sagradas e as ofereceram a Baal. — 2Cr 24:7.

Quando Jeoás atingiu sete anos de idade, Jeoiada, o sumo sacerdote temente a Deus, tirou o menino do esconderijo e o coroou como legítimo herdeiro do trono. Ouvindo o tumulto, Atalia correu para o templo, e, ao ver o que estava acontecendo, bradou: "Conspiração! Conspiração!" O sumo sacerdote Jeoiada ordenou que fosse retirada do local do templo, a fim de ser executada no portão dos cavalos do palácio; ela foi, talvez, a última pessoa da casa abominável de Acabe. (2Rs 11:1-20; 2Cr 22:1-23:21) Quão veraz se mostrou que: "Nada da palavra de Jeová, que Jeová falou contra a casa de Acabe, cairá sem cumprimento por terra"! — 2Rs 10:10, 11; 1Rs 21:20-24.

ATÁLIA [De (Pertencente a) Átalo]. No fim da primeira viagem missionária de Paulo, ele embarcou na cidade portuária de Atália, na costa da Panfília, na Ásia Menor, dirigindo-se para Antioquia, na Síria, cerca de 500 km distante. — At 14:24-26.

Atália, a moderna Antaliá, foi fundada por Átalo II, rei de Pérgamo (159-138 AEC), no estuário do rio Cataractes. Tornou-se o porto principal da província da Panfília, servindo de escoadouro para a rica região interiorana do SO da Frígia, e sendo o ponto natural de embarque da região central da Ásia Menor para a Síria e para o Egito. Embora originalmente servisse de porto para a cidade vizinha de Perge, a uns 13 km mais para o interior, Atália tinha ultrapassado aquela cidade em importância, nos tempos apostólicos.

ATALIAS.

1. Benjamita da casa de Jeroão, que morava em Jerusalém. — 1Cr 8:26-28.

2. Pai de um daqueles que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Esdras, em 468 AEC; da família de Elão. — Esd 8:1, 7.

ATAQUE. Cidade de Judá, mencionada entre os lugares aos quais Davi enviou porções do despojo resultante da sua vitória sobre os amalequitas incursores. — 1Sa 30:26, 30.

ATARA [Coroa]. Uma das esposas de Jerameel, da tribo de Judá, e mãe de Onão. — 1Cr 2:3-5, 25, 26.

ATARIM. Relata-se que os israelitas viajaram "pelo caminho de Atarim", em caminho para a Terra da Promessa, vindo de Cades-Barneia e passando pelo monte Hor. (Núm 21:1) Foram então atacados pelo rei de Arade, na região do Negebe. Atarim talvez se refira a um lugar ou a uma determinada rota.

ATAROTE [Coroas [isto é: cercados circulares]].

1. Cidade ao L do Jordão, entre as solicitadas pelas tribos de Gade e de Rubem como posse delas. Esta região era considerada especialmente própria para o gado destas tribos. (Núm 32:1-5) A cidade foi depois reconstruída pelos gaditas. — Núm 32:34.

A Pedra Moabita do Rei Mesa também menciona este lugar, nas linhas 10 e 11 da inscrição. Ela diz em parte: "Ora, os homens de Gade sempre haviam morado na terra de Atarote, e o rei de Israel construíra para eles Atarote; mas eu lutei contra a cidade e a tomei, e matei todo o povo da cidade . . . E eu trouxe de volta de lá Arel (ou Oriel), seu maioral . . . e fixei ali homens de Sarom e homens de Maarite." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), editado por J. B. Pritchard, 1974, p. 320.

Considera-se em geral que este lugar é a atual Khirbet ʽAttarus, ao L do Mar Morto e a uns 13 km ao NO de Díbon (mencionada depois de Atarote em Núm 32:3). As ruínas estão situadas na encosta O dum monte que leva o mesmo nome e que tem cerca de 750 m de altitude. Embora este lugar estivesse dentro do território de Rubem, parece ter havido certa compartilhação de território tribal entre Gade e Rubem.

2. Cidade ao longo da fronteira entre os territórios de Efraim e de Benjamim. (Jos 16:2) Evidentemente, trata-se da Atarote-Adar mencionada em Josué 16:5 e 18:13. Neste último versículo, é apresentada como fazendo parte da fronteira N de Benjamim e situada "no monte que está ao sul de Bete-Horom Baixa".

3. Cidade na fronteira NE da tribo de Efraim. — Jos 16:7.

ATAROTE-ADAR [Coroas [isto é: cercados circulares] de Adar]. Uma cidade de Efraim. (Jos 16:5; 18:13) Evidentemente, trata-se da Atarote de Josué 16:2. — Veja ATAROTE N.º 2.

ATENAS [De (Pertencente a) Atena]. A capital moderna da Grécia e sua cidade mais destacada nos tempos antigos. Situada perto do extremo meridional da planície de Ática, a cerca de 8 km do mar Egeu, sendo servida pelo porto marítimo vizinho de Pireu, com o qual estava ligada nos tempos pré-cristãos por meio de longas muralhas quase paralelas. Sua localização geográfica muito contribuiu para sua grandeza na História. Os montes que cercavam a cidade forneciam uma defesa natural, e os passos nas montanhas estavam suficientemente distantes para evitar a possibilidade de um ataque de surpresa por terra. Estava também distante do mar o bastante para ficar segura contra uma frota invasora, todavia, seus três portos naturais, no vizinho Pireu, eram facilmente acessíveis da cidade.

Centro Cultural e Religioso. Embora Atenas gozasse de certa fama militar como a capital dum pequeno império e como forte potência naval no quinto século AEC, distinguia-se primariamente como o centro da erudição, da literatura e da arte gregas. Tornou-se uma cidade universitária, repleta de mestres, oradores e filósofos, sendo a cidade de filósofos famosos, tais como Sócrates, Platão e Aristóteles. Estabeleceram-se ali quatro escolas filosóficas, a platônica, a peripatética, a epicurista e a estoica (At 17:18), e estas eram cursadas por estudantes de todo o império, nos tempos romanos.

Atenas também era uma cidade muito religiosa, provocando o comentário do apóstolo Paulo, de que os atenienses 'pareciam mais dados ao temor das deidades do que os outros'. (At 17:22) Segundo o historiador Josefo, os atenienses eram 'os mais pios dos gregos'. (Against Apion [Contra Apião], II, 130 [12]) A religião era controlada pelo Estado, e este a incentivava por custear os sacrifícios, os ritos e as procissões públicos em honra aos deuses. Podiam-se encontrar ídolos nos templos, nas praças públicas e nas ruas, e as pessoas oravam regularmente aos deuses antes de empenhar-se em suas festas ou simpósios intelectuais, em suas assembleias políticas e em suas competições atléticas. A fim de não ofender a nenhum dos deuses, os atenienses até mesmo construíram altares "A um Deus Desconhecido", fato a que Paulo se refere em Atos 17:23. Pausânias, geógrafo do segundo século, confirma isto, explicando que, enquanto viajava pela estrada do porto da baía de Falero até Atenas (talvez percorrida por Paulo na sua chegada), notou "altares dos deuses chamados Desconhecidos, e de heróis". — Description of Greece (Descrição da Grécia), Ática, I, 4.

Primórdios Históricos. A cidade desenvolveu-se em torno da Acrópole, uma colina elíptica de uns 150 m de altitude, que em três lados se eleva abruptamente. (FOTOS, Vol. 2, pp. 333, 749) Durante o sétimo século AEC, ela foi governada por uma nobreza ou aristocracia hereditária, conhecida como os eupátridas, que exercia um monopólio de poder político e controlava também o Areópago, a principal corte criminal daquele tempo. Durante a primeira parte do sexto século AEC, porém, um legislador chamado Sólon fez reformas constitucionais que melhoraram a sorte dos pobres e lançaram o alicerce para um governo democrático. No entanto, era uma democracia apenas para os cidadãos livres do país, visto que uma grande parte da população era constituída de escravos.

Após as vitórias sobre os persas, no quinto século AEC, Atenas tornou-se a capital dum pequeno império, controlando a maior parte das regiões costeiras em torno do mar Egeu, e estendendo seu comércio e sua influência desde a Itália e a Sicília no O até Chipre e a Síria no L. A cidade tornou-se líder cultural do mundo antigo, alcançando brilhantes consecuções na literatura e na arte. Foi nessa época que se construíram muitos lindos prédios públicos e templos, inclusive o Partenon (o templo de Atena), e o Erecteion, cujas ruínas ainda podem ser vistas no alto da Acrópole, na Atenas moderna. O Partenon era considerado o principal monumento arquitetônico da antiga religião pagã e era ornamentado por uma estátua de ouro e marfim, de mais de 12 m de altura, de Atena.

Esta beleza material, porém, não produziu verdadeiro soerguimento espiritual para os atenienses, pois os deuses e as deusas honrados por ela eram, eles próprios, representados na mitologia grega como praticando todo tipo de ato imoral e criminoso conhecido aos humanos. Assim, nos dias de Paulo, o filósofo grego Apolônio criticava os atenienses por suas danças orgíacas na festa de Dioniso (Baco) e seu entusiasmo pelo derramamento de sangue humano nas competições de gladiadores.

O Império Ateniense dissolveu-se depois de derrotado pelos espartanos, nas guerras do Peloponeso, no fim do quinto século AEC, mas seus conquistadores mostraram consideração pela cidade, por causa da sua cultura, e não a destruíram por completo. Ela foi conquistada pelos romanos em 86 AEC, e despojada de seus negócios e comércio; de modo que, no tempo em que Jesus e os cristãos primitivos surgiram no cenário palestino, a importância de Atenas residia mormente em suas universidades e escolas de filosofia.

A Atenas moderna, com seu destacado morro conhecido como Licabeto.

A Atividade de Paulo em Atenas. Por volta de 50 EC, o apóstolo Paulo visitou Atenas, na sua segunda viagem missionária. Ele deixara Silas e Timóteo em Bereia, com instruções para virem logo que possível. (At 17:13-15) Enquanto os esperava, ficou irritado diante dos muitos deuses falsos da cidade, e, assim, começou a arrazoar com o povo, tanto na sinagoga judaica como na feira (ou praça do mercado). (At 17:16, 17) Em anos recentes, este mercado ou ágora, ao NO da Acrópole, foi completamente escavado pela Escola Americana de Estudos Clássicos. A ágora evidentemente não era apenas um local de transações comerciais, mas era também um lugar de se debater e cuidar de assuntos cívicos. A atitude inquiridora dos atenienses, descrita no relato em Atos 17:18-21, reflete-se na crítica de Demóstenes a respeito de seus compatriotas atenienses pelo seu amor a se percorrer o mercado, indagando continuamente: “Quais são as novidades?”

Enquanto estava no mercado, Paulo se viu abordado por filósofos estoicos e epicureus, e foi considerado suspeitosamente ser “publicador de deidades estrangeiras”. (At 17:18) Havia muitos tipos de religião no Império Romano, mas as leis grega e romana proibiam a introdução de deuses estranhos e de novos costumes religiosos, especialmente quando estes eram contrários à religião nativa. Evidentemente, Paulo teve dificuldades devido à intolerância religiosa na cidade romanizada de Filipos. (At 16:19-24) Os habitantes de Atenas mostraram ser mais cépticos e tolerantes do que os filipenses, mas evidentemente ainda os preocupava como este novo ensino poderia afetar a segurança do estado. Paulo foi conduzido ao Areópago, mas não se pode afirmar de forma definitiva se ele falou perante o tribunal conhecido como Areópago. Alguns afirmam que, nos dias de Paulo, o próprio tribunal não mais se reunia na colina, e sim na ágora.

O eloquente testemunho de Paulo perante estes homens ilustrados de Atenas é uma lição de tato e de discernimento. Ele mostrou que, ao invés de pregar uma nova deidade, pregava sobre o próprio Criador do céu e da terra, e, com tato, fez referência ao “Deus Desconhecido”, cujo altar vira, e até mesmo citou a obra Os Fenômenos, de Arato, poeta ciliciano, e do Hino a Zeus, de Cleanto. (At 17:22-31) Embora a maioria zombasse dele, alguns atenienses, inclusive Dionísio, juiz do Areópago, e certa mulher chamada Dâmaris, tornaram-se crentes. — At 17:32-34.

É possível que Timóteo se tenha juntado a Paulo em Atenas e fosse então mandado de volta a Tessalônica; mas, parece mais provável que Paulo lhe enviasse aviso a Bereia para fazer esta viagem, deixando assim Paulo sem companheiros em Atenas. Falar Paulo na primeira pessoa do plural, em 1 Tessalonicenses 3:1, 2, parece ter sido em sentido editorial, como aplicando-se simplesmente a ele próprio. (Veja 1Te 2:18; 3:6.) Se for assim, então Paulo partiu sozinho de Atenas, indo a Corinto, onde com o tempo se juntaram a ele Silas e Timóteo. (At 18:5) É provável que Paulo tenha revisitado Atenas na sua terceira viagem missionária (55 ou 56 EC), visto que o registro declara que naquela época ele passou três meses na Grécia. — At 20:2, 3.

ATER [Fechado; Impedido].

1. Homem de Israel, cujos 98 filhos ou descendentes retornaram do exílio babilônico junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 2, 16; Ne 7:21) Estão alistados do seguinte modo: “Os filhos de Ater, de Ezequias, noventa e oito”, talvez indicando que eram prole de Ater, descendente de certo Ezequias (mas provavelmente não o rei de Judá com este nome), ou que eles eram descendentes de Ater por meio de certo Ezequias. Talvez fosse um descendente deste Ater que foi um dos cabeças do povo que atestaram o “arranjo fidedigno” dos dias de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 17.

2. Chefe de família, cujos descendentes estavam entre os levíticos “filhos dos porteiros” do templo, que retornaram de Babilônia a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:42; Ne 7:45.

ATERRO. Um aspecto geográfico ou estrutural da antiga Jerusalém. (2Sa 5:9; 1Rs 9:15, 24; 11:27; 2Rs 12:20; 1Cr 11:8; 2Cr 32:5) Em Juízes 9:6, 20, a mesma palavra hebraica, traduzida por “Aterro” (mil·lóh’), é vertida por “Milo”. — Veja MILO.

A natureza exata do Aterro é hoje desconhecida. Em 2 Reis 12:20 se faz referência “à casa do Aterro”, o que talvez indique que era uma construção semelhante a uma cidadela. Quanto à sua localização, 2 Samuel 5:9 e 2 Crônicas 32:5 associam-no com a Cidade de Davi, indicando que se encontrava ou dentro da Cidade de Davi ou à beira dela.

ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS. As Escrituras estão repletas de referências a diversas formas de postura e de gestos, bastando as descrições contidas na Bíblia para mostrar que eram bem similares às que hoje são costumeiras no Oriente Médio. Esses povos orientais exteriorizam consideravelmente mais os seus sentimentos e são menos inibidos em expressá-los do que muitos povos ocidentais. Atitudes e gestos, quer acompanhados por palavras, quer sem palavras, tinham considerável vigor e significado.

Oração e Homenagem. Ficar em pé. Entre os hebreus e muitas das outras nações mencionadas na Bíblia não havia nenhuma forma fixa de postura para a oração. Todas as atitudes adotadas eram altamente respeitosas. Ficar em pé era uma postura comum. Jesus falou sobre esta posição para a oração. (Mr 11:25) Pelo visto, logo depois de ser batizado, Jesus estava em pé e orando, quando o céu se abriu e desceu sobre ele o espírito santo na forma corpórea semelhante a uma pomba, ouvindo-se a voz do próprio Deus falando desde os céus. — Lu 3:21, 22.

Ajoelhar-se era uma postura comum na oração. O próprio Jesus ajoelhou-se no jardim de Getsêmani. (Lu 22:41) Salomão, ao representar a nação de Israel em oração, ajoelhou-se na inauguração do templo. (1Rs 8:54) Embora em muitos casos na Bíblia se use a palavra "joelhos" no plural, podia dar-se que a pessoa, às vezes, apenas se ajoelhava em um joelho, assim como fazem ocasionalmente os hodiernos orientais. — At 9:40; 20:36; 21:5; Ef 3:14.

Curvar-se. Os judeus, onde quer que se encontrassem, sempre que adoravam, voltavam o rosto para a cidade de Jerusalém e seu templo. (1Rs 8:42, 44; Da 6:10) Ezequiel viu em visão 25 homens com as costas viradas para o templo de Jeová, curvando-se com as faces voltadas para o L. (Ez 8:16) Os templos dos adoradores do sol eram construídos de modo que a entrada se encontrasse no lado O, obrigando assim os adoradores a encarar o L ao entrar. Mas o templo de Jeová foi construído com a entrada no L, de modo que os adoradores de Jeová ali voltavam as costas para o lugar do nascente do sol.

Estender os braços. Na postura de ficar em pé ou de ajoelhar-se, as palmas das mãos às vezes eram estendidas para os céus, ou as mãos eram erguidas e estendidas para a frente, como em súplica. (1Rs 8:22; 2Cr 6:13; Ne 8:6) Às vezes erguia-se o rosto (Jó 22:26), ou talvez se erguessem os olhos para o céu. — Mt 14:19; Mr 7:34; Jo 17:1.

Sentar-se e prostrar-se. Sentar-se era outra postura adotada na oração, sendo que o suplicante evidentemente se ajoelhava e depois se sentava sobre os calcanhares. (1Cr 17:16) Nesta posição, ele podia curvar a cabeça ou encostá-la no peito. Ou, assim como fez Elias, podia inclinar-se para a terra e pôr o rosto entre os joelhos. (1Rs 18:42) 'Lançar-se com a face por terra' frequentemente é a maneira de as Escrituras expressarem que a pessoa se prostrou. Usualmente, fazia-se isso por cair de joelhos e inclinar-se para a frente, apoiando-se nas mãos, ou, mais frequentemente, nos cotovelos, com a cabeça tocando o chão. (Gên 24:26, 48; Ne 8:6; Núm 16:22, 45; Mt 26:39) Em grande tristeza ou em fervorosa oração, o suplicante talvez jazesse literalmente estendido com a face por terra. Em casos de extrema aflição, o suplicante talvez usasse serapilheira. (1Cr 21:16) Também os falsos adoradores curvavam-se diante dos seus ídolos. (Êx 20:5; Núm 25:2; 2Rs 5:18; Da 3:5-12) Além disso, os falsos adoradores muitas vezes beijavam seus ídolos. — 1Rs 19:18.

Gestos religiosos em direção a um objeto. Jó salientou o perigo de se deixar o coração ficar engodado por algum objeto de reverência, tal como o sol ou a lua, a ponto de fazer algum gesto de adoração em direção a ele, talvez colocando a mão à boca num beijo, do modo como faziam os adoradores da lua e os que homenageavam ídolos. Jó dava-se conta de que isso renegava o verdadeiro Deus e que exigia uma prestação de contas por tal erro. — Jó 31:26-28.

Posturas cristãs para oração. Jesus orou em público, em sinceridade, assim como fizeram também Paulo e outros. Ele recomendou também a oração em particular. (Mt 6:5, 6) Mas Jesus condenou a ostentação sob a aparência de longas orações, uma prática em que haviam caído alguns dos escribas. (Mr 12:40; Lu 20:47) Todavia, os cristãos adotaram muitos dos costumes e práticas da sinagoga judaica — aquelas que Deus não desaprovava — e mencionam-se nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs as mesmas atitudes e posturas adotadas na oração. Em parte alguma dão apoio à expressão facial ou postura de presumida piedade e santimoniosidade. Não tornam essencial nenhuma determinada postura, tal como juntar as palmas das mãos ou entrelaçar os dedos ao orar. De fato, as orações podem ser silenciosas e inteiramente despidas de manifestações externas, quando alguém está empenhado numa tarefa designada ou se confronta com uma emergência. (Veja Ne 2:4.) Diz-se aos cristãos que orem "com toda forma de oração e súplica". — Ef 6:18.

Respeito, Humildade. Ajoelhar-se. As atitudes e posturas dos orientais em expressar respeito uns aos outros, e especialmente ao fazerem uma petição a alguém superior, eram muito parecidas às atitudes adotadas na oração. Encontramos exemplos de alguém ajoelhar-se em súplica perante outros. Não se fazia isso em adoração daquela pessoa, mas em reconhecimento da posição ou do cargo dela, com profundo respeito. — Mt 17:14; Mr 1:40; 10:17; 2Rs 1:13.

Curvar-se era mais frequentemente usado ao cumprimentar outros, ao chegar-se a eles para tratar de negócios ou para mostrar alto grau de respeito. Jacó curvou-se sete vezes ao se encontrar com Esaú. (Gên 33:3) Salomão, embora fosse rei, mostrou respeito para com a sua mãe por se curvar diante dela. — 1Rs 2:19.

Curvar-se podia também ser símbolo do reconhecimento de derrota. (Is 60:14) Os derrotados talvez comparecessem perante seu conquistador trajados de serapilheira, e, além disso, com cordas na cabeça, numa súplica de misericórdia. (1Rs 20:31, 32) Alguns acham que as cordas mencionadas eram postas em volta do pescoço, para simbolizar cativeiro e submissão.

Embora fosse comum que os judeus se curvassem diante duma autoridade para mostrar respeito, Mordecai recusou curvar-se diante de Hamã. Isto se deu porque Hamã, sendo agagita, era bem provavelmente um dos amalequitas, a respeito dos quais Jeová dissera que exterminaria completamente a lembrança deles debaixo dos céus, e que Ele estaria em guerra com Amaleque de geração em geração. (Êx 17:14-16) Visto que curvar-se ou prostrar-se podia ser indicação de paz para com Hamã, Mordecai recusou-se a realizar tal ato, porque teria violado com isso a ordem de Deus. — Est 3:5.

Prostrar-se. Josué prostrou-se perante um anjo, um "príncipe do exército de Jeová", não em adoração, mas em reconhecimento do cargo superior do anjo e do fato de que o anjo fora obviamente enviado por Jeová com uma ordem para ele. — Jos 5:14.

Quando Jesus estava na terra, pessoas prostravam-se perante ele para fazer uma petição ou para prestar-lhe homenagem, e ele não as repreendia. (Lu 5:12; Jo 9:38) Isto se dava porque era o Rei designado, o Rei nomeado, conforme ele mesmo disse: "A majestade real de Deus tem-se aproximado" (ED); "o reino de Deus se tem aproximado". (NM; Mr 1:15) Jesus era o herdeiro do trono de Davi, e, por isso, era legitimamente honrado como rei. — Mt 21:9; Jo 12:13-15.

Entretanto, os apóstolos de Jesus Cristo recusaram-se a deixar que outros se prostrassem diante deles. O motivo era que, nos casos descritos, o prostrar-se era feito numa atitude de adoração, como se o poder do espírito santo nos apóstolos, que fazia as curas e outras obras poderosas, fosse deles próprios. Os apóstolos davam-se conta de que o poder procedia de Deus e que o crédito por tais coisas devia ser dado a ele e toda a adoração devia ser dirigida a Jeová, por meio de Jesus Cristo, de quem eram apenas representantes. — At 10:25, 26.

Em conexão com o respeito mostrado para com Jesus, a palavra muitas vezes usada é pro·sky·né·o, que tem o significado básico de "prestar homenagem", mas também traduzida por "adorar". (Mt 2:11; Lu 4:8) Jesus não estava aceitando adoração, que pertence só a Deus (Mt 4:10), mas reconhecia o ato de alguém lhe prestar homenagem em reconhecimento da autoridade que Lhe foi dada por Deus. O anjo a quem Jesus Cristo enviou para transmitir a Revelação a João expressou o princípio de que a adoração prestada pelo homem só pertence a Deus, quando se negou a ser adorado por João. — Re 19:10; veja ADORAÇÃO; HOMENAGEM.

Cobrir a cabeça era sinal de respeito por parte das mulheres. Este costume foi seguido na congregação cristã. O apóstolo Paulo, considerando o princípio da chefia cristã, declarou: "Toda mulher que orar ou profetizar com a sua cabeça descoberta envergonha sua cabeça . . . É por isso que a mulher deve ter um sinal de autoridade sobre a sua cabeça, por causa dos anjos." — 1Co 11:3-10; veja CABEÇA, SER.

Tirar as sandálias era gesto de respeito ou reverência. Ordenou-se a Moisés fazer isso junto ao espinheiro ardente, e a Josué, na presença dum anjo. (Êx 3:5; Jos 5:15) Visto que o tabernáculo e o templo eram lugares sagrados, diz-se que os sacerdotes cumpriam descalços os seus deveres no santuário. Do mesmo modo, soltar alguém os cadarços das sandálias de outra pessoa, ou carregar as sandálias para ela, era considerado uma tarefa servil e uma expressão de humildade e da consciência da sua própria insignificância, em contraste com seu amo. Ainda é costume no Oriente Médio tirar as sandálias daquele que entra numa casa, o que às vezes é feito por um serviçal. — Mt 3:11; Jo 1:27; veja SANDÁLIA.

Despejar água sobre as mãos de outrem. Eliseu foi identificado como ministro ou servo de Elias pela expressão "[ele] despejava água sobre as mãos de Elias". Este serviço costumava ser prestado especialmente após as refeições. No Oriente Médio não era costume usar garfo e faca, e sim os dedos, e o servo costumava depois derramar água sobre as mãos de seu amo, para lavá-las. (2Rs 3:11) Um costume similar era a lavagem dos pés, realizada como ato de hospitalidade e também de respeito, e, em certas relações, de humildade. — Jo 13:5; Gên 24:32; 43:24; 1Ti 5:10.

Acordo, Participação. Apertar a mão e bater palmas eram gestos empregados para expressar acordo, ratificação ou confirmação dum contrato ou dum negócio. (Esd 10:19) As Escrituras advertem contra fazer isso para ser fiador dum empréstimo para outra pessoa. (Pr 6:1-3; 17:18; 22:26) Parceria, ou participação, também era indicada por um aperto de mãos ou por se pegar a mão de outrem. — 2Rs 10:15; Gál 2:9.

Bênção. Pôr as mãos na cabeça; erguer as mãos. Visto que a palavra hebraica ba·rákh tem que ver tanto com dobrar os joelhos e ajoelhar-se, como com abençoar, é provável que, ao receberem a bênção, as pessoas ajoelhavam-se e curvavam-se diante daquele que dava a bênção. Daí, aquele que abençoava punha as mãos na cabeça do abençoado. (Gên 48:13, 14; Mr 10:16) Ao abençoar um grupo de pessoas, costumava-se erguer as mãos em direção a elas, enquanto se proferia a bênção. — Le 9:22; Lu 24:50.

Juramento. Erguer a mão; colocar a mão sob a coxa. Ao se fazer um juramento, era costumeiro erguer a mão direita. Deus fala de si mesmo como fazendo isso, de forma simbólica. (De 32:40; Is 62:8) O anjo na visão de Daniel ergueu tanto a mão direita como a esquerda ao céu para proferir um juramento. (Da 12:7) Outro método de confirmar um juramento era colocar a mão sob a coxa (quadril) de outrem, assim como fez o mordomo de Abraão ao jurar que obteria para Isaque uma esposa dentre a parentela de Abraão (Gên 24:2, 9), e como fez José com Jacó, ao jurar que não enterraria Jacó no Egito. (Gên 47:29-31) A palavra "coxa" aplica-se à parte superior da perna, desde o quadril até o joelho, onde está o fêmur. Segundo o rabino judeu Rashbam, este método de jurar era usado quando um superior adjurava um inferior, como um amo ao seu servo ou um pai ao filho, que também lhe devia obediência. E, segundo outro erudito judeu, Abraham Ibn Ezra, era costume, naqueles dias, o servo prestar juramento desta maneira, colocando a mão sob a coxa do amo, o qual se sentava sobre a mão dele. Isto significava que o servo estava sob a autoridade de seu amo. — The Soncino Chumash (O Chumash de Soncino), editado por A. Cohen, Londres, 1956, p. 122.

Pesar, Vergonha. Lançar pó sobre a cabeça; rasgar a vestimenta; usar serapilheira. O pesar costumava ser acompanhado por choro (Gên 50:1-3; Jo 11:35), frequentemente por se curvar a cabeça em tristeza (Is 58:5), por lançar pó sobre a cabeça (Jos 7:6), ou por ficar sentado no chão (Jó 2:13; Is 3:26). O pesar muitas vezes era expresso por se rasgar a vestimenta (1Sa 4:12; Jó 2:12; veja RASGAR VESTES.) e às vezes por se porem cinzas sobre a cabeça. (2Sa 13:19) Quando os judeus foram condenados à destruição pelas mãos de seus inimigos, por ordem do Rei Assuero, "serapilheira e cinzas vieram a ser estendidas como leito para muitos". (Est 4:3) Jeová avisou que Jerusalém devia cingir-se de serapilheira e revolver-se em cinzas por causa da tribulação que lhe sobreviria. (Je 6:26) Miqueias disse aos da cidade filisteia de Afra que se 'revolvessem no próprio pó'. — Miq 1:10.

Cortar ou arrancar os cabelos; bater no peito. Cortar o cabelo (Jó 1:20), arrancar alguns cabelos da própria barba (Esd 9:3), cobrir a cabeça (2Sa 15:30; Est 6:12), cobrir o bigode (Ez 24:17; Miq 3:7) e pôr as mãos sobre a própria cabeça, indicavam pesar ou vergonha, mesmo a ponto de atordoamento. (2Sa 13:19; Je 2:37) Alguns acham que este último gesto indicava que a pesada mão de aflição da parte de Deus estava sobre o pranteador. Isaías andava nu e descalço, em sinal da vergonha que sobreviria ao Egito e à Etiópia. (Is 20:2-5) Sob o sentimento de incomum pesar ou contrição, a pessoa talvez se batesse no peito em pesar (Mt 11:17; Lu 23:27), ou batesse a coxa em remorso, vergonha e humilhação ou luto. — Je 31:19; Ez 21:12.

Ira, Escárnio, Insulto, Invocação do Mal. Menear a cabeça; esbofetear outrem. Diversos gestos, em geral acompanhados por palavras, indicavam fortes expressões de ira, animosidade, motejo, exprobração, desprezo, e assim por diante, para com outros. Entre estes havia gestos com a boca, meneios da cabeça ou a agitação da mão (2Rs 19:21; Sal 22:7; 44:14; 109:25; Sof 2:15), uma bofetada (Jó 16:10; Mt 5:39; Jo 18:22) e arrancar cabelos da barba de outrem (Is 50:6). Jesus sofreu as maiores formas de indignidade perante o alto tribunal judaico por cuspirem nele, por ser esbofeteado, por cobrirem-lhe a face e então o esmurrarem, e escarnecerem dele com as palavras: "Profetiza-nos, ó Cristo. Quem te golpeou?" (Mt 26:67, 68; Mr 14:65) Depois recebeu tratamento similar dos soldados. — Mt 27:30; Mr 15:19; Jo 19:3.

Jogar pó era outra maneira de expressar desprezo. Simei fez isso contra Davi, ao mesmo tempo amaldiçoando-o e atirando pedras nele. (2Sa 16:13) Evidenciando a fúria dos amotinados, enquanto Paulo apresentou sua defesa perante eles em Jerusalém, estes ergueram a voz, clamaram, lançaram em volta as suas roupas exteriores e atiraram poeira ao ar. — At 22:22, 23.

Bater palmas podia ser apenas um gesto para atrair atenção, como em Josué 15:18. Na maioria das vezes, porém, era sinal de ira (Núm 24:10), de desprezo ou escárnio (Jó 27:23; La 2:15), de pesar (Ez 6:11), ou de animosidade, ao se alegrar com o mal que sobreveio a um rival, a um inimigo odiado ou a um opressor; às vezes era acompanhado por se bater com os pés no chão. — Ez 25:6; Na 3:19.

Designação. Unção. Usavam-se certos gestos para indicar a designação para um cargo ou uma posição de autoridade. Na investidura do sacerdócio, Arão foi ungido com o óleo de santa unção. (Le 8:12) Reis eram ungidos. (1Sa 16:13; 1Rs 1:39) O Rei Ciro, da Pérsia, não foi literalmente ungido por um representante de Deus, mas falou-se dele figurativamente como sendo o ungido de Jeová, por causa de sua designação de conquistar Babilônia e libertar o povo de Deus. (Is 45:1) Eliseu foi 'ungido' por ser designado, mas nunca foi literalmente ungido com óleo. (1Rs 19:16, 19) Jesus foi ungido pelo seu Pai Jeová, não com óleo, mas com espírito santo. (Is 61:1; Lu 4:18, 21) Por meio dele são ungidos os seus irmãos gerados pelo espírito, que constituem a congregação cristã. (2Co 1:21; At 2:33) Esta unção os designa, comissiona e habilita para serem ministros de Deus. — 1Jo 2:20; 2Co 3:5, 6; veja UNGIDO, UNÇÃO.

A imposição das mãos era um método de indicar a designação de alguém para um cargo ou um dever, como no caso dos sete homens designados pelos apóstolos para cuidar da distribuição de alimentos na congregação de Jerusalém. (At 6:6) Timóteo foi designado para um serviço específico pelo corpo de anciãos da congregação. (1Ti 4:14) Ele, por sua vez, foi mais tarde incumbido pelo apóstolo Paulo de fazer designações de outros, sendo admoestado que devia fazer isso apenas após meticulosa consideração. — 1Ti 5:22.

A imposição das mãos tinha também outros significados, um deles sendo o reconhecimento de alguma coisa, como em Êxodo 29:10, 15, onde Arão e seus filhos reconheciam os sacrifícios como oferecidos a seu favor. Um significado similar é encontrado em Levítico 4:15.

A imposição das mãos foi também usada para indicar alguns que receberiam benefícios ou poder, como nas curas feitas por Jesus (Lu 4:40) e na descida do espírito santo sobre aqueles a quem Paulo impôs as mãos. (At 19:6) Isto não significa que o espírito passava pelas mãos de Paulo, mas sim que ele, como representante de Cristo, estava autorizado a indicar, em harmonia com os requisitos estabelecidos, quem receberia dons do espírito. (Veja também At 8:14-19.) Que não era necessário impor as mãos para transmitir os dons do espírito é demonstrado pelo fato de que, no caso de Cornélio e os de sua casa, o apóstolo Pedro simplesmente estava presente quando receberam espírito santo e o dom de línguas. — At 10:44-46.

Favor. Ficar em pé diante dum superior. Ficar em pé perante uma autoridade representava favor e reconhecimento, visto que requeria permissão para comparecer à presença dum rei. (Pr 22:29; Lu 1:19; 21:36) Em Revelação 7:9, 15, mostra-se uma grande multidão em pé diante do trono, indicando ter reconhecimento favorável perante Deus.

Falar de levantar a cabeça de outra pessoa, às vezes, era um modo simbólico de indicar que ela estava sendo erguida ou restabelecida no favor. — Gên 40:13, 21; Je 52:31.

Encher as Mãos de Poder. Encher as mãos dos sacerdotes de poder para o cargo sacerdotal foi representado por Moisés quando ele, como mediador, colocou nas mãos de Arão e de seus filhos os diversos itens a serem oferecidos em sacrifício, movendo-os para lá e para cá perante Jeová. O movimento para lá e para cá representava a apresentação constante perante Jeová. — Le 8:25-27.

Amizade. Beijar; lavar os pés; ungir a cabeça. Amizade era expressa por meio dum beijo (Gên 27:26; 2Sa 19:39), e, nas ocasiões de grande emoção, por lançar-se ao pescoço de alguém, num abraço, junto com beijos e lágrimas. (Gên 33:4; 45:14, 15; 46:29; Lu 15:20; At 20:37) Havia três gestos sempre considerados necessários como sinal de hospitalidade para com um convidado: beijá-lo em cumprimento, lavar-lhe os pés e ungir-lhe a cabeça. — Lu 7:44-46.

Segundo o modo reclinado de se comer, costumeiro nos dias em que Jesus estava na terra, encostar-se no peito de outrem era uma atitude de amizade íntima ou favor, e era conhecido como estar na posição junto ao seio. (Jo 13:23, 25) Este costume foi a base das ilustrações de Lucas 16:22, 23, e João 1:18.

Comer com outrem o pão dele era símbolo de amizade e de paz para com ele. (Gên 31:54; Êx 2:20; 18:12) Voltar-se depois contra ele para o prejudicar era considerado a traição mais vil. O traidor Judas foi culpado disso. — Sal 41:9; Jo 13:18.

Inocência, e Negar Responsabilidade. Lavar as mãos. A inocência numa questão, ou o ato de isentar-se de responsabilidade, era demonstrada figurativamente por se lavarem as mãos. (De 21:6) O salmista declarou assim sua inocência no Salmo 73:13; veja também o Salmo 26:6. Pilatos procurou esquivar-se da responsabilidade relacionada com a morte de Jesus por lavar as mãos diante da multidão e dizer: "Eu sou inocente do sangue deste homem. Isso é convosco." — Mt 27:24.

Sacudir a roupa. Isentar-se de responsabilidade adicional foi indicado por Paulo quando sacudiu a roupa diante dos judeus em Corinto, aos quais havia pregado e que se opuseram a ele, dizendo: "O vosso sangue caia sobre as vossas cabeças. Eu estou limpo. Doravante irei às pessoas das nações." (At 18:6) Quando Neemias sacudiu a "dobra", isto é, a dobra da sua veste, indicou a total rejeição por parte de Deus. — Ne 5:13.

Sacudir o pó dos pés. Sacudir a sujeira ou o pó dos pés também indicava a isenção de responsabilidade. Jesus mandou que seus discípulos fizessem isso para com o lugar ou a cidade que não os acolhesse ou ouvisse. — Mt 10:14; Lu 10:10, 11; At 13:51.

Alegria. Bater palmas. A alegria era demonstrada por se baterem palmas (2Rs 11:12; Sal 47:1) e por se dançar, frequentemente acompanhado por música. (Jz 11:34; 2Sa 6:14) Brados e cantos no tra-balho, especialmente na vindima, eram expressões de felicidade ou de grata alegria. — Is 16:10; Je 48:33.

Oposição. Sacudir a mão (ameaçadoramente) contra alguém indicava oposição. — Is 10:32; 19:16.

Levantar a própria cabeça era a descrição figurativa duma atitude com o significado de tomar ação, usualmente para se opor, lutar ou oprimir. — Jz 8:28; Sal 83:2.

Levantar a mão contra alguém em autoridade indicava rebelião contra ele. — 2Sa 18:28; 20:21.

Lamber o pó simboliza derrota e destruição. — Sal 72:9; Is 49:23.

Mão ou pé sobre a nuca ou cerviz dum inimigo descreve figurativamente a derrota do inimigo, ser ele desbaratado e posto em fuga, sendo perseguido e apanhado. — Gên 49:8; Jos 10:24; 2Sa 22:41; Sal 18:40.

Assumir Autoridade ou Tomar Ação. Erguer-se ou pôr-se de pé tinha o sentido de assumir autoridade ou poder, ou tomar ação. Fala-se de reis como erguendo-se quando assumiam sua autoridade régia ou a exerciam de modo marcante. (Da 8:22, 23; 11:2, 3, 7, 21; 12:1) Jeová é representado como levantando-se para executar o julgamento do povo. (Sal 76:9; 82:8) Satanás é descrito como pondo-se de pé contra Israel, quando incitou Davi a fazer o censo do povo. — 1Cr 21:1.

Cingir os lombos indica preparação para ação. Referia-se ao costume dos tempos bíblicos de amarrar as vestimentas amplas com um cinto ou uma faixa, para não ser estorvado durante o trabalho, ao correr e assim por diante. — Jó 40:7; Je 1:17; Lu 12:37; 1Pe 1:13 n.

Miscelânea. Deitar-se aos pés de alguém. Quando Rute quis lembrar a Boaz a posição dele como resgatador, ela veio à noite, descobriu-lhe os pés e deitou-se junto a eles. Quando ele acordou, ela lhe disse: "Sou Rute, tua escrava, e tens de estender a tua aba sobre a tua escrava, visto que és resgatador." Rute indicou com isso que estava disposta a submeter-se ao casamento de cunhado. — Ru 3:6-9.

A aparência durante o jejum. 'Atribular a alma' mui provavelmente referia-se ao jejum, e podia representar luto, o reconhecimento de pecados, arrependimento ou contrição. (Le 16:29, 31; 2Sa 1:12; Sal 35:13; Jl 1:13, 14) Quando Jesus estava na terra, os hipócritas assumiam um semblante triste, desfigurando a face numa ostentação de "santidade" por jejuar, mas Jesus disse aos seus discípulos que, quando jejuassem, deviam untar a cabeça e lavar o rosto, a fim de que parecessem normais aos homens, sabendo que o Pai olha o coração. (Mt 6:16-18) O jejum era às vezes praticado pelos cristãos com o fim de poder dar indivisa atenção a assuntos espirituais. — At 13:2, 3; veja JEJUM.

Deitar a mão sobre os olhos de defuntos. A expressão de Jeová a Jacó: "José deitará a mão sobre os teus olhos" (Gên 46:4), era um modo de dizer que José fecharia os olhos de Jacó após a morte deste, o que cabia normalmente ao primogênito fazer. Parece que Jeová indicou assim a Jacó que o direito da primogenitura deveria caber a José. — 1Cr 5:2.

Assobiar. 'Assobiar' diante de algo representava assombro ou admiração. Esta era a atitude provocada nos que viram a espantosa desolação de Judá, e mais tarde, as assombrosas ruínas de Babilônia. — Je 25:9; 50:13; 51:37.

Era costume dos reis ou de homens com autoridade apoiar-se no braço dum servo ou de alguém em posição inferior, assim como fez o Rei Jeorão, de Israel. (2Rs 7:2, 17) O Rei Ben-Hadade II apoiava-se na mão do seu servo Naamã ao curvar-se na casa de seu deus Rimom. — 2Rs 5:18.

Emprego Ilustrativo Lavar os pés de outrem. Jesus usou um dos costumes orientais de maneira ilustrativa, dando a seus discípulos uma lição de humildade e de servirem uns aos outros, quando lavou os pés dos discípulos. Pedro falou então, pedindo que não lhe lavasse apenas os pés, mas também as mãos e a cabeça. Mas Jesus respondeu: "Quem se banhou, não precisa lavar senão os seus pés, mas está inteiramente limpo." (Jo 13:3-10) Jesus queria dizer com isso que, depois de alguém ter ido banhar-se, ao voltar para casa, após o banho, só precisaria lavar a poeira da estrada dos pés calçados com sandálias. Ele usou esta limpeza como figurativa da limpeza espiritual.

Andar. Outra expressão ilustrativa é a de "andar", significando seguir certo proceder, assim como "Noé andou com o verdadeiro Deus". (Gên 6:9; 5:22) Os que andavam com Deus seguiam na vida o proceder delineado por Deus e obtinham o Seu favor. As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, usando a mesma expressão, ilustram os dois procederes contrastantes adotados por alguém, antes e depois de se tornar servo de Deus. (Ef 2:2, 10; 4:17; 5:2) Usa-se "correr" de maneira similar para simbolizar determinado proceder. (1Pe 4:4) Deus disse que os profetas de Judá "correram", embora não tivessem sido enviados por ele, querendo dizer que adotaram falsamente, sem autorização, a carreira profética. (Je 23:21) Paulo descreve a carreira cristã em termos de "correr". Comparou-a a uma corrida na qual se tem de correr segundo as regras para ganhar o prêmio. — 1Co 9:24; Gál 2:2; 5:7.

ATLAI. Filho de Bebai; um dos israelitas que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras depois de Esdras ter chegado a Jerusalém em 468 AEC. — Esd 10:28, 44.

ATOS DOS APÓSTOLOS. Este é o título pelo qual tem sido chamado um dos livros da Bíblia desde o segundo século EC. Abrange primariamente as atividades de Pedro e de Paulo, em vez de as de todos os apóstolos em geral; e fornece-nos uma história muitíssimo fidedigna e abrangente do espetacular começo e do rápido desenvolvimento da organização cristã, primeiro entre os judeus, e então entre os samaritanos e as nações gentias.

O tema dominante da Bíblia inteira, o Reino de Jeová, predomina no livro (At 1:3; 8:12; 14:22; 19:8; 20:25; 28:31), e somos constantemente lembrados de que os apóstolos deram "testemunho cabal" a respeito de Cristo e desse Reino, e realizaram plenamente o seu ministério. (2:40; 5:42; 8:25; 10:42; 20:21, 24; 23:11; 26:22; 28:23) O livro fornece também um notável fundo histórico para se considerar as cartas inspiradas das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs.

O Escritor. As palavras iniciais de Atos referem-se ao Evangelho de Lucas como "o primeiro relato". E visto que ambos os relatos são dirigidos à mesma pessoa, Teófilo, sabemos que Lucas, embora não assinasse seu nome, foi o escritor de Atos. (Lu 1:3; At 1:1) Ambos os relatos têm estilo e linguagem similares. O Fragmento Muratoriano, de fins do segundo século EC, também atribui a escrita a Lucas. Escritos eclesiásticos do segundo século EC, de Irineu de Lião, de Clemente de Alexandria, e de Tertuliano de Cartago, quando citam Atos, mencionam Lucas como o escritor.

Quando e Onde Foi Escrito. O livro abrange um período de aproximadamente 28 anos, desde a ascensão de Jesus em 33 EC até o fim do segundo ano da prisão de Paulo em Roma, por volta de 61 EC. Durante este período, quatro imperadores romanos governaram em sequência: Tibério, Calígula, Cláudio e Nero. Visto que relata eventos decorridos no segundo ano da prisão de Paulo em Roma, não poderia ter sido concluído antes disso. Se o relato tivesse sido escrito mais tarde, seria razoável esperar que Lucas fornecesse mais informa-

DESTAQUES DE ATOS

O início da congregação cristã e um registro do seu zeloso testemunho público em face de feroz perseguição.

Tempo abrangido: 33 a c. 61 EC.

Antes de ascender ao céu, Jesus comissiona seguidores a ser testemunhas dele como o Messias de Jeová. (1:1-26)

Depois de receberem espírito santo, os discípulos testemunham com denodo em muitas línguas. (2:1–5:42)

- Judeus em Jerusalém, procedentes de muitas terras, recebem testemunho na sua própria língua; cerca de 3.000 são batizados.
- Pedro e João são presos e levados perante o Sinédrio; declaram destemidamente que não pararão de dar testemunho.
- Cheios de espírito santo, todos os discípulos proclamam a palavra de Deus com denodo; multidões tornam-se crentes.
- Apóstolos são presos; um anjo os liberta; levados perante o Sinédrio, declaram: "Temos de obedecer a Deus como governante antes que aos homens."

A perseguição resulta na expansão do testemunho. (6:1–9:43)

- Estêvão é preso, dá destemido testemunho, morre como mártir.
- A perseguição espalha todos, menos os apóstolos; testemunho dado em Samaria; eunuco etíope é batizado.
- Jesus aparece ao perseguidor Saulo; Saulo é convertido, batizado, começa ministério zeloso.

Sob direção divina, o testemunho atinge gentios incircuncisos. (10:1–12:25)

- Pedro prega a Cornélio, sua família e seus amigos; estes creem, recebem espírito santo e são batizados.
- O relatório do apóstolo sobre isso promove adicional expansão entre as nações.

Viagens evangelizadoras de Paulo. (13:1–21:26)

- Primeira viagem: A Chipre, Ásia Menor. Paulo e Barnabé com denodo dão testemunho em público e nas sinagogas; expulsos de Antioquia; atacados por turba em Icônio; em Listra, primeiro tratados como deuses, depois Paulo é apedrejado.
- Questão da circuncisão decidida pelo corpo governante em Jerusalém; Paulo e Barnabé designados para informar os irmãos que a circuncisão não é exigida, mas que crentes têm de abster-se de coisas sacrificadas a ídolos, de sangue e de fornicação.
- Segunda viagem: De novo atravessam a Ásia Menor, indo para a Macedônia e a Grécia. Encarcerados em Filipos, mas carcereiro e sua família são batizados; judeus instigam dificuldades em Tessalônica e Bereia; em Atenas, Paulo prega na sinagoga, na feira, daí no Areópago; ministério de 18 meses em Corinto.
- Terceira viagem: Ásia Menor, Grécia. Ministério efésio frutífero, daí, levante dos prateiros; o apóstolo admoesta os anciãos.

Paulo é preso, dá testemunho a autoridades, é levado a Roma. (21:27–28:31)

- Depois de atacado por turba em Jerusalém, Paulo perante o Sinédrio.
- Paulo, como preso, dá testemunho denodado perante Félix, Festo e o Rei Herodes Agripa II, também no navio em caminho para Roma.
- Preso em Roma, Paulo continua a achar meios de pregar sobre Cristo e o Reino.

ções sobre Paulo; se escrito depois do ano 64 EC, certamente teria mencionado a violenta perseguição movida por Nero, que começou então; e, se escrito depois de 70 EC, como alguns argumentam, esperaríamos encontrar registrada a destruição de Jerusalém.

O escritor Lucas acompanhou Paulo em grande parte do período das suas viagens, inclusive na perigosa viagem a Roma, o que é evidente do uso que faz dos pronomes na primeira pessoa do plural, "nós", "nosso", "nos", em Atos 16:10-17; 20:5-15; 21:1-18; 27:1-37; 28:1-16. Paulo, nas suas cartas escritas de Roma, menciona que Lucas também estava ali. (Col 4:14; Flm 24) Foi, por conseguinte, em Roma que se concluiu a escrita do livro de Atos.

Conforme já observado, o próprio Lucas foi testemunha ocular de grande parte do que escreveu, e, em suas viagens, ele contatou concristãos que participaram de certos eventos descritos ou os observaram. Por exemplo, João Marcos podia contar-lhe o miraculoso livramento de Pedro da prisão (At 12:12), ao passo que os eventos descritos nos capítulos 6 e 8 poderiam ter sido relatados pelo missionário Filipe. E Paulo, naturalmente, como testemunha ocular, podia suprir muitos pormenores dos eventos ocorridos quando Lucas não estava com ele.

Autenticidade. A exatidão do livro de Atos tem sido comprovada, no decorrer dos anos, por várias descobertas arqueológicas. Por exemplo, Atos 13:7 diz que Sérgio Paulo era o procônsul de Chipre. Ora, sabe-se que, pouco antes de Paulo visitar Chipre, esta era governada por meio dum propretor ou legado, mas uma inscrição encontrada em Chipre prova que a ilha passou a estar sob o governo direto do Senado romano, na pessoa de um governador provincial chamado procônsul. Similarmente, na Grécia, durante o governo de César Augusto, a Acaia era uma província sob o governo direto do Senado romano, mas, quando Tibério era imperador, ela foi governada diretamente por ele. Mais tarde, sob o imperador Cláudio, tornou-se novamente uma província senatorial, segundo Tácito. Descobriu-se um fragmento dum rescrito de Cláudio aos délficos da Grécia, que se refere ao proconsulado de Gálio. Por conseguinte, Atos 18:12 está correto ao falar de Gálio como "procônsul" quando Paulo estava ali em Corinto, capital da Acaia. (Veja GÁLIO.) Também, uma inscrição num arco em Tessalônica (inscrição de que se preservaram fragmentos no Museu Britânico) mostra que Atos 17:8 está correto ao falar dos "governantes da cidade" ("poliarcas", governadores dos cidadãos), embora este título não seja encontrado na literatura clássica.

Até o dia de hoje, em Atenas, o Areópago, ou colina de Marte, onde Paulo pregou, ergue-se como testemunha silenciosa da veracidade de Atos. (At 17:19) Termos e expressões médicas encontradas em Atos estão de acordo com os escritores médicos gregos daquele tempo. Os meios de viagem empregados no Oriente Médio, no primeiro século, eram essencialmente conforme descritos em Atos: via terrestre, caminhadas, andar a cavalo ou em carros puxados a cavalo (23:24, 31, 32; 8:27-38); via marítima, por navios de carga. (21:1-3; 27:1-5) Aquelas embarcações antigas não possuíam um leme único, mas eram controladas por dois grandes remos, daí estes serem mencionados com exatidão no plural. (27:40) A descrição da viagem de Paulo, de navio, a Roma (27:1-44), no tocante ao tempo que durou, à distância percorrida e aos lugares visitados, é reconhecida por marujos modernos, familiarizados com a região, como inteiramente fidedigna e confiável.

Atos dos Apóstolos foi aceito sem reservas como Escritura inspirada e canônica pelos catalogadores das Escrituras do segundo até o quarto século EC. Trechos do livro, junto com fragmentos dos quatro Evangelhos, encontram-se no manuscrito de papiro Chester Beatty N.º 1 (P^{45}), do terceiro século EC. O manuscrito Michigan N.º 1571 (P^{38}), do terceiro ou do quarto século, contém trechos dos capítulos 18 e 19, e um manuscrito do quarto século, Aegyptus N.º 8683 (P^{8}), contém partes dos capítulos 4 a 6. O livro de Atos foi citado por Policarpo de Esmirna, por volta de 115 EC, por Inácio de Antioquia, por volta de 110 EC, e por Clemente de Roma, talvez já em 95 EC. Atanásio, Jerônimo e Agostinho, do quarto século, confirmam todos as listas anteriores que incluíam Atos.

ATROTE-BETE-JOABE [Coroas [isto é: cercados circulares] da Casa de Joabe]. Nome que aparece entre "os filhos de Salma", na genealogia da tribo de Judá. (1Cr 2:54) Alguns acham tratar-se do nome duma cidade em Judá, indicando a inclusão de nomes tais como Quiriate-Jearim, Bete-Gader, Belém e outros nestas genealogias. Todavia, a mera correspondência dum nome com o duma cidade não é indício certo de que se refere a esta cidade, visto haver diversos casos de pessoas e cidades terem o mesmo nome. Não obstante, a forma ou o significado de certos nomes nas genealogias parece ser mais de natureza geográfica do que pessoal. A solução talvez se encontre na opinião de muitos peritos, de que se faz referência mais precisamente aos habitantes da cidade, do que ao próprio lugar geográfico. De modo que a expressão "pai de", em certas ocorrências, é entendida como significando o "fundador de" ou "principal colonizador de" determinada população morando no lugar indicado.

Deve-se notar que a palavra "pai" aparece no hebraico original em Gênesis 4:20, 21, mas em algumas traduções é vertida por "antepassado" (BLH; AT) ou "fundador" (NM). Léxicos hebraicos incluem entre os possíveis significados do termo hebraico "pai" o de "governante, chefe" (A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Um Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 3), "antepassado, ancestre de tribo, nação . . . dum lugar . . . fundador duma classe ou posição social, . . . dum ofício . . . fundador, magistrado principal dum lugar". (Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 1) — Veja Is 22:20-22.

ATROTE-SOFÃ [Coroas [isto é: cercados circulares] de Sofã]. Cidade, reconstruída pela tribo de Gade, dentre as capturadas dos domínios dos reis Síon e Ogue. — Núm 32:33, 35.

AUDIÇÃO. Veja OBEDIÊNCIA; OUVIDO.

AUGUSTO [O Augusto]. Este título foi dado a Caio Otávio. Posteriores imperadores romanos também assumiram este título (At 25:21, 25), mas, quando usado sozinho, como nome, refere-se a Otávio, o primeiro imperador do Império Romano.

Em setembro de 31 AEC, 13 anos depois do assassinato do seu tio-avô, Júlio César, Otávio emergiu como indisputado governante do Império Romano. Rejeitou os títulos "rei" e "ditador", mas aceitou o título especial de "Augusto", que lhe foi conferido pelo Senado, em 16 de janeiro de 27 AEC. Após a morte de Lépido, em 12 AEC, Augusto assumiu o título de "Pontifex Maximus" (Sumo Pontífice). Com o aumento do seu poder, fez reformas no governo, reorganizou o exército, estabeleceu a Guarda Pretoriana (Fil 1:13), e construiu e restaurou muitos templos.

Em 2 AEC, "saiu um decreto da parte de César Augusto, para que toda a terra habitada se registrasse; e todos viajaram para se registrarem, cada um na sua própria cidade". (Lu 2:1, 3) Este decreto resultou em Jesus nascer em Belém, em cumprimento de profecias bíblicas. (Da 11:20; Miq 5:2) Além desse registro do povo para fins de impostos e de recrutamento para o exército, da nomeação de governadores em algumas províncias, e da execução da pena de morte, Augusto interferia pouquíssimo nos governos locais. Suas diretrizes, que continuaram após a sua morte, concediam ao Sinédrio judaico amplos poderes. (Jo 18:31) Esta tolerância imperial fornecia aos seus súditos menos motivos para se rebelarem.

Augusto tinha poucas escolhas para um sucessor. Seu sobrinho, dois netos, um genro e um enteado morreram todos. Póstumo, seu único neto vivo, foi deserdado e oficialmente expulso, sobrando apenas seu enteado Tibério. Augusto morreu em 17 de agosto de 14 EC (19 de agosto do calendário juliano), mês que ele havia denominado em sua própria honra.

AUGUSTO, DESTACAMENTO DE. Quando, em resultado de seu apelo para César, o apóstolo Paulo foi mandado para Roma, ele foi colocado sob a custódia dum oficial do exército (centurião) do "destacamento de Augusto", chamado Júlio. (At 27:1) A transferência de Paulo e outros presos à custódia do oficial do exército se deu em Cesareia. — At 25:13; 26:30-27:1.

Não é possível identificar positivamente o "destacamento de Augusto" do qual Júlio provinha. Visto que a palavra "Augusto" traduz aqui a palavra grega Se·ba·sté, alguns tentaram identificar o destacamento com Samaria, que naquele tempo era chamada de Sebástie, e assim afirmam que se tratava dum destacamento de soldados composto de recrutas samaritanos. Josefo menciona "uma tropa de cavalaria conhecida como 'sebastianos'". (The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], II, 236 [xii, 5]) Todavia, não parece haver justificativa para tal interpretação deste termo, conforme usado pelo escritor de Atos.

Outra ideia é que o destacamento de Augusto se refere aos frumentarii, um corpo imperial especial de oficiais que servia como uma espécie de departamento de ligação por correios entre o imperador e os estabelecimentos militares nas províncias, dizendo-se que os membros dele agiam no transporte de presos. Esta ideia procura apoio, pelo menos em parte, em algumas versões de Atos 28:16, tais como na edição revista e corrigida da versão Almeida, a qual inclui um trecho duvidoso, que declara que "o centurião entregou os presos ao general dos exércitos". Aqueles que sustentam esta ideia presumem que este "general do exército" era o chefe dos frumentarii. Esta frase, porém, não aparece na maioria das traduções modernas deste versículo.

A mesma edição revista e corrigida da versão Almeida, bem como diversas outras traduções, chama este destacamento de "coorte augusta". A palavra grega spei·ra (destacamento), quando usada em sentido militar, geralmente representava um manipulus romano, um destacamento igual a duas "centúrias". Todavia, este termo também é usado para corpos maiores de homens, e, conforme é usado nas Escrituras Gregas, acredita-se representar uma "coorte" romana (a décima parte duma legião, com cerca de 400 a 600 homens). Além das legiões romanas regulares, compostas de cidadãos romanos e divididas em coortes, havia também tropas de graduação inferior, ou auxilia, constituídas de coortes recrutadas dentre súditos romanos (não dentre cidadãos). Estas eram unidades independentes de infantaria, e geralmente serviam ao longo das fronteiras do império. Ao passo que não se davam nomes distintivos às coortes das legiões romanas regulares, essas coortes auxiliares frequentemente tinham nome. Encontraram-se inscrições de Cohors I Augusta (lat.) e Spei·ra Au·goú·ste (gr.), embora não necessariamente se refiram ao destacamento aqui em consideração.

AUMAI. Primeiro filho mencionado de Jaate, nas genealogias de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 2.

AUSATE [Possessão]. O "amigo de confiança" que acompanhou Abimeleque, rei filisteu de Gerar, numa visita a Isaque, em Berseba. (Gên 26:23, 26) Esta é a primeira referência na Bíblia a um "amigo de confiança", a posição de confiança, num círculo íntimo, de alguém consultado para conselhos ou autorizado como porta-voz. — Veja AMIGO (Amigo [Companheiro] do Rei).

AUTODOMÍNIO. Dominar, restringir ou controlar a própria pessoa, suas ações, sua linguagem ou seus pensamentos. (Gên 43:31; Est 5:10; Sal 119:101; Pr 10:19; Je 14:10; At 24:25) Os termos hebraico e grego que envolvem o autodomínio literalmente denotam ter domínio ou controle sobre si mesmo. O autodomínio é 'fruto do espírito de Deus' (Gál 5:22, 23); e Jeová, embora possua poderes ilimitados, sempre o tem exercido. Ao invés de agir de imediato contra os malfeitores, ele tem concedido tempo, para que tivessem a oportunidade de desviar-se dos seus maus caminhos, e, desta forma, obter Seu favor. — Je 18:7-10; 2Pe 3:9.

No entanto, uma vez firmemente comprovado que aqueles a quem se concedeu tempo para o arrependimento não se aproveitariam de Sua misericórdia, Jeová corretamente deixou de refrear-se de executar Seu julgamento. Um caso em pauta envolve os desoladores de Jerusalém. Deixando de reconhecer que Jeová lhes permitira obter controle sobre Israel, a fim de disciplinar os israelitas por causa da infidelidade, estes desoladores trataram-nos sem misericórdia e levaram a disciplina além do que o julgamento de Deus requeria. (Veja Is 47:6, 7; Za 1:15.) Jeová sabia isso de antemão, e, por meio do profeta Isaías, indicou que viria o tempo em que não mais se refrearia de punir os desoladores: "Por muito tempo fiquei quieto. Fiquei calado. Continuei a exercer autodomínio. Igual à mulher que dá à luz, vou gemer, ofegar e arfar ao mesmo tempo. Devastarei montes e morros, e secarei toda a sua vegetação." — Is 42:14, 15.

Cristo Jesus também exerceu autodomínio. O apóstolo Pedro, quando trazia à atenção dos servos domésticos a necessidade de estarem sujeitos a seus donos, escreveu: "De fato, fostes chamados para este proceder, porque até mesmo Cristo sofreu por vós, deixando-vos um modelo para seguirdes de perto os seus passos. . . . Quando estava sendo injuriado, não injuriava em revide. Quando sofria, não ameaçava, mas encomendava-se àquele que julga justamente." — 1Pe 2:21-23.

Nos "últimos dias", a falta de autodomínio seria uma das características que assinalariam os que não estariam praticando o verdadeiro cristianismo. (2Ti 3:1-7) No entanto, visto que os cristãos devem ser imitadores de Deus e de seu Filho (1Co 11:1; Ef 5:1), eles devem esforçar-se a cultivar o autodomínio em todas as coisas. (1Co 9:25) O apóstolo Pedro declarou: "Supri à vossa fé a virtude, à vossa virtude, o conhecimento, ao vosso conhecimento, o autodomínio, ao vosso autodomínio, a perseverança, à vossa perseverança, a devoção piedosa, à vossa devoção piedosa, a afeição fraternal, à vossa afeição fraternal, o amor. Pois, se estas coisas existirem em vós e transbordarem, impedirão que sejais quer inativos quer infrutíferos no que se refere ao conhecimento exato de nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo." — 2Pe 1:5-8.

A qualidade do autodomínio deve especialmente estar evidente entre os que servem quais superintendentes nas congregações cristãs. (Tit 1:8) Se os superintendentes hão de lidar eficazmente com problemas dentro da congregação, precisam manter o autodomínio em palavras e em ações. O apóstolo Paulo aconselhou a Timóteo: "Outrossim, recusa questões tolas e ignorantes, sabendo que produzem lutas. Mas o escravo do Senhor não precisa lutar, porém, precisa ser meigo para com todos, qualificado para ensinar, restringindo-se sob o mal, instruindo com brandura os que não estiverem favoravelmente dispostos." — 2Ti 2:23-25.

Deixar de exercer autodomínio em determinada situação pode manchar uma longa folha de serviço fiel e mergulhar a pessoa em todo tipo de dificuldades. O que aconteceu com o Rei Davi ilustra isto. Embora leal à verdadeira adoração e tendo amor aos princípios justos da lei de Deus (veja Sal 101), Davi cometeu adultério com Bate-Seba, e isto o levou a mandar colocar Urias, marido dela, numa posição de batalha em que a morte era quase certa. Como consequência, durante anos após isso, Davi viu-se afligido por graves dificuldades no seio da sua família. (2Sa 12:8-12) O caso dele também demonstra a sabedoria de se evitarem situações que possam levar à perda do autodomínio. Ao passo que poderia ter deixado o terraço do seu palácio, Davi evidentemente continuou a contemplar Bate-Seba enquanto esta se banhava, e, assim, veio a sentir paixão por ela. — 2Sa 11:2-4.

Similarmente, não seria bom alguém que não tem autodomínio permanecer solteiro, quando poderia contrair um casamento honroso, e, desta forma, proteger-se contra cometer fornicação. Neste respeito, escreveu o apóstolo Paulo: "Se não tiverem autodomínio, casem-se, pois é melhor casar-se do que estar inflamado de paixão." — 1Co 7:9, 32-38.

AUTORIDADES. Veja AUTORIDADES SUPERIORES.

AUTORIDADES SUPERIORES. Uma expressão em Romanos 13:1, que designa autoridades governamentais humanas. Este texto tem sido traduzido de diversas maneiras: "Toda alma esteja sujeita às autoridades superiores, pois não há autoridade exceto por Deus; as autoridades existentes acham-se colocadas por Deus nas suas posições relativas." (NM) "Seja todo súdito obediente às autoridades governantes, porque não há autoridade que não esteja sob o controle de Deus, e as autoridades existentes foram constituídas sob o Seu controle." (We) "Que todos obedeçam às autoridades. Porque não existe nenhuma autoridade sem a permissão de Deus, e as que existem foram colocadas por ele." — BLH.

Jeová Deus, embora não as tenha originado (veja Mt 4:8, 9; 1Jo 5:19; Re 13:1, 2), permitiu que viessem à existência autoridades governamentais humanas, e estas continuam a existir pela sua permissão. Entretanto, quando ele decide fazer isso, Jeová pode remover, dirigir ou controlar tais autoridades, a fim de realizar a Sua vontade. O profeta Daniel declarou a respeito de Jeová: "Ele muda os tempos e as épocas, removendo reis e estabelecendo reis." (Da 2:21) E Provérbios 21:1 diz: "O coração do rei é como correntes de água na mão de Jeová. Vira-o para onde quer que se agrade." — Veja Ne 2:3-6; Est 6:1-11.

Razões para a Sujeição Cristã. Não havendo razão alguma para os cristãos se colocarem em oposição a um arranjo que Deus tem permitido, eles têm boas razões para sujeitar-se às autoridades superiores. Os governantes, mesmo se forem pessoalmente corruptos, normalmente não punirão outros por fazerem o bem, isto é, por aderirem à lei do país. Mas aquele que se empenha em roubo, assassínio ou em outros atos contra a lei, pode esperar um julgamento adverso da autoridade governante. Alguém culpado dum assassínio deliberado, por exemplo, talvez seja executado por seu crime. Visto que Jeová Deus autorizou a pena capital para os assassinos, depois do Dilúvio (Gên 9:6), a autoridade humana, ao executar o violador da lei, estaria agindo como "ministro de Deus, vingador para expressar furor para com o que pratica o que é mau". — Ro 13:2-4; Tit 3:1; 1Pe 2:11-17.

A sujeição cristã às autoridades superiores não se baseia simplesmente em sua capacidade de punir os malfeitores. No caso do cristão, torna-se uma questão de consciência. Ele é submisso às autoridades humanas porque reconhece que isto está em harmonia com a vontade de Deus. (Ro 13:5; 1Pe 2:13-15) Por conseguinte, a sujeição às autoridades superiores — às autoridades políticas do mundo — jamais poderia ser absoluta. Seria impossível o cristão manter uma boa consciência e fazer a vontade divina se violasse a lei de Deus, por isso ser exigido pela autoridade política. Por este motivo, a sujeição às autoridades superiores sempre tem de ser encarada à luz da declaração dos apóstolos perante o Sinédrio judaico: "Temos de obedecer a Deus como governante antes que aos homens." — At 5:29.

Visto que as autoridades governamentais prestam valiosos serviços a fim de garantir a segurança, a incolumidade e o bem-estar de seus súditos, elas têm direito a impostos e tributos, em compensação por seus serviços. As autoridades governamentais podem ser chamadas de "servidores públicos de Deus", no sentido de que proveem serviços benéficos. (Ro 13:6, 7) Às vezes, tais serviços têm ajudado diretamente os servos de Deus, como no caso em que o Rei Ciro tornou possível que os judeus voltassem a Judá e Jerusalém e reconstruíssem o templo. (2Cr 36:22, 23; Esd 1:1-4) Muitas vezes, os benefícios resultantes do exercício correto das funções das autoridades são compartilhados por todos. Estes benefícios incluem a manutenção dum sistema judiciário, ao qual as pessoas podem recorrer em busca de justiça, proteção contra criminosos e turbas ilegais, e assim por diante. — Fil 1:7; At 21:30-32; 23:12-32.

Naturalmente, o governante que abusar da sua autoridade terá de prestar contas a Deus. Escreveu o apóstolo Paulo: "Não vos vingueis, amados, mas cedei lugar ao furor; pois está escrito: 'A vingança é minha; eu pagarei de volta, diz Jeová.'" — Ro 12:19; Ec 5:8.

AUZÃO [duma raiz que significa "segurar; pegar"]. Primeiro filho mencionado de Assur, da tribo de Judá, com a sua esposa Naará. — 1Cr 4:5, 6; 2:3-5, 24.

AVA. Cidade na Síria setentrional, sob controle da Assíria no oitavo século AEC. Aparentemente é a mesma que Iva. — 2Rs 17:24; 18:34; 19:13; Is 37:13; veja IVA.

ÁVEN.

1. Áven aparece no texto hebraico massorético em Ezequiel 30:17 e é assim vertido na versão Almeida (revista e corrigida). Muitas traduções modernas rezam aqui "Om", a cidade do Egito chamada Heliópolis pelos gregos. As consoantes hebraicas para Áven são as mesmas que para Om, mas a pontuação vocálica é diferente. Alguns comentários sugerem que a mudança na pontuação vocálica foi um deliberado jogo de palavras para expressar desprezo pela cidade idólatra de Om, centro da adoração do sol no Egito. — Veja OM N.º 2. [2, 3: Prejuízo; Algo Prejudicial.]

2. Em Oseias 10:8, Áven aparece no texto hebraico evidentemente como abreviação de Bete-Áven. — Compare isso com Os 4:15; 5:8; 10:5; veja BETE-ÁVEN N.º 2.

3. Amós 1:5 refere-se ao "vale plano de Áven", e esta expressão, do hebraico, é vertida por "Bicate-Áven" na NM, Al e BJ (com grafia variada). — Veja BICATE-ÁVEN.

AVENTAL. A palavra grega si·mi·kín·thi·on denota algo que cinge parcialmente o corpo, uma envoltura estreita cingindo metade do corpo. (At 19:12) Parece ter sido atado em volta da cintura para cobrir parte do corpo até certo ponto abaixo da cintura. Talvez fosse usado para proteger outras vestes, possivelmente por profissionais, tais como pescadores, oleiros, carregadores de água, merceeiros, padeiros e carpinteiros. O éfode dos sacerdotes era bem diferente, sendo uma veste tipo avental, pendente dos ombros, com frente e costas. — Êx 28:6-8; veja SUMO SACERDOTE.

A palavra grega traduzida por 'pôr o avental' (pe·ri·zón·ny·mai), em Lucas 17:8, significa literalmente 'cingir-se'. — Veja Ef 6:14.

AVES.

1. O termo hebraico ('ohf), derivado do verbo "voar", aplicava-se a todas as criaturas aladas ou voadoras. (Gên 1:20-22) G. R. Driver disse que 'ohf "parece representar a batida rítmica das asas contra o ar e o deslocamento deste". (Palestine Exploration Quarterly [Revista Trimestral sobre a Exploração da Palestina], Londres, 1955, p. 5) O termo não somente abrangia todas as aves (Gên 9:10; Le 1:14; 7:26), inclusive codornizes (Sal 78:27; compare isso com Êx 16:13) e também aves necrófagas (1Sa 17:44, 46; 2Sa 21:10), mas também podia ser aplicado aos insetos alados, que estão incluídos entre as "pululantes [hebr.: shé·rets]" criaturas aladas. — Le 11:20-23; De 14:19; veja CRIATURA PULULANTE.

A expressão "aves cevadas" em 1 Reis 4:23, em Al e CBC, é considerada sob CUCO.

2. As aves são vertebrados peníferos, de sangue quente, e são ovíparas, isto é, põem ovos. Há cerca de 300 referências a aves na Bíblia, sendo citadas especificamente cerca de 30 variedades diferentes. Faz-se referência ao seu voo, frequentemente ao escaparem dos seus inimigos (Sal 11:1; Pr 26:2; 27:8; Is 31:5; Os 9:11); ao empoleirar-se em árvores (Sal 104:12; Mt 13:32); à sua nidificação (Sal 84:3; Ez 31:6); a seus vários usos, especialmente de pombos e rolas novos em sacrifício (Le 1:14; 14:4-7, 49-53), e como alimento (Ne 5:18), inclusive seus ovos (Is 10:14; Lu 11:11, 12); e à provisão de Deus e seu cuidado com elas (Mt 6:26; 10:29; compare isso com Deuteronômio 22:6, 7).

As aves estavam entre as primeiras almas vivas na terra, vindo à existência no quinto "dia" criativo, junto com as criaturas marinhas. (Gên 1:20-23) Na Bíblia, dentre os termos gerais usados para aves, a palavra hebraica mais frequente é 'ohf, que basicamente significa "criatura voadora" (Gên 1:20), podendo incluir não somente aves, mas também insetos alados. (Veja Le 11:13, 21-23.) A palavra hebraica tsip·póhr também ocorre em grande número de textos e é um termo genérico que se aplica a aves em geral. (Gên 7:14) Um terceiro termo hebraico, 'á·yit, é aplicado exclusivamente a aves de rapina.

Os seguintes termos são encontrados nas Escrituras Gregas: ór·ne·on, que significa simplesmente "ave" (Re 18:2); pe·tei·nón e pte·nós, que ambos significam literalmente "voador". (Ro 1:23; 1Co 15:39; veja Int.) Em Atos 17:18, filósofos atenienses chamaram o apóstolo Paulo de "paroleiro". A palavra grega aqui (sper·mo·ló·gos) era aplicada a uma ave que apanhava sementes, sendo figurativamente aplicada a uma pessoa que apanhava sobras por mendigar ou furtar, ou, como no caso citado, a alguém que repetia migalhas de conhecimento, um ocioso tagarela.

Um estudo cuidadoso das aves fornece prova convincente do ensino bíblico de que elas são de criação divina. Embora tanto as aves como os répteis sejam ovíparos, os répteis são de sangue frio, sendo com frequência vagarosos, ao passo que as aves são de sangue quente e estão entre as mais ativas de todas as criaturas da terra; elas têm também uma pulsação incomumente rápida. O conceito evolucionista de que as escamas reptilianas e membros dianteiros por fim se desenvolveram em asas peníferas tanto é fantasioso como não tem base. Os fósseis de aves chamadas pelos cientistas de arqueópterix (ou: asa antiga) e arqueornite (ou: ave antiga), embora exibam dentes e uma longa cauda vertebrada, também mostram que estavam completamente cobertas de penas, tinham pés equipados para empoleirar-se, e tinham asas plenamente desenvolvidas. Não existem espécies intermediárias, com escamas transformando-se em penas, ou pés dianteiros em asas, para dar um aparente apoio à teoria da evolução. Conforme expressou o apóstolo Paulo, as aves são de "carne" diferente da de outras criaturas da terra. — 1Co 15:39.

O salmista concitou as "aves aladas" a louvar a Jeová (Sal 148:1, 10), e as aves fazem isto por sua própria estrutura e pela sua constituição complexa. Uma única ave pode ter de 1.000 a mais de 20.000 penas. Todavia, cada pena se compõe dum eixo, ou raque, do qual partem centenas de barbas que formam uma rede interna, cada barba contendo centenas de bárbulas menores, e cada bárbula tendo centenas de barbicelas e ganchos. Uma única pena de 15 cm, da asa de um pombo, contém assim, segundo se calcula, várias centenas de milhares de bárbulas e literalmente milhões de barbicelas. Os princípios aerodinâmicos implantados na estrutura das asas e do corpo das aves ultrapassam em complexidade e eficácia os duma aeronave moderna. Os ossos ocos da ave contribuem para sua leveza, e, assim, o esqueleto dum alcatraz ou fragata, com mais de 2 m de envergadura das asas, talvez pese apenas uns 110 gramas. Certos ossos das asas de grandes aves planadoras até mesmo possuem suportes semelhantes a tirantes dentro das partes ocas, como as nervuras dentro das asas dos aviões.

No tempo do Dilúvio, Noé introduziu na arca, para preservação, pares de aves "segundo as suas espécies". (Gên 6:7, 20; 7:3, 23) Não existe nenhum meio seguro de se saber quantas "espécies" diferentes de aves existiam então, visto que alguns tipos de aves ficaram extintos até mesmo nos tempos recentes. No entanto, é interessante notar que a lista das aves, conforme a atual classificação científica, apresentada em The New Encyclopædia Britannica (A Nova Enciclopédia Britânica, 1985, Vol. 15, pp. 14-106), fornece um total de apenas 221 "famílias" de aves, inclusive algumas já extintas ou que só são conhecidas em forma de fósseis. Naturalmente, há milhares de variedades incluídas nestas "famílias". — Veja ARCA N.º 1.

Após o Dilúvio global, Noé ofereceu "criaturas voadoras limpas", junto com animais, como sacrifício. (Gên 8:18-20) Depois disso, Deus fez a concessão de as aves serem incluídas na dieta do homem, conquanto não se comesse sangue. (Gên 9:1-4; compare isso com Le 7:26; 17:13.) A qualidade 'limpa' de certas aves naquele tempo, portanto, relacionava-se evidentemente com algum indício divino de aceitação como sacrifício; o registro bíblico mostra que, quanto a serem usadas qual alimento, nenhuma ave foi designada "impura" até a introdução da Lei mosaica. (Le 11:13-19, 46, 47; 20:25; De 14:11-20) Os fatores que determinavam quais as aves que eram designadas cerimonialmente "impuras" não são expressamente declarados na Bíblia. Assim, ao passo que a maioria das assim designadas eram aves de rapina ou necrófagas, nem todas elas o eram. (Veja POUPA.) Tal proibição foi levantada depois do estabelecimento do novo pacto, conforme Deus tornou evidente para Pedro mediante uma visão. — At 10:9-15.

A identificação das aves especificamente citadas na Bíblia representa em alguns casos um problema difícil. Os lexicógrafos em geral se guiam pelo significado básico do nome, visto que este é usualmente descritivo, pelas indicações do contexto quanto aos hábitos e ao habitat da ave, e pela observação das aves conhecidas como existentes nas terras bíblicas. Em muitos casos, crê-se que os nomes sejam onomatopeicos, isto é, imitam o som produzido pela ave.

A diversificada topografia da Palestina, desde os frescos cumes das montanhas até os fundos vales abafados, e desde os áridos desertos até as planícies marítimas, tudo junto nas proximidades do canto SE do mar Mediterrâneo, torna-a o ponto focal para uma grande variedade de tipos de aves. O monte Hermom, no N, tem o pico coberto de neve na maior parte do ano, ao passo que a região a uns 200 km ao S, ao longo do vale inferior do Jordão e perto do Mar Morto, é quente e tropical. Cada uma destas zonas contém aves peculiares do próprio meio ambiente, quer alpino, quer tropical, como se dá também com as zonas temperadas e as regiões desérticas. (Sal 102:6; 104:16, 17) Adicionalmente, a Palestina é uma das principais rotas migratórias, seguida anualmente por aves (cegonhas, rolas, codornizes, andorinhões, andorinhas, bulbuis, cucos e outras) que na primavera vão da África para o N, ou no outono setentrional da Europa e da Ásia para o S. (Cân 2:11, 12; Je 8:7) Calcula-se assim que se podem encontrar cerca de 470 variedades de aves na Palestina em algum tempo no decorrer do ano. Em vista da deterioração das florestas e da vegetação palestinas no decorrer dos séculos, é provável que, nos tempos bíblicos, a população de aves fosse ainda maior.

Especialmente notável é o grande número de aves de rapina (hebr.: 'á·yit) encontrado na Palestina, inclusive águias, gaviões, falcões, milhafres e abutres. Lá no tempo de Abraão, aves de rapina tentaram descer sobre o sacrifício que Abraão fez de alguns animais e aves, obrigando-o a enxotá-las até que o sol começou a pôr-se. (Gên 15:9-12; compare isso com 2Sa 21:10.) Na sua busca de alimentos, essas aves se guiam mais pela sua aguçada vista telescópica, do que pelo seu relativamente fraco sentido do olfato.

A bem conhecida vista de várias aves necrófagas em torno dum cadáver muitas vezes serviu de base para um ominoso aviso dado a um inimigo (1Sa 17:44, 46), e repetidas vezes fazia parte de avisos proféticos, divinamente inspirados, dados à nação de Israel e seus governantes (De 28:26; 1Rs 14:11; 21:24; Je 7:33; 15:3), bem como a nações estrangeiras. (Is 18:1, 6; Ez 29:5; 32:4) Neste respeito, aquele a quem Jeová usava para executar o julgamento era figurativamente representado por uma "ave de rapina". (Is 46:11) A desolação duma cidade ou duma terra era retratada por ela se tornar o habitat de certas aves de natureza solitária (Is 13:19-21; compare isso com Re 18:2) ou pelo desaparecimento de todas as aves. (Je 4:25-27; 9:10; 12:4; Os 4:3; Sof 1:3) A convocação de todas as aves para se banquetearem dos cadáveres de Gogue de Magogue e sua massa de gente (Ez 39:1-4, 17-21) é paralela à registrada em Revelação, em que os cadáveres de governantes nacionais e seus exércitos se tornam alimento para "todas as aves que voam pelo meio do céu", em resultado da execução feita por Cristo Jesus, como Rei. — Re 19:11-21; contraste isso com as palavras consoladoras de Deus dirigidas ao seu povo, em Os 2:18-20.

A adoração de aves, como representando o verdadeiro Deus, era proibida à nação de Israel (De 4:15-17), mas tinha destaque entre as nações pagãs, especialmente o Egito. (Ro 1:23) Centenas de múmias de aves foram encontradas em túmulos egípcios, principalmente de aves tais como o falcão, o abutre e o íbis, todos considerados sagrados entre os egípcios. Os hieróglifos egípcios contêm uns 22 sinais diferentes para aves.

AVESTRUZ [hebr.: bath hai·ya·ʽanáh; rena·ním (plural)]. Entende-se que o primeiro destes nomes hebraicos significa, quer "filha do ganancioso", quer "filha do solo árido", termos que podem aptamente ser aplicados à avestruz. O segundo nome, considerado como indicando uma "ave de gritos lancinantes", também se ajusta à avestruz, cujo grito é descrito como um "grito rouco, lamuriento, que tem sido assemelhado ao rugido dum leão". — The Smithsonian Series (A Série Smithsoniana), 1944, Vol. 9, p. 105; compare isso com Miq 1:8.

A avestruz (Struthio camelus) é a maior ave viva conhecida, chegando às vezes a atingir mais de 2 m de altura no alto da cabeça, e a pesar até 140 kg. A cabeça é um tanto pequena e achatada, com olhos enormes, o pescoço flexível tem cerca de 1 m de comprimento, e, assim como as robustas pernas, tanto a cabeça como o pescoço são desprovidos de penas. A plumagem do corpo, porém, é abundante, sendo as plumas longas e macias das asas e da cauda muito valorizadas nos tempos antigos e modernos. A plumagem lustrosa, preta e branca, do macho se contrasta com a de cor castanho-acinzentada, opaca, da fêmea. A avestruz é ímpar entre as aves por não ter senão dois dedos em cada pé, um deles dotado de um casco em forma de unha, que se torna uma perigosa arma quando a ave se vê forçada a defender-se. Sua altura e sua visão aguçada, porém, usualmente a habilitam a identificar de longe seus inimigos, e então a enorme ave se afasta cautelosamente.

Ao passo que a avestruz se alimenta principalmente de vegetação, é também carnívora, incluindo cobras, lagartos e até pequenas aves, em sua alimentação indiscriminada. É encontrada na lista das aves 'impuras', proibidas pela Lei mosaica. (Le 11:13, 16; De 14:12, 15) Conhecida antigamente como ave-camelo, a avestruz consegue suportar longos períodos sem água, e, por isso, viceja em terras ermas e isoladas. É usada na Bíblia, junto com os chacais e criaturas similares, como representativa da vida desértica (Is 43:20), e para representar a desolação desastrosa que se tornou o quinhão de Edom e de Babilônia. (Is 13:21; 34:13; Je 50:39) Jó, rejeitado e detestado, sentado no meio de cinzas, e clamando lamuriosamente, considerou-se "irmão de chacais" e 'companheiro das filhas da avestruz'. — Jó 30:29.

Contrastada com a Cegonha. Jeová Deus, mais tarde, trouxe a avestruz à atenção de Jó, e as coisas que Ele indicou ilustram vividamente algumas das características incomuns dessa ave. (Jó 39:13-18) Em grande contraste com as cegonhas que voam alto e planam majestosamente com suas poderosas asas amplas, a avestruz não voa; suas asas são incapazes de sustentar o peso da ave, seu esterno achatado não dispõe da "quilha" que sustente os músculos de voo das aves voadoras. As plumas da avestruz, embora lindas, não possuem sequer os diminutos filamentos ou ganchos das bárbulas que se unem e dão às penas das aves voadoras a resistência ao ar, que torna possível o voo. — Jó 39:13.

Novamente, em contraste com a cegonha, que constrói firmemente seu grande ninho no topo das árvores (Sal 104:17), de prédios ou de rochas elevadas, a avestruz simplesmente cava um buraco raso no chão, cercado por um baixo aterro. Ali a fêmea põe os ovos, que pesam cerca de 1,5 kg cada um, e, visto que o macho muitas vezes é polígamo (diferente da cegonha, renomada por sua fidelidade a um só companheiro), é possível que haja um bom número de ovos postos no ninho por duas ou três fêmeas. O macho aquece os ovos do ninho durante a noite, e a fêmea os incuba durante o dia, mas sabe-se que, quando o sol está muito quente, ela abandona o ninho por certos períodos durante o dia. Em tais ocasiões, embora os ovos possuam casca bem grossa, ficam vulneráveis a danos ou a roubo por parte de animais ou do homem. — Jó 39:14, 15.

'Trata Rudemente os Filhotes.' Alguns têm objetado à declaração de que a avestruz "trata rudemente os seus filhotes, como se não fossem seus" (Jó 39:16) e à referência às avestruzes como 'cruéis' com suas crias (La 4:3), afirmando que os pais e mães avestruzes são bem solícitos em cuidar de seus filhotes. Embora seja verdade que o termo hebraico (rena·ním), usado em Jó 39:13, pode aplicar-se gramaticalmente quer a avestruzes machos quer às fêmeas, alguns lexicógrafos entendem que ele se refere às fêmeas. Este parece ser o caso, em vista da ligação com os ovos postos, obviamente, pela fêmea. Entendendo-se que o texto se aplica desse modo, então, certamente existe boa base para esta expressão poética relativa à 'crueldade' da ave, em vista do fato de que, depois que os filhotes saem da casca, o macho "assume todo o cuidado deles, ao passo que as fêmeas geralmente somem juntas". (All the Birds of the Bible [Todas as Aves da Bíblia], Alice Parmelee, 1959, p. 207) Também é verdade que estas robustas aves, tanto os machos como as fêmeas, abandonam rapidamente o ninho e seus filhotes quando pressentem um perigo, e, embora talvez usem táticas diversivas para afastar os inimigos do ninho, isto ainda é um tratamento 'rude' dispensado aos filhotes desprotegidos. Apenas a coloração protetora, dada pelo Criador, é o que talvez salve os filhotes indefesos e abandonados, fazendo com que os animais inimigos os despercebam e corram atrás dos pais em fuga. Pode-se chamar corretamente a avestruz de "cruel", então, quando comparada com muitas outras aves, e, especialmente, em contraste com a cegonha, cuja atenção afetuosa e preocupação constante com seus filhotes é proverbial.

'Esquece a Sabedoria.' Diz-se que a avestruz 'esquece a sabedoria' e 'não compartilha a compreensão'. (Jó 39:17) Observadores modernos reconhecem isto. Os árabes têm um ditado: "Mais tolo do que uma avestruz." (Soncino Books of the Bible [Livros da Bíblia, de Soncino], editado por A. Cohen, Londres, 1946, Jó, p. 205) A avestruz tende a correr numa grande curva, que permite que seus perseguidores a cerquem, se forem em número suficiente. Mas numa corrida em linha reta, as fortes pernas da avestruz a habilitam a 'rir-se do cavalo e do seu cavaleiro'. (Jó 39:18) Na corrida, suas passadas chegam a cobrir até 3,5 m de cada vez, e sua velocidade pode atingir até 70 km/h. As suas asas, inúteis para o voo, ajudam todavia a dar equilíbrio ao corpo pesado da ave, enquanto ela corre.

A avestruz tem certas características de que se diz que desconcertam os cientistas, os quais tendem a classificar a avestruz entre as 'inferiores ou mais primitivas' aves vivas. Possui uma bexiga que acumula ácido úrico, órgão característico dos mamíferos, mas não possuído por qualquer outra família de aves. Possui também pestanas que lhe protegem os olhos contra a areia soprada pelo vento. Assim, embora tenha pouca inteligência, a forte e veloz avestruz dá crédito à sabedoria do seu Criador.

A avestruz árabe (Struthio camelus syriacus), antigamente abundante na Palestina e na Arábia, está agora extinta. Desde 1973, reintroduziu-se em Israel uma variedade africana aparentada.

AVIDEZ. Veja GANÂNCIA.

AVIM. Uma cidade de Benjamim, alistada entre Betel e Pará, em Josué 18:21-23. Talvez fosse povoada por membros remanescentes da tribo dos avins. Ela é identificada com Khirbet Haiyan (Horvat Hayan), a uns 4 km a ESE de Betel (Beitin), segundo F.-M. Abel. — Géographie de la Palestine (Geografia da Palestina), Paris, 1938, Vol. II, p. 257.

AVINS. Primitivos colonizadores da parte da terra de Canaã que se estendia para o O em direção a Gaza. Quarenta anos depois do Êxodo, Moisés contou que esses avins, na maior parte, tinham sido desapossados pelos caftorins. (De 2:23) Pouco antes da morte de Josué, aproximadamente em meados do século 15 AEC, ainda existia um restante dos avins. — Jos 13:1, 3.

AVITAS. Habitantes de Ava, que estavam entre os povos usados pelos assírios para substituir os israelitas exilados, após a captura de Samaria em 740 AEC. (2Rs 17:24) Todos estes habitantes transplantados passaram a ser conhecidos como samaritanos. Os avitas, embora até certo ponto aprendessem a temer a Jeová, não obstante, fizeram e adoraram os deuses Nibaz e Tartaque. — 2Rs 17:29-33; veja AVA.

AVITE. A cidade real ou a residência de Hadade, quarto rei dos edomitas, que derrotou os midianitas em batalha. (Gên 36:35; 1Cr 1:46) Um lugar sugerido é Khirbet el-Jiththeh, situada no antigo território edomita entre Maʽan e Khirbet el-Bastah, a cerca de 100 km ao SSE do Mar Morto. O monte do mesmo nome (Jebel el-Jiththeh) eleva-se ali a 1.332 m.

AVÓS. Os pais do pai e/ou da mãe da pessoa. O termo "avós", bem como "avô" e "avó", raramente é encontrado nas traduções da Bíblia. "Avó", em 1 Reis 15:10, 13, traduz a mesma palavra para "mãe", e isso apropriadamente, visto que Maacá era avó de Asa, não sua mãe. (1Rs 15:1, 2, 8) Parece que Maacá continuou sendo a rainha-mãe durante o reinado de Asa, até ser removida por causa da sua idolatria. (1Rs 15:13) Correspondentemente, "pai" indicava às vezes um avô ou um antepassado. (Gên 28:13; 2Sa 9:7) Os avós são também identificados por expressões tais como "pai de tua mãe" e "pai de sua mãe". — Gên 28:2; Jz 9:1.

Os "filhos ou netos", diz o apóstolo, devem "estar pagando a devida compensação aos seus pais e avós [gr.: pro·gó·nois]". (1Ti 5:4) Outra forma da mesma palavra (pro·gó·non) é traduzida "antepassados" em 2 Timóteo 1:3. A avó (gr.: mám·me) de Timóteo, Loide, é elogiada por ter 'fé sem hipocrisia', e ela, pelo que parece, ajudou no desenvolvimento da fé e no crescimento espiritual de Timóteo. — 2Ti 1:5; 3:14, 15.

AVREQUE. O termo de honra e dignidade proclamado diante do carro de José, depois de Faraó o ter tornado o segundo no reino. (Gên 41:43) Se for de origem hebraica, como conjecturava Áquila, antigo tradutor, e conforme apoiado pela Vulgata latina, poderia significar "ajoelhai", e é assim traduzido em muitas versões. (Al; CBC; IBB) No entanto, este conceito é rejeitado por muitos em favor de palavras similares em outras línguas. Por exemplo, alguns acham que pode ser um título babilônico ou assírio de um alto oficial, significando "vidente" ou "grão-vizir". Alguns se voltam para o copta e dizem que significa "curvai a cabeça"; outros observam que os árabes dizem algo similar, ao ordenar a seus camelos que se ajoelhem. A Pesito siríaca reza: "Pai e Governante!" Outros investigadores acreditam que seja estritamente egípcio. Orígenes, natural do Egito, e Jerônimo achavam que significa "um natural egípcio", e por causa do desprezo que os egípcios tinham pelos estrangeiros, eles argumentam que se tratava duma proclamação pública de naturalização. Uma expressão similar, que apareceu num papiro encontrado, significa 'seu mandamento é objeto de nosso desejo', quer dizer, 'estamos a seu dispor'. — The Life and Times of Joseph in the Light of Egyption Lore (A Vida e os Tempos de José à Luz do Conhecimento Egípcio), de H. Tomkins, Londres, 1891, pp. 49, 50.

O significado exato desta expressão, portanto, ainda não foi determinado, motivo de algumas versões não a traduzirem. (BJ, PIB) Este costume não hebraico, de fazer uma aclamação pública perante alguém honrado, ao passo que este percorria de carro a cidade, também encontra um exemplo em Ester 6:11, quando Mordecai foi publicamente honrado às ordens do rei persa Assuero.

AXERÁ. Veja POSTE SAGRADO.

AZÃ [duma raiz que significa "forte"]. Pai de Paltiel, escolhido por Jeová para representar a tribo de Issacar na divisão da Terra da Promessa. — Núm 34:26, 29.

AZAI [forma abreviada de Acazias, que significa "Jeová se Apoderou"]. Filho de Mesilemote e antepassado de certos sacerdotes em Jerusalém após o exílio babilônico. (Ne 11:13) Alguns acreditam que seja o Jazera alistado em 1 Crônicas 9:12.

AZALIAS [Jeová Mostrou-se Distinto]. Filho de Mesulão e pai de Safã, secretário do Rei Josias. — 2Rs 22:3; 2Cr 34:8.

AZANIAS [Jah Deu Ouvido]. Pai do levita Jesua. — Ne 10:9.

AZAREL [Deus Ajudou].

1. Um dos homens poderosos que se juntaram a Davi em Ziclague. — 1Cr 12:1, 6.

2. Chefe da 11.ª das 24 turmas de cantores do templo no tempo de Davi; também chamado Uziel. — 1Cr 25:1, 4, 18.

3. Filho de Jeroão e príncipe da tribo de Dã, sob o governo de Davi. — 1Cr 27:22; 28:1.

4. Um dos descendentes de Binui, os quais, às instâncias de Esdras, despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e seus filhos. — Esd 10:19, 38-41, 44.

5. Pai ou antepassado de Amassai, que morava em Jerusalém sob o governador Neemias. Ele era da casa sacerdotal de Imer. — Ne 11:1, 13.

6. Músico no cortejo encabeçado por Esdras, ao percorrerem o alto da muralha reconstruída de Jerusalém na sua inauguração. Talvez o N.º 5 acima. — Ne 12:31, 36.

AZARIAS [Jeová Ajudou].

1. Descendente de Judá por Tamar; da casa de Etã. — 1Cr 2:4, 6, 8.

2. Levita descendente de Coate; filho de Sofonias e antepassado do profeta Samuel. — 1Cr 6:33, 36.

3. Descendente de Arão, na linhagem de Eleazar; filho de Aimaás. — 1Cr 6:9.

4. Um dos príncipes de Salomão. (1Rs 4:2) Ele é chamado de filho do sacerdote Zadoque; pode ter sido o irmão de Aimaás. — 1Cr 6:8.

5. Filho de Natã; príncipe designado por Salomão como chefe dos 12 prepostos que supriam a casa de Salomão de alimentos. — 1Rs 4:5, 7, 19.

6. Um profeta, filho de Odede, que ajudou a estimular Asa, em 963 AEC, a 'buscar a Jeová'. Em resultado disso, o rei removeu "as coisas repugnantes" de todo o país e introduziu o povo num pacto juramentado, no sentido de que "fosse morto todo aquele que não buscasse a Jeová, o Deus de Israel". — 2Cr 15:1-15.

7, 8. Dois dos sete filhos de Jeosafá, alistados em segundo e em quinto lugar. Receberam de seu pai muitas dádivas e cidades fortificadas, mas, quando o irmão mais velho deles, Jeorão, tornou-se rei, esses filhos foram mortos. (2Cr 21:1-4) "Parece ilógico supor [como alguns fizeram] que o nome tenha sido usado duas vezes porque os meninos eram apenas meios-irmãos ou porque um já tinha falecido na infância." (The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible [O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete], editado por G. A. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 1, p. 325) É incomum que dois irmãos tenham aparentemente o mesmo nome, mas, no hebraico, há uma ligeira diferença na grafia e na pronúncia dos dois, 'Azar·yáh ("Jah Ajudou") e 'Azar·yá·hu ("Jeová Ajudou").

9. Filho de certo Jeú e pai de Helez; da tribo de Judá, sete gerações afastado do seu antepassado egípcio, Jara. — 1Cr 2:3, 34-39.

10. Rei de Judá, filho mais jovem de Jeorão e Atalia; foi também chamado Jeoacaz e Acazias. — 2Rs 8:25-29; 2Cr 21:17; 22:1, 6; veja ACAZIAS N.º 2.

11. Filho de Jeroão. Um dos cinco chefes de cem, que ajudaram a derrubar a usurpadora Atalia e a colocar Jeoás no trono de Judá, em 898 AEC. — 2Cr 23:1-15.

12. Filho de Obede. Um dos cinco chefes de cem, que ajudaram a entronizar Jeoás em lugar da usurpadora Atalia, em 898 AEC. — 2Cr 23:1-15.

13. Rei de Judá por 52 anos (829-778 AEC). Filho de Amazias e de Jecolia. (2Rs 14:21; 15:1, 2) Ele é chamado Uzias em 2 Reis 15:13. — Veja UZIAS N.º 3.

14. Sumo sacerdote, filho de Joanã, descendente de Arão. (1Cr 6:1-10) Quando o Rei Uzias tentou presunçosamente oferecer incenso no templo, talvez tenha sido este Azarias que o mandou sair, e, quando ele resistiu, Jeová golpeou o rei com lepra. (2Cr 26:16-21) Cerca de três décadas após a morte de Uzias, no primeiro ano do reinado de Ezequias (745 AEC), Azarias, ainda servindo como sumo sacerdote (ou outro com o mesmo nome), reconheceu a bênção de Jeová sobre as reformas do rei. — 2Cr 31:9, 10, 13.

15. Príncipe de Efraim, filho de Jeoanã. Depois de derrotar Judá em meados do oitavo século AEC, Israel levava de volta 200.000 cativos, quando Azarias e outros príncipes de Efraim conseguiram sua soltura e ajudaram materialmente no retorno deles. — 2Cr 28:5-15.

16. Descendente de Levi através de Coate, cujo filho Joel ajudou a limpar o templo às ordens de Ezequias, em 745 AEC. — 2Cr 29:1-12, 15.

17. Descendente de Levi através de Merari; filho de Jealelel; um daqueles que participaram na limpeza do templo ordenada por Ezequias. — 2Cr 29:1-12, 15.

18. Filho de Meraiote; antepassado de Esdras. — Esd 7:3.

19. Filho de Hilquias, sumo sacerdote sob Josias e pai de Seraías (2Rs 22:3, 4; 1Cr 6:13, 14); antepassado de Esdras, o copista. — Esd 7:1.

20. Filho de Osaías. (Je 43:2) Ele é também chamado de Jezanias (Je 40:8; 42:1) e de Jaazanias (2Rs 25:23). Azarias foi um dos chefes das forças militares que apoiaram Gedalias (Je 40:7-10); um daqueles que pediu que Jeremias orasse a favor deles em busca de orientação (Je 42:1-3); e, finalmente, um dos "homens presunçosos" que repudiaram a resposta de Jeová pela boca de Jeremias. — Je 43:1-3.

21. Um dos jovens hebreus levados cativos a Babilônia em 617 AEC, cujo nome foi mudado para Abednego, provavelmente significando "Servo de Nebo [deus babilônio]". (Da 1:3-7) Depois de um curso de treinamento especial de três anos, Azarias e seus companheiros, (Daniel, Hananias, Misael) foram achados "dez vezes melhores do que todos os sacerdotes-magos e os conjuradores" de Babilônia. (Da 1:5, 14-20) Primeiro ameaçado de morte (Da 2:13-18), depois promovido ao cargo de administrador (Da 2:49), Azarias teve a sua prova máxima de lealdade a Jeová quando foi lançado numa fornalha superaquecida por se negar a adorar a imagem erguida por Nabucodonosor. (Da 3:12-30) Era deveras homem de fé, a quem o apóstolo Paulo aludiu como um dos que "pararam a força do fogo". — He 11:34.

22. Um daqueles que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC, após o exílio em Babilônia. (Ne 7:6, 7) É chamado de Seraías em Esdras 2:2.

23. Um dos sacerdotes que viveram em Jerusalém depois do exílio. (1Cr 9:11) Numa lista paralela (Ne 11:11), o nome é Seraías. Possivelmente trata-se do N.º 22 acima.

24. Filho de Maaseias, filho de Ananias. Sob a supervisão de Neemias, ele consertou uma seção da muralha de Jerusalém perto da sua casa, em 455 AEC. — Ne 3:23, 24.

25. Um dos designados por Neemias a andar com Esdras e outros no cortejo sobre a muralha reconstruída de Jerusalém na sua inauguração; talvez seja o N.º 27. — Ne 12:31-36.

26. Um dos 13 levitas que ajudaram Esdras em explicar a Lei à medida que era lida para o povo. — Ne 8:7, 8.

27. Sacerdote, ou antepassado de um, o qual, nos dias do governador Neemias, atestou com selo o "arranjo fidedigno". — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 2, 8.

AZAZ [forma abreviada de Azazias]. Descendente do primogênito de Jacó, Rubem. — 1Cr 5:1, 8.

AZAZEL [Bode Que Desaparece]. A palavra "Azazel" ocorre quatro vezes na Bíblia, nos regulamentos relativos ao Dia da Expiação. — Le 16:8, 10, 26.

É controversial a etimologia desta palavra. Se nos apegarmos à grafia contida no texto massorético hebraico, então 'aza'·zél parece ser uma combinação de dois radicais que significam "bode" e "desaparecer". Daí o significado de "Bode Que Desaparece". Segundo outra derivação, baseada na crença de que tenha havido a transposição de duas consoantes, significa "Força de Deus". A Vulgata latina verte a palavra hebraica por caper emissarius, isto é, "bode emissário" ou "bode expiatório". E a expressão grega usada na Septuaginta significa "aquele que leva embora (afasta) o mal".

Dois bodes (cabritinhos) eram obtidos da assembleia dos filhos de Israel pelo sumo sacerdote para uso no anual Dia da Expiação. Pelo lançamento de sortes, um bode era designado "para Jeová", e o outro "para Azazel". Depois de se sacrificar o novilho para o sumo sacerdote e sua casa (sem dúvida, incluindo todos os levitas), sacrificava-se o bode para Jeová como oferta pelo pecado. Todavia, o bode para Azazel era mantido vivo por algum tempo "perante Jeová para fazer expiação por ele, a fim de ser enviado ao ermo, para Azazel". (Le 16:5, 7-10) A expiação para este bode vivo procedia do sangue do bode para Jeová, bode que acabara de ser morto como oferta pelo pecado, visto que a vida da carne está no sangue. (Le 17:11) O valor do sangue, ou valor da vida, do bode morto era assim transferido para o bode vivo, ou o bode para Azazel. Assim, embora não fosse morto pelo sacerdote, este bode vivo levava sobre si um mérito expiatório de pecados ou um valor de vida. Ser ele apresentado perante Jeová evidentemente indica que este reconhecia tal transferência do mérito ou poder expiatório. Algo correspondente a isso era a maneira prescrita de purificação do israelita que ficara curado da lepra, ou a purificação duma casa curada desta praga. Neste caso, mergulhava-se uma ave viva no sangue duma ave que fora morta. Permitia-se então que a ave viva saísse voando, levando consigo o pecado. — Le 14:1-8, 49-53.

Ambos os bodes deviam ser imaculados, sadios e o mais parecidos possível entre si. Antes de se lançar a sorte sobre eles, ambos os bodes tinham a possibilidade de ser escolhidos como o bode para Jeová. Depois de sacrificar o bode para Jeová, o sumo sacerdote punha as mãos sobre a cabeça do bode vivo e confessava os pecados do povo sobre ele. Este bode era então mandado embora, sendo levado ao ermo por "um homem preparado". (Le 16:20-22) Deste modo, o bode para Azazel simbolicamente levava embora os pecados do povo, do ano que passou, desaparecendo com eles no ermo.

Os dois bodes eram classificados como uma só oferta pelo pecado. (Le 16:5) Evidentemente, usavam-se dois para dar ênfase ao que esta provisão realizava para expiar os pecados do povo. O primeiro bode era sacrificado. O segundo, sobre o qual se confessavam os pecados do povo e que era enviado para longe, no ermo, reforçava o perdão que Jeová concedia aos arrependidos. O Salmo 103:12 oferece esta certeza: "Tão longe como o nascente é do poente, tão longe pôs de nós as nossas transgressões."

Conforme explicou o apóstolo Paulo, por Jesus oferecer a sua própria vida humana perfeita pelos pecados da humanidade, ele realizou muito mais do que se conseguira com "o sangue de touros e de bodes". (He 10:4, 11, 12) Ele serviu assim de "bode expiatório", carregando "as nossas doenças", "sendo traspassado pela nossa transgressão". (Is 53:4, 5; Mt 8:17; 1Pe 2:24) Ele "carregou" os pecados de todos os que exercem fé no valor do seu sacrifício. Demonstrou a provisão de Deus, de acabar completamente com a pecaminosidade. Destas maneiras, o bode "para Azazel" retrata o sacrifício de Jesus Cristo.

AZAZIAS [Jeová Mostrou-se Superior em Força].

1. Um de seis harpistas no cortejo que levou a Arca do Pacto a Jerusalém. — 1Cr 15:21.

2. Pai de Oseias, o príncipe da tribo de Efraim no tempo de Davi. — 1Cr 27:16, 20, 22.

3. Um levita, um dos dez comissários designados pelo Rei Ezequias para trazer as contribuições à casa de Jeová. — 2Cr 31:12, 13.

AZBUQUE. Veja ASBUQUE.

AZECA [duma raiz que significa "cavar" [isto é, com enxada]]. Uma cidade na região da Sefelá, que guardava os limites superiores do vale de Elá. O lugar é identificado com Tell Zakariyeh (Tel 'Azeqa), a uns 26 km ao NO de Hébron.

A primeira menção da cidade ocorre em Josué 10:5-11, com respeito ao ataque coligado de cinco reis cananeus contra Gibeão. Josué e seu exército, vindo em socorro de Gibeão, perseguiram os exércitos cananeus "até Azeca e Maquedá", uma distância de cerca de 30 km. A cidade foi depois designada à tribo de Judá. — Jos 15:20, 35.

Durante o reinado do Rei Saul (1117-1078 AEC), os filisteus juntaram suas forças entre Socó e Azeca, apresentando Golias como seu campeão. Quando os israelitas chegaram, os dois exércitos se confrontaram em lados opostos do vale de Elá, até que a vitória de surpresa de Davi sobre Golias pôs em fuga os filisteus. — 1Sa 17:1-53.

Com a divisão da nação, depois da morte de Salomão (c. 998 AEC), o Rei Roboão, de Judá, fortificou Azeca, junto com Laquis e outras cidades estratégicas. (2Cr 11:5-10) Escavações feitas em Tell Zakariyeh revelam os restos de muros e torres, e a evidência duma cidadela fortificada no ponto mais alto desse lugar.

Quando as tropas babilônicas de Nabucodonosor invadiram o reino de Judá (609-607 AEC), Azeca e Laquis foram as duas últimas cidades fortificadas a cair, antes da derrota da própria Jerusalém. (Je 34:6, 7) A aparente confirmação disso foi revelada pela descoberta dos óstracos inscritos, chamados de Cartas de Laquis, um deles contendo a seguinte mensagem, evidentemente dirigida por um posto militar avançado ao comandante militar de Laquis, que reza, em parte: "estamos atentos aos sinais de Laquis, segundo todas as indicações que meu senhor deu, porque não podemos ver Azeca". (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. B. Pritchard, 1974, p. 322) Se, conforme parece ser o caso, esta carta foi escrita no tempo do ataque babilônico, indicaria que Azeca já havia caído, de modo que não se recebiam mais sinais dessa fortaleza.

Depois do período de setenta anos de desolação do país, Azeca foi uma das cidades repovoadas pelos exilados judeus que voltaram. — Ne 11:25, 30.

AZEDA, AZEDINHA. Qualquer dentre várias plantas da família das pligonáceas, que possuem sabor azedo devido à presença de ácido oxálico em suas suculentas folhas e hastes. As folhas radiculares (ou radicais) da azedinha (Rumex acetosella) crescem agrupadas. Tendo um formato de flecha na base, as folhas um tanto ovaladas têm cerca de 10 cm de comprimento. As hastes florais podem atingir a altura de cerca de 60 cm ou mais. Antigamente, os israelitas misturavam a azeda à forragem para seu gado bovino e seus jumentos. — Is 30:24.

AZEITE (ÓLEO). O líquido gorduroso com que os hebreus estavam mais familiarizados era o obtido de azeitonas. Azeitonas pretas, bem maduras, forneciam o máximo de azeite, embora as ainda verdes, que já começavam a mudar de cor, produzissem o azeite da melhor qualidade. Depois de os frutos serem cuidadosamente apanhados das árvores, e se separarem os raminhos e as folhas das azeitonas, estas eram levadas para o lagar.

A polpa da azeitona madura é constituída, em cerca da metade, de azeite, que varia em qualidade, conforme o método de processamento da polpa. O melhor azeite, chamado de "azeite puro de oliveira, batido", era produzido por um processo simples, antes de as azeitonas serem colocadas no lagar de azeite. (Le 24:2) Primeiro, as azeitonas eram colocadas num pilão e trituradas até ficarem bem amassadas, ou, às vezes, eram pisadas. (Miq 6:15) Em seguida, os frutos amassados eram transferidos para cestas coadoras, onde "sangrava" óleo até que se soltasse o azeite "virgem". O azeite puro, batido, era estocado em jarros de barro e a polpa era levada para o lagar, ou prensa, de azeite.

Um azeite de qualidade comum era preparado por triturar cabalmente as azeitonas em um pilão ou moinho manual. Depois que o azeite escorria da polpa, permitia-se sua clarificação em jarros ou tinas de barro.

O azeite da mais baixa qualidade era o extraído do bagaço, num lagar de azeite, depois da trituração. A massa triturada da polpa era compactada em cestos e empilhada entre as duas colunas verticais do lagar de azeite. Comprimia-se a pilha de cestos com uma alavanca com peso, para retirar o azeite sob pressão, sendo ele então canalizado para grandes reservatórios, para clarificação. Ali o azeite subia à tona, separando-se dos pedacinhos de polpa e da água abaixo dele, antes de ser decantado e colocado em grandes jarros de barro ou em cisternas especiais para estocagem. — Compare isso com 2Cr 32:27, 28; veja LAGAR.

Símbolo de Prosperidade. Indicava-se grande prosperidade com a referência a 'tanques de lagar transbordantes de azeite'. (Jl 2:24) O sofredor Jó ansiava os dias anteriores de abundância, quando "a rocha despejava correntes de azeite" para ele. (Jó 29:1, 2, 6) Jeová fez com que "Jacó", ou os israelitas, sugassem figuradamente "azeite duma rocha de pederneira", pelo que parece, de oliveiras que cresciam em terreno rochoso. (De 32:9, 13) Moisés declarou que Aser tornar-se-ia "alguém que mergulha seu pé em azeite", indicando que esta tribo usufruiria bênçãos materiais. — De 33:24.

Importante Mercadoria e Alimento. O azeite de oliva tornou-se mercadoria importante na Palestina, por causa da sua abundância ali. Anualmente, Salomão dava ao Rei Hirão, de Tiro, "vinte coros [4.400 l] de azeite batido", como parte do pagamento dos materiais de construção do templo. (1Rs 5:10, 11) Judá e Israel eram, certa vez, "negociantes" com Tiro para o azeite. (Ez 27:2, 17) Óleo perfumado e azeite de oliva acham-se também entre os itens comprados dos "comerciantes viajantes" da terra pela mística Babilônia, a Grande. — Re 18:11-13.

O azeite de oliva, alimento de alto teor energético e uma das gorduras mais digeríveis, era um dos principais itens de alimentação dos israelitas, provavelmente, em muitos casos, ocupava o lugar da manteiga à mesa e também tinha fins culinários.

(De 7:13; Je 41:8; Ez 16:13) Era um combustível comum das lâmpadas (Mt 25:1-9), e queimava-se "azeite puro de oliveira, batido", nas lâmpadas do candelabro de ouro da tenda de reunião. (Êx 27:20, 21; 25:31, 37) Usava-se o azeite em conexão com as ofertas de cereais apresentadas a Jeová. (Le 2:1-7) Como cosmético, era passado no corpo após o banho. (Ru 3:3; 2Sa 12:20) Considerava-se um ato hospitaleiro untar com óleo a cabeça de hóspedes. (Lu 7:44-46) Empregava-se também o óleo para suavizar e mitigar contusões e ferimentos (Is 1:6), às vezes junto com vinho. — Lu 10:33, 34.

Uso e Significado Religiosos. Jeová ordenou a Moisés que preparasse um "óleo de santa unção", que continha azeite de oliva e outros ingredientes. Com ele, Moisés ungiu o tabernáculo, a Arca do Testemunho, os vários utensílios do santuário, e o mobiliário deste. Moisés também o usou para ungir Arão e seus filhos, a fim de santificá-los como sacerdotes para Jeová. (Êx 30:22-33; Le 8:10-12) Ungiam-se os reis com óleo, como quando Samuel, ao ungir Saul, "tomou . . . o frasco de óleo e o despejou sobre a sua cabeça". (1Sa 10:1) Um chifre de azeite foi usado para ungir Salomão. — 1Rs 1:39.

Predizendo os efeitos alegres do ministério terrestre de Jesus Cristo, disse-se que ele daria "aos que pranteiam por Sião . . . o óleo de exultação em vez de luto". (Is 61:1-3; Lu 4:16-21) Também foi profetizado que Jesus seria pessoalmente ungido por Jeová com o "óleo de exultação", mais do que seus associados, indicando que sentiria maior alegria do que seus predecessores da dinastia davídica. — Sal 45:7; He 1:8, 9; veja UNGIDO, UNÇÃO.

Assim como a aplicação de óleo literal à cabeça da pessoa é tranquilizante e refrescante, assim também é a aplicação da Palavra de Deus a uma pessoa espiritualmente enferma para tranquilizá-la, corrigi-la, consolá-la e curá-la. Neste respeito, os anciãos da congregação cristã são admoestados a orar a favor de tal homem, figuradamente "untando-o com óleo em nome de Jeová", uma medida essencial para conseguir a sua recuperação espiritual. — Tg 5:13-15; compare isso com Sal 141:5.

AZEL [Homem Distinto].

1. Descendente de Saul por meio de Jonatã; ele teve seis filhos. — 1Cr 8:33-38; 9:43, 44.

2. Lugar mencionado em Zacarias 14:5 como ponto até onde se estenderia o vale resultante da profetizada fenda no monte das Oliveiras. Portanto, deve referir-se a um lugar perto de Jerusalém, e talvez haja um reflexo do nome no uádi Yasul (Nahal Azal), que é afluente do vale do Cédron, desde o monte das Oliveiras.

AZGADE. Veja ASGADE.

AZIEL. Veja JAAZIEL.

AZIZA [[Alguém] Forte]. Um daqueles que, às instâncias de Esdras, despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e seus filhos. — Esd 10:27, 44.

AZMAVETE. Veja ASMAVETE.

AZMOM [Lugar de Ossos]. Um lugar que fazia parte da fronteira meridional da Terra da Promessa, entre Hazar-Adar e o vale da torrente do Egito. (Núm 34:3-5; Jos 15:1-4) Um lugar sugerido é o de ʽAin el-Qeseimeh, a mais de 13 km ao NO de Cades-Barneia. Existe neste lugar um pequeno manancial.

AZNOTE-TABOR. Uma cidade ou localidade na fronteira meridional do território de Naftali. (Jos 19:32, 34) Sugere-se como possível lugar Khirbet Umm Jebeil (Tel Govel), a uns 4,5 km ao N do cume do monte Tabor.

AZOR [do hebr.: significando "Alguém Que Oferece Ajuda"]. Antepassado pós-exílico do pai adotivo de Jesus, José. — Mt 1:13, 14, 16.

AZRICÃO [Minha Ajuda se Levantou].

1. Um dos seis filhos de Azel, descendente do Rei Saul por meio de Jonatã, da tribo de Benjamim. — 1Cr 8:33-38; 9:44.

2. "Líder dos da casa" do iníquo Rei Acaz, de Judá. Ele foi morto pelo efraimita Zicri, quando o Rei Peca, de Israel, lutou contra Judá. — 2Cr 28:6, 7.

3. Levita da família de Merari, cujo descendente Semaías morava em Jerusalém depois de retornar do exílio. — 1Cr 9:2, 14; Ne 11:15.

4. Terceiro filho alistado de Nearias, e descendente de Davi. — 1Cr 3:1, 23. Veja também HISQUIAS.

AZRIEL [Deus É Minha Ajuda].

1. Pai do príncipe Jerimote, da tribo de Naftali, no tempo de Davi. — 1Cr 27:19, 22.

2. Cabeça duma casa da meia tribo de Manassés ao L do Jordão, um dos "poderosos, valentes", permitindo-se que seus descendentes fossem levados ao exílio pelo rei assírio Tiglate-Pileser III, por terem passado a adorar deuses falsos. — 1Cr 5:23-26.

3. Pai de Seraías, que foi um dos três enviados para prender Baruque e Jeremias. — Je 36:26.

AZUBA [Completamente Abandonada; Rejeitada].

1. Uma das esposas de Calebe, filho de Esrom. — 1Cr 2:18, 19; veja JERIOTE.

2. Filha de Sili e mãe do Rei Jeosafá, filho de Asa. — 1Rs 22:41, 42; 2Cr 20:31, 32.

AZUL. Veja CORES.

AZUR [Alguém Que Oferece Ajuda].

1. Pai do falso profeta Hananias, de Gibeão. — Je 28:1.

2. Pai de Jaazanias, um dos "príncipes do povo" entre os 25 homens que Ezequiel viu em visão 'maquinar o que é prejudicial e dar mau conselho contra' Jerusalém. — Ez 11:1, 2.

3. Um dos "cabeças do povo", cujo descendente, se não ele mesmo, atestou com selo o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. — Ne 10:1, 14, 17; 9:38.

B

BAAL [Dono; Amo].

1. Quarto filho alistado de Jeiel, benjamita. — 1Cr 8:29, 30; 9:35, 36.

2. Rubenita, cujo filho Beerá estava entre os levados cativos pelo rei assírio Tiglate-Pileser III. — 1Cr 5:5, 6, 26.

3. Cidade simeonita encravada no território de Judá, evidentemente a mesma que Baalate-Beer e Ramá do sul (ou Negebe). — Veja 1Cr 4:32, 33, e Jos 19:7-9.

4. Nas Escrituras, a palavra hebraica bá·ʽal é empregada com referência a (1) um marido, como dono de sua esposa (Gên 20:3); (2) proprietários de terra (Jos 24:11, n.); (3) "donos das nações" (Is 16:8, n.); (4) "confederados" (literalmente: "donos [amos] de um pacto") (Gên 14:13, n.); (5) donos ou possuidores de bens tangíveis (Êx 21:28, 34; 22:8; 2Rs 1:8, n.); (6) pessoas ou coisas que têm algo que caracteriza a sua natureza, maneira, ocupação, e assim por diante, por exemplo, um arqueiro (literalmente: "dono de flechas") (Gên 49:23), o 'credor de uma dívida' (literalmente: "dono duma dívida da sua mão") (De 15:2), "alguém dado à ira" (literalmente: "dono de ira") (Pr 22:24), "adversário em juízo" (literalmente: 'dono de julgamento') (Is 50:8, n.); (7) Jeová (Os 2:16); (8) deuses falsos (Jz 2:11, 13).

O termo hab·Báʽal (o Baal) é a designação aplicada ao falso deus Baal. A expressão hab·Beʽa·lím (os Baalins) refere-se às diversas deidades locais consideradas como donos ou possuidores de certos lugares, e como tendo influência sobre eles.

O termo "Baal" ocorre uma vez nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, em Romanos 11:4, onde no texto grego é precedido pelo artigo feminino he. Comentando o uso do artigo feminino antes de "Baal" na Septuaginta grega e em Romanos 11:4, John Newton escreveu num ensaio sobre a adoração de Baal: "Embora em hebraico ele seja do gênero masculino [hab·Báʽal], o senhor, todavia Baal é chamado [he Bá·al], = a senhora, na Septuaginta; Os. ii. 8; Sof. i. 4; e no Novo Testamento, Romanos xi. 4. Na adoração licenciosa deste andrógino, ou deus de dois sexos, os homens, em certas ocasiões, usavam vestimenta feminina, ao passo que as mulheres se apresentavam em traje masculino, brandindo armas." — Ancient Pagan and Modern Christian Symbolism (Simbolismos Pagãos Antigos e Cristãos Modernos), de T. Inman, 1875, p. 119.

Às vezes, na história de Israel, Jeová foi mencionado como "Baal", no sentido de ser o Dono ou Marido da nação. (Is 54:5) Também, os israelitas talvez tivessem ligado incorretamente Jeová a Baal, na sua apostasia. Isto parece ser comprovado pela profecia de Oseias, de que viria o tempo em que Israel, depois de ir para o exílio e ser dele restaurado, penitentemente chamaria a Jeová de "meu esposo" e não mais de "meu dono" ("Meu Baal", CBC). O contexto sugere que a designação "Baal" e suas ligações com o deus falso jamais passariam de novo pelos lábios dos israelitas. (Os 2:9-17) A má conotação que a palavra hebraica bá·ʽal parece ter adquirido, por causa da sua associação com a degradante adoração de Baal, é considerada por alguns como o motivo de o escritor de Segundo Samuel usar os nomes "Is-Bosete" e "Mefibosete" (bó·sheth significa vergonha) em vez de "Esbaal" e "Meribe-Baal". — 2Sa 2:8; 9:6; 1Cr 8:33, 34; veja IS-BOSETE.

Adoração de Baal. Pouco se sabia sobre a adoração de Baal à parte das muitas referências bíblicas a ela, até que as escavações em Ugarite (a moderna Ras Xamra, na costa síria, defronte da ponta NE da ilha de Chipre) trouxeram à luz muitos artefatos religiosos e centenas de tabuinhas de argila. Acha-se que muitos destes documentos antigos, agora conhecidos como os textos de Ras Xamra, sejam liturgias dos que participavam nos rituais das festas religiosas, ou palavras proferidas por eles.

Nos textos de Ras Xamra, Baal (também chamado Aliyan [aquele que prevalece] Baal) é mencionado como "Zabul [Príncipe], Senhor da Terra", e "o Cavaleiro das Nuvens". Isto se harmoniza com uma representação de Baal, mostrando-o a segurar na mão direita uma clava ou maça, e, na esquerda, um raio estilizado com uma ponta de lança e uma planta brotando no topo. Também é representado usando um capacete com chifres, sugerindo uma íntima ligação com o touro, símbolo da fertilidade. — FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 272.

Normalmente, de fins de abril até setembro, chove pouco na Palestina. Em outubro começam as chuvas, e elas continuam durante todo o inverno e vão até abril, resultando em abundante vegetação. Pensava-se que as mudanças das estações e os efeitos resultantes delas vinham em ciclos por causa dos conflitos infindáveis entre os deuses. O fim das chuvas e a morte da vegetação eram atribuídas ao triunfo do deus Mot (morte e aridez) sobre Baal (chuva e fertilidade), compelindo Baal a retirar-se para as profundezas da terra. Cria-se que o início da estação chuvosa indicava que Baal tinha despertado para a vida. Isto, imaginava-se, tornara-se possível pelo triunfo de Anate, irmã de Baal, sobre Mot, permitindo que o irmão dela, Baal, retornasse ao seu trono. A conjunção carnal de Baal com sua esposa, presumivelmente Astorete, segundo se cria, assegurava a fertilidade no ano seguinte.

Os cananeus, que eram lavradores e criadores de gado, provavelmente imaginavam que empenharem-se num ritual prescrito, uma espécie de magia congenial, ajudasse a estimular seus deuses à ação, segundo o padrão representado em suas festas religiosas, e fosse necessário para garantir produtivas safras e rebanhos no ano vindouro, e para evitar secas, pragas de gafanhotos, e assim por diante. Por isso, voltar Baal à vida, para ser entronizado e unido à sua consorte, pelo que parece, era celebrado com licenciosos ritos de fertilidade, assinalados por orgias sexuais de irrestrita devassidão.

Sem dúvida, cada cidade cananeia construía seu santuário de Baal em honra ao seu Baal padroeiro local. Designavam-se sacerdotes para realizar a adoração nestes santuários e nas muitas oradas nos topos das colinas vizinhas, conhecidas como altos. (Veja 2Rs 17:32.) As oradas talvez contivessem imagens ou representações de Baal, ao passo que fora delas, próximo dos altares, podiam ser encontradas colunas de pedra (provavelmente símbolos fálicos de Baal), postes sagrados representando a deusa Axerá, e pedestais-incensários. (Compare isso com 2Cr 34:4-7; veja POSTE SAGRADO.) Homens e mulheres que se prostituíam serviam nos altos, e, além da prostituição cerimonial, praticava-se até mesmo o sacrifício de crianças. (Veja 1Rs 14:23, 24; Os 4:13, 14; Is 57:5; Je 7:31; 19:5.) A adoração de Baal também era realizada nos terraços das casas das pessoas, de onde se via frequentemente subir a fumaça sacrificial para seu deus. — Je 32:29.

Há indícios de que Baal e outros deuses e deusas do panteão cananeu estavam relacionados, na mente de seus adoradores, com certos corpos celestes. Por exemplo, um dos textos de Ras Xamra menciona uma oferta feita à "Rainha Sapas (o Sol) e às estrelas", e outro alude 'ao exército do sol e à hoste do dia'.

Por conseguinte, é digno de nota que a Bíblia faz diversas referências aos corpos celestes em conexão com a adoração de Baal. Descrevendo o proceder obstinado do reino de Israel, o registro bíblico declara: "Continuaram a abandonar todos os mandamentos de Jeová . . ., e começaram a curvar-se diante de todo o exército dos céus e a servir a Baal." (2Rs 17:16) A respeito do reino de Judá, nota-se que, bem no templo de Jeová, vieram a existir "utensílios feitos para Baal, e para o poste sagrado, e para todo o exército dos céus". Também, o povo em todo Judá fazia "fumaça sacrificial a Baal, ao sol e à lua, e às constelações do zodíaco, e a todo o exército dos céus". — 2Rs 23:4, 5; 2Cr 33:3; veja também Sof 1:4, 5.

Cada localidade possuía seu próprio Baal, e o Baal local frequentemente recebia um nome que indicava que estava ligado a uma localidade específica. Por exemplo, o Baal de Peor (Baal-Peor), adorado pelos moabitas e pelos midianitas, obteve seu nome do monte Peor. (Núm 25:1-3, 6) Os nomes destes Baalins locais vieram mais tarde a ser transferidos, por uma figura de retórica (metonímia), para as próprias localidades, como, por exemplo, Baal-Hermom, Baal-Hazor, Baal-Zefom, Bamote-Baal. Todavia, embora houvesse muitos Baalins locais entre os cananeus, oficialmente entendia-se que na realidade só havia um deus Baal.

Que efeito teve a adoração de Baal sobre Israel?

Subentende-se o baalismo logo cedo na Bíblia, embora, pelo que parece, nos dias dos patriarcas, não atingira ainda o nível de degradação que existia quando os israelitas entraram na terra de Canaã. (Veja Gên 15:16; 1Rs 21:26.) A menção da cidade de Asterote-Carnaim, possivelmente chamada pelo nome da consorte de Baal, Astorete, fornece a primeira sugestão disso. (Gên 14:5) Antes de os israelitas cruzarem o Mar Vermelho, podia-se ver Baal-Zefom, no ermo. (Êx 14:2, 9) Com respeito aos habitantes de Canaã, deram-se a Moisés advertências específicas no monte Sinai, a fim de que demolisse os altares deles, destroçasse suas colunas sagradas e decepasse seus postes sagrados. (Êx 34:12-14) De modo que todos os apetrechos da adoração de Baal deviam ser erradicados da Terra da Promessa.

Enquanto os israelitas estavam acampados nas planícies de Moabe, o Rei Balaque levou Balaão para cima, a Bamote-Baal (que significa "Altos de Baal"), para ver a enorme multidão. (Núm 22:41) Depois de fracassar em lançar uma maldição diretamente sobre os israelitas, Balaão aconselhou Balaque a engodá-los à idolatria por induzi-los a cometer imoralidade com as adoradoras idólatras de Baal de Peor. Milhares de israelitas sucumbiram a esta tentação e perderam a vida. — Núm 22:1–25:18; Re 2:14.

Apesar desta amarga experiência e dos claros avisos dados por Moisés e Josué (De 7:25, 26; Jos 24:15, 19, 20), os israelitas, ao passarem a residir no país, começaram a imitar os cananeus remanescentes, evidentemente visando assegurar a fertilidade do seu gado e das suas safras. Ao mesmo tempo, fingiam adorar a Jeová. Após a morte de Josué, começou uma apostasia em grande escala. (Jz 2:11-13; 3:5-8) O povo mantinha altares, postes e outros acessórios da adoração de Baal nos seus campos, e, evidentemente, dava atenção aos seus vizinhos cananeus quanto à maneira de agradar ao "dono", ou Baal, de cada lote de terra. Os israelitas foram também enlaçados pelas práticas imorais associadas com a adoração de Baal. Em resultado disso, Jeová os entregou aos seus inimigos.

Entretanto, quando o povo voltava a ele, Jeová, misericordiosamente, o libertava por suscitar juízes, tais como Gideão, de quem se mudou o nome para Jerubaal (que significa: "Pleiteie (Contenda) Baal"). (Jz 6:25-32; 1Sa 12:9-11) Mas não houve então reforma permanente. (Jz 8:33; 10:6) O baalismo continuou a ser praticado mesmo depois dos dias de Samuel, apesar de estar escrito que, às instâncias dele, o povo removeu os Baalins e as imagens de Astorete, e começou a servir somente a Jeová. — 1Sa 7:3, 4.

Embora só ouçamos de novo do baalismo no fim do reinado de Salomão, é possível que perdurasse em partes do reino. Muitas variedades de baalismo foram introduzidas no país quando Salomão se casou com muitas esposas pagãs, e estas induziram a ele e seus filhos a servir a outros deuses e deusas, tais como Astorete e Moloque, associados com a adoração de Baal. — 1Rs 11:4, 5, 33; Je 32:35.

Com a divisão do reino em 997 AEC, Jeroboão estabeleceu a adoração do bezerro no reino setentrional de Israel, em Dã e em Betel. O baalismo nativo e a adoração do bezerro eram praticados lado a lado, assim como em Judá se realizava um simulacro de adoração verdadeira em Jerusalém, ao passo que se praticava também o baalismo em todo o país. — 1Rs 14:22-24.

Um culto diferente a Baal foi introduzido em Israel nos dias do Rei Acabe (c. 940-920 AEC), o de Melcart, o Baal de Tiro. (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 532) Acabe entrou numa aliança matrimonial com a filha do rei de Tiro, chamado Etbaal (que significa: "Com Baal"). Isto resultou em a filha de Etbaal, Jezabel, introduzir em Israel este culto mais viril, com muitos sacerdotes e ajudantes. (1Rs 16:31-33) Finalmente, houve o famoso confronto no monte Carmelo entre Jeová e Baal.

É provável que, por Baal ser considerado pelos seus adoradores como dador de chuvas e de fertilidade, por se acreditar ser ele o dono do céu, Elias ordenou em nome de Jeová uma seca. (1Rs 17:1) Depois de três anos e seis meses de seca, em que se provou que Baal era incapaz de acabar com a seca, em resposta aos muitos apelos sem dúvida feitos pelos seus sacerdotes e adoradores, Elias convocou todo o povo ao monte Carmelo para testemunhar a grande prova quanto a quem é o verdadeiro Deus. A prova resultou na humilhação dos adoradores de Baal e na matança de 450 profetas de Baal. Foi

Representações de Baal, o deus da chuva e da fertilidade, encontradas em Ras Xamra.

Jeová, não Baal, quem trouxe então chuva para acabar com a seca. — 1Rs 18:18-46; Tg 5:17.

O filho e sucessor de Acabe, Acazias, continuou a servir a Baal. (1Rs 22:51-53) O irmão de Acazias, Jeorão, o sucedeu, e relata-se que ele removeu a coluna sagrada de Baal feita por seu pai, embora persistisse na adoração do bezerro. — 2Rs 3:1-3.

Mais tarde (c. 905 AEC), Jeú foi ungido rei. Ele vingou o assassinato de profetas de Jeová por matar Jezabel e a casa de seu marido, Acabe. Todos os adoradores de Baal foram então convocados a Samaria, sob o pretexto da realização de "uma assembleia solene para Baal". Às ordens de Jeú, todos os adoradores de Baal foram mortos. Os postes sagrados foram queimados, e a coluna sagrada e a casa de Baal foram demolidas, fazendo-se da casa latrina pública. Com isto, dizia-se que Jeú 'aniquilou a Baal em Israel'. (2Rs 10:18-28) Assim, pelo menos naquele tempo, a adoração de Baal foi suprimida. Todavia, foi por causa dessa religião baalística que Jeová finalmente deixou que o reino de Israel, das dez tribos, fosse ao exílio. — 2Rs 17:16-18.

Pelo visto, em Judá, o baalismo continuou entrincheirado, apesar dos esforços do Rei Asa de remover os acessórios dele. (2Cr 14:2-5) Quando Acabe casou Atalia, a filha que tinha de Jezabel, com Jeorão, o sétimo rei de Judá, a influência iníqua dela estabeleceu o baalismo tírio na família real em Judá. Nem mesmo as reformas feitas no início do reinado do neto de Atalia, o Rei Jeoás, e as feitas posteriormente pelo Rei Ezequias, realizaram a eliminação permanente da adoração de Baal. (2Rs 11:18; 18:4) O filho de Ezequias, Manassés, reconstruiu os próprios altos que seu pai havia destruído. (2Rs 21:3) Embora, pelo visto, a maioria dos reis de Judá estivesse contaminada com a adoração de Baal, Manassés excedeu-se muito no seu empenho por este culto degradante. (2Rs 21:9-11) A posterior regeneração do Rei Manassés e mesmo o extenso expurgo realizado pelo seu neto, o Rei Josias, não conseguiram o retorno permanente à verdadeira adoração. A punição por meio do exílio e da desolação da terra foi o resultado desta total contaminação pela adoração falsa. — 2Cr 33:10-17; 2Rs 23:4-27; Je 32:29.

Jeremias, na realização da sua obra profética, desde os dias de Josias até o exílio babilônico, denunciou Israel por este se degradar com a adoração de Baal, comparando Israel a uma esposa adúltera, que se prostituía debaixo de cada árvore frondosa e em todo alto, cometendo adultério com pedras e com árvores, e esquecendo-se de Jeová, o "dono marital" do povo. (Je 2:20-27; 3:9, 14) Após o exílio em Babilônia e o retorno dos judeus à Palestina, não se menciona mais na Bíblia que os israelitas praticassem o baalismo.

BAALÁ [Lugar da Senhora].

1. Cidade na fronteira N de Judá, também chamada Quiriate-Baal, mas melhor conhecida como Quiriate-Jearim. É provisoriamente identificada com Deir el-'Azar (Tel Qiryat Ye'arim), a uns 13 km ao ONO de Jerusalém. — Jos 15:9, 10, 60; 18:14; 1Cr 13:6; veja QUIRIATE-JEARIM.

2. Monte no canto NO de Judá, entre as cidades de Siquerom e Jabneel, constituindo parte da fronteira N do território de Judá. (Jos 15:11) Talvez possa ser identificada com o morro de Mughar, um pouco ao N do vale da torrente de Soreque e a 3 km a ESE de Jabneel (a moderna Yavne).

3. Cidade na região do Negebe de Judá (Jos 15:29), evidentemente mencionada como Balá em Josué 19:3, e como Bila em 1 Crônicas 4:29. Ela foi subsequentemente aquinhoada à tribo de Simeão, como cidade encravada. Sua localização específica é desconhecida, mas, pelo que parece, encontrava-se ao SE de Berseba.

BAALATE [Lugar da Senhora]. Uma cidade fronteiriça do território original de Dã, mencionada em Josué 19:44, 45, como situada entre Gibetom e Jeúde. Trata-se evidentemente do mesmo lugar que Salomão, mais tarde, incluiu no seu programa de reconstrução. (2Cr 8:5, 6) Sua identificação geográfica é incerta; Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], VIII, 152 [vi, 1]) refere-se a ela junto com Bete-Horom, como não muito longe de Gezer, outra cidade fortificada. — 1Rs 9:17, 18.

BAALATE-BEER [Senhora do Poço]. Uma cidade de Simeão, encravada nos limites territoriais de Judá. (Jos 19:1, 8) Também chamada "Ramá do sul" (ou Negebe), é pelo visto simplesmente chamada de Baal em 1 Crônicas 4:33, e talvez seja a "Ramote do sul" de 1 Samuel 30:27. As referências a ela a colocam ao S de Berseba e, portanto, no Negebe.

BAAL-BERITE [Dono dum Pacto; uma vez, em Jz 9:46: El-Berite, Deus dum Pacto]. O Baal de Siquém, a quem os israelitas começaram a adorar após a morte do juiz Gideão. (Jz 8:33) A designação "Baal-Berite" talvez denote que se cria que este Baal específico vigiava o cumprimento de pactos.

Evidentemente, havia uma espécie de tesouraria ligada à casa ou ao templo de Baal-Berite em Siquém. (Jz 9:4) Em conexão com a vindima, os siquemitas, pelo visto, realizavam uma festividade em honra de Baal-Berite, culminada por uma espécie de refeição sacrificial no templo do seu deus. Foi no templo de Baal-Berite, quando se comia e bebia, e se amaldiçoava Abimeleque, provavelmente sob a influência de vinho, que Gaal incitou os siquemitas a se revoltar contra o Rei Abimeleque. (Jz 9:27-29)

Mais tarde, quando ameaçados por Abimeleque, os proprietários de terras da torre de Siquém (Migdol-Siquém, IBB) procuraram refúgio na cripta da casa de El-Berite (Baal-Berite), perecendo no incêndio quando Abimeleque e seus homens puseram fogo à cripta. — Jz 9:46-49.

BAAL DE PEOR. O Baal específico adorado no monte Peor, tanto pelos moabitas como pelos midianitas. (Núm 25:1, 3, 6) Tem sido sugerido que o Baal de Peor poderia realmente ter sido Quemós, visto que esta deidade era o principal deus dos moabitas. (Núm 21:29) Como no caso do baalismo em geral, ritos crassamente licenciosos estavam provavelmente ligados à adoração de Baal de Peor. Os israelitas, enquanto acampados em Sitim, nos altiplanos de Moabe, foram engodados à imoralidade e à idolatria pelas adoradoras deste deus. — Núm 25:1-18; De 4:3; Sal 106:28; Os 9:10; Re 2:14.

O pecado de Israel em relação a Baal de Peor resultou em Jeová enviar um flagelo mortífero que matou milhares de israelitas. Surge uma pergunta quanto ao número dos que realmente foram mortos pelo flagelo, em vista da aparente discrepância entre Números 25:9 e 1 Coríntios 10:8. Pelo que parece, 23.000 foram mortos diretamente pelo flagelo, ao passo que 1.000 "cabeças" ou chefes foram mortos pelos juízes de Israel e então pendurados, expostos à vista do público. — Núm 25:4, 5; veja BAAL N.º 4.

BAALE-JUDÁ. Veja QUIRIATE-JEARIM.

BAAL-GADE [Dono de Gade (Boa Sorte)]. Uma cidade no vale plano do Líbano, ao sopé do monte Hermom, no seu lado O. Ela é usada para descrever o ponto mais setentrional da conquista da terra de Canaã por Josué, em comparação com o ponto mais meridional, o monte Halaque, no Negebe. (Jos 11:17; 12:7; 13:5) A localização exata é incerta, mas em geral é identificada com Hasbaiya, no uádi et-Teim, ou com um lugar por perto.

BAAL-HAMOM [Dono Duma Massa de Gente (Multidão)]. Lugar mencionado no Cântico de Salomão 8:11 como local dum vinhedo produtivo do Rei Salomão. Não há nenhuma indicação quanto à sua localização. Embora muitos o considerem ser um lugar literal, outros sugerem que é usado de modo figurado neste escrito poético, para representar o domínio de Salomão, e que produzia grande riqueza. — Veja 1Rs 4:20, 21.

BAAL-HANÃ [Baal Mostrou Favor; Baal É Clemente].

1. Filho de Acbor; o sétimo de oito reis de Edom, que governaram "antes de qualquer rei reinar sobre os filhos de Israel". — Gên 36:31, 38, 39; 1Cr 1:49, 50.

2. O gederita a quem Davi fez chefe "sobre os olivais e os sicômoros que havia na Sefelá". — 1Cr 27:28, 31.

BAAL-HAZOR [Dono do Pátio (Povoado)]. Um lugar perto de "Efraim" (talvez a cidade de Efraíne [Efraim] mencionada em 2Cr 13:19; veja Jo 11:54), que serviu de lugar para a festa de tosquia de Absalão, na qual ele manobrou a morte de seu irmão Amnom. (2Sa 13:23, 28) Ela é identificada com o monte Jebel ʽAsur (Baʽal Hazor), de 1.032 m de altitude, a uns 8 km ao NE de Betel. Absalão fugiu de Baal-Hazor para o pequeno reino de Gesur, ao L do mar da Galileia.

BAAL-HERMOM [Dono de Hermom]. Este nome aparece em Juízes 3:3 e em 1 Crônicas 5:23. No primeiro caso, descreve um ponto na região habitada pelos sidônios e pelos heveus, que não foram conquistados pelos israelitas, e refere-se aqui ao "monte Baal-Hermom". Este costuma ser identificado com o próprio monte Hermom, mas talvez se refira à cadeia de montanhas do Antilíbano em geral, ou a uma parte dela. Em 1 Crônicas 5:23, "Baal-Hermom" é usado junto com Senir e o monte Hermom, e a região de Basã, para delinear o território ocupado pela meia-tribo de Manassés. Embora possa referir-se a uma cidade ou a um lugar perto do monte Hermom, também pode designar a região montanhosa do Hermom. — Veja HERMOM.

BAALIS. Rei de Amom, o qual, segundo se relata, enviou Ismael para assassinar o governador Gedalias, de Judá, em 607 AEC. A Septuaginta grega grafa o nome "Belisa". — Je 40:14.

A impressão dum selo com o nome Baʽalyishʽa foi descoberta em 1984 nas escavações em Tell el-ʽUmeiri, na Jordânia. Esta impressão do selo foi datada paleograficamente como da última parte do sétimo século AEC. A inscrição nela, feita com antigos caracteres amonitas, reza: "Pertencente a Milkom'or [ou: Milkom'ur], servo de Baʽalyishʽa." Baʽalyishʽa possivelmente é o Baalis da Bíblia.

BAAL-JUDÁ. Veja QUIRIATE-JEARIM.

BAAL-MEOM [forma abreviada de Bete-Baal-Meom]. Uma cidade de destaque no planalto do N de Moabe, designada à tribo de Rubem, junto com Nebo, Quiriataim e outras cidades da região. (Núm 32:37, 38; 1Cr 5:8) Os rubenitas, desejosos de obter esta região por causa dos seus bons pastos, evidentemente reconstruíram as cidades e deram-lhes novos nomes. Na anterior lista, em Números 32:3, 4, Baal-Meom talvez seja representada pelo nome "Beom". Depois disso, Josué se refere a ela como Bete-Baal-Meom, que provavelmente era o nome completo do lugar. — Jos 13:17.

Baal-Meom parece ter sido retomada pelos moabitas durante o reinado do Rei Mesa, de Moabe, evidentemente na última parte do décimo século AEC. A inscrição (linha 9) na Pedra Moabita declara que Mesa "construiu [talvez: fortificou] Baal-Meom, fazendo nela um reservatório", e na linha 30 ele a menciona pelo seu nome mais completo, Bete-Baal-Meom. Além disso, num fragmento de cerâmica inscrita, encontrado em Samaria (Óstraco 27 de Samaria), menciona-se certo "Baala, o baal-meonita".

No sétimo século AEC, o profeta Jeremias declarou a Moabe um aviso divino, predizendo o despojamento daquela terra por Babilônia, mencionando especificamente certas cidades, inclusive Bete-Meom (provavelmente Baal-Meom). (Je 48:20-23) Ezequiel inclui Baal-Meom entre os lugares moabitas a serem tomados pelos "orientais" (ou: "filhos do Oriente"). (Ez 25:9, 10) A história secular e as investigações arqueológicas confirmam o cumprimento destas profecias. — Veja MOABE, MOABITAS N.º 2.

Baal-Meom é identificada com as ruínas de Ma'in, formando uma elevação de considerável tamanho a cerca de 6 km ao OSO de Medeba e a 12 km ao L do Mar Morto. O platô em que Ma'in se encontra tem cerca de 800 m de altitude.

BAAL-PERAZIM [Dono das Rupturas]. O local duma vitória total do Rei Davi sobre as forças coligadas dos filisteus, algum tempo depois de Davi conquistar a fortaleza de Sião. (2Sa 5:9, 17-21) O registro declara que, ao ouvir falar da aproximação agressiva dos filisteus, Davi e seus homens 'desceram ao lugar de difícil acesso', ao passo que os filisteus "andaram percorrendo a baixada de Refaim". Recebendo de Jeová a garantia de Seu apoio, Davi atacou, e os filisteus fugiram, deixando atrás os seus ídolos. Atribuindo a vitória a Jeová, Davi disse: "Jeová irrompeu através dos meus inimigos na minha frente, como uma brecha feita por águas"; e, por este motivo, ele "chamou aquele lugar pelo nome de Baal-Perazim". O relato em 2 Samuel 5:21 afirma que Davi e seus homens 'levaram assim embora os ídolos abandonados pelos filisteus'. O relato paralelo em 1 Crônicas 14:12 mostra a ação final tomada, declarando: "Davi disse então a palavra, e eles [os ídolos] foram assim queimados no fogo."

O monte Perazim a que Isaías (28:21) se refere é considerado como o mesmo lugar. Seu uso na sua profecia relembra a vitória de Jeová, por meio de Davi, em Baal-Perazim, citada como exemplo do ato estranho a acontecer, no qual, declara Jeová, ele irromperá contra os seus inimigos como uma enxurrada transbordante.

A baixada de Refaim é considerada como a planície do Baqa', ao SO do monte do Templo, que, depois de um declive de cerca de 1,5 km, contrai-se num vale estreito, o uádi el Werd (Nahal Refa'im). Nesta base, alguns peritos sugerem que Baal-Perazim se encontra na vizinhança deste vale. Entretanto, à base dum paralelo com a "baixada perto de Gibeão", feito por Isaías (28:21), alguns peritos sugerem um lugar ao NO, possivelmente Sheikh Bedr, a uns 4 km ao ONO do monte do Templo. (Jos 15:8, 9) Isto estaria em harmonia com o fato de que a rota de fuga dos filisteus perseguidos por Davi era na direção de Gibeão e Gezer. — 2Sa 5:22, 25; 1Cr 14:16.

BAAL-SALISA [Dono de Salisa]. Um lugar do qual um homem veio trazer 20 pães de cevada das primícias da sua colheita, e um pouco de cereal novo, para dar ao profeta Eliseu. (2Rs 4:42-44) Era uma época de fome, e Eliseu encontrava-se em Gilgal. Este suprimento humilde mostrou-se suficiente para os cem "filhos dos profetas" ali, havendo sobras. — 2Rs 4:38, 43; compare isso com Mt 14:20; Mr 8:8.

Acha-se que Baal-Salisa se encontrava perto de Gilgal e provavelmente na "terra de Salisa" pela qual Saul passou quando procurava as jumentas de seu pai. (1Sa 9:4) No Talmude Babilônico há uma referência a Baal-Salisa, descrevendo-a como lugar em que os frutos amadureciam especialmente cedo. (Sanhedrin 12*a*) Um lugar sugerido é o de Kafr Thulth, nos contrafortes de Efraim, o nome Thulth sendo em árabe o equivalente exato do hebraico Salisa. Kafr Thulth encontra-se a uns 46 km ao NNO de Jerusalém.

BAAL-TAMAR [Dono da Palmeira]. Um lugar perto de Gibeá, onde os combatentes israelitas se puseram em formação contra a tribo de Benjamim, na dispendiosa batalha provocada por um revoltante crime sexual. Parte das forças de Israel encontrava-se ajuntada em Baal-Tamar, ao passo que outras partes foram postas de emboscada contra os benjamitas. (Jz 19:25-28; 20:33) A localização de Baal-Tamar é incerta.

BAAL-ZEBUBE [Dono das Moscas]. O Baal adorado pelos filisteus em Ecrom. Há indícios de que era prática comum entre os hebreus mudar os nomes dos deuses falsos para algo similar, porém degradante. Por isso, a terminação "Zebube" pode ser uma alteração de um dos títulos de Baal indicado nos textos de Ras Xamra como "Zebul" ("Príncipe"), ou Zebul. Alguns peritos, porém, sugerem que o nome foi dado ao deus por seus adoradores, por ser considerado o produtor de moscas, e, portanto, capaz de controlar esta praga comum do Oriente Médio. Visto que o fornecimento de oráculos estava ligado a Baal-Zebube, outros favorecem o conceito de que Baal-Zebube era um deus considerado como provendo oráculos pelo voo ou pelo zumbido duma mosca. — 2Rs 1:2.

Acazias, rei de Israel, enviou mensageiros para indagar de Baal-Zebube se ele se restabeleceria de seu grave ferimento. Jeová, por meio do seu profeta Elias, censurou Acazias, dizendo: "É porque não há nenhum Deus em Israel que mandas consultar a Baal-Zebube, deus de Ecrom? Portanto, no que se refere ao leito ao qual subiste, não descerás dele, porque positivamente morrerás." — 2Rs 1:2-8; veja BELZEBU.

BAAL-ZEFOM [Dono do Norte (da Fronteira Norte)]. Um ponto geográfico usado para definir ou indicar a posição do acampamento dos israelitas junto a Pi-Hairote, antes de atravessarem o Mar Vermelho. (Êx 14:2; Núm 33:1-7) Depois de partirem de Ramessés, acamparam primeiro em Sucote, daí em Etão, "na extremidade do ermo". (Êx 13:20) Neste ponto, Jeová lhes disse que 'voltassem e se acampassem diante de Pi-Hairote, entre Migdol e o mar, à vista de Baal-Zefom'. Foi ali que os cocheiros, a cavalaria e as forças militares de Faraó começaram a alcançá-los. — Êx 14:2, 9.

A localização de Baal-Zefom é incerta. Evidentemente, naquele tempo era um lugar conhecido. O grande fator, naturalmente, é a travessia do Mar Vermelho pelos israelitas, sendo que o relato dela mostra que eles atravessaram um corpo de água de considerável profundidade. Tal situação só é encontrada quando se vai até o S, até a extremidade setentrional do golfo de Suez. Nesta base, alguns peritos associam Baal-Zefom com os montes daquela região. A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Um Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento), de Brown, Driver e Briggs (1980, p. 128), diz: "perto do Mar Vermelho no Egito, prov[avelmente o] Mte. ʽAtaka." Este monte encontra-se perto da cabeceira do golfo de Suez, a pouca distância ao SO da atual cidade de Suez. Outros sugerem Jebel el Galala, a uns 40 km mais ao S. Aqueles que favorecem este lugar creem que Migdol, mencionada junto com Baal-Zefom nesses relatos, era uma torre de vigia situada estrategicamente no Jebel (monte) ʽAtaqah. — Veja ÊXODO; PI-HAIROTE.

BAANA.

1. Um dos 12 prepostos designados por Salomão para prover a casa do rei de alimentos. A designação de Baana era o quinto distrito alistado, principalmente os vales férteis de Megido e de Jezreel. Filho de Ailude; possivelmente irmão de Jeosafá, cronista de Salomão. — 1Rs 4:3, 7, 12.

2. Outro dos 12 prepostos de Salomão para suprir alimentos, responsável pelo nono distrito alistado, na Palestina setentrional. Filho de Husai, companheiro de Davi. — 1Rs 4:7, 16; 2Sa 15:32-37.

3. Pai do Zadoque que ajudou Neemias a consertar as muralhas de Jerusalém, em 455 AEC. — Ne 3:3, 4.

BAANÁ.

1. Filho de Rimom, o benjamita. Ele e seu irmão Recabe eram chefes de guerrilhas pertencentes ao filho de Saul, Is-Bosete. Baaná e seu irmão assassinaram Is-Bosete enquanto estava dormindo a sesta, mas quando trouxeram a cabeça dele a Davi, que pouco antes fora empossado como rei, este mandou que fossem mortos, que se lhes amputassem as mãos e os pés, e que fossem pendurados junto ao reservatório de água de Hébron. — 2Sa 4:2-12.

2. Netofatita, pai de um dos poderosos de Davi, Helebe (Helede). — 2Sa 23:29; 1Cr 11:30.

3. Um possível líder dos que retornaram do exílio babilônico junto com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:2; Ne 7:7.

4. Um dos "cabeças do povo", cujo descendente, se não ele mesmo, atestou o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. (Ne 9:38; 10:14, 27) Talvez fosse o N.º 3 acima.

BAARA. Uma das esposas de Saraim, o benjamita. — 1Cr 8:1, 8.

BAASA. Terceiro rei do reino de Israel, das dez tribos; filho de Aijá, da tribo de Issacar, e de antecedentes insignificantes. Ele usurpou o trono por matar seu predecessor, Nadabe, abatendo depois toda a casa de Jeroboão, conforme se havia profetizado. (1Rs 15:27-30; 14:10) Baasa, porém, prosseguiu com a adoração do bezerro, de Jeroboão, e por isso também se lhe prometeu o extermínio da sua própria casa. (1Rs 16:1-4) Quando ele travou guerra contra Judá, Asa induziu o rei da Síria a hostilizar Baasa desde o N. Asa arrasou então a cidade fortificada de Ramá, que Baasa estava construindo. (1Rs 15:16-22; 2Cr 16:1-6; veja ASA N.º 1 [Intriga e Guerra Contra Baasa].) Depois de governar desde cerca de 975 a 953 AEC, Baasa morreu e foi enterrado na sua capital, Tirza. Seu filho Elá tornou-se rei no 26.º ano de Asa, rei de Judá (1Rs 16:8), mas, no 27.º ano de Asa (1Rs 16:15), Zinri rebelou-se e exterminou a casa de Baasa, cumprindo o decreto de Jeová.

BAASEIAS. Descendente de Levi por meio de Gersom; antepassado de Asafe, músico do templo. — 1Cr 6:39, 40, 43.

BABEL [Confusão]. Uma das primeiras cidades a ser edificada após o Dilúvio. Ali Deus "confundiu . . . o idioma de toda a terra". (Gên 11:9) O nome se deriva do verbo ba·lál, que significa “confundir”. Os cidadãos locais, imaginando ser a sua cidade a sede do governo de Deus, afirmavam que o nome se compunha de Bab (Porta) e de ilu (Deus), significando “Porta de Deus”.

O começo do reino do iníquo Ninrode, o “poderoso caçador em oposição a Jeová”, foi ali em Babel, “na terra de Sinear”, na planície aluvial formada pela aluvião dos inundantes rios Eufrates e Tigre. (Gên 10:9, 10) Não havia pedras disponíveis para construção, de modo que os edificadores utilizaram os grandes depósitos de argila. “Façamos tijolos e cozamo-los por um processo de queima”, disseram. Devido à ausência de cal, a argamassa consistia em betume. — Gên 11:3.

O programa de Babel, que desafiava a Deus, centralizava-se na construção duma torre religiosa “com o seu topo nos céus”. Não foi construída para a adoração e o louvor de Jeová, mas foi dedicada à religião falsa, inventada pelo homem, com o fim de fazer um “nome célebre” para os construtores. — Gên 11:4.

O tempo aproximado de tal edificação pode ser deduzido da seguinte informação: Pelegue viveu de 2269 a 2030 AEC. Seu nome significava “Divisão”, pois “nos seus dias foi dividida a terra [isto é, “a população da terra”]”; Jeová “os espalhou dali por toda a superfície da terra”. (Gên 10:25; 11:9) Um texto de Sharkalisharri, rei de Agade (Acade) nos tempos patriarcais, menciona sua restauração duma torre-templo em Babilônia, dando a entender que uma estrutura assim já existia antes de seu reinado.

BABILÔNIA [Confusão].

1. Nome posterior dado a Babel. Esta cidade de fama encontrava-se ao longo do rio Eufrates, nas planícies de Sinear, aproximadamente a 870 km ao L de Jerusalém e a uns 80 km ao S de Bagdá. As ruínas de Babilônia estendem-se sobre uma vasta área em forma dum triângulo. Diversas elevações encontram-se espalhadas nesta área. Tell Babil (Mujelibe), na parte setentrional do triângulo, preserva o antigo nome e se encontra a uns 10 km ao N de Hila, no Iraque. — Veja BABILÔNIA N.º 2; SINEAR.

A cidade estava situada em ambos os lados do rio Eufrates. Um sistema duplo de muralhas cercava Babilônia, fazendo-a parecer inexpugnável.

A fortificação interna, construída de tijolos de barro, consistia em duas muralhas. A muralha interna tinha 6,5 m de grossura. A muralha externa, situada a 7 m de distância, tinha cerca de 3,5 m de espessura. Estas muralhas eram reforçadas por torres defensivas, que também serviam para reforçar a estrutura das muralhas. A uns 20 m fora da muralha externa, havia um cais feito de tijolo cozido, assentado em betume. Fora desta muralha havia um fosso ligado ao Eufrates ao N e ao S da cidade. Este fornecia tanto suprimentos de água como proteção contra exércitos inimigos. Documentos babilônicos indicam que oito portões davam acesso à cidade. Até agora, descobriram-se e escavaram-se quatro dos portões de Babilônia.

A fortificação externa ao L do Eufrates foi acrescentada por Nabucodonosor II (que destruiu o templo de Salomão), cercando assim uma grande área da planície ao N, ao L e ao S, para que aqueles que vivessem perto pudessem fugir para ali em caso de guerra. Esta fortificação externa também consistia em duas muralhas. A muralha interna, feita de tijolos não cozidos, tinha cerca de 7 m de espessura e estava reforçada com torres defensivas. Mais além dela, a uns 12 m, havia a muralha externa de tijolos cozidos, feita em duas partes, interligadas pelas suas torres: uma tinha quase 8 m de espessura, e a parte anexa tinha cerca de 3,5 m de espessura.

Nabonido ligou as extremidades da fortificação externa por construir uma muralha ao longo da margem oriental do rio. Esta muralha tinha cerca de 8,5 m de espessura e também tinha torres, bem como um cais de 3,5 m de espessura.

Heródoto, historiador grego do quinto século AEC, diz que o rio Eufrates era flanqueado em ambas as margens por um cais contínuo, separado da cidade propriamente dita por muralhas que tinham portões. Segundo ele, as muralhas da cidade tinham cerca de 90 m de altura, 26,5 m de espessura e uns 95 km de comprimento. No entanto, parece que Heródoto exagerou os fatos a respeito de Babilônia. A evidência arqueológica mostra que Babilônia era muito menor em tamanho, sendo a fortificação externa muito menor em comprimento e altura. Não se encontrou nenhuma evidência para confirmar a existência dum cais beirando a margem ocidental do rio.

Havia ruas atravessando as cidades desde os portões nas muralhas maciças. O Caminho das Procissões, a avenida principal, era pavimentada, e os muros ao longo dela eram decorados com leões. (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 323) Nabucodonosor II consertou e ampliou o antigo palácio e construiu um palácio de verão a uns 2 km ao norte. Construiu também uma grande estrutura de arcadas, em fileiras sobrepostas umas às outras, conhecida como os Jardins Suspensos de Babilônia e famosa como ‘uma das maravilhas do mundo antigo’.

Esta vasta metrópole às margens do rio Eufrates era centro comercial e industrial de intercâmbio mundial. Além de ser importante centro manufatureiro, era depósito comercial para transações entre os povos do Oriente e do Ocidente, tanto por terra como por mar. De modo que suas frotas tinham acesso ao golfo Pérsico e aos mares longínquos.

História. Ninrode, que viveu na última parte do terceiro milênio AEC, fundou Babilônia como capital do primeiro império político do homem. A construção desta cidade, porém, parou repentinamente, quando houve uma confusão na comunicação. (Gên 11:9) Surgiram e desapareceram gerações posteriores de reconstrutores. Hamurábi ampliou a cidade, fortificou-a e a tornou a capital do Império Babilônico sob domínio semita.

Quando estava sob o controle da Potência Mundial Assíria, Babilônia estava envolvida em diversas lutas e revoltas. Daí, com o declínio do segundo império mundial, o caldeu Nabopolassar fundou uma nova dinastia em Babilônia, por volta de 645 AEC. Seu filho, Nabucodonosor II, que completou a restauração e levou a cidade à sua maior glória, jactou-se: "Não é esta Babilônia, a Grande, que eu mesmo construí?" (Da 4:30) Babilônia continuou em tal glória como capital da terceira potência mundial até a noite de 5 de outubro de 539 AEC (calendário gregoriano), quando ela caiu diante os exércitos invasores medo-persas, sob o comando de Ciro, o Grande.

Naquela noite fatídica, na cidade de Babilônia, Belsazar realizava um banquete com mil de seus grandes. Nabonido não estava presente para ver a ominosa escrita na parede de reboco: "MENE, MENE, TEQUEL e PARSIM." (Da 5:5-28) Depois de ter sofrido uma derrota às mãos dos persas, Nabonido refugiara-se na cidade de Borsipa, ao SO. Mas o profeta de Jeová, Daniel, estava presente em Babilônia naquela noite de 5 de outubro de 539 AEC, e ele deu a conhecer o significado da escrita na parede. Os homens do exército de Ciro não estavam dormindo no seu acampamento ao redor das aparentemente inexpugnáveis muralhas de Babilônia. Para eles, era uma noite de grande atividade. Numa brilhante estratégia, os engenheiros militares de Ciro desviaram o poderoso rio Eufrates do seu curso normal através da cidade de Babilônia. Os persas avançaram então pelo leito do rio, subiram às margens dele e tomaram a cidade de surpresa, através dos portões ao longo do cais. Passando rapidamente pelas ruas, matando a todos os que resistiam, capturaram o palácio e mataram Belsazar. Tudo estava acabado. Em uma única noite, Babilônia caiu, terminando com séculos de supremacia semítica; o controle sobre Babilônia passou a ser ariano, e assim se cumpriu a palavra profética de Jeová. — Is 44:27; 45:1, 2; Je 50:38; 51:30-32; veja ILUSTRAÇÃO, Vol. 2, p. 325; CIRO.

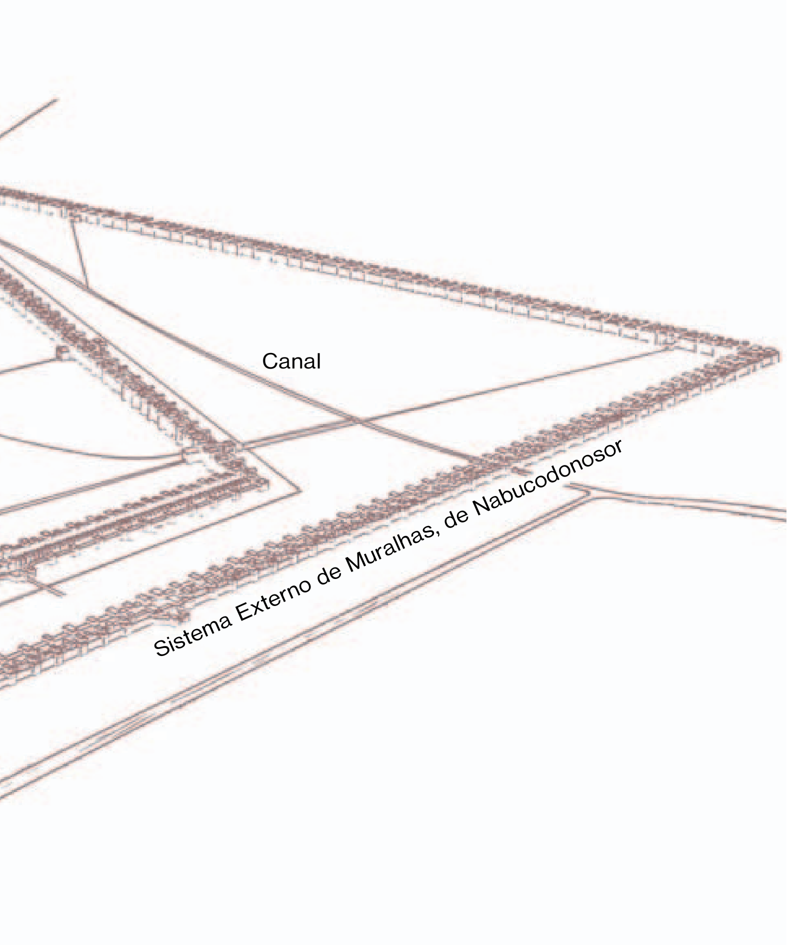
A partir daquela data memorável, 539 AEC, a glória de Babilônia começou a diminuir, ao passo que a cidade entrou em decadência. Ela se revoltou duas vezes contra o imperador persa Dario I (Histaspes), e na segunda ocasião foi desmantelada. Uma cidade parcialmente restaurada rebelou-se contra Xerxes I e foi saqueada. Alexandre Magno pretendia fazer de Babilônia sua capital, mas morreu de repente, em 323 AEC. Nicátor conquistou a cidade em 312 AEC e transportou grande parte do seu material para as margens do Tigre, a fim de ser usado na construção da sua nova capital, Selêucia. Todavia, a cidade e uma colônia de judeus continuava ali nos primitivos tempos cristãos, propiciando ao apóstolo Pedro um motivo para visitar Babilônia, conforme se observa na sua carta. (1Pe 5:13) Inscrições encontradas ali mostram que o templo de Bel em Babilônia existia ainda em 75 EC. No quarto século EC, a cidade estava em ruínas e com o tempo deixou de existir. Tornou-se apenas "montões de pedras". — Je 51:37.

Hoje só restam de Babilônia montões de escombros e ruínas, uma verdadeira terra deserta. (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 324) O livro Archaeology and Old Testament Study (Arqueologia e o Estudo do Antigo Testamento) declara: "Essas extensas ruínas, das quais, apesar da obra de Koldewey, apenas uma pequena parte foi escavada, foram extensamente saqueadas nos séculos passados pelos seus materiais de construção. Parcialmente em consequência disso, grande parte da superfície apresenta agora a aparência de uma desordem tão caótica, que evoca fortemente as profecias de Isa. xiii. 19-22 e de Jer. l. 39 ss., a impressão de desolação sendo ainda aumentada pela aridez característica de grande parte da área em ruínas." — Editado por D. W. Thomas, Oxford, 1967, p. 41.



Religião. Babilônia era um lugar muito religioso. A evidência derivada de escavações e de textos antigos indica a existência de mais de 50 templos. O principal deus da cidade imperial era Marduque, chamado Merodaque na Bíblia. Sugeriu-se que Ninrode fora deificado como Marduque, mas as opiniões dos peritos variam quanto à identificação de deuses com humanos específicos. Na religião babilônica também se destacavam tríades de divindades. Uma delas, composta de dois deuses e uma deusa, era Sin (o deus-lua), Xamaxe ou Samas (o deus-sol), e Istar; dizia-se que estes eram os governantes do zodíaco. E ainda outra tríade era composta dos diabos Labartu, Labasu e Accazu. A idolatria evidenciava-se em toda a parte. Babilônia, de fato, era "uma terra de imagens entalhadas", de imundos "ídolos sórdidos". — Je 50:1, 2, 38.

Os babilônios acreditavam na imortalidade da alma humana. — The Religion of Babylonia and Assyria (A Religião de Babilônia e Assíria), de M. Jastrow, Jr., 1898, p. 556.

Os babilônios desenvolveram a astrologia no empenho de descobrir o futuro do homem nas estrelas. (Veja ASTRÓLOGOS.) A magia, a feitiçaria e a astrologia desempenhavam um papel destacado na religião deles. (Is 47:12, 13; Da 2:27; 4:7) Muitos corpos celestes, por exemplo, planetas, receberam nomes de deuses babilônios. A adivinhação continuava a ser um dos componentes básicos da religião babilônica nos dias de Nabucodonosor, que a usava para tomar decisões. — Ez 21:20-22.

Inimiga Secular de Israel. A Bíblia faz muitas referências a Babilônia, começando com o relato em Gênesis sobre a cidade original de Babel. (Gên 10:10; 11:1-9) Entre os despojos tirados de Jericó por Acã estava "um manto oficial de Sinear". (Jos 7:21) Após a queda do reino setentrional de Israel, em 740 AEC, pessoas de Babilônia e de outras regiões foram trazidas para substituir os israelitas cativos. (2Rs 17:24, 30) Ezequias cometeu o erro de mostrar a mensageiros de Babilônia os tesouros da sua casa; estes mesmos tesouros, bem como alguns dos "filhos" de Ezequias, foram mais tarde levados a Babilônia. (2Rs 20:12-18; 24:12; 25:6, 7) O Rei Manassés (716-662 AEC) também foi levado cativo a Babilônia, mas, por se ter humilhado, Jeová o restabeleceu no trono dele. (2Cr 33:11) O Rei Nabucodonosor levou os preciosos utensílios da casa de Jeová a Babilônia, junto com milhares de cativos. — 2Rs 24:1-25:30; 2Cr 36:6-20.

As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs contam que Jeconias (Joaquim), levado preso a Babilônia, foi um dos elos na linhagem de Jesus. (Mt 1:11, 12, 17) A primeira carta canônica do apóstolo Pedro foi escrita em Babilônia. (1Pe 5:13; veja PEDRO, CARTAS DE.) Esta "Babilônia" era a cidade às margens do Eufrates, não Roma, conforme alguns afirmam.

Veja BABILÔNIA, A GRANDE.

2. O Império Babilônico também era chamado pelo nome da sua capital, Babilônia, e tinha por centro o vale mesopotâmico inferior. — MAPA, Vol. 2, p. 321.

Os historiadores, às vezes, subdividem Babilônia, chamando a parte setentrional de Acade e a parte meridional de Suméria, ou Caldeia. Originalmente, este território era chamado nas Escrituras de "terra de Sinear". (Gên 10:10; 11:2; veja SINEAR.) Mais tarde, quando governantes dominantes fizeram de Babilônia sua capital, esta região era conhecida como Babilônia. Visto que às vezes predominavam as dinastias caldeias, era também chamada de "a terra dos caldeus". (Je 24:5; 25:12; Ez 12:13) Algumas das cidades antigas em Babilônia eram Acade, Adabe, Babilônia, Borsipa, Ereque, Lágaxe, Nipur, Quis e Ur. O Império Babilônico, naturalmente, estendia-se além de Babilônia, abrangendo a Síria e a Palestina, para baixo até a fronteira do Egito.

Por volta da primeira metade do oitavo século AEC, um rei assírio de nome Tiglate-Pileser III (Pul) governava Babilônia. (2Rs 15:29; 16:7; 1Cr 5:26) Posteriormente, um caldeu chamado Merodaque-Baladã tornou-se rei de Babilônia, mas, depois de 12 anos, ele foi deposto por Sargão II. Senaqueribe, sucedendo Sargão II, confrontou-se com outra revolta babilônica, chefiada por Merodaque-Baladã. Após a tentativa fracassada de Senaqueribe, de capturar Jerusalém, em 732 AEC, Merodaque-Baladã mandou enviados a Ezequias, de Judá, possivelmente para procurar apoio contra a Assíria. (Is 39:1, 2; 2Rs 20:12-18) Depois, Senaqueribe expulsou Merodaque-Baladã e coroou-se governante de Babilônia, posição que ocupou até à sua morte. Seu filho, Esar-Hadom, reconstruiu Babilônia. Os babilônios cerraram fileiras em torno de Nabopolassar e conferiram-lhe o reinado. Com ele começou a dinastia neobabilônica, que havia de continuar até Belsazar. Esta dinastia, desde o filho de Nabopolassar, Nabucodonosor, até Belsazar, é representada na profecia bíblica pela cabeça de ouro da estátua do sonho de Nabucodonosor (Da 2:37-45), e, num sonho-visão de Daniel, por um leão que tinha asas de águia e coração de homem. — Da 7:4.

Em 632 AEC, a Assíria foi subjugada por esta nova dinastia caldeia, com a ajuda de aliados medos e citas. Em 625 AEC, o filho mais velho de Nabopolassar, Nabucodonosor (II), derrotou Faraó Neco, do Egito, na batalha de Carquemis, e no mesmo ano assumiu as rédeas do governo. (Je 46:1, 2) Sob Nabucodonosor, Babilônia era "um copo de ouro" na mão de Jeová, para derramar indignação contra as infiéis Judá e Jerusalém. (Je 25:15, 17, 18; 51:7) Em 620 AEC, ele compeliu Jeoiaquim a pagar tributo, mas, depois de cerca de três anos, Jeoiaquim revoltou-se. Em 618 AEC, ou durante o terceiro ano de Jeoiaquim, como governante tributário, Nabucodonosor investiu contra Jerusalém. (2Rs 24:1; 2Cr 36:6) Todavia, antes de Jeoiaquim poder ser preso pelos babilônios, ele morreu. Joaquim, tendo sucedido ao pai, prontamente se rendeu, e, junto com outros nobres, foi levado cativo a Babilônia, em 617 AEC. (2Rs 24:12) Zedequias foi a seguir designado para assumir o trono de Judá, mas ele também se rebelou; e, em 609 AEC, os babilônios sitiaram novamente Jerusalém e finalmente brecharam suas muralhas, em 607 AEC. (2Rs 25:1-10; Je 52:3-12) Aquele ano, 607 AEC, quando Jerusalém foi desolada, era significativo na contagem do tempo até Jeová, o Soberano Universal, estabelecer no poder do Reino o governante mundial da sua escolha. — Veja TEMPOS DESIGNADOS DAS NAÇÕES (Começo do 'pisoteio').

Encontrou-se uma tabuinha cuneiforme que menciona a campanha contra o Egito no 37.º ano de Nabucodonosor (588 AEC). Esta talvez fosse a ocasião em que o poderoso Egito foi trazido sob controle babilônico, conforme predito pelo profeta Ezequiel, evidentemente no ano 591 AEC. (Ez 29:17-19) Finalmente, depois de um reinado de 43 anos, que incluiu tanto a conquista de muitas nações como um grandioso programa de construção na própria Babilônia, Nabucodonosor II faleceu em outubro de 582 AEC, e foi sucedido por Avil-Marduque (Evil-Merodaque). Este novo governante foi bondoso para com o cativo Rei Joaquim. (2Rs 25:27-30) Pouco se sabe sobre os reinados de Neriglissar, que foi evidentemente o sucessor de Evil-Merodaque, e de Labasi-Marduque.

Há informações históricas mais completas disponíveis a respeito de Nabonido e de seu filho, Belsazar, os quais evidentemente governavam como corregentes na época da queda de Babilônia.

Então, os medos e os persas, sob o comando de Ciro, o Grande, já estavam em marcha para assumir o controle sobre Babilônia e tornar-se a quarta potência mundial. Na noite de 5 de outubro de 539 AEC (calendário gregoriano), Babilônia foi tomada e Belsazar foi morto. No primeiro ano de Ciro, após a conquista de Babilônia, ele emitiu o seu famoso decreto que permitiu que um grupo de 42.360 israelitas, além de muitos escravos e cantores profissionais, retornar a Jerusalém. Uns 200 anos mais tarde, o domínio persa sobre Babilônia chegou ao fim, quando Alexandre Magno capturou Babilônia, em 331 AEC. Por volta de meados do segundo século AEC, os partos, sob o seu rei Mitridates I, estavam no controle de Babilônia.

Visto que comunidades judaicas haviam florescido nesta terra, Pedro, o apóstolo para os judeus, foi a Babilônia, e foi dali que escreveu pelo menos uma das suas cartas inspiradas. (Gál 2:7-9; 1Pe 5:13) Líderes judaicos nestas comunidades orientais também desenvolveram o Targum Babilônico, igualmente conhecido como Targum de Onkelos, e produziram diversos manuscritos das Escrituras Hebraicas. O Códice dos Profetas Posteriores, de Petersburg, datado de 916 EC, é digno de nota porque engloba uma mistura de versões oriental (babilônica) e ocidental (tiberiana).

BABILÔNIA, A GRANDE. Entre as visões de João, registradas no livro de Revelação, aparecem declarações de julgamento contra "Babilônia, a Grande", bem como uma descrição dela e da sua queda. — Re 14:8; 16:19; caps. 17 e 18; 19:1-3.

Em Revelação 17:3-5, Babilônia, a Grande, é descrita como mulher vestida de púrpura e escarlate, ricamente adornada, e montada numa fera cor de escarlate que tem sete cabeças e dez chifres. Na sua testa acha-se escrito um nome, "um mistério: 'Babilônia, a Grande, a mãe das meretrizes e das coisas repugnantes da terra' ". Ela também é representada como sentada sobre "muitas águas", que representam "povos, e multidões, e nações, e línguas". — Re 17:1-15.

O luxo e o domínio atribuídos à Babilônia, a Grande, não permitem simplesmente igualá-la à cidade literal de Babilônia, na Mesopotâmia. Depois que a antiga Babilônia caiu diante de Ciro, o Persa, em 539 AEC, ela perdeu sua posição como potência mundial dominante, sendo libertos os seus cativos, inclusive os judeus. Embora a cidade continuasse a existir até mesmo além dos dias dos apóstolos, e, portanto, existisse nos dias de João, não mais era uma cidade de importância mundial, e por fim caiu em decadência e ficou em completa ruína. Assim, Babilônia, a Grande, tem de ser encarada como cidade simbólica, da qual a cidade literal de Babilônia era o protótipo. Visto que a cidade antiga fornece à cidade mística o seu nome, é de ajuda considerar brevemente as características notáveis de Babilônia junto ao Eufrates, características estas que fornecem indícios quanto à identificação da cidade simbólica da visão de João.

Características da Antiga Babilônia. A fundação da cidade de Babilônia, nas planícies de Sinear, foi simultânea com a tentativa da construção da Torre de Babel. (Gên 11:2-9) A causa popular a ser promovida pela construção da torre e da cidade não era o enaltecimento do nome de Deus, mas que os construtores 'fizessem para si um nome célebre'. As torres zigurates descobertas não somente nas ruínas da antiga Babilônia, mas também em outras partes da Mesopotâmia, parecem confirmar a natureza essencialmente religiosa da torre original, qualquer que tenha sido sua forma ou estilo. A ação decisiva tomada por Jeová Deus para acabar com a construção do templo claramente condena-a como tendo origem na religião falsa. Ao passo que o nome hebraico dado à cidade, Babel, significa "Confusão", o nome sumeriano (Kadingir-ra) e o nome acadiano (Bab-ilu) significam ambos "Porta de Deus". De modo que os habitantes remanescentes da cidade alteraram a forma do nome dela para evitar o original sentido condenatório, mas a forma nova ou substituta ainda identifica a cidade com a religião.

A Bíblia alista Babel primeiro ao apresentar 'o princípio do reino de Ninrode'. (Gên 10:8-10) Em todas as Escrituras Hebraicas, a antiga cidade de Babilônia é destacada como perene inimiga de Jeová Deus e Seu povo.

Embora Babilônia se tornasse a capital dum império político, no sétimo e no sexto século AEC, destacava-se notavelmente em toda a sua história como centro religioso, do qual a influência religiosa se irradiava em muitas direções.

O Professor Morris Jastrow, Jr., na sua obra The Religion of Babylonia and Assyria (A Religião de Babilônia e Assíria, 1898, pp. 699-701), diz a respeito disso: "No mundo antigo, antes do surgimento do cristianismo, o Egito, a Pérsia e a Grécia sentiram a influência da religião babilônica. . . . Na Pérsia, o culto de Mitra revela a inconfundível influência de conceitos babilônicos; e quando é lembrado que grau de importância os mistérios relacionados com este culto adquiriram entre os romanos, acrescenta-se outro elo que liga as ramificações de cultura antiga com a civilização do vale do Eufrates." Na conclusão, ele menciona "a profunda impressão causada no mundo antigo pelas notáveis manifestações de pensamento religioso em Babilônia e pela atividade religiosa que prevaleceu naquela região".

A influência religiosa de Babilônia é traçada para o leste, à Índia, no livro New Light on the Most Ancient East (Nova Luz sobre o Mais Antigo Oriente), do arqueólogo V. Childe (1957, p. 185). Entre outros pontos, ele declara: "A suástica e a cruz, comuns em sinetes e placas, eram símbolos religiosos ou mágicos, como em Babilônia e Elão, no mais primitivo período pré-histórico, mas preservam este caráter também na moderna Índia como em outras partes." De modo que a influência religiosa da antiga Babilônia se espalhou a muitos povos e nações, muito mais longe e com maior potência e persistência do que a sua força política.

Igual à Babilônia mística, a antiga cidade de Babilônia, de fato, sentava-se sobre águas, visto que estava situada às margens do rio Eufrates, e tinha diversos canais e fossos cheios de água. (Je 51:1, 13; Re 17:1, 15) Essas águas serviam de defesa para a cidade, e constituíam vias pelas quais navios traziam riquezas e luxos de muitas fontes. É notável que se retrata a água do Eufrates como se secando antes de Babilônia, a Grande, sofrer o furor do julgamento divino. — Re 16:12, 19.

Aspectos Distintivos da Babilônia Mística. A mulher simbólica que leva o nome de Babilônia, a Grande, é "a grande cidade que tem um reino sobre os reis da terra", um reino que lhe permite, na realidade, sentar-se sobre "povos, e multidões, e nações, e línguas". (Re 17:1, 15, 18) Um reino sobre outros reinos e nações é definido como "império". Babilônia, a Grande, coloca-se acima de reis terrestres, exercendo poder e influência sobre eles. Ela está montada na simbólica fera de sete cabeças, usando-se animais em outras partes da Bíblia como símbolos de potências mundiais políticas. — Veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.

Alguns peritos presumem que Babilônia, a Grande, seja um império político, quer Babilônia, quer Roma. Já vimos que Babilônia, como império político, já deixara de existir há muito tempo quando João recebeu a sua visão profética. Quanto a tratar-se de Roma, a natureza do seu governo político não se harmoniza com a descrição do proceder de Babilônia, a Grande, e os métodos de esta dominar. Ela é meretriz, cometendo fornicação com os reis da Terra, embriagando-os com o vinho da sua fornicação, e desencaminhando as nações pelas suas "práticas espíritas". (Re 17:1, 2; 18:3, 23) O domínio de Roma, em contraste, foi conseguido e mantido por seu férreo poderio militar e sua firme aplicação da lei romana nas suas províncias e colônias. Em reconhecimento deste fato, diz The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible (O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete): "Não basta identificar Roma e Babilônia. Babilônia abrange mais do que um império ou uma cultura. Ela é definida mais por idolatrias dominantes do que por limites geográficos ou temporais. Babilônia é coextensiva com o reino daquele animal que tem corrompido e escravizado a humanidade, e que o Cordeiro tem de vencer (Rev. 17:14), se a humanidade há de ser liberta." — Editado por G. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 1, p. 338.

Nas Escrituras Hebraicas usa-se frequentemente o símbolo duma meretriz ou duma fornicadora. A nação de Israel foi avisada contra entrar numa relação pactuada com as nações de Canaã, porque isto os levaria a terem "relações imorais ["se prostituírem", IBB] com os seus deuses". (Êx 34:12-16) Tanto Israel como Judá apostataram da verdadeira adoração de Jeová Deus e foram condenados por ele por se terem empenhado em meretrício, prostituindo-se com as nações políticas e seus deuses. (Is 1:21; Je 3:6-10, 13; Ez 16:15-17, 28, 29, 38; Os 6:10; 7:11; 8:9, 10) Pode-se notar aqui que Deus não encarava Israel ou Judá como meras entidades políticas que entraram em relações com outros governos políticos. Antes, Deus repreendeu-os à base de estarem num pacto sagrado com ele, e assim tendo a responsabilidade de ser um povo santo, devotado a Ele e à Sua adoração pura. — Je 2:1-3, 17-21.

Um uso similar de tal linguagem figurada encontra-se nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. A congregação cristã é comparada a uma virgem prometida em casamento a Cristo como sua Cabeça e Rei. (2Co 11:2; Ef 5:22-27) O discípulo Tiago advertiu os cristãos contra cometerem adultério espiritual por ter amizade com o mundo. (Tg 4:4; compare isso com Jo 15:19.) As fornicações de Babilônia, a Grande, e de suas "filhas" são de natureza similar, e não alguma exceção única. (O termo "filhas" é às vezes empregado na Bíblia para se referir a subúrbios ou a aldeias circunvizinhas duma cidade ou metrópole, como as “aldeias dependentes” [literalmente: “filhas”, em hebraico] de Samaria e de Sodoma; veja Ez 16:46-48.)

Um fator significativo adicional é que, quando Babilônia, a Grande, cai sob o ataque devastador dos dez chifres da fera simbólica, a queda dela é lamentada pelos seus companheiros de fornicação, os reis da Terra, e também pelos comerciantes e pelos armadores que lidaram com ela por supri-la de mercadorias luxuosas e de artigos suntuosos. Ao passo que esses representantes políticos e comerciais sobrevivem à desolação dela, é notável que não se retrata nenhuns representantes religiosos como ainda em cena para compartilhar no lamento pela queda dela. (Re 17:16, 17; 18:9-19) Mostra-se a execução do julgamento nos reis da Terra algum tempo depois do aniquilamento da Babilônia mística, e a destruição deles não procede dos “dez chifres”, mas da espada do Rei dos reis, a Palavra de Deus. — Re 19:1, 2, 11-18.

Outra característica distintiva de Babilônia, a Grande, é a sua embriaguez, sendo ela retratada como estando “embriagada com o sangue dos santos e com o sangue das testemunhas de Jesus”. (Re 17:4, 6; 18:24; 19:1, 2) Ela é assim a réplica espiritual da antiga cidade de Babilônia, expressando a mesma inimizade para com o verdadeiro povo de Deus. É significativo que Jesus lançou sobre os líderes religiosos a responsabilidade pelo “sangue justo derramado na terra, desde o sangue do justo Abel até o sangue de Zacarias”. Embora estas palavras fossem dirigidas aos líderes religiosos dentre a própria raça de Jesus, a nação judaica, e embora a perseguição movida aos seguidores de Jesus por um tempo fosse especialmente intensa por parte daquele setor, a história mostra que, depois disso, a oposição ao genuíno cristianismo vinha de outras fontes (sendo que os próprios judeus sofreram considerável perseguição). — Mt 23:29-35.

Todos os fatores acima mencionados são significativos, e precisam todos ser considerados para se obter o verdadeiro quadro da simbólica Babilônia, a Grande, e do que ela representa.

BACA [hebr.: ba·khá']. A planta que desempenhou um papel importante no encontro de Davi com os filisteus na “baixada de Refaim”. (2Sa 5:22-25; 1Cr 14:13-16) A única outra referência à planta encontra-se no Salmo 84:6: “Passando adiante pela baixada dos lentiscos [literalmente: (arbustos de) baca], fazem dela um manancial.” Isto talvez se refira à mesma “baixada de Refaim”, onde ocorreu a luta de Davi, planície que se acredita encontrar-se ao SO de Jerusalém.

A palavra hebraica usada deriva dum radical que significa “chorar”. (Veja Gên 21:16.) Portanto, parece indicar uma planta, um arbusto ou uma árvore que exsuda gotas de goma ou talvez uma seiva leitosa. Sua identificação é incerta; o nome baca simplesmente é uma transliteração da palavra hebraica. Não parece haver base para o conceito rabínico que a relaciona com a amoreira (como também é vertido em CBC, MC). Visto que os balsameiros (dos quais há vários nas diversas famílias de árvores) exsudam uma goma ou resina, estes foram sugeridos por muitos peritos. Um balsameiro da família dos choupos (Populus euphratica) é recomendado por alguns botânicos, principalmente pela facilidade com que qualquer brisa agita suas folhas, produzindo um farfalhar. Todavia, a Bíblia não especifica como se produziu “o ruído de marcha” (quer por meio das folhas, dos ramos, quer por alguma outra parte da planta), e ela simplesmente indica que ocorreu “nas copas” das plantas. Pode ter sido um mero farfalhar que serviu de sinal, ou, conforme alguns sugerem, pode ter sido um ruído de certa intensidade, produzido por um vento impetuoso, que serviu para encobrir ou mesmo para simular o ruído dum exército em marcha. — 2Sa 5:24; 1Cr 14:15.

BACBUQUE [Frasco]. Antepassado de certos netineus que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:43, 51; Ne 7:53.

BACBUQUIAS [Frasco de Jah].

1. Levita que retornou a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel e serviu de guarda. (Ne 12:1, 9) Possivelmente o N.º 2 abaixo.

2. Guarda levita registrado como cabeça duma casa paterna. — Ne 12:23, 25; veja o N.º 1 acima.

3. Levita, possivelmente dos cantores, selecionado para residir em Jerusalém sob Neemias. — Ne 11:17, 18.

BACIA. As Escrituras não fornecem uma descrição detalhada das bacias usadas nos tempos antigos, embora tais recipientes costumassem ser de argila, ou eram de madeira ou de metal. Algumas bacias serviam para fins domésticos, como aquelas que estavam entre as provisões levadas a Davi e ao povo com ele, quando fugiram de Absalão. (2Sa 17:27-29) Para este tipo de bacia usa-se a palavra hebraica saf. Esta é também usada para a bacia em que os israelitas, no Egito, puseram o sangue da vítima pascoal (Êx 12:22) e para as bacias do templo que Nabucodonosor levou a Babilônia. (Je 52:19) Esta palavra também pode ser vertida por “taça”, e neste respeito Jeová é representado como dizendo profeticamente: “Eis que eu faço de Jerusalém uma taça [saf] que causa tontura a todos os povos ao redor." — (Za 12:1, 2). Usa-se a palavra grega niptér para se referir à "bacia" que Jesus usou ao lavar os pés dos seus discípulos. — Jo 13:5; veja Int.

Uso no Santuário. Usavam-se também bacias para fins sagrados, em conexão com a adoração de Jeová no tabernáculo e nos templos posteriores. Conforme Jeová instruiu Moisés, os objetos do tabernáculo incluíam uma bacia grande, que devia ser enchida de água. Ela era de cobre, apoiada num suporte de cobre, e era colocada entre a tenda de reunião e o altar, para prover o sumo sacerdote e os outros sacerdotes de água para lavarem as mãos e os pés, quer antes de entrar na tenda de reunião, quer para ministrar no altar. (Êx 30:17-21; 31:9; 40:30, 31) Esta bacia, chamada de pia em algumas traduções (Al; BLH), fora feita dos "espelhos das serventes que prestavam serviço organizado à entrada da tenda de reunião". — Êx 38:8.

De acordo com o texto massorético, não havia nenhuma instrução específica a respeito do transporte da bacia do tabernáculo. No entanto, a Septuaginta grega (que concorda com o antigo Pentateuco samaritano) acrescenta em Números 4:14 as palavras: "E tomarão um pano roxo e cobrirão a bacia e seu suporte, e colocá-los-ão numa cobertura de pele azul, e colocá[-los-]ão sobre varais."

Usa-se a palavra hebraica ki·yóhr (ou: ki·yór), que significa "bacia" ou "lavatório", para a bacia do tabernáculo. (Êx 35:16 n.) Ela é também usada para as dez bacias que Salomão fez para o uso do templo, nas quais se enxaguavam as coisas que tinham que ver com a oferta queimada. — 2Cr 4:6, 14.

Cada uma das dez bacias de cobre (pias, Al; ALA; IBB) que Hirão fez para uso no templo podiam conter "a medida de quarenta batos", ou cerca de 880 l de água. Caso essas bacias tenham tido forma hemisférica, isto significa que tinham um diâmetro de talvez 1,8 m. Naturalmente, se fossem bojudas e se estreitassem um pouco nas bordas, as medidas seriam outras, e é preciso observar que a Bíblia não fornece informações pormenorizadas sobre o seu feitio, embora diga que "cada bacia era de quatro côvados". Cada bacia era colocada num carrocim de quatro rodas, habilmente feito com trabalho ornamental e gravuras, colocando-se cinco à direita e cinco à esquerda da casa. — 1Rs 7:27-39.

Outra bacia de grande tamanho era o enorme e ornamentado mar de fundição, posto sobre 12 touros modelados, e colocado "ao lado direito, ao leste, para o sul" da casa. Continha água para o uso dos sacerdotes. Era circular, tendo 10 côvados (4,5 m) de borda a borda, e 5 côvados (2,2 m) de altura. — 2Cr 4:2-6, 10.

Tigelas. Assim como no caso de outros recipientes mencionados nas Escrituras, as tigelas eram feitas de argila, ou então de madeira ou de metal. O termo hebraico miz·ráq indica um recipiente de metal evidentemente usado em conexão com sacrifícios na adoração. (Êx 27:3; Núm 4:14; 7:13; 1Rs 7:50; 2Cr 4:8) Entre as tigelas maiores usadas em refeições estava o tsal·lá·hhath ("tacho de banquete"; Pr 26:15) e o sé·fel ("grande taça de banquete"; Jz 5:25). Usa-se gul·láh para indicar uma "tigela" (Za 4:2), mas a palavra é também vertida "em forma de tigela" e "redondos" para descrever os capitéis das colunas diante do templo no tempo de Salomão. (1Rs 7:41) Os dois termos gregos para tigelas são trý·bli·on e fi·á·le. Trý·bli·on indica um prato relativamente fundo no qual se tomava a refeição (Mt 26:23), ao passo que fi·á·le refere-se a uma "tigela", frequentemente usada para oferecer sacrifícios líquidos. — Re 16:2-17.

BAGAGEM. O termo hebraico kelí, às vezes vertido "bagagem", tem uma aplicação ampla. O sentido básico da palavra hebraica é possivelmente "algo que contém; recipiente". — Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA.

Um acampamento do exército, viajantes, os reunidos numa assembleia longe de casa, e assim por diante, teriam consigo os itens necessários como bagagem. (1Sa 10:21, 22; 17:22; 25:9-13) Davi estabeleceu em Israel a regra de que os homens deixados para guardar a bagagem, durante campanhas militares, deviam ter parte igual com os combatentes nos despojos de vitória. — 1Sa 30:21-25.

Disse-se ao Egito que se equipasse para o exílio por aprontar "bagagem para o exílio", visto que a queda dele diante de Babilônia era certa, conforme predito por meio do profeta Jeremias. (Je 46:13, 19) Em plena luz do dia, como parte duma encenação simbólica relacionada com o vindouro exílio de Jerusalém em Babilônia, Ezequiel levou para fora da casa "bagagem para o exílio". — Ez 12:1-4, 7-11.

BAGAS [hebr.: paq·qu·'óth, plural]. A palavra hebraica traduzida por "bagas" aparece na Bíblia apenas com referência a um incidente ocorrido durante uma época de fome nos dias de Eliseu. Alguém havia ajuntado algumas bagas silvestres, desconhecidas, e as havia picado num cozido. Quando o provaram, "os filhos dos profetas" temeram uma intoxicação alimentar e deixaram de comê-lo, mas Eliseu milagrosamente salvou o cozido de ser perdido. — 2Rs 4:38-41.

Embora se fizessem outras sugestões, a colocíntida (Citrullus colocynthis), uma planta aparentada com a melancia, geralmente é favorecida como a planta cujo fruto provavelmente corresponde às 'bagas silvestres' do registro bíblico. A trepadeira da colocíntida se espalha como o pepino, e também tem folhagem similar. O fruto tem aproximadamente o tamanho duma laranja; tem casca grossa e lisa, com manchas verdes e amarelas, e contém uma polpa esponjosa muito amarga e venenosa, da qual se produz a colocintina medicinal. As características da colocíntida se enquadrariam na narrativa bíblica duma baga silvestre aparentemente venenosa, conforme sugeria o próprio sabor dela. (2Rs 4:40) Quando a maioria das outras plantas já murcharam, ela ainda permanece verde, e, por isso, constitui uma tentação para quem não a conhece.

Os ornamentos em forma de bagas (hebr.: peqa·'ím), que adornavam o mar de fundição e os painéis de cedro no interior do templo de Salomão talvez fossem redondos como o fruto da colocíntida. — 1Rs 6:18; 7:24; 2Cr 4:3.

BAIA. Veja MANJEDOURA, BAIA.

BALÁ. Veja BAALÁ N.º 3.

BALAÃO [possivelmente: Engolidor]. Filho de Beor, do 15.º século AEC. Ele morava na cidade arameia de Petor, no vale do alto Eufrates, e próximo do rio Sajur. Embora não fosse israelita, Balaão tinha certo conhecimento e reconhecimento de Jeová como o verdadeiro Deus, falando dele em certa ocasião como "Jeová, meu Deus". (Núm 22:5, 18) Isto talvez se tenha dado porque devotados adoradores de Jeová (Abraão, Ló e Jacó) anteriormente moravam na vizinhança de Harã, não muito longe de Petor. — Gên 12:4, 5; 24:10; 28:5; 31:18, 38.

Balaão rejeitou a oferta da primeira delegação do rei moabita, Balaque, a qual trouxe consigo "honorários pela adivinhação", dizendo: "Jeová se negou a deixar-me ir convosco." (Núm 22:5-14) Quando vieram "outros príncipes em maior número e mais honrados" (Núm 22:15), e Balaão novamente buscou a permissão de Deus para ir com eles, Jeová disse: "Levanta-te, vai com eles. Mas, somente a palavra que eu te falar é que podes falar." — Núm 22:16-21; Miq 6:5.

No caminho, o anjo de Jeová por três vezes se colocou de pé na estrada, fazendo com que a jumenta de Balaão primeiro se desviasse para um campo, em seguida apertasse o pé de Balaão contra um muro, e, por fim, se deitasse. Por três vezes Balaão espancou o animal, que então, miraculosamente, proferiu um protesto verbal. (Núm 22:22-30) Por fim, o próprio Balaão viu o anjo de Jeová, que anunciou: "Eu é que saí para fazer oposição, porque teu caminho tem sido temerariamente contrário à minha vontade." Todavia, Jeová mais uma vez permitiu que Balaão continuasse em seu proceder escolhido. — Núm 22:31-35.

Desde o começo até o fim, Deus desaprovou inalteravelmente qualquer maldição contra Israel, insistindo em que, se Balaão fosse, teria de abençoar, não de amaldiçoar. (Jos 24:9, 10) Todavia, Deus lhe permitiu ir. Foi como no caso de Caim, quando Jeová expressou sua desaprovação, mas, ao mesmo tempo, lhe permitiu que fizesse a sua escolha pessoal, quer de abandonar seu mau caminho, quer de mergulhar no seu proceder iníquo. (Gên 4:6-8) Balaão, então, como Caim, foi teimoso em desconsiderar a vontade de Jeová nessa questão, e estava determinado a alcançar seu próprio objetivo egoísta. No caso de Balaão, foi a cobiça da recompensa que o cegou quanto ao erro de seu modo de agir, conforme Judas escreve: 'Balaão se arremeteu no proceder errôneo por uma recompensa.' O apóstolo Pedro comenta: "Balaão, filho de Beor, . . . amava a recompensa de fazer injustiça, mas ele recebeu uma repreensão pela sua própria violação daquilo que era direito. Um animal de carga, sem voz, fazendo pronunciação com voz de homem, impediu o proceder louco do profeta." — Ju 11; 2Pe 2:15, 16.

Ao alcançar o território moabita e encontrar o rei Balaque na margem do Árnon, Balaão não perdeu tempo em passar a trabalhar para esses opositores do povo de Jeová, no dia seguinte. Balaão, junto com Balaque, ofereceu sacrifícios, e então Balaão retirou-se, esperando "encontrar quaisquer presságios de azar" (Núm 23:3; 24:1), mas a única mensagem recebida foi uma bênção para Israel, da parte de Jeová. O mesmo proceder sacrificial foi novamente seguido no cume do Pisga, e novamente 'contra Jacó não houve feitiço de azar', apenas bênçãos. Por fim, essa atuação foi repetida no cume do Peor, e, de novo, pela terceira vez, "Deus transformou a invocação do mal numa bênção". — Núm 22:41-24:9; Ne 13:2.

Diante destes acontecimentos, "se acendeu a ira de Balaque contra Balaão", e, batendo palmas em fúria, exclamou: "Foi para maldizer meus inimigos que te chamei, e eis que estas três vezes os tens abençoado até o limite. E agora corre depressa para o teu lugar. Eu havia dito a mim mesmo que sem falta te honraria, mas, eis que Jeová te negou a honra." (Núm 24:10, 11) Balaão procurou desculpar-se, culpando a Jeová pelo seu fracasso quanto a amaldiçoar Israel, dizendo que "não poderia infringir a ordem de Jeová", e que 'teria de falar o que Jeová falasse'. Assim, com mais alguns ditos proverbiais contra os inimigos de Israel, "Balaão se levantou e foi embora, e voltou ao seu lugar". — Núm 24:12-25.

Quando se diz que Balaão "voltou ao seu lugar", não necessariamente significa que realmente chegou ao seu lar, lá em Petor. Essas palavras não inferem que Balaão tenha deixado mais do que a própria vizinhança do monte Peor. Como observa o Commentary (Comentário) de Cook, sobre Números 24:25: "Voltou ao seu próprio lugar . . . Não à sua própria terra, pois permaneceu entre os midianitas para conspirar, por novos meios, contra o povo de Deus, e para perecer em seu pecado. . . . A frase, que ocorre frequentemente (cf. e.g. Gên. xviii. 33, xxxi. 55; I S. xxvi. 25; 2 S. xix. 39), é idiomática, significando apenas que Balaão se foi para onde quis.”

Balaão ainda entretinha esperanças de obter aquela rica recompensa, pela qual tinha vindo de tão longe e trabalhado tão arduamente. Se não podia amaldiçoar Israel, raciocinava ele, talvez Deus mesmo amaldiçoasse seu próprio povo, se este tão-somente pudesse ser seduzido a praticar a adoração do sexo do Baal de Peor. Assim, “Balaão . . . foi ensinar a Balaque a pôr uma pedra de tropeço diante dos filhos de Israel, para que comessem de coisas sacrificadas a ídolos e cometessem fornicação”. (Re 2:14) “Pela palavra de Balaão”, as filhas de Moabe e de Midiã “serviram para induzir os filhos de Israel a cometerem infidelidade para com Jeová na questão de Peor, de modo que veio o flagelo sobre a assembleia de Jeová”. (Núm 31:16) O resultado: 24.000 homens de Israel morreram por seu pecado. (Núm 25:1-9) Nem Midiã nem Balaão escaparam da punição divina. Jeová ordenou que todos os homens, as mulheres e os meninos de Midiã fossem executados; apenas as virgens foram poupadas. “E mataram Balaão, filho de Beor, com a espada.” (Núm 25:16-18; 31:1-18) Quanto aos moabitas, foram barrados da congregação de Jeová “até a décima geração”. — De 23:3-6.

BALADÃ [do acadiano: significando “Deus Deu um Filho”]. Pai de Merodaque-Baladã (Is 39:1; “Berodaque-Baladã” em 2Rs 20:12). O filho de Baladã, Merodaque-Baladã, foi rei de Babilônia pelo menos durante parte do reinado do Rei Ezequias, de Judá (745-717 AEC).

BALANÇA. Instrumento para pesar objetos. Os antigos estavam familiarizados com a balança simples de travessão. Consistia numa barra ou travessão horizontal apoiado no centro numa cavilha (cutelo) ou num cordão, e em cada extremidade do travessão se pendurava um prato ou gancho. O objeto a ser pesado era colocado num dos pratos (ou pendurado em um dos ganchos, como no caso de pequena sacola de dinheiro) e os pesos conhecidos eram colocados no outro lado. (Je 32:10; Is 46:6; Gên 23:15, 16; Ez 5:1; veja DINHEIRO.) Durante uma fome, até mesmo os alimentos podiam ser medidos cuidadosamente numa balança. O cavaleiro montado no cavalo preto, descrito em Revelação 6:5, tinha na mão uma balança “para medir o pão pelo peso, personificando . . . tempos ruins, quando as provisões seriam terrivelmente caras”. — The Expositor’s Greek Testament (Testamento Grego do Expositor), editado por W. Nicoll, 1967, Vol. V, p. 390.

Jeová ordenou que houvesse honestidade e exatidão no uso da balança (Le 19:35, 36), pois lhe era detestável a balança fraudulenta. (Pr 11:1; 16:11; Ez 45:10) Podia-se fazer com que a balança se tornasse inexata por meio de braços de comprimentos desiguais, ou podia-se torná-la menos sensível por meio de braços relativamente curtos, ou por fazer com que o travessão fosse mais grosso e mais pesado. Às vezes, os israelitas utilizavam fraudulentamente a balança (Os 12:7; Am 8:5), e multiplicavam o engano por usarem pesos inexatos, um conjunto para compras e outro para vendas. — Pr 20:23.

Falava-se de balanças em sentido figurativo, como quando Jó mencionou ‘pesar sua adversidade na balança’. (Jó 6:2) A pequenez dos homens terrenos foi enfatizada por se dizer que são mais leves do que uma exalação sobre a balança (Sal 62:9), e as nações foram comparadas com uma camada insignificante de pó na balança, do ponto de vista de Jeová, que pode, como que, pesar todos os morros na balança. (Is 40:12, 15) A balança era às vezes usada para representar a medição exata no julgamento. — Jó 31:6; Da 5:27.

BALAQUE [Ele Devastou]. Rei de Moabe, adorador de Baal, do século 15 AEC; filho de Zipor. O povo de Balaque estava atemorizado e cheio dum “pavor mórbido” quando viu o que Israel fizera com os amorreus. Coligado com Midiã, Balaque mandou buscar Balaão, na cidade de Petor, junto ao rio Eufrates, para que viesse da Mesopotâmia e amaldiçoasse Israel com “poder mágico”, esperando, destarte, obter vantagem militar. (Núm 23:21) “Eis que”, disse Balaque a Balaão, “[os israelitas] cobriram a terra até onde se pode ver e estão morando bem defronte de mim”. De início, Balaão negou-se a ir, mas, depois que Balaque enviou uma delegação mais honrosa de príncipes e aumentou sua oferta, o ganancioso profeta finalmente aceitou ir, com a concessão de Jeová. Ao chegar à margem do Árnon, Balaque ralhou com ele: “Por que não vieste a mim [desde o início]? Não sou real e verdadeiramente capaz de te honrar?” — Núm 22:2-37.

Balaque levou Balaão a três pontos de observação, dos quais podia ver a hoste de Israel. Em cada ponto seguiu-se o mesmo proceder sacrificial; Balaque foi orientado a construir sete altares sobre os quais foram sacrificados sete touros e sete carneiros. No entanto, em cada lugar, ao invés de amaldiçoar Israel, Balaão o abençoou. — Núm 22:41-24:9; Miq 6:5.

Diante disso, “se acendeu a ira de Balaque contra Balaão”. Batendo palmas em fúria, exclamou: “Foi para maldizer meus inimigos que te chamei, e eis que estas três vezes os tens abençoado até o limite.

E agora corre depressa para o teu lugar." Mas, antes de este profeta de Petor partir, ele predisse a "estrela" messiânica, que viria da descendência de Jacó. — Núm 24:10-17; Jos 24:9, 10; Jz 11:25.

Os eventos subsequentes mostram que Balaão também "foi ensinar a Balaque a pôr uma pedra de tropeço diante dos filhos de Israel, para que comessem de coisas sacrificadas a ídolos e cometessem fornicação". — Re 2:14; Núm 25:1-18.

BALSAMEIRO. Veja BACA.

BÁLSAMO, BÁLSAMO DE GILEADE. O termo "bálsamo" aplica-se a qualquer das muitas plantas, arbustos e árvores que produzem uma substância aromática, e, comumente, oleosa e resinosa. A mesma palavra também se aplica à substância que é produzida. Há árvores balsamíferas dentre os abetos, os espruces, os choupos e outras famílias de árvores. O óleo balsâmico é usado medicinalmente (em geral contém ácido benzoico ou cinâmico) e como perfume.

Plantas e árvores balsâmicas eram sempre altamente apreciadas pelos povos do Oriente. A primeira menção do "óleo de bálsamo" (hebr.: bó·sem, bé·sem, ou ba·sám) ocorre em Êxodo 25:6, referindo-se ao seu uso como ingrediente no óleo de santa unção do tabernáculo. (Veja também Êx 35:8, 28.) A palavra hebraica às vezes é traduzida por "perfumes", "fragrante" ou "especiarias", segundo o contexto. (Êx 30:23; Cân 4:10, 14, 16; 5:13; 6:2; 8:14) Em Isaías 3:24, sua fragrância aromática é contrastada com "cheiro de mofo".

O bálsamo usado para o serviço do tabernáculo no ermo evidentemente provinha de fora da Palestina, talvez do Egito. Durante o reinado do Rei Salomão, a preciosidade do óleo de bálsamo motivou sua classificação, junto com o ouro e as pedras preciosas, dentre os tesouros que a rainha de Sabá trouxe quais presentes; estava também incluído no tributo pago pelos reis de muitas terras ao sábio rei em Jerusalém. (1Rs 10:2, 10, 25; 2Cr 9:1, 9, 24) Achava-se entre as coisas preciosas guardadas na casa do tesouro do rei, que Ezequias insensatamente mostrou aos emissários de Babilônia. (2Rs 20:13; 2Cr 32:27; Is 39:2) Foi usado na embalsamação (embora não do modo egípcio) do corpo do Rei Asa. (2Cr 16:14) A palavra portuguesa "embalsamar" parece originalmente ter derivado do hebraico basám. Ester foi massageada com óleo de bálsamo aromático durante o último período de seis meses anterior à sua apresentação ao Rei Assuero. — Est 2:12.

O "bálsamo [hebr.: tsori] em Gileade" parece ter sido de qualidade ímpar e ter possuído propriedades medicinais especiais. (Je 8:22; 46:11) Este bálsamo é primeiro mencionado como estando entre os artigos levados pela caravana de ismaelitas que vinha de Gileade, ao L do Jordão, e à qual José foi subsequentemente vendido. (Gên 37:25-28) Jacó mais tarde incluiu-o entre os "produtos mais excelentes do país", quando enviou uma dádiva ao Egito por meio de seus filhos que voltavam. (Gên 43:11) De acordo com Ezequiel 27:17, os ricos mercadores de Tiro o importavam do reino de Judá.

Referências às virtudes curativas do bálsamo, principalmente como cura para feridas, são comuns na literatura antiga. Todas as referências a tais propriedades curativas, nas Escrituras, são feitas por Jeremias. Ele as usa, porém, em sentido figurado, primeiro ao lamentar o colapso espiritual em Judá (Je 8:14, 15, 21, 22; compare isso com Tg 5:14, 15), depois, ao censurar o Egito pelos seus esforços vãos de evitar ser derrotado por Babilônia (Je 46:11-13), e finalmente ao proferir o julgamento de calamidade por Deus contra Babilônia. — Je 51:8-10.

A identificação das plantas ou árvores específicas representadas pelas palavras hebraicas bó·sem e tsori não é definitiva. O nome "bálsamo de Gileade" tem sido aplicado a uma árvore sempre-verde arbustiforme chamada Commiphora opobalsamum (ou: Commiphora gileadensis). Sua resina oleosa, amarelo-esverdeada, é colhida por meio de incisões feitas no caule e nos ramos, e as pequenas bolotas de seiva que se formam são depois coletadas. Ao passo que esta árvore específica é encontrada mormente no S da Arábia, o historiador judeu Josefo indica que era cultivada ao redor de Jericó, no tempo de Salomão, e o geógrafo grego, Estrabão, registra que, nos tempos romanos, também era cultivada junto ao mar da Galileia.

Tem-se sugerido que tsori talvez se refira ao lentisco (Pistacia lentiscus), que produz uma goma fragrante, amarelo-clara, chamada mástique, como também um óleo usado para fins medicinais, obtido da casca, das folhas e dos frutos. A árvore é comum na Palestina e seu nome, em árabe, é muito similar ao tsori hebraico.

BAMOTE [Altos]. Um dos estágios dos acampamentos da nação de Israel na sua aproximação à terra de Canaã. (Núm 21:19, 20) Bamote está alistada entre Naaliel e "o vale que está no campo de Moabe, junto ao cume do Pisga". Provavelmente trata-se duma forma abreviada de Bamote-Baal. — Veja BAMOTE-BAAL.

BAMOTE-BAAL [Altos de Baal]. Uma cidade em Moabe, à qual Balaque, o rei de Moabe, conduziu o profeta Balaão, a fim de que visse o acampamento de Israel e invocasse uma maldição sobre este. (Núm 22:41) A escolha deste lugar por Balaque para o proferimento da maldição e os sacrifícios acompanhantes talvez indique que se tratava dum centro da adoração de Baal, evidentemente situado num lugar elevado. (Núm 23:1-9) Posteriormente, Bamote-Baal e outras cidades "no planalto" foram designadas à tribo de Rubem como herança. (Jos 13:15, 17) No começo do nono século AEC, o Rei Mesa, de Moabe, declara que ele reconstruiu "Bete-Bamote, porque fora destruída". (Linha 27 da Pedra Moabita) Parece provável que Bamote, Bamote-Baal e Bete-Bamote fossem todos nomes do mesmo lugar. — Veja Baal-Meom, Beom, Bete-Baal-Meom no artigo sobre BAAL-MEOM.

A descrição fornecida no relato bíblico indica um lugar na região planaltina em direção à extremidade NE do Mar Morto. Embora esta identificação seja apenas experimental, um lugar sugerido é o de Khirbet Quweijiya, a uns 14 km ao L do Mar Morto, perto da provável localização do monte Nebo.

BANCO, BANQUEIRO. Nas parábolas de Jesus a respeito dos talentos e das minas, ele se referiu a banqueiros e a um banco como pagando juros sobre o dinheiro depositado com eles. (Mt 25:27; Lu 19:23) Bem similar à palavra portuguesa "banco" (que deriva da palavra italiana banca, para banco ou balcão), a palavra grega traduzida por banco, trá·pe·za, significava literalmente uma "mesa" (Mt 15:27), ou, quando associada a operações financeiras, como no caso dos cambistas, referia-se a um balcão para dinheiro. — Mt 21:12; Mr 11:15; Jo 2:15.

A referência ao banqueiro (gr.: tra·pe·zei·tes), como aceitando depósitos e pagando juros, indica tratar-se de uma operação maior do que a geralmente realizada por um corretor de dinheiro (gr.: ker·ma·ti·stés), ou cambista (kol·ly·bi·stés), cujas operações principais eram trocar moeda estrangeira por moeda local, e fornecer moedas de menor valor em troca das de maior valor, recebendo certa taxa para cada um de tais serviços. (Veja CAMBISTA.) Alguns desses homens talvez atuassem também como banqueiros, aceitando depósitos e fazendo empréstimos, ao passo que, em outros casos, essas transações financeiras eram realizadas por homens ricos, tais como mercadores e grandes proprietários.

A evidência de tais atividades bancárias remonta, pelo que parece, à época de Abraão, pois os antigos sumérios da terra de Sinear mantinham "um sistema surpreendentemente complexo de empréstimos concedidos, empréstimos tomados, depósitos de dinheiro e o fornecimento de cartas de crédito". (The Encyclopedia Americana [A Enciclopédia Americana], 1956, Vol. III, p. 152) Em Babilônia, assim como mais tarde na Grécia, as atividades bancárias concentravam-se em torno dos templos religiosos, cuja posição sacrossanta na mente do povo provia segurança contra assaltos por ladrões.

Visto que a economia da nação de Israel era fundamentalmente agrícola, a necessidade de empreendimentos financeiros era consideravelmente menor do que em centros comerciais tais como Babilônia, Tiro e Sídon. Embora em Deuteronômio 23:19 se condene a cobrança de juros sobre empréstimos feitos a coisraelitas, isto parece ter-se aplicado primariamente no caso de empréstimos tomados por pessoas necessitadas ou empobrecidas. (Veja Êx 22:25; Le 25:35-37; 2Rs 4:1-7.) A cobrança de juros era especificamente permitida por empréstimos feitos a não israelitas. (De 23:20) Valores frequentemente eram deixados aos cuidados de pessoas de confiança para salvaguarda (Êx 22:7), ao passo que outros recorriam a enterrá-los no chão, assim como fez o escravo indolente da parábola de Jesus. (Mt 25:25; compare isso com Mt 13:44.) Vê-se a evidência desta prática nas grandes quantidades de objetos de valor e de moedas desenterradas tanto por arqueólogos como por lavradores em terras bíblicas.

Certos israelitas que retornaram de Babilônia à terra de Judá foram condenados por aplicarem práticas bancárias duras para com os seus irmãos necessitados, exigindo deles fiança em forma de casas, terras, vinhedos e até mesmo filhos, cobrando juros à taxa de 12 por cento ao ano (uma centésima parte por mês). Os devedores que não pagavam por insolvência sofriam assim a perda das suas propriedades. (Ne 5:1-11) Tal ação imprópria, porém, não implicava numa condenação geral à cobrança de juros, conforme evidencia a posterior expressão de Jesus de aprovação implícita do uso de capital para aumentar o dinheiro. — Veja JUROS.

BANHO. A palavra hebraica ra·hháts é traduzida quer por "banhar" quer por "lavar", e aplica-se ao corpo humano e a outros objetos que são limpos por serem mergulhados em água ou por esta ser derramada sobre eles. (Le 16:24; Gên 24:32) Entretanto, para descrever a lavagem de roupa, quando esta é batida debaixo de água, os escritores bíblicos usaram a palavra hebraica ka·vás, aparentada com a árabe kabasa (amassar; pisar) e a acadiana kabasu (calcar). Por isso, lemos em Levítico 14:8: "E aquele que se purifica tem de lavar [uma forma de ka·vás] suas vestes e rapar todo o seu cabelo, e banhar-se [wera·hháts] em água, e ele tem de ser limpo." — Veja também Le 15:5-27; Núm 19:19.

A palavra grega para "banho" é lou·trón. — Tit 3:5.

Exige-se limpeza física daqueles que adoram a Jeová em santidade e pureza. Isto foi demonstrado em conexão com o arranjo do tabernáculo e o posterior serviço no templo. Por ocasião da sua investidura, o sumo sacerdote Arão e seus filhos banha-ram-se antes de trajar as vestes oficiais. (Êx 29:4-9; 40:12-15; Le 8:6, 7) Para lavarem as mãos e os pés, os sacerdotes usavam água da bacia de cobre no pátio do tabernáculo, e, posteriormente, do enorme mar de fundição junto ao templo de Salomão. (Êx 30:18-21; 40:30-32; 2Cr 4:2-6) No Dia da Expiação, o sumo sacerdote banhava-se duas vezes. (Le 16:4, 23, 24) Aqueles que levavam o bode para Azazel, os restos dos sacrifícios animais e a sacrificial vaca vermelha para fora do acampamento tinham de banhar a sua carne e lavar suas vestes antes de entrar novamente no acampamento. — Le 16:26-28; Núm 19:2-10.

Requeria-se, por vários motivos, um banho cerimonial por parte dos israelitas em geral. Aquele que se restabelecesse da lepra, aquele que entrasse em contato com coisas tocadas por alguém que tivesse "um fluxo", o homem que tivesse uma emissão de sêmen, a mulher após a menstruação ou uma hemorragia, ou todo aquele que tivesse relações sexuais era "impuro" e tinha de banhar-se. (Le 14:8, 9; 15:4-27) Alguém que estivesse numa tenda com um cadáver humano ou o tocasse era "impuro" e tinha de ser purificado com água de purificação. Quem se negasse a acatar este regulamento tinha 'de ser decepado do meio da congregação, visto que profanou o santuário de Jeová'. (Núm 19:20) Apropriadamente, pois, a lavagem é usada de modo figurativo para indicar uma posição limpa perante Jeová. (Sal 26:6; 73:13; Is 1:16; Ez 16:9) Banhar-se com a palavra da verdade de Jeová, simbolizada pela água, tem poder purificador. — Ef 5:26.

A Bíblia refere-se de passagem a pessoas se banharem: a filha de Faraó, no Nilo (Êx 2:5); Rute, antes de se apresentar a Boaz (Ru 3:3); Bate-Seba, sem o saber, à vista de Davi (2Sa 11:2, 3); Davi, antes de se prostrar na casa de Jeová (2Sa 12:20); prostitutas no reservatório em Samaria (1Rs 22:38). O leproso Naamã, à ordem de Eliseu: "Banha-te e sê limpo", fez isso sete vezes no rio Jordão. (2Rs 5:9-14) Era costume banhar bebês recém-nascidos e também banhar os corpos de defuntos antes do sepultamento. — Ez 16:4; At 9:37.

No clima quente do Oriente Médio, onde as pessoas andavam em estradas poeirentas com sandálias abertas, era sinal de hospitalidade e bondade providenciar a lavagem dos pés dos hóspedes. Abraão mostrou esta bondade para com anjos (Gên 18:1-4); outros exemplos incluem Ló, Labão e Abigail. (Gên 19:1, 2; 24:29-32; 1Sa 25:41; Lu 7:38, 44; 1Ti 5:10) Também Jesus lavou os pés dos seus discípulos. — Jo 13:5-17; veja LAVAGEM DOS PÉS.

Os fariseus lavavam "as mãos até os cotovelos", não por motivos de higiene, mas estritamente por tradições rabínicas. — Mr 7:1-5; Mt 15:1, 2.

BANI [duma raiz que significa "construir"].

1. Levita da linhagem de Merari, e antepassado do Etã a quem Davi designou para o serviço do templo. — 1Cr 6:31, 44, 46.

2. Um dos poderosos de Davi, gadita. — 2Sa 23:36.

3. Descendente de Judá através de Peres, cujos descendentes viveram em Jerusalém depois do exílio. (1Cr 9:3, 4) É possível que este chefe de família fosse o mesmo que os N.º 4 e 5, ou 4 e 6 abaixo.

4. Chefe de família, cujos descendentes, mais de 600 deles, retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel. (Esd 2:1, 10) Ele é chamado de Binui em Neemias 7:15. — Veja o N.º 3 acima.

5. Chefe de família, sendo que seis descendentes dele despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos no tempo de Esdras. Não é o N.º 6 abaixo. — Esd 10:29, 44; veja o N.º 3 acima.

6. Chefe de família em Israel, que aparentemente tinha 12 descendentes que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos nos dias de Esdras. Não é o N.º 5 acima. — Esd 10:34, 44; veja o N.º 3 acima.

7. Levita cujo filho Reum ajudou a reparar a muralha de Jerusalém em 455 AEC. Veja os N.º 8-10, 12, abaixo. — Ne 3:17.

8. Levita que ajudou Esdras com a leitura e a explicação da Lei ao povo. — Ne 8:7; 9:4, 5; veja o N.º 7 acima.

9. O segundo de dois levitas de nome Bani alistados, que se encontravam no palanque quando se fazia a confissão pública dos pecados de Israel, em 455 AEC. — Ne 9:4.

10. Levita cujo descendente, se não ele próprio, atestou com selo o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:13.

11. Um dos "cabeças do povo", cujo descendente, se não ele próprio, também atestou o "arranjo fidedigno". — Ne 9:38; 10:14.

12. Descendente levita de Asafe, cujo filho Uzi era superintendente dos levitas em Jerusalém, nos dias de Neemias. — Ne 11:22; veja o N.º 7 acima.

BANQUETE. Veja FESTIVIDADE; REFEIÇÃO.

BAQUEBACAR [possivelmente: Frasco Grande]. Levita que morava em Jerusalém depois do exílio babilônico. — 1Cr 9:3, 14, 15, 34.

BARAQUE [Raio; Relâmpago]. Filho de Abinoão, de Quedes, no território de Naftali. Durante um período inicial no tempo dos juízes, os israelitas desviaram-se da adoração verdadeira, e assim, por 20 anos, Deus permitiu que fossem oprimidos por Jabim, o rei de Canaã. Eles clamaram a Jeová por alívio, e foi então que Baraque se tornou seu líder designado por Deus. (Jz 4:1-3) Ao passo que os opressores cananeus dos israelitas estavam fortemente armados, "não se via nem escudo nem lança no meio de quarenta mil em Israel". (Jz 5:8) No entanto, nos dias de Baraque, Jeová deu a Israel a vitória sobre seus adversários, triunfo este que não foi esquecido. (Sal 83:9) Os dois relatos destes assuntos, em Juízes (capítulo 4, e no cântico exultante de Débora e Baraque, no capítulo 5), complementam-se um ao outro, e pintam vívido quadro do que ocorreu naquele tempo.

A profetisa Débora, que estava então julgando Israel, incentiva Baraque a tomar a iniciativa de libertar seu povo. Baraque consente, mas sob a condição de que Débora o acompanhe. Ela concorda, embora diga a Baraque que Jeová venderá Sísera, chefe das forças de Jabim, às mãos duma mulher. — Jz 4:4-9.

Baraque recruta 10.000 homens de Naftali, Zebulão e de outras tribos de Israel (Jz 4:6; 5:9-18) e sobe ao monte Tabor. Sabendo disso, Sísera e suas forças, equipadas de 900 carros com foices de ferro, avançam contra os israelitas ao longo do leito seco do Quisom (na planície de Jezreel). Com Baraque na dianteira, o exército israelita, apenas pouco equipado, desce corajosamente do monte Tabor, pronto para a peleja com os cananeus plenamente armados. No entanto, o Quisom tornou-se uma torrente devastadora, imobilizando os carros inimigos. Deveras, "desde o céu lutaram as estrelas, desde as suas órbitas lutaram contra Sísera. A torrente de Quisom os arrastou". Baraque e seus homens aproveitam sua vantagem, e o relato declara: "Todo o acampamento de Sísera caiu ao fio da espada. Não restou nem sequer um." — Jz 5:20-22; 4:10-16.

O próprio Sísera, tendo abandonado seu carro e seu exército assediado, foge e se refugia na tenda de Jael, esposa de Héber, um queneu que está em paz com Jabim. Jael mostra hospitalidade para com Sísera, mas, enquanto ele dorme, ela o mata por cravar-lhe nas têmporas uma estaca de tenda, que fica fincada no solo. Quando Baraque chega, Jael o convida a entrar na tenda, onde ele vê que a palavra de Jeová se cumpriu; Sísera fora realmente vendido às mãos duma mulher. (Jz 4:17-22; 5:24-27) Depois disso, a mão dos israelitas vitoriosos "ficou cada vez mais dura contra Jabim, rei de Canaã, até que tinham decepado a Jabim". Por conseguinte, essa região de Israel "teve sossego por quarenta anos". — Jz 4:23, 24; 5:31.

Baraque é citado como fiel exemplo entre aqueles que, "pela fé, derrotaram reinos [em conflito], . . . tornaram-se valentes na guerra, desbarataram os exércitos de estrangeiros". — He 11:32-34.

Baraque talvez seja o "Bedã" de 1 Samuel 12:11 (caso se siga a LXX e a Sy). — Veja BEDÃ N.º 1.

BARAQUEL [Deus Abençoou]. Pai de Eliú, amigo de Jó; buzita, provavelmente descendente de Buz, sobrinho de Abraão. — Jó 32:2, 6; Gên 22:20, 21.

BARAQUIAS [Jeová Abençoou]. Pai do Zacarias que foi assassinado "entre o santuário e o altar". — Mt 23:35; Lu 11:50, 51.

Quanto às palavras "filho de Baraquias", não se encontram no relato de Lucas, e foram omitidas do relato de Mateus no Códice Sinaítico (escriba original). Sugeriu-se que Jeoiada, pai dum Zacarias que foi assassinado, talvez tivesse dois nomes, como se dá no caso de outros personagens bíblicos. — Compare Mt 9:9 com Mr 2:14; Mt 10:2, 3.

Entende-se, em geral, que Jesus aqui se referia a Zacarias, o "filho de Jeoiada, o sacerdote". (2Cr 24:20-22) Trata-se da conclusão mais lógica, visto que Crônicas está alistado em último lugar no cânon tradicional judaico, destarte tornando Abel o primeiro e Zacarias o último homem justo registrado nas Escrituras Hebraicas como tendo sido assassinado. De acordo com 2 Crônicas 24:21, Zacarias foi assassinado "no pátio da casa de Jeová". O altar de ofertas queimadas estava no pátio interior, do lado de fora e diante da entrada do santuário. Isto corresponderia à localização, feita por Jesus, desse incidente como "entre o santuário e o altar".

Nos casos tanto de Abel como de Zacarias, predisse-se uma prestação de contas pelo derramamento de seu sangue. (Gên 4:10; 2Cr 24:22) Também, existe um forte paralelo entre as circunstâncias e os eventos dos dias de Zacarias, filho de Jeoiada, e os da geração que vivia quando Jesus falou essas palavras. Quando Zacarias estava à morte, ele disse: "Que Jeová o veja e o exija de volta." Pouco depois, suas palavras proféticas começaram a cumprir-se. Uma pequena força militar síria subiu, e Jeová entregou uma grande força militar de Judá nas mãos dela, os príncipes de Judá sendo grandemente arruinados e despojados. Os sírios executaram atos de julgamento em Jeoás e o deixaram com muitas enfermidades, após o que foi assassinado por seus próprios servos. (2Cr 24:23-25) Depois de descrever a culpa de sangue daqueles a quem falava, Jesus disse: "Todas essas coisas virão sobre esta geração." (Mt 23:36) A profecia de Jesus se cumpriu em Jerusalém e na Judeia em 70-73 EC.

BARATA [hebr.: hha·síl]. Há incerteza quanto ao inseto específico a que se refere a palavra hebraica hha·síl, que se considera derivar duma raiz que significa "devorar". (Veja De 28:38.) Tem sido traduzida, de forma variada, por "lagarta", "grilo", "devastador", "gafanhoto" e "barata". (Compare Is 33:4

com Jl 1:4 em BV; CBC; PIB e NM.) Conforme o léxico hebraico e aramaico de Koehler e Baumgartner (p. 319), o inseto nocivo designado pela palavra hebraica hha·síl é diferente do gafanhoto ('ar·béh), sendo provavelmente a barata (Periplaneta furcata e Blatta orientalis).

A barata tem pernas compridas e fortes, habilitando-a a correr com notável velocidade. De fato, é um dos insetos corredores mais rápidos. Este inseto possui face achatada e cabeça curta, dotada de longas antenas ou tentáculos setáceos, e dá a aparência de estar olhando ligeiramente para baixo. Seu corpo compacto habilita a barata a penetrar por estreitas aberturas. A maioria das espécies tem coloração escura, negra ou marrom, e tem corpo achatado, escorregadio, recoberto por uma carapaça brilhante. Não gostando da luz brilhante, as baratas geralmente só saem dos esconderijos à noite, para comer.

O profeta Joel predisse um devastador ataque por uma horda de insetos, que desolaria o país, mencionando o hha·síl por último, como inseto que consome tudo o que os outros deixaram sobrar. (Jl 1:4) Mais tarde, o profeta fala do tempo em que haverá bênçãos e perdão. O invasor será rechaçado e se fará compensação pelo que o hha·síl e os outros membros da "grande força militar" de Jeová tiverem consumido. (Jl 2:25) Com respeito a tal praga de insetos divinamente enviada, inclusive o hha·síl, Salomão orou para que Jeová perdoasse ao seu povo, se este se arrependesse dos seus pecados. (1Rs 8:37-40; 2Cr 6:28-31) O hha·síl também constava na devastação que Jeová causou ao Egito durante a praga dos gafanhotos. — Sal 78:46.

No capítulo 33 de Isaías, o profeta faz menção dos aterrorizantes dias da agressão assíria. O exército do Rei Senaqueribe havia devastado cidades, e Isaías pede o favor de Deus, relembrando que Jeová já antes se levantara contra nações. Ele assegura ao povo que o Todo-Poderoso certamente golpeará os inimigos, obrigando-os a deixar para trás grande despojo, que será recolhido pelos israelitas. Assim como o hha·síl se espalhava pelo país, indo e vindo sem ser molestado, ajuntando o que estivesse em seu caminho, consumindo tudo — assim o povo de Deus ajuntaria os despojos do exército assírio. (Is 33:1-4) Esta seria uma bem marcante figura de linguagem num país que conhecia tal devastação por hordas de hha·síl.

BARBA. Os pelos que crescem no queixo e nas bochechas do homem, às vezes incluindo os que crescem sobre o lábio superior. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, za·qán é a palavra para "barba", ao passo que sa·fám, relativo ao lábio, é traduzida de forma variada pelos tradutores por "barba", "bigode" e "lábio superior". Em alguns casos, a palavra za·qán não se refere à barba, mas ao "queixo". — Le 13:29, 30; 14:9.

Entre muitos povos antigos do Oriente, inclusive os israelitas, a barba era prezada como evidência de dignidade máscula. A lei de Deus dada a Israel proibia o corte das "madeixas laterais", os cabelos entre a orelha e o olho, e a extremidade da barba. (Le 19:27; 21:5) Isto se dava, sem dúvida, porque entre alguns pagãos isso era uma prática religiosa.

Durante extremo pesar, vergonha ou humilhação, o homem talvez arrancasse os pelos de sua barba ou deixasse descuidada a barba ou o bigode. (Esd 9:3) Pode ter sido a barba descuidada de Mefibosete, filho de Jonatã, que indicou a Davi que Mefibosete talvez estivesse falando a verdade ao dizer que seu servo Ziba o havia caluniado, e que Mefibosete estava realmente pranteando enquanto Davi era um refugiado com relação a Absalão, contrário ao que Ziba tinha relatado. (2Sa 16:3; 19:24-30) Rapar a barba ilustrava calamidade ou grande pranto devido à calamidade. — Is 7:20; 15:2; Je 48:37; Ez 5:1.

Depois da destruição de Jerusalém, em 607 AEC, homens procedentes de Siquém, Silo e Samaria expressaram sua aflição por rapar a barba, rasgar suas vestes e fazer cortes em si mesmos. Embora trouxessem ofertas à casa de Jeová, eram ofertas sem sangue, evidentemente para serem oferecidas no lugar onde antes havia o templo. (Je 41:5) Que as práticas desses homens não estavam plenamente em harmonia com a lei de Deus é demonstrado pelo fato de que fizeram cortes em si mesmos, uma prática estritamente proibida pela Lei. — Le 19:28; 21:5.

A importância da barba e de ela estar bem cuidada desempenhou um papel na atitude de Aquis, o rei de Gate, para com Davi, quando este disfarçou a sua sanidade por deixar a saliva escorrer sobre a barba. Isto serviu para ajudar a convencer o Rei Aquis que Davi era demente. (1Sa 21:13) Mais tarde, quando Hanum, o rei de Amom, grosseiramente insultou os embaixadores de Davi por cortar metade da barba deles, Davi compassivamente disse aos seus homens que ficassem em Jericó até que sua barba tivesse crescido abundantemente. Os amonitas sabiam que isso era um insulto significativo para Davi e que se tornaram malcheirosos aos olhos dele por causa deste incidente, e por isso se prepararam para a guerra. — 2Sa 10:4-6; 1Cr 19:1-6.

Era costumeiro os homens usarem barba, mesmo antes de ser feito o pacto da Lei. Ao passo que os hebreus não fizeram monumentos com figuras deles próprios, foram encontrados muitos monumentos e inscrições, no Egito, na Mesopotâmia e em outras terras do Oriente Médio, em que os assírios, os babilônios e os cananeus são representados com barba. E mesmo algumas representações remontando até o terceiro milênio AEC mostram barbas de diversos estilos. Entre os povos supracitados, eram mormente os eunucos os representados sem barba. Contudo, fazer eunucos não era prática em Israel, visto que a Lei excluía os eunucos da congregação de Israel. — De 23:1.

Visto que a maioria dos semitas são retratados como usando barba, mesmo antes do tempo da Lei, seguir-se-ia logicamente que os homens fiéis da linhagem de Sem, que continuavam a falar a língua do Éden e que sem dúvida seguiam mais de perto os costumes originais do tempo de seu antepassado, Sem, usavam barba. Por conseguinte, existe boa razão para se crer que Noé, Enoque, Sete e Adão eram semelhantemente homens que usavam barba.

Heródoto (II, 36) diz que os egípcios rapavam tanto os pelos da face como os cabelos da cabeça. Para os homens, deixar crescer a barba ou o cabelo era sinal de pesar ou de desleixo. Por esta razão, José, ao ser tirado da prisão, barbeou-se antes de comparecer à presença de Faraó. (Gên 41:14) No entanto, os egípcios usavam barbas postiças, bem como perucas.

Usava Jesus barba enquanto estava na Terra? Certamente era um costume estritamente observado pelos judeus. Jesus, nascido judeu, "veio a estar debaixo de lei" e cumpriu a Lei. (Gál 4:4; Mt 5:17) Como todos os demais judeus, Jesus estava dedicado a Jeová Deus desde o nascimento, por motivo do pacto da Lei, e estava sob a obrigação de guardar toda a Lei, inclusive a proibição de rapar a extremidade da barba. Também, no tempo em que Jesus estava na terra, era costume romano não usar barba. Portanto, se Jesus não usasse barba, teria sido questionado quer como eunuco, quer como romano. Significativamente, uma profecia sobre o sofrimento de Jesus declara: "Dei as minhas costas aos que golpeavam e as minhas faces aos que arrancavam o cabelo." — Is 50:6.

BÁRBARO. A repetição de "bar bar" na palavra grega bár·ba·ros transmitia a ideia de fala gaguejada, tartamudeada ou ininteligível; por isso, o termo "bárbaro" era originalmente aplicado pelos gregos a um estrangeiro, especialmente a alguém que falasse uma língua diferente. Naquele tempo, este termo não indicava falta de civilização, de refinamento ou de boas maneiras, nem transmitia qualquer sentimento de desprezo hostil. "Bárbaro" simplesmente distinguia especialmente os não gregos dos gregos, assim como "gentio" divide os não judeus dos judeus. Esses não gregos não objetavam, nem se sentiam insultados por serem chamados de bárbaros. Alguns escritores judeus, inclusive Josefo, reconheciam ser chamados por esse termo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XIV, 187 [x, 1]; Against Apion [Contra Apião] I, 58 [11]); os romanos chamavam a si mesmos de bárbaros até adotarem a cultura grega. É nesta luz nada desfavorável, então, que Paulo, ao escrever aos romanos, usou uma expressão todo abrangente: "Tanto a gregos como a bárbaros." — Ro 1:14.

O principal fator que separava os gregos do mundo bárbaro era sua língua; por isso, o termo se referia especialmente aos que não falavam grego, como, por exemplo, os habitantes de Malta, que falavam uma língua não aparentada. Neste caso, a Tradução do Novo Mundo dá significado a bár·ba·roi ao traduzi-lo por "povo de língua estrangeira". (At 28:1, 2, 4) Escrevendo sobre o dom de línguas, Paulo duas vezes chama de bár·ba·ros ("estrangeiro") alguém que fala uma língua ininteligível. (1Co 14:11; veja também Col 3:11.) Similarmente, a Septuaginta grega usa bár·ba·ros no Salmo 113:1 (114:1 nas versões hebraicas e em português) e em Ezequiel 21:36 (21:31 em português).

Visto que os gregos achavam sua língua e sua cultura superiores a todas as demais, e devido às indignidades sofridas às mãos de seus inimigos, o termo "bárbaro" assumiu gradualmente a sua conotação depreciativa comum.

BARCO. Veja NAVIO.

BARCOS. Antepassado de alguns netineus que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:43, 53; Ne 7:46, 55.

BARIAS [Fugitivo; Foragido]. Descendente distante de Davi por meio de Salomão. — 1Cr 3:1, 10, 22.

BARJESUS [Filho de Jesus]. Certo judeu, de Pafos, na ilha de Chipre, no primeiro século EC, que era "feiticeiro, falso profeta". (At 13:6) Assumiu o nome ou título profissional de "Elimas", que significa "Feiticeiro". — Veja ELIMAS.

Parece que Barjesus ocupava a posição influente de mágico da corte e conselheiro de Sérgio Paulo, o procônsul romano de Pafos. Como "sacerdote" do culto da adivinhação, Barjesus era naturalmente contra o cristianismo, e, desejoso de proteger sua própria posição lucrativa, era inflexível na sua oposição à pregação de Paulo e Barnabé. Assim, quando Sérgio Paulo "buscava seriamente ouvir a palavra de Deus", Elimas "começou a opor-se a eles, buscando desviar da fé o procônsul". — At 13:7, 8.

Nisso, Paulo mirou o satânico feiticeiro nos olhos, e, "cheio de espírito santo", respondeu-lhe: "Ó ho-mem cheio de toda sorte de fraude e de toda sorte de vilania, ó filho do Diabo, inimigo de tudo o que é justo, não cessarás de torcer os caminhos direitos de Jeová? Pois bem, eis que a mão de Jeová está sobre ti e ficarás cego, não vendo a luz do sol por um período de tempo." Instantaneamente, Barjesus foi afligido de cegueira. O procônsul, ao testemunhar este primeiro milagre registrado de Paulo, "ficou assombrado com o ensino de Jeová", e imediatamente aceitou a mensagem, e "tornou-se crente". — At 13:9-12.

BARNABÉ [Filho de Consolo]. Esta figura destacada do cristianismo do primeiro século nos é apresentada inicialmente nas Escrituras por Lucas, em Atos 4:34-36. Ali aprendemos que este homem devotado era levita e natural da ilha de Chipre, mas que, na época em que nos é apresentado, achava-se em Jerusalém. Dentre os muitos crentes que pouco depois de Pentecostes venderam seus campos e suas casas, e entregaram o valor recebido aos apóstolos para a promoção da obra cristã, este homem foi um dos mencionados nominalmente. Seu nome próprio era José, mas os apóstolos lhe deram o cognome de Barnabé, significando "Filho de Consolo". Esta prática, de dar cognome de acordo com as características da pessoa, não era incomum.

Ele era uma pessoa muito cordial e muito generosa, alguém que não hesitava em oferecer voluntariamente tanto a si mesmo como os seus bens materiais para promover os interesses do Reino. Ele de bom grado 'veio em auxílio' de seus irmãos (At 9:27), e, na presença de pessoas recém-interessadas, "alegrou-se e começou a encorajar todos a que continuassem no Senhor, tendo isso por objetivo do coração". Barnabé "era homem bom e cheio de espírito santo e de fé" (At 11:23, 24), profeta e instrutor em Antioquia. (At 13:1) Os apóstolos falaram de Barnabé como estando entre os seus "amados" "que entregaram as suas almas pelo nome de nosso Senhor Jesus Cristo". (At 15:25, 26) Embora não fosse um dos 12 apóstolos, era apropriadamente chamado de apóstolo (At 14:14), pois, deveras, era alguém 'enviado pelo espírito santo'. — At 13:4, 43.

A íntima associação que Barnabé tinha com Paulo, e que se estendeu por anos, teve início cerca de três anos depois da conversão de Paulo, quando ele desejou entrar em contato com a congregação em Jerusalém. Não se revela como Barnabé veio a conhecer Paulo. Mas foi Barnabé quem teve o privilégio de apresentar Paulo a Pedro e ao discípulo Tiago. — At 9:26, 27; Gál 1:18, 19.

No ínterim, certos judeus de língua grega, procedentes de Chipre e de Cirene, suscitaram grande interesse pelo cristianismo, em Antioquia, da Síria. Em resultado disso, o corpo governante em Jerusalém enviou Barnabé a Antioquia para incentivar e edificar ainda mais esses novos crentes. A escolha de Barnabé para tal trabalho foi uma boa escolha, visto que ele era cipriota de língua grega. Quando "uma multidão considerável foi acrescentada ao Senhor", em Antioquia, Barnabé apressou-se a ir até Tarso, e persuadiu Paulo a vir ajudá-lo no ministério. Por volta dessa época, o aviso divino duma vindoura fome fez com que os irmãos em Antioquia juntassem muitas provisões que, no devido tempo, foram enviadas à congregação de Jerusalém pelas mãos de Barnabé e de Paulo. — At 11:22-24, 27-30; 12:25.

Realizada esta subministração de socorros, os dois retornaram a Antioquia por volta de 47 EC, e dali partiram numa designação missionária sob a direção do espírito santo. Isto levou Barnabé e Paulo primeiro a Chipre, onde serviram de instrumento para levar a verdade de Deus ao procônsul Sérgio Paulo. Dali viajaram pelo interior da Ásia Menor. Às vezes foram severamente perseguidos por turbas. Certa vez, quando curaram um coxo em Listra, mal tinham conseguido conter "as multidões de lhes oferecerem sacrifícios" (pensando que Barnabé fosse o deus Zeus, e Paulo, aquele que "tomava a dianteira no falar", fosse Hermes, ou Mercúrio), quando os judeus "persuadiram as multidões, e apedrejaram Paulo e o arrastaram para fora da cidade". — At 13:1-12; 14:1-20.

Por volta de 49 EC, Barnabé e Paulo levaram a ardente questão da circuncisão dos não judeus ao corpo governante em Jerusalém, e, uma vez resolvida, logo retornaram a Antioquia, preparando-se para sua próxima viagem missionária. (At 15:2-36) No entanto, por não poderem chegar a um acordo quanto a levarem junto a João Marcos, cada um partiu para um território separado. Barnabé levou seu primo Marcos para Chipre, e Paulo levou Silas através dos distritos da Síria e da Cilícia. (At 15:37-41) Assim termina o registro feito sobre Barnabé nas Escrituras, exceto a breve menção dele em algumas das cartas de Paulo. — 1Co 9:6; Gál 2:1, 9, 13; Col 4:10.

BARRABÁS [Filho do Pai; possivelmente: Filho do Instrutor]. O criminoso encarcerado por roubo, sedição e homicídio, a quem Pilatos libertou em lugar de Jesus. Pilatos fez isso, "desejando satisfazer a multidão", que clamava pela libertação de Barrabás, por insistência dos principais sacerdotes e anciãos. — Mt 27:15-26; Mr 15:6-15; Lu 23:16-25; Jo 18:39, 40; At 3:14.

Este costume ímpar, de libertar um preso na Páscoa de cada ano, não tem nenhuma base nem precedente nas Escrituras Hebraicas, e não há nenhuma evidência extrabíblica dele como prática romana. Era evidentemente de origem judaica, porque Pilatos disse aos judeus: "Tendes o costume de que eu vos livre um homem por ocasião da páscoa.” — Jo 18:39.

BARRACA. Um abrigo, semelhante a um teto, construído de ramos e folhas de árvores, às vezes possuindo um piso elevado de madeira; em hebraico, suk·káh (sokh, em La 2:6), e no grego, ske·né. (At 15:16) Na anual Festividade das Barracas, em Jerusalém, construíam-se barracas sobre os terraços, nos pátios, nas praças públicas, até mesmo na área do templo e junto às estradas próximas de Jerusalém. Ramos de choupos, de oliveiras e de árvores oleaginosas, bem como folhas de palmeira e da murta fragrante eram usadas nessa construção. Isto era para relembrar a Israel que Jeová o fizera morar em barracas quando o retirara do Egito. — Le 23:34, 40-43; Ne 8:15; veja FESTIVIDADE DAS BARRACAS.

Usavam-se também barracas para diversos fins práticos. Jacó fez barracas para abrigar sua manada, e deu a este lugar o nome de Sucote, que significa “Barracas”. (Gên 33:17) Barracas eram usadas por exércitos no campo, especialmente pelos oficiais. — 1Rs 20:12, 16.

Uma barraca ou cabana era com frequência construída num vinhedo ou no centro dum campo, de modo que o vigia pudesse abrigar-se do sol escaldante, ao manter-se de guarda contra ladrões ou animais. (Is 1:8) Ali, os ceifeiros saboreavam suas refeições do meio-dia à sombra, e poupavam tempo, que gastariam se se ausentassem do campo. Espessas camadas de folhas entrelaçadas guardavam da chuva os que estivessem embaixo delas. (Is 4:6) Jonas fez para si uma barraca assim, a fim de proteger-se do sol, ao esperar para ver o que aconteceria com Nínive, contra a qual havia profetizado. — Jon 4:5.

Usos Figurativos. Isaías ilustra a condição desolada de Jerusalém aos olhos de Jeová, assemelhando-a a uma barraca num vinhedo, em contraste com uma cidade populosa, bem edificada. (Is 1:8) Jeová se representa como morando numa barraca de nuvens, quando desce temporariamente do céu para a terra. Ali a majestosa onipotência se oculta, e dali provêm os estrondos do trovão. (Sal 18:9, 11; 2Sa 22:10, 12; Jó 36:29) Davi assemelha o lugar de esconderijo dos que confiam em Jeová à “barraca” de Jeová. — Sal 31:20.

Amós se refere à reconstrução da “barraca de Davi, que está caída”. (Am 9:11) Jeová prometeu a Davi que o reino deste ficaria firme por tempo indefinido. A respeito da derrubada do reino de Judá, e de seu último rei, Zedequias, da linhagem de Davi, Ezequiel foi inspirado a profetizar: “Uma ruína, uma ruína, uma ruína a farei. Também, quanto a esta, certamente não virá a ser de ninguém, até que venha aquele que tem o direito legal, e a ele é que terei de dá-lo.” (Ez 21:27) Desse tempo em diante, nenhum rei da linhagem de Davi ocupou o “trono de Jeová” em Jerusalém. (1Cr 29:23) Mas Pedro, no dia de Pentecostes, de 33 EC, indicou que Jesus Cristo era da linhagem de Davi e era aquele a respeito de quem Deus realmente falou como sendo o Rei permanente. Pedro informou aos judeus, ajuntados ali em Jerusalém, que, no tempo deles, Jeová ressuscitara Jesus e o fizera tanto Senhor como Cristo. (At 2:29-36) Mais tarde, o discípulo Tiago aplicou a profecia de Amós como se cumprindo no ajuntamento dos discípulos de Cristo (os herdeiros do Reino), tanto dentre os judeus como dentre as nações gentias. — At 15:14-18; Ro 8:17.

BARRACAS, FESTIVIDADE DAS. Veja FESTIVIDADE DAS BARRACAS.

BARRELA. Veja LAVADEIRO.

BARRO. Material terroso, natural, de fina granulação, macio e maleável quando úmido, mas duro quando seco, especialmente quando secado ao fogo. Compõe-se mormente de hidrossilicatos de alumínio. Usa-se a palavra hebraica hhó·mer para indicar o “barro” de oleiro (Is 41:25), o “barro” debaixo dum selo (Jó 38:14), o “barro” das ruas (Is 10:6), a “argamassa” entre tijolos (Gên 11:3), e, em sentido metafórico, o homem como “barro” nas mãos do seu Formador, Jeová Deus (Is 45:9; compare isso com Jó 10:9). Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, pe·lós indica o “barro” de oleiro (Ro 9:21) e o “barro” úmido que Jesus usou para curar um cego (Jo 9:6, 11, 14, 15; veja também CEGUEIRA), ao passo que ke·ra·mi·kós descreve vasos feitos de “barro” de oleiro. — Re 2:27.

Nas terras baixas de Israel há abundância de barro, ou argila, e nos tempos bíblicos este era usado para a fabricação de vasos e de tijolos. (Je 18:4, 6; Êx 1:14; Na 3:14; veja OLEIRO.) Por aceitar impressões quando úmido e retê-las quando seco, era útil para a fabricação de tabuinhas de barro e para impressões de selos em documentos e cartas. Empregava-se o barro para selar vasos de barro usados para vinho ou para salvaguardar valiosos registros, tais como a escritura da propriedade de Jeremias. (Je 32:14) A preservação dos Rolos do Mar Morto se deve em grande parte aos jarros de barro nos quais foram encontrados.

Alude-se à natureza terrosa do barro em expressões tais como “o barro das ruas”, ‘o homem é feito de barro’, ou o homem ‘feito para descer ao barro’. (Jó 10:9; 30:19; 33:6; Is 10:6) Outro significado metafórico relacionado com a declaração de que o homem é feito de barro é o fato de Jeová ser o Oleiro.

(Is 29:16; 45:9; 64:8; Ro 9:21) O barro, mesmo quando bem cozido, não é um material forte, e uma mistura de ferro e argila é imprestável. (Da 2:33-35, 41-43, 45) O barro oferece pouca ou nenhuma proteção. (Jó 4:19; 13:12; Is 41:25) Por ser um item muito comum, seu valor comercial é bastante insignificante. — Jó 27:16.

BARSABÁS. Este talvez tenha sido um nome de família ou apenas um nome adicional dado a duas pessoas: José, cognominado Justo, que foi o candidato rejeitado à vaga de apóstolo deixada por Judas Iscariotes; e Judas, que acompanhou Paulo, Barnabé e Silas de Jerusalém a Antioquia, por volta de 49 EC. Não há nenhuma evidência de que os dois homens fossem irmãos. — At 1:23; 15:22; veja JOSÉ N.º 11; JUDAS N.º 7.

BARTIMEU [Filho de Timeu (Honrado)]. Um mendigo cego, cuja visão foi restaurada por Jesus. Bartimeu e um companheiro não identificado estavam sentados fora de Jericó quando Jesus e uma multidão passaram. Bartimeu indagou a razão de toda aquela excitação, e, quando informado, começou a gritar: "Filho de Davi, Jesus, tem misericórdia de mim!" Outros mandaram severamente que se calasse, mas ele foi ainda mais persistente. Quando Jesus o chamou, ele lançou de si sua roupa exterior, correu até o Amo, e suplicou-lhe para recuperar a visão. Jesus, discernindo a fé desse homem, e, penalizado, curou Bartimeu, que então o seguiu, glorificando a Deus. — Mr 10:46-52; Mt 20:29-34; Lu 18:35-43.

Ao relatar esse evento, Marcos e Mateus dizem que ocorreu quando Jesus 'saía de Jericó', mas Lucas diz que se deu quando 'chegava perto de Jericó'. (Mt 20:29; Mr 10:46; Lu 18:35) Alguns têm dito que isto se refere a dois incidentes distintos. Sobre isso, Joseph P. Free escreve: "A arqueologia, contudo, lançou luz adicional sobre esta aparente discrepância. Em princípios do século vinte A.D., Ernest Sellin, da Sociedade Oriental Alemã (1907-1909), fez escavações em Jericó. As escavações mostraram que a Jericó do tempo de Jesus era uma cidade dupla . . . A antiga cidade judaica ficava a cerca de uma milha da cidade romana. À luz desta evidência, é possível que Mateus falasse da cidade judaica, da qual Cristo tinha saído, ao passo que Lucas falava da romana, à qual Cristo ainda não havia chegado. Assim, a caminho da cidade velha para a nova, Cristo encontrou e curou o cego Bartimeu." — Archaeology and Bible History (A Arqueologia e a História Bíblica), 1964, p. 295.

BARTOLOMEU [Filho de Tolmai]. Um dos 12 apóstolos de Jesus, em geral considerado ser Natanael. Uma comparação dos relatos evangélicos mostra que Mateus e Lucas associam Bartolomeu com Filipe, do mesmo modo que João associa o nome Natanael com Filipe. (Mt 10:3; Lu 6:14; Jo 1:45, 46) Para obter mais pormenores sobre a atividade deste apóstolo, veja NATANAEL.

BARUMITA [De (Pertencente a) Baurim]. Natural e habitante da aldeia de Baurim. Asmavete, um dos poderosos de Davi, era deste lugar e é tanto chamado de "o baarumite" (em hebraico) em 1 Crônicas 11:33, como de "o barumita" em 2 Samuel 23:31. Simei, que vituperou o fugitivo Rei Davi, também era barumita. — 2Sa 19:16; 1Rs 2:8; veja BAURIM.

BARUQUE [Abençoado].

1. O secretário-escriba de Jeremias. Baruque era filho de Nerias e irmão de Seraías, oficial intendente de Zedequias, que leu o rolo de Jeremias, à beira do Eufrates. — Je 32:12; 51:59-64.

No quarto ano do Rei Jeoiaquim, 625 AEC, Baruque começou a escrever num rolo a mensagem profética da condenação de Jerusalém, ditada por Jeremias. Em fins do outono setentrional do ano seguinte, 624 AEC, Baruque leu o rolo em voz alta, "aos ouvidos de todo o povo", na entrada da casa de Jeová. Foi então convocado para lê-lo perante uma assembleia dos príncipes, os quais, agitados pelo que ouviram e temendo as consequências quando essa palavra chegasse aos ouvidos do rei, instaram com Baruque e com Jeremias para que se escondessem. Jeoiaquim, ao ouvir a denúncia, queimou o rolo, pedaço por pedaço, e ordenou que Baruque e Jeremias fossem trazidos à sua presença, "mas Jeová os manteve escondidos". Baruque escreveu então outro rolo, ditado por Jeremias, semelhante ao primeiro, mas contendo "muitas outras palavras" da boca de Jeová. — Je 36:1-32.

Dezesseis anos depois, no décimo ano de Zedequias, apenas alguns meses antes de Jerusalém ser saqueada, Baruque pegou as escrituras do terreno que Jeremias comprara de um primo e as colocou num vaso de barro, para serem preservadas e guardadas em segurança. — Je 32:1, 9-16.

Em certo ponto, durante a escrita do primeiro rolo, quando Baruque se queixou da sua fadiga, Jeová o avisou: 'Não continues a procurar grandes coisas para ti mesmo.' Todavia, por causa da sua fidelidade, foi-lhe prometida a preservação e a segurança "em todos os lugares aos quais fores", não só durante o terrível sítio de Jerusalém, mas também depois disso, quando a populaça rebelde obrigou tanto a ele como a Jeremias a descer ao Egito com ela. — Je 45:1-5; 43:4-7.

2. Filho de Zabai; Baruque "trabalhou com fervor" em ajudar a Neemias a reconstruir as muralhas de Jerusalém. (Ne 3:20) Possivelmente o mesmo que o N.º 3.

3. Um sacerdote cujo descendente, se não ele mesmo, atestou o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. (Ne 9:38; 10:1, 6, 8) Se o próprio Baruque fez a selagem deste acordo, ele talvez seja o mesmo que o N.º 2.

4. Pai ou antepassado de Maaseias, que viveu em Jerusalém no tempo de Neemias. Descendente de Judá. — Ne 11:4-6.

BARZILAI [De Ferro].

1. Meolatita cujo filho Adriel casou-se com a filha de Saul, Merabe. — 1Sa 18:19; 2Sa 21:8.

2. Um rico gileadita, 'homem muito grande', da cidade de Rogelim. Barzilai era um dos três que ajudaram Davi e seu exército com suprimentos de alimentos e camas durante a rebelião de Absalão. (2Sa 17:27-29) Quando Davi retornou a Jerusalém, Barzilai escoltou o grupo até o Jordão, mas, por causa da sua idade ("tenho hoje oitenta anos de idade"), recusou a oferta de Davi, de se tornar parte da corte real, enviando em seu lugar Quimão. Na despedida, Davi o beijou e abençoou. (2Sa 19:31-40) Pouco antes de morrer, Davi lembrou-se de Barzilai e solicitou a Salomão que mostrasse bondade para com os filhos dele por providenciar que 'estivessem entre os que comiam à sua mesa'. — 1Rs 2:7.

3. Sacerdote que se casou com uma filha de Barzilai, o gileadita (mui provavelmente o N.º 2) e adotou o nome de seu sogro. Os descendentes dele, ao retornarem do exílio babilônico, não conseguiram encontrar seu registro nos arquivos genealógicos e assim ficaram desqualificados para o sacerdócio. — Esd 2:61, 62; Ne 7:63, 64.

BASÃ [possivelmente: Planície Fértil (Sem Pedras)]. Uma grande região ao L do mar da Galileia. As fronteiras gerais de Basã eram o monte Hermom ao N, a região montanhosa do monte Haurã (Jebel ed Druz) ao L, Gileade ao S, e os morros que beiravam a margem oriental do mar da Galileia ao O. — De 3:3-14; Jos 12:4, 5.

Basã estava situada principalmente num elevado planalto, tendo uma altitude média de cerca de 600 m. O terreno geralmente é plano, embora contenha algumas serras, e é de origem vulcânica, com muitas rochas de basalto negro, duro, que propiciam boa retenção da umidade. O solo é uma mistura de tufo e de terra roxa. A água e a neve derretida fluindo do monte Hermom ajudavam a transformar toda a região numa excelente área agrícola. A grande fertilidade desta planície tornava esta região um rico celeiro e fornecia excelentes pastos. Isto, por sua vez, contribuía para a produção de esplêndidas raças de gado bovino e ovino. Os novilhos de Basã e seus carneiros eram temas de cânticos e de poesias, e símbolos de riqueza, força e prosperidade. — De 32:14; Ez 39:18; Sal 22:12.

As planícies de Basã parecem ter sido, na maior parte, desprovidas de árvores, mas as serras estavam cheias de florestas e continham árvores maciças, provavelmente carvalhos (que ainda hoje podem ser encontrados nessa área). Na profecia, essas árvores são usadas como símbolos de grande imponência. (Is 2:13; Za 11:1, 2) Ezequiel 27:5, 6, indica que os construtores fenícios de navios, de Tiro, usavam os juníperos de Senir como pranchas e os altos cedros do Líbano para seus mastros, mas faziam seus poderosos remos das árvores maciças de Basã.

A fertilidade e a produtividade de Basã, sem dúvida, são o motivo da sua associação com outras regiões produtivas, tais como o Carmelo e o Líbano. (Je 50:19; Is 33:9) Jeremias relaciona as alturas de Basã com o Líbano, como ponto de observação do qual se podia ver a calamidade que havia de sobrevir à terra dos israelitas por terem abandonado a Jeová. (Je 22:20) A menção do "monte de Deus" e do "monte de picos" de Basã, no Salmo 68:15, 16, talvez se refira à região montanhosa do monte Haurã (Jebel ed Druz). Zalmom (mencionado no Sal 68:14) talvez fosse o pico mais alto dela.

Pelo visto, a região de Basã entra no registro bíblico primeiro em Gênesis 14:5, na referência aos refains (gigantes) em Asterote-Carnaim, os quais foram derrotados pelos reis invasores do tempo de Abraão (antes de 1933 AEC). No tempo da invasão israelita (c. 1473 AEC), Ogue, o rei de Basã, e último remanescente dos homens gigantescos daquela região, foi derrotado e morto, e a terra foi ocupada por Israel. (Núm 21:33-35; De 3:1-3, 11; Jos 13:12) A tribo de Manassés recebeu Basã por herança, embora pareça que mais tarde uma parte da tribo de Gade estava morando na parte sul. — Jos 13:29-31; 17:1, 5; 1Cr 5:11, 16, 23.

As principais cidades de Basã eram: Astarote (cidade de Ogue, e, mais tarde, uma cidade levita), Edrei (a cidade fronteiriça onde Israel derrotou Ogue), Golã (que também se tornou uma cidade levita e uma das três cidades de refúgio a L do Jordão) e Salecá. (De 4:41-43; Jos 9:10; 12:4, 5; 20:8, 9; 1Cr 6:64, 71) Somente na região de Argobe havia 60 cidades muradas, e ruínas de antigas cidadezinhas ainda pontilham hoje toda aquela área. — De 3:3-5; veja ARGOBE N.º 2.

Durante o reinado de Salomão, um dos 12 distritos intendentes colocados sob prepostos e designados para prover alimentos para as mesas régias incluía Basã. — 1Rs 4:7, 13.

Na região ao L do Jordão, a principal rota de N a S, chamada de "estrada real", atravessava Basã na cidade de Astarote, e este fato, junto com a grande fertilidade de Basã e a proximidade de Damasco, tornavam a região o alvo de conquistas militares. O Rei Hazael, de Damasco, capturou Basã durante o reinado de Jeú (c. 904-877 AEC), mas foi evidentemente recuperado no reinado de Jeoás (2Rs 10:32, 33; 13:25), ou pelo menos no tempo de Jeroboão II (c. 844-804 AEC). (2Rs 14:25) Tiglate-Pileser III, da Assíria, tomou toda a região no reinado de Peca (c. 778-759 AEC). — 2Rs 15:29; 1Cr 5:26.

Nos tempos pós-exílicos, Basã ficou sob controle grego, e, mais tarde, tornou-se um dos principais celeiros de trigo do Império Romano. Foi dividido em quatro distritos, e, com exceção do distrito NE, chamado Traconítis, esses distritos preservavam, até certo ponto, os nomes originais da região: o distrito de Gaulanítis, ao O, derivou seu nome de Golã; Auranítis, ao S, de Haurã; e a Bataneia central, de Basã. Além de uma referência a Traconítis (Lu 3:1), Basã não é mencionada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. — Veja HAURÃ.

BASEMATE [Perfumada; Óleo de Bálsamo; Condimentada].

1. Uma esposa de Esaú. Ela era filha de Elom, o hitita, portanto, era ou a própria Ada ou a irmã dela. Basemate era "uma fonte de amargura" para Isaque e Rebeca. — Gên 26:34, 35; 27:46; 28:8; 36:2.

2. Outra esposa de Esaú, possivelmente a mesma que Maalate. Ela era filha de Ismael, filho de Abraão, e irmã de Nebaiote, sendo, portanto, prima em primeiro grau de Esaú. Esaú tomou-a por esposa depois de ver o grande desagrado do seu pai com as suas esposas cananeias. Ela lhe deu por filho Reuel. — Gên 28:8, 9; 36:3, 4, 10.

3. Uma filha de Salomão e esposa de Aimaás, um dos prepostos de alimentação de Salomão. — 1Rs 4:7, 15.

BASLUTE, BASLITE. Chefe de família, cujos descendentes estavam entre os netineus que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:1, 2, 52; Ne 7:54.

BASTÃO. Veja COMANDANTE, BASTÃO DE; VARA, BASTÃO.

BATEDORES. Veja CORREDORES (BATEDORES).

BATER. Veja ESPANCAMENTO.

BATE-RABIM [Filha dos Muitos]. No Cântico de Salomão, os olhos da donzela sulamita são assemelhados às "lagoas de Hésbon, junto ao portão de Bate-Rabim". (Cân 7:4) Hésbon era uma cidade no território de Gade, mas foi designada aos levitas. (Jos 21:38, 39) Ao passo que alguns creem que Bate-Rabim seja o nome dum portão de Hésbon, que dava para a cidade de Rabá (a moderna ʽAmman) ao NE, outros sugerem que Bate-Rabim (que significa "Filha dos Muitos") é usado figuradamente para significar a própria cidade populosa de Hésbon, e que o portão é assim chamado por causa das muitas pessoas que passavam por ele, entrando e saindo da cidade, ou reuniam-se junto ao portão para assembleias. Ao redor das atuais ruínas da cidade ainda resta evidência de antigos tanques, bem como dum grande reservatório. A descrição poética fornece um quadro apropriado da beleza límpida e serena vista nos olhos brilhantes da sulamita, o portão da cidade talvez representando a testa.

BATE-SEBA [Filha de Abundância; possivelmente: Filha [Nascida em] o Sétimo [Dia]]. Filha de Elião (Amiel, 1Cr 3:5); possivelmente neta de Aitofel. (2Sa 11:3; 23:34) Primeiro, esposa de Urias, o hitita, um dos poderosos de Davi; depois casada com Davi, após estar envolvida num dos episódios mais negros da vida de Davi. — 2Sa 23:39.

Em fins de um dia primaveril, Bate-Seba banhava-se, quando um vizinho, o Rei Davi, do terraço de seu palácio, avistou esta linda mulher, descrita como tendo "aparência muito boa". Ao saber que o marido dela estava longe, na guerra, o rei apaixonado mandou que trouxessem Bate-Seba ao palácio, onde teve relações sexuais com ela. "Mais tarde ela voltou para a sua casa", e, depois de algum tempo, informou Davi que ela estava grávida. Nisso, Davi maquinou fazer com que Urias dormisse com sua esposa, para encobrir o adultério, mas, quando esta trama falhou, o rei fez com que Urias fosse morto em batalha. Assim que passou o período de luto dela, Bate-Seba tornou-se esposa de Davi e teve o filho. — 2Sa 11:1-27.

"Mas a coisa . . . parecia má aos olhos de Jeová." Seu profeta Natã censurou o rei por meio de uma ilustração, em que ele apresentou Bate-Seba como a 'única cordeira' do homem pobre, Urias, que o rico, Davi, tomou para servir a um visitante. Com grande pesar, Davi se arrependeu (Sal 51), mas o filho adulterino, que permanece sem nome, morreu. (Veja DAVI.) Anos depois, sobreveio a Davi uma aflição adicional devido ao seu pecado, suas próprias concubinas sendo violadas por seu filho Absalão. — 2Sa 11:27-12:23; 16:21, 22.

Bate-Seba derivou conforto de seu marido arrependido, dirigiu-se repetidas vezes a ele como "meu senhor", como Sara fizera com seu marido (1Rs 1:15-21; 1Pe 3:6), e, com o tempo, deu-lhe um filho chamado Salomão, a quem Jeová amou e abençoou. (2Sa 12:24, 25) Ela também teve outros três filhos, Simeia, Sobabe e Natã, este último sendo antepassado da mãe de Jesus, Maria. Visto que José descendia de Salomão, os antepassados de ambos os pais terrestres de Jesus descendiam de Bate-Seba, bem como de Davi. — 1Cr 3:5; Mt 1:6, 16; Lu 3:23, 31.

Bate-Seba aparece novamente no relato perto do fim do reinado de 40 anos de Davi. Davi lhe jurara: "Salomão, teu filho, é quem se tornará rei depois de mim." Assim, quando Adonias, meio-irmão mais velho de Salomão, tentou usurpar o trono, pouco antes da morte de Davi, Bate-Seba, por sugestão do profeta Natã, lembrou a Davi o seu juramento. Imediatamente, Davi entronizou Salomão, e Bate-Seba tornou-se assim a rainha-mãe. — 1Rs 1:5-37.

Depois de o trono de Salomão ter sido firmemente estabelecido, Bate-Seba compareceu perante ele como influente intermediária, fazendo uma solicitação a favor de Adonias. Salomão "se levantou imediatamente para ir ao encontro dela e curvou-se", e ordenou que se colocasse um trono para sua mãe, "para que se sentasse à sua direita". Todavia, a solicitação dela só revelou o fingimento de Adonias, de modo que Salomão mandou matá-lo. — 1Rs 2:13-25.

BATISMO. A palavra grega bá·pti·sma refere-se ao processo de imersão, incluindo a submersão e a emersão; deriva do verbo bá·pto, que significa "mergulhar". (Jo 13:26) Na Bíblia, "batizar" é o mesmo que "imergir". Em ilustração disto, The Holy Bible, An Improved Edition (A Bíblia Sagrada, Edição Aprimorada), traduz Romanos 6:3, 4 como segue: "Ou, sois ignorantes de que todos nós, que fomos batizados (imersos) em Cristo Jesus, fomos batizados (imersos) em sua morte? Por conseguinte, fomos sepultados junto com ele mediante nosso batismo (imersão) em sua morte." (Veja também Ro; ED; PIB, margem.) A Septuaginta grega usa uma forma da mesma palavra para "mergulhar", em Êxodo 12:22 e Levítico 4:6. (Veja NM ns.) Quando alguém é imerso em água, é temporariamente "sepultado", ficando fora da vista, e então é erguido.

Consideraremos quatro aspectos diferentes do batismo, junto com questões relacionadas: (1) O batismo de João, (2) o batismo em água de Jesus e de seus seguidores, (3) o batismo em Cristo Jesus e na sua morte, (4) o batismo com fogo.

O Batismo de João. O primeiro humano autorizado por Deus a realizar o batismo em água foi João, filho de Zacarias e de Elisabete. (Lu 1:5-7, 57) O próprio fato de que era conhecido como "João Batista" ou "o batizador" (Mt 3:1; Mr 1:4) dá a entender que o batismo ou imersão em água veio à atenção do povo especialmente por meio de João, e as Escrituras provam que seu ministério e seu batismo provinham de Deus; não se originavam de João. Suas obras foram preditas pelo anjo Gabriel como procedentes de Deus (Lu 1:13-17), e Zacarias profetizou pelo espírito santo que João seria um profeta do Altíssimo, para aprontar os caminhos de Jeová. (Lu 1:68-79) Jesus confirmou que o ministério e o batismo de João procediam de Deus. (Lu 7:26-28) O discípulo Lucas registra que "veio a declaração de Deus a João, filho de Zacarias, no ermo. Ele percorreu assim . . . pregando o batismo". (Lu 3:2, 3) O apóstolo João declara sobre ele: "Surgiu um homem enviado como representante de Deus: seu nome era João." — Jo 1:6.

Entendimento adicional do significado do batismo de João é obtido pela comparação de diversas traduções de Lucas 3:3. João veio "pregando o batismo em símbolo de arrependimento para o perdão de pecados" (NM); "batismo condicionado ao arrependimento" (CB); "batismo de arrependimento para a remissão dos pecados" (PIB); "batismo em sinal de arrependimento, para o perdão de pecados" (NE); "arrependam-se dos seus pecados e sejam batizados, que Deus os perdoará" (BLH). Essas traduções tornam claro que o batismo não lavava os pecados das pessoas, mas que o arrependimento e a mudança do modo de agir o fazia, e que o batismo era símbolo disso.

O batismo realizado por João, por conseguinte, não era uma purificação especial procedente de Deus mediante seu servo João, e sim uma demonstração pública e um símbolo do arrependimento da pessoa quanto a seus pecados contra a Lei, que devia levá-la a Cristo. (Gál 3:24) João, destarte, preparou um povo para 'ver o meio salvador de Deus'. (Lu 3:6) Sua obra serviu para "aprontar para Jeová um povo preparado". (Lu 1:16, 17) Tal obra tinha sido profetizada por Isaías e por Malaquias. — Is 40:3-5; Mal 4:5, 6.

Alguns peritos procuram ver uma antecipação do batismo de João e do batismo cristão nas antigas cerimônias de purificação sob a Lei (Êx 29:4; Le 8:6; 14:8, 31, 32; He 9:10, n.) ou em atos individuais. (Gên 35:2; Êx 19:10) Mas estes casos não têm nenhuma analogia com o verdadeiro significado do batismo. Eram lavagens para limpeza cerimonial. Apenas em um caso havia algo parecido a mergulhar o corpo completamente debaixo de água. Era o caso de Naamã, o leproso, e a imersão em água foi feita sete vezes. (2Rs 5:14) Isto não o introduziu numa relação especial com Deus, mas apenas o curou da lepra. Além disso, biblicamente, os prosélitos eram circuncidados, não batizados. Para alguém participar da Páscoa ou empenhar-se na adoração junto ao santuário, ele tinha de estar circuncidado. — Êx 12:43-49.

Tampouco há qualquer base para a asserção feita por alguns de que o batismo de João foi provavelmente copiado da seita judaica dos essênios ou dos fariseus. Ambas estas seitas tinham muitos requisitos de abluções a serem realizadas frequentemente. Mas Jesus mostrou que esses eram meros mandamentos de homens, que violavam os mandamentos de Deus pela sua tradição. (Mr 7:1-9; Lu 11:38-42) João batizava em água porque, conforme disse, fora enviado por Deus para batizar em água. (Jo 1:33) Não fora enviado pelos essênios, nem pelos fariseus. Não tinha a comissão de fazer prosélitos judaicos, mas devia batizar aqueles que já eram membros da congregação judaica. — Lu 1:16.

João sabia que suas obras eram meramente uma preparação do caminho diante do Filho e Messias de Deus, e dariam lugar ao ministério maior Desse. A razão do batismo de João era que o Messias fosse tornado manifesto a Israel. (Jo 1:31) De acordo com João 3:26-30, o ministério do Messias aumentaria, mas o ministério de João devia decrescer. Aqueles que foram batizados pelos discípulos de Jesus, durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus, e que, portanto, também se tornaram discípulos de Jesus, foram batizados em símbolo do arrependimento, na maneira do batismo de João. — Jo 3:25, 26; 4:1, 2.

O Batismo em Água de Jesus. O batismo do próprio Jesus, segundo realizado por João, tinha necessariamente de ter um significado e um propósito bem diferentes do batismo de João, visto que Jesus "não cometeu pecado, nem se achou engano na sua boca". (1Pe 2:22) Assim, não podia submeter-se a um ato que simbolizasse o arrependimento. Sem dúvida, foi por este motivo que João objetou a batizar Jesus. Mas Jesus disse: "Deixa por agora, pois assim é apropriado que executemos tudo o que é justo." — Mt 3:13-15.

Lucas declara que Jesus estava orando por ocasião do seu batismo. (Lu 3:21) Ademais, o escritor da carta aos hebreus diz que, quando Jesus Cristo 'entrou no mundo' (isto é, não quando ele nasceu e não podia ler nem dizer essas palavras, mas quando se apresentou para o batismo e iniciou seu ministério), ele disse, de acordo com o Salmo 40:6-8 (LXX): "Sacrifício e oferta não quiseste, porém, preparaste-me um corpo. . . . Eis aqui vim (no rolo do livro está escrito a meu respeito) para fazer a tua vontade, ó Deus." (He 10:5-9) Jesus era por nascença membro da nação judaica, nação esta que estava num pacto nacional com Deus, a saber, o pacto da Lei. (Êx 19:5-8; Gál 4:4) Assim, Jesus, por este motivo, já se achava numa relação pactuada com Jeová Deus quando se apresentou a João para o batismo. Jesus fazia ali algo além do exigido dele sob a Lei. Apresentava-se a seu Pai, Jeová, para fazer a "vontade" Deste com referência à oferta de seu próprio corpo 'preparado' e com respeito a acabar com os sacrifícios animais que eram oferecidos segundo a Lei. O apóstolo Paulo comenta: "Pela dita 'vontade' é que temos sido santificados por intermédio da oferta do corpo de Jesus Cristo, uma vez para sempre." (He 10:10) A vontade do Pai para Jesus envolvia também atividade em conexão com o Reino, e Jesus apresentou-se igualmente para este serviço. (Lu 4:43; 17:20, 21) Jeová aceitou e reconheceu esta apresentação de seu Filho, ungindo-o com espírito santo e dizendo: "Tu és meu Filho, o amado; eu te tenho aprovado." — Mr 1:9-11; Lu 3:21-23; Mt 3:13-17.

O Batismo em Água dos Seguidores de Jesus. O batismo de João havia de ser substituído pelo batismo ordenado por Jesus: "Fazei discípulos de pessoas de todas as nações, batizando-as em o nome do Pai, e do Filho, e do espírito santo." (Mt 28:19) Este era o único batismo em água que tinha a aprovação de Deus a partir de Pentecostes de 33 EC. Alguns anos depois de 33 EC, Apolo, homem zeloso, ensinava corretamente sobre Jesus, mas só tinha entendimento do batismo de João. Ele teve de ser corrigido neste assunto, assim como os discípulos que Paulo encontrou em Éfeso. Estes homens em Éfeso tinham recebido o batismo de João, mas, evidentemente, depois que sua realização não era mais válida, visto que a visita de Paulo a Éfeso se dera cerca de vinte anos depois da terminação do pacto da Lei. Foram então batizados corretamente em nome de Jesus, e receberam espírito santo. — At 18:24-26; 19:1-7.

Que o batismo cristão exigia entendimento da Palavra de Deus e uma decisão inteligente de se apresentar para fazer a vontade revelada de Deus tornou-se evidente quando, em Pentecostes de 33 EC, os judeus e prosélitos ali reunidos, que já tinham conhecimento das Escrituras Hebraicas, ouviram Pedro falar sobre Jesus, o Messias, o que resultou em que 3.000 "abraçaram de coração a sua palavra" e "foram batizados". (At 2:41; 3:19-4:4; 10:34-38) Aqueles em Samaria primeiro creram na pregação das boas novas por Filipe e então foram batizados. (At 8:12) O eunuco etíope, devotado prosélito judeu que, como tal, também tinha conhecimento de Jeová e das Escrituras Hebraicas, primeiro ouviu a explanação do cumprimento destas escrituras em Cristo, aceitou-a, e então quis ser batizado. (At 8:34-36) Pedro explicou a Cornélio que "o homem que o teme [a Deus] e que faz a justiça lhe é aceitável" (At 10:35), e que todo aquele que exerce fé em Jesus Cristo obtém o perdão de pecados por meio de seu nome. (At 10:43; 11:18) Tudo isto está em harmonia com a ordem de Jesus de 'fazer discípulos, ensinando-os a observar todas as coisas que ordenei'. Aqueles que aceitam o ensino e se tornam discípulos apropriadamente são batizados. — Mt 28:19, 20; At 1:8.

Em Pentecostes, judeus que tinham responsabilidade comunal pela morte de Jesus, e que, sem dúvida, conheciam o batismo de João, ficaram "compungidos no coração" pela pregação de Pedro, e perguntaram: "Irmãos, o que havemos de fazer?" Pedro respondeu: "Arrependei-vos, e cada um de vós seja batizado no nome de Jesus Cristo, para o perdão de vossos pecados, e recebereis a dádiva gratuita do espírito santo." (At 2:37, 38) Observe que Pedro indicou-lhes algo novo, que não era o arrependimento e o batismo com o batismo de João, mas sim o arrependimento e o batismo no nome de Jesus Cristo, que era necessário para o perdão dos pecados. Ele não disse que o próprio batismo lavava os pecados. Pedro sabia que "o sangue de Jesus, . . . Filho [de Deus], purifica-nos de todo o pecado". (1Jo 1:7) Mais tarde, depois de falar sobre Jesus como "o Agente Principal da vida", Pedro disse aos judeus no templo: "Arrependei-vos, portanto, e dai meia-volta, a fim de que os vossos pecados sejam apagados, para que venham épocas de refrigério da parte da pessoa de Jeová." (At 3:15, 19) Aqui, ele lhes ensinou que o arrependimento quanto à sua má ação contra Cristo, e 'dar meia-volta' para reconhecer a ele, era o que trazia o perdão de pecados; não mencionou, neste ponto, o batismo.

Quanto aos judeus, o pacto da Lei foi abolido à base da morte de Cristo na estaca de tortura (Col 2:14), e o novo pacto entrou em operação em Pentecostes de 33 EC. (Veja At 2:4; He 2:3, 4.) Todavia, Deus estendeu favor especial aos judeus por cerca de três anos e meio mais. Durante este tempo, os discípulos de Jesus limitaram sua pregação aos judeus, aos prosélitos judeus e aos samaritanos. Mas por volta de 36 EC, Deus orientou Pedro a dirigir-se à casa do gentio Cornélio, um oficial de exército, romano, e, por derramar Seu espírito santo sobre Cornélio e sua casa, mostrou a Pedro que os gentios podiam então ser aceitos para o batismo em água. (At 10:34, 35, 44-48) Visto que Deus não mais reconhecia o pacto da Lei com os judeus circuncidados, mas agora só reconhecia seu novo pacto mediado por Jesus Cristo, os judeus naturais, quer circuncidados quer incircuncisos, não mais eram considerados por Deus como numa relação especial com Ele. Não podiam conseguir uma condição especial com Deus por observarem a Lei, que não era mais válida, nem pelo batismo de João, que tinha que ver com a Lei, mas tinham de aproximar-se de Deus pela fé em seu Filho, e ser batizados em água, em nome de Jesus Cristo, a fim de obter o reconhecimento e o favor de Jeová. — Veja SETENTA SEMANAS (Pacto em vigor "por uma semana").

Por conseguinte, após 36 EC, todos, judeus e gentios, têm tido a mesma posição aos olhos de Deus. (Ro 11:30-32; 14:12) As pessoas das nações gentias, exceto as que eram prosélitos judeus circuncidados, não estavam no pacto da Lei e nunca tinham sido um povo em relação especial com Deus, o Pai. Agora se lhes estendia a oportunidade, como indivíduos, de se tornarem povo de Deus. Antes de poderem ser batizadas em água, portanto, tinham de achegar-se a Deus como crentes no seu Filho, Jesus Cristo. Daí, segundo o exemplo e a ordem de Cristo, submeter-se-iam apropriadamente ao batismo em água. — Mt 3:13-15; 28:18-20.

Esse batismo cristão teria um efeito vital na sua posição perante Deus. Depois de se referir a Noé construir a arca, na qual este e sua família foram preservados através do Dilúvio, o apóstolo Pedro escreveu: "O que corresponde a isso salva-vos também agora, a saber, o batismo, (não a eliminação da sujeira da carne, mas a solicitação de uma boa consciência, feita a Deus,) pela ressurreição de Jesus Cristo." (1Pe 3:20, 21) A arca constituía uma evidência tangível de que Noé se dedicara a fazer a vontade de Deus e que fizera então fielmente a obra designada por Deus. Isto levou à preservação dele. De modo correspondente, aqueles que se dedicassem a Jeová, à base da fé no ressuscitado Cristo, que fossem batizados em símbolo disso e que fizessem a vontade de Deus para Seus servos seriam salvos do atual mundo iníquo. (Gál 1:3, 4) Não se destinariam mais à destruição junto com o restante do mundo. Seriam salvos disso, e Deus lhes concederia uma boa consciência.

Nenhum Batismo de Bebês. Visto que 'ouvir a palavra', 'abraçar de coração a palavra' e 'arrepender-se' precede ao batismo em água (At 2:14, 22, 38, 41), e que o batismo exige que a pessoa faça uma decisão solene, torna-se evidente que a pessoa precisa pelo menos ter idade suficiente para poder ouvir, crer e fazer tal decisão. Alguns apresentam um argumento a favor do batismo de bebês. Citam os casos em que 'famílias' ou 'casas' foram batizadas, tais como os da casa de Cornélio, de Lídia, do carcereiro filipense, de Crispo e de Estéfanas. (At 10:48; 11:14; 16:15, 32-34; 18:8; 1Co 1:16) Eles acham que isto implica também no batismo de bebês naquelas famílias. Mas, no caso de Cornélio, os batizados eram aqueles que haviam ouvido a palavra e recebido o espírito santo, e falaram em línguas e glorificaram a Deus; essas coisas não se podiam aplicar a bebês. (At 10:44-46) Lídia era "adoradora de Deus, . . . e Jeová abriu-lhe amplamente o coração para prestar atenção às coisas faladas por Paulo". (At 16:14) O carcereiro filipense tinha de 'crer no Senhor Jesus', e isto subentende que os outros da sua família também tinham de crer para ser batizados. (At 16:31-34) "Crispo, o presidente da sinagoga, tornou-se crente no Senhor, e assim também todos os de sua família." (At 18:8) Tudo isto demonstra que, associado com o batismo, havia coisas tais como ouvir, crer e glorificar a Deus, algo que bebês não podem fazer. Em Samaria, quando ouviram e creram nas "boas novas do reino de Deus e do nome de Jesus Cristo, passaram a ser batizados". O registro bíblico especifica aqui que os batizados não eram bebês, mas 'homens e mulheres'. — At 8:12.

A declaração feita pelo apóstolo Paulo aos coríntios, de que filhos eram "santos" em razão de um genitor crente, não constitui prova de bebês serem batizados; antes, dá a entender o contrário. Crianças pequenas demais para terem a capacidade de tomar tal decisão, passariam a estar sob uma forma de mérito por terem um genitor (ou genitora) crente, não por um chamado batismo sacramental, que transmitisse mérito independente. Se bebês pudessem corretamente ser batizados, não seria preciso aplicar a eles o mérito do genitor crente. — 1Co 7:14.

É verdade que Jesus disse: "Parai de impedi-las [as criancinhas] de vir a mim, pois o reino dos céus pertence a tais." (Mt 19:13-15; Mr 10:13-16) Mas não foram batizadas. Jesus abençoou-as, e não há nada para indicar que impor-lhes ele as mãos fosse uma cerimônia religiosa. Ele mostrou adicionalmente que o motivo de 'o reino de Deus pertencer a tais' não era serem batizadas, mas serem dóceis e confiantes. Ordena-se aos cristãos ser "pequeninos quanto à maldade", mas "plenamente desenvolvidos na capacidade de entendimento". — Mt 18:4; Lu 18:16, 17; 1Co 14:20.

O historiador religioso Augusto Neander escreveu sobre os cristãos do primeiro século: "A prática do batismo de bebês era desconhecida neste período. . . . Que foi só num período bem posterior (pelo menos certamente não anterior) a Irineu [c. 120/140-c. 200/203 EC] que surgiu um vestígio do batismo de bebês, e o fato de que passou a ser reconhecido como tradição apostólica só no terceiro século é mais evidência contra do que a favor de se admitir a sua origem apostólica". — History of the Planting and Training of the Christian Church by the Apostles (História do Estabelecimento e do Treinamento da Igreja Cristã Pelos Apóstolos), 1864, p. 162.

Imersão Completa. À base da definição de batismo, já mencionada, é evidente que o batismo é a completa imersão ou submersão em água, não um mero derramamento ou aspersão de água. Os exemplos bíblicos de batismo corroboram este fato. Jesus foi batizado num rio de tamanho apreciável, o Jordão, e, depois de ser batizado, 'subiu da água'. (Mr 1:10; Mt 3:13, 16) João escolheu um lugar no vale do Jordão, perto de Salim, para batizar, "porque havia ali uma grande quantidade de água". (Jo 3:23) O eunuco etíope pediu ser batizado quando chegaram a um "corpo de água". Ambos "desceram à água". Depois, ambos 'saíram da água'. (At 8:36-40) Todos estes casos subentendem, não uma lagoazinha cuja água dava até os tornozelos, mas um grande corpo de água, no qual se tinha de andar para entrar e sair. Além disso, ser o batismo também usado para simbolizar o sepultamento indica a submersão completa. — Ro 6:4-6; Col 2:12.

Fontes históricas mostram que os primitivos cristãos batizavam por imersão. Sobre este assunto, a New Catholic Encyclopedia (Nova Enciclopédia Católica; 1967, Vol. II, p. 56) declara: "É evidente que o Batismo na primitiva Igreja era por imersão." Larousse du XXe Siècle (Larousse do Século 20), Paris, 1928, diz: "Os primeiros cristãos recebiam o batismo por imersão em toda parte em que se encontrava água."

Batismo em Cristo Jesus, na Sua Morte. Jesus sabia, por ocasião do seu batismo no rio Jordão, que iniciava um proceder sacrificial. Sabia que seu 'corpo preparado' tinha de ser morto, que ele tinha de morrer em inocência como perfeito sacrifício humano, com valor de resgate para a humanidade. (Mt 20:28) Jesus entendia que tinha de ser mergulhado na morte, mas que seria ressuscitado dela no terceiro dia. (Mt 16:21) Assim, assemelhou a sua experiência a um batismo na morte. (Lu 12:50) Explicou aos seus discípulos que já estava passando por esse batismo durante o seu ministério. (Mr 10:38, 39) Foi batizado plenamente na morte ao ser mergulhado nela por ser pregado numa estaca de tortura, em 14 de nisã de 33 EC. Sua ressurreição, pelo seu Pai, Jeová Deus, no terceiro dia, completou este batismo, o qual incluiu uma emersão. O batismo de Jesus na morte é claramente distinto e separado do seu batismo em água, porque passara plenamente pelo batismo em água no começo do seu ministério, ocasião em que seu batismo na morte apenas começara.

Os fiéis apóstolos de Jesus Cristo foram batizados em água com o batismo de João. (Jo 1:35-37; 4:1) Mas, eles ainda não haviam sido batizados com espírito santo quando Jesus indicou que eles também deveriam ser batizados num simbólico batismo semelhante ao dele, um batismo na morte. (Mr 10:39) Portanto, o batismo na sua morte é algo à parte do batismo em água. Paulo expressou-se na sua carta à congregação cristã em Roma, dizendo: "Não sabeis que todos nós, os que fomos batizados em Cristo Jesus, fomos batizados na sua morte?" — Ro 6:3.

Jeová Deus é o responsável pela realização de tal batismo em Cristo Jesus, bem como pelo batismo na sua morte. Ele ungiu Jesus, tornando-o o Cristo ou Ungido. (At 10:38) Assim, Deus batizou Jesus com o espírito santo, a fim de que, por meio de Jesus, os seguidores dele pudessem depois ser batizados com espírito santo. Portanto, aqueles que se tornam co-herdeiros dele, com esperança celestial, têm de ser "batizados em Cristo Jesus", quer dizer, no Ungido Jesus, o qual, por ocasião da sua unção, também fora gerado por espírito para ser filho de Deus. Eles se tornam assim unidos com ele, Cabeça deles, e tornam-se membros da congregação que constitui o corpo de Cristo. — 1Co 12:12, 13, 27; Col 1:18.

O proceder desses seguidores cristãos, que são batizados em Cristo Jesus, é um proceder de integridade sob prova, desde o tempo de serem batizados em Cristo, enfrentando diariamente a morte e tendo por fim uma morte em integridade, conforme descrito pelo apóstolo Paulo quando explicou aos cristãos romanos: "Portanto, fomos sepultados com ele por intermédio de nosso batismo na sua morte, a fim de que, assim como Cristo foi levantado dentre os mortos por intermédio da glória do Pai, também nós andássemos igualmente em novidade de vida. Pois, se ficamos unidos com ele na semelhança de sua morte, certamente seremos também unidos com ele na semelhança de sua ressurreição." — Ro 6:4, 5; 1Co 15:31-49.

Esclarecendo o assunto ainda mais, Paulo, escrevendo à congregação em Filipos, descreveu seu próprio proceder como "participação nos seus sofrimentos [nos de Cristo], submetendo-me a uma morte semelhante à dele, para ver se de algum modo consigo alcançar a ressurreição a ocorrer mais cedo dentre os mortos". (Fil 3:10, 11) Somente o Deus Todo-Poderoso, o Pai celestial, que é o Batizador daqueles que são batizados em união com Jesus Cristo e na morte dele, pode completar o batismo. Ele faz isso por meio de Cristo, por ressuscitá-los da morte para estarem unidos com Jesus Cristo na semelhança da sua ressurreição, a qual é para a vida celestial, imortal. — 1Co 15:53, 54.

Que uma congregação de pessoas, por assim dizer, pode ser batizada ou imersa num libertador e líder é ilustrado pelo apóstolo Paulo quando descreve a congregação de Israel como 'batizada em Moisés, por meio da nuvem e do mar'. Eles foram ali cobertos por uma nuvem protetora e pelas muralhas de água em ambos os lados deles, sendo, em sentido simbólico, imersos. Moisés predisse que Deus suscitaria um profeta semelhante a ele; Pedro aplicou esta profecia a Jesus Cristo. — 1Co 10:1, 2; De 18:15-19; At 3:19-23.

O que é o batismo "com o objetivo de serem mortos"?

A passagem de 1 Coríntios 15:29 é vertida de forma variada pelos tradutores: "Que farão os que se batizam pelos mortos?" (Fi); "pelos mortos?" (PIB); "em favor dos mortos?" (BJ); "com o objetivo de serem mortos?" (NM)

Apresentaram-se muitas interpretações diferentes para este versículo. A interpretação mais comum é que Paulo se referia ao costume de batismos vicários em água, isto é, batizar pessoas vivas em favor de mortas, de modo substitutivo, a fim de beneficiar os mortos. Não se pode provar a existência de tal prática nos dias de Paulo, nem estaria de acordo com aqueles textos bíblicos que declaram especificamente que os batizados eram "discípulos", os que 'abraçavam de coração a palavra', que pessoalmente 'criam'. — Mt 28:19; At 2:41; 8:12.

A Greek-English Lexicon (Um Léxico Grego-Inglês), de Liddell e Scott, inclui "por", "em favor de" e "em prol de" entre as suas definições da preposição grega hy·pér, usada no caso genitivo em 1 Coríntios 15:29. (Revisado por H. Jones, Oxford, 1968, p. 1857.) Em algumas circunstâncias, a expressão "em prol de" é equivalente a "com o objetivo de". Já em 1728, Jacob Elsner notou casos, de diversos escritores gregos, em que hy·pér com o genitivo tem sentido terminante, quer dizer, um sentido que expressa objetivo, e ele mostrou que, em 1 Coríntios 15:29, esta construção tem tal sentido. (Observationes Sacræ in Novi Foederis Libros, Utrecht, Vol. II, pp. 127-131) Coerente com isso, neste versículo, a Tradução do Novo Mundo traduz hy·pér como significando "com o objetivo de".

Quando uma expressão pode gramaticalmente ser traduzida de mais de um modo, a tradução correta é aquela que concorda com o contexto. No contexto, 1 Coríntios 15:3, 4, mostra que o assunto principal em consideração é a crença na morte e na ressurreição de Jesus Cristo. Os versículos seguintes apresentam então evidência da solidez desta crença (vv. 5-11); consideram as graves implicações de se negar a crença na ressurreição (vv. 12-19), o fato de que a ressurreição de Cristo fornece garantia de que outros serão levantados dentre os mortos (vv. 20-23), e como tudo isso resulta na unificação de toda a criação inteligente com Deus (vv. 24-28). O versículo 29 obviamente é parte integrante desta consideração. Mas a ressurreição de quem está em consideração no versículo 29? É a ressurreição daqueles cujo batismo é mencionado ali? Ou é de alguém que faleceu antes de esse batismo ocorrer? O que indicam os versículos seguintes? Os versículos 30 a 34 mostram claramente que se consideram ali as perspectivas de vida futura de cristãos vivos, e os versículos 35 a 58 declaram que se trata de cristãos fiéis que têm a esperança de ter vida celestial.

Isto concorda com Romanos 6:3, que diz: "Não sabeis que todos nós, os que fomos batizados em Cristo Jesus, fomos batizados na sua morte?" Conforme este texto esclarece, não se trata dum batismo a que o cristão se submete em favor de alguém já falecido, mas, antes, que é algo que afeta o futuro da própria pessoa.

Então, em que sentido foram aqueles cristãos "batizados com o objetivo de serem mortos", ou "batizados na sua morte"? Foram imersos num proceder de vida que havia de levá-los à morte, quais mantenedores da integridade, assim como se deu com Cristo, e com a esperança duma ressurreição semelhante à dele, para a vida espiritual imortal no céu. (Ro 6:4, 5; Fil 3:10, 11) Não era um batismo realizado rapidamente, assim como é a imersão em água. Mais de três anos após a sua imersão em água, Jesus falou sobre um batismo que ainda não se completara no caso dele e que ainda estava no futuro para os seus discípulos. (Mr 10:35-40) Visto que este batismo leva à ressurreição para a vida celestial, deve começar com a operação do espírito de Deus sobre a pessoa de modo a gerar tal esperança, e deve terminar, não com a morte, mas com a realização da perspectiva de vida espiritual imortal por meio da ressurreição. — 2Co 1:21, 22; 1Co 6:14.

O Lugar da Pessoa no Propósito de Deus. Deve-se notar que o batizado em água entra numa relação especial como servo de Jeová, para fazer a vontade Dele. A pessoa não decide qual é a vontade de Deus para com ela, mas é Deus quem faz a decisão quanto ao uso da pessoa e a colocação dela na estrutura dos Seus propósitos. Por exemplo, em tempos passados, toda a nação de Israel estava numa relação especial com Deus; era a propriedade de Jeová. (Êx 19:5) Mas apenas a tribo de Levi foi escolhida para realizar os serviços no santuário, e dentre esta tribo, apenas a família de Arão constituía o sacerdócio. (Núm 1:48-51; Êx 28:1; 40:13-15) O reinado veio a ser estabelecido por Jeová Deus exclusivamente na linhagem da família de Davi. — 2Sa 7:15, 16.

Do mesmo modo, os que passam pelo batismo cristão tornam-se propriedade de Deus, seus escravos, para serem usados conforme ele acha conveniente. (1Co 6:20) Um exemplo da direção de Deus em tais assuntos é encontrado em Revelação, onde se faz referência a um número específico de pessoas finalmente 'seladas', a saber, 144.000. (Re 7:4-8) Mesmo antes dessa aprovação final, o espírito santo de Deus serve de selo, o qual dá aos selados um penhor antecipado da sua herança, uma herança celestial. (Ef 1:13, 14; 2Co 5:1-5) Diz-se também aos que têm tal esperança: "Deus pôs agora os membros no corpo [de Cristo], cada um deles assim como lhe agradou." — 1Co 12:18, 27.

Jesus trouxe à atenção outro grupo, quando disse: "Tenho outras ovelhas, que não são deste aprisco; a estas também tenho de trazer, e elas escutarão a minha voz e se tornarão um só rebanho, um só pastor." (Jo 10:16) Estes não são do "pequeno rebanho" (Lu 12:32), mas também têm de chegar-se a Jeová por meio de Jesus Cristo e ser batizados em água.

A visão dada ao apóstolo João, conforme registrada em Revelação, harmoniza-se com isso quando, depois de mostrar a João os 144.000 "selados", volta os olhos dele para "uma grande multidão, que nenhum homem podia contar". Mostra-se que estes "lavaram as suas vestes compridas e as embranqueceram no sangue do Cordeiro", indicando fé no sacrifício resgatador de Jesus Cristo, o Cordeiro de Deus. (Re 7:9, 14) Portanto, recebem reconhecimento favorável, estando "em pé diante do trono" de Deus, mas não são os que Deus escolhe para serem os 144.000 "selados". Quanto a esta "grande multidão", a visão prossegue a indicar que ela serve a Deus dia e noite, e será protegida e cuidada por ele. — Re 7:15-17.

Batismo com Fogo. Quando muitos fariseus e saduceus foram ter com João, o Batizador, este os chamou de "descendência de víboras". Falou sobre Aquele que vinha e disse: "Este vos batizará com espírito santo e com fogo." (Mt 3:7, 11; Lu 3:16) O batismo com fogo não é o mesmo que o batismo com espírito santo. O batismo com fogo não podia ser, conforme alguns dizem, as línguas de fogo em Pentecostes, porque os discípulos não foram ali imersos em fogo. (At 2:3) João disse aos seus ouvintes que haveria uma divisão, que haveria um ajuntamento do trigo, após o que a palha seria queimada em fogo inextinguível. (Mt 3:12) Ele salientou que o fogo não seria uma bênção ou uma recompensa, mas ocorreria porque 'a árvore não produziu fruto excelente'. — Mt 3:10; Lu 3:9.

Ao usar fogo como símbolo de destruição, Jesus predisse a execução dos iníquos que ocorreria durante a sua presença, dizendo: "No dia em que Ló saiu de Sodoma, choveu do céu fogo e enxofre, e destruiu a todos. Do mesmo modo será naquele dia em que o Filho do homem há de ser revelado." (Lu 17:29, 30; Mt 13:49, 50) Outros casos em que o fogo não representa uma força salvadora, mas uma destrutiva, são encontrados em 2 Tessalonicenses 1:8; Judas 7; e 2 Pedro 3:7, 10.

BATO. Uma medida para líquidos que equivale a um décimo de um ômer (coro) e corresponde a um efa, a medida para secos. (Ez 45:10, 11, 14) À base de fragmentos de jarros com a inscrição de "bato" em antigos caracteres hebraicos, tem-se calculado que a medida dum bato equivalia a 22 l.

BAURIM [Escolhidos]. Uma aldeia junto ao monte das Oliveiras, situada ao lado N duma antiga estrada que levava a Jericó e ao Jordão. Em geral é identificada com Ras et-Tmim, a 2 km ao NE do monte do Templo.

Paltiel, chorando, andou atrás de Mical, filha de Saul, até Baurim, quando ela estava sendo devolvida ao Rei Davi. A ordem do general Abner: "Vai, volta!" bastou para fazê-lo retornar neste ponto. (2Sa 3:16) Mais tarde, Davi, quando abandonou Jerusalém por causa da conspiração do seu filho Absalão, atravessou o vale da torrente do Cédron, tomou a "subida das Oliveiras", passou além do cume e chegou a Baurim. (2Sa 15:23, 30; 16:1, 5) Ali Simei, parente benjamita de Saul, começou a andar ao longo da encosta do monte, amaldiçoando Davi, atirando pedras e jogando pó. (2Sa 16:5-13; 19:15-23) Baurim foi também o ponto em que Aimaás e Jonatã, filhos de Zadoque e de Abiatar, tiveram de esconder-se no poço de certo homem, quando estavam em caminho para entregar uma mensagem ao Rei Davi. — 2Sa 15:27; 17:17-20.

BAVAI. Trabalhador levita no projeto de Neemias, da reconstrução das muralhas de Jerusalém. Ele era do distrito de Queila; filho de Henadade e possivelmente irmão de Binui. — Ne 3:18, 24.

BDÉLIO [hebr.: bedhó·lahh]. Fragrante goma resinosa parecida à mirra em aspecto, e às vezes usada para adulterá-la. (Veja também MIRRA.) É obtida de uma árvore (Commiphora africana) encontrada no NO da África e na Arábia, e também de um tipo relacionado no NO da Índia. Trata-se dum gênero de pequenas árvores ou arbustos de aspecto mirrado, e espinhoso, e com pouca folhagem, que cresce em lugares quentes e ensolarados. Quando se corta a casca, exsuda uma seiva ou goma fragrante, resinosa. Depois de a goma ser removida da árvore, ela logo endurece, torna-se cerácea e transparente, e tem aparência similar a uma pérola.

Na descrição da terra de Havilá, circundada pelo rio Píson (um dos quatro defluentes do rio que saía do Éden), faz-se menção das suas coisas valiosas: ouro, bdélio e pedra de ônix. (Gên 2:11, 12) Em Números 11:7, diz-se que o maná que os israelitas recolhiam durante a peregrinação no ermo tinha "aspecto de bdélio". O maná fora anteriormente comparado à "geada sobre a terra". (Êx 16:14) Isto corresponde à cor esbranquiçada do bdélio. Josefo, ao considerar a provisão do maná, refere-se ao bdélio como "erva aromática". — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), III, 28 (i, 6).

BEALIAS [Jah É Dono]. Guerreiro benjamita que se juntou a Davi em Ziclague. — 1Cr 12:1, 2, 5.

BEALOTE [Lugar das Senhoras].

1. Uma cidade no extremo S de Judá, mencionada em Josué 15:24. Sua localização é desconhecida.

2. Distrito na vizinhança de Aser, sob Baana, como intendência de Salomão. É chamada Alote na versão Almeida. — 1Rs 4:16.

BEBAI.

1. Chefe de família, cujos descendentes, mais de 600 deles, retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 2, 11; Ne 7:16) Outros vinte e nove vieram com Esdras, em 468 AEC. (Esd 8:11) Quatro do primeiro grupo haviam tomado esposas estrangeiras, que despediram às instâncias de Esdras. — Esd 10:28, 44.

2. Destacado homem ou representante dos filhos de Bebai (N.º 1), que atestou o acordo de fidelidade de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 15.

BEBEDICE, EMBRIAGUEZ. A condição de ficar embriagado devido à ingestão excessiva de bebidas alcoólicas. Beberrão é aquele que habitualmente toma demais bebidas fortes, a ponto de ficar embriagado.

As bebidas inebriantes das antigas terras bíblicas incluíam o vinho feito de uvas (De 32:14), e bebidas alcoólicas preparadas a partir de cereais. (Is 1:22) O uso moderado do vinho e de outras bebidas fortes é aceitável a Jeová, que provê "vinho que alegra o coração do homem mortal". — Sal 104:14, 15; veja CERVEJA; VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.

Condenada na Bíblia. A ingestão de bebida forte ao ponto de embriaguez é fortemente censurada na Bíblia. O sábio escritor de Provérbios pinta um quadro vívido e cientificamente exato dos efeitos das bebidas alcoólicas tomadas em excesso. Ele avisa: "Quem tem ais? Quem tem apreensão? Quem tem contendas? Quem tem preocupação? Quem tem ferimentos sem razão alguma? Quem tem embaciamento dos olhos? Os que ficam muito tempo com o vinho, os que entram para descobrir vinho misturado. Não olhes para o vinho quando apresenta uma cor vermelha, quando está cintilando no copo [quando o vinho parece indevidamente atraente, cintilante], quando escorre suavemente [quando desce fácil demais pela garganta]. No seu fim morde igual a uma serpente e segrega veneno igual a uma víbora [pode deixar a pessoa fisicamente doente (por exemplo, provocando cirrose hepática) e mentalmente doente (causando o delirium-tremens), e pode realmente matar]. Teus próprios olhos verão coisas estranhas [o álcool atua sobre os centros de controle do cérebro, reprimindo-os; atitudes normalmente reprimidas vêm a lume; surgem alucinações; lapsos de memória são preenchidos por meio de a pessoa contar experiências fantásticas de modo mui plausível; a pessoa demonstra um comportamento desinibido] e teu próprio coração falará coisas perversas [pensamentos e desejos normalmente suprimidos serão expressos]." — Pr 23:29-33; Os 4:11; Mt 15:18, 19.

A experiência pessoal do bêbedo é descrita à medida que o escritor prossegue: "E hás de tornar-te como quem se deita no coração do mar [sentindo uma confusão como de alguém que se afoga, passando finalmente para a perda dos sentidos], sim, como quem se deita no topo de um mastro [assim como o balanço dum navio é máximo neste ponto, a vida do bêbedo corre perigo de sofrer um acidente, um derrame, uma briga, e assim por diante]. 'Golpearam-me, mas não adoeci; surraram-me, mas eu não o sabia [diz o bêbedo, como que falando sozinho; era insensível ao que realmente se passava e ao castigo que tal experiência lhe infligia]. Quando é que acordarei? Eu o procurarei ainda mais [tem de dormir então até passarem os efeitos de ter bebido demais, mas está escravizado à bebida e aguarda a oportunidade de beber mais, quando puder].' " Ele se tornará pobre, por gastar quantias excessivas com bebidas alcoólicas e também por se tornar indigno de confiança e incapacitado para o trabalho. — Pr 23:20, 21, 34, 35.

Proibida na Congregação Cristã. O beberrão tende a ser turbulento ou rude, a fazer barulho sem restrições e a agir de modo ridículo, trazendo vitupério. (Pr 20:1; Sal 107:27; Is 19:14) Por conseguinte, a prática da bebedice não deve ser tolerada na congregação cristã. A atitude de Deus para com a bebedice é revelada na sua Lei dada a Israel. Um filho obstinado e rebelde, que fosse glutão e beberrão, devia ser apedrejado até a morte. (De 21:18-21) Similarmente, a Bíblia ordena que os beberrões impenitentes ou habituais sejam expulsos da congregação cristã. (1Co 5:11-13) "As obras da carne" incluem "bebedeiras, festanças", coisas que as nações em geral praticam. O cristão, tendo-se purificado de tais práticas, mas que posteriormente volta a elas e se mostra impenitente, estará impedido de entrar no Reino de Deus. (1Co 6:9-11) Ele deve parar de gastar seu tempo fazendo a vontade das nações por empenhar-se em seus excessos com o vinho e em suas competições no beber. (1Pe 4:3) Tem de devotar-se a produzir os frutos do espírito de Deus. — Gál 5:19-24.

Exercer moderação e ser ajuizado, portanto, acham-se entre os requisitos para os superintendentes cristãos (1Ti 3:1-3; Tit 1:7); os servos ministeriais (1Ti 3:8); os homens e as mulheres idosos (Tit 2:2, 3); os homens e as mulheres jovens (Tit 2:4-8); os filhos (especialmente os dos superintendentes). — Tit 1:6.

Ao considerar a Refeição Noturna do Senhor, o apóstolo Paulo repreendeu os cristãos coríntios por certos abusos. Havia alguns que traziam seu próprio alimento e bebida ao lugar de reunião da congregação. Embora se excedessem no comer e no beber, negavam-se a compartilhar a sua abundância com seus irmãos necessitados e assim os envergonhavam. Portanto, ao chegar a ocasião para a observância da Refeição Noturna do Senhor, alguns não estavam em condições apropriadas para participar dela, por causa dos excessos, ao passo que outros estavam com fome. Por isso Paulo disse: "Um está com fome, mas outro está inebriado." — 1Co 11:20-22.

Também vale observar que, de acordo com a Lei, não era apropriado que os sacerdotes tomassem bebidas alcoólicas ao se empenharem num serviço religioso. Eles tinham recebido a ordem de não beber vinho nem bebida inebriante quando se empenhassem em seus deveres oficiais, senão morreriam. — Le 10:8-11.

Por que conta a Bíblia que homens tais como Noé e Ló ficaram embriagados?

Na Bíblia se mencionam vários casos de embriaguez, quando tais incidentes lançam luz sobre algum assunto importante. Assim, ela relata que, depois do Dilúvio, Noé plantou um vinhedo, "começou a beber do vinho e ficou embriagado". Este acontecimento acha-se registrado nas Escrituras para mostrar o que levou à maldição de Noé sobre Canaã. (Gên 9:20-27) Em outro caso, em duas noites diferentes, as duas filhas de Ló lhe deram tanto vinho, que ele ficou bêbedo, e elas tiveram relações sexuais com ele. (Gên 19:30-38) Este relato nos esclarece a origem das nações de Moabe e de Amom, e seu parentesco com Israel. Pelo que parece, Ló estava bêbedo o bastante para perder o controle de seu bom senso, mas não tão embriagado a ponto de não poder ter relações sexuais. Visto que a Palavra de Deus condena tão fortemente a bebedice, podemos estar certos de que estes homens justos não tinham por hábito beber em excesso, não eram beberrões. Mas a candura da Bíblia é ilustrada nisso, por ela não ocultar a verdade quando, para nosso esclarecimento, relata eventos que envolvem personagens bíblicos. Alguns outros casos de embriaguez são registrados em 1 Samuel 25:36-38; 2 Samuel 11:13; 1 Reis 20:15-21.

Suposição Falsa. Em Pentecostes de 33 EC, quando o espírito santo foi derramado sobre os discípulos de Cristo, eles falaram em diversas línguas e alguns disseram: "Estão cheios de vinho doce." Mas Pedro explicou: "Estes, de fato, não estão embriagados, como supondes, pois é a terceira hora do dia", ou por volta das 9 horas da manhã, contadas a partir do nascer do sol (por volta das 6 horas). (At 2:1-4, 13-15) Estes celebrantes de Pentecostes possuíam o rolo da profecia de Isaías, onde está escrito: "Ai dos que se levantam de manhã cedo somente à procura de bebida inebriante." (Is 5:11) Na realidade, não era costume fazer uma festa ou um banquete numa hora tão cedo, e não era realístico pensar que 120 pessoas ao mesmo tempo estivessem embriagadas naquela hora da manhã. Paulo expressa o costume ao dizer: "Os que ficam embriagados usualmente estão embriagados de noite." — 1Te 5:7.

Embriaguez Figurativa. Os líderes do reino das dez tribos, que tinha a Efraim como sua tribo dominante, estavam espiritualmente ébrios com "vinho". Em primeiro lugar, gostavam demais de independência e alianças políticas com os inimigos do reino de Judá, cujos reis se sentavam "no trono de Jeová". (1Cr 29:23) Sem dúvida, tinham também suas bebedeiras literais. Estes homens estavam em pacto com Jeová Deus, mas o violavam de modo arrogante, ébrio, e vituperavam a Ele. — Is 28:1-4.

De modo similar, os sacerdotes e líderes de Judá ficaram figurativamente embriagados. Na qualidade de guias religiosos, acrescentaram tradições de homens; visionaram e falaram coisas falsas sobre a nação santa de Deus. Recorreram à Assíria em busca de ajuda, em vez de a Deus. (Is 29:1, 9-14; 2Rs 16:5-9) Conforme predito, o embriagado Israel foi levado embora pela Assíria, em 740 AEC. Mais tarde, o apóstata Judá foi obrigado a beber o copo do furor de Jeová e foi mandado atordoado ao exílio em Babilônia, em 607 AEC. (Is 51:17-23) Por causa do tratamento duro dispensado por Babilônia ao povo de Deus, Babilônia (o "rei de Sesaque") bebeu o mesmo copo 68 anos mais tarde. — Je 25:15-29.

A simbólica "Babilônia, a Grande", é retratada na Bíblia como prostituta embriagada, tendo na mão um copo de ouro "cheio de coisas repugnantes e das coisas impuras da sua fornicação". Os habitantes da terra foram embriagados com 'o vinho da sua fornicação'. Ela mesma está "embriagada com o sangue dos santos e com o sangue das testemunhas de Jesus". Sua devassidão resultará na eterna destruição dela. — Re 17:1-6, 16; 14:8; 18:8; veja BABILÔNIA, A GRANDE.

BEBIDA FORTE. Veja VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.

BEBIDA INEBRIANTE. Veja VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.

BECORATE [Primogênito]. Antepassado do Rei Saul; da tribo de Benjamim. — 1Sa 9:1.

BEDÃ.

1. Alistado junto com Gideão (Jerubaal), Jefté e Samuel como livrando Israel dos inimigos. (1Sa 12:11) Entretanto, em nenhum outro lugar da Bíblia, nem na história secular, se menciona esse Bedã. A respeito deste texto observam C. F. Keil e F. Delitzsch: "É extremamente improvável que Samuel mencionasse aqui um juiz, que fora passado por alto no livro de Juízes por causa de sua comparativa insignificância." — Commentary on the Old Testament (Comentário sobre o Velho Testamento), 1973, Vol. II, 1 Samuel, p. 118.

Alguns entendem que Bedã refere-se a Baraque. O contexto de 1 Samuel 12:11 denota um grande libertador e relembra a opressão de Sísera e a libertação que se seguiu, libertação em que Jeová usou Baraque. Baraque é mencionado junto com Gideão e Jefté em Hebreus 11:32. A Septuaginta grega e a Pesito siríaca rezam "Baraque" em 1 Samuel 12:11. Outros acreditam que Bedã se refira ao juiz Abdom. — Veja BARAQUE.

2. Um descendente de Manassés. — 1Cr 7:17.

BEDADE. Pai do rei edomita Hadade, que governou em Avite antes de qualquer rei governar Israel. — Gên 36:31, 35; 1Cr 1:43, 46.

BEDEIAS. Um dos 12 filhos de Bani, os quais, às instâncias de Esdras, despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos. — Esd 10:10, 11, 34, 35, 44.

BEELIADA [Dono Conhece]. Filho de Davi nascido após sua chegada a Jerusalém. (1Cr 14:3-7) É chamado "Eliada" (que significa "Deus Conheceu") em 2 Samuel 5:16 e 1 Crônicas 3:8.

BEEMOTE. A denominação "beemote", que aparece em Jó 40:15, tem sido considerada, de forma variada, como (1) um derivado duma palavra egípcia para "búfalo-aquático", (2) uma palavra, possivelmente de origem assíria, que significa "monstro", e (3) um plural intensificado da palavra hebraica be·he·máh (animal; animal doméstico) que se entende denotar um "animal grande" ou "animal enorme". Na Septuaginta grega, a palavra the·rí·a (feras) traduz a hebraica behe·móhth. Evidentemente, porém, refere-se a um único animal, conforme indicado pelo fato de que a descrição do beemote não é a de várias criaturas, mas somente de uma, geralmente considerada como sendo o hipopótamo (Hippopotamus amphibius). De fato, várias traduções da Bíblia (veja ALA; IBB; MC, v. 10; NM; PIB) usam a palavra "hipopótamo" no texto principal, ou em notas marginais, a fim de identificar a criatura referida por Deus.

O hipopótamo é um mamífero enorme, de couro grosso, quase sem pelos, que frequenta rios, lagos e pântanos. Distingue-se por suas pernas curtas, mandíbulas enormes e cabeça grande, da qual se diz que pesa até uma tonelada. Tem uma força tão grande nas mandíbulas e nos dentes, que uma mordida pode perfurar a couraça dum crocodilo. Plenamente desenvolvido, pode ter de 4 a 5 m de comprimento e pode pesar até 3.600 kg. Sendo uma criatura anfíbia, o hipopótamo, apesar do seu prodigioso tamanho, pode locomover-se com relativa rapidez dentro e fora da água. Alimenta-se de plantas aquáticas macias, de grama, juncos e arbustos, ingerindo todo dia mais de 90 kg de plantas verdes em seu estômago que tem capacidade para 150 a 190 l.

O couro, especialmente o da barriga, é extremamente resistente, podendo assim suportar batidas e arranhões, ao passo que o hipopótamo arrasta seu corpo baixo por cima de paus e pedras dos leitos dos rios. As fossas nasais estão situadas estrategicamente na ponta do focinho, e os olhos se encontram alto na frente da cabeça, habilitando o hipopótamo tanto a respirar como a ver enquanto está quase que completamente submerso. As orelhas e as fossas nasais, parecidas a válvulas, fecham-se quando submerge. Até mesmo enquanto dorme, quando o nível de bióxido de carbono no sangue atinge certo nível, o animal emerge automaticamente para obter ar fresco e depois submerge outra vez.

Antigamente, o hipopótamo era encontrado na maioria dos grandes lagos e rios da África, mas, em resultado das caçadas do homem, desapareceu de muitas regiões, e diz-se que é desconhecido ao N das cataratas de Cartum, no Sudão. Nos tempos antigos, o hipopótamo talvez até mesmo frequentasse o Jordão. De fato, relata-se que em diversas partes da Palestina foram encontradas presas e ossos desta criatura.

A descrição no capítulo 40 do livro de Jó apresenta um vívido quadro deste enorme mamífero, o beemote. É descrito como herbívoro. (v. 15) As fontes de sua tremenda força e energia são comentadas como sendo as ancas e os tendões de seu abdome, isto é, os músculos das costas e os do abdome. (v. 16) A cauda do beemote é como um cedro. Visto que a cauda do hipopótamo é relativamente curta, medindo cerca de 46 a 51 cm, é provável que se deva entender isto como significando que esse animal pode erguer rigidamente sua cauda grossa, ou balançá-la como uma árvore. “Os tendões das suas coxas estão entrelaçados”, de modo que as fibras e os tendões dos músculos das suas coxas são contorcidos juntos e trançados como fortes cabos. (v. 17) Os ossos de suas pernas são tão fortes como “tubos de cobre”, podendo assim suportar o peso maciço do corpo. Os ossos e as costelas dele são como barras de ferro forjado. (v. 18) Faz-se alusão ao imenso consumo de alimentos por parte do beemote (v. 20) e menciona-se sua descontração sob os lódãos espinhosos, ou o esconder-se num lugar pantanoso, na sombra dos choupos. (vv. 21, 22) Mesmo quando um rio transborda as margens, esta criatura não entra em pânico, pois ainda pode manter a cabeça acima do nível da água e nadar contra a força da inundação. (v. 23) Jeová perguntou a Jó: ‘Visto que o beemote se acha tão poderosa e formidavelmente equipado, será que um homem teria a temeridade de confrontá-lo diante dos olhos dele e tentar furar-lhe o nariz com um gancho?’ — v. 24.

BEER [Poço]. A palavra hebraica be’ér usualmente se refere a um poço, em contraste com uma fonte natural (hebr.: ‘á·yin). Costuma ocorrer em nomes compostos de lugares. — Veja BEER-ELIM; BERSEBA.

1. Depois de atravessarem o Árnon, ao se aproximarem da Terra da Promessa, os israelitas chegaram a Beer. (Núm 21:13-16) Ali foi cavado um poço, aparentemente pelos cabeças principescos das tribos, que usaram seus próprios bastões, e surgiu água. Este evento foi o motivo do cântico poético apresentado nos versículos 17, 18.

Por causa do papel desempenhado pelos príncipes em cavar o poço, alguns sugerem que se trata do mesmo lugar que Beer-Elim (que significa “Poço das Árvores Grandes”). (Is 15:8) Sua localização é incerta, mas considera-se provável que tenha sido no vale de torrente chamado de uádi Thamad, ao N do Árnon e a uns 56 km ao L do Mar Morto. Ali frequentemente se encontra água com bastante facilidade por se cavar o solo.

2. Um lugar para o qual fugiu Jotão, filho de Gideão (Jerubaal), depois de expor a traição de Abimeleque. (Jz 9:3-5, 21) Al-Bira, a uns 12 km ao N de Bete-Sã e ao SE do monte Tabor, é sugerido por alguns como sua provável localização; outros o relacionam com Beerote. (Veja BEEROTE.) Em vista da ausência de qualquer indicação da direção da fuga de Jotão desde o monte Gerizim, porém, a identificação é incerta.

BEERA [Poço]. Chefe de família e descendente de Aser. — 1Cr 7:30, 37, 40.

BEERÁ [Poço]. Maioral rubenita levado ao exílio pelo rei assírio Tiglate-Pileser III, aparentemente durante o reinado de Peca (c. 778-759 AEC). — 1Cr 5:6.

BEER-ELIM [Poço das Árvores Grandes]. Um lugar mencionado na pronúncia de Isaías contra Moabe. (Is 15:8) A predita desolação havia de causar um “uivo” até Eglaim e Beer-Elim. A localização é incerta; muitos peritos o relacionam com Beer, mencionado em Números 21:16. — Veja BEER N.º 1.

BEERI [De (Pertencente a) Beer ou Beerote].

1. Pai hitita de Judite, esposa de Esaú. — Gên 26:34.

2. Pai do profeta Oseias. — Os 1:1.

BEER-LAAI-ROI [Poço do Vivente Que Me Vê]. Agar, serva egípcia de Sarai, quando fugiu da ira da sua senhora, seguiu o "caminho de Sur", que passa através do Negebe para baixo até o Egito. No entanto, chegando a certa fonte (hebr.: 'á-yin), foi reanimada por um anjo, mandada de volta à sua senhora, e informada sobre o nascimento e o futuro de Ismael (cujo nome significa "Deus Ouve (Escuta)"). Portanto, o poço ali foi chamado de "Beer-Laai-Roi", dizendo Agar a respeito de Jeová: "Tu és um Deus de vista." — Gên 16:7-14.

Mais tarde, Isaque estava chegando "do caminho que vai para Beer-Laai-Roi", no Negebe, quando avistou a caravana de camelos que trazia sua futura esposa, Rebeca. (Gên 24:62, 63) Após a morte de Abraão, Isaque morou "perto de Beer-Laai-Roi". — Gên 25:11.

Declara-se que Beer-Laai-Roi se encontrava "entre Cades e Berede". (Gên 16:14) Uma tradição beduína situa-o em 'Ain Muweilih, a uns 19 km ao NO de 'Ain Qedeis (provável lugar de Cades-Barneia). Mas a ausência de qualquer identificação clara de Berede deixa incerta a identificação.

BEEROTE [Poços]. Uma de quatro cidades dos heveus que astutamente conseguiram um acordo com Josué, assunto em que evidentemente os homens da cidade de Gibeão tomaram a dianteira. (Jos 9:3-17) A cidade foi depois incluída na herança da tribo de Benjamim. (Jos 18:21, 25) Na descrição do assassinato de Is-Bosete, filho de Saul, por homens de Beerote, faz-se a declaração de que "Beerote também costumava ser contada como parte de Benjamim". Isto talvez indique que a cidade jazia perto da fronteira duma tribo vizinha, daí a necessidade de especificar o território tribal em que estava situada. (2Sa 4:2-6) Faz-se menção da fuga dos seus habitantes para Gitaim, mas não se explica o motivo; talvez fosse por causa de incursões dos filisteus após a sua vitória sobre as forças de Saul no monte Gilboa, ou talvez ocorresse após o assassinato de Is-Bosete, uma fuga para evitar atos de vingança em represália pelo assassinato. Todavia, depois do exílio em Babilônia, homens de Beerote estão alistados entre os que retornaram à terra de Judá. — Esd 2:1, 25; Ne 7:29.

Embora alguns sugiram Khirbet el Burj ou Nabi Samwil, ao S, outros sugerem el Bira, cidade vizinha da moderna Ramallah, situada a uns 14 km ao N de Jerusalém e a uns 8 km ao NNE de Gibeão, portanto, perto da fronteira de Efraim. Uma fonte existente ali provê um bom suprimento de água. Vestígios dum antigo caravançará indica que era um ponto de parada para caravanas.

BEEROTE BENE-JAACÃ [Poços dos Filhos de Jaacã]. Um lugar em que os israelitas acamparam talvez mais de uma vez durante as suas peregrinações no ermo, a última vez pouco antes da morte de Arão, no monte Hor. (De 10:6) É provisoriamente identificado com el-Birein, a uns 62 km ao SO de Berseba e perto da moderna 'Ezuz. Existem ali poços, e a provável localização de Cades-Barneia é apenas a poucos quilômetros ao sul. Nelson Glueck comenta: "Há neste distrito um notavelmente grande número de sítios de antiguidades." (Rivers in the Desert [Rios no Deserto], 1960, p. 97) Beerote Bene-Jaacã pelo visto é mencionado simplesmente como Bene-Jaacã em Números 33:31. — Veja BENE-JAACÃ.

BEEROTITA [De (Pertencente a) Beerote]. Habitante ou natural de Beerote. Por ocasião da entrada dos israelitas em Canaã, seus habitantes eram heveus. Depois, o território foi designado a Benjamim, e os habitantes heveus tornaram-se "ajuntadores de lenha e tiradores de água". (Jos 9:17, 27; 18:21, 25; veja BEEROTE.) Os assassinos de Is-Bosete, a saber, Baaná e Recabe, eram "filhos de Rimom, o beerotita, dos filhos de Benjamim". (2 Sa 4:2, 5, 9) Naarai, um dos poderosos de Davi, é chamado de "beerotita" em 2 Samuel 23:37, e de "o berotita" em 1 Crônicas 11:39.

BEESTERÁ [possivelmente: Casa de Astorete]. Cidade ao L do Jordão, dada aos gersonitas, da tribo de Levi. (Jos 21:27) A passagem paralela em 1 Crônicas 6:71 indica ela ser a mesma que Astarote.

BEIJO. Nos tempos bíblicos, o ato de beijar, ou de alguém tocar com seus lábios os lábios de outrem (Pr 24:26), a face de outra pessoa, ou, em caso excepcional, até mesmo seus pés (Lu 7:37, 38, 44, 45), servia como sinal de afeto ou de respeito. Beijar era comum, não só entre homens e mulheres aparentados (Gên 29:11; 31:28), mas também entre parentes masculinos. (Gên 27:26, 27; 45:15; Êx 18:7; 2Sa 14:33) Era, semelhantemente, um gesto de afeição entre amigos achegados. — 1Sa 20:41, 42; 2Sa 19:39.

O beijo talvez acompanhasse uma bênção. (Gên 31:55) O idoso Israel, ou Jacó, beijou e abraçou os filhos de José, Efraim e Manassés, antes de abençoar o pai deles e a eles. (Gên 48:8-20) Mais tarde, quando o patriarca terminou de dar ordens aos seus 12 filhos, ele expirou, e "José lançou-se então sobre a face de seu pai e rompeu em pranto sobre ele, e beijou-o". (Gên 49:33-50:1) Samuel beijou Saul quando o ungiu para ser o primeiro rei de Israel. — 1Sa 10:1.

Uma saudação afetuosa incluía beijos, talvez acompanhados de choro e abraços. (Gên 33:4) O pai do filho pródigo que voltou, na ilustração de Jesus Cristo, lançou-se ao pescoço do filho e o "beijou ternamente". (Lu 15:20) Beijar também acompanhava uma despedida afetuosa. (Gên 31:55; Ru 1:9, 14) Quando o apóstolo Paulo estava prestes a partir de Mileto, os anciãos da congregação de Éfeso ficaram tão comovidos, que choraram e "lançaram-se ao pescoço de Paulo e o beijaram ternamente". — At 20:17, 37.

A Bíblia faz breve referência a beijos ligados ao amor entre os sexos. (Cân 1:2; 8:1) Ao dar conselhos para a pessoa se guardar dos artifícios duma mulher iníqua, o livro de Provérbios avisa sobre o beijo sedutor duma prostituta. — Pr 7:13.

Os beijos podiam ser hipócritas. Absalão, que astutamente buscava o poder, beijava os homens que se aproximavam para curvar-se diante dele. (2Sa 15:5, 6) O beijo do traiçoeiro Joabe significou a morte do insuspeitoso Amasa. (2Sa 20:9, 10) Também, foi com um beijo enganoso que Judas Iscariotes traiu Jesus Cristo. — Mt 26:48, 49; Mr 14:44, 45.

Adoração Falsa. Beijar, como ato de adoração para com deuses falsos, foi proibido por Jeová, que menciona 7.000 homens que não curvaram o joelho diante de Baal, nem o beijaram. (1Rs 19:18) Efraim foi repreendido por fazer ídolos e dizer: "Que os sacrificadores que são homens beijem meros bezerros." (Os 13:1-3) Os gregos e os romanos tinham por prática jogar um beijo com a mão para seus ídolos, quando estes estavam inacessíveis, e, deste modo, também, saudavam o sol nascente. Jó 31:27 talvez aluda a uma prática idólatra similar.

O "Beijo Santo". Entre os primitivos cristãos havia o "beijo santo" (Ro 16:16; 1Co 16:20; 2Co 13:12; 1Te 5:26), ou "beijo de amor" (1Pe 5:14), possivelmente dado em indivíduos do mesmo sexo. Esta primitiva forma cristã de saudação talvez corresponda à antiga prática hebraica de as pessoas se saudarem com um beijo. Embora as Escrituras não forneçam pormenores, o "beijo santo" ou "beijo de amor" evidentemente refletia o amor e a união saudáveis que prevaleciam na congregação cristã. — Jo 13:34, 35.

Uso Figurativo. Beijar, simbolizando uma demonstração de respeito e de devoção, é mencionado no conselho inspirado: "Servi a Jeová com temor", e "beijai ao filho, para que Ele não se ire e não pereçais no caminho". (Sal 2:11, 12) As pessoas que acatam de forma favorável e se submetem ao rei designado por Deus e ao seu Reino obterão grandes bênçãos, quando se puder dizer: "Justiça e paz — elas se beijaram", porque a conexão entre as duas será tão evidente a todos como é a associação achegada de amigos afeiçoados. — Sal 85:10.

BEL [do acadiano, significando "Dono; Amo"]. Uma deidade babilônica, cuja queda vergonhosa foi predita para coincidir com a destruição de Babilônia. — Is 46:1; Je 50:2; 51:44.

O título Bel foi inicialmente aplicado ao deus Enlil. Bel fazia parte da original tríade sumeriana de deidades, junto com Anu e Enqui (Ea). Quando Marduque (Merodaque) tornou-se o deus principal de Babilônia, ele também recebeu o nome de Bel. — Veja DEUSES E DEUSAS (Deidades Babilônicas).

Quando se considera a alta estima em que Bel era tido, torna-se evidente por que os profetas de Jeová, sob inspiração, fizeram referência a ele como uma das deidades a serem humilhadas na queda de Babilônia. Quase 200 anos antes de Babilônia cair diante dos medos e dos persas, Isaías predisse que Bel teria de dobrar-se e que Nebo teria de corcovar-se em vergonhosa derrota. Suas imagens idólatras destinavam-se a ser levadas embora por animais selvagens; incapazes de ajudar a si mesmas, seriam levadas embora como bagagem em animais de carga. Bel e Nebo não conseguiriam escapar. Sua "própria alma", isto é, eles mesmos, iriam para o cativeiro. (Is 46:1, 2; veja também Je 50:2.) Jeová obrigaria Bel a expelir o que havia engolido por meio de seus adoradores, os quais atribuíam suas vitórias a ele. Bel teria de desistir especialmente do povo exilado de Jeová e dos utensílios sagrados do Seu templo. Os povos das nações, a quem Babilônia havia conquistado, não mais afluiriam para a adoração de Bel, nem se renderiam a seus adoradores, como se fosse ao principal deus do mundo. — Je 51:44; veja MERODAQUE.

BELA.

1. Filho primogênito de Benjamim, e um dos da casa de Jacó que "vieram a Jacó ao Egito". Ele tornou-se chefe de família dos belaítas. — Gên 46:8, 21, 26; Núm 26:38; 1Cr 7:6; 8:1-5.

2. O filho de Beor e primeiro rei mencionado de Edom. Muito antes de Israel ter um rei, Bela reinava na sua capital Dinabá. — Gên 36:31, 32; 1Cr 1:43.

3. Filho de Azaz, da tribo de Rubem. — 1Cr 5:3, 8.

4. Uma variante, e evidentemente um nome anterior da cidade de Zoar; mencionada junto com outras cidades da baixada, em Gênesis 14:2, 8. — Veja ZOAR.

BELAÍTAS [De (Pertencente a) Bela]. Família descendente de Bela, primogênito de Benjamim. — Núm 26:38.

BELÉM [Casa de Pão].

1. Cidade da região montanhosa da Judeia, sobranceira à principal estrada que ia de Jerusalém para Berseba. Hoje é chamada de Beit Lahm (Bet Lehem), situada a uns 9 km ao SSO do monte do Templo. Sua altitude de 780 m acima do nível do mar é quase a mesma que a da própria Jerusalém. A zona rural, embora rochosa, produz azeitonas, uvas e diversos cereais. — Ru 1:22.

O nome anterior de Belém evidentemente era Efrate (ou Efrata). Jacó sepultou Raquel "no caminho de Efrate, isto é, Belém". (Gên 35:19; 48:7) Entre os primeiros descendentes de Judá, filho de Jacó, acham-se mencionados "Salma, pai de Belém" (1Cr 2:51, 54) e "Hur, primogênito de Efrata, pai de Belém". (1Cr 4:4) Esta expressão talvez aponte esses homens como antepassados dos israelitas que mais tarde ocuparam Belém. (Veja EFRATA N.º 2.) Quando os israelitas entraram em Canaã, Belém ficou no território de Judá, embora não seja especificamente mencionada em qualquer lista de cidades da Judeia, nem exista algo que indique seu tamanho ou sua importância naquela época. Visto que havia outra Belém, no território de Zebulão (Jos 19:10, 15), a cidade em Judá era usualmente diferençada pela referência a Efrate, ou por se chamá-la de "Belém de Judá". — Jz 17:7-9; 19:1, 2, 18.

Assim, o juiz Ibsã talvez procedesse de Belém de Judá, mas a ausência de qualquer referência a Judá, ou Efrate, faz com que muitos o considerem como procedente de Belém em Zebulão. (Jz 12:8-10) Elimeleque, sua esposa Noemi, e seus filhos, provinham de Belém, e para lá Noemi voltou junto com Rute, a moabita. (Ru 1:1, 2, 19, 22) Boaz também era de Belém, e os eventos remanescentes do livro de Rute, envolvendo ancestrais de Jesus (Mt 1:5, 6) centralizam-se nesta cidade e em seus campos. — Ru 2:4; 4:11.

Davi, filho de "Jessé, o belemita", nasceu em Belém de Judá, cuidava das ovelhas de seu pai naquela região, e foi mais tarde ungido ali por Samuel para ser o futuro rei de Israel. (1Sa 16:1, 4, 13, 18; 17:12, 15, 58; 20:6) Posteriormente, como fugitivo, Davi ansiava beber água duma cisterna de Belém, então lugar dum posto avançado filisteu. (2Sa 23:14, 15; 1Cr 11:16, 17) Pode-se notar que três poços ainda são encontrados do lado N da cidade. Elanã, um dos destacados guerreiros de Davi, era filho dum homem de Belém (2Sa 23:24), assim como eram os sobrinhos de Davi, Joabe, Abisai e Asael. Asael, de pés ligeiros, foi sepultado ali, depois de ser morto pelo poderoso Abner. — 2Sa 2:18-23, 32.

Apesar de estar situada num lugar central, numa das estradas principais, e em boa posição militar (visto situar-se em elevada altitude e ter sido construída num lugar que dominava uma serra de calcários), e embora fosse a cidade natal de Davi, Belém não foi escolhida para ser a capital de Davi. É só no reinado de Roboão, filho de Salomão, que Belém é de novo mencionada diretamente, como incluída entre as cidades fortificadas por aquele rei. (2Cr 11:5, 6) Perto de Belém, o restante do povo deixado em Judá, depois da queda de Jerusalém diante de Babilônia, fez uma parada, antes de descer ao Egito. (Je 41:17) Homens de Belém achavam-se entre os que voltaram de Babilônia após o exílio. — Esd 2:21; Ne 7:26.

Conforme observado anteriormente, Belém não estava alistada entre as cidades de Judá nos relatos das divisões territoriais tribais. Embora os livros da Bíblia a mencionem em relação a certas pessoas, não parece ter sido, de outros modos, uma cidade destacada, nem tinha grande população — era uma "aldeia" quando Jesus estava na terra. (Jo 7:42) Por isso, o profeta Miqueias, em sua profecia messiânica, em Miqueias 5:2, podia referir-se a Belém Efrata como "pequena demais para chegar a estar entre os milhares de Judá". Todavia, sua profecia mostrava que a pequena Belém gozaria da honra singular de ser a cidade de onde viria o Messias. O povo judeu entendia esta profecia como significando que o Messias, ou Cristo, nasceria naquela cidade e procederia dela (Jo 7:40-42), crença também expressa pelos principais sacerdotes e escribas. — Mt 2:3-6.

Assim, embora Maria ficasse grávida em Nazaré da Galileia, ela deu à luz Jesus em Belém da Judeia, a fim de cumprir a profecia divina. (Lu 1:26-38; 2:4-7) Isto significou uma viagem de 110 a até 150 km, dependendo da rota escolhida.

Por ocasião do nascimento de Jesus, havia pastores vivendo ao ar livre nos campos e vigiando à noite os rebanhos. (Lu 2:8) Embora as ovelhas pudessem ser levadas aos pastos durante o dia em qualquer estação do ano, o fato de que os pastores viviam nos campos e passavam a noite ali com os seus rebanhos fornece uma indicação definitiva de tempo quanto ao período do nascimento de Jesus. A estação chuvosa, na Palestina, começa por volta de meados de outubro, durando vários meses. Em dezembro, Belém, igual a Jerusalém, sofre frequentes geadas à noite. Portanto, o fato de os pastores de Belém estarem nos campos à noite indica um tempo antes do começo da estação das chuvas. É também muito improvável que César Augusto provocasse desnecessariamente os judeus por ordenar que se fizesse um registro no mês invernal e chuvoso de dezembro, quando as viagens eram especialmente difíceis. — Lu 2:1-6; compare isso com Mt 24:20.

O lugar original do estábulo em Belém, no qual Jesus nasceu, é desconhecido. Algum tempo depois do nascimento de Jesus, quando seus pais não mais moravam num estábulo, mas sim numa casa, Belém foi visitada por astrólogos orientais, que estavam em busca da "criancinha". (Mt 2:1-12) Embora a ação divina impedisse que a visita deles causasse a morte do menino Jesus, a cidade de Belém e seu território circunvizinho sofreu a perda de todos os seus meninos de até dois anos de idade, assassinados às ordens do Rei Herodes. (Mt 2:12, 16) Em Mateus 2:17, 18, o escritor inspirado citou a profecia de Jeremias 31:15 como se aplicando ao que ocorreu então. — Veja RAQUEL.

2. Uma cidade no território de Zebulão. (Jos 19:10, 15) É provável que o juiz Ibsã procedesse desta Belém, e que foi nesta cidade que ele foi sepultado, visto que no relato não se faz menção de Efrate ou de Judá. (Jz 12:8-10) Belém de Zebulão tem sido identificada com Beit Lahm (Bet Lehem Ha-Gelilit), a cerca de 11 km ao ONO de Nazaré.

BELEMITA [De (Pertencente a) Belém]. Habitante de Belém. Em três das quatro ocorrências na Bíblia, "belemita" é aplicado a Jessé, pai de Davi. — 1Sa 16:1, 18; 17:58; 2Sa 21:19.

BELIAL [do hebr., significando "Imprestável"; palavra composta de belí, "não, sem", e ya·ʽál, "prestar; ser benéfico"]. A qualidade ou estado de ser inútil, degradado, imprestável. O termo hebraico beli·yáʽal é aplicado a ideias, a palavras e a conselhos (De 15:9; Sal 101:3; Na 1:11), a circunstâncias calamitosas (Sal 41:8), e, mais frequentemente, a homens imprestáveis da espécie mais baixa — por exemplo, aos homens que induzem à adoração de outros deuses (De 13:13); aos de Benjamim que cometeram o crime sexual em Gibeá (Jz 19:22-27; 20:13); aos filhos iníquos de Eli (1Sa 2:12); ao insolente Nabal (1Sa 25:17, 25); aos opositores do ungido de Deus, Davi (2Sa 20:1; 22:5; 23:6; Sal 18:4); aos imprestáveis associados de Jeroboão (2Cr 13:7); aos conspiradores de Jezabel contra Nabote (1Rs 21:10, 13); e aos homens em geral que provocam contendas (Pr 6:12-14; 16:27; 19:28). Indicando que o poder inimigo não mais interferiria na realização da verdadeira adoração por parte do seu povo na terra deste, Jeová declarou por meio do seu profeta: "Não mais passará por ti nenhum imprestável. Certamente será decepado na sua inteireza." — Na 1:15; veja também 1Sa 1:16; 10:27; 30:22; Jó 34:18.

Belém, lugar do nascimento de Davi e de Jesus, hoje.

Na época em que se reiniciou a escrita da Bíblia, no primeiro século, "Belial" era usado como nome para Satanás. Assim, quando Paulo escreveu em 2 Coríntios 6:15, na sua série de contrastes paralelos: "Que harmonia há entre Cristo e Belial?", a conclusão usualmente tirada é que "Belial" é Satanás. A Pesito siríaca aqui reza "Satanás".

BELO, PORTÃO. Veja PORTA, PORTÃO.

BELSAZAR [do acadiano, significando "Protege Sua Vida"; ou, possivelmente: "[Que] Bel Proteja o Rei"]. O primogênito de Nabonido, e corregente de Nabonido nos últimos anos do Império Babilônico. Ele é mencionado no relato bíblico apenas pelo profeta Daniel, e, durante muito tempo, sua posição como "rei de Babilônia" foi negada pelos críticos da Bíblia. (Da 5:1, 9; 7:1; 8:1) No entanto, a evidência arqueológica, na forma de textos antigos, desde então demonstrou a historicidade do relato da Bíblia.

Em Daniel 5:2, 11, 18, 22, Nabucodonosor é mencionado como "pai" de Belsazar, e Belsazar como "filho" de Nabucodonosor. O livro Nabonidus and Belshazzar (Nabonido e Belsazar; de R. P. Dougherty, 1929) argumenta que é provável que a mãe de Belsazar tenha sido Nitócris, e que ela era filha de Nabucodonosor (II). Neste caso, Nabucodonosor era avô de Belsazar. (Veja Gên 28:10, 13, para ver um uso comparável de "pai".) No entanto, nem todos os peritos acham totalmente satisfatória a evidência para tal parentesco. Pode ser que Nabucodonosor fosse simplesmente o "pai" de Belsazar quanto ao trono, tendo sido Nabucodonosor predecessor régio. De maneira similar, os assírios usavam a expressão "filho de Onri" para indicar um sucessor de Onri. — Veja ONRI N.º 3.

Confirma a história secular o papel de Belsazar como governante de Babilônia?

Uma tabuinha cuneiforme, datando do ano de ascensão ao trono de Neriglissar, que sucedeu Avil-Marduque (Evil-Merodaque) no trono babilônico, refere-se a um certo "Belsazar, o principal oficial do rei", em conexão com uma transação financeira. É possível, embora não provado, que isso se refira ao Belsazar da Bíblia. Em 1924 publicou-se o deciframento dum antigo texto cuneiforme descrito como "Relato Versificado de Nabonido", e por meio disso trouxe-se à luz valiosas informações que claramente corroboram a posição régia de Belsazar em Babilônia e que explicam a maneira de ele se tornar corregente de Nabonido. A respeito da conquista de Tema por Nabonido, no terceiro ano do seu governo, uma parte do texto diz: "Ele confiou o 'Acampamento' ao seu (filho) mais velho, o primogênito [Belsazar], as tropas em toda a parte no país ele mandou pôr sob (o comando) dele. Largou (tudo), confiou-lhe o reinado, e ele mesmo [Nabonido], iniciou uma longa jornada, as forças (militares) de Acade marchando com ele; virou-se para Tema (bem) no oeste." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo] editados por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 313) Portanto, Belsazar definitivamente exercia autoridade real desde o terceiro ano de Nabonido em diante, e este evento corresponde provavelmente à referência de Daniel ao "primeiro ano de Belsazar, rei de Babilônia". — Da 7:1.

Em outro documento, a Crônica de Nabonido, encontra-se uma declaração com respeito ao sétimo, nono, décimo e décimo primeiro ano de reinado de Nabonido. Reza: "O rei (estava) em Tema (enquanto) o príncipe, os oficiais e seu exército (estavam) em Acade [Babilônia]." (Assyrian and Babylonian Chronicles [Crônicas Assírias e Babilônicas], de A. K. Grayson, 1975, p. 108) Pelo visto, Nabonido passou grande parte de seu reinado longe de Babilônia, e, embora não abdicasse à sua posição de governante supremo, confiou a autoridade administrativa a seu filho, Belsazar, para atuar durante a sua ausência. Isto se torna evidente de vários textos recuperados dos antigos arquivos, que provam que Belsazar exercia prerrogativas reais, que ele expedia ordens e comandos. Os assuntos tratados por Belsazar em certos documentos e ordens eram aqueles que normalmente seriam cuidados por Nabonido, como governante supremo, se estivesse presente. No entanto, Belsazar continuava sendo apenas o segundo governante do império e, assim, só podia oferecer tornar Daniel "o terceiro no reino". — Da 5:16.

É verdade que inscrições oficiais dão a Belsazar o título de "príncipe herdeiro", ao passo que no livro de Daniel seu título é "rei". (Da 5:1-30) Uma descoberta arqueológica na Síria setentrional sugere o possível motivo disso. Em 1979 foi desenterrada uma estátua, em tamanho natural, dum governante da antiga Gozã. Na aba da sua veste havia duas inscrições, uma em assírio e a outra em aramaico — língua do relato sobre Belsazar, em Daniel. As duas inscrições quase idênticas tinham uma notável diferença. O texto na língua imperial assíria diz que a estátua era do "governa-dor de Gozã". O texto em aramaico, a língua do povo local, descreve-o como "rei".

Neste respeito, o arqueólogo e perito em línguas Alan Millard escreve: "À luz das fontes babilônicas e dos novos textos nesta estátua, talvez se achasse bastante apropriado que registros não oficiais, tais como o Livro de Daniel, chamassem Belsazar de 'rei'. Ele atuava como rei, como agente de seu pai, embora talvez não fosse legalmente rei. A distinção exata teria sido irrelevante e confusa na história conforme relatada em Daniel." — Biblical Archaeology Review (Análise da Arqueologia Bíblica), maio/junho de 1985, p. 77.

Esperava-se que aqueles que exerciam o poder soberano em Babilônia fossem exemplares na reverência dos deuses. Existem seis textos cuneiformes a respeito dos eventos do 5.º ao 13.º ano do reinado de Nabonido, que demonstram a devoção de Belsazar às deidades babilônicas. Mostra-se em documentos que Belsazar, como rei interino na ausência de Nabonido, oferecia ouro, prata e animais aos templos em Ereque e em Sipar, destarte comportando-se de maneira coerente com a sua posição régia.

O Fim do Governo de Belsazar. Na noite de 5 de outubro de 539 AEC (calendário gregoriano, ou 11 de outubro, calendário juliano), Belsazar deu um grande banquete a mil de seus grandes, conforme relata o capítulo 5 de Daniel. (Da 5:1) Babilônia estava então ameaçada pelas forças sitiantes de Ciro, o Persa, e de seu aliado Dario, o Medo. Segundo o historiador judeu Josefo (o qual, por sua vez, cita o Beroso babilônio), Nabonido se havia recolhido a Borsipa depois de ter sido derrotado pelas forças medo-persas em batalha. (Against Apion [Contra Apião], I, 150-152 [20]) Neste caso, Belsazar era o rei interino na própria Babilônia. A realização dum banquete, enquanto a cidade estava sendo sitiada, não é tão incomum, quando se lembra que os babilônios confiantemente consideravam as muralhas da cidade como inexpugnáveis. Os historiadores Heródoto e Xenofonte também declaram que a cidade tinha abundantes suprimentos das coisas necessárias, e por isso não estava preocupada com alguma escassez. Heródoto descreve a cidade como em animação festiva naquela noite, havendo danças e divertimentos.

Durante o banquete, e sob a influência do vinho, Belsazar mandou trazer os vasos tirados do templo de Jerusalém, a fim de que ele, seus convidados, e suas esposas e concubinas pudessem beber deles, enquanto louvavam os deuses babilônios. Obviamente, esta demanda não se devia a alguma falta de vasos para beber, mas, antes, constituía um deliberado ato de desprezo deste rei pagão em vitupério do Deus dos israelitas, Jeová. (Da 5:2-4) Com isso ele desafiou a Jeová, o qual havia inspirado as profecias que prediziam a queda de Babilônia. Ao passo que Belsazar parecia despreocupado com o sítio pelas forças inimigas, ele ficou agora muito abalado quando de repente apareceu uma mão e começou a escrever na parede do palácio. Com os joelhos batendo, ele convocou todos os seus sábios para dar-lhe a interpretação da mensagem escrita, mas em vão. O registro mostra que a rainha lhe deu então um conselho sensato, recomendando Daniel como alguém capaz de fornecer a interpretação. (Da 5:5-12) Certos peritos acham que a "rainha" não era a esposa de Belsazar, mas a sua mãe, que se crê ser a filha de Nabucodonosor, Nitócris. Daniel, por inspiração, revelou o significado da mensagem milagrosa, predizendo a queda de Babilônia diante dos medos e dos persas. Embora o idoso profeta condenasse o ato blasfemo de Belsazar, de usar vasos da adoração de Jeová para louvar deuses cegos, surdos e ignorantes, Belsazar manteve a sua oferta e passou a investir Daniel da posição de terceiro governante no reino condenado. — Da 5:17-29.

Belsazar não sobreviveu àquela noite, sendo morto na queda da cidade durante a noite de 5 de outubro de 539 AEC, quando, segundo a Crônica de Nabonido, "o exército de Ciro (II) entrou em Babilônia sem batalha". (Assyrian and Babylonian Chronicles, pp. 109, 110; veja também Da 5:30.) Com a morte de Belsazar e a aparente rendição de Nabonido a Ciro, encerrou-se o Império Neobabilônico. — Veja CIRO; NABONIDO.

BELTESSAZAR [Do acadiano, significando "Protege a Vida do Rei"]. Nome babilônico dado a Daniel depois de ter sido levado ao exílio em 617 AEC — que não deve ser confundido com Belsazar. (Da 1:7) O nome evidentemente é uma forma abreviada duma invocação a Bel, e, portanto, foi escolhido, segundo disse Nabucodonosor, "segundo o nome de meu deus". (Da 4:8; 5:12) Evidentemente, o objetivo era efetivar a naturalização de Daniel e afastá-lo da adoração de Jeová. Entretanto, os babilônios continuaram a falar dele também pelo seu nome Daniel. — Da 4:18, 19; 5:12, 13; veja DANIEL N.º 2.

Cilindro de templo, babilônico, que menciona o Rei Nabonido e seu filho Belsazar.

BELZEBU [possivelmente uma alteração de Baal-Zebube, que significa "Dono das Moscas", o Baal adorado pelos filisteus em Ecrom. Alternadamente, Beelzeboul e Beezeboul, possivelmente significando "Dono da Morada (Habitação) Alta"; ou, caso se faça trocadilho com a palavra hebr. não bíblica zé·vel (esterco), "Dono do Esterco"]. "Belzebu" é uma designação aplicada a Satanás, o príncipe, ou governante, dos demônios. Os líderes religiosos acusaram blasfemamente a Jesus Cristo de expulsar demônios por meio de Belzebu. — Mt 10:25; 12:24-29; Mr 3:22-27; Lu 11:15-19; veja BAAL-ZEBUBE.

BEN [Filho]. O prefixo hebraico ben ocorre frequentemente em nomes tais como Benjamim (que significa "Filho da Mão Direita") ou Ben-Ami (que significa "Filho do Meu Povo [isto é, parentes]"). Equivale a bar em nomes aramaicos tais como Barnabé (que significa "Filho de Consolo"). (At 4:36) É também frequentemente usado para definir outras relações, além de parentesco, tais como raça, "filhos de [benéh] Israel", "filhos dos cusitas" (2Cr 35:17; Am 9:7); lugar, "filhos do distrito jurisdicional" (Esd 2:1); ou condição, "filhos da mocidade", "filhos da injustiça" (Sal 127:4; Os 10:9).

BENAIA [Jeová Edificou].

1. Filho de um sacerdote principal levita chamado Jeoiada, e pai de pelo menos dois filhos, Amizabade e Jeoiada. (1Cr 27:5, 6, 34) Benaia era poderoso guerreiro de grande valentia e coragem, e 'se distinguia ainda mais do que os trinta' poderosos das forças de Davi, embora 'não chegasse à categoria dos três'. — 2Sa 23:20-23.

Benaia demonstrou sua bravura de modo triplo: por abater dois dos poderosos heróis de Moabe, por descer intrepidamente numa cisterna de água e matar um leão, e por superar excepcionais desvantagens para matar um gigante egípcio com a lança da própria vítima. (1Cr 11:22-24) Davi encarregou esse homem corajoso da sua guarda pessoal. (1Cr 11:24, 25) Os queretitas e os peletitas, encabeçados por Benaia, permaneceram leais ao rei durante as rebeliões de Absalão e Adonias. (2Sa 8:18; 15:18; 20:23; 1Rs 1:8, 10, 26; 1Cr 18:17) Adicionalmente, Benaia foi encarregado da terceira divisão de revezamento do exército, uma força de 24.000 homens. (1Cr 27:5, 6) Na velhice de Davi, Benaia e os queretitas e os peletitas apoiaram a coroação de Salomão. (1Rs 1:32-40) Mais tarde, sob o reinado de Salomão, Benaia foi designado para efetuar a execução de Adonias, Joabe e Simei, e também foi colocado por Salomão no comando do exército. — 1Rs 2:24, 25, 28-46; 4:4.

2. Um dos poderosos de Davi, comandante da 11.ª divisão de revezamento do exército; piratonita da tribo de Efraim. — 2Sa 23:30; 1Cr 11:31; 27:14.

3. Músico levita, que tocou seu instrumento de cordas acompanhando a Arca do Pacto, quando ela foi levada a Jerusalém e colocada na tenda preparada para ela por Davi. — 1Cr 15:18, 20; 16:1, 5.

4. Sacerdote que tocou uma trombeta quando a Arca foi levada a Jerusalém durante o reinado de Davi. — 1Cr 15:24; 16:6.

5. Levita descendente de Asafe. — 2Cr 20:14.

6. Simeonita, possivelmente contemporâneo do Rei Ezequias. — 1Cr 4:24, 36-43.

7. Levita designado por Ezequias para ajudar a cuidar das abundantes contribuições para a casa de Jeová. — 2Cr 31:12, 13.

8. Pai de Pelatias, um dos príncipes iníquos observados na visão de Ezequiel. — Ez 11:1, 13.

9, 10, 11, 12. Quatro homens, os quais, em vista da admoestação de Esdras, despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos. Estes quatro eram respectivamente descendentes de Parós, Paate-Moabe, Bani e Nebo. — Esd 10:25, 30, 34, 35, 43, 44.

BEN-AMI [Filho do Meu Povo [isto é, parentes]]. Filho de Ló por sua filha mais nova, e, portanto, meio-irmão de Moabe. Achados modernos atestam o uso comum do nome durante esse período. Ben-Ami, também chamado Amom, era antepassado dos amonitas. — Gên 19:31-38; veja AMOM.

BÊNÇÃO. Tornar ou declarar santo; uma solicitação a Deus para que conceda o favor divino; conceder bondade; favor; exaltar como santo; glorificar; falar bem de; proteger ou guardar do mal; trazer felicidade.

As várias formas das palavras hebraicas geralmente traduzidas "abençoar" ("bendizer") ou "bênção" ocorrem cerca de 400 vezes nas Escrituras. O verbo ba·rákh é usualmente traduzido "abençoar" ou "bendizer". Em umas poucas passagens, a palavra é traduzida por "congratular" (1Sa 25:14; 1Cr 18:10); "cumprimentar" (2Rs 4:29). A forma substantivada da palavra hebraica é encontrada no nome da baixada de Beraca (que significa "Bênção"), porque foi ali que Jeosafá e seu povo bendisseram a Jeová. (2Cr 20:26) Um verbo da mesma forma é traduzido por "ajoelhar-se" ou "dobrar os joelhos". — Gên 24:11; 2Cr 6:13; Sal 95:6.

Os soferins ou escribas judeus emendaram diversas passagens para rezarem "abençoar" em vez de "amaldiçoar" (1Rs 21:10, 13; Jó 1:5, 11; 2:5, 9), considerando blasfemo mesmo apenas mencionar alguém estar amaldiçoando a Deus. — Veja o apêndice na NM, p. 1509.

O verbo grego eu·lo·gé·o significa literalmente "falar bem de". O termo eu·lo·gí·a (literalmente: bênção) é usado em Romanos 16:18 em sentido desfavorável, como "palavras elogiosas" para seduzir o coração de alguém.

As Escrituras usam "abençoar", "bendizer" e "bênção" pelo menos em quatro aspectos principais: (1) Jeová abençoa humanos; (2) humanos bendizem a Jeová; (3) humanos abençoam Cristo; (4) humanos abençoam outros humanos.

Jeová Abençoa Humanos. "A bênção de Jeová — esta é o que enriquece, e ele não lhe acrescenta dor alguma." (Pr 10:22) Jeová abençoa aqueles a quem ele aprova por protegê-los, fazê-los prosperar, orientá-los, dar-lhes bom êxito e suprir-lhes as necessidades, com um resultado proveitoso para eles.

A boa vontade de Jeová para com as suas criações terrestres foi expressa por ocasião de ele as produzir. Para as espécies animais, criadas no quinto dia, a bênção de Deus foi uma declaração de seu propósito para com elas. (Gên 1:22) A bênção de Deus sobre Adão e Eva, no fim do sexto dia, se tivessem permanecido obedientes, os teria habilitado a continuar no favor dele, porque ele proveu-lhes todas as necessidades espirituais e materiais. — Gên 1:28; 2:9; 5:2.

Depois de Jeová completar sua obra criativa terrestre nos seis dias criativos, não faltava nada para o bem-estar da sua criação. (Gên 1:31) Daí, Deus passou a repousar, ou a desistir desta obra, abençoando o sétimo dia, declarando-o sagrado, santo. A perspectiva que se apresentava à criação humana era uma felicidade com infindável bênção. — Gên 2:3; Êx 20:11.

Quando Noé e sua família saíram da arca, Jeová olhou para eles com favor, abençoando-os e fazendo-lhes uma declaração da sua vontade para com eles. Por fazerem a vontade de Jeová, prosperariam com o favor e a proteção dele. — Gên 9:1.

De vital importância para toda a humanidade é a bênção a respeito de Abraão e sua Semente (ou seu Descendente). (Gên 12:3; 18:18; 22:18) Jeová abençoou Abraão e Sara por renovar milagrosamente as faculdades reprodutivas deles, habilitando-os a ter um filho na sua velhice. (Gên 17:16; 21:2) Prosperou Abraão e usou-o como ilustração para prefigurar coisas maiores. (Gál 4:21-26) Portanto, a bênção de Deus em prover a Abraão uma semente tem significado mais elevado na promessa de que pessoas de todas as nações serão abençoadas por meio daquele a quem Isaque prefigurou, Jesus Cristo. — Gál 3:8, 14; At 3:25, 26; He 6:13-20.

A bênção que Jeová concede a uma pessoa ou a um povo depende da obediência a ele. (Êx 23:25) Os nítidos contrastes feitos nos capítulos 27 e 28 de Deuteronômio mostram claramente que a maldição de Jeová, resultando em severa punição, recai sobre os desobedientes, ao passo que sua bênção repousa sobre os obedientes, produzindo prosperidade espiritual e satisfazendo as necessidades materiais deles, o que se evidencia nos lares, na terra, nos descendentes, nos animais, nos suprimentos de alimentos, nas viagens e em todas as ações deles. "As bênçãos são para a cabeça do justo." (Pr 10:6, 7) Quando o povo de Jeová é fielmente obediente, Ele tem prazer em 'abrir as comportas dos céus e realmente despejar uma bênção até que não haja mais necessidade'. — Mal 3:10.

Humanos Bendizem a Jeová. Os humanos bendizem a Jeová primariamente por louvá-lo. Expressar gratidão, reconhecê-lo como Aquele de quem fluem todas as bênçãos, falar bem dele em toda ocasião, e realizar atos de adoração e de serviço também bendiz a Jeová. (Sal 26:12) Pregar as boas novas é um modo de se bendizer a Jeová, visto que isso louva seu nome e seus propósitos. — Mt 24:14; He 13:15.

Homens têm bendito a Jeová por libertar seu povo da opressão (Êx 18:9, 10); por prover as necessidades deles (De 8:10); pela sua dignidade, seu poderio, seu governo e sua beleza como Cabeça sobre todos (1Cr 29:10-12, 20); por induzir seu povo a apoiar a sua adoração (2Cr 31:8); em oração de confissão por ele manter seu pacto e por sua misericórdia (Ne 9:5, 31, 32); por dar sabedoria e poder (Da 2:19-23); por proteger seus servos e demonstrar sua soberania (Da 3:28; 4:34). O livro dos Salmos abençoa constantemente a Jeová, e convoca todos no céu e na Terra a louvarem Seu nome por causa das Suas muitas qualidades magníficas. Outro motivo para o homem bendizer a Jeová é a dádiva do Seu Filho, Jesus Cristo. — Sal 16:7; 103:1, 20-22; 145:2, 10; Jo 3:16; compare isso com At 2:8-11; Re 7:11, 12; 14:6, 7.

Humanos Abençoam Cristo. O próprio Jesus também deve ser abençoado por todos.

Elisabete abençoou a mãe de Jesus, Maria, e o fruto na sua madre, ainda por nascer. (Lu 1:42) A origem celestial de Jesus, sua vinda em nome de Jeová como Filho deste, seu ministério, seu sacrifício, seu sacerdócio, seu reinado e sua benignidade imerecida, tudo isso justifica ser ele aclamado como bendito. (Jo 12:13; 2Co 8:9; He 1:2; 7:24-26) Em cumprimento do Salmo 118:26, a multidão aclamou-o como o bendito de Jeová, na sua entrada triunfal em Jerusalém. (Mt 21:9) Criaturas angélicas e terrestres devem todas bendizê-lo. — Re 5:12, 13.

Humanos Abençoam Outros Humanos. Em contraste com Jeová, que sempre cumpre a bênção que Ele profere, quando um humano profere uma bênção sobre outro humano, talvez não tenha a capacidade de cumpri-la. Na Bíblia, proferir um homem uma bênção frequentemente equivale a um apelo para a bênção divina, embora não necessariamente seja expressa em forma de oração. Assim, ao passo que o homem talvez seja o objeto visado de tal bênção, a fonte é admitidamente o próprio Deus. Novamente, abençoar um homem a outros homens pode, com frequência, constituir uma expressão de gratidão, o reconhecimento apreciativo das excelentes qualidades deles ou de uma tarefa bem executada.

É com referência a poder abençoar com eficácia, de ter a autoridade da parte de Deus para abençoar, ou o poder de cumprir a bênção, que Paulo, ao argumentar sobre a superioridade do sacerdócio de Melquisedeque sobre o de Levi, expressa o seguinte princípio: "Ora, além de qualquer disputa, o que é menor é abençoado pelo maior." (He 7:7) Melquisedeque era sacerdote de Deus e rei, e podia falar de modo autorizado e profético em nome de Deus ao dar uma bênção a Abraão. — Gên 14:18-20; He 7:1-4.

Quando alguém fez alguma coisa que contribui para o louvor de Jeová, outros têm achado apropriado proferir uma bênção sobre ele. Moisés abençoou Bezalel e os outros trabalhadores quando terminaram a construção do tabernáculo. (Êx 39:43) Os sacerdotes e os levitas, como líderes espirituais de Israel, foram designados para abençoar o povo em numerosas ocasiões. (Núm 6:23-27; Le 9:22, 23; De 10:8; 21:5; 1Cr 23:13; 2Cr 30:27) O sumo sacerdote Eli abençoou os pais de Samuel pela dádiva de seu filho para o serviço do templo. (1Sa 2:20, 21) Davi abençoou o povo depois de ter trazido a Arca a Jerusalém. (2Sa 6:18; 1Cr 16:2) Salomão adotou sabiamente o mesmo proceder quando dedicou o templo a Jeová. (1Rs 8:14, 55) O idoso Simeão abençoou os pais de Jesus. (Lu 2:34) Jesus abençoou as crianças que se chegaram a ele. — Mr 10:16.

Ocasiões de Expressar uma Bênção. Em oração, a pessoa louva e agradece a Deus, bendizendo-o, e, por sua vez, fala pelos unidos na fé e os que buscam a Deus, abençoando-os. Proferir ou pedir uma bênção sobre o alimento antes de se tomar uma refeição é usualmente feito em oração. Em tal oração, dão-se agradecimentos e louvores a Jeová por suas provisões espirituais e materiais, pedindo que Jeová faça com que essa nutrição seja usada em benefício dos que a tomam, e que o alimento os fortaleça para servi-Lo. (1Sa 9:13; Mt 14:19; Lu 9:16) Ao abençoar o pão e o vinho na Refeição Noturna do Senhor, dão-se louvor e agradecimentos a Deus, junto com a solicitação de que todos os que deles participam possam ser beneficiados espiritualmente pelas coisas que esses simbolizam, e possam permanecer unidos e íntegros como corpo de Cristo. — Mt 26:26; 1Co 10:16.

Numa sociedade patriarcal, o pai costumava abençoar os filhos pouco antes da sua morte. Tratava-se dum assunto de grande importância, e era altamente prezado. Assim, Isaque abençoou Jacó, pensando que este era o seu primogênito, Esaú. Isaque declarou o favor e a prosperidade para Jacó, à frente de seu irmão Esaú, sem dúvida fazendo petição a Jeová para que cumprisse tal bênção, visto que o próprio Isaque era cego e idoso. (Gên 27:1-4, 23-29; 28:1, 6; He 11:20; 12:16, 17) Mais tarde, Isaque, de plena consciência, confirmou e ampliou tal bênção. (Gên 28:1-4) Antes de morrer, Jacó abençoou primeiro os dois filhos de José, daí, os seus próprios filhos. (Gên 48:9, 20; 49:1-28; He 11:21) Similarmente, Moisés, antes da sua morte, abençoou a inteira nação de Israel. (De 33:1) Em todos esses casos, os resultados provam que eles falavam profeticamente. Em alguns casos, ao proferir tais bênçãos, a mão do abençoador era colocada sobre a cabeça do abençoado. — Gên 48:13, 14.

Como saudação, proferir alguém uma bênção significava que desejava o bem-estar da outra pessoa. Jacó, ao ser levado perante Faraó, abençoou-o. (Gên 47:7; veja também 1Sa 13:10; 25:14; 1Rs 1:47; 2Rs 10:15.) Bênçãos talvez fossem proferidas por ocasião de despedidas. Rebeca, por exemplo, foi abençoada por sua família quando partiu de casa para casar-se com Isaque. — Gên 24:60; veja também Gên 28:1; 2Sa 19:39; 1Rs 8:66.

Dar um presente também estava ligado a bênçãos. (Gên 33:11; Jos 14:13; 15:18, 19) Compreensivelmente, o próprio presente poderia ser chamado de bênção, um "presente de bênção". Talvez se dessem presentes a um ente querido como expressão de votos de que lhe vá bem, no empenho de obter favor, ou como expressão de gratidão. — 1Sa 25:27; 30:26.

Bênçãos podiam ser concedidas em forma de elogios. Boaz abençoou Rute por sua benevolência. (Ru 3:10) Os homens que se ofereciam para realizar um serviço a favor da adoração de Jeová eram abençoados pelos observadores. (Ne 11:2) Os pais têm direito a uma bênção da parte de seus filhos. — Pr 30:11.

Uma bênção pode consistir em linguagem favorável ou edificante. Jesus admoestou seus ouvintes a 'abençoar os que os amaldiçoavam'. (Lu 6:28) "Persisti em abençoar os que vos perseguem; abençoai e não amaldiçoeis." (Ro 12:14) Isto não significa louvar os opositores, mas ter boa conduta para com tais pessoas, junto com linguagem bondosa, cortês e verídica que lhes trará benefícios, se for acatada, poderá resultar em granjear a boa vontade delas. (1Co 4:12; 1Pe 3:9) A maneira de se falar também tem de ser considerada. (Pr 27:14) Desviar alguém de atos iníquos é deveras uma bênção, resultando nos melhores interesses daquela pessoa e no louvor de Jeová. — At 3:26.

Ser uma Bênção para Outros. A pessoa pode ser uma bênção para o próximo por seguir um proceder de obediência a Deus. A associação de tais, a quem Jeová abençoa, traz bênçãos para outros. Labão foi abençoado porque Jacó cuidava dos rebanhos dele. (Gên 30:27, 30) A casa e o campo de Potifar prosperaram por causa da supervisão de José. (Gên 39:5) A presença de dez cidadãos justos poderia ter feito com que Deus poupasse Sodoma. (Gên 18:32) O servo dedicado de Deus pode trazer a consideração favorável de Deus para com um cônjuge descrente e seus filhos pequenos. (1Co 7:14) Jesus disse que, no tempo da maior tribulação do mundo, "por causa dos escolhidos, aqueles dias serão abreviados", porque, de outra forma, "nenhuma carne seria salva". (Mt 24:21, 22; compare isso com Is 65:8.) Imitar o exemplo dos abençoados por Deus traz bênçãos ainda maiores. (Gál 3:9; He 13:7; 1Co 11:1; 2Te 3:7) Fazer o bem aos irmãos de Cristo, os "escolhidos" de Deus, traz as bênçãos de Jeová para as "ovelhas", com a recompensa da vida eterna. — Mt 25:31-34, 40, 46.

BENE [Filho]. Músico levita dos dias de Davi, que acompanhou a Arca do Pacto a Jerusalém. — 1Cr 15:15, 18.

BENE-BERAQUE [Filhos de Beraque]. Uma cidade de Dã identificada com Ibn Ibraq (ou Kheiriyeh [Horvat Bene-beraq]), a 8 km a ESE de Tel Aviv-Yafo (Jope). (Jos 19:40, 45) O nome árabe Ibn Ibraq corresponde ao hebraico Bene-Beraque. Num prisma de Senaqueribe, o relato deste imperador sobre a campanha assíria contra Ezequias declara que ele 'sitiou Bete-Dagom, Jope, Banai-Barqa [Bene-Baraque], Azuru'. — Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 287.

BENE-JAACÃ [Filhos de Jaacã]. Uma parada dos israelitas na sua peregrinação pelo ermo. (Núm 33:31, 32) Jaacã parece ser o Ácã de Gênesis 36:27 e 1 Crônicas 1:42 (onde o texto massorético reza "Jaacã"). O relato no livro de Números declara que os israelitas "partiram então de Moserote e foram acampar-se em Bene-Jaacã. Depois partiram de Bene-Jaacã e foram acampar-se em Hor-Hagidgade".

Em Deuteronômio 10:6 faz-se referência a Beerote Bene-Jaacã, em conexão com "Moserá" (singular de Moserote), provavelmente indicando que Beerote Bene-Jaacã (que significa "Poços dos Filhos de Jaacã") é o mesmo lugar que Bene-Jaacã. Entretanto, o relato em Deuteronômio alista a direção da viagem de Israel em ordem inversa do relato de Números, declarando que "os filhos de Israel partiram de Beerote Bene-Jaacã para Moserá". Em vista dos muitos anos passados no ermo, é bem possível que os israelitas passassem duas vezes por esta região. Conforme diz The Pentateuch and Haftorahs (O Pentateuco e as Haftorás) sobre este texto: "Uma explicação provável é que os israelitas, depois de peregrinarem numa direção meridional para a terra de Edom, tiveram de virar-se acentuadamente para o norte." (Editado por J. Hertz, Londres, 1972) Talvez tivessem de voltar pelo mesmo caminho por um curto trecho e revisitar alguns dos lugares pelos quais haviam passado, esta vez em sentido inverso. Deve-se notar que o registro de Deuteronômio (10:6) refere-se à morte de Arão logo depois de mencionar a parada de Moserá, ao passo que o relato de Números (33:31-39) descreve os israelitas viajando para Eziom-Géber e então para o NO, para Cades, antes de tratar do assunto da morte de Arão. Isto, junto com o longo período de anos envolvidos, certamente permitiria um retorno pelo caminho, se fosse o caso.

Bene-Jaacã (Beerote Bene-Jaacã) usualmente é identificada com um lugar a poucos quilômetros ao N de Cades-Barneia. — Veja BEEROTE BENE-JAACÃ.

BENEVOLÊNCIA. Veja BONDADE.

BEN-HADADE [Filho de Hadade]. Nome de três reis da Síria mencionados no registro da Bíblia. Hadade era o deus das tempestades, adorado em toda a Síria e em outras regiões circunvizinhas.

1. O primeiro rei da Síria chamado Ben-Hadade no relato bíblico era filho de Tabrimom, e neto de Heziom. Tinha feito um pacto com o Rei Baasa, de Israel, porém o Rei Asa, de Judá, alarmado quando Baasa começou a fortificar Ramá, a apenas alguns quilômetros ao N de Jerusalém, subornou Ben-Hadade para que rompesse seu pacto e atacasse o reino setentrional, destarte forçando Baasa a retirar-se. Em troca dos tesouros reais de Judá e dos do santuário do templo, Ben-Hadade invadiu Israel, tomando várias cidades no território de Naftali e na região do mar da Galileia. Conforme esperado, Baasa retirou-se para sua capital, em Tirza. (1Rs 15:16-21; 2Cr 16:1-6) Esta ação se deu em cerca de 962 AEC (o "trigésimo sexto ano" em 2 Crônicas 16:1 evidentemente se refere ao 36.º ano a contar da divisão do reino, em 997 AEC). — Veja ASA N.º 1.

2. A próxima menção de um rei sírio chamado Ben-Hadade ocorre durante o reinado do Rei Acabe, de Israel (c. 940-920 AEC). Por volta do quinto ano antes da morte de Acabe, "Ben-Hadade, rei da Síria", liderou as forças coligadas de 32 reis, evidentemente vassalos, contra Samaria, cercando a cidade e exigindo que o Rei Acabe se rendesse incondicionalmente. (1Rs 20:1-6) Acabe convocou um conselho dos anciãos do país, que lhe recomendaram resistir. Daí, ao passo que as forças sírias se preparavam para um ataque contra a cidade, e enquanto Ben-Hadade e os outros reis estavam embebedando-se nas barracas que armaram, Acabe, seguindo o conselho divino, usou de estratégia para lançar um ataque de surpresa contra o acampamento sírio e teve êxito em desbaratá-los. — 1Rs 20:7-21.

Aceitando a teoria de seus conselheiros, de que Jeová era "um Deus de montes", e que, por conseguinte, os israelitas podiam ser derrotados em terreno plano, no ano seguinte, Ben-Hadade conduziu seu exército até Afeque, uma cidade evidentemente situada ao L do mar da Galileia. (Veja AFEQUE N.º 5.) As forças sírias tinham sido reorganizadas, os 32 reis sendo substituídos por governadores como chefes das tropas, evidentemente por se pensar que os governadores lutariam mais unida e obedientemente, e, talvez, também teriam mais forte incentivo para obter uma promoção a um posto superior do que os reis mais independentes. As teorias religiosas e militares de Ben-Hadade, porém, mostraram-se inúteis contra as forças israelitas que, embora sobrepujadas grandemente em número, foram avisadas de antemão desse ataque, por um profeta, e tinham o apoio do Rei do universo, Jeová Deus. As forças sírias foram destroçadas, e Ben-Hadade fugiu para Afeque. Acabe, porém, permitiu que este perigoso inimigo fosse embora livre, fazendo Ben-Hadade a seguinte promessa: "As cidades que meu pai tomou ao teu pai, eu restituirei; e designarás para ti ruas em Damasco, assim como meu pai designou em Samaria." — 1Rs 20:22-34.

Há considerável diferença de opinião quanto a se este Ben-Hadade é o mesmo rei sírio dos dias de Baasa e de Asa, ou se ele é, ao invés, um filho ou neto daquele rei. Para que Ben-Hadade I (do tempo de Asa) fosse o Ben-Hadade dos dias de Acabe e até mesmo do tempo de Jeorão (c. 917-905 AEC) seria necessário um reinado de cerca de 45 anos, ou mais. Isto, naturalmente, não seria impossível.

No entanto, aqueles que sustentam que o rei sírio dos dias de Acabe devia ser chamado Ben-Hadade II, indicam a promessa feita por Ben-Hadade a Acabe, citada acima. (1Rs 20:34) À primeira vista, parece que o pai de Ben-Hadade havia tomado cidades de Onri, pai de Acabe. Mas, se a captura mencionada fora feita por Ben-Hadade I, durante o governo de Baasa, isso faria com que Ben-Hadade I fosse o pai (ou talvez simples predecessor) do Ben-Hadade II do reinado de Acabe. Igualmente, "pai" de Acabe poderia referir-se a um predecessor real no trono, embora não fosse parente consanguíneo como antepassado de sua linhagem. — Veja BELSAZAR.

Todavia, ter a promessa de Ben-Hadade a Acabe feito referência a Samaria pareceria limitar a captura de cidades israelitas pela Síria ao reinado de Onri, visto que Samaria foi construída por ele e, depois disso, tornou-se a capital de Israel. As "ruas" designadas, pelo que parece, destinavam-se ao estabelecimento de bazares, ou mercados, para promover interesses comerciais.

Sejam quais forem as circunstâncias e o tempo da captura das cidades israelitas, a evidência bíblica parece indicar um diferente Ben-Hadade como governando no tempo de Acabe, e, por isso, pode ser mencionado como Ben-Hadade II. Parece que a promessa de Ben-Hadade, de devolver as cidades tomadas de Israel por seu pai, não foi inteiramente cumprida, porque, no último ano do governo de Acabe, este rei israelita fez uma aliança com Jeosafá, na vã tentativa de recuperar dos sírios Ramote-Gileade (ao L do Jordão). Ben-Hadade II é evidentemente o anônimo "rei da Síria" que ordenou que seus "trinta e dois chefes dos carros" concentrassem seu ataque naquela batalha em Acabe. (1Rs 22:31-37) Deve também ter sido o rei que enviou seu leproso chefe do exército, Naamã, para ser curado por Eliseu, durante o reinado de Jeorão. O rei sírio adorava o deus Rimom (cujo nome forma parte do de Tabrimom, pai de Ben-Hadade I). — 2Rs 5:1-19.

Apesar do serviço de cura prestado a seu general, Ben-Hadade manteve sua hostilidade para com Israel e enviou grupos invasores a Israel. (2Rs 6:8; compare isso com o versículo 23.) No entanto, Eliseu, constantemente, avisou de antemão o rei de Israel sobre o roteiro dos grupos invasores, de modo que Ben-Hadade começou a suspeitar da presença de um traidor entre seus próprios servos. Ao saber que Eliseu era quem informava o rei de Israel sobre 'as coisas que Ben-Hadade falava no seu dormitório interno', o rei sírio enviou uma poderosa força militar para capturar Eliseu em Dotã. Eliseu, porém, fez com que as tropas fossem miraculosamente atingidas por uma forma de cegueira, e conduziu-as bem para o meio da capital israelita, Samaria. Esta experiência, talvez junto com o tratamento misericordioso e a libertação concedida aos sírios ali, puseram fim à atividade de guerrilhas, embora isso não eliminasse a atitude agressiva de Ben-Hadade. — 2Rs 6:9-23.

Ainda decidido a derrubar o reino israelita, Ben-Hadade, mais tarde, ajuntou suas forças e cercou Samaria, provocando condições de fome do tipo mais grave. (2Rs 6:24-29) Todavia, quando Jeová, certa noite, fez com que o acampamento sírio ouvisse o som dum grande exército se aproximando, eles precipitadamente concluíram que Jeorão havia contratado os hititas e os egípcios para socorrê-lo, e, em vista disso, fugiram para a Síria no meio das trevas, deixando para trás todo seu equipamento e suas provisões. — 2Rs 7:6, 7.

Ben-Hadade II estava no seu leito de doença quando Eliseu viajou para Damasco, cumprindo a comissão divina dada ao seu predecessor, Elias. (1Rs 19:15) Enviando uma carga de presentes em 40 camelos para o profeta, Ben-Hadade indagou sobre as possibilidades de recuperar-se de sua doença. A resposta de Eliseu, transmitida a Hazael, mostrou que o rei morreria, assumindo Hazael o reinado. No dia seguinte, Hazael fez com que Ben-Hadade morresse sufocado, e então Hazael assumiu o trono como rei. — 2Rs 8:7-15.

3. O filho de Hazael, rei da Síria. (2Rs 13:3) Ben-Hadade III evidentemente estava associado com seu pai na opressão contra Israel, nos dias de Jeoacaz (876-c. 860 AEC), e na captura de cidades israelitas pelos sírios. No entanto, Jeová suscitou um "salvador" para Israel, aparentemente na pessoa de Jeoás (c. 859-845 AEC), filho de Jeoacaz, e de seu sucessor, Jeroboão II (c. 844-804 AEC). (2Rs 13:4, 5) Em cumprimento da profecia final de Eliseu, Jeoás recapturou "da mão de Ben-Hadade, filho de Hazael, as cidades que este tinha tirado da mão de Jeoacaz", derrotando as forças sírias em três ocasiões. (2Rs 13:19, 23-25) Jeroboão II deu sequência às vitórias de seu pai sobre a Síria, restituindo as fronteiras de Israel à sua condição anterior, assim servindo como salvador para Israel. (2Rs 14:23-27) Ben-Hadade III não é mencionado em conexão com as conquistas de Jeroboão, e talvez não mais estivesse vivo naquela época.

A expressão "as torres de habitação de Ben-Hadade", usada pelo profeta Amós (que profetizou durante o reinado de Jeroboão II) para se referir aos palácios reais em Damasco (Am 1:3-5; compare isso com 2Rs 16:9), continuou a ser usada de modo similar por Jeremias, uns dois séculos mais tarde. — Je 49:23-27.

Ben-Hadade em Inscrições Antigas. Uma inscrição de Salmaneser III, depois de relatar um conflito com os sírios, declara: "(O próprio) Hadadezer pereceu. Hazael, um comum (lit.: filho dum joão-ninguém), apoderou-se do trono." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 280) Portanto, parece que Ben-Hadade II era chamado de "Hadadezer" (assírio: Adad-idri) por Salmaneser III.

A Estela de Zakir descreve um esforço punitivo lançado por "Barhadade, filho de Hazael, rei de Arã", encabeçando uma coligação de reis sírios contra "Zakir, rei de Hamate e Luʽath", destarte acrescentando testemunho arqueológico quanto à existência de Ben-Hadade III, filho de Hazael. — Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 655.

Uma estela, conhecida como a Estela Melcart, foi encontrada em 1940 a uns 6 km ao N de Alepo, na Síria setentrional, e embora a inscrição não seja totalmente legível, ela reza em parte: "Uma estela erguida por Barhadade . . . para o seu Senhor Melcart." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 655) Não há certeza sobre se este Barhadade deve ser identificado com Ben-Hadade I, II, III, ou algum outro Ben-Hadade.

BEN-HAIL. Um dos cinco príncipes enviados por Jeosafá no terceiro ano do seu reinado para ensinar a Lei aos habitantes de Judá. — 2Cr 17:7, 9.

BEN-HANÃ [Filho Daquele Que Mostra Favor; Filho do Clemente]. Um dos quatro filhos de Simão; descendente de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 20.

BENIGNIDADE. Na edição revisada da Bíblia em português, a ideia de "benignidade" geralmente é traduzida por palavras ou expressões que são mais comuns em português, como "bondade", "fazer o bem" e assim por diante. Para mais informações, veja o subtópico "Um Fruto do Espírito" neste mesmo verbete. A qualidade ou condição de ser bom; excelência moral; virtude. A bondade possui completa solidez, sem qualquer maldade ou corrupção. É uma qualidade positiva, e se expressa na realização de atos bons e benéficos em favor de outros. As palavras mais comuns para "bom" na Bíblia são a hebraica tohv e a grega a·ga·thós; a·ga·thós usualmente é usada em sentido moral ou religioso.

A Bondade de Jeová. Jeová Deus é bom no sentido absoluto e completo. As Escrituras dizem: "Bom e reto é Jeová" (Sal 25:8), e exclamam: "Quão grande é a sua bondade!" (Za 9:17) Jesus Cristo, embora dotado desta qualidade de excelência moral, não aceitou "Bom" como título, dizendo àquele que se dirigiu a ele como "Bom Instrutor": "Por que me chamas de bom? Ninguém é bom, exceto um só, Deus." (Mr 10:17, 18) Ele reconheceu assim a Jeová como o padrão absoluto do que é bom.

Quando Moisés pediu para ver a Sua glória, Jeová lhe replicou: "Eu mesmo farei toda a minha bondade passar diante da tua face e vou declarar diante de ti o nome de Jeová." Jeová protegeu Moisés com um anteparo para que não contemplasse Sua face, mas, ao passar por ali (evidentemente por meio do seu representante angélico [At 7:53]), declarou a Moisés: "Jeová, Jeová, Deus misericordioso e clemente, vagaroso em irar-se e abundante em benevolência e em verdade, preservando a benevolência para com milhares, perdoando o erro, e a transgressão, e o pecado, mas de modo algum isentará da punição." — Êx 33:18, 19, 22; 34:6, 7.

Vê-se aqui que a bondade é uma qualidade que envolve misericórdia, benevolência e verdade, mas não tolera nem coopera de modo algum com a maldade. Nesta base, Davi podia orar a Jeová para que lhe perdoasse os pecados 'por causa da bondade de Jeová'. (Sal 25:7) A bondade de Jeová, bem como seu amor, estava envolvida em Ele dar seu Filho como sacrifício pelos pecados. Desta forma, proveu um meio de ajudar aqueles que desejam o que realmente é bom, e ao mesmo tempo condenou a maldade e lançou a base para satisfazer plenamente a justiça e o juízo. — Ro 3:23-26.

Um Fruto do Espírito. [Na edição revisada da Bíblia em português, esse aspecto do fruto do espírito agora é traduzido como "benignidade". A palavra "benignidade" só aparece em Gálatas 5:22.] A bondade é um fruto do espírito de Deus e da luz de sua Palavra da verdade. (Gál 5:22; Ef 5:9) Deve ser cultivada pelo cristão. A obediência às ordens de Jeová desenvolve a bondade; nenhum homem possui a bondade por seus próprios méritos. (Ro 7:18) O salmista apela para Deus como a Fonte da bondade: "Ensina-me a própria bondade, a sensatez e o conhecimento, pois tive fé nos teus mandamentos", e: "Tu és bom e fazes o bem. Ensina-me os teus regulamentos." — Sal 119:66, 68.

A Bondade Concede Benefícios. A bondade também pode significar beneficência, a concessão de coisas benéficas para outros. Jeová deseja expressar bondade para com seu povo, como o apóstolo Paulo orou em favor dos cristãos em Tessalônica: "Estamos sempre orando por vós, para que o nosso Deus vos conte dignos de sua chamada e realize completamente tudo o que lhe agradar da bondade e a obra de fé com poder." (2Te 1:11) Muitos são os exemplos da copiosa bondade de Deus para com aqueles que se voltam para ele. (1Rs 8:66; Sal 31:19; Is 63:7; Je 31:12, 14) Ademais: "Jeová é bom para com todos, e suas misericórdias estão sobre todos os seus trabalhos." (Sal 145:9) De propósito estende o bem a todos, a fim de que sua bondade induza muitos a servi-lo, e para que assim ganhem a vida. Semelhantemente, qualquer pessoa que demonstra bondade é uma bênção para seus associados. — Pr 11:10.

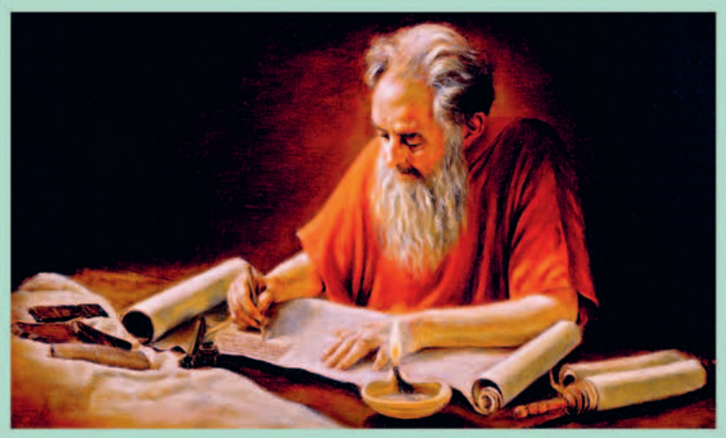
Como servos de Deus e imitadores dele, ordena-se aos cristãos que provem qual é a boa e perfeita vontade de Deus para eles (Ro 12:2), devem apegar-se ao que é bom (Ro 12:9), praticá-lo (Ro 13:3), fazer o que é bom (Ro 2:10), empenhar-se por isso (1Te 5:15), ser zelosos do que é bom (1Pe 3:13), imitar o que é bom (3Jo 11) e vencer o mal com o bem (Ro 12:21). Fazerem o bem se aplica especialmente aos aparentados com eles na fé cristã; adicionalmente, isso deve ser praticado para com todos os outros. — Gál 6:10.

Um Termo Relacionado. Similar à palavra grega para bom (a·ga·thós) há uma outra palavra, ka·lós. Esta última denota aquilo que é intrinsecamente bom, belo, bem adaptado às suas circunstâncias ou aos seus fins (como terreno ou solo excelente; Mt 13:8, 23), e o que é de excelente qualidade, inclusive o que é eticamente bom, correto ou honroso (como o nome de Deus; Tg 2:7). Está intimamente relacionada, em significado, com bom; mas pode ser distinguida por ser traduzida "excelente", "direito", "honesto" ou "bom". — Mt 3:10; Tg 4:17; He 13:18; Ro 14:21.

BENINU. Levita, ou antepassado de um, que atestou com selo o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 13.

Como a Bíblia Chegou a Nós

HÁ EVIDÊNCIA sólida de que a Bíblia, a inspirada Palavra de Deus, foi copiada e transmitida a nós com exatidão. A evidência consiste em manuscritos antigos hoje disponíveis — talvez uns 6.000 das inteiras Escrituras Hebraicas ou de partes delas, e uns 5.000 das Escrituras Cristãs em grego.



Escritos Originais

Os escritos originais da Bíblia foram feitos à mão, em materiais perecíveis, tais como papiro e velino; não se sabe hoje da existência de nenhum dos originais.

Cópias — Hebraicas ou Gregas

Logo depois de se escreverem os originais, começou a produção de cópias escritas à mão. Os copistas tiveram muito cuidado em transmitir o texto com exatidão; os massoretas até mesmo contavam as letras que copiavam.

Primeiras Traduções

A fim de tornar as Escrituras disponíveis em outros idiomas, tornou-se necessário traduzir a Bíblia. Existem hoje manuscritos de antigas versões, tais como a Septuaginta (ou Versão dos Setenta, uma tradução das Escrituras Hebraicas para o grego, do terceiro e segundo séculos AEC) e a Vulgata de Jerônimo (uma tradução dos textos hebraico e grego para o latim, originalmente produzida em c. 400 EC).

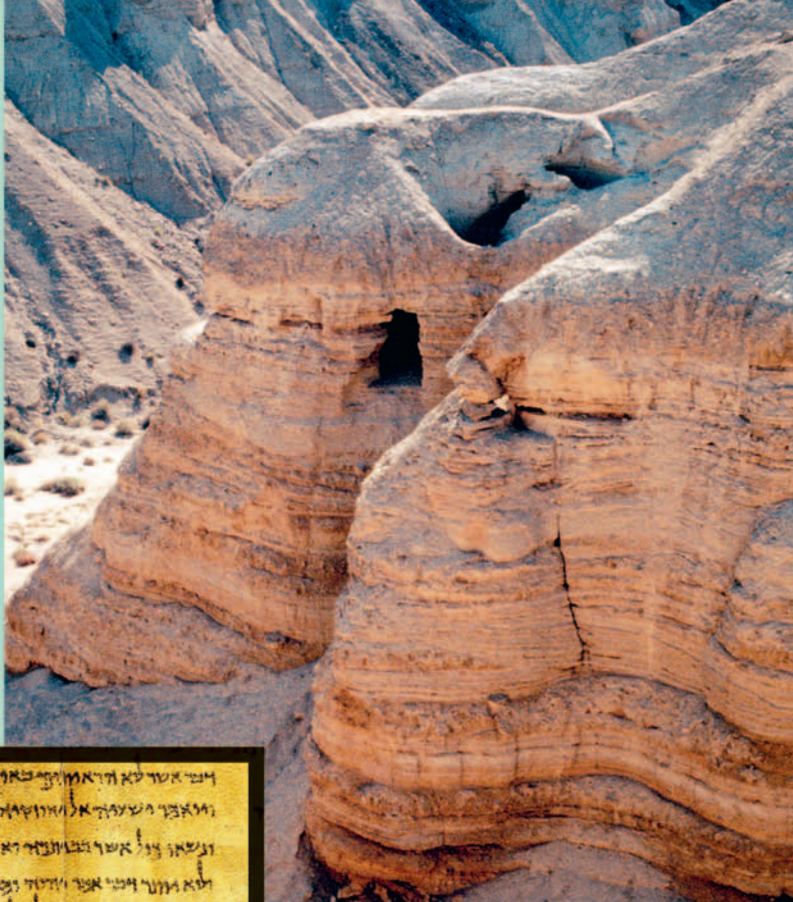
Textos-Padrão

Por meio dum estudo comparativo de centenas de manuscritos bíblicos existentes, os eruditos prepararam textos-padrão. Estas edições impressas de textos nas línguas originais sugerem a melhor leitura disponível, ao mesmo tempo trazendo à atenção as variantes que possam existir em certos manuscritos. Textos das Escrituras Hebraicas com versões comparativas em notas de rodapé foram preparados por eruditos tais como Ginsburg e Kittel. Entre os textos-padrão das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs incluem-se os publicados por Westcott e Hort, bem como por Nestle e Aland.

Traduções Modernas

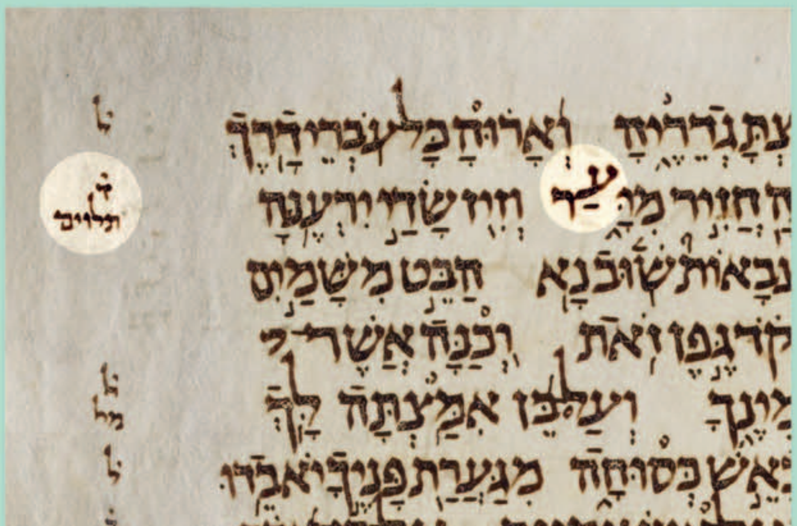
Os tradutores da Bíblia, em geral, usam hoje textos-padrão das línguas originais para produzir traduções modernas.

Escrituras Hebraicas



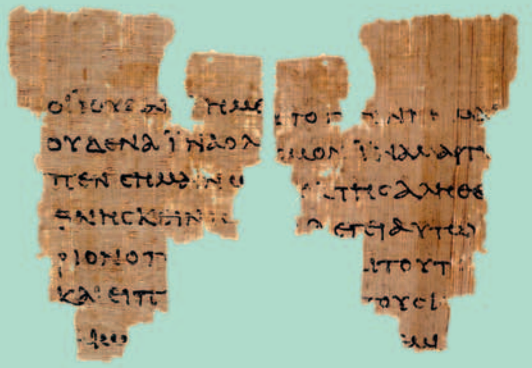
Cavernas em Qumran perto da margem noroeste do Mar Morto, onde se descobriram muitos antigos rolos bíblicos.

Parte do Rolo do Mar Morto de Isaías (que data de perto do fim do segundo século AEC). Na comparação com o texto massorético de mais de mil anos mais tarde, encontraram-se apenas diferenças menores, na maioria de grafia.



Parte do Códice de Alepo. Queira notar que se elevou a letra hebraica ʽá·yin a fim de indicar que ela é a letra central dos Salmos (80:13). A nota marginal massorética chama atenção especial para esta letra. Os primitivos escribas até mesmo contavam as letras que copiavam! Os massoretas adicionaram vogais e acentos, que podem ser vistos acima e abaixo do texto consonantal.

Escrituras Gregas Cristãs



O Papiro Rylands 457 (P^{52}) — ambos os lados dum fragmento do Evangelho de João, que data da primeira metade do segundo século EC, apenas poucas décadas depois da escrita do original.

Manuscrito Sinaítico — um códice de velino, do quarto século EC, contendo todas as Escrituras Gregas Cristãs e parte da tradução Septuaginta grega das Escrituras Hebraicas.

O Mosteiro de Sta. Catarina, junto ao monte Sinai, onde se descobriu o Manuscrito Sinaítico. Hoje o manuscrito está guardado na Biblioteca Britânica.

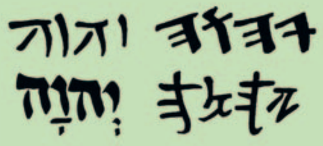
O estudo comparativo de milhares de antigos manuscritos fornece a evidência de que as Escrituras nos foram transmitidas de forma fidedigna. Conforme disse Sir Frederic Kenyon: “O resultado geral de todas estas descobertas e de todo este estudo vem fortalecer a prova da autenticidade das Escrituras e nossa convicção de que temos em nossas mãos, em real inteireza, a genuína Palavra de Deus.” — The Story of the Bible (A História da Bíblia), 1937, p. 144.

O Nome Divino

JEOVÁ — o nome do Soberano Senhor do Universo. É o nome pelo qual ele mesmo escolheu ser identificado. O Tetragrama (conforme são chamadas as quatro letras hebraicas do nome de Deus) ocorre no texto hebraico da Bíblia quase 7.000 vezes — muito mais vezes do que qualquer título descritivo de Deus. Este nome não é mero apelido. Distingue o verdadeiro Deus de todos os outros deuses, inclusive dos deuses criados pelos homens. É o nome que todas as criaturas inteligentes deviam conhecer, honrar e santificar.

O nome Jeová identifica o Criador do céu e da Terra (Gên 2:4), o Deus e Pai de Jesus Cristo (Mt 4:10; Jo 20:17), Aquele que prometeu estabelecer "novos céus e uma nova terra", nos quais prevalecerá a justiça. — Is 65:17, 25; 2Pe 3:13.

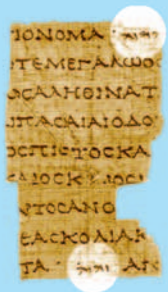
Surpreendentemente, muitas traduções da Bíblia hoje não contêm nenhuma vez o nome divino. Por que não? Entre os judeus surgiu a ideia supersticiosa de que era errado pronunciar este nome. Isto resultou, entre os judeus, primeiro em se evitar pronunciar o nome divino, e depois na retirada do nome pessoal de Deus de manuscritos gregos das Escrituras Sagradas. Por fim, na maioria das traduções da Bíblia, o nome divino foi totalmente substituído por expressões tais como "Senhor" e "Deus". É digno de nota que se alterou apenas o nome mais vital de todos — Jeová; não se fez isso com outros nomes bíblicos.

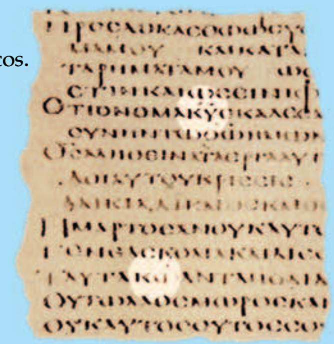


Diversos estilos em que se escrevia o nome divino em hebraico em tempos passados.

No entanto, é vital que toda a humanidade conheça o nome divino. (Ro 10:13) Isto envolve muito mais do que apenas saber qual é o nome pessoal de Deus. Inclui também conhecer a pessoa representada por este nome e viver dum modo coerente com os propósitos relacionados com o nome. Todos os que adoram o verdadeiro Deus têm a responsabilidade de diligenciar tornar o nome dele conhecido a outros, assim como Jesus fez. (Jo 17:6, 26) Jeová Deus promete abençoar aqueles que conhecem, usam e honram o seu grande nome. — Sal 91:14.

Alterações Feitas na Bíblia. Conforme mostrado aqui, o manuscrito hebraico (Códice de Alepo; abaixo, à esquerda) de De 32:3, 6, contém o nome divino. A tradução Septuaginta grega (P. Fouad Inv. 266, no centro) da mesma passagem também contém o nome divino em caracteres hebraicos.

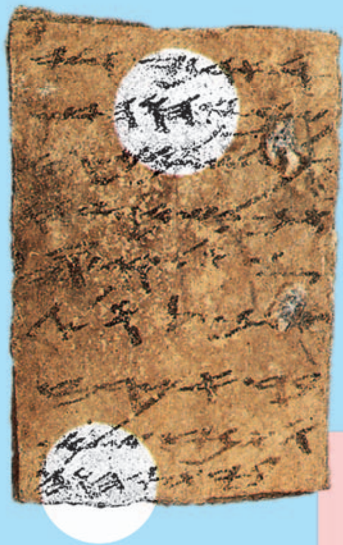




Mas queira notar que o nome não aparece nestes versículos no Códice Alexandrino (acima, à direita), do quinto século EC. O nome divino foi retirado. Não foi traduzido num equivalente grego, mas foi substituído por uma forma abreviada da palavra grega Ký·ri·os (Senhor).

Fontes não bíblicas indicam o uso cotidiano do nome divino nos tempos antigos.

A Pedra Moabita, do nono século AEC, fornece evidência de que até mesmo nações pagãs perto de Israel conheciam o nome Jeová. O tetragrama aparece na 18.ª linha.



Neste fragmento de cerâmica, de Arade, em Judá, escreveu-se uma carta, evidentemente no sétimo século AEC. Ela começa: "Ao meu senhor Eliasibe: Que Jeová peça a tua paz", e termina: "Ele mora na casa de Jeová."

Na carta de Laquis II, que se crê datar do sétimo século AEC, o nome Jeová, conforme representado pelo Tetragrama, é usado duas vezes.

Em 1961 foi descoberta esta caverna sepulcral a cerca de 35 km ao sudoeste de Jerusalém. Uma inscrição na sua parede, talvez do oitavo século AEC, declarava: "Jeová é o Deus de toda a terra."

Nestes fragmentos dum primitivo manuscrito grego, o nome pessoal de Deus aparece como Tetragrama escrito em caracteres hebraicos dentro do texto grego.

Estes fragmentos de papiro da Septuaginta grega (Fouad Inv. 266), do primeiro século AEC, mostram o Tetragrama em partes de Deuteronômio. O uso destas quatro letras hebraicas, representando o nome divino, continuou em algumas cópias da Septuaginta durante alguns séculos posteriores. De modo que, além de terem o texto hebraico das Escrituras, Jesus Cristo e seus discípulos tinham a Septuaginta grega; ambos estes textos continham o nome divino. Sem dúvida, portanto, os escritores originais das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs usavam o nome divino, especialmente ao citarem passagens das Escrituras Hebraicas que continham o Tetragrama.

O Dilúvio dos Dias de Noé

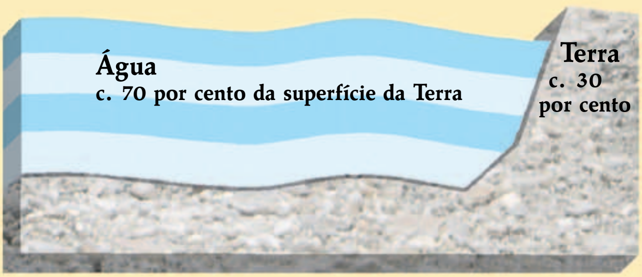
HÁ MAIS de 4.350 anos, segundo o registro histórico da Bíblia, abriram-se as comportas dos céus e um dilúvio inundou a Terra inteira. Humanos ímpios, violentos, e todos aqueles que eram tão indiferentes que se negavam a fazer caso do aviso de Deus, foram destruídos. Ao Dilúvio sobreviveram somente o justo Noé e sua família, ao todo oito pessoas, junto com um limitado número de toda espécie de vida animal, numa enorme arca construída sob a orientação de Deus. — Gên 7:1-24.

O fato de que o Dilúvio realmente ocorreu é confirmado por diversos escritores bíblicos. (Is 54:9; 2Pe 3:5, 6; He 11:7) A evidência mais forte, porém, é o testemunho do próprio Jesus Cristo, que era testemunha ocular nos céus. (Veja Jo 8:58.) Ele disse claramente: "Nos dias de Noé, . . . chegou o dilúvio e destruiu a todos." — Lu 17:26, 27.

O relato sobre o Dilúvio é muito mais do que mera história. Jesus Cristo indicou que tinha significado profético. Na sua profecia sobre a "terminação do sistema de coisas", ele fez referência específica aos "dias de Noé". Indicou o Dilúvio como exemplo de aviso duma destruição maior a vir durante "a presença do Filho do homem". — Mt 24:3, 37-39.

Podia a Arca Conter Todos os Animais?

É verdade que as enciclopédias mencionam mais de um milhão de variedades de animais. Mas Noé foi instruído a preservar apenas representantes de toda "espécie" de animal terrestre e de criatura voadora. Alguns pesquisadores disseram que apenas 43 "espécies" de mamíferos, 74 "espécies" de aves e 10 "espécies" de répteis podiam ter produzido a grande variedade de espécies dessas criaturas hoje conhecidas. A arca tinha cerca de 40.000 m^3 de espaço útil — suficiente para a lista de passageiros.



Para Onde Foram as Águas do Dilúvio?

Evidentemente, estão aqui mesmo na Terra. Hoje há cerca de 1,4 bilhão de km^3 de água na Terra. Ela cobre mais de 70 por cento da superfície do globo. A profundidade média dos oceanos é de 4 km; a elevação média da Terra é de apenas 0,8 km acima do nível do mar. Se a superfície da Terra fosse plana, toda ela ficaria coberta de água numa profundidade de 2.400 m.

Lendas do Dilúvio

Exemplos procedentes de seis continentes e de ilhas do mar; conhecem-se centenas de tais lendas.

	Destruição por Água	Causa Divina	Aviso Dado	Humanos Poupados	Animais Poupados	Preservados Numa Embarcação
Austrália - kurnai	✓			✓	✓	✓
Babilônia - relato de Beroso	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Babilônia - epopeia de Gilgamés	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Bolívia - xiricuanos	✓	✓	✓	✓		✓
Bornéu - daiaques do mar	✓			✓	✓	✓
Birmânia - singfos	✓			✓	✓	✓
Canadá - creiés	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Canadá - montagnais	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
China - lolos	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Cuba - nativos originais	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
África Oriental - massais	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Egito - Livro dos Mortos	✓	✓	✓	✓		✓
Fiji - tradição walavu-levu	✓	✓		✓		✓
Polinésia Francesa - Raïatéa	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Grécia - relato de Luciano	✓			✓	✓	✓
Guiana - macuxis	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Islândia - Edas	✓	✓		✓		✓
Índia - ilhas Andamã	✓	✓		✓		✓
Índia - bhil	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Índia - kamar	✓	✓	✓	✓		✓
Irã - Zenda-Avesta	✓		✓	✓	✓
Itália - poemas de Ovídio	✓	✓		✓		✓
Malaia, Península de - jakuns	✓	✓		✓		✓
México - Códice Chimalpopoca	✓		✓	✓		✓
México - huichol	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Nova Zelândia - maoris	✓	✓		✓		✓
Peru - índios de Huarochirí	✓		✓	✓	✓
Rússia - voguls	✓		✓	✓		✓
EUA (Alasca) - tlingit	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
EUA (Arizona) - papagos	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
EUA (Havaí) - lenda dos nu-u	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
EUA (Dakota do Norte) - mandan	✓					✓
Vanuatu - melanésios	✓			✓	✓	✓
Vietnã - bahnar	✓			✓	✓	✓
Gales - lenda dwyfan/dwyfach	✓			✓	✓	✓

Reconstituição dum mamute congelado, descoberto na Sibéria em 1901. Depois de milhares de anos, ainda havia vegetação na sua boca. Alguns encaram isso, bem como outras coisas, tais como fósseis marinhos encontrados em montanhas elevadas, como evidência convincente dum repentino e catastrófico dilúvio global.

A Origem das Nações

TODA a humanidade descende do primeiro casal humano, Adão e Eva. (Gên 1:28; 3:20; 5:1, 2) Após o Dilúvio, a nova população da Terra, incluindo todas as raças e grupos nacionais hoje na Terra, descendeu de Noé através de seus três filhos e das mulheres destes, os quais sobreviveram àquele Dilúvio global. Assim, depois de alistar 70 descendentes dos filhos de Noé, o relato de Gênesis diz: "[Destes] é que as nações se espalharam pela terra." — Gên 10:32.

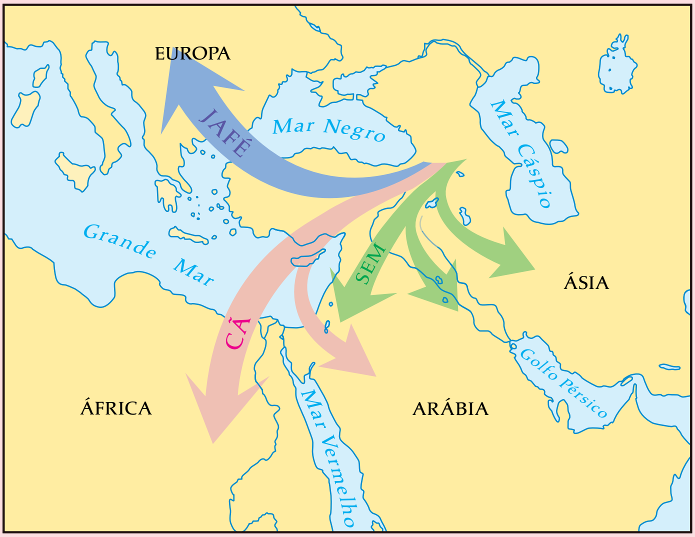

Tabela das 70 Famílias Após o Dilúvio

NOÉ

JAFÉ
Ramo Ariano de Línguas: Indo-Europeu (14 famílias)

GÔMER Cimérios, N do Mar Negro
ASQUENAZ Ao SE do Mar Negro
RIFÁ Paflagônios
TOGARMA Armênios
MAGOGUE
MADAI Medos, ao S do mar Cáspio
JAVÃ Jônios, gregos do SE da Europa
ELISÁ Perto da Grécia
TÁRSIS Pré-espanhol no SO da Europa
QUITIM Chipre
DODANIM (RODANIM) Ilha de Rodes e outras ilhas egeias
TUBAL Tibarenos, na Ásia Menor
MESEQUE Frígios da Ásia Menor
TIRAS Tirrênios, das ilhas e do litoral do Egeu

CÃ
Ramo Camítico de Línguas: Afro-Asiático (30 famílias)

CUS Etíopes no L da África e na Arábia
SEBÁ No L da África
HAVILÁ No SO da Arábia
SABTÁ No S da Arábia
RAAMÁ No SO da Arábia
SABÁ No SO da Arábia
DEDÃ Na Arábia
SABTECA No S da Arábia ou na Etiópia
MIZRAIM Egípcios
LUDIM No N da África
ANAMIM No Egito
LEABIM Líbios
NAFTUIM No N do Egito
PATRUSIM No Alto Egito
CASLUIM
FILISTEUS Planície costeira da Palestina
CAFTORIM Cretenses
PUTE No N da África
CANAÃ Ao O do rio Jordão
SÍDON Sidônios (fenícios)
HETE Hititas
JEBUSEU Ao redor da primitiva Jerusalém
AMORREU Na Palestina
GIRGASEU Ao O do rio Jordão
HEVEU Palestina central
ARQUEU Ao O dos montes do Líbano
SINEU
ARVADEU Ilha na costa síria
ZEMAREU N da costa fenícia
HAMATEU N da Palestina

SEM
Ramo Semítico de Línguas: Asiático (26 famílias)

(Com seus descendentes ou as regiões onde se fixaram.)

ELÃO Ao SE da Mesopotâmia
ASSUR Assírios
ARPAXADE
SELÁ
ÉBER Na Arábia e Mesopotâmia
PELEGUE
JOCTÃ Árabes
ALMODADE
SELEFE
HAZARMAVETE
JERÁ
HADORÃO
UZAL
DICLA
OBAL
ABIMAEL
SABÁ
OFIR
HAVILÁ
JOBABE
LUDE Lídios da Ásia Menor
ARÃ Arameus, sírios
UZ
HUL Perto da Armênia
GÉTER
MÁS Deserto siro-árabe ou N da Mesopotâmia

As Viagens de Abraão

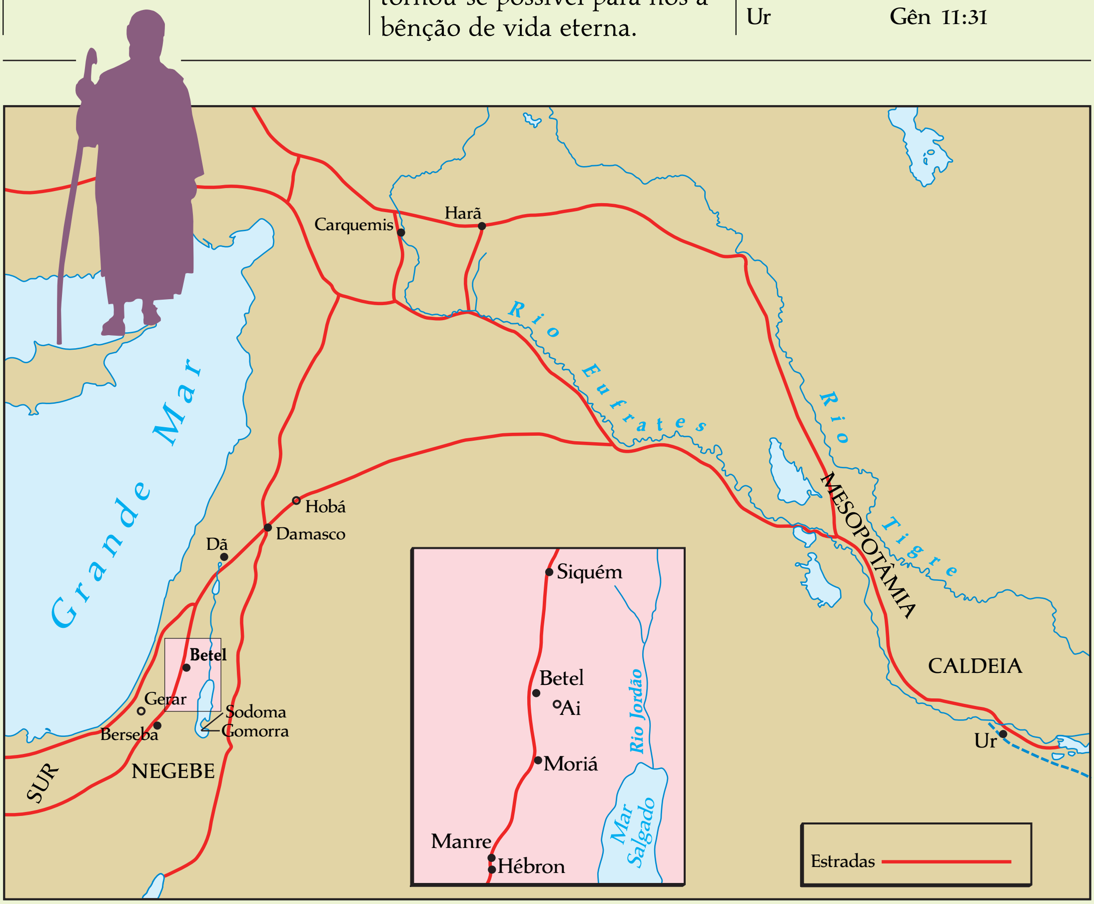
A VIDA de Abraão é de grande interesse para nós hoje. Por quê? Porque foi a ele que Jeová disse: "Todas as famílias do solo certamente abençoarão a si mesmas por meio de ti." Todavia, para Abraão poder usufruir tal papel no propósito de Deus, ele tinha de provar que era homem de fé e de obediência a Deus. — Gên 12:1-3; At 7:2, 3.

Isto envolvia abandonar seu lar e seus parentes na próspera Ur, para nunca mais voltar. A pé, e por meio de transporte primitivo, ele percorreu uns 960 km até Harã. Em 14 de nisã de 1943 AEC, ele cruzou o rio Eufrates e seguiu para o sul. Chegou finalmente ao coração de Canaã, depois de uma jornada que totalizou uns 1.650 km.

No tempo designado de Jeová, Deus fez que seu próprio Filho, Jesus, desde os céus, nascesse como humano dentre os descendentes de Abraão. Por meio de Jesus tornou-se possível para nós a bênção de vida eterna.

LUGARES NO MAPA
Com Textos Relacionados

Ai	Gên 12:8; 13:3, 4
Berseba	Gên 21:31-33; 22:19
Betel	Gên 12:8
Dã	Gên 14:14
Damasco	Gên 14:15
Gerar	Gên 20:1-18
Gomorra	Gên 18:20, 21
Harã	Gên 11:32; 12:4, 5
Hébron	Gên 13:18
Hobá	Gên 14:15, 16
Manre	Gên 13:18; 18:1-33; 25:9, 10
Moriá	Gên 22:2-18
Negebe	Gên 12:9; 13:1
Siquém	Gên 12:6, 7
Sodoma	Gên 19:24
Sur	Gên 16:7-12
Ur	Gên 11:31



O rio Eufrates. Abraão cruzou este rio provavelmente ao sul daqui, perto de Carquemis.

Galileia Superior; a terra que Abraão viu ao viajar para o sul, para Siquém.

O monte Gerizim (à esquerda) e o monte Ebal (à direita) elevando-se sobre Siquém. Neste vale, Jeová prometeu a Abraão: "Vou dar esta terra à tua descendência." (Gên 12:6, 7)

Hébron, conforme aparece hoje. Perto daqui, Abraão construiu um altar para a adoração de Jeová. (Gên 13:18)

Aspectos Geográficos da Terra da Promessa

A TERRA que Deus deu ao antigo Israel inclui uma extraordinária variedade de aspectos geográficos. No norte, há montes encimados por neve; regiões sulinas são trópicas. Dentro dos seus limites há baixadas produtivas, regiões colinosas de pomares e de pastagens para rebanhos, e há também ermos desolados. Aqui, numa região relativamente pequena, há uma amostra dos aspectos geográficos da terra.

Beirando a parte oriental do mar Mediterrâneo há uma faixa de planície fértil. Ao leste dela encontra-se a Sefelá, uma região colinosa em que proliferam vinhedos e olivais. Mais ao leste estende-se uma cordilheira por toda a extensão desta terra, igual a uma enorme espinha dorsal. Daí, o terreno dá um dramático mergulho dentro do vale de abatimento tectônico que corta esta terra ao comprido. Através deste vale serpenteia o rio Jordão desde o mar da Galileia descendo até o Mar Salgado. Ao leste do Jordão há colinas férteis e pastagens. Mais além desta terra convidativa, ao leste, começa o Deserto Árabe.

No apogeu, a Terra da Promessa, com toda a sua diversidade, era como o jardim do Éden. Israel constituía assim um exemplo em pequena escala do que o Paraíso sob o Reino de Deus significará para a humanidade em todas as partes da Terra.

Uma das cabeceiras do rio Jordão, o Nahr Banyas (Nahal Hermon).

O monte Hermom, o mais alto na região palestina. Sua neve, ao derreter-se, ajudava a formar o orvalho para esta terra e a água para o rio Jordão.

Mte. Hermom
Montes da Galileia
Planície de Aser
BASÃ
Mar da Galileia
V. da T. do Iarmuc
Mte. Tabor
Grande Mar
Mte. Carmelo
Vale de Jezreel
GILEADE
PLANÍCIE COSTEIRA
Planície de Sarom
V. da T. do Jaboque
Montes de Samaria
Rio Jordão
Mte. Nebo
Planície da Filístia
SEFELÁ
Montes de Judá
Ermo de Judá
Mar Salgado
V. da T. do Árnon
NEGEBE

O monte Tabor eleva-se majestosamente acima do vale de Jezreel.

O vale do Jordão, através do qual o rio serpenteia por uns 320 km para cobrir a distância de 105 km até o Mar Morto.

O produtivo vale de Jezreel.

O ermo de Judá. Aqui Davi buscou refúgio contra Saul, e foi neste ermo solitário que o Diabo procurou tentar Jesus.

Pastagens de Basã, ao leste do mar da Galileia — uma região famosa pelo seu gado.

A planície de Sarom, onde mesmo hoje proliferam pomares cítricos.

Litoral norte do mar da Galileia, com vista para o nordeste.

Formações de sal no Mar Morto, um dos corpos de água mais salinos da Terra.

BENJAMIM [Filho da Mão Direita].

1. O 12.º filho de Jacó, e o irmão germano de José. Benjamim parece ser o único filho nascido a Jacó na terra de Canaã, os outros filhos tendo nascido em Padã-Arã. (Gên 29:31-30:25; 31:18) Raquel deu à luz Benjamim, seu segundo filho, enquanto estava a caminho de Betel para Efrate (Belém), conseguindo consumar o parto difícil à custa de sua própria vida. Enquanto morria, chamou este filho de Ben-Oni, que significa "Filho do Meu Pesar"; mas seu marido desolado posteriormente o chamou de Benjamim, que significa "Filho da Mão Direita". — Gên 35:16-19; 48:7.

Desde a época de seu nascimento, até depois de seu irmão José ter sido vendido para ser escravo no Egito, nada mais se nos diz sobre Benjamim. Como filho mais moço de Jacó com sua esposa amada, Raquel (Gên 44:20), Benjamim era obviamente objeto de grande afeição por parte de seu pai, especialmente depois de Jacó presumir que José estava morto. Por conseguinte, Jacó mostrou-se extremamente relutante em permitir que Benjamim fosse com seus irmãos ao Egito, só o fazendo depois de muita persuasão. (Gên 42:36-38; 43:8-14) Deve-se notar que, embora Judá, nessa ocasião, se referisse a Benjamim como "rapaz", Benjamim já era então um homem jovem. O registro em Gênesis 46:8, 21, apresenta Benjamim como o pai de vários filhos na ocasião em que Jacó fixou residência no Egito. No entanto, ele era para Jacó o amado "menino de sua velhice", em quem o pai idoso se apoiava em mais de um sentido. (Gên 44:20-22, 29-34) José também manifestava profunda afeição pelo seu irmão mais moço. — Gên 43:29-31, 34.

A genealogia dos descendentes de Benjamim é apresentada em vários lugares, algumas sendo, aparentemente, mais completas do que outras. Gênesis 46:21 alista dez pessoas como "filhos de Benjamim", e a ausência do nome de vários destes, em listas sucessivas, levou alguns a sugerir que certos filhos talvez tivessem morrido com pouca idade, ou talvez não tivessem gerado filhos varões que produzissem linhagens familiares. Há, evidentemente, algumas variações na grafia dos nomes nestas listas (compare Eí, Airão, Aará), e alguns dos alistados em Gênesis 46:21 podem ser meramente descendentes. (Núm 26:38-40; 1Cr 7:6; 8:1) Têm-se levantado objeções à possibilidade de Benjamim já ter então tantos filhos ou até mesmo netos, mas deve-se ter presente que a referência a eles, como estando entre "as almas que vieram a Jacó ao Egito", não exige necessariamente que tenham nascido antes da própria entrada naquele país. Talvez tenham 'vindo ao Egito' por nascerem ali, durante os 17 anos em que Jacó residiu no Egito antes de sua morte, assim como os dois filhos de José, ali nascidos, estão alistados entre "as almas da casa de Jacó, que vieram ao Egito". (Gên 46:26, 27) Na época da morte de seu pai, Benjamim já parece ter tido mais de 40 anos, e, por isso, já tinha idade suficiente para ter netos.

A bênção parental proferida sobre Benjamim, como um dos cabeças das 12 tribos de Israel, é considerada mais adiante. — Gên 49:27, 28.

2. O nome Benjamim também designa a tribo que descendeu do filho de Jacó. Por ocasião do Êxodo do Egito, era a segunda menor (depois de Manassés) quanto à população masculina, dentre todas as tribos. (Núm 1:36, 37) No censo realizado mais tarde, nas planícies de Moabe, a tribo de Benjamim tinha subido para o sétimo lugar. (Núm 26:41) Quando acampada no deserto, a tribo ocupava um lugar ao O do tabernáculo, junto com as tribos que descendiam de Manassés e de Efraim, filhos de José, e esta divisão de três tribos ocupava o terceiro lugar na ordem de marcha. — Núm 2:18-24.

Em Canaã, o território designado à tribo de Benjamim situava-se entre os das tribos de Efraim e de Judá, ao passo que o território de Dã fazia fronteira com ele ao O. Sua fronteira ao N ia do rio Jordão, perto de Jericó, cruzava a região montanhosa junto a Betel e continuava na direção O, até um ponto próximo da Bete-Horom Baixa; partindo dali, a fronteira ocidental descia para Quiriate-Jearim, daí, no S, virava para o L e passava por Jerusalém através do vale de Hinom, serpenteava pelas encostas escarpadas orientais até o Jordão, novamente na extremidade N do Mar Morto, o rio Jordão formando assim sua fronteira oriental. (Jos 18:11-20; compare a fronteira N de Judá, em Jos 15:5-9, com a fronteira S dos "filhos de José", em Jos 16:1-3.) Do N ao S, a região media cerca de 19 km, e de L a O, cerca de 45 km. Com exceção da parte do vale do Jordão ao redor do oásis de Jericó, o território era montanhoso e irregular, embora tivesse algumas áreas férteis nas encostas ocidentais. Os vales de torrente que iam em direção O, para a planície filisteia, e em direção L, para o Jordão, tornavam esta área uma das principais vias de acesso à região dos altiplanos, tanto para fins comerciais como militares. As forças bélicas dos filisteus investiram contra esta região durante a parte inicial do reinado de Saul, saqueando à vontade os israelitas, tendo por base seu acampamento em Micmás, a uma curta distância ao N da casa de Saul, em Gibeá, até que a proeza de Jonatã, em Micmás, deu início ao seu desbaratamento e fuga para as planícies costeiras. — 1Sa 13:16-18; 14:11-16, 23, 31, 46.

Entre as cidades destacadas, alistadas como designadas originalmente a Benjamim, acham-se Jericó, Betel, Gibeão, Gibeá e Jerusalém. A conquista de Betel, porém, foi efetuada pela casa de José. Numa época posterior, Betel tornou-se uma cidade destacada da vizinha tribo de Efraim e um centro da idólatra adoração do bezerro. (Jz 1:22; 1Rs 12:28, 29; veja BETEL N.º 1.) Embora Jerusalém também fizesse parte do território de Benjamim, encontrava-se na fronteira com Judá; e foi esta tribo que inicialmente capturou e incendiou a cidade. (Jz 1:8) No entanto, nem Judá nem Benjamim tiveram êxito em expulsar os jebuseus da cidadela de Jerusalém (Jos 15:63; Jz 1:21), e foi somente durante o governo do Rei Davi que se assumiu completo controle dela e se fez dessa cidade a capital de Israel. — 2Sa 5:6-9.

Durante o período dos juízes, a tribo de Benjamim demonstrou um espírito de obstinação, ao recusar-se a entregar os responsáveis por um ato vil cometido na cidade de Gibeá. Isto levou a uma guerra civil com as outras tribos, que estavam determinadas a não permitir que tal erro passasse sem punição, e quase que resultou no extermínio da tribo de Benjamim. (Jz 19-21) Todavia, pelo método engendrado pelas demais tribos para a preservação dessa tribo, Benjamim recuperou-se e cresceu de cerca de 600 homens para quase 60.000 guerreiros até o tempo do reinado de Davi. — 1Cr 7:6-12.

A capacidade de luta dos descendentes de Benjamim foi representada na profecia do leito de morte de Jacó, em que ele disse a respeito deste filho amado: "Benjamim continuará a dilacerar como lobo. De manhã comerá o animal apanhado e à noitinha repartirá o despojo." (Gên 49:27) Os combatentes benjamitas eram famosos por sua habilidade com a funda, lançando pedras quer com a direita quer com a esquerda, e atingindo o alvo "num cabelo". (Jz 20:16; 1Cr 12:2) O juiz Eúde, canhoto, matador do opressivo Rei Eglom, era de Benjamim. (Jz 3:15-21) Pode-se também notar que foi na "manhã" do reino de Israel que a tribo de Benjamim, embora uma 'das menores tribos' forneceu o primeiro rei de Israel, Saul, filho de Quis, que se mostrou feroz lutador contra os filisteus. (1Sa 9:15-17, 21) Semelhantemente, na "noitinha", no que se referia à nação de Israel, a tribo de Benjamim forneceu a Rainha Ester e o primeiro-ministro Mordecai, que serviram para salvar os israelitas do aniquilamento sob o Império Persa. — Est 2:5-7.

Embora certos homens dentre os benjamitas apoiassem o proscrito Davi quando ele estava sendo perseguido pelo Rei Saul (1Cr 12:1-7, 16-18), quando Saul morreu, a maioria da tribo deu seu apoio inicial a Is-Bosete, filho de Saul. (2Sa 2:8-10, 12-16) Depois disso, contudo, reconheceram o reinado de Davi, e, dali em diante, permaneceram leais ao reino de Judá, com raras exceções. Entre alguns, tais como Simei e Seba, continuou a haver um espírito sectário, resultando em alienação temporária (2Sa 16:5; 20:1-22); mas, por ocasião da divisão daquela nação, em que a tribo vizinha de Efraim (que descendia do sobrinho de Benjamim) se tornou a tribo destacada do reino setentrional, a tribo de Benjamim aderiu fielmente a Judá, em reconhecimento do decreto de Jeová. — 1Rs 11:31, 32; 12:21; 2Cr 11:1; Gên 49:8-10.

Depois do exílio em Babilônia, as tribos de Benjamim e de Judá eram as mais destacadas entre os israelitas restabelecidos na Palestina. (Esd 4:1; 10:9) A associação leal de Benjamim com Judá e Jerusalém, sem dúvida, contribuiu para sua posição na visão de Ezequiel sobre a divisão da terra sob o reino prometido, visão em que a tribo de Benjamim é representada como situada bem na fronteira meridional da "contribuição sagrada", ao passo que a tribo de Judá é colocada na fronteira setentrional. — Ez 48:8, 21-23.

Entre os leais seguidores de Jesus, "o Leão que é da tribo de Judá", encontrava-se o apóstolo Paulo, benjamita, que mostrou ser ferrenho lutador na guerra espiritual contra doutrinas e práticas falsas. (Re 5:5; Ro 11:1; Fil 3:5) A tribo de Benjamim é de direito representada entre as tribos do Israel espiritual. — Re 7:8.

Cartas antigas, encontradas em Mari, às margens do rio Eufrates, e reputadas serem do século 18 AEC, mencionam uma tribo feroz de nômades chamados Binu-jamina. A respeito deste nome, O Novo Dicionário da Bíblia declara que alguns peritos "têm procurado nesse nome os antecedentes da tribo bíblica; mas a diferença quanto ao tempo e à origem torna muito incerta tal identificação". — Editor organizador J. D. Douglas, 1966, Vol. I, p. 203, Edições Vida Nova.

3. Benjamita descendente de Jediael por meio de Bilã. — 1Cr 7:6, 10.

4. Um dos "filhos de Harim", que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras nos dias de Esdras. (Esd 10:31, 32, 44) Talvez seja o mesmo que o Benjamim mencionado em Neemias 3:23 e 12:34, mas não há certeza disso.

BENJAMITAS (OU BENJAMINITAS). Veja BENJAMIM N.º 2.

BENO. Levita do tempo de Davi, descendente de Merari. — 1Cr 24:20, 26, 27.

BEN-ONI [Filho do Meu Pesar]. Nome dado por Raquel ao seu segundo filho, ao estar morrendo durante o parto. Jacó mudou o nome para Benjamim, que significa “Filho da Mão Direita”. — Gên 35:18; veja BENJAMIM N.º 1.

BEN-ZOETE [Filho de Zoete]. Alistado entre a posteridade de Judá como filho de Isi e irmão de Zoete. Mas, visto que o prefixo do seu nome (Ben-) significa “filho de”, ele talvez fosse filho de Zoete e neto de Isi. — 1Cr 4:20.

BEOM. Veja BAAL-MEOM.

BEOR.

1. Edomita, cujo filho Bela é alistado como primeiro rei de Edom. — Gên 36:31, 32; 1Cr 1:43.

2. Pai do profeta Balaão. — Núm 22:5; 2Pe 2:15.

BEQUER [Jovem Camelo Macho].

1. Segundo filho de Benjamim mencionado na lista dos descendentes de Jacó, no capítulo 46 de Gênesis. (Veja Gên 46:21; 1Cr 7:6.) Bequer é omitido nas listas genealógicas em Números 26:38 e em 1 Crônicas 8:1, 2. Os descendentes dele, por meio de seus nove filhos varões, quais chefes de família, ascenderam a 20.200 “homens poderosos, valentes”, segundo o relato registrado em 1 Crônicas 7:8, 9.

2. Chefe de família dos bequeritas, da tribo de Efraim. — Núm 26:35.

BEQUERITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Bequer]. Família efraimita descendente de Bequer. — Núm 26:35.

BERA. Rei de Sodoma, a quem Quedorlaomer e seus aliados derrotaram na Baixada de Sidim. (Gên 14:1-11) Abraão perseguiu os vencedores, a fim de libertar seu sobrinho Ló, recuperou o despojo, e devolveu-o ao rei de Sodoma, em vez de ficar com ele. Abraão fez isso, segundo diz, a fim de que o rei de Sodoma nunca se pudesse gabar: “Fui eu que enriqueci a Abrão.” — Gên 14:14-24.

BERACA [Bênção].

1. Um dos poderosos, hábeis no uso do arco, da tribo de Benjamim, que se juntaram a Davi em Ziclague. Isto ocorreu no tempo em que Davi ainda estava sob restrições por causa de Saul. — 1Cr 12:1-3.

2. Uma baixada em Judá, entre Belém e Hébron. É atualmente identificada com o uádi el-ʽArrub, e a vizinha Khirbet Bereikut (Berakhot) parece preservar evidência do nome original. Este vale corre E-O, ligando a terra colinosa de Judá com a região do ermo ao O do Mar Salgado.

Após a vitória milagrosa sobre as forças conjuntas de Amom, Moabe e Edom, Jeosafá congregou o povo nesta baixada para bendizer a Jeová, daí o nome de Baixada de Beraca (significando “Bênção”). — 2Cr 20:26.

BERAÍAS [Jah Criou]. Filho de Simei, e chefe duma casa paterna de benjamitas que moravam em Jerusalém. — 1Cr 8:1, 21, 28.

BEREDE [Saraiva].

1. Neto de Efraim por meio de Sutela. — 1Cr 7:20.

2. Um lugar na Palestina meridional mencionado no relato da fuga de Agar de Sarai. O poço em Beer-Laai-Roi, junto ao qual Agar parou, ficava no ermo entre Berede e Cades, no caminho para Sur. (Gên 16:7, 14) O ermo de Sur é uma região ao SO da Filístia e no caminho para o Egito, o que talvez indique que Agar se dirigia de volta à sua pátria. — Êx 15:22.

BEREIA. Cidade populosa da província de Macedônia, visitada pelo apóstolo Paulo durante sua segunda viagem missionária. (At 17:10-14) Chamada modernamente de Veroia, encontrava-se numa região fértil, ao sopé do monte Bermios, cerca de 65 km ao OSO de Tessalônica. Encontrava-se assim no interior, a quase 35 km do mar Egeu.

Foi provavelmente por volta de 50 EC que Paulo e Silas chegaram a Bereia, depois de a violência duma turba tornar necessário que partissem à noite de Tessalônica. Bereia possuía uma comunidade judaica e uma sinagoga em que os dois missionários pregaram. A prontidão dos bereanos em dar ouvidos à mensagem deles, e sua diligência em examinar as Escrituras, em busca da confirmação das coisas aprendidas, granjearam-lhes o elogio encontrado em Atos 17:11. Resultaram vários conversos entre tais pessoas de “mentalidade mais nobre”, tanto judeus como gregos. O trabalho de Paulo, contudo, foi abreviado com a chegada de judeus fanáticos de Tessalônica, decididos a causar mais tumultos. Ele embarcou para Atenas, deixando Silas e Timóteo para cuidar do novo grupo de crentes em Bereia. — At 17:12-15.

Paulo, sem dúvida, passou por Bereia, ou perto dela, na sua terceira viagem missionária, que o levou de novo à Macedônia. Entre seus companheiros, nesta ocasião, estava Sópater, um cristão de Bereia. — At 20:1-4.

BERENICE [duma raiz que significa “vencer, ser vitorioso”]. Filha de Herodes Agripa I com sua esposa Cipros; nascida por volta de 28 EC; irmã de Mariane III, Drusila e Herodes Agripa II. (Veja HERODES N.º 4.) Berenice e seu irmão Agripa visitaram o governador Festo em Cesareia, em 58 EC, onde os dois, a convite de Festo, “vieram com muita pompa e entraram na sala de audiências, junto com os comandantes militares e também os homens eminentes da cidade”. Foi então trazido o prisioneiro Paulo, e se lhe permitiu apresentar sua pujante e eloquente defesa perante todos esses dignitários. — At 25:13, 23; 26:1-30.

Ainda bem jovem, ela se casou com Marcos, filho de Alexandre Lisímaco. Depois da morte de Marcos, Berenice se casou com o tio dela, Herodes, rei de Cálcis, que morreu em 48 EC. Com Herodes, ela teve dois meninos. Daí passou a morar com Agripa, irmão dela, até que surgiram rumores de que a relação dos dois era incestuosa. Com isso, Berenice se casou com Polêmon, rei da Cilícia, depois de ele concordar em se converter ao judaísmo. Porém ela logo o abandonou e de novo foi morar com o irmão. Foi nessa época que ela e Agripa visitaram Cesareia.

Em 65 EC, Berenice arriscou a vida para defender os judeus contra Floro, que estava promovendo violência e derramamento de sangue em Jerusalém. Mais tarde ela e o irmão, assim como muitos outros, fizeram um juramento de lealdade ao imperador romano Vespasiano. Tito, filho do imperador Vespasiano, levou Berenice para Roma a fim de se casar com ela, embora ela fosse dez anos mais velha do que ele. Mas, por causa da reação negativa do povo romano, que não gostou da ideia de ter uma rainha judia, Tito terminou o relacionamento.

BEREQUIAS [Abençoado por Jeová].

1. Filho de Simeia, na descendência de Levi por meio de Gersom. O filho de Berequias, Asafe, era um dos líderes dos cantores designados pelo Rei Davi, e dele derivaram muitas gerações sucessivas de cantores do templo. Este Berequias talvez tenha sido o mesmo que o N.º 2. — 1Cr 6:39; 15:17; 25:1-9; Esd 2:41; Ne 7:44.

2. Um dos quatro porteiros levitas para a Arca, quando Davi era rei. Talvez fosse o mesmo que o N.º 1. — 1Cr 15:23, 24.

3. Filho de Mesilemote. (2Cr 28:12) No tempo em que Acaz era rei de Judá, este reino meridional sofreu uma terrível derrota às mãos do reino setentrional, mas quando 200.000 iam ser levados cativos a Samaria, Berequias e três outros cabeças de Efraim agiram prontamente segundo o conselho de Odede, profeta de Jeová. Não somente impediram que os vencedores escravizassem seus irmãos, mas até vestiram e alimentaram os cativos, bem como os ajudaram a retornar. — 2Cr 28:6-15.

4. Descendente de Davi por meio de Salomão. — 1Cr 3:1, 10, 20.

5. Levita que viveu depois do exílio babilônico; filho de Asa. — 1Cr 9:16.

6. Filho de Mesezabel. O filho de Berequias, Mesulão, trabalhou na reconstrução das muralhas de Jerusalém no tempo de Neemias, e sua neta casou-se com o filho de Tobias. — Ne 3:4, 30; 6:17, 18.

7. Filho do profeta Ido e pai do profeta Zacarias. — Za 1:1, 7.

BERI. Filho de Zofa e chefe de família na tribo de Aser. — 1Cr 7:36, 40.

BERIAS [Com Calamidade].

1. Quarto filho alistado de Aser, o qual, talvez com seus próprios dois filhos, Héber e Malquiel, foi ao Egito junto com os da casa de Jacó. (Gên 46:8, 17) Ele e seus dois filhos estão alistados como chefes de família ancestrais, seus descendentes sendo beriitas. — Núm 26:44, 45; 1Cr 7:30, 31.

2. Filho de Efraim, nascido depois de homens de Gate terem matado seus irmãos mais velhos. Efraim "o chamou pelo nome de Berias, porque foi com calamidade [hebr.: vera·'áh'] que ela [a mãe de Berias] veio a estar na sua casa". — 1Cr 7:20-23.

3. Um dos cinco filhos de Elpaal e um dos chefes de família benjamitas que puseram em fuga os habitantes de Gate. — 1Cr 8:12, 13.

4. Último filho mencionado de Simei, levita descendente de Gérson. Berias e seu irmão Jeús "não tiveram muitos filhos; de modo que se tornaram casa paterna para uma classe oficial". — 1Cr 23:6-11.

BERIITAS [De (Pertencentes a) Berias]. Família aserita descendente de Berias. — Núm 26:44.

BERILO. Mineral transparente ou opaco composto de um silicato de alumínio e berílio. É mais duro do que o quartzo e usualmente de cor verde-amarelada, mas às vezes é verde, amarelo, azul, branco, vermelho pálido ou incolor. O berilo verde-escuro é classificado como esmeralda, o verde-azulado é a água-marinha e a variedade rosada é chamada de morganita. O berilo é normalmente encontrado em rochas graníticas na forma de cristais hexagonais. Descobriram-se cristais individuais de berilo com peso superior a 25 toneladas.

O berilo era uma gema bem popular nos tempos antigos. Os gregos faziam dele excelentes camafeus, e os romanos fabricavam brincos dos cristais naturais. O berilo (gr.: bé·ryl·los) é mencionado uma vez nas Escrituras (NM, Al, BJ) como constituindo o oitavo alicerce da muralha da Nova Jerusalém. — Re 21:2, 19, 20.

BERODAQUE-BALADÃ. Veja MERODAQUE-BALADÃ.

BEROTA, BEROTAI [Poços]. Na visão de Ezequiel a respeito da herança territorial de Israel, Berota é alistada como situada na fronteira ao norte entre Hamate e Sibraim. (Ez 47:16) Parece ser a Berotai de 2 Samuel 8:8, uma cidade pertencente a Hadadezer, rei de Zobá, da qual Davi levou "cobre em quantidade muito grande". No registro paralelo, em 1 Crônicas 18:8, aparece em seu lugar o nome Cum. Berota (ou Berotai) em geral é identificada com a atual Britel (Bereitan), a uns 10 km ao SO de Baalbek, no vale conhecido como Beqaʿ, entre os montes Líbano e Antilíbano.

BEROTITA. Veja BEEROTITA.

BERSEBA [Poço do Juramento; ou: Poço de Sete]. O lugar dum poço, e, mais tarde, duma cidade no sul de Judá. Encontra-se a meio caminho entre a costa do Mediterrâneo e a extremidade meridional do Mar Morto, a cerca de 45 km ao SO de Hébron e aproximadamente a mesma distância ao SE de Gaza.

Berseba veio a representar o ponto mais meridional ao se descrever a extensão da Terra da Promessa, conforme expresso na frase proverbial, "desde Dã para baixo até Berseba" (Jz 20:1), ou, na direção inversa, "desde Berseba até Dã". (1Cr 21:2; 2Cr 30:5) Depois da divisão da nação em dois reinos, Berseba continuou a ser usada para indicar a extremidade sul do reino de Judá, nas expressões "desde Geba até Berseba" (2Rs 23:8) e "desde Berseba até a região montanhosa de Efraim" (onde começava o reino setentrional de Israel). (2Cr 19:4) Nos tempos pós-exílicos, a expressão era usada de forma ainda mais limitada, para se referir à região ocupada pelos repatriados de Judá, que se estendia desde Berseba "até o vale de Hinom". — Ne 11:27, 30.

Na realidade, havia outras cidades da Terra da Promessa situadas ao S de Berseba, assim como havia cidades israelitas ao N de Dã. No entanto, tanto Dã como Berseba encontravam-se em fronteiras naturais da terra. No caso de Berseba, sua localização era abaixo das montanhas de Judá, à beira do deserto. Adicionalmente, era uma das principais cidades de Judá (junto com Jerusalém e Hébron), e isto se dava, não só porque dispunha de excelentes reservas de água, em comparação com a região circunvizinha, possibilitando assim tanto a lavoura como as pastagens de manadas e rebanhos, mas também porque importantes estradas convergiam para ela, vindas de várias direções. Do Egito, uma antiga rota subia pelo "Caminho dos Poços", atravessando Cades-Barneia até Berseba, unindo-se a outra estrada pela qual viajavam as caravanas de camelos dos "Reinos das Especiarias" da península da Arábia, em direção à Filístia ou a Judá. De Eziom-Géber, na cabeceira do golfo de Acaba, outra rota subia pelo Arabá e então se virava para o O, ascendendo a subida de Acrabim até Berseba. Em Gaza, na planície filisteia, uma estrada que saía da estrada principal levava ao SE, a Berseba. E, ligando-a com o restante de Judá, uma estrada ia de Berseba para o NE, subindo o platô nas montanhas de Judá até Jerusalém e outros pontos mais para o N. — Gên 22:19.

Esse lugar é primeiro mencionado em relação com Agar, que vagueou com seu filho Ismael "pelo ermo de Berseba", quando despedida por Abraão. (Gên 21:14) Pensando que seu filho fosse morrer de sede, ela se afastou de Ismael, mas Deus ouviu o menino e dirigiu Agar para um poço. (Gên 21:19) Este talvez fosse um poço cavado anteriormente por Abraão, mas naquele tempo ainda sem nome, em vista do relato que segue. Alguns dos filisteus apoderaram-se à força dum poço nesta região, aparentemente sem que o soubesse Abimeleque, rei de Gerar. Ele e Ficol, chefe de seu exército, dirigiram-se a Abraão, a fim de propor-lhe um pacto de paz. Quando Abraão criticou severamente Abimeleque pelo ato de violência dos servos deste em apoderar-se do poço, Abimeleque jurou desconhecer isso, concluiu um pacto com Abraão e aceitou dele sete cordeiras, como evidência do direito de propriedade de Abraão sobre o poço. "É por isso que [Abraão] chamou aquele lugar de Berseba, porque ambos fizeram ali um juramento." (Gên 21:31) Abraão plantou então ali uma tamargueira e invocou "o nome de Jeová, o Deus que perdura indefinidamente". (Gên 21:33) Foi de Berseba que Abraão se dirigiu a Moriá, para oferecer Isaque como sacrifício, e voltou para morar ali. — Gên 22:19.

Quando Abraão morreu, os filisteus taparam os poços que ele cavara. Mas, quando Isaque, mais tarde, passou a morar ali, ele passou a reabri-los e a chamá-los pelos nomes que seu pai lhes havia dado. (Gên 26:18) Sofrendo a oposição dos filisteus, retirou-se de lugar em lugar até que encontrou amplo espaço em Reobote, e, mais tarde, subiu a Berseba. (Gên 26:22, 23) Enquanto os servos de Isaque escavavam um poço em Berseba, Abimeleque, possivelmente outro rei de Gerar (com o mesmo nome ou título que aquele que havia pactuado com Abraão, ou talvez o mesmo), veio junto com Ficol, o chefe do seu exército, a Isaque, a fim de propor-lhe um pacto de paz. Depois de festejarem e beberem, acordaram bem cedo na manhã seguinte e fizeram declarações juramentadas um ao outro. Nesse mesmo dia, o poço produziu água, e Isaque chamou-o de Siba, significando "Juramento; ou: Sete", e referindo-se a um juramento ou uma declaração jurada por sete coisas. (Gên 26:31-33; veja SIBA.) Por usar "Siba" (outra forma do nome Seba), Isaque evidentemente preservava o nome Berseba, que Abraão dera a esse lugar. A possibilidade de este ser o mesmo poço anteriormente escavado por Abraão e reescavado pelos homens de Isaque é indicada em Gênesis 26:18, supracitado. Durante os anos em que Isaque viveu ali, ele abençoou Jacó em lugar de Esaú, e enviou-o a Harã, para tomar uma esposa dentre as filhas de Labão, irmão de sua mãe. (Gên 28:1, 2, 10) Mais tarde, Jacó, já então conhecido como Israel, ofereceu sacrifícios ao Deus de Isaque em Berseba, em caminho para juntar-se a José seu filho, no Egito. — Gên 46:1-5.

Nos mais de 250 anos que se passaram até que Canaã foi repartida entre as 12 tribos de Israel, havia crescido uma cidade em Berseba (Jos 15:21, 28), a qual foi designada à tribo de Simeão, como cidade encravada no território de Judá. (Jos 19:1, 2) Ali os filhos de Samuel oficiavam como juízes. (1Sa 8:1, 2) Elias, fugindo da ira da Rainha Jezabel, deixou seu ajudante em Berseba e se dirigiu para o sul, atravessando o Negebe em direção ao Horebe. (1Rs 19:3) Zibia, a mãe do Rei Jeoás de Judá, era deste lugar. (2Rs 12:1) Berseba foi denominada de ponto terminal do registro do povo, feito por Davi, em todo o Israel (2Sa 24:2, 7), e de ponto inicial das reformas na adoração feitas por Jeosafá. (2Cr 19:4) As referências de Amós a Berseba, nos seus dias, sugerem fortemente que era então um lugar de atividades religiosas impuras (Am 5:5; 8:14), talvez associadas, de algum modo, com o idólatra reino setentrional. Estatuetas da deusa Astarte (ou Astarteia) foram escavadas ali, assim como em muitas outras partes de Israel. Daquele tempo em diante, exceto pela breve menção da reocupação da cidade e de suas aldeias dependentes após o exílio babilônico (Ne 11:27), seu nome desaparece do registro bíblico.

A cidade, durante o período dos reis, tem sido identificada com Tell es-Saba' (Tel Be'er Sheva'), 4 km ao L da atual Be'er Sheva'. Escritores seculares do quarto século EC descrevem Berseba como sendo então uma grande aldeia, ou cidade, com uma guarnição romana. Hoje, ela retém sua posição como cidade de encruzilhada e mercado importante. Embora a bacia de Berseba seja terra de estepe, recebendo apenas cerca de 150 a 200 mm de chuva por ano, o solo é produtivo, e há boas fazendas na região. Encontram-se ali diversos poços, tendo o maior deles quase 4 m de diâmetro, a parte inferior escavada através de cerca de 5 m de rocha maciça.

BESAI. Antepassado de certos netineus que retornaram de Babilônia a Jerusalém, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:1, 2, 43, 49; Ne 7:6, 7, 46, 52.

BESODEIAS [No Grupo Íntimo de Jah]. Pai do Mesulão que ajudou a consertar "o Portão da Cidade Antiga", sob a direção de Neemias. — Ne 3:6.

BESOR, VALE DA TORRENTE DE. Um vale de torrente mencionado apenas em conexão com a perseguição movida por Davi aos amalequitas incursores, que haviam capturado e incendiado a cidade de Ziclague. (1Sa 30:1, 10, 21) É evidente que os incursores se dirigiram então para o sul, para o seu próprio território no Negebe, mas não se declara a direção exata do seu movimento. Portanto, o vale da torrente de Besor, o ponto em que 200 homens do exército de Davi pararam por estarem esgotados, não pode ser identificado com certeza. Em geral, porém, considera-se provável estar ligado ao uádi Ghazzeh (Nahal Besor), um grande uádi ao SO de Ziclague, que desemboca no Mediterrâneo abaixo de Gaza.

A ação de Davi, depois da sua vitória sobre os amalequitas, em compartilhar os despojos com aqueles dos seus guerreiros que haviam permanecido no vale, guardando a bagagem, evidentemente seguiu o princípio declarado anteriormente por Jeová em Números 31:27, após a vitória dos israelitas sobre Midiã. Davi, depois, manteve este costume "estabelecido como regulamento e como decisão judicial para Israel". — 1Sa 30:21-25.

BESTIALIDADE. Relações sexuais desnaturais de um homem ou uma mulher com um animal. A Lei mosaica condenava enfaticamente esta prática pervertida, sentenciando o culpado e o animal à morte. "Quando um homem dá a sua emissão seminal a um animal, sem falta deve ser morto, e deveis matar o animal. E quando uma mulher se aproxima de algum animal para ter contato com ele, tens de matar a mulher e o animal." — Le 20:15, 16; 18:23; Êx 22:19; De 27:21.

Esta proibição, junto com as demais leis de Deus que governam as relações sexuais, elevavam os israelitas a um nível moral muito mais elevado do que o de seus vizinhos. No Egito, a bestialidade constituía parte da idólatra adoração de animais; historiadores atestam, por exemplo, a coabitação de mulheres com cabritos. Práticas similares prevaleciam também entre os cananeus (Le 18:23-30), e em Roma, conforme se relata.

A prática depravada da bestialidade está incluída na palavra grega por·nei·a, traduzida "fornicação". (Veja FORNICAÇÃO.) Quem se entrega a tal prática imunda é moralmente impuro, e se um membro da congregação cristã se entregasse a tal prática, estaria sujeito a ser desassociado. — Ef 5:3; Col 3:5, 6.

BETÁ. Cidade mencionada junto com Berotai em conexão com a derrota infligida por Davi a Hadadezer, rei de Zobá. (2Sa 8:8) O lugar é desconhecido, embora o reino arameu de Zobá seja considerado como tendo estado ao N de Damasco. Num relato paralelo da vitória de Davi, 1 Crônicas 18:8

refere-se a "Tibate", e alguns lexicógrafos consideram ser Tibate a versão mais correta. A Pesito siríaca reza "Tebá", em vez de Betá, em 2 Samuel 8:8. Deve-se notar que, pela simples inversão das primeiras duas consoantes hebraicas, Betá torna-se Tebá. Visto que Betá (ou Tibate) era uma cidade arameia, alguns peritos a associam com Tebá, Filho de Naor. — Gên 22:24; veja TIBATE.

BETABARA. Veja BETÂNIA N.º 2.

BETÂNIA.

1. Uma aldeia a "cerca de três quilômetros" de Jerusalém, sendo a medida usada pelo escritor do Evangelho, naquele tempo, o estádio romano, equivalendo os "quinze estádios" mencionados por ele a uns 2,8 km. (Jo 11:18 n.) Encontrava-se na encosta L do monte das Oliveiras, num antigo acesso a Jerusalém, vindo de Jericó e do Jordão. (Mr 10:46; 11:1; Lu 19:29) Atualmente, o local é assinalado pela pequena aldeia de el-ʽAzariyeh (El ʽEizariya), nome árabe que significa "o Lugar de Lázaro", situada a 2,5 km ESE do monte do Templo. — FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 950.

Assim como Cafarnaum era o lar de Jesus na Galileia (Mr 2:1), Betânia poderia ser chamada de seu lar na Judeia. Era a "certa aldeia" que Jesus visitava durante seu posterior ministério na Judeia (aproximadamente de outubro a dezembro de 32 EC), o lugar do lar de Marta, Maria e Lázaro, que se tornaram amigos amados de Jesus. (Lu 10:38) Ali Jesus, mais tarde, realizou o milagre da ressurreição de Lázaro. — Jo 11:1, 38-44.

Seis dias antes da última Páscoa de Jesus (no começo do sábado semanal, em 8 de nisã de 33 EC), Jesus chegou a Betânia. (Jo 12:1) Após o sábado (isto é, no começo de 9 de nisã) ele usufruiu uma refeição noturna no lar de Simão, o leproso, da qual participaram Marta, Maria e Lázaro. Este foi o cenário de Maria ungi-lo com óleo dispendioso, o que provocou a objeção hipócrita de Judas e a censura que Jesus lhe deu. (Mt 26:6-13; Mr 14:3-9; Jo 12:2-8) Também, nesta ocasião, já chegara a Jerusalém a notícia de que Jesus estava na vizinhança, e visto que terminara então o sábado, uma grande multidão de judeus afluiu para ver a ele e o ressuscitado Lázaro. (Jo 12:9) No dia seguinte (ainda o 9 de nisã), Jesus fez a sua triunfal entrada em Jerusalém, montado num jumento, evidentemente cruzando o monte das Oliveiras pelo caminho que saía de Betânia. (Mt 21:1-11; Mr 11:1-11; Lu 19:29-38) Foi em caminho de Betânia para Jerusalém, em 10 de nisã, que Jesus amaldiçoou a figueira infrutífera, que já havia murchado totalmente quando ele e seus discípulos passaram por ela no dia seguinte (11 de nisã). — Mr 11:12-14, 19, 20.

Durante os últimos dias da sua vida terrestre, Jesus passava o dia em atividade em Jerusalém, mas à noite ele e seus discípulos deixavam a cidade grande para se alojar na modesta aldeia de Betânia, na encosta L do monte das Oliveiras, sem dúvida, no lar de Marta, Maria e Lázaro. — Mr 11:11; Mt 21:17; Lu 21:37.

Quarenta dias depois da ressurreição de Jesus, quando chegou o tempo de ele se despedir dos seus discípulos, ele os levou, não ao templo, que então já havia sido abandonado por Deus, mas, antes, "para fora, até Betânia", no monte das Oliveiras, onde começou a sua ascensão. — Lu 24:50-53; At 1:9-12.

Crê-se, em geral, que a cidade benjamita de Ananias (Ne 11:32) era o lugar antigo que correspondia à aldeia de Betânia nos dias de Jesus.

2. Betânia, do outro lado do Jordão, é mencionada apenas uma vez (Jo 1:28) como o lugar onde João estava batizando, e, pelo que parece, é o lugar onde João identificou Jesus a seus discípulos como "o Cordeiro de Deus". (Jo 1:35, 36) No terceiro século, Orígenes substituiu o nome Betânia por Betabara, e a versão Trinitariana segue esta tradução; no entanto, os manuscritos mais fidedignos rezam Betânia. O lugar desta Betânia além ou ao L do Jordão é desconhecido. Alguns, favorecendo o lugar tradicional do batismo de Jesus, o situariam além do Jordão defronte de Jericó. No entanto, o registro em João 1:29, 35, 43; 2:1, parece indicar um lugar mais perto da Galileia; ao passo que o de João 10:40 e 11:3, 6, 17, talvez sugira que se encontrava a dois dias de distância de Betânia, onde morava Lázaro. Portanto, um lugar um pouco ao S do mar da Galileia parece mais provável, mas não é possível fazer uma identificação positiva.

BETE [ב]. A segunda letra do alfabeto hebraico. O nome dado à letra significa "casa".

Tem som bilabial parecido ao da letra "b" em português quando há um pontinho no centro deste caráter hebraico, para endurecer a pronúncia da letra. Sem o pontinho, tem um som mais suave, parecido ao do "v", como na palavra "vinha".

No texto hebraico, a palavra inicial em cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:9-16 começa com esta letra, em harmonia com o estilo acróstico do salmo. — Veja HEBRAICO.

BETE-AFRA. Veja AFRA.

BETE-ANATE [Casa de Anate]. Uma das cidades fortificadas designadas à tribo de Naftali (Jos 19:38, 39), mas da qual não expulsaram os habitantes cananeus, antes, submeteram-nos a trabalho forçado. (Jz 1:33) É possivelmente identificada com Safed el-Battikh, 24 km ao ESE de Tiro.

A cidade é mencionada na lista de diversos governantes egípcios do período do "Novo Império".

BETE-ANOTE [Casa de Respostas [isto é, a orações]]. Uma das cidades designadas à tribo de Judá, na região montanhosa do território dessa tribo. (Jos 15:59) É atualmente identificada com Khirbet Beit ʽAnun, a uns 6 km ao NNE de Hébron.

BETE-ARABÁ [Casa da Planície Desértica]. Uma das seis cidades dentro do território de Judá descritas como situadas "no ermo". (Jos 15:61) É usada na descrição da fronteira mútua das tribos de Benjamim e Judá. (Jos 15:6) Embora alistada dentro do quinhão tribal de Judá, é depois mencionada como pertencente a Benjamim, talvez para indicar o lugar como cidade encravada dos benjamitas. (Jos 18:21, 22) Evidência remanescente do nome talvez esteja em ʽAin el-Gharabah, uma fonte do lado N do uádi el Qilt, a uns 6 km ao ESE de Jericó. Esta localização a colocaria na região desértica na extremidade N do Mar Morto.

BETE-ARBEL. Veja ARBEL, CASA DE.

BETE-ASMAVETE (OU BETE-AZMAVETE). Veja ASMAVETE N.º 5.

BETE-ÁVEN [Casa do Que É Prejudicial (Algo Prejudicial)].

1. Cidade no território da tribo de Benjamim, perto da antiga cidade de Ai. (Jos 7:2; 18:11, 12) Encontrava-se no ermo, situada ao L de Betel e ao O de Micmás, e ficou envolvida numa batalha notável em que Saul e Jonatã expulsaram os filisteus desta última cidade. — 1Sa 13:5; 14:23.

2. Ao lamentar as condições idólatras em que Israel se encontrava no seu tempo, o profeta Oseias menciona Bete-Áven junto com Gibeá e Ramá, outras cidades de destaque em Benjamim. (Os 4:15; 5:8; 10:5, 8) Parece que o profeta aplica o nome em sentido depreciativo à cidade de Betel, que anteriormente havia sido uma 'casa de Deus', mas que então se tornara 'casa do que é prejudicial', por causa da adoração do bezerro instituída ali. — 1Rs 12:28-30.

BETE-BAAL-MEOM. Veja BAAL-MEOM.

BETE-BARA [Casa de Bara]. Quando as forças de Gideão perseguiram os midianitas em fuga, Gideão mandou avisar os homens de Efraim para que capturassem "as águas até Bete-Bara e o Jordão" (Jz 7:24), evidentemente para impedir que o inimigo atravessasse o Jordão. Visto que a batalha foi travada na baixada de Jezreel (Jz 6:33), isto indicaria um lugar ao O do Jordão. A identificação é desconhecida, mas sugere-se um lugar entre o uádi Farʽah e o Jordão. Uma tática similar foi empregada por Eúde, na luta contra os moabitas, quando "capturavam os vaus do Jordão contra os moabitas". — Jz 3:27, 28.

BETE-BIRI. Cidade na região do Negebe, de Judá, mas designada aos filhos de Simeão. (1Cr 4:24, 31) Na lista paralela de cidades, em Josué 19:6, ela aparece como Bete-Lebaote, e alguns sugerem que Bete-Biri talvez seja um nome pós-exílico do mesmo lugar, usado por Esdras, como escritor de Crônicas. A evidência do nome talvez reste no de Jebel el-Biri, um monte a uns 40 km ao SO de Berseba. Nesta base, alguns propõem que Bete-Biri encontrava-se neste monte ou perto dele. — Veja BETE-LEBAOTE.

BETE-CAR [Casa do Carneiro]. Um ponto mencionado no relato da derrota que Israel infligiu aos filisteus em Mispá. Os israelitas perseguiram os filisteus em fuga "até ao sul de Bete-Car". (1Sa 7:11) Muitos relacionam Bete-Car com Bete-Haquerem (Je 6:1; Ne 3:14), identificada por alguns com ʽAin Karim (ʽEn Kerem), a uns 7,5 km ao OSO do monte do Templo em Jerusalém. Seguirem tal rota teria levado os filisteus de Mispá através do profundo uádi Beit Hanina para baixo ao vale de Soreque, e através dele até as planícies da Filístia. — Veja BETE-HAQUEREM.

BETE-DAGOM [Casa de Dagom].

1. Cidade no quinhão de território designado à tribo de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 41) Embora seja alistada junto com outras cidades da Sefelá ou região da terra baixa, o lugar sugerido encontra-se nas planícies da Filístia em Khirbet Dajun, a pouca distância ao SO da moderna Beit Dajan (Bet Dagan) e a uns 10 km ao SE de Tel Aviv-Yafo. Neste respeito, pode-se notar que outras cidades da planície filisteia estão alistadas nos versículos subsequentes. (Jos 15:45-47) Isto a tornaria uma cidade encravada no território de Dã, o que parece ter sido também o caso de Gedera. — Jos 15:36.

2. Cidade no território de Aser, evidentemente na parte oriental dele e perto da sua fronteira com Zebulão. (Jos 19:24, 27) A identificação é incerta.

BETE-DIBLATAIM [Casa de Diblataim]. Cidade de Moabe (Je 48:22), cuja localização é incerta. Entretanto, talvez fosse o lugar chamado Almom-Diblataim, mencionado em Números 33:46. Uma cidade chamada Bete-Diblatene é mencionada na inscrição da Pedra Moabita como tendo sido construída por Mesa, rei de Moabe.

BETE-ÉDEN [Casa de Éden]. Cidade ou região da Síria mencionada em Amós 1:5, na mensagem daquele profeta contra Damasco. É agora em geral associada com a Bit-adini das inscrições assírias, uma região situada entre os rios Eufrates e Balique. Esta identificação, porém, só pode ser aceitável se se entender que "Damasco" na profecia representa os reinos arameus (sírios) em geral, visto que o reino de Bit-adini se encontrava uns 480 km ao N de Damasco. Damasco, de fato, é chamada de "a cabeça da Síria" em Isaías 7:8.

A predição de Amós (provavelmente c. 804 AEC), de que "o povo da Síria terá de ir como exilados para Quir", evidentemente cumpriu-se no tempo do monarca assírio Tiglate-Pileser III, durante o reinado do Rei Acaz (761-746 AEC). — 2Rs 16:9.

"Os filhos de Éden", mencionados em 2 Reis 19:12 e em Isaías 37:12, podem referir-se ao povo de Bete-Éden, talvez ao "Éden" de Ezequiel 27:23. — Veja ÉDEN N.º 2.

BETE-EMEQUE [Casa da Baixada]. Cidade no território da tribo de Aser. (Jos 19:24, 27) É atualmente identificada com Tell Mimas (Tel Bet Ha'Emeq), a uns 8 km ao NE de Aco. O nome original parece ser refletido no da vizinha aldeia árabe de 'Amqa, agora abandonada.

BETE-EZEL. Cidade, evidentemente em Judá, mencionada apenas na profecia de Miqueias, que prediz a calamidade que sobreviria às infiéis Samaria e Jerusalém. (Miq 1:11) O profeta repetidas vezes faz um trocadilho no uso dos nomes de diversas cidades, nesta parte da profecia, de modo que na realidade ele diz: "Revolve-te no próprio pó na casa de Afra [provavelmente significando "Pó"]. Faze a travessia em vergonhosa nudez, ó moradora de Safir [significando "Elegante; Refinada; Agradável"]. A moradora de Zaanã não saiu. O lamento de Bete-Ezel [significando "Casa Vizinha (ao Lado)"] tirará de vós o seu lugar de parada. Pois a moradora de Marote [duma raiz que significa "ser amargo"] esperava o bem, mas foi o mal que desceu de Jeová ao portão de Jerusalém." (Miq 1:10-12) O aviso do profeta, dirigido aos que haviam de sofrer a calamidade, na realidade lhes dizia que o lamento se estenderia até Jerusalém.

Embora a identificação seja apenas provisória, Bete-Ezel tem sido situada no lugar da atual Deir el-'Asal, a uns 16 km ao OSO de Hébron.

BETE-GADER [Casa do Muro de Pedra]. Nome que aparece na genealogia de Judá. (1Cr 2:50, 51) O nome parece ser mais geográfico do que pessoal, induzindo alguns peritos a considerá-lo relacionado com uma cidade em Judá. Bete-Gader possivelmente estava relacionado com Geder, uma cidade cujo rei estava entre os vencidos por Josué na região ao O do Jordão. — Jos 12:13.

BETE-GAMUL [Casa do Desmamado (ou: Daquele Que Recebe o Devido Tratamento)]. Cidade mencionada em conexão com as pronúncias de Jeová contra Moabe. Ela está alistada junto com Díbon e outras cidades da "terra da planície" de Moabe. (Je 48:21, 23) Em geral é identificada com Jumaiyil, na região planaltina de Moabe, a uns 13 km ao L de Díbon (Dhiban). Esta região, logo ao N do Árnon, mostra evidência de intenso cultivo nos tempos antigos.

BETE-GILGAL. Veja GILGAL N.º 1.

BETE-HAQUEREM [Casa da Vinha]. Um lugar perto de Jerusalém, mencionado por Jeremias como local adequado para se levantar um sinal de fogo, a fim de avisar a respeito de forças inimigas em avanço desde o N. (Je 6:1) Em tempos pós-exílicos, um distrito de Judá levava este nome, tendo a Malquijá por "príncipe". (Ne 3:14) Por se mencionar Tecoa junto com Bete-Haquerem em Jeremias 6:1, alguns acham que Bete-Haquerem encontrava-se ao S de Jerusalém, entre esta cidade e Tecoa. Jerônimo, do quarto século EC, referiu-se a ele neste lugar pelo nome de Betacarma. Em harmonia com tais opiniões, propôs-se o lugar de Khirbet Salih (Ramat Rahel), 4,5 km ao SSO do monte do Templo. Outros, porém, não acham que a menção de Tecoa necessariamente indique uma proximidade geográfica a Bete-Haquerem, e preferem o lugar de 'Ain Karim ('En Kerem) (que significa "Fonte da Vinha") a 7,5 km ao OSO do monte do Templo. Esta é uma área fértil com olivais e vinhedos, e jaz ao sopé de Jebel 'Ali, de cujo cume se pode ver o monte das Oliveiras, parte de Jerusalém, e, ao O, o mar Mediterrâneo. Alguns sugerem que os montes de grandes pedras encontrados no cume tenham sido usados para acender fogos como sinais, tais como os mencionados por Jeremias. — Veja BETE-CAR.

BETE-HARÃ. Cidade no lado oriental do Jordão, no território solicitado pela tribo de Gade por causa dos seus bons pastos. Ela foi construída ou reconstruída pelos gaditas, e embora se encontrasse numa baixada, tornou-se uma das suas cidades fortificadas. — Núm 32:1, 34, 36; Jos 13:27.

O nome parece ter continuado naquele de Tell er-Rameh, no uádi er-Rameh (uádi Husban), nas planícies de Moabe, mas o lugar original de Bete-Harã é identificado com Tell Iktanu, a uns 13 km ao ENE do ponto em que o Jordão desemboca no Mar Morto. O lugar encontrava-se perto de famosas fontes termais, o que talvez explique em parte por que o Rei Herodes construiu um palácio nesta região. Na primeira parte da Era Comum, o lugar de Tell er-Rameh era conhecido como Lívias, nome que lhe foi dado por Herodes Ântipas, e posteriormente seu nome foi mudado para Júlias.

BETE-HOGLA. Cidade fronteiriça de Benjamim, situada no canto sudeste do território desta tribo e nos limites entre Benjamim e Judá. (Jos 15:1, 6; 18:11, 19, 21) Os peritos, em geral, situam Bete-Hogla perto de ʽEin Hajla, a uns 8 km ao SE de Jericó.

BETE-HOROM. Duas cidades, Bete-Horom Alta e Baixa, estavam estrategicamente situadas na antiga rota que subia de Jope e da planície marítima pelo vale de Aijalom a Betel, ou a Gibeão e Jerusalém. Hoje, os lugares estão ocupados por duas aldeias modernas, a alta: Beit ʽUr el Fauqa (Bet Horon ʽElyon), e a baixa: Beit ʽUr et Tahta (Bet Horon Tahton). Bete-Horom Alta encontra-se assim a uns 16 km ao NO de Jerusalém, estando Bete-Horom Baixa a 2,5 km ao ONO de Bete-Horom Alta, ocupando ambas o cume de morros.

A construção (ou fundação) destes lugares é atribuída originalmente a Seerá, filha ou neta de Efraim. (1Cr 7:22-24) Estas cidades constituíam parte da fronteira sulina da tribo de Efraim (Jos 16:3, 5), ao passo que se diz que a fronteira da tribo de Benjamim chegava ao "monte que está ao sul de Bete-Horom Baixa". (Jos 18:13, 14) Isto parece situar ambas as cidades apropriadamente dentro da herança de Efraim. Bete-Horom, ou talvez apenas uma das cidades, foi depois dada aos levitas dos filhos de Coate. — Jos 21:20, 22; 1Cr 6:68.

Visto que estavam situadas na principal rota que subia da planície marítima à região montanhosa, essas cidades presenciavam frequentemente a passagem de forças combatentes. No tempo da conquista pelos israelitas, Josué derrotou cinco reis amorreus, que se aliaram para a guerra contra Gibeão, indo "persegui-los pelo caminho da subida de Bete-Horom". Jeová fez ali com que grandes pedras de saraiva abatessem muitos dos amorreus, ao passo que fugiam ao longo da "descida de Bete-Horom". (Jos 10:6-12) A "descida de Bete-Horom" é considerada por alguns como referindo-se à descida da Bete-Horom Alta para a Bete-Horom Baixa, havendo uma diferença de 240 m na altitude entre os dois lugares.

Mais tarde, durante o reinado do Rei Saul, "a estrada de Bete-Horom" era uma das três rotas usadas por bandos saqueadores dos filisteus nas incursões feitas desde Micmás. (1Sa 13:16-18) O Rei Salomão construiu ou fortificou ambas as cidades, reforçando-as com muralhas, portas e tranca, sem dúvida achando que elas serviam para bloquear forças invasoras procedentes do Egito e da Filístia. (2Cr 8:5) Sisaque, do Egito, que invadiu Judá durante o reinado de Reoboão, alistou "Bete-Horom" como uma das cidades alegadamente conquistadas ou sob o seu domínio. (1Rs 14:25; 2Cr 12:2-9) Quando o Rei Amazias, de Judá, despediu as tropas mercenárias efraimitas antes de se empenhar na batalha com os edomitas, estes soldados procedentes do reino setentrional, com sua capital Samaria, expressaram sua ira acesa por causa da despedida por fazerem incursões contra cidades de Judá até Bete-Horom. — 2Cr 25:5-13.

BETE-JESIMOTE [Casa das Desolações]. O ponto mais sulino que o acampamento dos israelitas atingiu ao acamparem nas planícies de Moabe, antes de cruzarem o Jordão para Canaã. (Núm 33:48, 49) O acampamento estendia-se desde Bete-Jesimote até Abel-Sitim, uma distância de uns 8 km, segundo os locais sugeridos para estes lugares. Bete-Jesimote é atualmente identificado com Tell el-ʽAzeimeh, perto do canto NE do Mar Morto e 19 km ao SE de Jericó. Nas proximidades encontra-se Khirbet Sweimeh, a qual, como povoação romana, era conhecida pelo nome grego de Besimote. Na vizinhança encontra-se também uma fonte de forte vazão. Tell el-ʽAzeimeh está situada num platô sobranceira à planície e numa posição de poder proteger a saída de um dos vales de torrente que desce das montanhas para o L.

Bete-Jesimote fazia parte do domínio do Rei Síon, dos amorreus, e, depois da conquista daquela região pelos israelitas, ela foi designada à tribo de Rubem. (Jos 12:1-3; 13:15-21; compare isso com Jz 11:13-27.) No tempo do profeta Ezequiel, foi incluída com certas cidades de Moabe, situadas na encosta da sua fronteira e descrita como "o ornato da terra". (Ez 25:8-10) A profecia indica que Jeová faria com que estas cidades fronteiriças fossem abertas, expondo Moabe ao ataque pelos "orientais", ou "os filhos do Oriente", as tribos nômades que viviam no deserto arábico. (Veja Jz 6:3 n.; 8:10) Se não ocorreu antes, Moabe provavelmente tomou Bete-Jesimote e outras cidades de Rubem depois da deportação daquela tribo para a Assíria. — 1Cr 5:26.

BETEL [Casa de Deus].

1. Cidade destacada de Israel, mencionada com mais frequência na Bíblia do que qualquer outra, exceto Jerusalém. É identificada com as ruínas junto à aldeia moderna de Beitin, a cerca de 17 km ao N de Jerusalém. Encontrava-se assim, num cerro rochoso, no extremo sul da região montanhosa de Efraim, cerca de 900 m acima do nível do mar. A região circunvizinha, hoje, é bem árida, consistindo em um planalto pedregoso com vegetação esparsa. Todavia, a existência de várias fontes ali mostra que a antiga cidade possuía excelentes reservas de água.

A posição de Betel era estratégica e contribuía grandemente para sua importância. Situada no dorso da cadeia montanhosa central, estava situada na importante rota N-S que seguia a linha divisória de águas, percorrendo todo o caminho de Siquém para o sul, atravessando Betel, Jerusalém, Belém, Hébron e descendo até Berseba. (Veja Jz 21:19.) Outra rota conectava Betel com Jope, ao O, no Mediterrâneo, e com Jericó, ao L, perto do Jordão. Betel era assim uma cidade de encruzilhada, como eram Samaria, Jerusalém, Hébron e Berseba. Adicionalmente, a evidência aponta que a região entre Jerusalém e Betel era uma de densa população, tendo maior concentração de cidades do que qualquer outra parte da Palestina.

As escavações arqueológicas realizadas em Beitin revelam-na como lugar de grande antiguidade, sugerindo-se que o povoado original remonta a cerca do século 21 AEC. Encontrou-se também evidência duma severa destruição e conflagração, que deixou escombros e cinzas de 1,5 m de profundidade em alguns pontos, e crê-se que isto, provavelmente, ocorreu durante a conquista de Canaã por parte de Israel.

Quando Abraão entrou em Canaã, ele parou em Siquém, e então passou para o S, "para a região montanhosa ao leste de Betel e armou a sua tenda com Betel ao oeste e Ai ao leste". (Gên 12:8) Depois de passar algum tempo no Egito, devido a uma fome em Canaã, Abraão de novo se fixou ao L de Betel, em companhia de seu sobrinho Ló. Visto que, em ambos os casos, Abraão armou sua tenda ao L de Betel, sugere-se que o local de seu acampamento era em Burj Beitin, a curta distância ao SE de Beitin, lugar que tem sido chamado de "um dos grandes mirantes da Palestina". (Encyclopœdia Biblica [Enciclopédia Bíblica], editada por T. K. Cheyne, Londres, 1899, Vol. I, col. 552) Pode ter sido deste ponto de observação que Abraão convidou Ló a escolher a direção em que iria ao separar-se de Abraão, com o resultado de que Ló "levantou assim os seus olhos e viu todo o Distrito do Jordão", e decidiu-se a favor desta região. (Gên 13:8-11) Depois disso, Jeová convidou Abraão a contemplar a terra em todas as direções, assegurando-lhe que seria uma herança para ele e sua semente, ou descendência. — Gên 13:14, 15.

Embora Moisés, ao compilar o relato de Gênesis, fale da cidade perto da qual Abraão acampou como "Betel", o registro subsequente mostra que seu nome cananeu original era "Luz". (Veja LUZ N.º 1.) Jacó pernoitou perto da cidade, ao viajar de Berseba para Harã, e, depois de ter um sonho sobre uma escada que alcançava os céus e ouvir a confirmação de Deus da promessa abraâmica, ergueu em seguida uma coluna e chamou esse local pelo nome de Betel, embora 'o nome da cidade fosse anteriormente Luz'. (Gên 28:10-19) Cerca de 20 anos depois, Deus falou a Jacó em Harã, identificando-se como aquele que falara a Jacó em Betel, e mandou-o voltar para Canaã. — Gên 31:13.

Após a desonra causada a Diná, em Siquém, e o ato de vingança executado pelos filhos de Jacó contra os siquemitas, Jacó recebeu de Deus a ordem de retornar a Betel. Depois de eliminar os artigos da religião falsa dos da sua casa e de seus servos, viajou para Betel sob a proteção divina, construiu ali um altar e redeclarou o nome que havia dado ao local anteriormente, chamando-o de El-Betel, que significa "O Deus de Betel". Ali morreu e foi sepultada Débora, ama-de-leite de Rebeca. Ali, também, Jeová confirmou a mudança do nome de Jacó para Israel, declarando de novo a promessa abraâmica. — Gên 35:1-16.

Séculos mais tarde, com a entrada da nação de Israel em Canaã (1473 AEC), o nome Betel é de novo usado para referir-se à cidade anteriormente chamada Luz, em vez de ao lugar do acampamento de Abraão e de Jacó. No relato do ataque contra Ai, o registro indica que os cananeus de Betel esforçaram-se a apoiar os homens daquela cidade vizinha, mas em vão. Se não foi naquela ocasião, então, num tempo posterior, o rei de Betel sofreu derrota diante das forças de Josué. (Jos 7:2; 8:9, 12, 17; 12:9, 16) Betel, depois disso, aparece como cidade limítrofe entre os territórios das tribos de Efraim e de Benjamim. É alistada como designada a Benjamim, mas o registro mostra que foi a casa de José (da qual Efraim fazia parte) que efetuou a conquista da cidade. (Jos 16:1, 2; 18:13, 21, 22; Jz 1:22-26) Deste ponto em diante, o nome Luz não é mais aplicado à cidade.

No período dos juízes, a morada de Débora, a profetisa, estava "entre Ramá e Betel, na região montanhosa de Efraim". (Jz 4:4, 5) Parece que, no tempo de se aplicar a justiça à tribo de Benjamim pelo crime cometido por seus membros, a Arca do Pacto fora temporariamente transportada de Silo para Betel, estando esta última cidade consideravelmente mais perto do cenário do conflito em torno de Gibeá, a cerca de 12 km ao S de Betel. — Jz 20:1, 18, 26-28; 21:2.

Betel encontrava-se no circuito percorrido por Samuel, quando julgava anualmente o povo naquela cidade, bem como em Gilgal e Mispá, e ainda era considerada como lugar favorito para a adoração. (1Sa 7:16; 10:3) No entanto, desde então até a divisão do reino (997 AEC), Betel só é mencionada em conexão com o posicionamento de tropas, pelo Rei Saul, em preparação para o combate contra os filisteus. — 1Sa 13:2.

Como uma das cidades principais do reino setentrional sob Jeroboão, Betel, outrora destacada como local de revelação por parte do verdadeiro Deus, tornou-se então renomada como centro da adoração falsa. Em Betel, no extremo S do recém-formado reino de Israel, e em Dã, no extremo N dele, Jeroboão colocou os bezerros de ouro, no seu esforço de dissuadir o povo de seu reino de ir ao templo em Jerusalém. (1Rs 12:27-29) Betel, com sua própria casa e altar religiosos, uma época festiva especialmente inventada, e sacerdotes escolhidos dentre as tribos não levíticas, tornou-se símbolo da crassa apostasia para com a adoração verdadeira. (1Rs 12:31-33) Jeová Deus não se demorou a expressar sua desaprovação mediante "um homem do verdadeiro Deus", enviado a Betel, a fim de proferir o julgamento contra o altar utilizado em conexão com a adoração do bezerro. Fender-se este altar serviu como portento, confirmando o cumprimento certo das palavras do profeta. Depois de partir de Betel, porém, este "homem do verdadeiro Deus" deixou-se induzir por um idoso profeta de Betel a aceitar e a agir segundo uma suposta mensagem recebida dum anjo, em violação das ordens diretas de Deus, com desastrosas consequências para si mesmo. Morto por um leão, foi sepultado em Betel, no local de sepultamento do próprio idoso profeta, que viu, em todos esses eventos, a certeza do cumprimento da palavra de Jeová, e, assim, solicitou que, ao morrer, seu próprio corpo fosse sepultado nesse mesmo local de sepultamento. — 1Rs 13:1-32.

O Rei Abias, de Judá, temporariamente tirou Betel e outras cidades do controle do reino setentrional (2Cr 13:19, 20), mas parece que Betel foi restaurada ao reino setentrional pelo menos no tempo do Rei Baasa, de Israel, visto que ele se esforçou a fortificar Ramá, bem ao sul de Betel. (1Rs 15:17; 2Cr 16:1) Embora o Rei Jeú mais tarde erradicasse a adoração de Baal de Israel, os bezerros de ouro continuaram incólumes em Dã e Betel. — 2Rs 10:28, 29.

Apesar da prevalência da adoração falsa ali, o registro mostra Betel como o lugar de um grupo de profetas, no tempo de Elias e Eliseu. Betel era também o domicílio do grupo de meninos escarnecedores que zombaram de Eliseu, o que custou a vida

Ruínas no lugar da antiga Betel.
Nesta cidade, na estrada que descia a Jerusalém, Jeroboão estabeleceu um centro para a adoração do bezerro.

de muitos deles, devido à execução divina. — 2Rs 2:1-3, 23, 24.

Os profetas Amós e Oseias, em fins do nono e meados do oitavo séculos AEC, proclamaram a condenação de Deus sobre a corrupção religiosa centralizada em Betel. Embora Oseias faça menção direta de Betel (que significa “Casa de Deus”) apenas quando relembra a revelação do próprio Deus ao fiel Jacó ali (Os 12:4), ele emprega evidentemente o nome “Bete-Áven”, que significa “Casa do Que É Prejudicial (Algo Prejudicial)”, como se aplicando a essa cidade e ao efeito das práticas da religião falsa por parte dela. (Os 4:15; 5:8) Ele avisa que seu ídolo-bezerro, servido por sacerdotes de deuses estrangeiros, tornar-se-á motivo para lamentação do Israel idólatra, seus altos serão aniquilados, e espinhos e abrolhos cobrirão seus altares; ao passo que as pessoas, confrontadas com o exílio na Assíria, bradarão aos montes: “Cobri-nos!”, e aos morros: “Caí sobre nós!” (Os 10:5-8; compare isso com Lu 23:30; Re 6:16.) O profeta Amós falou em sentido similar, mostrando que, não importava quão frequentes fossem os sacrifícios oferecidos pelo povo nos altares de Betel, suas peregrinações pias a esse lugar apenas constituíam transgressão, e avisando que a ira ardente de Jeová se acenderia inextinguivelmente contra eles. (Am 3:14; 4:4; 5:5, 6) Irado com esta profecia feita por Amós ali mesmo em Betel, o sacerdote apóstata, Amazias, acusou Amós de palavras sediciosas e ordenou-lhe que ‘voltasse para Judá, de onde viera’, e profetizasse ali: “Mas, não mais deves profetizar em Betel, pois é o santuário de um rei e é a casa de um reino.” — Am 7:10-13.

Betel continuou como santuário idólatra até a queda do reino setentrional diante da Assíria, em 740 AEC. Assim, Jeremias, mais de um século depois, podia referir-se a ela como exemplo de aviso para os que confiavam nos deuses falsos, para a derradeira vergonha deles. (Je 48:13) Mesmo depois disso, Betel continuou sendo centro religioso, pois o rei da Assíria mandou de volta a Israel um dos sacerdotes exilados, para ensinar ao povo afligido por leões “a religião do Deus do país”, e este sacerdote se fixou em Betel, ensinando ao povo “como deviam temer a Jeová”. Os resultados indicam claramente que ele era sacerdote do bezerro de ouro, visto que “tornaram-se tementes de Jeová, porém, mostraram ser adoradores dos seus próprios deuses”, e as coisas continuaram na mesma base falsa e idólatra iniciada por Jeroboão. — 2Rs 17:25, 27-33.

Em cumprimento da profecia de Oseias, o bezerro de ouro de Betel tinha sido levado embora para o rei da Assíria (Os 10:5, 6), mas o altar original de Jeroboão ainda estava ali no tempo do Rei Josias, de Judá. Durante ou após o 18.º ano do governo de Josias (642 AEC), ele estendeu o expurgo da religião falsa a Betel e também às cidades de Samaria. Josias destruiu o local da adoração idólatra em Betel, queimando primeiro os ossos dos túmulos próximos sobre o altar, destarte dessagrando-o, em cumprimento da profecia feita pelo “homem do verdadeiro Deus” mais de três séculos antes. O único túmulo poupado foi o do “homem do verdadeiro Deus”, desse modo poupando também os ossos do idoso profeta que ocupava o mesmo túmulo. — 2Rs 22:3; 23:15-18; 1Rs 13:2, 29-32.

Homens de Betel achavam-se entre os israelitas que retornaram do exílio em Babilônia (Esd 2:1, 28; Ne 7:32), e Betel foi repovoada por benjamitas. (Ne 11:31) Durante o período macabeu, foi fortificada pelo general sírio Baquides (c. 160 AEC) e foi mais tarde capturada pelo general romano Vespasiano, antes de este se tornar imperador de Roma.

2. Uma das cidades à qual Davi enviou presentes após a sua vitória sobre os amalequitas. (1Sa 30:18, 26, 27) Estar ela incluída nos “lugares onde Davi havia andado, ele e seus homens”, parece indicar que se trata do lugar em outra parte chamado Betul ou Betuel, uma cidade simeonita no território de Judá. — 1Sa 30:31; Jos 19:1, 4; 1Cr 4:30; veja BETUEL N.º 2.

BETE-LEBAOTE [Casa de Leoas]. Cidade alistada entre os lugares entregues à tribo de Simeão como cidades encravadas no território de Judá. (Jos 19:1, 6) É mencionada entre Hazar-Susa e Saruem, e isto indica um lugar na região do Negebe, evidentemente ao O ou SO de Berseba. Em Josué 15:32, evidentemente aparece simplesmente como Lebaote, ao passo que em 1 Crônicas 4:31 Bete-Lebaote é substituído pelo nome “Bete-Biri”. Este último nome talvez fosse um nome pós-exílico do mesmo lugar. — Veja BETE-BIRI.

BETE-MAACÁ. Veja ABEL-BETE-MAACÁ.

BETE-MARCABOTE [Casa dos Carros]. Uma das cidades encravadas de Simeão, que lhe foi dada dentro do território da tribo de Judá. (Jos 19:1, 5; 1Cr 4:31) No relato paralelo sobre as cidades originalmente designadas a Judá (Jos 15:31), o lugar de Bete-Marcabote possivelmente é tomado por Madmana. Se Bete-Marcabote for a mesma Madmana, então, evidentemente, encontrava-se na estrada principal que levava de Berseba a Jerusalém e a lugares ao N, e o nome Bete-Marcabote talvez seja um nome secundário para Madmana. O nome da cidade alistada depois de Bete-Marcabote, Hazar-Susa (ou: Hazar-Susim), significa “Pátio (Povoação) da Égua (ou: dos Cavalos)”. Alguns sugerem que ambos os lugares eram postos e pontos de parada para cavalos e carros, que percorriam as antigas rotas entre a Palestina e o Egito. Carros eram também usados para a guerra (Jz 1:19), e Bete-Marcabote talvez fosse uma cidade-fortaleza dos cananeus, da qual seus carros de guerra podiam sair para as planícies na região de Berseba. — Veja MADMANA N.º 2.

BETE-MEOM [forma abreviada de Bete-Baal-Meom]. Cidade de Moabe mencionada em Jeremias 48:23, provavelmente a mesma que Baal-Meom ou Bete-Baal-Meom. — Veja BAAL-MEOM.

BETE-MERAQUE [Casa Longínqua; Casa Distante]. Quando o Rei Davi se retirou de Jerusalém por causa da rebelião de seu filho Absalão, ele parou em Bete-Meraque, talvez a última casa de Jerusalém na direção do monte das Oliveiras, antes de cruzar o vale do Cédron. (2Sa 15:17, 23) Parece que foi neste ponto que o Rei Davi revistou suas forças, ao passo que cruzavam o vale, o que indica que Davi não estava empenhado numa fuga desordenada, em pânico, mas, antes, fazia uma retirada ordeira da cidade. — 2Sa 15:18-26.

BETE-MILO. Veja MILO.

BÉTEN [Pistácio]. Cidade mencionada por nome apenas em Josué 19:25; uma das cidades fronteiriças de Aser. Sua localização é incerta, visto que o lugar de diversas outras cidades mencionadas na lista é desconhecido. Entretanto, em geral é identificada com Khirbet Ibtin, a uns 17 km ao S de Aco e a 13 km ao SE de Haifa, na extremidade meridional da planície de Aco.

BETE-NINRA [Casa do Leopardo]. Cidade designada à tribo de Gade ao L do Jordão, também chamada simplesmente Ninra. (Núm 32:3, 34, 36) É descrita como ficando na "baixada" e como anteriormente fazendo parte do domínio do Rei Síon. (Jos 13:27) O nome antigo parece estar preservado na moderna Tell Nimrin, situada no lado S do uádi Nimrin, mas o lugar original evidentemente é Tell Bleibil, a uns 2,5 km ao NE, no lado N do uádi, onde as investigações mostram evidência de ocupação durante o período israelita, seguida por abandono. Encontrava-se assim a uns 19 km ao ENE de Jericó.

BETE-PAZES [Casa de Destroçamento]. Cidade de fronteiriça de Issacar. (Jos 19:17, 21) Seu lugar é incerto, alguns favorecendo Kerm el-Hadetheh, perto do lugar sugerido para En-Hadá, mencionada junto com Bete-Pazes.

BETE-PELETE [Casa de Fuga]. Cidade na parte meridional da herança de Judá. (Jos 15:21, 27) Estava entre as cidades de Judá reocupadas após o exílio babilônico. (Ne 11:26) As outras cidades alistadas com ela indicam que se encontrava na vizinhança de Berseba, mas a identificação é incerta.

BETE-PEOR [Casa de Peor]. No último ano da sua peregrinação no ermo, a nação de Israel estava acampada "no vale defronte de Bete-Peor". (De 3:29) Bete-Peor talvez fosse uma cidade situada nas encostas de Peor. Tanto o monte como a cidade talvez estivessem associados com a adoração do "Baal de Peor". Conforme relatado em Números 25:1-9, os israelitas se deixaram envolver nos ritos imorais relacionados com essa adoração. — Veja BAAL DE PEOR.

Foi nas planícies de Moabe, na região do Jordão, que Moisés declarou novamente a Lei a Israel, e, depois, Moisés foi enterrado "no vale da terra de Moabe defronte de Bete-Peor". Assim parece que Bete-Peor se encontrava na "terra de Moabe", quer dizer, em terras que os moabitas haviam ocupado, mas no território mais recentemente controlado pelo Rei Síon, dos amorreus, isto é, até a sua derrota pela nação de Israel. (De 4:46; 34:6) Ela foi mais tarde designada à tribo de Rubem, sendo mencionada junto com "as encostas do Pisga, e Bete-Jesimote". — Jos 13:15, 20.

Todos esses textos indicam um lugar perto da extremidade NE do Mar Morto, e confrontando as planícies de Moabe. O lugar exato é incerto. Não obstante, Eusébio referiu-se a tal lugar a umas seis milhas romanas (9 km) ao L de Lívias (a moderna Tell er-Rameh). (Onomasticon [Onomástico], 48, 3-5) Nesta base, alguns sugerem uma identificação com Khirbet esh-Sheikh-Jayil, a uns 5 km ao ONO do lugar tradicional do monte Nebo. Este lugar se encontra nas encostas dum cume que pode ter sido o "Peor" ao qual Balaão foi levado como o último lugar de onde amaldiçoar Israel. Se esta localização for correta, então o "vale defronte de Bete-Peor" provavelmente seria o uádi Husban. — Núm 23:28; De 4:46; veja PEOR.

BETE-RAFA [Casa de Rafa]. O nome aparece em 1 Crônicas 4:12, onde se diz que Estom tornou-se "pai de Bete-Rafa". O uso de "Bete" (que significa "Casa") no nome tem induzido muitos comentadores a encarar isso como aplicando-se a uma "casa" familiar ou a um lugar. O Commentary on the Old Testament (Comentário sobre o Velho Testamento, 1973, Vol. III, 1 Crônicas, p. 88), de Keil e Delitzsch, observa: "Estom gerou a casa (a família) de Rafa, sobre a qual também não se diz mais nada; porque eles nem podem ser relacionados com o Rafa benjamita (viii. 2), nem com os filhos de Rafa (xx. 4, 6, 8)."

Bete-Seã, construída sobre esta elevação, dominava a entrada oriental do vale de Jezreel.

BETE-REOBE. [Casa da Praça Pública (Lugar Amplo)]. Evidentemente é o nome dum pequeno reino arameu, talvez aplicado primariamente à sua cidade principal. No relato do ataque contra Laís por 600 danitas, Laís é descrito como estando "na baixada que pertencia a Bete-Reobe". (Jz 18:7, 28) Mais tarde, no tempo de Davi, os amonitas contrataram mercenários sírios de Bete-Reobe, na tentativa vã de defender-se contra as forças israelitas. (2Sa 10:6) Era também chamada simplesmente de "Reobe" (2Sa 10:8), e, por isso, acha-se tratar-se do mesmo lugar mencionado entre os pontos atingidos pelos 12 espias israelitas na sua investigação preliminar da terra de Canaã. — Núm 13:21.

A associação de Bete-Reobe com a "baixada" em que se encontrava Laís (mais tarde Dã), e a declaração em Números 13:21, de que Reobe se encontrava na direção da "entrada de Hamate", provavelmente indicam um lugar na parte meridional do vale de Beqaʽ, entre os montes Líbano e Antilíbano. O lugar exato é incerto.

BETE-SEÃ, BETE-SÃ. Inicialmente, uma das principais cidades fortificadas dos cananeus, situada num ponto estratégico que controlava a entrada no vale de Jezreel desde o vale do Jordão. O nome permanece no de Beisã (Bet She'an), ao passo que o lugar antigo está situado nas proximidades, em Tell el-Husn (Tel Bet She'an). O terreno na região de Bete-Seã encontra-se a uns 120 m abaixo do nível do mar, e ao L mergulha abruptamente a um ponto de uns 275 m abaixo do nível do mar, junto às margens do rio Jordão, a cerca de 5 km de distância. Construída sobre uma grande elevação à beira deste declive, Bete-Seã estava militarmente em excelente posição. Ao O de Bete-Seã, o vale plano, através do qual corre o rio Jalud (Nahal Harod), é bem regado e fértil, e ascende continuamente até atingir Jezreel, a uns 17 km ao ONO.

Bete-Seã era também uma cidade de entroncamento na rota favorita que levava da costa mediterrânea até o vale do Jordão, e mais adiante, a Damasco e à Arábia.

Escavações arqueológicas feitas em Bete-Seã revelaram numerosas camadas ou níveis de ruínas antigas, a mais antiga evidentemente remontando a antes do tempo de Abraão. (DIAGRAMA, Vol. 1, p. 959) Perto do meio do segundo milênio AEC, Bete-Seã parece ter ficado sob o domínio egípcio, em resultado da vitória de Tutmés III em Megido. A evidência arqueológica indica que era um posto avançado egípcio durante os reinados de vários faraós.

No tempo da conquista de Canaã pelos israelitas (1473-c. 1467 AEC), Bete-Seã ficava no território concedido a Issacar, mas foi designada à tribo de Manassés como possessão. (Jos 17:11; 1Cr 7:29) Os homens de Manassés deixaram de expulsar os cananeus de Bete-Seã e de outras cidades do vale, apresentando como motivo a superioridade militar exercida pelos cananeus, com seus carros de guerra equipados de foices de ferro, motivo este, contudo, que não satisfez a seu comandante, Josué. Os cananeus, embora não fossem desalojados, foram todavia subjugados a ponto de prestarem trabalhos forçados. — Jos 17:12, 13, 16-18; Jz 1:27, 28.

Bete-Seã achava-se em poder dos filisteus no tempo do reinado do Rei Saul, e, após a derrota de Saul, no adjacente monte Gilboa, os vencedores filisteus colocaram a armadura de Saul na "casa das imagens de Astorete", e afixaram sua cabeça à casa de Dagom, pendurando os cadáveres de Saul e de seus filhos na muralha de Bete-Sã (Bete-Seã), evidentemente no lado interno, que dava para a praça pública da cidade. Israelitas corajosos e intrépidos de Jabes-Gileade, a uns 20 km de distância, do outro lado do Jordão, recuperaram esses corpos, talvez penetrando na cidade à noite. — 1Sa 31:8-13; 2Sa 21:12; 1Cr 10:8-12.

Em harmonia com o relato acima, nas escavações feitas em Tell el-Husn, foram descobertas as ruínas de dois templos, um dos quais é considerado ser o templo de Astorete, ao passo que alguns sugerem que o outro, mais para o S, seja o templo de Dagom. Calcula-se que o templo de Astorete tenha continuado a ser usado até cerca do décimo século AEC. A evidência aponta uma adoração anterior de um deus Baal, mencionado em uma estela como "Mekal, o senhor [Baal] de Bete-Sã".

A cidade foi finalmente conquistada pelos israelitas, sem dúvida durante o reinado de Davi; e, no reinado de Salomão, Bete-Seã achava-se incluída em um dos doze distritos reais para fornecer suprimentos. (1Rs 4:12) Depois da divisão do reino, o faraó Sisaque (chamado Xexonque pelos egípcios), invadiu a Palestina no quinto ano do Rei Roboão (993 AEC). (1Rs 14:25) Um relevo numa parede em Karnak, no Egito, representa a campanha vitoriosa de Sisaque e a conquista de numerosas cidades, inclusive Bete-Seã.

Por volta da época dos macabeus, o nome de Bete-Seã tinha sido mudado para Citópolis, e ela é mencionada pelo historiador judeu Josefo, como a maior cidade da Decápolis. (The Jewish War, III, 446 [ix, 7]) Era a única destas dez cidades ao O do Jordão.

BETE-SEMES [Casa do Sol]. Nome de quatro cidades no relato bíblico.

1. Cidade situada na fronteira setentrional de Judá, alistada entre Quesalom e Timná. (Jos 15:10) É evidentemente chamada de Ir-Semes (que significa "Cidade do Sol") em Josué 19:41, onde aparece como cidade fronteiriça da tribo de Dã, vizinha setentrional de Judá. Subsequentemente, Judá legou Bete-Semes aos levitas, como cidade sacerdotal. — Jos 21:13, 16; 1Cr 6:59.

Bete-Semes é identificada com Tell er-Rumeileh (Tel Bet Shemesh), logo ao O das ruínas da cidade bizantina próxima da hodierna ʽAin Shems, este último lugar preservando parcialmente o nome antigo. Bete-Semes encontrava-se assim a uns 26 km ao O de Jerusalém, e estava situada na estrada principal que ia daquela cidade para as cidades filisteias de Asdode e Ascalom. Era, evidentemente, um ponto militarmente estratégico, visto que guardava a parte superior do vale da torrente de Soreque, e um dos principais acessos das planícies costeiras à região da Sefelá e às montanhas de Judá. Escavações realizadas nesse sítio indicam uma história antiga para tal cidade, havendo considerável evidência de influência filisteia.

Quando os filisteus, assolados por uma doença, devolveram a arca de Jeová a Israel, as vacas que puxavam a carroça, por sua própria iniciativa, dirigiram-se para esta cidade levita de Bete-Semes. No entanto, a ação imprópria de alguns dos habitantes de Bete-Semes, de olharem para a Arca do Pacto, causou a morte de 70 deles. (1Sa 6:9-20) A frase "cinquenta mil homens", que ocorre em 1 Samuel 6:19, no hebraico, não está ligada com os "setenta homens" por uma conjunção, e isto é considerado por alguns como indício de uma interpolação. Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], VI, 16 [i, 4]), ao considerar o relato bíblico, menciona apenas que 70 homens foram mortos, omitindo qualquer referência aos 50.000. — Veja 1Sa 6:19 n.

Bete-Semes era uma das cidades ligadas ao arranjo administrativo do Rei Salomão para prover alimentos para a mesa real. (1Rs 4:7, 9) Acharam-se ali longas salas estreitas, que se crê tenham sido usadas para estocagem de cereais, bem como enorme silo com paredes revestidas de pedra, de cerca de 7 m de diâmetro, e quase 6 m de profundidade. Numerosos lagares de vinho e de azeite, que foram escavados, indicam que essa região era muitíssimo produtiva no que diz respeito ao azeite e ao vinho.

O Rei Amazias (858-830 AEC) desafiou insensatamente a Jeoás, de Israel, e em Bete-Semes sofreu derrota e foi capturado. (2Rs 14:9-13; 2Cr 25:18-23) Durante o reinado de Acaz (761-746 AEC), a degradação e a infidelidade nacionais resultaram na perda de Bete-Semes para os filisteus. (2Cr 28:18, 19) Em Bete-Semes foi desenterrada uma asa de jarro gravada que trazia a inscrição "pertence a Eliaquim, despenseiro de Jaukin [forma abreviada do nome Joaquim]", e sugere-se que se relaciona com o rei desse mesmo nome, talvez indicando que o reino de Judá, com o tempo, tenha recuperado dos filisteus o controle da cidade.

2. Cidade fortificada no território de Naftali. (Jos 19:35-39) Embora não fossem expulsos, os cananeus que moravam nesta cidade foram submetidos a trabalhos forçados para os naftalitas. (Jz 1:33) O lugar antigo permanece sem identificação.

3. Cidade de Issacar, perto do Jordão. (Jos 19:22, 23) Embora se tenham sugerido diversos lugares, alguns peritos preferem a identificação com el-'Abeidiyeh, nas margens do Jordão, a uns 3 km ao S do mar da Galileia e a uns 16 km ao L do monte Tabor. O antigo nome possivelmente está preservado na vizinha Khirbet Shamsawi.

4. Cidade no Egito, incluída na profecia de Jeremias sobre a vindoura devastação daquela nação. (Je 43:13) É considerada ser Heliópolis (que significa "Cidade do Sol"), situada na periferia NE da moderna Cairo. Em outra parte no relato bíblico ela é mencionada pelo seu nome egípcio, Om. — Veja Om N.º 2.

BETE-SEMITA [De (Pertencente a) Bete-Semes]. Habitante de Bete-Semes, de Judá. O termo é aplicado a Josué, dono do campo em que a Arca do Pacto repousava sobre "uma grande pedra", exposta à vista, depois de ser levada ali numa carroça filisteia. — 1Sa 6:14, 18.

BETE-SITA [Casa da Acácia [Árvore]]. Cidade mencionada na descrição da rota de fuga seguida pelos midianitas após a sua derrota na baixada de Jezreel pelo juiz Gideão. (Jz 7:22) Visto que os midianitas se dirigiam à região do Jordão, Bete-Sita deve ter sido situada um pouco ao L ou ao SE do morro de Moré e do poço de Harode, na vizinhança dos quais se travou a batalha. (Jz 7:1) Alguns sugerem Shattah (Bet Ha-Shitta), a uns 4,5 km ao ESE da moderna 'En Harod como provável localização dela e que oferece evidência do nome original. Outros a acham perto demais da cena da batalha e recomendam um lugar mais ao SE, embora sem oferecer uma identificação definitiva.

BETE-TAPUA [Casa da Maçã [Macieira]]. Cidade na região montanhosa perto de Hébron e parte da herança territorial de Judá. (Jos 15:20, 48, 53) Alguns sugerem que recebeu seu nome dum judeu chamado Tapua (1Cr 2:42, 43); todavia, também é possível que Bete-Tapua tenha recebido o nome por causa das macieiras que provavelmente cresciam ali em abundância. Hoje é identificada com a moderna Taffuh, a uns 6 km ao ONO de Hébron.

BETEZATA. Veja Betsata.

BETE-ZUR [Casa da Rocha]. Cidade na região montanhosa de Judá, alistada entre Halul e Gedor. (Jos 15:58) O nome ainda é preservado em Burj es-Sur, ao passo que escavações mostraram o lugar da própria cidade antiga ter sido em Khirbet et-Tubeiqeh (Bet Zur), a cerca de 0,5 km ao NO. Este lugar está a 7,5 km ao N de Hébron, estando Gedor mais uns 5 km ao NNO e Halul a 1,5 km ao SSE. É descrita como uma das mais elevadas cidades em ruínas na Palestina, situada num morro a 1.007 m acima do nível do mar. Visto que se encontrava perto da estrada N-S ao longo da rota da crista das vertentes e também guardava as rotas para Maressa e Libna, ao O, Bete-Zur ocupava uma posição de importância estratégica.

Depois da divisão do reino, Bete-Zur foi uma das 15 cidades reconstruídas e fortificadas pelo Rei Roboão, como meio de proteger Judá e Benjamim contra invasões. (2Cr 11:5-12) Estava entre as cidades novamente habitadas pelos judeus que retornaram do exílio babilônico. (Ne 3:16) Durante o período macabeu, Bete-Zur (então chamada de Betsura) destacava-se na luta dos judeus contra os reis selêucidas da Síria, descrevendo o livro apócrifo de Primeiro Macabeus uma significativa vitória ganha ali por Judas Macabeu contra as forças sírias (165 AEC), após a qual ele fortificou novamente a cidade. (1 Macabeus 4:61; 6:26) Em 162 AEC, os sírios sitiaram a cidade, e ela finalmente capitulou por falta de alimentos. (1 Macabeus 6:30-50) Tornou-se uma guarnição síria, e o General Báquides reforçou as fortificações dela. — 1 Macabeus 9:52.

Escavações arqueológicas em Bete-Zur, feitas em 1931 e em 1957, revelaram evidência de vigorosas fortificações. Encontraram-se numerosas moedas datando do quarto ao segundo século AEC; estas incluíam moedas de prata judaicas, que se crê datarem do período persa, ou de aproximadamente o quarto século AEC.

O nome Bete-Zur aparece numa lista genealógica dos descendentes de Calebe, irmão de Jerameel, em 1 Crônicas 2:45. Diz ali que Maom era "o pai de Bete-Zur". Muitos comentadores entendem que Bete-Zur se refere à cidade deste nome, sendo Maom neste caso o pai dos que se estabeleceram ali, ou talvez o chefe ou o principal da cidade.

BETFAGÉ [do hebr., provavelmente significando "Casa dos Figos Temporãos"]. Betfagé consta no relato sobre a ida de Jesus a Jerusalém, e como o ponto do qual ele enviou seus discípulos para conseguirem o jumento em que ele montou na sua entrada triunfal em Jerusalém, em 9 de nisã do ano 33 EC. (Mt 21:1, 2; Mr 11:1, 2; Lu 19:29, 30) As referências mostram estar situada no monte das Oliveiras, perto de Jerusalém, e também perto de Betânia. Ao passo que alguns consideram que Betfagé se encontrava do outro lado da ravina, ao SE de Betânia, na atual Abu Dis, a localização tradicional é entre Betânia e Jerusalém, em et-Tur, na encosta

SE do monte das Oliveiras. Deste ponto, a distância é curta até um dos cumes do monte das Oliveiras. Descendo dali, a cidade de Jerusalém estava à plena vista. — Veja Lu 19:37, 41.

Referências talmúdicas a Betfagé indicam que era considerada como limite da zona sabática em torno da cidade de Jerusalém. — Talmude Babilônico, Menahot 78*b*; compare isso com At 1:12 n.

BETONIM [Pistácios]. Cidade ao L do Jordão, que Moisés deu de "presente" à tribo de Gade. (Jos 13:24-27) Considera-se em geral que Betonim seja a atual Khirbet Batneh, na região montanhosa a 21 km ao O de Rabá (em Amom).

BETSAIDA [do aramaico, significando "Casa do Caçador (ou: Pescador)"]. Cidade da qual Filipe, André e Pedro eram (Jo 1:44), embora Simão Pedro e André pareçam ter fixado residência em Cafarnaum no tempo do ministério de Jesus. (Mt 8:5, 14; Mr 1:21, 29) Era uma cidade "da Galileia". (Jo 12:21) Após a morte de João, o Batizador, Jesus retirou-se para Betsaida, junto com seus discípulos, e, num lugar isolado e gramado de sua vizinhança, proveu miraculosamente alimento para cerca de 5.000 homens, além de mulheres e crianças, que se haviam ajuntado para ouvi-lo. (Lu 9:10-17; compare isso com Mt 14:13-21; Jo 6:10.) Fora de Betsaida, Jesus restaurou mais tarde a visão dum cego. (Mr 8:22) Visto que tais obras poderosas foram feitas na sua vizinhança, o povo de Betsaida, em geral, junto com a população de Corazim, veio a merecer censura por causa da sua atitude impenitente. — Lu 10:13.

A identificação da "aldeia" (Mr 8:22, 23) ou "cidade" (Lu 9:10) de Betsaida tem sido tema de alguma discussão. As referências bíblicas apontam para um lugar nas praias do N do mar da Galileia. O nome é ligado por Josefo a uma aldeia populosa que jaz a curta distância ao L do ponto em que o rio Jordão deságua no mar da Galileia. Esta aldeia foi reconstruída pelo tetrarca Filipe e chamada de Júlias, em homenagem à filha de César Augusto. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XVIII, 28, [ii, 1]) As ruínas antigas do lugar da própria Júlias estão em et-Tell, a cerca de 3 km do mar; contudo, restos dum pequeno povoado pesqueiro se encontram em el-ʽAraj, bem na praia. Aqui, uma baía natural era usada pelos pescadores até tempos recentes, de modo que o lugar se ajusta geograficamente ao significado do nome Betsaida.

Embora aceitem em alguns textos esta identificação como se aplicando a Betsaida, diversos comentadores contendem a favor duma segunda Betsaida, em algum ponto ao O do Jordão. Este conceito se deve ao entendimento, baseado em declarações feitas por Josefo e por outros, de que os limites territoriais da Galileia não se estendiam até o L do Jordão. O próprio Josefo fala de Júlias como estando na "Gaulanítis baixa", a região ao L do mar da Galileia. (The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], II, 168 [ix, 1]) No entanto, diz-se que Betsaida era "da Galileia". (Jo 12:21) Todavia, a região da Galileia nem sempre parece ter sido definida com tanta precisão, sendo que até mesmo Josefo se refere a certo Judas de Gaulanítis como "galileu". (Jewish Antiquities, XVIII, 4 [i, 1]; The Jewish War, II, 118 [viii, 1]) É também bem possível que parte da população da cidade de Betsaida se espalhasse até a margem O do Jordão, a cerca de 1,5 km de distância.

Adicionalmente, visto que a tradução de Marcos 6:45, na versão atualizada Almeida, declara que Jesus mandou seus apóstolos "passar [de barco] adiante para o outro lado, a Betsaida", ao passo que a passagem paralela em João 6:17 dá o destino deles como Cafarnaum, alguns têm sustentado que isto igualmente exige uma segunda Betsaida, no lado O do Jordão, perto de Cafarnaum. No entanto, traduções modernas do texto de Marcos 6:45 permitem o entendimento de que os apóstolos começaram sua viagem em direção a Cafarnaum por primeiro costearem "para Betsaida" (encontrando-se evidentemente o ponto onde deixaram Jesus, perto do lugar da alimentação milagrosa dos 5.000, possivelmente a alguma distância ao S de Betsaida e do lado do mar oposto a Cafarnaum), e depois cruzaram para a extremidade setentrional do mar, dirigindo-se ao seu derradeiro destino, Cafarnaum. Desembarcaram nas praias da terra de Genesaré, evidentemente um pouco ao S da cidade de Cafarnaum. — Mr 6:53.

Assim, ao passo que se sugeriram diversos lugares para uma segunda Betsaida, os relatos bíblicos não requerem isto. Pode-se também notar que estes lugares sugeridos estão todos perto de Cafarnaum, e seria bastante improvável que duas cidades com o nome de Betsaida estivessem situadas apenas a poucos quilômetros uma da outra.

BETSATA. O nome ocorre com referência a um reservatório de água que tinha este nome, junto ao qual Jesus curou um homem que estivera enfermo durante 38 anos. (Jo 5:1-9) Em João 5:2, alguns manuscritos e algumas traduções (Al, CBC) rezam "Betesda". O reservatório é descrito como tendo cinco colunatas, em que grande número de doentes, cegos e coxos se congregavam, evidentemente atribuindo poderes curativos às águas, especialmente logo depois que as águas ficassem agitadas. As últimas cinco palavras do versículo três, segundo se encontram na versão Almeida, revista e corrigida, e o versículo 4 deste capítulo, que atribui a agitação das águas a um anjo, não são encontrados em alguns dos mais antigos manuscritos gregos, e são vistos como uma interpolação. Assim, a Bíblia não fornece nenhum indício quanto à causa da agitação das águas, mas mostra simplesmente a crença do povo nos poderes curativos das águas.

A localização do reservatório de água é indicada pela evidente referência ao "portão das ovelhas" (embora, no grego original, se tenha de suprir a palavra "portão"), portão que geralmente se considera situado na parte N de Jerusalém. Neemias 3:1 mostra que este portão foi construído pelos sacerdotes, e, por isso, presume-se que tenha sido uma entrada perto da área do templo. Além disso, o nome Betsata é associado com a seção da antiga Jerusalém chamada Bezeta, situada ao N da área do templo. Nos dias de Jesus, este setor encontrava-se fora dos muros da cidade, mas Herodes Agripa I (que morreu em 44 EC) acrescentou um terceiro muro setentrional à cidade, durante o governo de Cláudio (41-54 EC), e isto colocou Bezeta dentro dos muros da cidade, de modo que João podia falar corretamente do reservatório como estando situado "em Jerusalém", conforme ele conhecera a cidade antes de sua destruição em 70 EC.

Em 1888, escavações feitas logo ao N do local do templo revelaram um reservatório duplo, dividido por um muro de pedras e abrangendo uma área geral de cerca de 46 por 92 m. Existia evidência de colunatas, e de um afresco desbotado, que representava um anjo agitando as águas, embora a pintura talvez fosse uma adição posterior. O local parece ajustar-se à descrição bíblica.

BETUEL.

1. Sobrinho de Abraão, nascido de seu irmão Naor e Milca. (Gên 22:20, 22) Betuel tornou-se pai de Rebeca e de Labão. (Gên 22:23; 24:15, 24, 29) Ele reconheceu mais tarde a direção divina que levou o escravo de Abraão ao seu lar, em busca duma esposa para Isaque, dizendo, junto com Labão: "Esta coisa procedeu de Jeová." (Gên 24:50) Ele é chamado de sírio ou arameu, que morava na planície de Arã. — Gên 25:20; 28:2, 5.

2. Uma comparação das listas de cidades apresentadas em Josué 15:30; 19:4, e em 1 Crônicas 4:30, indica que esta cidade é também chamada de Betul e Quesil. Encontrava-se na parte setentrional do território de Judá, mas foi designada à tribo de Simeão, como cidade encravada. Portanto, parece também ser o "Betel" mencionado em 1 Samuel 30:27 como um dos lugares ao qual Davi enviou porções do despojo como presente. Uma identificação provisória é com Khirbet el-Qaryatein (Tel Qeriyyot), a uns 19 km ao S de Hébron; embora alguns prefiram Khirbet er-Ras (Horvat Rosh), a uns 24 km ao O deste lugar. — Veja QUESIL.

BETUL. Veja BETUEL N.º 2.

BETUME. O mesmo asfalto mineral negro ou castanho é mencionado por três palavras hebraicas. Duas delas descrevem a diferença de dureza: piche (zé·feth), sua forma líquida; betume (hhe·már), seu estado sólido. A terceira palavra, alcatrão (kó·fer), descreve sua utilização: como é aplicado para recobrir madeiramentos. (Veja PICHE.) Por causa da sua impermeabilidade, a utilidade do betume antecede ao Dilúvio, porque Noé, quando instruído para construir a arca, foi mandado "cobri-la com alcatrão por dentro e por fora". — Gên 6:14.

A arca de papiro em que o bebê Moisés flutuou no meio dos juncos do Nilo era à prova de água, por ter sido impregnada de "betume e piche". (Êx 2:3) Os construtores da cidade de Babilônia aprenderam que as características impermeabilizantes do betume eram associadas a qualidades adesivas, tornando-o uma argamassa muito útil para os seus tijolos secados ao forno. — Gên 11:3.

Houve época em que o vale de Sidim, situado próximo de Sodoma e Gomorra, na região do Mar Morto, era famoso por seus "poços e mais poços de betume". (Gên 14:10) Até mesmo hoje, o betume é ocasionalmente lançado pelas águas nas suas margens, sugerindo que Sidim se encontra atualmente embaixo das águas do Mar Morto. O betume é também material inflamável, e é assim descrito por Isaías, que profetizou que a terra de Edom havia de "tornar-se como piche ardente". — Is 34:9.

BEULÁ [Possuída Como Esposa]. Uma palavra hebraica (Be'u·láh) transliterada como nome em Isaías 62:4, em algumas traduções (Al; IBB), ao passo que em outras é vertida "Desposada" (ALA; BJ; CBC; MC; PIB), "Minha esposa" (BLH), "A que tem marido" (Tr) e "Possuída Como Esposa" (NM).

A mulher espiritual, Sião, havia de ficar num estado desolado após a destruição de Jerusalém pelos babilônios e a completa desolação de Judá. Entretanto, a profecia de restabelecimento, dada por Jeová por meio de Isaías, de grande importância para os exilados judeus na antiga Babilônia e para os membros do Israel espiritual, assegurava o restabelecimento e a repovoação do país, uma condição mudada. A antes desolada Sião não mais seria "uma mulher completamente abandonada", e sua terra não mais estaria desolada, prometendo-se: "Mas tu mesma serás chamada Meu Deleite Está Nela [hebr.: Hhef·tsi-váh], e tua terra, Possuída Como Esposa [hebr.: Be'u·láh]. Porque Jeová se terá agradado de ti e tua própria terra será possuída como esposa." Os retornados "filhos" de Sião, libertos do exílio babilônico, se estabeleceriam novamente nela, também 'tomando posse dela como esposa'. O restabelecimento de Sião, ou Jerusalém, significava para ela uma condição nova, em contraste com seu anterior estado desolado. Por causa desta condição restabelecida, Jeová, que se agrada de Sião, declarou que ela seria chamada "Meu Deleite Está Nela", e a terra dela, "Possuída como Esposa". — Is 62; compare isso com Is 54:1, 5, 6; 66:8; Je 23:5-8; 30:17; Gál 4:26-31.

BEZAI [forma abreviada de Bezalel].

1. Israelita cujos descendentes, somando mais de 300, retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:17; Ne 7:23.

2. Um homem deste nome, ou um representante de tal grupo familiar, que atestou o "arranjo fidedigno" de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 14, 18.

BEZALEL [Sob a Sombra (Abrigo) de Deus].

1. Principal artesão e construtor do tabernáculo, "filho de Uri, filho de Hur, da tribo de Judá". (Êx 31:1, 2; 1Cr 2:20) O próprio Jeová designou Bezalel e prometeu que o 'encheria do espírito de Deus em sabedoria e em entendimento, e em conhecimento, em toda espécie de artesanato, para elaborar projetos, para trabalhar em ouro, e em prata, e em cobre, e em lavrar pedras para engastá-las e em trabalhar madeira para fazer trabalhos de toda espécie'. (Êx 31:3-5; 35:30-33) Estes materiais caros, com os quais Bezalel trabalhava, foram supridos pelas contribuições generosas das pessoas de "coração disposto", e mostraram ser 'mais do que suficientes'. — Êx 35:4-9, 20-29; 36:3-7.

Bezalel teve como seu principal ajudante a Ooliabe (Êx 31:6), e havia muitos de "coração sábio" que trabalhavam com eles, todavia, a responsabilidade de orientar o trabalho complicado era de Bezalel. (Êx 35:10-19, 25, 26, 34; 36:1, 2) Isto se evidencia na troca dos pronomes implícitos nos verbos, "ele" referindo-se a Bezalel, e "eles", a seus auxiliares. (Êx 36-39) A grande diversidade das habilidades de Bezalel, e o fato de que estava cheio do "espírito de Deus" (Êx 35:31), capacitaram-no a superintender a fabricação de panos de tenda e seus bordados, de colchetes de ouro e de cobre, das coberturas externas de peles, das armações dos painéis de madeira, recobertos de ouro, do reposteiro interior (Êx 36); da recoberta Arca do Pacto e seus querubins, da mesa e seus utensílios, do candelabro de ouro e do altar do incenso, dos prescritos óleo de unção e incenso (Êx 37); do altar da oferta queimada, da bacia de cobre e de seu suporte, do pátio (Êx 38); do éfode e seu peitoral guarnecido de pedras preciosas, e das vestes sacerdotais (Êx 39). Quando Salomão ascendeu ao trono, 475 anos depois, a tenda do tabernáculo, a Arca do Pacto e o altar de cobre ainda estavam em uso. — 2Cr 1:1-6.

2. Um dos filhos de Paate-Moabe, que despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos às instâncias de Esdras. — Esd 10:30, 44.

BEZEQUE.

1. Lugar em que Judá e Simeão derrotaram 10.000 soldados cananeus e perizeus sob Adoni-Bezeque. (Jz 1:3-7) Alguns identificam este Bezeque com o de 1 Samuel 11:8 (o N.º 2 abaixo), que fica no extremo N em relação a Jerusalém e ao território ocupado por Judá e Simeão. Este conceito exigiria presumir que Adoni-Bezeque veio ao S para se juntar a outras forças cananeias, mas foi enfrentado por Judá e Simeão, foi empurrado para o N, a Bezeque, e foi derrotado ali. No entanto, o contexto parece indicar um lugar na região geral de Jerusalém. Em vista destas circunstâncias, Bezeque, a cidade de Adoni-Bezeque, é experimentalmente situada na região da Sefelá, no lugar de Khirbet Bezqa, a uns 5 km ao NE de Gezer.

2. O lugar em que Saul reuniu os filhos de Israel e de Judá para combater os amonitas acampados contra Jabes, em Gileade. (1Sa 11:8-11) Encontrar-se este a não mais do que uma noite de marcha de Jabes substancia o conceito de que estava localizado no lugar moderno de Khirbet Ibziq, 21 km ao NE de Siquém. Um monte ao O de Khirbet Ibziq eleva-se a 713 m acima do nível do mar e talvez provesse a Saul um lugar adequado para reunir as suas forças.

BEZER.

1. [possivelmente: Minério Precioso]. Um dos "filhos de Zofa", da tribo de Aser. — 1Cr 7:30, 36, 37.

2. [Lugar Inacessível]. Cidade levita de refúgio, uma das três ao lado L do Jordão, designada primariamente para a tribo de Rubem. (De 4:41-43; Jos 20:8; 21:36; 1Cr 6:78) É mencionada como estando "no planalto" e "na altura de Jericó, ao leste do Jordão . . . no ermo". Bezer é geralmente identificada com a moderna Umm el-ʽAmad, situada na região planaltina, 19 km ao S de Rabá (em Amom). É mencionada na Pedra Moabita como uma das cidades capturadas e fortificadas pelo Rei Mesa, de Moabe, na sua revolta contra Israel, após a morte do Rei Acabe, aproximadamente em 920 AEC. — 2Rs 3:5.

BEZERRO [hebr.: ʽé·ghel]. Touro novo, vitelo, novilho. Bezerros eram oferecidos em sacrifício (Le 9:2, 3), e em ocasiões especiais ou em circunstâncias especiais matava-se e preparava-se um bezerro cevado para uma refeição. — Gên 18:7, 8; 1Sa 28:24; Lu 15:23.

'Cortar o bezerro em dois e passar entre os pedaços' alude a um antigo modo de assumir uma solene obrigação ou celebrar um pacto. (Veja Gên 15:9-21.) Jeremias, sem dúvida, usou esta expressão para enfatizar a qualidade sagrada do pacto em que os judeus entraram perante Deus, e por cujos termos estavam obrigados a libertar coisraelitas que eles haviam escravizado. — Je 34:17-19.

Uso Ilustrativo. O infiel Israel foi corrigido como um inexperiente "bezerro que não foi treinado" no jugo. (Je 31:18) Os soldados mercenários do Egito são comparados a bezerros cevados que se mostrariam incapazes de resistir aos babilônios e que fugiriam. (Je 46:21, 26) Na ocasião em que os iníquos e presunçosos são reduzidos a pó, os que temem o nome de Deus são mostrados saindo e escarvando o solo como bezerros cevados soltos do estábulo. — Mal 4:1, 2.

Adoração do Bezerro. A adoração do bezerro é a primeira forma de idolatria mencionada na Bíblia a que os israelitas sucumbiram após o Êxodo do Egito. Enquanto Moisés estava no monte, recebendo a lei de Deus, o povo ficou impaciente e se dirigiu a Arão com o pedido de que fizesse para eles um deus. Das arrecadas de ouro contribuídas pelos israelitas, Arão formou a estátua fundida dum bezerro, sem dúvida um touro novo. (Sal 106:19, 20) Era considerado como representando a Jeová, e a festividade celebrada no dia seguinte foi chamada de "uma festividade para Jeová". Os israelitas ofereceram sacrifícios ao bezerro de ouro, curvaram-se diante dele, comeram, beberam e divertiram-se com cantos e danças. — Êx 32:1-8, 18, 19; Ne 9:18.

O bezerro fundido não necessariamente foi feito de ouro maciço. Isto é indicado pelo fato de que Isaías, ao se referir à fabricação duma imagem fundida, menciona que o trabalhador em metal reveste-a de ouro. (Is 40:19) Assim, o bezerro de ouro talvez fosse feito de madeira e depois revestido de ouro. Portanto, quando Moisés pôs a imagem a queimar no fogo, a estrutura de madeira ficou reduzida a carvão de lenha e a camada de ouro fundiu-se total ou parcialmente. O que sobrou foi triturado até virar pó, e este pó, composto de carvão e de ouro, foi por Moisés espalhado sobre a superfície da água. — Êx 32:20; De 9:21.

A idolatria egípcia, que associava deuses com vacas, touros e outros animais, provavelmente havia influenciado grandemente os israelitas, induzindo-os a adotar a adoração do bezerro assim que foram libertos do Egito. Isto é confirmado pelas palavras de Estêvão: "Nos seus corações voltaram-se para o Egito, dizendo a Arão: 'Faze-nos deuses para irem na nossa frente. . . .' Fizeram, pois, naqueles dias, um bezerro e trouxeram um sacrifício ao ídolo, e começaram a regalar-se com as obras das suas mãos." — At 7:39-41.

O primeiro rei do reino de dez tribos, Jeroboão, temendo que seus súditos se revoltassem e voltassem para a casa de Davi, se continuassem a subir a Jerusalém para adoração, mandou fazer dois bezerros de ouro. (1Rs 12:26-28) O registro bíblico não revela até que ponto a escolha de Jeroboão, dum bezerro para representar a Jeová, foi influenciada pela anterior adoração do bezerro em Israel, por aquilo que observara no Egito (1Rs 12:2), ou pela religião dos cananeus e de outros, que frequentemente representavam seus deuses de pé sobre um animal, tal como um touro.

Um dos bezerros de ouro, Jeroboão colocou na cidade de Dã, no extremo norte, e o outro em Betel, a uns 17 km ao N de Jerusalém. Disse aos seus súditos que era demais para eles subir a Jerusalém para adoração, e que o bezerro representava o Deus que os fizera subir da terra do Egito. (Veja Êx 32:8.) Visto que os sacerdotes da tribo de Levi permaneceram leais à adoração de Jeová em Jerusalém, Jeroboão nomeou seus próprios sacerdotes para liderar na adoração falsa diante dos bezerros-ídolos em Dã e em Betel. (2Cr 11:13-15) Providenciou também uma festividade similar à Festividade das Barracas, mas era celebrada um mês depois da festividade em Jerusalém. — 1Rs 12:28-33; 2Cr 13:8, 9; Le 23:39.

Jeová condenou esta adoração do bezerro, e, mediante seu profeta Aijá, predisse calamidade para a casa de Jeroboão. (1Rs 14:7-12) Todavia, a adoração do bezerro continuou arraigada no reino das dez tribos. Até mesmo o Rei Jeú, que erradicou a adoração de Baal em Israel, deixou permanecer a adoração do bezerro, provavelmente a fim de manter o reino das dez tribos distinto do reino de Judá. (2Rs 10:29-31) No nono século AEC, Jeová suscitou seus profetas Amós e Oseias para proclamarem Sua condenação da adoração do bezerro, que incluía beijar os bezerros-ídolos, e também para predizer a ruína do reino das dez tribos. O bezerro de ouro de Betel seria levado ao rei da Assíria, fazendo com que o povo, bem como os sacerdotes dos deuses estrangeiros, pranteassem. Os altos seriam aniquilados, e espinhos e abrolhos cresceriam sobre os altares que tinham sido usados na adoração falsa. (Os 10:5-8; 13:2; Am 3:14; 4:4; 5:5, 6) Realmente, a calamidade veio quando o reino das dez tribos caiu diante da Assíria, em 740 AEC. Cerca de um século depois, Jeremias profetizou que os moabitas ficariam tão envergonhados de seu deus Quemós como os israelitas ficaram de seu centro idólatra da adoração do bezerro, Betel. — Je 48:13; veja BETEL N.º 1; ÍDOLO, IDOLATRIA (Sob o governo dos reis); TOURO; VACA.

BÍBLIA. As Escrituras Sagradas, a Palavra inspirada de Jeová, reconhecida como o maior livro de todos os tempos, devido à sua antiguidade, à sua circulação total, ao número de línguas para as quais foi traduzida, à sua extraordinária grandeza como obra-prima literária, e por sua extrema importância para toda a humanidade. Independente de todos os outros livros, ela não imita a nenhum deles. Ela se destaca pelos seus próprios méritos, dando crédito a seu Autor ímpar. A Bíblia distingue-se também por ter sobrevivido a mais controvérsias violentas do que qualquer outro livro, sendo odiada por muitos inimigos.

Nome. A palavra portuguesa "Bíblia" vem, através do latim, da palavra grega bi·blí·a, que significa "livrinhos". Esta, por sua vez, deriva de bi·blos, palavra que descreve a parte interna do papiro, planta da qual se fabricava uma forma primitiva de papel. A cidade fenícia de Gebal, famosa pela comercialização de papiro, era chamada pelos gregos de "Biblos". (Veja Jos 13:5, n.) Com o tempo, bi·blí·a passou a descrever diversos escritos, rolos, livros e finalmente a coleção de pequenos livros que constituem a Bíblia. Jerônimo chamou esta coleção de Bibliotheca Divina.

Jesus e os escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs referiram-se a esta coleção de escritos sagrados como "as Escrituras", ou as "Escrituras sagradas", "os escritos sagrados". (Mt 21:42; Mr 14:49; Lu 24:32; Jo 5:39; At 18:24; Ro 1:2; 15:4; 2Ti 3:15, 16) Esta coleção é a expressão escrita dum Deus comunicativo, a Palavra de Deus, e isto é reconhecido em frases tais como "expressão da boca de Jeová" (De 8:3), "declarações de Jeová" (Jos 24:27), "mandamentos de Jeová" (Esd 7:11), "lei de Jeová", "advertência de Jeová", "ordens de Jeová" (Sal 19:7, 8), "palavra de Jeová" (Is 38:4; 1Te 4:15), 'pronunciação de Jeová' (Mt 4:4). Estes escritos são repetidas vezes chamados de "proclamações sagradas de Deus". — Ro 3:2; At 7:38; He 5:12; 1Pe 4:11.

Divisões. Sessenta e seis livros individuais, de Gênesis a Revelação, constituem o cânon da Bíblia. A escolha desses livros específicos, e a rejeição de muitos outros, evidencia que o Autor divino não só inspirou a sua escrita, mas também cuidou meticulosamente da sua compilação e da sua preservação no catálogo sagrado. (Veja APÓCRIFOS; CÂNON.) Trinta e nove dos 66 livros, que constituem três quartos do conteúdo da Bíblia, são conhecidos como Escrituras Hebraicas, tendo todos sido escritos inicialmente nesta língua, com a exceção de alguns pequenos trechos escritos em aramaico. (Esd 4:8-6:18; 7:12-26; Je 10:11; Da 2:4b-7:28) Por combinarem alguns destes livros, os judeus tinham o total de apenas 22 ou 24 livros, todavia, estes abrangiam a mesma matéria. Parece também ter sido seu costume subdividir as Escrituras em três partes: 'a lei de Moisés, os Profetas, e os Salmos'. (Lu 24:44; veja ESCRITURAS HEBRAICAS.) A última quarta parte da Bíblia é conhecida como Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, assim denominadas porque os 27 livros que compõem esta seção foram escritos em grego. A escrita, a compilação e a colocação em ordem destes livros no cânon da Bíblia também demonstram a supervisão de Jeová, do começo ao fim. — Veja ESCRITURAS GREGAS CRISTÃS.

A subdivisão da Bíblia em capítulos e versículos (a KJ tem 1.189 capítulos e 31.102 versículos) não foi feita pelos escritores originais, mas foi uma adição utilíssima, realizada séculos depois. Os massoretas dividiram as Escrituras Hebraicas em versículos; daí, no século 13 de nossa Era Comum, acrescentaram-se as divisões em capítulos. Por fim, em 1553, a edição de Robert Estienne da Bíblia em francês foi publicada como a primeira Bíblia completa com as atuais divisões de capítulos e versículos.

Os 66 livros bíblicos, em conjunto, constituem apenas uma única obra, um todo completo. Assim como as marcações de capítulos e versículos são apenas ajudas convenientes para o estudo da Bíblia, e não visam depreciar a unidade do todo, assim também se dá com a divisão da Bíblia em seções, feita segundo a língua predominante em que os manuscritos nos foram transmitidos. Por conseguinte, temos tanto as Escrituras Hebraicas como as Gregas, acrescentando-se a estas últimas a expressão "Cristãs" para distingui-las da Septuaginta grega, que é a parte hebraica das Escrituras traduzida para o grego.

"Antigo [Velho] Testamento" e "Novo Testamento". Hoje em dia é comum chamar as Escrituras escritas em hebraico e em aramaico de "Antigo [ou Velho] Testamento". Isto se baseia na leitura de 2 Coríntios 3:14 na Vulgata latina e em versões tais como algumas católicas, e na Almeida, edição original. No entanto, o uso de "antigo [velho] testamento" neste texto é incorreto. A palavra grega di·a·thé·kes, aqui, significa "pacto", assim como nos outros 32 lugares em que ocorre no texto grego. Muitas traduções modernas rezam corretamente "antigo [velho] pacto". (IBB, NE, RS) O apóstolo Paulo não se referia às Escrituras Hebraicas e Aramaicas na sua inteireza. Tampouco queria dizer que os inspirados escritos cristãos constituíam um "novo testamento (ou: pacto)". O apóstolo estava falando do antigo pacto da Lei, registrado por Moisés no Pentateuco e que constitui apenas uma parte das Escrituras pré-cristãs. Por este motivo, ele disse no próximo versículo: "Sempre que se lê Moisés."

Portanto, não há base válida para as Escrituras Hebraicas e Aramaicas serem chamadas de "Antigo [Velho] Testamento", e para as Escrituras Gregas serem chamadas de "Novo Testamento". O próprio Jesus Cristo chamou a coleção dos escritos sagrados de "as Escrituras". (Mt 21:42; Mr 14:49; Jo 5:39) O apóstolo Paulo chamou-as de "Escrituras sagradas", "Escrituras" e "os escritos sagrados". — Ro 1:2; 15:4; 2Ti 3:15.

Autoria. A tabela acompanhante mostra que foram usados cerca de 40 secretários ou escribas humanos pelo único Autor para registrar a inspirada Palavra de Jeová. "Toda a Escritura é inspirada por Deus", e isto inclui os escritos das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, junto com "o resto das Escrituras". (2Ti 3:16; 2Pe 3:15, 16) Esta expressão, "inspirada por Deus", traduz a frase grega the·ó·pneu·stos, que significa "[por] Deus soprado". Por 'soprar' sobre homens fiéis, Deus fez com que seu espírito, ou força ativa, se tornasse operante neles e dirigisse o que ele queria registrar, pois, como está escrito, "a profecia nunca foi produzida pela vontade do homem, mas os homens falaram da parte de Deus conforme eram movidos por espírito santo". — 2Pe 1:21; Jo 20:21, 22; veja INSPIRAÇÃO.

Este invisível espírito santo de Deus é seu "dedo" simbólico. Portanto, quando homens viram Moisés realizar façanhas sobrenaturais, eles exclamaram: "É o dedo de Deus!" (Êx 8:18, 19; compare isso com as palavras de Jesus em Mt 12:22, 28; Lu 11:20.) Numa demonstração similar do poder divino, o "dedo de Deus" começou a escrita da Bíblia por gravar os Dez Mandamentos em tábuas de pedra. (Êx 31:18; De 9:10) Portanto, para Jeová seria simples usar homens como seus escribas, embora alguns deles fossem "indoutos e comuns" quanto a treinamento escolástico (At 4:13), e sem importar se a pessoa era por profissão pastor, lavrador, fabricante de tendas, pescador, cobrador de impostos, médico, sacerdote, profeta ou rei. A força ativa de Jeová colocava os pensamentos na mente do escritor, e, em certos casos, permitia-lhe expressar o pensamento divino nas suas próprias palavras, deixando assim que características de personalidade e individuais se evidenciassem na escrita, mas, ao mesmo tempo, mantendo uma sublime unidade global no tema e no objetivo. Desta maneira, a Bíblia resultante, refletindo a ideia e a vontade de Jeová, excede em riqueza e em alcance os escritos de meros homens. O Deus Todo-Poderoso cuidou de que a sua Palavra escrita da verdade estivesse numa linguagem facilmente entendível e facilmente traduzível para praticamente qualquer língua.

Nenhum outro livro demorou tanto para ser completado como a Bíblia. Em 1513 AEC, Moisés começou a escrita da Bíblia. Outros escritos sagrados foram adicionados às Escrituras inspiradas até algum tempo após 443 AEC, quando Neemias e Malaquias completaram seus livros. Daí, durante quase 500 anos, houve um intervalo de tempo na escrita da Bíblia, até que o apóstolo Mateus escreveu seu relato histórico. Quase 60 anos depois, João, o último dos apóstolos, contribuiu seu Evangelho e três cartas para completar o cânon da Bíblia. Assim, ao todo, estava envolvido um período de cerca de 1.610 anos na produção da Bíblia. Todos os coescritores eram hebreus, e, por isso, eram parte daquele povo 'incumbido das proclamações sagradas de Deus'. — Ro 3:2.

A Bíblia não é um agrupamento ou uma coleção desconexa de fragmentos heterogêneos da literatura judaica e cristã. Antes, ela é um livro organizacional, altamente unificado e interligado nos seus diversos segmentos, o que deveras reflete a sistemática qualidade ordeira do próprio Criador-Autor. Os tratos de Deus com Israel, em dar-lhe um abrangente código de leis, bem como regulamentos governando assuntos até nos mínimos pormenores da vida em acampamentos — coisas que mais tarde se refletiram no reino davídico, bem como no arranjo organizacional entre os cristãos do primeiro século — refletem e magnificam este aspecto organizacional da Bíblia.

Conteúdo. No seu conteúdo, este Livro dos Livros revela o passado, explica o presente e prediz o futuro. Estes são assuntos de que somente Aquele que conhece o fim desde o princípio poderia ser o autor. (Is 46:10) Iniciando pelo princípio, por falar da criação do céu e da Terra, a Bíblia fornece então um amplo relato dos eventos que prepararam a Terra para a habitação do homem. Daí, revela-se a explicação verdadeiramente científica da origem do homem — que a vida provém somente de um Dador da vida — fatos que somente o Criador, agora no papel de Autor, poderia explicar. (Gên 1:26-28; 2:7) Junto com o relato de por que os homens morrem, introduziu-se o tema dominante que permeia a Bíblia inteira. Este tema, a vindicação da soberania de Jeová e o derradeiro cumprimento do seu propósito para com a Terra, por meio do seu Reino sob Cristo, a Semente prometida, estava envolvido na primeira profecia a respeito do 'descendente [em hebr. literalmente "semente"] da mulher'. (Gên 3:15) Passaram-se mais de 2.000 anos antes de se mencionar de novo esta promessa duma 'semente', Deus dizendo a Abraão: "Todas as nações da terra hão de abençoar a si mesmas por meio do teu descendente [semente]." (Gên 22:18) Mais de 800 anos depois, deu-se renovada garantia ao Rei Davi, descendente de Abraão, e, com a passagem de mais tempo, os profetas de Jeová mantiveram fulgurantemente acesa esta chama de esperança. (2Sa 7:12, 16; Is 9:6, 7) Mais de 1.000 anos depois de Davi, e 4.000 anos após a profecia original no Éden, surgiu o próprio Descendente (Semente) Prometido, Jesus Cristo, o herdeiro legal do "trono de Davi, seu pai". (Lu 1:31-33; Gál 3:16) Ferido na morte pela semente terrestre da "serpente", este "Filho do Altíssimo" proveu o preço do resgate para os direitos de vida perdidos pela descendência de Adão, fornecendo assim o único meio pelo qual a humanidade pode obter a vida eterna. Ele foi então elevado ao alto, para ali aguardar o tempo designado de lançar para baixo, à Terra, "a serpente original, o chamado Diabo e Satanás", para este finalmente ser destruído para sempre. Assim, o magnífico tema anunciado em Gênesis, e desenvolvido e ampliado no restante da Bíblia, é, nos capítulos finais de Revelação, levado a um glorioso clímax, à medida que o grandioso propósito de Jeová, por meio do seu Reino, é tornado evidente. — Re 11:15; 12:1-12, 17; 19:11-16; 20:1-3, 7-10; 21:1-5; 22:3-5.

Esse Reino governado por Cristo, a Semente Prometida, vai defender a soberania de Jeová e santificar o nome dele. Levando avante este tema, a Bíblia magnifica o nome pessoal de Deus de forma mais ampla do que qualquer outro livro; este nome ocorre 6.979 vezes na parte das Escrituras Hebraicas da Tradução do Novo Mundo. Isto em adição ao uso da forma abreviada, "Jah", e às dezenas de casos onde se combina de modo a formar outros nomes, tais como "Jeosué", que significa "Jeová É Salvação". (Veja JEOVÁ [Importância do Nome].) Se essas coisas não estivessem reveladas na Bíblia, nós não saberíamos o nome do Criador, nem a grande questão levantada pela rebelião no Éden envolvendo a soberania dele. Também, não saberíamos o propósito de Jeová de santificar o seu nome e de defender a sua soberania perante toda a criação.

Nesta biblioteca de 66 livrinhos, o tema do Reino e o nome de Jeová estão intimamente entrelaçados com informações sobre muitos assuntos. Suas referências a campos de conhecimento, tais como agricultura, arquitetura, astronomia, comércio, engenharia, etnologia, filologia, governo, guerra tática, higiene, música, poesia e química, são apenas incidentais ao desenvolvimento do tema; não são como uma tese. Todavia, ela contém verdadeiro tesouro de informações para os arqueólogos e os paleógrafos.

Como obra histórica exata, que penetra profundamente no passado, a Bíblia ultrapassa em muito todos os demais livros. No entanto, tem muito mais valor no campo das profecias, predizendo, da forma como o faz, o futuro, o qual apenas o Rei da Eternidade pode revelar com exatidão. A marcha das potências mundiais no decorrer dos séculos, até mesmo a ascensão e a extinção final das instituições hodiernas, foi profeticamente relatada nas profecias de longo alcance da Bíblia.

A Palavra da verdade de Deus, de forma muito prática, liberta os homens da ignorância, das superstições, das filosofias humanas e das tradições insensatas dos homens. (Jo 8:32) "A palavra de Deus é viva e exerce poder." (He 4:12) Sem a Bíblia, não conheceríamos a Jeová, não conheceríamos os benefícios maravilhosos advindos do sacrifício resgatador de Cristo, e não entenderíamos os requisitos que precisam ser satisfeitos para obtermos a vida eterna no justo Reino de Deus, ou sob ele.

A Bíblia é um livro muito prático também em outros sentidos, pois provê conselho sadio para os cristãos sobre como viver agora, como realizar seu ministério e como sobreviver a este sistema de coisas antideus, que só busca os prazeres. Ordena-se aos cristãos que 'cessem de ser modelados segundo este sistema de coisas' por transformarem a mente, deixando o modo de pensar mundano, e eles podem fazer isso por ter a mesma atitude mental humilde "que houve também em Cristo Jesus", e por se despojarem da velha personalidade e se revestirem da nova. (Ro 12:2; Fil 2:5-8; Ef 4:23, 24; Col 3:5-10) Isto significa demonstrar os frutos do espírito de Deus, "amor, alegria, paz, longanimidade, benignidade, bondade, fé, brandura, autodomínio" — assuntos sobre os quais há muita coisa escrita em toda a Bíblia — Gál 5:22, 23; Col 3:12-14.

Autenticidade. A veracidade da Bíblia tem sido atacada de muitos lados, mas nenhum desses esforços de modo algum tem minado ou enfraquecido a posição dela.

História bíblica. Sua integridade para com a verdade mostra-se sólida em qualquer ponto que possa ser testada. Sua história é exata e se pode confiar nela. Por exemplo, o que ela diz sobre a queda de Babilônia diante dos medos e dos persas não pode ser refutado com êxito (Je 51:11, 12, 28; Da 5:28), tampouco o pode o que ela diz sobre pessoas tais como o babilônio Nabucodonosor (Je 27:20; Da 1:1); o egípcio Rei Sisaque (1Rs 14:25; 2Cr 12:2); os assírios Tiglate-Pileser III e Senaqueribe (2Rs 15:29; 16:7; 18:13); os imperadores romanos Augusto, Tibério e Cláudio (Lu 2:1; 3:1; At 18:2); romanos tais como Pilatos, Félix e Festo (At 4:27; 23:26; 24:27), nem o que ela diz sobre o templo de Ártemis, em Éfeso, e sobre o Areópago, em Atenas (At 19:35; 17:19-34). O que a Bíblia diz sobre estes e outros lugares, pessoas ou eventos é historicamente exato em todos os pormenores. O arqueólogo W. F. Albright observou: "Tem havido um retorno geral ao apreço da exatidão da história religiosa de Israel, tanto no aspecto geral como nos pormenores factuais." — Veja ARQUEOLOGIA.

Raças e línguas. O que a Bíblia diz sobre raças e línguas da humanidade também é veraz. Todos os povos, sem considerar estatura, cultura, cor ou língua, são membros de uma só família humana.

TABELA DOS LIVROS DA BÍBLIA NA ORDEM EM QUE FORAM TERMINADOS

(A ordem em que os livros da Bíblia foram escritos, e onde cada um se situa em relação aos demais, é aproximada; algumas datas [e lugares da escrita] são incertas. O símbolo a. significa "antes"; d., "depois"; e c., "cerca de" ou "por volta de".)

Escrituras Hebraicas (AEC)

Livro	Escritor	Data Terminado	Tempo Abrangido	Lugar da Escrita
Gênesis	Moisés	1513	"No princípio" até 1657	Ermo
Êxodo	Moisés	1512	1657-1512	Ermo
Levítico	Moisés	1512	1 mês (1512)	Ermo
Jó	Moisés	c. 1473	Mais de 140 anos entre 1657 e 1473	Ermo
Números	Moisés	1473	1512-1473	Ermo/ Planícies de Moabe
Deuteronômio	Moisés	1473	2 meses (1473)	Planícies de Moabe
Josué	Josué	c. 1450	1473–c. 1450	Canaã
Juízes	Samuel	c. 1100	c. 1450–c. 1120	Israel
Rute	Samuel	c. 1090	11 anos de governo por juízes	Israel
1 Samuel	Samuel; Gade; Natã	c. 1078	c. 1180-1078	Israel
2 Samuel	Gade; Natã	c. 1040	1077–c. 1040	Israel
Cântico de Salomão	Salomão	c. 1020		Jerusalém
Eclesiastes	Salomão	a. 1000		Jerusalém
Jonas	Jonas	c. 844
Joel	Joel	c. 820 (?)		Judá
Amós	Amós	c. 804		Judá
Oseias	Oseias	d. 745	a. 804–d. 745	Samaria (Distrito de)
Isaías	Isaías	d. 732	c. 778–d. 732	Jerusalém
Miqueias	Miqueias	a. 717	c. 777-717	Judá
Provérbios	Salomão; Agur; Lemuel	c. 717		Jerusalém
Sofonias	Sofonias	a. 648		Judá
Naum	Naum	a. 632		Judá
Habacuque	Habacuque	c. 628 (?)		Judá
Lamentações	Jeremias	607		Perto de Jerusalém
Obadias	Obadias	c. 607
Ezequiel	Ezequiel	c. 591	613–c. 591	Babilônia
1 e 2 Reis	Jeremias	580	c. 1040-580	Judá/Egito
Jeremias	Jeremias	580	647-580	Judá/Egito
Daniel	Daniel	c. 536	618–c. 536	Babilônia
Ageu	Ageu	520	112 dias (520)	Jerusalém
Zacarias	Zacarias	518	520-518	Jerusalém
Ester	Mordecai	c. 475	493–c. 475	Susã, Elão
1 e 2 Crônicas	Esdras	c. 460	Após 1 Crônicas 9:44, 1077-537	Jerusalém (?)
Esdras	Esdras	c. 460	537–c. 467	Jerusalém
Salmos	Davi e outros	c. 460
Neemias	Neemias	d. 443	456–d. 443	Jerusalém
Malaquias	Malaquias	d. 443		Jerusalém

A divisão tripartida da família humana em raças jafética, camítica e semítica, todos descendentes de Adão por meio de Noé, não pode ser refutada com êxito. (Gên 9:18, 19; At 17:26) Diz Sir Henry Rawlinson: "Se nos guiássemos pela mera interseção das veredas linguísticas, e de modo independente de toda referência ao registro bíblico, deveríamos ainda ser levados a nos fixar nas planícies de Sinear, como o foco de onde radiaram as várias linhas." — The Historical Evidences of the Truth of the Scripture Records (As Evidências Históricas da Verdade dos Registros das Escrituras), de G. Rawlinson, 1862, p. 287; Gên 11:2-9.

Qualidade prática. Os ensinos, os exemplos e as doutrinas da Bíblia são muito práticos para o homem moderno. Os princípios justos e as elevadas normas de moral contidos neste livro destacam-no acima de todos os outros livros. A Bíblia não somente responde a importantes perguntas, mas oferece também muitas sugestões práticas, as quais, se fossem seguidas, melhorariam em muito a saúde física e mental da população da Terra. A Bíblia estabelece princípios do que é certo e do que é errado, que servem de guia para transações comerciais justas (Mt 7:12; Le 19:35, 36; Pr 20:10; 22:22, 23), diligência (Ef 4:28; Col 3:23; 1Te 4:11, 12; 2Te 3:10-12), conduta moral pura (Gál 5:19-23; 1Te 4:3-8; Êx 20:14-17; Le 20:10-16), associações edificantes (1Co 15:33; He 10:24, 25; Pr 5:3-11; 13:20), boas relações familiares (Ef 5:21-33; 6:1-4; Col 3:18-21; De 6:4-9; Pr 13:24). Conforme disse certa vez o famoso educador William Lyon Phelps: "Creio que o conhecimento da Bíblia sem um curso universitário é mais valioso do que um curso universitário sem a Bíblia." (The New Dictionary of Thoughts [O Novo Dicionário de Pensamentos], p. 46) John Quincy Adams escreveu a respeito da Bíblia: "Dentre todos os livros do mundo, ela é o que mais contribui para tornar os homens bons, sábios e felizes." — Letters of John Quincy Adams to His Son (Cartas de John Quincy Adams ao Seu Filho), 1849, p. 9.

Exatidão científica. No que se refere à exatidão científica, a Bíblia não fica para trás. Quer descreva a ordem progressiva da preparação da Terra para ser habitada por humanos (Gên 1:1-31), fale da Terra como sendo esférica e suspensa sobre o "nada" (Jó 26:7; Is 40:22), classifique a lebre como ruminante (Le 11:6), quer declare que "a alma da carne está no sangue" (Le 17:11-14), a Bíblia é cientificamente correta.

Culturas e costumes. No que se refere a pontos relacionados com culturas e costumes, de modo algum a Bíblia está errada. Em questões políticas, a Bíblia sempre menciona o governante pelo título correto que ele tinha na época da escrita. Por exemplo, Herodes Ântipas e Lisânias são chamados de governantes distritais (tetrarcas), Herodes Agripa (II) de rei, e Gálio de procônsul. (Lu 3:1; At 25:13; 18:12) Procissões triunfais de exércitos vitoriosos, junto com os seus cativos, eram comuns nos tempos romanos. (2Co 2:14) A hospitalidade para com estranhos, o modo de vida oriental, a maneira de comprar propriedade, processos jurídicos em fazer contratos, e a prática da circuncisão entre os hebreus e outros povos, são mencionados na Bíblia, e em todos esses pormenores a Bíblia é exata. — Gên 18:1-8; 23:7-18; 17:10-14; Je 9:25, 26.

Candura. Os escritores da Bíblia mostraram uma candura que não se encontra entre outros escritores antigos. Desde o começo, Moisés relatou francamente os seus próprios pecados, bem como os pecados e erros do seu povo, praxe seguida por outros escritores hebreus. (Êx 14:11, 12; 32:1-6; Núm 14:1-9; 20:9-12; 27:12-14; De 4:21) Os pecados de grandes personagens, tais como Davi e Salomão, não foram encobertos, mas foram relatados. (2Sa 11:2-27; 1Rs 11:1-13) Jonas contou a sua própria desobediência. (Jon 1:1-3; 4:1) Os outros profetas, igualmente, demonstraram esta mesma qualidade franca e cândida. Escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs mostraram a mesma consideração pelo relato verídico como a demonstrada nas Escrituras Hebraicas. Paulo fala sobre o seu anterior proceder pecaminoso na vida; sobre Marcos não perseverar na obra missionária; e também se relatam os erros do apóstolo Pedro. (At 22:19, 20; 15:37-39; Gál 2:11-14) Tal relato franco e aberto aumenta a confiança na afirmação da Bíblia de ser honesta e veraz.

Integridade. Os fatos atestam a integridade da Bíblia. A narrativa bíblica está inseparavelmente entrelaçada com a história dos tempos. Fornece instruções francas e verídicas na maneira mais simples. O sincero fervor e fidelidade de seus escri-

Escrituras Gregas Cristãs (EC)

Livro	Escritor	Data Terminado	Tempo Abrangido	Lugar da Escrita
Mateus	Mateus	c. 41	2 AEC–33 EC	Palestina
1 Tessalonicenses	Paulo	c. 50		Corinto
2 Tessalonicenses	Paulo	c. 51		Corinto
Gálatas	Paulo	c. 50-52		Corinto ou Antioquia da Síria
1 Coríntios	Paulo	c. 55		Éfeso
2 Coríntios	Paulo	c. 55		Macedônia
Romanos	Paulo	c. 56		Corinto
Lucas	Lucas	c. 56-58	3 AEC–33 EC	Cesareia
Efésios	Paulo	c. 60-61		Roma
Colossenses	Paulo	c. 60-61		Roma
Filêmon	Paulo	c. 60-61		Roma
Filipenses	Paulo	c. 60-61		Roma
Hebreus	Paulo	c. 61		Roma
Atos	Lucas	c. 61	33–c. 61 EC	Roma
Tiago	Tiago	a. 62		Jerusalém
Marcos	Marcos	c. 60-65	29-33 EC	Roma
1 Timóteo	Paulo	c. 61-64		Macedônia
Tito	Paulo	c. 61-64		Macedônia (?)
1 Pedro	Pedro	c. 62-64		Babilônia
2 Pedro	Pedro	c. 64		Babilônia (?)
2 Timóteo	Paulo	c. 65		Roma
Judas	Judas	c. 65		Palestina (?)
Revelação	João	c. 96		Patmos
João	João	c. 98	Após preâmbulo, 29-33 EC	Éfeso, ou cercanias
1 João	João	c. 98		Éfeso, ou cercanias
2 João	João	c. 98		Éfeso, ou cercanias
3 João	João	c. 98		Éfeso, ou cercanias

tores, seu ardente zelo pela verdade e seu meticuloso esforço de manter a exatidão nos pormenores são o que esperaríamos da Palavra da verdade de Deus. — Jo 17:17.

Profecias. Se houver um ponto único que por si só prova que a Bíblia é a inspirada Palavra de Jeová, este é o das profecias. Há na Bíblia dezenas de profecias de longo alcance que já se cumpriram. Pode-se ver uma lista parcial delas no livro "Toda a Escritura É Inspirada por Deus e Proveitosa", pp. 335-337.

Preservação. Atualmente, não se sabe da existência de nenhum dos escritos originais das Escrituras Sagradas. Jeová, porém, cuidou de que se fizessem cópias para substituir os originais envelhecidos. Também, a partir do exílio babilônico, e depois, com o aumento de muitas comunidades judaicas fora da Palestina, houve crescente demanda de cópias das Escrituras. Esta demanda foi satisfeita por copistas profissionais, que fizeram esforços extraordinários para atingir exatidão nos seus manuscritos. Esdras era exatamente tal homem, "copista destro da lei de Moisés, dada por Jeová, o Deus de Israel". — Esd 7:6.

Durante centenas de anos continuaram a ser feitas cópias a mão das Escrituras, período em que a Bíblia foi ampliada com a adição das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Também apareceram em outras línguas traduções ou versões desses Escritos Sagrados. De fato, as Escrituras Hebraicas têm a honra de ser o primeiro livro de destaque traduzido para outra língua. Existem hoje milhares de tais manuscritos e versões da Bíblia. — Veja MANUSCRITOS DA BÍBLIA; VERSÕES.

A primeira Bíblia impressa, a Bíblia de Gutenberg, saiu do prelo em 1456. Atualmente, a distribuição da Bíblia (inteira ou em partes) já atingiu mais de cinco bilhões de exemplares em bem mais de 3.000 línguas. Mas isto não foi conseguido sem grande oposição de muitos lados. De fato, a Bíblia tem tido mais inimigos do que qualquer outro livro; papas e concílios até mesmo proibiram a leitura da Bíblia sob pena de excomunhão. Milhares de amantes da Bíblia perderam a vida, e milhares de exemplares da Bíblia foram entregues às chamas. Uma das vítimas na luta da Bíblia para sobreviver foi o tradutor William Tyndale, que certa vez declarou num debate com um clérigo: "Se Deus me poupar a vida, farei com que, antes de se passarem muitos anos, o rapaz que maneja o arado saiba mais sobre as Escrituras do que tu sabes." — Actes and Monuments (Atos e Monumentos), de John Foxe, Londres, 1563, p. 514.

Todo o crédito e agradecimento pela sobrevivência da Bíblia em face de tal oposição violenta cabe a Jeová, o Preservador da sua Palavra. Este fato dá sentido adicional à citação do apóstolo Pedro, tirada do profeta Isaías: "Toda a carne é como a erva, e toda a sua glória é como flor da erva; a erva se resseca e a flor cai, mas a declaração de Jeová permanece para sempre." (1Pe 1:24, 25; Is 40:6-8) Portanto, faremos bem em "prestar atenção a ela como a uma lâmpada que brilha em lugar escuro", neste século 21. (2Pe 1:19; Sal 119:105) O homem cujo "agrado é na lei de Jeová, e na sua lei ele lê dia e noite em voz baixa", e que coloca em prática as coisas que lê, é o que prospera e é feliz. (Sal 1:1, 2; Jos 1:8) Para ele, as leis, as advertências, as ordens, os mandamentos e as decisões judiciais de Jeová, contidos na Bíblia, são "mais doces do que o mel", e a sabedoria derivada destes é 'mais desejável do que o ouro, sim, mais do que muito ouro refinado', porque significa a sua própria vida. — Sal 19:7-10; Pr 3:13, 16-18; veja CÂNON.

BICATE-ÁVEN [Planície do Que É Prejudicial (Algo Prejudicial)]. Um lugar ou uma planície associada com Damasco e Bete-Éden, na profecia de Jeová dada por meio de Amós, predizendo o exílio do povo da Síria. (Am 1:5) Na ausência de qualquer registro duma cidade ou vila síria deste nome, alguns peritos relacionam Bicate-Áven com o vale de Beqaʿ, entre os montes Líbano e Antilíbano. O predito decepamento dos habitantes de Bicate-Áven ocorreu evidentemente em resultado da conquista da Síria pelo rei assírio Tiglate-Pileser III. — 2Rs 16:9, 10.

BICRI. Pai ou antepassado benjamita do homem imprestável chamado Seba, que se rebelou contra Davi. Nesta ação, os bicritas (beritas, Al) apoiaram Seba. — 2Sa 20:1-22.

BICRITAS. Evidentemente descendentes do benjamita Bicri, ou membros da sua família. Apoiaram o insurgente "Seba, filho de Bicri", na sua rebelião contra o Rei Davi. — 2Sa 20:1, 2, 14, 15.

BIDCAR [possivelmente: Filho de Dequer]. Ajudante de ordens de Jeú, o qual, "segundo a palavra de Jeová", lançou o cadáver do Rei Jeorão, de Israel, no campo de Nabote. — 2Rs 9:25, 26.

BIGODE. Veja BARBA.

BIGTÁ. Um dos sete oficiais da corte enviados pelo Rei Assuero para trazer à sua presença a Rainha Vasti. — Est 1:10, 11; veja OFICIAL DA CORTE.

BIGTÃ, BIGTANA. Um dos dois porteiros no palácio persa, que conspiraram contra a vida do Rei Assuero. Mordecai soube da trama, a Rainha Ester a revelou ao rei, Bigtã foi enforcado, e o incidente foi registrado nos arquivos reais. — Est 2:21-23; 6:2.

BIGVAI.

1. Antepassado de uns 2.000 “filhos de Bigvai” que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Esd 2:1, 2, 14; Ne 7:19) Mais tarde, em 468 AEC, mais dos seus descendentes fizeram a viagem junto com Esdras. — Esd 8:1, 14.

2. Um homem alistado com destaque entre os que retornaram a Jerusalém, do exílio babilônico, junto com Zorobabel. — Esd 2:1, 2; Ne 7:7.

3. Um homem deste nome, ou um representante do grupo familiar mencionado no N.º 1, que atestou o “arranjo fidedigno” de Neemias. — Ne 9:38; 10:1, 16.

BILA.

1. Uma das servas da casa de Labão, que ele deu à sua filha Raquel, para ser serva desta, por ocasião do seu casamento com Jacó. (Gên 29:29) Isso ocorreu em Padã-Arã, situada na região do planalto setentrional da Mesopotâmia. Quando Raquel, com o passar do tempo, mostrou ser infecunda, ela deu Bila a Jacó como esposa secundária, para que, por meio de sua serva, Raquel pudesse ter filhos, assim como o fizera Sara. (Gên 16:2) Deste modo, Bila teve o privilégio de se tornar a mãe de dois filhos, Dã e Naftali, cujos descendentes formaram 2 das 12 tribos de Israel. (Gên 30:3-8; 35:25; 1Cr 7:13) Quando Jacó voltou à terra de Canaã, Bila, junto com seus filhos, foi pessoalmente apresentada a Esaú, irmão gêmeo de Jacó. Depois da morte de Raquel, Rubem, o filho mais velho de Jacó, cometeu fornicação com Bila. — Gên 35:22; 49:3, 4.

2. Cidade pertencente à tribo de Simeão, situada dentro da região do Negebe de Judá (1Cr 4:29), evidentemente a Baalá de Josué 15:29.

BILÃ.

1. Primeiro filho alistado do xeque Ezer, horeu. — Gên 36:20, 21, 27; 1Cr 1:42.

2. Filho de Jediael, benjamita. Os sete filhos de Bilã eram chefes de família, cujos descendentes, em certa ocasião, ascenderam a 17.200 “homens poderosos, valentes”. — 1Cr 7:6, 10, 11.

BILDADE. Um dos três companheiros de Jó, chamado de suíta; descendente de Suá, filho de Abraão por Quetura. (Jó 2:11; Gên 25:2; 1Cr 1:32) Assumindo seu segundo lugar nas três fases do debate, Bildade usualmente seguia o tema geral estabelecido por Elifaz; seus discursos eram mais curtos e mais mordazes, embora não tanto quanto os de Zofar. Bildade foi o primeiro a acusar os filhos de Jó de transgressão, e, por conseguinte, de merecerem a calamidade que lhes sobreveio. Com raciocínio torcido, usou a seguinte ilustração: Assim como o papiro e as canas se secam e morrem sem água, o mesmo se dá com “todos os que se esquecem de Deus” — declaração verídica em si, mas totalmente errônea ao dar a entender que se aplicava a Jó, temente a Deus. (Jó 8) Assim como Elifaz, Bildade classificou falsamente as aflições de Jó como as que sobrevêm aos iníquos: ‘não haveria progênie nem posteridade’ para o pobre Jó, insinuou Bildade. (Jó 18) Em seu terceiro discurso, um discurso curto, em que Bildade argumentou que o homem é “um gusano”, e “um verme”, e por isso impuro diante de Deus, as palavras ‘confortadoras’ dos três companheiros de Jó chegaram ao fim. (Jó 25) Por fim, Bildade, junto com os outros dois, foi divinamente instruído a oferecer um sacrifício queimado e a pedir que Jó orasse em seu favor. — Jó 42:7-9.

BILEÃO [possivelmente: Engolidor]. Cidade designada aos levitas da família de Coate, que lhes foi dada do território da meia tribo de Manassés, situada ao O do rio Jordão. (1Cr 6:70; LXX: “Ieblaam”) A lista das cidades levitas em Josué 21:11-39 não inclui Bileão, mas muitos peritos acham que um erro de escriba fez com que se repetisse Gate-Rimom no versículo 25 , em lugar de Bileão. Bileão parece ser uma grafia variante de Ibleão, forma mais frequentemente usada.

BILGA [Abrilhantamento].

1. Chefe da 15.ª das 24 turmas de serviço sacerdotal, quando Davi reorganizou o serviço no santuário. — 1Cr 24:1, 3, 14.

2. Sacerdote que retornou a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Ne 12:1, 5, 7) Na geração seguinte, o cabeça da sua casa paterna era Samua. — Ne 12:12, 18, 26.

BILGAI [Abrilhantamento]. Sacerdote, ou antepassado de um, que concordou com o pacto providenciado por Neemias. — Ne 10:1, 8.

BILSÃ. Um dos homens de destaque que retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:2; Ne 7:7.

BIMAL. Um dos cabeças dos maiorais na tribo de Aser. — 1Cr 7:30, 33, 40.

BINEÁ. Veja BINEIA.

BINEIA. Descendente de Jonatã, filho de Saul; da tribo de Benjamim. — 1Cr 8:33-37, 40; 9:39-43.

BINUI [forma abreviada de Benaia, significando “Jeová Edificou”].

1. Antepassado em Israel, cujos descendentes, mais de 600 deles, retornaram a Jerusalém em 537 AEC. (Ne 7:6, 7, 15) Ele é chamado Bani em Esdras 2:10.

2. Levita que retornou junto com Zorobabel, em 537 AEC. (Ne 12:1, 8) Foi evidentemente o filho dele, Noadias, que ajudou a cuidar dos utensílios adicionais do templo, quando Esdras os entregou no templo em Jerusalém, em 468 AEC. — Esd 8:33.

3. Um "dos filhos de Paate-Moabe", que, em vista do incentivo de Esdras, despediram suas esposas estrangeiras e os filhos. — Esd 10:30, 44.

4. Um israelita, que teve "filhos" dos quais diversos despediram suas esposas estrangeiras. — Esd 10:38, 44.

5. Um israelita que ajudou Neemias na reconstrução da muralha de Jerusalém. (Ne 3:24) Este filho de Henadade talvez seja o N.º 6.

6. Um dos filhos levíticos de Henadade. Possivelmente antepassado de um que concordou com o "arranjo fidedigno" nos dias de Neemias; neste caso, ele poderia ser o N.º 2. (Ne 9:38; 10:1, 9) Por outro lado, se o próprio Binui selou este arranjo, em vez de um dos seus descendentes, ele pode ter sido o N.º 5. Ou, simplesmente, pode ter sido outra pessoa com este nome.

BIRSA. Rei de Gomorra, derrotado por Quedorlaomer e seus aliados na Baixada de Sidim. — Gên 14:1-11.

BIRZAÍTE. Nome que ocorre na genealogia de Aser, da família de Malquiel. (1Cr 7:30, 31) Visto que Birzaíte é o único nome dos alistados em 1 Crônicas 7:30, 31, que não se encontra no registro genealógico paralelo de Gênesis 46:17, alguns acham que Birzaíte se refere a um lugar em torno do qual se estabeleceram os descendentes de Malquiel, ou pensam que foi uma região em que Malquiel era o principal habitante, assim como se fala de Sobal como "pai de Quiriate-Jearim" e de Salma como "pai de Belém". (1Cr 2:51, 52) Supondo-se que Birzaíte fosse o nome de um lugar, alguns o identificariam com Birzeit, a uns 21 km ao NNO de Jerusalém; mas, apesar da similaridade dos nomes, a localização de Birzeit, perto da fronteira meridional de Efraim (em vez de no território de Aser), não apoia tal identificação.

BIRZAVITE. Veja BIRZAÍTE.

BISLÃO [possivelmente: Em Paz]. Opositor da reconstrução pós-exílica do templo, que participou em escrever ao rei persa Artaxerxes uma carta de acusação falsa contra os judeus. — Esd 4:6, 7; veja ARTAXERXES N.º 1.

BISTA. Um dos sete oficiais da corte que o Rei Assuero mandou buscar a Rainha Vasti. — Est 1:10, 11; veja OFICIAL DA CORTE.

BITIA [do egípcio, significando "Rainha"]. Filha de um faraó e esposa de Merede, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 4:1, 18.

BITÍNIA. Província romana na parte setentrional da Ásia Menor. Estava situada no que agora é o NO da Turquia, estendendo-se para o leste de Istambul, ao longo do litoral meridional do Mar Negro. Na segunda viagem missionária de Paulo, depois de Timóteo se juntar a ele e a Silas em Listra, fizeram empenho de viajar para a Bitínia, mas "o espírito de Jesus não lhes permitiu isso". (At 16:7) Não se menciona esta região como cenário de pregação apostólica, mas obviamente havia ali cristãos quando Pedro escreveu a sua primeira carta canônica por volta de 62-64 EC. (1Pe 1:1) Plínio, o Moço, escrevendo de Bitínia ao imperador romano Trajano, enquanto Plínio era comissário especial, menciona muitos cristãos na província, declarando que, no começo do segundo século, o cristianismo não se confinava apenas às cidades, mas se havia espalhado 'também às aldeias e aos distritos rurais'. — The Letters of Pliny (As Cartas de Plínio), X, XCVI, 9.

BIZIOTIÁ. Alistada depois de Berseba como uma das cidades na herança tribal de Judá, na região do Negebe. (Jos 15:21, 28) A localização dela é desconhecida. A Septuaginta grega reza aqui "suas aldeias", em vez de usar o nome próprio Biziotiá. — Veja Ne 11:27.

BIZTA. Veja BISTA.

BLASFÊMIA. Esta é a forma aportuguesada da palavra grega bla·sfe·mí·a. O termo grego significa basicamente linguagem injuriosa, difamatória ou ultrajante, e era usado com referência a tal linguagem quer dirigida contra Deus, quer contra humanos. (Veja Re 16:11; Mt 27:39.) A palavra portuguesa "blasfêmia", porém, usualmente fica restrita a linguagem irreverente ou ultrajante contra Deus e contra coisas sagradas. É assim a antítese das palavras de adoração dirigidas ao Ser Divino. — Veja LINGUAGEM ULTRAJANTE.

Visto que lhe foi dado o nome de Di·á·bo·los (que significa "Diabo" ou "Caluniador"), é evidente que o primeiro culpado de blasfêmia foi o adversário original de Deus. Embora aquilo que falou a Eva no Éden fosse disfarçado e sutil, não obstante, retratava o Criador como não sendo veraz. (Gên 3:1-5) Portanto, Satanás tem sido o primeiro instigador de blasfêmia desde então e até agora. — Jo 8:44-49.

A 'invocação do nome de Jeová' que começou no tempo de Enos, durante o período antediluviano, não deve ter sido de natureza reta e certa, porque Abel, muito tempo antes, sem dúvida se dirigia a Deus pelo nome divino. (Gên 4:26; He 11:4) Se esta invocação do nome de Deus, conforme alguns peritos sustentam, foi no sentido de abusar dele e de aplicar impropriamente o nome de Jeová a humanos ou a objetos idólatras, então isto constituiria um ato blasfemo. — Veja ENOS.

O fiel Jó se preocupava que seus filhos possivelmente alguma vez tivessem "amaldiçoado a Deus no seu coração" por pensamentos pecaminosos; e, quando foi sujeito a grande adversidade, o próprio Jó "não pecou, nem atribuiu a Deus algo impróprio", apesar das tentativas blasfemas do Adversário de induzi-lo a 'amaldiçoar a Deus na sua face'. (Jó 1:5, 11, 20-22; 2:5-10) Os três companheiros de Jó, quer intencional quer desintencionalmente, difamaram a Deus e 'pronunciaram Deus iníquo', insinuando que Jó falara e agira blasfemamente. — Jó 15:6, 25; 32:3; 42:7, 8.

Blasfêmia sob o Pacto da Lei. Os primeiros três mandamentos das "Dez Palavras", ou Dez Mandamentos, apresentavam a posição ímpar de Jeová Deus como Soberano Universal, e seu direito exclusivo à adoração, advertindo também: "Não deves tomar o nome de Jeová, teu Deus, dum modo fútil, pois Jeová não deixará impune aquele que tomar seu nome dum modo fútil." (Êx 34:28; 20:1-7) Invocar o mal sobre Deus e amaldiçoar um maioral eram atos condenados. (Êx 22:28) Depois disso, o primeiro caso registrado de blasfêmia foi o de um filho de pais de naturalidade mista, o qual, numa briga com um israelita, "começou a maldizer o Nome e a invocar o mal sobre ele". Jeová decretou a pena de morte por apedrejamento para o ofensor, e Ele estabeleceu isto como o devido castigo para qualquer pessoa que, no futuro, 'maldissesse o nome de Jeová', quer israelita natural, quer residente forasteiro entre eles. — Le 24:10-16.

Pouco depois, a grande maioria dos israelitas tornou-se culpada de murmurar desrespeitosamente contra Jeová. Em resultado disso, foram sentenciados a peregrinar 40 anos no ermo, e os de 20 anos para cima foram sentenciados a morrer ali. (Núm 14:1-4, 11, 23, 29; De 1:27, 28, 34-39) Sua atitude blasfema levou-os ao ponto de falarem em apedrejar os servos fiéis de Deus. (Núm 14:10) Embora a fala ultrajante de Corá, Datã e Abirão fosse na realidade dirigida contra os representantes de Deus, Moisés e Arão, todavia, antes de Deus executar estes homens e os da sua casa diante da tenda deles, Moisés disse aos observadores: "Então sabereis com certeza que estes homens trataram Jeová sem respeito", por desdenharem Suas designações teocráticas. — Núm 16:1-3, 30-35.

Mesmo quando não havia expressões verbais contra Deus, as ações da pessoa contra as leis do pacto de Deus evidentemente importavam em 'falar de modo ultrajante de Jeová', ou em blasfemá-lo. Assim, ao passo que se dava consideração misericordiosa ao violador desintencional da lei de Deus, aquele que cometesse ofensas deliberadas, quer israelita nativo, quer residente forasteiro, devia ser morto, por ter falado de modo ultrajante de Jeová e por ter desprezado a palavra e o mandamento Dele. — Núm 15:27-31; compare isso com De 31:20; Ne 9:18, 26.

Outros atos de blasfêmia registrados nas Escrituras Hebraicas foram os dos filhos do sacerdote Eli (1Sa 3:12, 13) e o do oficial assírio, pagão, Rabsaqué. (2Rs 19:4-6, 22, 23) O inocente Nabote foi condenado por blasfêmia e morto à base do depoimento de testemunhas falsas. (1Rs 21:10-13) Em tempos posteriores, Deus condenou os falsos profetas que tranquilizavam aqueles que eram desrespeitosos para com Jeová. (Je 23:16, 17) Jeová deu um aviso explícito no sentido de que os que o vituperavam receberiam a devida retribuição "no seu próprio seio". (Is 65:6, 7; compare isso com Sal 10:13; Is 8:20-22.) Por causa do proceder apóstata de Israel, o nome de Jeová passou a ser vituperado entre as nações. — Is 52:4, 5; Ez 36:20, 21.

Com o tempo, os ensinos rabínicos fomentaram o conceito errôneo de que Levítico 24:10-23 proibia como blasfêmia mesmo só pronunciar o nome Jeová. A tradição talmúdica também prescrevia que, quando os juízes religiosos ouvissem testemunho sobre palavras blasfemas supostamente usadas pelo acusado, eles deviam rasgar suas vestes, seguindo o exemplo de 2 Reis 18:37; 19:1-4. — The Jewish Encyclopedia (A Enciclopédia Judaica), 1976, Vol. III, p. 237; veja Mt 26:65.

"Blasfêmia" nas Escrituras Gregas. O apóstolo Paulo mostrou o significado básico de bla·sfe·mí·a por usar o verbo grego aparentado bla·sfe·mé·o em Romanos 2:24, ao citar Isaías 52:5 e Ezequiel 36:20, 21, acima mencionados.

A blasfêmia inclui o ato de alegar ter os atributos ou as prerrogativas de Deus, ou de atribuí-los a outra pessoa ou coisa. (Veja At 12:21, 22.) Os líderes religiosos judaicos acusaram Cristo Jesus de blasfêmia por ele ter declarado que os pecados de certas pessoas haviam sido perdoados (Mt 9:2, 3; Mr 2:5-7; Lu 5:20, 21), e tentaram apedrejá-lo como blasfemador, por ter declarado ser Filho de Deus. (Jo 10:33-36) Quando Jesus fez perante o Sinédrio uma declaração a respeito do propósito de Deus para com ele e da alta posição que lhe seria concedida, o sumo sacerdote rasgou sua roupa e acusou Jesus de blasfêmia, pela qual Jesus foi condenado como digno de morte. (Mt 26:63-66; Mr 14:61-64) Não tendo nenhuma autoridade da parte dos romanos para executar a sentença de morte, os líderes religiosos judeus alteraram astutamente sua acusação de blasfêmia para a de sedição, quando conduziram Jesus perante Pilatos. — Jo 18:29-19:16.

Visto que Jesus era o Filho e representante direto de Deus, as coisas faladas contra ele podem também, corretamente, ser definidas como blasfêmia. (Lu 22:65) Assim, também, visto que o espírito santo, ou força ativa, emana de Deus e está intimamente relacionado com a pessoa de Deus, Jesus podia falar sobre a "blasfêmia contra o espírito". Esta é declarada como sendo o pecado imperdoável. (Mt 12:31; Mr 3:28, 29; Lu 12:10) Mostra-se que a blasfêmia se origina no coração da pessoa (Mt 15:19; Mr 7:21, 22); portanto, a condição do coração, manifestada na intenção envolvida, tem de estar relacionada com essa blasfêmia contra o espírito. O incidente que levou à declaração de Jesus, quanto a esse pecado ser imperdoável, demonstra que se refere à oposição à operação do espírito de Deus. Não seria devido a um engano, uma fraqueza ou imperfeição humana; mas a oposição seria proposital e deliberada. Os fariseus viram claramente o espírito de Deus em operação em Jesus para a realização do bem, todavia, por motivos egoístas, atribuíram tal poder a Belzebu, Satanás, o Diabo, destarte blasfemando contra o espírito santo de Deus. — Mt 12:22-32; compare isso com He 6:4-6; 10:26, 27.

Semelhante a Jesus, Estêvão sofreu martírio sob uma acusação de blasfêmia. (At 6:11-13; 7:56-58) Paulo, como Saulo, tinha sido blasfemador e tentara obrigar cristãos a fazer "uma retratação" (literalmente, "a blasfemar"). Mas, ao se tornar ele próprio discípulo, sofreu blasfemas contradições da parte dos judeus, e, em Éfeso, seu ensino foi possivelmente rotulado, por certos elementos, de blasfêmia contra a deusa Ártemis. (At 13:45; 19:37; 26:11; 1Ti 1:13) Por desassociação, Paulo entregou Himeneu e Alexandre 'a Satanás, para que fossem ensinados pela disciplina a não blasfemar'. (1Ti 1:20; compare isso com 2Ti 2:16-18.) Tiago mostrou que os ricos, como classe, inclinavam-se a 'blasfemar do nome excelente' pelo qual os discípulos foram chamados. (Tg 2:6, 7; compare isso com Jo 17:6; At 15:14.) Nos "últimos dias", abundariam os blasfemadores (2Ti 3:1, 2), assim como o livro de Revelação também prediz por declaração direta e por simbolismos. — Re 13:1-6; 16:9-11, 21; 17:3.

BLASTO. O homem encarregado do quarto do Rei Herodes Agripa I. Por causa da sua posição de influência, o povo de Tiro e de Sídon, quando pleiteou a paz com Herodes, primeiro persuadiu Blasto, talvez por meio de suborno. — At 12:20.

BOÃ [possivelmente: Polegar].

1. Descendente de Rubem, cujo nome se deu a uma pedra de demarcação do território de Judá. — Jos 15:6; 18:17.

2. "A pedra de Boã" serviu de marco da fronteira para as tribos de Benjamim e de Judá. (Jos 15:6; 18:17) Encontrava-se perto do canto NO do Mar Salgado, e evidentemente na direção do sopé da planaltina Baixada de Acor.

BOANERGES [Filhos do Trovão]. Expressão semítica encontrada, junto com a sua tradução, somente em Marcos 3:17. Jesus deu-a como sobrenome aos filhos de Zebedeu, Tiago e João, provavelmente refletindo o ardente entusiasmo destes dois apóstolos. (Lu 9:54) Dessemelhante do novo nome de Simão, Pedro, Boanerges não parece ter sido de uso comum.

BOAS NOVAS. Estas se referem às boas novas do Reino de Deus e da salvação pela fé em Jesus Cristo. São chamadas na Bíblia de "as boas novas do reino" (Mt 4:23), as "boas novas de Deus" (Ro 15:16), as "boas novas a respeito de Jesus Cristo" (Mr 1:1), as "boas novas da benignidade imerecida de Deus" (At 20:24), as "boas novas de paz" (Ef 6:15) e as "boas novas eternas" (Re 14:6).

A palavra grega traduzida por "boas novas" ("evangelho" na Al e em outras versões) é eu·ag·gé·li·on. "Evangelizador" (palavra portuguesa que quase é uma transliteração da grega) é um pregador das boas novas. — At 21:8; 2Ti 4:5.

Seu Conteúdo. Uma ideia do conteúdo e do escopo das boas novas pode ser obtido das denominações acima. Incluem todas as verdades a respeito das quais Jesus falou e os discípulos escreveram. Ao passo que os homens da antiguidade esperavam em Deus e tinham fé mediante o conhecimento a respeito Dele, o propósito e a bondade imerecida de Deus começaram a 'tornar-se claramente evidentes pela manifestação de nosso Salvador, Cristo Jesus, que aboliu a morte, mas lançou luz sobre a vida e a incorrupção por intermédio das boas novas'. — 2Ti 1:9, 10.

Séculos antes, Deus havia declarado as boas novas a Abraão, indicando assim o meio pelo qual ele se propôs prover as boas novas. Ele disse: "Por meio de ti serão abençoadas todas as nações." (Gál 3:8) Mais tarde, Jeová falou por meio do profeta Isaías sobre a pregação das boas novas. Jesus Cristo leu esta profecia na sinagoga de Nazaré, dizendo depois: "Hoje se cumpriu esta escritura que acabais de ouvir." (Lu 4:16-21) A profecia de Isaías descrevia o propósito e o efeito das boas novas a serem pregadas, especialmente desde o tempo da vinda do Messias. — Is 61:1-3.

Seu Progresso. Por ocasião do nascimento de Jesus, o anjo anunciou aos pastores: "Não temais, pois, eis que vos declaro boas novas duma grande alegria que todo o povo terá." (Lu 2:10) João, o Batizador, preparou o caminho para a pregação das boas novas por Jesus, dizendo aos judeus: "Arrependei-vos, pois o reino dos céus se tem aproximado." (Mt 3:1, 2) Jesus disse a respeito da pregação de João: "Desde os dias de João Batista até agora, o reino dos céus é o alvo para o qual os homens avançam impetuosamente, e os que avançam impetuosamente se apoderam dele." — Mt 11:12.

Durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus, ele confinou sua pregação das boas novas aos judeus e prosélitos, dizendo: "Não fui enviado a ninguém senão às ovelhas perdidas da casa de Israel." (Mt 15:24) Ao enviar os 12 apóstolos, ordenou-lhes: "Não vos desvieis para a estrada das nações, e não entreis em cidade samaritana; mas, ide antes continuamente às ovelhas perdidas da casa de Israel." (Mt 10:5, 6) Em certa ocasião, pregou a uma mulher samaritana, povo aparentado com os israelitas, mas não porque tivesse entrado naquela cidade a fim de pregar. No entanto, a receptividade daquela mulher e de outros foi tão favorável que Jesus permaneceu com eles por dois dias. — Jo 4:7-42.

Depois da morte e da ressurreição de Jesus, ele deu aos seus discípulos a ordem: "Ide, portanto, e fazei discípulos de pessoas de todas as nações, batizando-as em o nome do Pai, e do Filho, e do espírito santo, ensinando-as a observar todas as coisas que vos ordenei." (Mt 28:19, 20) Disse também que a pregação deles alcançaria a "parte mais distante da terra". (At 1:8) Mas, durante uns três anos e meio depois disso, o espírito santo levou os discípulos a confinar sua pregação aos judeus e aos samaritanos. Daí, Pedro foi enviado por Deus para levar as boas novas aos da casa de Cornélio, oficial do exército romano. (At, caps. 10, 11; 15:7) Desde aquele tempo, as boas novas foram declaradas na maior medida possível e na região mais ampla.

Sua Importância. O apóstolo Paulo escreveu com forte convicção sobre a provisão da salvação feita por Deus mediante Jesus Cristo. Declarou que, se alguém declarasse aos gálatas alguma coisa além do que haviam aprendido, algo que realmente fosse um ensino diferente, 'fosse amaldiçoado'. Daí, apontando para a fonte das boas novas que declarava, Paulo disse: "Nem as recebi dum homem, nem me foram ensinadas, exceto por intermédio duma revelação de Jesus Cristo." (Gál 1:8, 11, 12) Esta forte declaração era necessária porque mesmo então havia alguns que tentavam derrubar a verdadeira fé por pregarem "boas novas diferentes". (2Co 11:4; Gál 1:6, 7) Paulo advertiu sobre o surgimento duma apostasia e declarou que "o mistério daquilo que é contra a lei" já operava então; admoestou os cristãos a se lembrarem do propósito das boas novas, e a se manterem firmes e apegados às tradições orientadas por espírito que haviam aprendido dos apóstolos. — 2Te 2:3, 7, 14, 15; veja TRADIÇÃO.

A fidelidade em apegar-se às boas novas, e em continuar a proclamá-las, era considerada por Jesus como mais importante do que a vida atual da pessoa, e Paulo reconhecia que declará-las fielmente era vital. (Mr 8:35; 1Co 9:16; 2Ti 1:8) A pessoa poderia sofrer a perda de seus bens mais prezados, até mesmo sofrer perseguições, mas, por sua vez, receberia cem vezes mais agora, "casas, e irmãos, e irmãs, e mães, e filhos, e campos . . . e no vindouro sistema de coisas a vida eterna". — Mr 10:29, 30.

As boas novas são a pedra de toque pela qual a humanidade está sendo julgada: A aceitação das boas novas e a obediência a elas resultam na salvação; a rejeição e a desobediência trazem destruição. (1Pe 4:5, 6, 17; 2Te 1:6-8) Tendo especialmente este fato em mira, a motivação da pessoa em pregar as boas novas deve ser pura, e ela deve pregá-las de coração, por amor aos que as ouvem. Os apóstolos tinham tamanho apreço da importância vitalizadora das boas novas, e estavam tão incentivados pelo espírito de Deus e pelo amor, que conferiam, não só as boas novas, mas também suas "próprias almas" aos que davam ouvidos à sua pregação. (1Te 2:8) Deus providenciou que os proclamadores das boas novas tivessem o direito de aceitar ajuda material daqueles a quem as levavam. (1Co 9:11-14) Mas Paulo e seus associados íntimos prezavam tanto seu privilégio de portadores das boas novas, que evitavam cuidadosamente obter disso lucro financeiro, ou até mesmo aparentar fazê-lo em conexão com a sua pregação. O apóstolo Paulo descreve seu proceder neste particular em 1 Coríntios 9:15-18 e em 1 Tessalonicenses 2:6, 9.

Inimigos. As boas novas têm sido amargamente combatidas, e a fonte desta inimizade é identificada pelo apóstolo: "Agora, se as boas novas que declaramos estão de fato veladas, estão veladas entre os que perecem, entre os quais o deus deste sistema de coisas tem cegado as mentes dos incrédulos, para que não penetre o brilho da iluminação das gloriosas boas novas a respeito do Cristo, que é a imagem de Deus." (2Co 4:3, 4) Os primeiros inimigos das boas novas foram os líderes religiosos judeus. Sua inimizade, porém, resultou em bem para os gentios, ou pessoas das nações, no sentido de que abriu a oportunidade para que os gentios fossem coparticipantes da "promessa, em união com Cristo Jesus, por intermédio das boas novas". — Ro 11:25, 28; Ef 3:5, 6.

Os inimigos das boas novas causaram muitos sofrimentos aos cristãos, e fizeram com que os apóstolos precisassem travar luta árdua perante gover-nantes, a fim de defender e estabelecer legalmente as boas novas, para que estas pudessem espalhar-se com a máxima liberdade possível. — Fil 1:7, 16; compare isso com Mr 13:9-13; At 4:18-20; 5:27-29.

O Ministério Terrestre de Jesus e Sua Volta. É digno de nota que durante cerca de seis meses antes de Jesus se dirigir a João, o Batizador, para ser batizado, este pregava: "Arrependei-vos, pois o reino dos céus se tem aproximado", e, quando Jesus surgiu, João apontou Jesus como o "Cordeiro de Deus, que tira o pecado do mundo". (Mt 3:1, 2; Jo 1:29) Assim, voltou a atenção das pessoas para o Rei messiânico, há muito esperado. — At 19:4.

Enquanto Jesus estava na Terra, ele e seus discípulos anunciavam: "O reino dos céus se tem aproximado." (Mt 4:17; 10:7) Jesus, ungido como Cristo, o Rei, disse aos fariseus, seus inimigos: "O reino de Deus está no vosso meio." (Lu 17:20, 21) Este era o tema ou ponto central das boas novas durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus. No entanto, não se relata que depois da morte de Jesus os discípulos tivessem proclamado o Reino como 'se tendo aproximado' ou estando às portas. Antes, as boas novas que pregaram eram sobre Jesus ter deposto a sua vida como preço de resgate para a salvação, ter ascendido ao céu, e estar então sentado à mão direita de Deus. Pregaram também sobre a volta de Jesus num tempo posterior e o seu vindouro Reino. — He 10:12, 13; 2Ti 4:1; Re 11:15; 12:10; 22:20; compare isso com Lu 19:12, 15.

Os discípulos de Jesus perguntaram-lhe: "Qual será o sinal da tua presença e da terminação do sistema de coisas?" Na sua resposta, Jesus enumerou certas coisas que haviam de ocorrer naquele tempo. Entre outras coisas, ele disse: "Estas boas novas do reino serão pregadas em toda a terra habitada, em testemunho a todas as nações; e então virá o fim." (Mt 24:3, 14; Mr 13:10; compare isso com Col 1:23.) Na Revelação dada ao apóstolo João, por volta de 96 EC, João viu um "anjo voando pelo meio do céu" que tinha "boas novas eternas para declarar, como boas notícias aos que moram na terra, e a toda nação, e tribo, e língua, e povo, dizendo com voz alta: 'Temei a Deus e dai-lhe glória, porque já chegou a hora do julgamento por ele' ". (Re 14:6, 7) Estas declarações inspiradas indicam que, nos "últimos dias", haveria uma proclamação sem paralelo das boas novas do Reino.

BOA VONTADE. Tanto a palavra hebraica ratsóhn como a grega eu·do·kí·a, bem como formas aparentadas destas palavras, referem-se àquilo que agrada, ou em que se tem agrado, e são traduzidas "prazer", "beneplácito", "bel-prazer", "modo aprovado", "boa vontade", e assim por diante.

Boa Vontade de Deus. Na Bíblia, os termos acima são usados referentes ao prazer, à aprovação ou à boa vontade de Deus. (Sal 51:18; 106:4; Ef 1:5, 9) Deus especifica claramente o que se requer para agradá-lo, e ele determina a quem aceita por seus amigos, como beneficiários da sua boa vontade. Aqueles que rejeitam a sua Palavra e se rebelam contra Ele não recebem sua boa vontade, mas, antes, sentirão seu desprazer. — Sal 2:5; He 3:16-19.

A Boa Vontade do Homem. As mesmas palavras são também usadas com referência à aprovação dos homens, ou da boa vontade de sua parte. (2Cr 10:7; Est 1:8; Ro 15:25, 26) O apóstolo Paulo falou de alguns que pregavam o Cristo de boa vontade. (Fil 1:15) Estes cristãos sinceros expressavam boa vontade para com o apóstolo, e, portanto, também para com Deus e seu Filho, a quem Paulo representava. Estes, correspondentemente, provariam a boa vontade de Deus. (Pr 8:35; 10:32; 11:27) Outro exemplo da boa vontade do homem para com outros é a expressão do apóstolo Paulo com respeito a seus irmãos carnais, os judeus: "Irmãos, a boa vontade do meu coração e as minhas súplicas por eles a Deus são, deveras, para a salvação deles." — Ro 10:1.

"Homens de Boa Vontade." Quando um anjo anunciou o nascimento de Jesus, ele apareceu, não perante os líderes religiosos judeus, mas perante humildes pastores. Depois de falar aos pastores sobre o nascimento do Messias, uma hoste angélica proclamou: "Glória a Deus nas maiores alturas, e na terra paz entre homens de boa vontade." (Lu 2:14) Os anjos não proclamavam a paz para os inimigos de Deus, que não estavam em paz com Ele. " 'Não há paz para os iníquos', disse o meu Deus." (Is 57:21) A versão Almeida, revista e corrigida, verte Lucas 2:14: "Glória a Deus nas alturas, paz na terra, boa vontade para com os homens." Mas, Deus não expressava ali boa vontade para com os homens em geral; nem queria dizer que sua paz fora estendida aos que se inclinavam para Ele simplesmente dum modo amigável e indulgente. Antes, Deus se referia aos que agradariam a ele por terem genuína fé nele, e que se tornariam seguidores de seu Filho.

Traduções modernas harmonizam-se com este conceito, esclarecendo o assunto. A versão dos Missionários Capuchinhos reza: "Paz na terra aos homens do seu agrado." A Bíblia de Jerusalém traduz esta frase: "Paz na terra aos homens que ele ama." A Bíblia na Linguagem de Hoje a verte: "Paz na terra para as pessoas a quem ele quer bem!" E a Bíblia Mensagem de Deus reza: "Paz na terra aos homens por ele amados." Outras versões modernas rezam de modo similar.

BOAZ, I [possivelmente: Em Força]. Proprietário de terras, de Belém, de Judá, "homem poderoso em riqueza", de cerca do século 14 AEC. (Ru 2:1) Boaz era filho de Salma (Salmom) e de Raabe, e pai de Obede. (Mt 1:5) Foi um elo na linhagem familiar do Messias, o sétimo na linhagem de descendência de Judá. (1Cr 2:3-11; Lu 3:32, 33) Como ocorreu este desenrolar incomum de eventos, permitindo que Boaz fosse incluído na genealogia de Jesus, acha-se preservado para nós no livro de Rute.

Boaz tinha um parente chegado de nome Elimeleque, o qual faleceu, junto com seus dois filhos, sem deixar herdeiro masculino. Das viúvas dos dois filhos, uma, Rute, manteve-se apegada à viúva de Elimeleque, Noemi. Era a época da colheita, e Rute respigava "por acaso" no campo pertencente a Boaz. (Ru 2:3) Ora, Boaz era um verdadeiro judeu, adorador devoto de Jeová. Ele não somente cumprimentava seus ceifeiros com a saudação "Jeová seja convosco", mas, depois de observar a lealdade de Rute para com Noemi, ele também disse a ela: "Jeová recompense teu modo de agir e haja para ti um salário perfeito da parte de Jeová." (Ru 2:4, 12) Quando Rute relatou estas coisas à sua sogra, Noemi exclamou: "Bendito seja ele por Jeová . . . Ele é um dos nossos resgatadores." (Ru 2:20) Além disso, quando a colheita terminou, Noemi explicou a Rute o modo costumeiro de trazer este assunto à atenção de Boaz. Quando Boaz dormia na sua eira, acordou encontrando Rute deitada junto aos seus pés descobertos, pedindo que ele resgatasse a propriedade de Elimeleque pelo casamento levirato. (Veja CASAMENTO DE CUNHADO.) Rute substituiria Noemi, a qual estava além da idade de ter filhos. Sem perder tempo, Boaz, na manhã seguinte, convocou outro parente ainda mais próximo, mas este, chamado na Bíblia apenas de Fulano, negou-se a acatar o arranjo divino. Boaz, porém, fez isso prontamente e tomou Rute por esposa, com a bênção do povo da cidade. Ela deu-lhe um filho chamado Obede, avô do Rei Davi. — Ru 3:1-4:17.

Em todo o relato, desde sua primeira saudação bondosa aos trabalhadores, até aceitar a responsabilidade de preservar o nome da família de Elimeleque, observa-se que Boaz era um homem notável — um homem de ação e de autoridade, o qual, ainda assim, tinha bom autodomínio, fé e integridade, sendo generoso e bondoso, moralmente casto, e plenamente obediente, em todos os sentidos, aos mandamentos de Jeová.

BOAZ, II [possivelmente: Em Força]. A mais setentrional das duas enormes colunas de cobre, erguidas diante do pórtico do glorioso templo de Salomão, era chamada Boaz, que possivelmente significa "Em Força". A coluna meridional era chamada Jaquim, significando "Que [Jeová] Estabeleça Firmemente". Assim, juntando-se as duas, e lendo-se da direita para a esquerda, encarando-se o L, transmitiria a ideia: 'Que [Jeová] estabeleça firmemente [o templo] em força.' — 1Rs 7:15-21; veja CAPITEL.

BOCA. Órgão projetado por Deus para receber e preparar o alimento para o estômago, e também, nos humanos, para falar. Todo proferimento oral deveria resultar em louvor para Ele. (Sal 34:1; 51:15; 71:8; 145:21) O salmista declarou que tudo o que respira louvará a Jeová; portanto, os humanos precisam usar sua boca para fazer isso, se quiserem viver. O apóstolo Paulo explica que a crença em Deus e no seu Filho, mesmo quando se crê de coração, não basta. Ela tem de vir acompanhada por uma declaração pública, a fim de resultar em salvação. — Sal 150:6; Ro 10:10.

Em harmonia com o seu propósito, e com seu direito e poder qual Criador, Jeová pode colocar as palavras apropriadas na boca de seu servo. No caso dos seus profetas, ele fez isso milagrosamente, por inspiração. (Êx 4:11, 12, 15; Je 1:9) Em certo caso, fez com que até um animal mudo, uma jumenta, falasse. (Núm 22:28, 30; 2Pe 2:15, 16) Atualmente, os servos de Deus podem ter as palavras Dele na boca, não por inspiração, mas por meio de Sua inspirada Palavra escrita, que os equipa completamente para toda boa obra. (2Ti 3:16, 17) Não mais precisam esperar que Cristo venha prover as boas novas, nem necessitam dirigir-se a alguma outra fonte para obter o que pregam. Têm isso bem diante de si, pronto para falarem, como lhes foi dito: "A palavra está perto de ti, na tua própria boca e no teu próprio coração." — Ro 10:6-9; De 30:11-14.

Pode Trazer Vida ou Morte. Segue-se que o uso correto da boca é vital, e Jeová assim o declara. Sua Palavra diz: "A boca do justo é fonte de vida." (Pr 10:11) Por conseguinte, a boca tem de ser cuidadosamente guardada (Sal 141:3; Pr 13:3; 21:23), pois o mau uso tolo dela pode levar seu dono à ruína. (Pr 10:14; 18:7) Deus considera a pessoa responsável pelo que procede da sua boca. (Mt 12:36, 37) Alguém talvez fale precipitadamente, fazendo um voto impensado. (Ec 5:4-6) Talvez lisonjeie outrem, para a derrocada deste e para sua própria condenação. (Pr 26:28) É especialmente importante guardar a boca quando se está diante do iníquo, porque um ligeiro desvio do que a sabedoria de Deus orienta Seu servo a dizer, pode trazer vitupério ao nome de Deus, e pode causar a morte de tal pessoa. (Sal 39:1) Jesus nos deu excelente exemplo de submissão à vontade de Deus, sem queixas, ou injúrias lançadas contra seus oponentes iníquos. — Is 53:7; At 8:32; 1Pe 2:23.

O cristão precisa exercer contínua vigilância, pois é imperfeito; portanto, precisa vigiar seu coração. Jesus disse que aquilo que avilta um homem não é o que entra pela boca, mas sim o que sai da boca, pois "é da abundância do coração que a boca fala". (Mt 12:34; 15:11) Assim, precisa-se ter cuidado que nada proceda irrefletidamente da boca, sem se considerar as consequências. Isto exige que se use a mente para aplicar as boas coisas aprendidas da Palavra de Deus. — Pr 13:3; 21:23.

Visto que o poder da boca é grande para produzir quer o bem quer o mal, quando Jeová guia a boca, obtêm-se grandes resultados. Ele fez a boca de Isaías "igual a uma espada afiada", e as palavras na boca de Jeremias, "um fogo". Jeová apoiou as palavras proféticas deles com o seu poder, e elas se cumpriram. (Is 49:2; Je 5:14) Por outro lado, é perigoso escutar algo que saia da boca de alguém que se sabe ser apóstata; isso pode causar a ruína da pessoa. — Pr 11:9.

Uso Figurado. Deus representa a si mesmo, simbolicamente, como tendo boca. Nenhuma de suas pronunciações são expressas sem objetivo, em vão; serão cumpridas até nos mínimos detalhes. (Is 55:10, 11) Assim, aqueles que desejam a vida precisam viver em conformidade com cada palavra que procede da Sua boca. (De 8:3; Mt 4:4) Quando seu Filho Jesus Cristo esteve na terra, ele ajustou toda a sua vida às palavras do seu Pai, e agora lhe foi concedida autoridade universal. Como rei designado por Jeová, ele golpeará a terra com "a vara da sua boca". (Is 11:4) A visão de Revelação mostra-o golpeando as nações com uma longa espada que procede da sua boca. (Re 19:15, 21) Esta figura de retórica representa evidentemente a autoridade que ele exercerá no comando de todos os exércitos celestes de Jeová, ao comandar e supervisionar a luta que resultará na execução dos inimigos de Deus.

Muitas vezes se usa "boca" como sinônimo de linguagem ou da faculdade da fala, como se pode depreender de alguns dos casos supracitados. A regra que governava a evidência, num processo sob a Lei mosaica, e que também é seguida na congregação cristã, é de que uma pessoa só será considerada culpada "pela boca", isto é, pelo testemunho de duas ou três testemunhas. (De 17:6; Mt 18:16; compare isso com 2Co 13:1.) Alguns outros exemplos dum uso similar são encontrados em Jó 32:5; Salmo 10:7; 55:21; 78:36; Ezequiel 24:27; 29:21; Lucas 21:15 n.; Romanos 15:6.

Adicionalmente, "boca" pode referir-se à abertura de algo, tal como um poço (Gên 29:2), uma saca (Gên 43:12; 44:1, 2), uma caverna (Jos 10:22), ou a uma abertura da terra (Núm 16:32), bem como à capacidade da terra de absorver líquidos derramados nela. (Gên 4:11) O Seol, a sepultura comum da humanidade, é mencionado como tendo boca larga, de modo a receber muitos mortos. — Is 5:14.

O Palato. O palato, ou paladar, é o céu da boca, que separa a boca das fossas nasais; tem uma parte macia que forma uma cortina entre a boca e a faringe. Nas Escrituras, em alguns casos, "palato" é sinônimo de "boca". — Pr 8:7; Os 8:1 n.

Tanto Jó como Eliú fazem uso comparativo da palavra paladar ao assemelharem a capacidade deste de distinguir o sabor, ao critério do homem quanto ao que é certo e sábio. (Jó 12:11; 34:3) Que o palato exerce uma função em sentir sabor não é errôneo, conforme às vezes se afirma. Isto se pode ver por observar o papel desempenhado pelo palato no engolir. O alimento é premido pela língua contra o palato e é espalhado ao passar para a faringe, a qual é um tubo cônico que conduz ao estômago e também tem ligação com as fossas nasais. Isto produz melhor difusão do aroma do alimento nas passagens nasais, o que contribui muito para o que se costuma chamar de sabor.

BODE. Veja CABRITO (BODE).

BOFETADA. Veja ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS.

BOLO. Entre os hebreus e outros povos orientais da antiguidade, o pão muitas vezes era assado no formato de discos achatados, e não era incomum referir-se a tal pelo termo "bolo". Todavia, havia bolos de diversos formatos. Por exemplo, usaram-se 'bolos de forma anular' (hebr.: hhal·lóhth) por ocasião da investidura do sacerdócio israelita (Êx 29:2, 23), e Tamar preparou "bolos em forma de coração". (Hebr.: levi·vóhth; 2Sa 13:8 n; veja PÃO.) Abraão disse a Sara para fazer "bolos redondos" (hebr.: 'u·ghóhth), para alimentar os anjos materializados que o visitaram. — Gên 18:6; veja também Núm 11:8; 1Rs 19:6; Ez 4:12.

Jeová disse por meio do profeta Oseias: "O próprio Efraim se tornou um bolo redondo que não foi virado." (Os 7:8) Efraim (Israel) havia-se misturado com povos pagãos, adotando os modos deles e também procurando alianças com nações pagãs, e, consequentemente, era como um bolo não virado. Não era incomum assar bolos em cinzas quentes ou em pedras quentes. Se esses bolos não fossem virados, podiam assar ou mesmo queimar dum lado, e não do outro lado.

Durante a celebração da Páscoa por Israel, deviam ser comidos "pães não fermentados" (pães asmos, ou não levedados; hebr.: mats·tsóhth), e associado com esta observância havia "a festividade dos pães não fermentados". (Êx 12:8, 15, 17-20; 13:3-7; 23:15; 34:18; De 16:3, 8, 16) Bolos de forma anular, não fermentados, umedecidos com azeite, ou obreias não fermentadas, untadas com azeite, estavam entre as ofertas que Israel devia fazer a Jeová

Deus. (Le 2:4-7, 11, 12) Na lei do sacrifício de participação em comum a ser apresentado a Jeová também se fez a provisão para ofertar bolos de forma anular de pão levedado. — Le 7:13.

Depois de se ter trazido a Arca do Pacto a Jerusalém, Davi "repartiu a todo o povo, a toda a massa de gente de Israel, tanto a homem como a mulher, a cada qual um bolo de pão de forma anular [hebr.: hha·láth] e um bolo de tâmaras [hebr.: 'esh·pár] e um bolo de passas [hebr.: 'ashi·sháh], todo o povo indo depois cada um para a sua própria casa". (2Sa 6:19) O bolo de passas consistia em uvas secas, prensadas. Todavia, é possível que pelo menos alguns dos bolos de passas preparados nos tempos antigos fossem feitos com passas e farinha.

Nos dias de Jeremias, o povo de Judá e de Jerusalém empenhava-se em adoração falsa, e as mulheres entre eles 'sovavam a massa para fazer bolos de oferenda à "rainha dos céus"'. (Je 7:18) E em Jeremias 44:19 também se faz referência a esta deidade falsa e a "bolos de oferenda" (hebr.: kaw·wa·ním) feitos para ela. Não há certeza em que consistiam esses bolos de oferenda, mas, evidentemente eram colocados no altar como oferta. — Veja RAINHA DOS CÉUS.

Outros tipos de bolos mencionados na Bíblia são as 'tortas de figos prensados [ou: secos]' (hebr.: deve·lím [1Sa 30:12; Is 38:21]), "bolo doce" (hebr.: la·shádh; Núm 11:8), "bolachas" (hebr.: tsap·pi·hhíth; Êx 16:31), "bolo redondo" (hebr.: tselúl; Jz 7:13), "tortas de passas" (hebr.: tsim·mu·qím; 1Sa 25:18), e "bolos borrifados" (hebr.: niq·qu·dhím; 1Rs 14:3). A palavra grega á·zy·mos significa "ázimo, asmo; não fermentado (não levedado)", e sua forma plural neutra é usada para se referir a "pães não fermentados" e à "festividade dos pães não fermentados". — 1Co 5:8; Mr 14:1.

BOLOR. Em geral, qualquer dentre as numerosas doenças de plantas causadas por fungos. O estrago das plantações pelo bolor era uma das calamidades sentidas pelo Israel infiel. (De 28:22; 1Rs 8:37-39; 2Cr 6:28-30; Am 4:9; Ag 2:17) Tem-se sugerido que o bolor da Bíblia talvez fosse a ferrugem do colmo (Puccinia graminis). Esta grave doença parasítica priva as plantas da nutrição e da água necessárias, e assim pode fazer com que os grãos dos cereais se ressequem. Nos colmos e nas folhas dos cereais atacados aparecem pequenas manchas ferruginosas.

BOLSA. Pequena sacola ou saquinho usado tanto por homens como por mulheres para levar ouro, prata, cobre, moedas cunhadas ou outros itens. As mulheres às vezes possuíam bolsas ou sacolas ornamentais, tendo possivelmente um formato longo e arredondado. (Is 3:16, 22; 46:6; Mt 10:9) As bolsas antigas eram feitas de couro, de junco trançado ou de algodão. Visto que tinham a forma de sacolinha, eram fechadas e amarradas na boca por meio de tiras de couro ou de outros cordões. — Veja SACA.

Usavam-se também o bolso do cinto (literalmente: "cinto"; gr.: zó·ne; Mt 10:9; Mr 6:8), talvez um tipo de cinto para levar dinheiro. O cinto possuía um espaço oco em que se podia levar dinheiro, ou então, se o cinto era feito de tecido e usado dobrado, o dinheiro era guardado nas dobras.

Jesus, ao enviar seus 70 discípulos na obra de pregação, evidentemente na Judeia, disse-lhes que não se provessem de bolsas, indicando que Jeová Deus faria provisões para eles por meio de outros israelitas, entre os quais a hospitalidade era costumeira. (Lu 10:1, 4, 7) Pouco antes da sua morte, porém, Jesus aconselhou os apóstolos a levar bolsas, pois sabia que seus discípulos logo seriam espalhados e perseguidos. Por causa da oposição oficial, até mesmo as pessoas favoráveis à mensagem deles talvez ficassem temerosas de ajudá-los. Também, logo estariam levando a mensagem do Reino a terras gentias. Tudo isso exigiria que os seguidores de Jesus ficassem preparados para cuidar de si mesmos em sentido material. — Lu 22:35, 36.

Destacando o superior valor das coisas espirituais, Jesus instou com seus seguidores a que fizessem para si mesmos bolsas duradouras, adquirindo tesouros celestes. — Lu 12:33.

BONDADE. A qualidade ou estado de se ter interesse ativo no bem-estar de outros; atos ou favores amigáveis e prestimosos. A palavra principal para "benignidade" nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs é khre·stó·tes. Na edição revisada da Bíblia em português, a ideia de "benignidade" geralmente é traduzida por palavras ou expressões que são mais comuns em português, como "bondade", "fazer o bem" e assim por diante. Para mais informações, veja o subtópico "Um Fruto do Espírito" no verbete "Benignidade". Jeová Deus toma a dianteira e é o melhor exemplo em mostrar benignidade de tantas maneiras diferentes a outros, mesmo aos ingratos e iníquos, incentivando-os ao arrependimento. (Lu 6:35; Ro 2:4; 11:22; Tit 3:4, 5) Os cristãos, por sua vez, sob o jugo benévolo de Cristo (Mt 11:30), são exortados a revestir-se de benignidade (Col 3:12; Ef 4:32) e a desenvolver os frutos do espírito de Deus, que incluem a benignidade. (Gál 5:22) Desta maneira, eles se recomendam como ministros de Deus. (2Co 6:4-6) "O amor é . . . benigno." — 1Co 13:4.

"Benignidade" (ou: razoabilidade; literalmente: docilidade; gr.: e·pi·ei·kí·a) é uma notável característica de Cristo Jesus. (2Co 10:1, n.) Paulo foi tratado com extraordinário "humanitarismo" (literalmente: afeição pela humanidade; gr.: fi·lan·thro·pí·a) pelos habitantes de Malta. — At 28:2 n.

A Benevolência de Deus. Assim como nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, também nas Escrituras Hebraicas se faz frequente menção da benignidade ou benevolência. A palavra hebraica hhé·sedh, quando usada com referência à benignidade, ocorre 245 vezes. O verbo aparentado, hha·sádh, significa "agir com lealdade (ou: benevolência)", e possui mais do que apenas o sentido de terno cuidado ou benignidade derivados do amor, embora inclua tais tendências. (Sal 18:25, n.) Hhé·sedh é benignidade que se apega amorosamente a um objeto até que seu propósito em conexão com esse objeto seja realizado. Segundo o Theological Dictionary of the Old Testament (Dicionário Teológico do Velho Testamento), hhé·sedh "é ativo, social e perseverante. . . . [Hhé·sedh] sempre designa, não apenas uma atitude humana, mas também o ato que emerge desta atitude. É um ato que preserva ou promove a vida. É a intervenção a favor de alguém que sofre infortúnio ou aflição. É a demonstração de amizade ou devotamento. Empenha-se pelo que é bom e não pelo que é mau." (Editado por G. J. Botterweck e H. Ringgren, 1986, Vol. 5, p. 51) Portanto, hhé·sedh é mais abrangentemente traduzida "benevolência", ou, por causa da fidelidade, da solidariedade e da lealdade provada associadas com ela, uma tradução alternativa seria "amor leal". No plural, pode ser vertida por "benevolências", "atos de amor leal", "plena benevolência" ou "pleno amor leal". — Sal 25:6, n.; Is 55:3, n.

A benevolência é uma preciosa qualidade de Jeová Deus na qual ele se agrada, e é manifesta em todos os seus tratos com os seus servos. (Sal 36:7; 62:12; Miq 7:18) Se não fosse por ela, já teriam perecido há muito tempo. (La 3:22) Assim, Moisés pôde suplicar a favor do rebelde Israel, tanto à base do grande nome de Jeová, como por Ele ser um Deus de benevolência. — Núm 14:13-19.

As Escrituras mostram que a benevolência, ou o amor leal, de Jeová é demonstrada numa variedade de modos e sob diferentes circunstâncias — em atos de libertação e de preservação (Sal 6:4; 119:88, 159), como salvaguarda e proteção (Sal 40:11; 61:7; 143:12) e como um fator que traz alívio das dificuldades (Ru 1:8; 2:20; Sal 31:16, 21). Por causa dela, a pessoa pode recuperar-se do pecado (Sal 25:7), ser sustentada e apoiada. (Sal 94:18; 117:2) Por meio dela, os escolhidos de Deus são auxiliados. (Sal 44:26) A benevolência de Deus foi magnificada nos casos de Ló (Gên 19:18-22), Abraão (Miq 7:20) e José (Gên 39:21). Foi também percebida na escolha de uma esposa para Isaque. — Gên 24:12-14, 27.

Com o desenvolvimento da nação de Israel, e depois disso, a benevolência de Jeová com relação ao seu pacto continuou a ser magnificada. (Êx 15:13; De 7:12) Isto se deu no caso de Davi (2Sa 7:15; 1Rs 3:6; Sal 18:50), como também com Esdras e aqueles que estavam com ele (Esd 7:28; 9:9), e, semelhantemente, com "milhares" de outros (Êx 34:7; Je 32:18). Em apoio do pacto do reino feito com Davi, Jeová continuou a expressar sua benevolência mesmo depois de Jesus ter morrido, pois Ele ressuscitou a este "leal", em cumprimento da profecia: "Eu vos darei as benevolências para com Davi, que são fiéis." — Sal 16:10; At 13:34; Is 55:3.

É esta benevolência por parte de Jeová que atrai as pessoas a ele. (Je 31:3) Confiam nela (Sal 13:5; 52:8), têm esperança nela (Sal 33:18, 22), oram por ela (Sal 51:1; 85:7; 90:14; 109:26; 119:41), e são consolados por ela (Sal 119:76). Também dão graças a Jeová por sua benevolência (Sal 107:8, 15, 21, 31), bendizem-no e louvam-no por ela (Sal 66:20; 115:1; 138:2), e falam com outros sobre ela (Sal 92:2). Como Davi, jamais devem tentar escondê-la (Sal 40:10), pois ela é boa (Sal 69:16; 109:21) e é uma grande fonte de alegria. (Sal 31:7) Certamente, esta benevolência divina é como uma agradável vereda em que andar. — Sal 25:10.

Em outros textos bíblicos enfatizam-se a transbordante abundância da benevolência de Deus (Sal 5:7; 69:13; Jon 4:2), sua grandeza (Núm 14:19) e sua permanência. (1Rs 8:23) É tão elevada como os céus (Sal 36:5; 57:10; 103:11; 108:4), enche a Terra (Sal 33:5; 119:64), e é estendida a mil gerações (De 7:9) e "por tempo indefinido" (1Cr 16:34, 41; Sal 89:2; Is 54:8, 10; Je 33:11). No Salmo 136, todos os 26 versículos repetem a frase: 'A benevolência de Jeová é por tempo indefinido.'

Frequentemente, esta maravilhosa característica de Jeová, sua benevolência, é associada com outras qualidades magnificentes — sua misericórdia, clemência, veracidade, perdão, justiça, paz e juízo. — Êx 34:6; Ne 9:17; Sal 85:10; 89:14; Je 9:24.

A Benevolência do Homem. Do acima, torna-se evidente que aqueles que desejam ter a aprovação de Deus têm de 'amar a benignidade', e 'praticar mutuamente benevolência e misericórdias'. (Miq 6:8; Za 7:9) Como diz o provérbio: "A coisa desejável no homem terreno é a sua benevolência", e ela lhe traz ricas recompensas. (Pr 19:22; 11:17) Deus se lembrava e se agradava da benevolência demonstrada durante a juventude de Israel. (Je 2:2) Mas, quando ela se tornou "como as nuvens da madrugada e como o orvalho que logo desaparece", Jeová não se agradou disso, pois "agrado-me da benevolência e não do sacrifício", afirma ele. (Os 6:4, 6) Não tendo benevolência, Israel foi repreendido, a própria repreensão sendo na realidade uma benevolência da parte de Deus. (Os 4:1; Sal 141:5) Israel também foi aconselhado a voltar para Deus por demonstrar benevolência e justiça. (Os 12:6) Tais características devem ser manifestadas em todas as ocasiões, se a pessoa há de obter favor aos olhos de Deus e do homem. — Jó 6:14; Pr 3:3, 4.

Na Bíblia há muitos casos em que pessoas mostraram benevolência para com outros. Sara, por exemplo, mostrou tal amor leal para com o seu marido, quando estavam em território inimigo, protegendo-o por dizer que ele era seu irmão. (Gên 20:13) Jacó pediu a José que a exercesse para com ele por prometer não sepultá-lo no Egito. (Gên 47:29; 50:12, 13) Raabe pediu que os israelitas mostrassem benevolência para com ela por preservar vivos os da sua casa, assim como ela tratara similarmente os espiões israelitas. (Jos 2:12, 13) Boaz elogiou Rute por exercê-la (Ru 3:10), e Jonatã pediu que Davi a demonstrasse para com ele e os da sua casa. — 1Sa 20:14, 15; 2Sa 9:3-7.

Os motivos e as circunstâncias que levam as pessoas a mostrar benignidade ou benevolência variam grandemente. Atos incidentais de benignidade podem refletir a hospitalidade costumeira ou uma inclinação para a cordialidade, todavia, talvez não indiquem necessariamente a piedade. (Veja At 27:1, 3; 28:1, 2.) No caso de certo homem que pertencia à cidade de Betel, a benignidade que lhe foi demonstrada realmente visava uma retribuição de favores por parte dele. (Jz 1:22-25) Em outras ocasiões, solicitaram-se atos de benevolência aos beneficiados por favores anteriores prestados a eles, talvez devido à calamitosa situação do peticionário. (Gên 40:12-15) Mas, às vezes, as pessoas falhavam em saldar tais dívidas de benevolência. (Gên 40:23; Jz 8:35) Como mostra o provérbio, uma multidão de homens proclamará sua benevolência, mas poucos são fiéis em exercê-la. (Pr 20:6) Tanto Saul como Davi se lembravam da benevolência que outros lhes demonstraram (1Sa 15:6, 7; 2Sa 2:5, 6), e parece que os reis de Israel granjearam certa fama por sua benevolência (1Rs 20:31), talvez em comparação com os governantes pagãos. No entanto, houve uma ocasião em que a demonstração de benevolência por parte de Davi foi desprezada por causa duma interpretação errônea dos motivos por trás dela. — 2Sa 10:2-4.

Paulo diz que a Lei não foi feita para as pessoas justas, mas para as pessoas más, as quais, entre outras coisas, carecem de benevolência. (1Ti 1:9) A palavra grega, a·nó·si·os, aqui traduzida "faltos de benevolência", também tem o sentido de "desleais". — 2Ti 3:2.

Benignidade Imerecida. A palavra grega khá·ris ocorre mais de 150 vezes nas Escrituras Gregas, e é traduzida de vários modos, dependendo do contexto. Em todos os casos, preserva-se a ideia central de khá·ris — aquilo que é agradável (1Pe 2:19, 20) e cativante. (Lu 4:22) Por extensão, em alguns casos, refere-se a uma bondosa dádiva (1Co 16:3; 2Co 8:19) ou à maneira bondosa de dar. (2Co 8:4, 6) Outras vezes, refere-se ao crédito, à gratidão ou ao agradecimento exigido por um ato especialmente bondoso. — Lu 6:32-34; Ro 6:17; 1Co 10:30; 15:57; 2Co 2:14; 8:16; 9:15; 1Ti 1:12; 2Ti 1:3.

Por outro lado, na grande maioria das ocorrências, khá·ris é traduzido por "graça" por muitos tradutores da Bíblia em português. A palavra graça, porém, com diversos sentidos diferentes, não transmite à maioria dos leitores as ideias contidas na palavra grega. Para ilustrar isso: Em João 1:14, onde a versão Rei Jaime (em inglês) diz: "O Verbo foi feito carne . . . cheio de graça e de verdade", o que se quer dizer com isso? Significa "graciosidade" ou "favor", ou o quê?

O perito R. C. Trench, em Synonyms of the New Testament (Sinônimos do Novo Testamento), diz que khá·ris subentende "um favor prestado de bom grado, sem exigências ou expectativa de retribuição — a palavra sendo assim predisposta para receber sua nova ênfase [conforme dada nos escritos cristãos] . . ., para expressar a inteira e absoluta espontaneidade da benevolência de Deus para com os homens. Assim, Aristóteles, definindo [khá·ris], dá toda a ênfase a este mesmíssimo ponto, que ela é conferida de bom grado, sem nenhuma expectativa de retribuição, e tendo como único motivo a liberalidade e prodigalidade do dador." (Londres, 1961, p. 158) Joseph H. Thayer, em seu léxico, diz: "A palavra [khá·ris] inclui a ideia de benignidade que concede a alguém aquilo que ele não mereceu . . . os escritores do N. T. usam [khá·ris] de modo preeminente para a benignidade por meio da qual Deus concede favores até aos que não os merecem, e concede aos pecadores o perdão de suas ofensas, e os convida a aceitar a eterna salvação por meio de Cristo." [A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament (Léxico Grego-Inglês do Novo Testamento), 1889, p. 666] Khá·ris é aparentada de perto com outra palavra grega, khá·ri·sma, a respeito da qual diz o New Testament Wordbook (Glossário do Novo Testamento, 1956, p. 29), de William Barclay: "A inteira ideia básica da palavra [khá·ri·sma] é a de uma dádiva gratuita e imerecida de algo dado a um homem, a que não se fez jus e que é imerecido." — Veja 2Co 1:11, Int.

Quando khá·ris é usada no sentido acima, com referência à benignidade demonstrada para com alguém que não a merece, como se dá com as benignidades concedidas por Jeová, "benignidade imerecida" é em português um equivalente muito bom para a expressão grega. — At 15:40; 18:27; 1Pe 4:10; 5:10, 12.

O trabalhador tem direito àquilo pelo qual trabalhou, seu pagamento; ele espera seu salário como um direito, como uma dívida para com ele, e o pagamento dele não é nenhum presente ou especial benignidade imerecida. (Ro 4:4) Mas, serem peca-dores condenados à morte (e todos nós nascemos como tais) libertos dessa condenação e declarados justos, é deveras benignidade totalmente imerecida. (Ro 3:23, 24; 5:17) Se se argumentar que os nascidos sob o arranjo do pacto da Lei estavam sob uma condenação maior à morte, porque este pacto os revelava pecadores, então, deve ser lembrado de que maior benignidade imerecida se concedeu aos judeus no sentido de que a salvação foi oferecida primeiro a eles. — Ro 5:20, 21; 1:16.

Bons Portos, Creta, onde o navio que levava Paulo como prisioneiro para Roma fez escala.

Esta manifestação especial da benignidade imerecida da parte de Deus para com a humanidade em geral era o livramento da condenação, por meio de resgate, mediante o sangue do Filho amado de Jeová, Cristo Jesus. (Ef 1:7; 2:4-7) Por meio desta benignidade imerecida, Deus provê salvação para toda sorte de homens (Tit 2:11), algo que os profetas tinham mencionado. (1Pe 1:10) O raciocínio e o argumento de Paulo, portanto, são sólidos: "Ora, se é por benignidade imerecida, já não é mais devido a obras; senão, a benignidade imerecida não se mostraria mais benignidade imerecida." — Ro 11:6.

Paulo, mais do que qualquer outro escritor, mencionou a benignidade imerecida de Deus — mais de 90 vezes em suas 14 cartas. Ele menciona a benignidade imerecida de Deus ou de Jesus na saudação inicial de todas as suas cartas, com a exceção de Hebreus, e fala dela novamente nas observações finais de cada carta, sem exceção. Outros escritores bíblicos fazem referência similar no início e no fim de seus escritos. — 1Pe 1:2; 2Pe 1:2; 3:18; 2Jo 3; Re 1:4; 22:21.

Paulo tinha todo motivo para enfatizar a benignidade imerecida de Jeová, pois antes ele fora "blasfemador, e perseguidor, e homem insolente". "Não obstante", explica ele, "foi-me concedida misericórdia, porque eu era ignorante e agi com falta de fé. Mas a benignidade imerecida de nosso Senhor abundou sobremaneira junto com a fé e o amor que há em conexão com Cristo Jesus". (1Ti 1:13, 14; 1Co 15:10) Paulo não desprezou essa benignidade imerecida, como alguns fizeram tolamente (Ju 4), mas de bom grado a aceitou com agradecimentos e instou com outros que também a aceitaram a 'não desacertarem o propósito dela'. — At 20:24; Gál 2:21; 2Co 6:1.

BONS PORTOS. Porto perto da cidade de Laseia, identificado com a baía na costa S de Creta, que ainda leva o mesmo nome em grego moderno, Kaloi Limniones. (At 27:7, 8) Esta baía está situada a cerca de 8 km ao L do cabo Matala (Akra Lithinon), o ponto mais meridional de Creta.

Por volta de 58 EC, o apóstolo Paulo, como prisioneiro, navegava de Mirra (na costa meridional da Ásia Menor), via Cnido, em caminho para Roma. A linha mais direta de Cnido a Roma teria sido ao N de Creta. Mas, pelo visto, ventos adversos, provavelmente do NO, obrigaram os marujos a tomar a rota meridional de Cnido a Creta, e depois velejar ao abrigo da costa S da ilha, chegando finalmente com dificuldade a Bons Portos. — At 27:5-8.

Quando se pensou em partir de Bons Portos, "já passara um tempo considerável", talvez na espera de que o vento diminuísse, ou por causa da viagem vagarosa e difícil. Já havia passado o jejum do Dia da Expiação (em fins de setembro ou começo de outubro), e, portanto, a navegação era perigosa. — At 27:9.

Paulo, que muitas vezes esteve em perigos no mar e que pessoalmente passara por três naufrágios anteriores (2Co 11:25, 26), recomendou sabiamente que o navio invernasse em Bons Portos. (Não se revela no relato se o seu conselho nesta ocasião fora inspirado.) No entanto, o oficial do exército, evidentemente no comando da questão, acatou antes o conselho do piloto e do dono do navio. Bons Portos era um porto "inconveniente" para invernar; de modo que a maioria aconselhou partir dali, e os marujos passaram a velejar para Fênix, costa abaixo. O vento suave que soprava do S era enganoso. Logo depois, o navio foi apanhado por um vento tempestuoso e finalmente naufragou na costa de Malta, a uns 900 km ao O. — At 27:9-15, 39-41; 28:1.

A respeito deste relato em Atos, James Smith escreve: "É interessante observar como cada acréscimo ao nosso conhecimento da cena da narrativa confirma a sua autenticidade e exatidão. Agora parece, à base das observações do Sr. Brown e dos recentes levantamentos topográficos, que Bons Portos é tão bem protegido por ilhas, que, embora não seja igual a Lutro [que se pensa ser Fênix], deve ser um porto hibernal muito bom; e que, considerando-se a repentinidade, a frequência e a violência com que surgem rajadas de vento do N, e a certeza de que, se surgisse tal ventania na passagem de Bons Portos para Lutro, o navio seria empurrado para o mar, a prudência do conselho dado pelo mestre e dono era extremamente questionável, e que o conselho dado por S. Paulo provavelmente poderia ser apoiado até em bases náuticas." — The Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul (A Viagem e o Naufrágio de S. Paulo), Londres, 1866, p. 85 n.

BOQUERU [Seu Primogênito; Ele É o Primogênito]. Descendente do Rei Saul e de Jonatã; tribo de Benjamim. — 1Cr 8:38; 9:39, 44.

BOQUIM [Chorões]. Um lugar em que o anjo de Jeová se dirigiu aos israelitas, repreendendo-os por terem desconsiderado o aviso de Jeová contra entrarem em relações com os habitantes pagãos da terra. O choro que resultou disso depois entre o povo deu ao lugar seu nome. (Jz 2:1-5) O lugar é desconhecido, mas a expressão "subiu então de Gilgal a Boquim" indicaria um lugar ao O de Gilgal, encontrando-se Gilgal evidentemente no vale baixo do Jordão.

BORASÃ [possivelmente: Cova de Fumaça]. Um dos lugares que Davi e seus homens frequentavam durante o tempo em que ele era fugitivo. (1Sa 30:30, 31) Alguns peritos acham tratar-se de Asã (Jos 19:7), uma cidade simeonita encravada na parte meridional do território de Judá, a pouca distância ao NO de Berseba. — Veja ASÃ.

BORDADO. A antiga arte de usar uma agulha para dar pontos de linha ou de outros materiais de várias cores ou espécies em algum tipo de tecido ou em couro, a fim de produzir uma ornamentação em relevo. A primeira menção bíblica de bordados de padrões e figuras em tecido, por meio de trabalho de agulha, é em relação ao tabernáculo de Israel. Jeová encheu de sabedoria de coração os trabalhadores do tabernáculo, Bezalel e Ooliabe, para fazerem, entre outras coisas, todo o serviço de bordador, diferente do trabalho de tecelão. — Êx 35:30-35; 38:21-23.

Em harmonia com instruções divinas, bordaram-se habilmente querubins nos panos de tenda do tabernáculo, figuras estas que eram visíveis do interior do Santo e do Santíssimo. (Êx 26:1; 36:8) Também se bordaram querubins na cortina que separava esses compartimentos do tabernáculo. — Êx 26:31-33; 36:35.

Para se fazer o éfode a ser usado pelo sumo sacerdote, bateram-se lâminas de ouro em folhas finas, das quais se recortaram fios "para os entremear entre a linha azul, e a lã tingida de roxo, e as fibras carmíneas, e o linho fino, como trabalho de bordador". (Êx 39:2, 3; 28:6) De modo similar, "o trabalho de bordador" entrou na fabricação do "peitoral do julgamento" do sumo sacerdote. — Êx 28:15; 39:8.

O cântico de vitória de Baraque e Débora apresenta a mãe de Sísera à espera de ele retornar do combate contra Israel com despojos que incluíssem vestes bordadas. (Jz 5:1, 28, 30) Jeová, em amor, revestiu figurativamente Jerusalém de uma custosa "veste bordada". Mas os habitantes idólatras dela evidentemente haviam usado vestes bordadas literais para cobrir as imagens dum varão com o qual ela é representada prostituir-se. (Ez 16:1, 2, 10, 13, 17, 18) Jeová predisse também por meio de Ezequiel que, por ocasião da queda da rica Tiro às mãos dos babilônios, os destronados "maiorais do mar" 'se despiriam das suas próprias vestes bordadas'. — Ez 26:2, 7, 15, 16.

BORRA. Partículas em suspensão que sedimentam e se assentam no fundo quando se deixa o vinho descansar. Nas Escrituras, o termo ocorre cinco vezes, sempre no plural (hebr.: shema·rím). É vertido "fezes" por alguns tradutores da Bíblia. Guardar um bom vinho "com a borra" por muito tempo, para envelhecer plenamente, dá-lhe clareza, força e suavidade. (Is 25:6) Por outro lado, quando se deixa um vinho, que já é ruim por causa da qualidade inferior das uvas, engrossar com a borra, isto não melhora o sabor nem o aroma dele, fatos a que os profetas se referem em ilustrações. (Je 48:11; Sof 1:12) Também, numa figura de retórica, o salmista diz que "todos os iníquos da terra" serão compelidos a esvaziar o copo da ira de Jeová, bebendo tudo junto com a borra, até a última gota amarga. — Sal 75:8; compare isso com Ez 23:32-34; veja VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.

BORRACHUDO, MOSQUITO [hebr.: ken, plural: kin·ním; gr.: kó·nops]. Qualquer de uma variedade de pequenos insetos dípteros, muitos dos quais são hematófagos. A palavra hebraica kin·ním (ou: kin·nám), quando usada com referência à terceira praga sobre o Egito (Êx 8:16-18 [8:12-14]; Sal 105:31), tem sido traduzida variadamente por "borrachudos" (NM, Ro, RS), "mosquitos" (CBC; So) e "piolhos" (Al, ALA); "mosquitos-pólvora" e "pulgas" foram indicados como versões alternativas. — AS (Êx 8:16 n.).

Em Isaías 51:6, o termo hebraico ken foi traduzido por "borrachudo" (NM) e "borrachudos" (RS; AS n.). Evidentemente, ken aqui é a forma singular de kin·ním (ou: kin·nám), e não outra palavra hebraica da mesma forma significando "a maneira correta, esta maneira, assim"; a palavra que a precede no texto, kemóh, sozinha, significa "assim" ou "do mesmo modo".

A única outra referência a tal inseto nas Escrituras é a denúncia de Jesus dos escribas e dos fariseus, que coavam o mosquito mas engoliam o camelo. Os líderes religiosos judaicos faziam questão de coisas pequenas, filtrando suas bebidas para não se poluírem cerimonialmente por engolir um mosquito. (Le 11:21-24) Todavia, sua desconsideração dos assuntos mais importantes da Lei era comparável a engolirem um camelo, que também era um animal cerimonialmente impuro. — Le 11:4; Mt 23:23, 24.

BOSCATE [Coisa Inchada [isto é, um ponto elevado]]. Cidade na herança de Judá (Jos 15:39); lar do avô materno do Rei Josias, Adaías. (2Rs 22:1) Alistada entre Eglom e Laquis, evidentemente encontrava-se na região da terra baixa, ou Sefelá. Sua identificação é incerta; alguns a situariam em Dawa'imeh (a atual Amazya), a uns 19 km ao O de Hébron.

BOTÃO. Parte ornamental do candelabro de ouro usado no tabernáculo; designado pela palavra hebraica kaf·tóhr, ou kaf·tór, referindo-se, evidentemente, a uma protuberância redonda. (Êx 25:31-36; 37:17-22) Estes "botões" se alternavam com as flores ornamentais no talo principal e em cada uma das seis hastes do candelabro. Alguns dos botões parecem ter formado uma bossa ou apoio saliente para essas hastes. São discerníveis no candelabro representado no relevo existente no Arco de Tito (em Roma), onde se mostra soldados romanos levando os despojos do templo em Jerusalém, destruído em 70 EC.

BOZEZ. Um de dois penhascos, ou rochedos, em forma de dente, associados com a vitória de Jonatã sobre os filisteus, registrada em 1 Samuel 14:1-14. Jonatã, procurando uma passagem para atravessar e atacar um posto avançado dos filisteus, viu os dois rochedos, um ao N, enfrentando Micmás (onde os filisteus estavam acampados), e o outro do lado S, enfrentando Geba. (1Sa 13:16; 14:5) Entre estas duas cidades desce o uádi Suweinit (Nahal Mikhmas) para o Jordão, e torna-se uma ravina funda, com penhascos quase que verticais um pouco ao L das cidades. A localização dos dois rochedos é considerada como tendo sido no ponto em que o uádi faz uma curva acentuada, embora a identificação exata dos rochedos seja conjectura.

BOZRA [Lugar Inacessível].

1. Cidade destacada de Edom, domicílio do pai de Jobabe, rei edomita no segundo milênio AEC. (Gên 36:31, 33; 1Cr 1:44) Seu destaque se evidencia no fato de que os profetas Isaías, Jeremias e Amós, sob inspiração, referiram-se a ela como representando todo o Edom, destinado a ser desolado. — Is 34:5, 6; 63:1-4; Je 49:12, 13, 17, 22; Am 1:11, 12.

Bozra é identificada com a moderna Buzera, cerca de 50 km a NNE de Petra, e situada perto da antiga estrada chamada de Estrada Real. Ocupava, assim, uma posição bastante central no reino edomita, e guardava os acessos às minas de cobre do Arabá. As ruínas antigas de Buzera mostram que Bozra havia sido uma cidade fortificada, construída num estreito espigão que se estendia do Jebel esh-Shera', com profundos uádis em ambos os lados.

A tradução de Miqueias 2:12 na versão Almeida, revista e corrigida, contém o nome "Bozra", mas a maioria das traduções modernas encaram isso como se referindo, não a uma cidade, mas a um cercado ou redil para ovelhas.

2. Ao profetizar contra Moabe, Jeremias 48:24 se refere a Bozra como estando entre as cidades "da terra de Moabe". Acha-se incluída entre outras cidades do planalto ou "terra da planície" (Je 48:21), e o uso desta mesma expressão hebraica em conexão com Bezer (De 4:43) fez com que alguns peritos as considerassem como provavelmente o mesmo lugar. — Veja BEZER N.º 2.

BRAÇA. Unidade para se medir a profundidade da água. A braça do sistema inglês é comumente vista como tendo quatro côvados (c. 1,8 m), e, aproximadamente, corresponde à distância entre as pontas dos dedos das duas mãos dum homem quando seus braços estão estendidos em direções opostas. Apropriadamente, a palavra grega para "braça" (or·gui·á) deriva duma raiz que significa "esticar; alcançar". — At 27:28 n.

BRACELETE. Veja PULSEIRA.

BRAÇO. Um membro do corpo humano. Os termos hebraico e grego para "braço" (zeróh·a'; bra·khí·on) são frequentemente usados em sentido figurado na Bíblia para representar a capacidade de se exercer força ou poder. (Gên 49:24 n.; Jó 22:8 n.; veja Lu 1:51.) O "braço" de Jeová Deus é imensuravelmente poderoso, capaz de realizar maravilhosas obras criativas. (Je 27:5; 32:17) Pelo seu "braço", Jeová também governa (Is 40:10; Ez 20:33), salva os aflitos (Sal 44:3; Is 52:10), livra os do seu povo (Êx 6:6; Is 63:12; At 13:17), apoia-os e cuida deles (De 33:27; Is 40:11; Os 11:3), julga (Is 51:5), e dispersa seus inimigos (Sal 89:10; Lu 1:51). Quebrar o braço representa destroçar o poder duma pessoa. (Jó 38:15; Sal 10:15; Je 48:25) Por meio de Jesus Cristo, revestido de autoridade e de poder, e atuando qual Juiz e Executor, Jeová manifesta Seu poder, representado pelo Seu "braço". — Is 53:1; Jo 12:37, 38.

O braço de carne, representando o poder humano, é descrito na Bíblia como indigno de confiança e como desapontando aquele que confia nele. Jeová avisa seu povo quanto à falácia e ao desastre de se confiar no braço humano. (2Cr 32:8; Je 17:5) Ele quebrará o braço dos iníquos, que é descrito como pousando opressivamente sobre suas vítimas. — Jó 35:9; 38:15; Sal 10:15.

Na estátua do sonho do Rei Nabucodonosor, o peito e os braços de prata representam a Medo-Pérsia, o reino que sucedeu Babilônia, a cabeça de ouro, como potência mundial. — Da 2:32, 39.

BRANCO. Veja CORES.

BRANDURA. A New Testament Wordbook (Glossário do Novo Testamento), de William Barclay, diz a respeito do adjetivo pra·ýs: "No grego clássico, esta é uma palavra linda. No que se refere a coisas, significa 'suave'. É usada, por exemplo, para uma brisa suave ou uma voz suave. No que se refere a pessoas, significa 'brando' ou 'benévolo'. . . . Há delicadeza em praus, mas, atrás da delicadeza há a força do aço . . . Não se trata de gentileza irresoluta, de apego sentimental, de quietude passiva." (Londres, 1956, pp. 103, 104) Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine), declara que a forma substantiva, pra·ý·tes, "não consiste 'apenas no comportamento exterior da pessoa; nem mesmo em seu relacionamento com o próximo; tampouco na sua mera disposição natural. Antes, é uma graça intimamente ligada à alma; e o exercício dela se volta primeiro e mormente para com Deus. Trata-se daquela disposição de espírito em que aceitamos Seus modos de agir conosco como bons, e, por conseguinte, sem os questionar ou resistir a eles; acha-se intimamente vinculada com a palavra tapeinophrosunē [humildade], e a segue diretamente.' " — 1981, Vol. 3, pp. 55, 56.

A palavra pra·ýs é variadamente traduzida em versões da Bíblia por "manso", "brando", "temperamento brando" e "suave". (Al, AS, NM, NE) Todavia, conforme expresso na obra de Barclay, supracitada, pra·ýs é um pouco mais profunda do que a suavidade, e, quando usada a respeito de pessoas, significa brando, benévolo.

Embora Jeová não tolere o pecado e a maldade, ele proveu amorosamente o meio de se chegar a ele por intermédio do sacrifício resgatador e dos serviços sacerdotais de Jesus Cristo. Portanto, os adoradores e servos de Jeová podem buscar a Sua face sem sentir temor e pavor mórbidos. (He 4:16; 10:19-22; 1Jo 4:17, 18) Jesus representava a Jeová Deus de modo tão perfeito, que podia dizer: "Quem me tem visto, tem visto também o Pai." Ele disse também: "Vinde a mim, todos os que estais labutando e que estais sobrecarregados, e eu vos reanimarei. Tomai sobre vós o meu jugo e aprendei de mim, pois sou de temperamento brando [gr.: pra·ýs] e humilde de coração, e achareis revigoramento para as vossas almas. Pois o meu jugo é benévolo e minha carga é leve." (Jo 14:9; Mt 11:28-30) Concordemente, Jeová Deus é inteiramente acessível aos que o amam, e ele gera brandura, grande confiança e força nos que recorrem a ele.

Uma Característica da Força. Brandura de temperamento ou de espírito não é atributo de alguém de caráter fraco. Jesus Cristo disse: "Sou de temperamento brando e humilde de coração." (Mt 11:29; 2Co 10:1) No entanto, Jesus tinha em seu apoio o pleno poder de seu Pai, e era firme a favor do que é direito; usou de grande franqueza no falar e de ação quando era necessário. — Mt 23:13-39; compare isso com 21:5.

A pessoa de temperamento brando é assim porque tem fé e uma fonte de força. Não se deixa facilmente desequilibrar ou perder o bom senso. A falta de temperamento brando resulta de insegurança, frustração, falta de fé e de esperança, e até mesmo de desespero. Aquele que é falto de temperamento brando é descrito pelo provérbio: "Como uma cidade arrombada, sem muralha, é o homem que não domina seu espírito." (Pr 25:28) Está exposto e vulnerável à invasão de todo e qualquer pensamento impróprio, que pode motivá-lo a ações impróprias.

Um Fruto do Espírito. A brandura é um fruto do espírito santo de Deus, de sua força ativa. (Gál 5:22, 23) Deus, portanto, é a Fonte da brandura, e precisa-se recorrer a Ele, pedindo seu espírito, e cultivar este fruto do espírito, a fim de ter genuíno temperamento brando. Por isso, não é adquirida pelo exercício de simples força de vontade, mas resulta de nos achegarmos a Deus.

A falta de brandura resulta em indevida excitabilidade, dureza, falta de autodomínio e em brigas. Por outro lado, aconselha-se o cristão a preservar a unidade e a paz por meio de "humildade mental e brandura". — Ef 4:1-3.

Ciúme e contenda, quando permitidos a se arraigarem e crescerem, levarão a toda sorte de desordens. A brandura, por outro lado, impedirá que tais condições se desenvolvam entre os seguidores de Cristo. Portanto, o escritor bíblico Tiago exorta os sábios e entendidos na congregação a demonstrarem "conduta excelente" na forma de "brandura que pertence à sabedoria", "a sabedoria de cima". — Tg 3:13, 17.

A "brandura", na Bíblia, frequentemente é associada a "espírito", como, por exemplo, "brandura de espírito", ou "espírito brando". A genuína brandura, assim, é algo mais do que uma qualidade exterior, transitória ou ocasional; antes, faz parte da constituição ou do temperamento da pessoa. O apóstolo Pedro salienta este fato ao dizer: "E, não seja o vosso adorno o trançado externo dos cabelos e o uso de ornamentos de ouro ou o trajar de roupa exterior, mas, seja a pessoa secreta do coração, na vestimenta incorruptível dum espírito quieto e brando, que é de grande valor aos olhos de Deus." — 1Pe 3:3, 4.

O apóstolo Paulo escreve: 'Revesti-vos da brandura', o que, se lido de modo superficial, pareceria indicar que se trata de algo parecido a um verniz, visando a simples aparência exterior; mas, no mesmo contexto, ele admoesta: "Revesti-vos da nova personalidade, a qual, por intermédio do conhecimento exato, está sendo renovada segundo a imagem Daquele que a criou." (Col 3:10, 12; Ef 4:22-24) Isto mostra que a brandura é deveras uma característica da personalidade, primariamente adquirida como fruto do espírito de Deus por meio do conhecimento exato e da aplicação deste, em vez de só herdada naturalmente.

Essencial para os Que Exercem Supervisão. Na sua carta de instruções ao jovem Timóteo, sobre como cuidar corretamente da congregação, Paulo ordenou-lhe, quanto a lidar com assuntos difíceis, dizendo: "O escravo do Senhor não precisa lutar, porém, precisa ser meigo para com todos, qualificado para ensinar, restringindo-se sob o mal, instruindo com brandura os que não estiverem favoravelmente dispostos, visto que talvez Deus lhes dê arrependimento." (2Ti 2:24, 25) Aqui vemos uma similaridade entre a brandura e a longanimidade. A pessoa discerne por que tem de lidar com essa dificuldade: Deus a permitiu, e, como superintendente, precisa cuidar do assunto nos melhores interesses da(s) pessoa(s) envolvida(s). Tem de suportar a dificuldade até que seja resolvida, sem ficar muito agitado.

Tito, outro superintendente, residindo em Creta, foi igualmente aconselhado a lembrar aos seus irmãos cristãos a 'que fossem razoáveis, exibindo toda a brandura para com todos os homens'. A fim de incutir em Tito a necessidade de exercer brandura, Paulo traz à atenção o inigualável amor e misericórdia de Deus conforme manifestados por meio do seu Filho, exortando a que se abandone o anterior caminho de maldade e ódio, e que se siga o novo caminho que conduz à vida eterna. — Tit 3:1-7.

Novamente, Paulo dirige-se aos que são espiritualmente maduros na congregação, delineando a responsabilidade que lhes cabe: "Mesmo que um homem dê um passo em falso antes de se aperceber disso, vós, os que tendes qualificações espirituais, tentai reajustar tal homem num espírito de brandura, ao passo que cada um olha para si mesmo, para que tu não sejas também tentado." (Gál 6:1) Devem ter presente como Deus tem lidado com eles. Fazendo isso, não deviam dar ao homem errante uma forte reprimenda, mas deviam tentar reajustá-lo num espírito de brandura. Isto se mostrará muito mais eficaz e proveitoso para todos os envolvidos.

A brandura consegue resultados bons quando se lida com uma situação difícil ou com uma pessoa irada, resolvendo a dificuldade, ao passo que a dureza aumentaria a situação difícil. O provérbio diz: "Uma resposta, quando branda, faz recuar o furor, mas a palavra que causa dor faz subir a ira." (Pr 15:1) A brandura pode exercer grande força. "Pela paciência se induz ao comandante, e a própria língua suave pode quebrar um osso." — Pr 25:15.

Essencial Quando sob Disciplina. Outro excelente princípio que envolve a brandura ou a calma é apresentado por Salomão. Diz respeito à tendência que talvez tenhamos de mostrar um espírito rebelde quando corrigidos ou castigados por alguém em autoridade. Talvez fiquemos tão indignados, a ponto de deixarmos nosso lugar de correta submissão, renunciando apressadamente à posição que nos foi designada. Mas Salomão adverte: "Se o espírito de um governante se levantar contra ti, não deixes o teu próprio lugar, pois a própria calma aquieta grandes pecados." (Ec 10:4; compare isso com Tit 3:2.) A atitude correta de calma e de brandura quando sob disciplina não só evita a ira adicional da parte da autoridade, mas também nos habilita a aprimorar nossa personalidade por controlarmos nosso temperamento e mantermos nosso devido lugar, ou cargo, e aplicarmos a disciplina.

Isto se dá especialmente quando o governante é Jeová Deus, e quando a disciplina provém por meio daqueles a quem Ele concedeu autoridade. (He 12:7-11; 13:17) Também se aplica em nosso relacionamento com aqueles a quem Deus permite que detenham autoridade governamental no mundo. (Ro 13:1-7) Mesmo quando um governante talvez exija rudemente que o cristão explique a razão da esperança que possui, tal cristão, ao passo que coloca firmemente a obediência a Deus em primeiro lugar, deve responder "com temperamento brando e profundo respeito". — 1Pe 3:15.

BRASA(S). Veja CARVÃO DE LENHA.

BRASEIRO. Em geral, um aparelho para aquecimento, que consiste em um receptáculo semelhante a uma panela, elevado do chão por meio de pernas, e que se destina a conter carvões incandescentes, ou brasas. A palavra hebraica traduzida "braseiro" ('ahh) é de origem egípcia, sugerindo que o próprio braseiro tenha sido uma inovação do Egito.

Parece que, nos lares melhores, o braseiro era preferido a uma depressão no piso da casa, em que se podia acender um fogo. O Rei Jeoiaquim tinha um braseiro, provavelmente feito de metal, na sua casa de inverno. — Je 36:22, 23.

BRILHANTE, O. Designação descritiva aplicada ao "rei de Babilônia". (Is 14:4, 12) A expressão hebraica assim traduzida (NM; "astro brilhante", MC, So) provém duma raiz que significa "brilhar". (Jó 29:3) A tradução "Lúcifer" (Fi, BMD) deriva da Vulgata latina.

O "brilhante" é representado como dizendo no seu coração: "Enaltecerei o meu trono acima das estrelas de Deus e assentar-me-ei no monte de reunião." (Is 14:13) A evidência bíblica aponta para o monte Sião como sendo o "monte de reunião". (Veja MONTE DE REUNIÃO.) Assim, visto que estrelas podem referir-se a reis (Núm 24:17; Re 22:16), as "estrelas de Deus" devem ser os reis da linhagem davídica que governavam desde o monte Sião. O "rei de Babilônia" (a dinastia dos reis babilônicos), refletindo a atitude de Satanás, o deus deste sistema de coisas, indicava sua ambição de elevar seu trono "acima das estrelas de Deus" por desejar tornar os reis da linhagem de Davi simples vassalos seus, e, por fim, destroná-los. Como estrelas que lançam luz, o "rei de Babilônia" brilhava reluzentemente no mundo antigo e podia ser chamado de "brilhante".

BRINCO. Veja ARRECADA.

BRITA-OSSOS (ÁGUIA-PESQUEIRA) [hebraico: pé·res]. Uma das "criaturas voadoras" decretadas impuras e que não deviam ser comidas, segundo o pacto da Lei. (Le 11:13; De 14:12) Seu nome hebraico (pé·res) significa literalmente "o britador". Entendendo que isso se refira à quebra de ossos por uma ave de rapina, a versão do Pontifício Instituto Bíblico verte pé·res por "ossifraga" ("quebrantosso", Al, ALA, IBB), nome derivado do latim e que significa "brita-osso". Outros entendem o nome hebraico como indicando uma ave que "dilacera sua presa", e assim não necessariamente denotando um britador ou quebrador de ossos.

A águia-pesqueira (Pandion haliaëtus), parece ser aparentada com o gavião, mas possui certas características distintas, inclusive pés um tanto similares aos da coruja. A cabeça e o bico da águia-pesqueira assemelham-se aos do gavião, o corpo e as asas são castanho-escuros na parte superior, e as partes inferiores são brancas, com marcas marrons. Medindo cerca de 65 cm de comprimento, possui asas com uma envergadura de quase 1,8 m. A águia-pesqueira é encontrada em todo o mundo, vivendo perto de grandes massas aquosas, onde se alimenta de peixes que nadam próximo à superfície. A ave plana quase sem esforço acima da água, girando graciosamente e pairando no ar até que localize sua presa. Daí mergulha rapidamente, chocando-se com a água com os pés para a frente, às vezes desaparecendo abaixo da superfície. Acha-se admiravelmente dotada para este tipo de ataque, possuindo densa plumagem compacta nas partes inferiores, a fim de suportar parte do impacto do choque contra a água, e longas garras curvas, bem aguçadas, que se estendem de dedos ásperos, habilitando a ave a agarrar com firmeza sua presa escorregadia. Dizem os observadores que, ao voar com o peixe para a praia, a fim de devorá-lo, a águia-pesqueira sempre agarra o peixe de modo que a cabeça deste esteja voltada para a frente, reduzindo assim a resistência do ar. A águia-pesqueira é bastante comum na costa e nas ilhas do Sinai meridional.

O "brita-ossos" (águia-pesqueira), uma ave que sob a Lei mosaica não era permitida como alimento.

Outras sugestões para esta ave designada pelo termo hebraico pé·res incluem o pigargo-comum (Haliaëtus albicilla, diferente da águia-pesqueira) e o quebra-ossos (Gypaetus barbatus), um abutre de que se sabe que leva ossos e pequenas tartarugas a certa altura e então os larga para cair em rochas, a fim de os rebentar.

BROCHE. Um fecho decorativo, feito de metal, e provido dum alfinete ou pino por meio do qual pode ser preso à roupa da pessoa. Nos tempos antigos, tanto homens como mulheres usavam broches, como se dava entre os gregos e os romanos. O broche romano, ou fíbula, às vezes consistia em um pedaço curvo de metal, com um gancho em uma ponta e um alfinete que se estendia da outra ponta, no feitio dum um alfinete de segurança. Não sendo apenas ornamental, mas também útil, o broche frequentemente era usado para finalidades tais como prender duas partes duma echarpe ou capa. Os broches da antiguidade eram feitos de bronze, ferro, ouro ou prata. Seu uso na antiga Palestina foi confirmado por descobertas arqueológicas, entre estas achando-se os broches em forma de arco, descobertos em Tell en-Nasbeh.

Quando se concedeu aos israelitas o privilégio de contribuir para a construção do tabernáculo, os homens e as mulheres trouxeram vários ornamentos, inclusive "broches" ou "fivelas". (Êx 35:21, 22) Tais broches, evidentemente, eram algum tipo de enfeites com ganchos, pois a mesma palavra hebraica usada para eles (hhahh) é traduzida em várias outras partes por "gancho". (2Rs 19:28) Todavia, as Escrituras não descrevem esses broches. — Veja ENFEITES (ORNAMENTOS).

BRONZE. Veja COBRE, LATÃO, BRONZE.

BRUMA, NEBLINA, NÉVOA. Partículas de água que flutuam no ar e que se assemelham à chuva bem fininha. Quando sobe da terra o ar úmido e quente, e então esfria no que é chamado de ponto de orvalho, a umidade se condensa, visto que o ar frio não pode reter tanta água quanto o ar tépido. Quando isto ocorre próximo do solo, é chamado de nevoeiro; quando ocorre numa parte mais alta no céu, forma o que é chamado de nuvem. (Sal 135:7; Pr 25:14; Je 10:13; 51:16) A umidade que condensa sobre objetos frios, tais como o solo ou a vegetação (usualmente à noite), é descrita como orvalho. (Êx 16:13, 14; Jz 6:36-40; veja ORVALHO.) A bruma, por outro lado, compõe-se de partículas de umidade em suspensão que são um pouco maiores do que as partículas do nevoeiro, porém menores do que as gotas de chuva.

A descrição poética, bíblica, destes processos geofísicos harmoniza-se com os achados científicos. Eliú diz como Jeová, a Fonte de todo o calor e energia, primeiro faz a umidade subir da terra e depois a deixa cair devagar e gotejar na forma de chuva e de neblina (hebr.: 'edh), como que filtrada. — Jó 36:27, 28.

No relato de Gênesis a respeito das condições aqui na terra em certo ponto durante os "dias" criativos, encontra-se a única outra ocorrência da palavra hebraica 'edh (neblina). "Jeová Deus não fizera chover sobre a terra . . . Mas uma neblina subia da terra [incluindo os rios, lagos e mares] e regava toda a superfície do solo." (Gên 2:5, 6) Os tradutores de versões antigas (LXX, Vg, Sy), porém, entendiam que isso se referia, não a uma neblina, mas a uma fonte, sugerindo que a irrigação era realizada por meio de correntes subterrâneas de água doce.

Uso Figurado. Na cidade de Pafos, na ilha de Chipre, Barjesus (Elimas), feiticeiro e falso profeta, opôs-se a Paulo, quando o apóstolo falou ao procônsul Sérgio Paulo. Paulo disse-lhe que a mão de Jeová estava sobre ele e que ele ficaria cego por um tempo. "Densa névoa e escuridão caíram instantaneamente sobre ele." Evidentemente, a visão dele ficou turva ou enevoada, logo seguida por intensa escuridão. Ao descrever este incidente, o médico Lucas usou o termo médico grego a·khlýs (densa névoa). — At 13:4-11.

O apóstolo Pedro, em seu aviso contra os falsos instrutores e corrompedores em potencial, que se introduziriam quietamente na congregação cristã, diz: "Estes são fontes sem água e brumas impelidas por uma tempestade violenta, e para eles tem sido reservado o negrume da escuridão." Pessoas que viajavam pelo Oriente Médio estavam acostumadas com o desapontamento de chegar-se a uma fonte, ou poço, na esperança de obterem água refrescante, mas só a encontrando seca. Na Palestina, no mês de agosto, há ocasionais nuvens cirros-estratos que vêm do O e que não trazem chuva. O lavrador que olhasse para tais nuvens tênues, brumosas, como prometendo trazer água para suas plantações, ficaria amargamente desapontado. O mesmo se dá com tais falsos instrutores, esses homens imorais, como Pedro passa a dizer: "Porque proferem expressões bombásticas de nenhum proveito, e, pelos desejos da carne e pelos hábitos desenfreados, engodam os que acabam de escapar dos que se comportam com erro. Embora lhes prometam liberdade, eles mesmos existem como escravos da corrupção." — 2Pe 2:1, 17-19.

Lembra-se aos cristãos levarem em conta a Jeová em todos os seus planos, não se gabando do que farão, mas a relembrar a transitoriedade e incerteza da vida neste sistema de coisas, que eles são como a bruma que desaparece rapidamente. — Tg 4:14; veja NUVEM.

BUL [duma raiz que significa "render; produzir"]. O oitavo mês lunar do calendário sagrado dos israelitas, correspondendo ao segundo mês do calendário secular. (1Rs 6:37, 38; Gên 7:11) Incluía parte de outubro e parte de novembro. Após o exílio babilônico, este mês passou a ser chamado de marchesvã, mais tarde abreviado para chesvã. Estes nomes pós-exílicos não ocorrem na Bíblia, mas são encontrados no Talmude judaico, nos escritos de Josefo, e em outras obras.

Bul caía por volta do começo da estação chuvosa do outono (setentrional). (De 11:14; Jl 2:23; Tg 5:7) Era o mês em que se prosseguia com a semeadura da cevada e do trigo, e, na Galileia setentrional, recolhiam-se as olivas. Os pastores começavam então a retirar seus rebanhos dos campos abertos e colocá-los em abrigos durante os meses de frio e chuva do inverno.

De acordo com Gênesis 7:11 e 8:14, o Dilúvio dos dias de Noé começou no 17.º dia do "segundo mês", e por volta do mesmo mês, um ano lunar e dez dias mais tarde, a terra já ficara seca. Sobre isso, Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], I, 80 [iii, 3]) comentou: "Esta catástrofe aconteceu no sexcentésimo ano do domínio de Noé, no que antes era o segundo mês, chamado pelos macedônios de Dius e pelos hebreus de Marsuan, segundo o arranjo do calendário que seguiam no Egito." Portanto, de acordo com Josefo, o segundo mês no tempo de Noé correspondia ao mês bul, ou marchesvã.

Depois do Êxodo do Egito, bul tornou-se o oitavo mês no calendário sagrado, e foi durante este mês que Salomão completou a construção do templo em Jerusalém. (1Rs 6:38) Jeroboão, fundador do separatista reino setentrional de Israel, arbitrariamente fez deste mês um mês festivo, como parte do seu plano de desviar a atenção do povo de Jerusalém e das festividades ali. — 1Rs 12:26, 31-33.

BULBUL [hebr.: ʽa·ghúr]. O nome de vários tipos de aves parecidas ao tordo, de tamanho médio, encontrados na África e no sul da Ásia, inclusive na Palestina. O bulbul possui, caracteristicamente, pescoço curto, asas curtas e cauda longa. Ao passo que muitas traduções vertem ʽa·ghúr como "grou", a referência de Ezequias ao "chilrar" dificilmente descreveria o profundo som de trombeta emitido por essa grande ave. (Is 38:14) O Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento; de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 679) identificou ʽa·ghúr como o bulbul (Pycnonotus Reichenovi). Ludwig Koehler diz que o hebraico ʽa·ghúr descreve uma ave que 'eriça ou ouriça suas penas' e diz, com respeito ao bulbul, que "durante as pausas (de seu canto) ergue . . . de tempos a tempos as penas estendidas, como uma crista, da parte de trás da cabeça". (Kleine Lichter [Pequenas Luzes; alemão], Zurich, 1945, pp. 38, 39) Dessemelhante do som um tanto berrante do grou, o canto do bulbul é antes parecido ao tom duma flauta, e é descrito como uma combinação de chilreio e gorjeio.

Jeremias (8:7) refere-se evidentemente à chegada sazonal das aves migratórias ao censurar os israelitas por não discernirem o tempo do julgamento deles por Deus.

BUNA [forma abreviada de Benaia, significando "Jeová Edificou"]. Filho de Jerameel, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:3, 25.

BUNI [forma abreviada de Benaia, significando "Jeová Edificou"].

1. Levita, cujo descendente foi escolhido por sorte para morar em Jerusalém depois da reconstrução da muralha por Neemias. — Ne 11:1, 15.

2. Levita de destaque nos dias de Esdras e de Neemias, que estava entre aqueles no palanque que 'clamavam com alta voz' em arrependimento a Jeová. — Ne 9:4.

3. Um dos "cabeças do povo", cujo descendente, se não ele mesmo, concordou com o pacto de fidelidade que Neemias patrocinou. — Ne 10:1, 14, 15.

BUQUI [forma abreviada de Buquias].

1. Maioral da tribo de Dã, designado por Jeová para ajudar na divisão tribal da Terra da Promessa. Filho de Jogli. — Núm 34:16-18, 22.

2. Descendente de Arão, por meio de Eleazar e Fineias, e antepassado de Esdras. (1Cr 6:4, 5, 50, 51; Esd 7:1-6) Ele talvez servisse como sumo sacerdote em algum tempo durante o período dos juízes.

BUQUIAS [duma raiz que significa "frasco"]. Filho de Hemã, da tribo de Levi. Buquias foi escolhido por sorte para encabeçar o 6.º dos 24 grupos musicais que Davi organizou para o serviço no santuário de Jeová. Ele, e seus filhos e seus irmãos que o ajudaram, somaram 12. — 1Cr 25:1, 4, 9, 13, 31.

BUSTO, FAIXA PARA O. Faixa ou cinta usada pela noiva no dia do seu casamento. Assinalava sua condição de mulher casada. Jeová, como "marido" de Israel, ilustra o pecado e a extrema desconsideração de Israel para com ele, dizendo: "Pode a virgem esquecer-se dos seus enfeites, a noiva, das suas faixas para o busto? E, no entanto, meu próprio povo — esqueceram-se de mim por dias inumeráveis." O Deus de Israel deveria ter sido o seu maior enfeite, mas esse o abandonou a favor de outros deuses. — Je 2:32; Is 3:20; compare isso com Is 49:18.

BUZ.

1. Filho do irmão de Abraão, Naor, com sua esposa Milca; tio de Rebeca. (Gên 22:20-23) Seus descendentes eram presumivelmente buzitas, visto que o pai de Eliú é descrito como tal. — Jó 32:2, 6; veja N.º 3, abaixo.

2. Chefe de família e descendente de Gade, filho de Jacó. — 1Cr 5:11, 14.

3. Um lugar na Arábia, contra o qual Jeremias predisse ruína. (Je 25:17, 23) Presumivelmente era habitado pelos descendentes do N.º 1 acima.

BUZI [De (Pertencente a) Buz]. Pai levítico e sacerdotal do profeta Ezequiel. — Ez 1:3.

BUZINA. Veja CHIFRE (BUZINA).

BUZITA. Veja BUZ N.º 1.

C

CÃ.

1. Um dos três filhos de Noé, nascido depois de 2470 AEC. (Gên 5:32; 7:6; 11:10) Era, possivelmente, o filho mais moço (Gên 9:24); contudo, é alistado em segundo lugar, em Gênesis 5:32; 6:10; e em outras partes. Em Gênesis 10:21, Sem é chamado de "irmão de Jafé, o mais velho". Alguns creem que a expressão "filho mais moço", em Gênesis 9:24, se refira a Canaã, neto de Noé. — Veja CANAÃ, CANANEU N.º 1.

Cã era pai de quatro filhos, Cus, Mizraim, Pute e Canaã. (Gên 10:6; 1Cr 1:8) Os etíopes, os egípcios, algumas tribos árabes e africanas, e os cananeus descenderam destes filhos. Embora se afirme que algumas das tribos e nações camitas alistadas em Gênesis, capítulo 10, falavam uma língua semítica, isto não refuta que tenham sido de ascendência camítica, ou que tenham originalmente falado uma língua camítica. Muitos povos adotaram a língua de seus conquistadores ou de outros povos com os quais se associaram, ou da terra para onde migraram.

Cã casou-se antes do Dilúvio. Sobreviveu ao Dilúvio junto com sua esposa, seu pai e sua mãe, e seus dois irmãos e as esposas destes. (Gên 6:18; 7:13; 8:15, 16, 18; 1Pe 3:19, 20) Os filhos de Cã nasceram depois do Dilúvio.

Algum tempo depois, ficou envolvido num incidente que trouxe uma maldição sobre seu filho Canaã. Noé ficara embriagado de vinho e se desnudara na sua tenda. Cã viu a nudez de seu pai, e, ao invés de mostrar o devido respeito por Noé, o cabeça da família, e o servo e profeta a quem Deus fizera de instrumento na preservação da raça humana, Cã contou a seus dois irmãos o que observara. Sem e Jafé demonstraram o respeito correto por andarem de costas, com uma capa, para cobrir Noé, a fim de não causarem vitupério por olhar a nudez de seu pai. Noé, ao despertar, proferiu uma maldição, não sobre Cã, mas sobre Canaã, filho de Cã. Na acompanhante bênção a Sem, que incluía uma bênção para Jafé, Cã foi omitido e desconsiderado; apenas Canaã foi mencionado como amaldiçoado, e predisse-se profeticamente que ele se tornaria escravo de Sem e de Jafé. — Gên 9:20-27.

É possível que o próprio Canaã tivesse estado diretamente envolvido no incidente e que seu pai Cã não o corrigiu. Ou Noé, falando profeticamente por inspiração, previu que a má tendência em Cã, talvez já manifestada no seu filho Canaã, seria herdada pelos descendentes de Canaã. A maldição se cumpriu parcialmente quando os israelitas semitas subjugaram os cananeus. Aqueles que não foram destruídos (por exemplo, os gibeonitas [Jos 9]) foram feitos escravos de Israel. Séculos depois, a maldição cumpriu-se adicionalmente quando descendentes de Canaã, filho de Cã, passaram a estar sob o domínio das potências mundiais jaféticas da Medo-Pérsia, Grécia e Roma.

Alguns têm sustentado incorretamente que a raça negra, e a escravização dos membros dessa raça, resultaram da maldição pronunciada sobre

Canaã. Ao contrário, os descendentes de Canaã, o amaldiçoado, não eram da raça negra. A raça negra descendeu de Cus, e, possivelmente, de Pute, outros filhos de Cã, que não estavam envolvidos no incidente, nem na maldição.

2. Nos Salmos, "Cã" é associado com o Egito, que é chamado de "terra de Cã". — Sal 78:51; 105:23, 27; 106:21, 22; veja EGITO, EGÍPCIO.

CABACEIRO [hebr.: qi·qa·yóhn]. O termo hebraico representa a planta que Jeová fez crescer milagrosamente, da noite para o dia, a fim de fornecer sombra para o profeta Jonas, enquanto ele estava sentado numa barraca, aguardando os resultados da sua profecia contra Nínive. A planta trouxe grande alívio a Jonas, até que Jeová fez com que um verme a atacasse, resultando em ela se secar. O profeta ficou assim exposto aos raios abrasadores do sol. — Jon 4:5-11.

Duas plantas são comumente sugeridas como possíveis traduções do hebraico qi·qa·yóhn. Algumas traduções da Bíblia (BMD; CBC; BJ; MC) preferem a "mamona", "mamoneira" ou "rícino" (Ricinus communis), uma planta perene de crescimento rápido, que atinge a altura de 3 m ou mais, e que tem folhas largas. Esta preferência baseia-se numa sugestão feita por Jerônimo, no sentido de que qi·qa·yóhn talvez fosse a mamoneira, bem como na similaridade entre a palavra hebraica e a egípcia kiki. Outros peritos e tradutores sugerem "cabaça" (AT) ou "cabaceiro" (NM). A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento; de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 884) sugere o sentido de "cabaceiro (cabaça, ou cabaceira)", uma planta de folhas largas, classificada botanicamente como Lagenaria siceraria (antes chamada Cucurbita lagenaria).

O cabaceiro desenvolve-se rapidamente. A respeito desta planta, o Dictionnaire de la Bible (Dicionário da Bíblia, Vol. 5, col. 1098) declara: "Sabe-se que o cabaceiro cresce rapidamente em países quentes e que ele é usado para cobrir de verde as paredes de casas e abrigos, onde se prende semelhantemente à videira virgem, provendo proteção contra o calor por meio dos seus entrelaçamentos e das suas folhas largas. . . . Nas pinturas simbólicas baseadas na história de Jonas, encontradas nas catacumbas, retrata-se sempre esta planta." (Editado por F. Vigouroux, Paris, 1912) De modo que um cabaceiro, que normalmente cresce rápido, foi feito crescer milagrosamente em uma só noite, pelo poder de Jeová, a fim de proteger Jonas contra os raios quentes do sol.

CABEÇA. A parte superior do corpo humano; lugar do cérebro e dos sentidos da visão, da audição, do olfato e do paladar. A cabeça (hebr.: ro'sh; gr.: ke·fa·lé) tem muito destaque na Bíblia, tanto em sentido literal como figurado.

Esmagamento ou Machucadura. O livro de Eclesiastes contém uma descrição metafórica dos efeitos da velhice, que termina na morte. (Ec 12:1-7) O 'esmagamento da tigela de ouro' descreve o colapso do cérebro e das suas funções no crânio, da forma duma tigela, por ocasião da morte. A morte ou a destruição são representadas pela expressão 'rachar a cabeça'. (Sal 68:21; 74:13, 14) A primeira profecia da Bíblia (Gên 3:15) declara que o 'descendente [lit.: semente] da mulher', depois de ter sofrido a machucadura do calcanhar, machucará a cabeça da serpente. No cumprimento, outros textos bíblicos mostram que a Serpente, Satanás, o Diabo, há de ser lançado num abismo, onde ficará imobilizado por mil anos, e que, pouco depois, ele há de ser aniquilado para sempre no "lago de fogo", "a segunda morte". — Re 20:1-3, 7, 10, 14; 12:9.

'Erguer a Cabeça.' O Rei Davi, curvado em humilhação e dificuldade, recorreu a Jeová como seu Escudo e Aquele que 'lhe ergueria a cabeça', habilitando-o a manter novamente a cabeça erguida. (Sal 3:3; compare isso com Lu 21:28.) No cumprimento da interpretação dum sonho por José, Faraó 'levantou a cabeça' do seu copeiro-mor por recolocá-lo no seu cargo anterior. Mas Faraó 'levantou a cabeça de cima' do padeiro-mor, matando-o. — Gên 40:13, 19-22.

Bênção, Unção, Juramento. A cabeça era a parte do corpo sobre a qual se davam as bênçãos. (Gên 48:13-20; 49:26) O favor, a orientação e a sabedoria de Deus são comparados a uma lâmpada brilhando sobre a cabeça e a uma grinalda de encanto na cabeça. (Jó 29:3; Pr 4:7-9) Derramava-se óleo de unção sobre a cabeça. (Le 8:12; Sal 133:2) No seu Sermão do Monte, Jesus aconselhou 'untar a cabeça' quando se jejua, a fim de parecer bem arrumado e não fazer uma ostentação santimoniosa de abstenção para receber aplausos públicos. (Mt 6:17, 18) Untar a cabeça dum convidado com óleo passou a ser um dos marcos essenciais de hospitalidade. (Lu 7:46) Os judeus desenvolveram o costume de jurar pela sua cabeça (ou vida), prática condenada por Jesus. — Mt 5:36, 37; veja JURAMENTO.

Representação da Pessoa. A cabeça como parte governante do corpo era também usada para representar a própria pessoa. Não ter Jesus Cristo "onde deitar a cabeça" significava que não tinha moradia que pudesse chamar sua própria. (Mt 8:20) A cabeça do nazireu estava sob um voto, atestado pelo seu cabelo comprido. (Núm 6:5, 18-20) Dizia-se que os pecados ou erros de alguém estavam sobre a sua cabeça. (Esd 9:6; Sal 38:4; compare isso com Da 1:10.) Davi mostrou apreço pela repreensão recebida da parte dum justo, chamando-a de óleo sobre a cabeça, que sua cabeça não desejaria recusar. (Sal 141:5) Quando o julgamento sobrevém ao iníquo, diz-se que recebe retribuição por cair o mal ou a punição sobre a sua própria cabeça. (Jz 9:57; 1Sa 25:39; Je 23:19; 30:23; Jl 3:4, 7; Ob 15; compare isso com Ne 4:4.) Ter o sangue sobre a própria cabeça significava que aquele que seguia um proceder errado passível de pena de morte era pessoalmente responsável por perder a vida. (2Sa 1:16; 1Rs 2:37; Ez 33:2-4; At 18:6) Fazer retornar sobre a cabeça do matador o sangue dos a quem matou significava levá-lo a julgamento por ter culpa de sangue. — 1Rs 2:32, 33.

Todo ano, o sumo sacerdote de Israel confessava os pecados do povo, com as mãos sobre a cabeça do bode para Azazel (transferindo os pecados para o bode), sendo o animal depois levado ao ermo, para levar esses erros ao oblívio. (Le 16:7-10, 21, 22) Conforme outros textos bíblicos mostram, Jesus Cristo pessoalmente 'carregou as nossas doenças e levou as nossas dores', e 'levou os pecados de muitos'. — Is 53:4, 5; He 9:28; 1Pe 2:24.

Os sacerdotes e outros, a favor de quem se faziam certos sacrifícios, punham as mãos sobre a cabeça do animal, em reconhecimento de que o sacrifício era para eles. — Le 1:2-4; 8:14; Núm 8:12.

Exaltação, Humilhação e Desprezo. Entre algumas das nações, os soldados eram sepultados com a sua espada debaixo da sua cabeça, isto é, com honras militares. (Ez 32:27) O sábio "tem os olhos na cabeça", isto é, enxerga por onde anda. (Ec 2:14) Pó, terra ou cinzas postos sobre a cabeça significavam aflição, pesar ou humilhação. (Jos 7:6; 1Sa 4:12; 2Sa 13:19) O salmista, ao relatar as provas e as dificuldades que sobrevieram ao povo de Deus, diz que homens haviam cavalgado sobre a cabeça de Israel. Ele evidentemente se refere à sujeição a que o povo de Deus foi submetido por meros homens do mundo (a palavra hebraica usada é 'enóhsh, "homem mortal"), que eram poderosos, cruéis e altivos. (Sal 66:12; compare isso com Is 51:23.) Encurvar a cabeça era sinal de humildade ou de pesar (Is 58:5), e menear ou sacudir a cabeça era símbolo de escárnio, desprezo ou assombro. — Sal 22:7; Je 18:15, 16; Mt 27:39, 40; Mr 15:29, 30.

Benignidade para com Inimigos. A Bíblia recomenda que se trate o inimigo benignamente, "pois, por fazeres isso, amontoarás brasas acesas sobre a sua cabeça". (Ro 12:20; Pr 25:21, 22) Esta metáfora é tirada do antigo processo de fundição, em que se amontoavam carvões tanto por cima do minério, como por baixo. Portanto, exercer benignidade tenderá a abrandar a pessoa e amolecer sua dureza, separando impurezas más e destacando o bom nela.

Posição Governante. "Cabeça" podia referir-se ao membro principal duma família, tribo, nação ou governo. (Jz 11:8; 1Sa 15:17; 1Rs 8:1; 1Cr 5:24) "Chefe [cabeça] de família", literalmente, "patriarca" (gr.: pa·tri·ár·khes). (At 2:29; 7:8, 9; He 7:4) "À cabeça" era usado no sentido de tomar a dianteira. (Miq 2:13) O próprio Israel, se obediente a Deus, havia de estar à cabeça das nações, em primeiro lugar, visto que a nação seria livre e próspera, estando até mesmo as pessoas de outras nações endividadas com ela. (De 28:12, 13) Se os israelitas desobedecessem, o residente forasteiro lhes faria empréstimos, tornando-se cabeça sobre eles. — De 28:43, 44.

Sete cabeças do dragão. O "dragão" visto no céu, na visão do apóstolo João, tinha sete cabeças. É identificado com o Diabo. (Re 12:3, 9) Adicionalmente, a "fera" na terra, que recebe seu poder do dragão, e também a "fera cor de escarlate", são ambas representadas como tendo sete cabeças, e estas cabeças são claramente usadas para representar potências mundiais. (Re 13:1; 17:3, 9, 10; compare isso com Da 2:32, 37, 38, onde a dinastia do Rei Nabucodonosor é chamada de "cabeça".) Portanto, as sete cabeças, com diademas, do Dragão evidentemente apontam para a chefia de Satanás sobre as sete potências mundiais das profecias bíblicas. — Ef 6:12; veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.

Cabeça da Congregação Cristã. Na congregação cristã, Jesus Cristo é a Cabeça da congregação, a qual é seu "corpo", de 144.000 membros. (Ef 1:22, 23; Col 1:18; Re 14:1) Por ter imortalidade, ele é o sempre-vivo membro de ligação do corpo dos cristãos ungidos com espírito, na terra, em qualquer tempo específico, suprindo-lhes todas as coisas necessárias para crescerem espiritualmente e atuarem para a glória de Deus. (1Co 12:27; Ef 4:15, 16; Col 2:18, 19) Assim como o templo material tinha uma "pedra de remate" (Za 4:7), assim Jesus é a pedra de remate dum templo espiritual (At 4:8-11; 1Pe 2:7) e a cabeça de todo governo e autoridade sob Deus, o qual é a Cabeça sobre todos. (Col 2:10; 1Co 11:3) A Bíblia compara a posição de Cristo, como cabeça da congregação, à do marido para com a esposa, para incutir no casal humano a direção, o amor e o cuidado que o marido precisa exercer, e a sujeição que a esposa precisa manifestar dentro da união conjugal. — Ef 5:22-33.

O apóstolo Paulo, usando o princípio da chefia primária de Deus, a Cabeça de Cristo, e a chefia relativa do homem sobre a mulher, estabelece o princípio que rege a congregação cristã, a saber, que a mulher deve reconhecer a chefia do homem, ordenada por Deus, por usar uma cobertura na cabeça, "um sinal de autoridade", ao orar ou profetizar na congregação. — 1Co 11:3-16; veja CABEÇA, SER; CABELO; COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA; COBRIR A CABEÇA.

Outros Usos. A palavra hebraica para "cabeça" é usada para se referir aos topos das colunas do tabernáculo, do pátio e do templo (Êx 36:37, 38; 38:17; 1Rs 7:16), bem como aos cumes dos montes (Gên 8:5), às copas de arbustos ou árvores (1Cr 14:15), ao topo duma escada (Gên 28:12), e à ponta dum cetro (Est 5:2), para se mencionar alguns exemplos. É também aplicada àquilo que é a cabeça ou começo de alguma coisa, tal como a cabeceira de rios e de estradas (Gên 2:10; Ez 21:21), bem como ao primeiro mês ("o começo [a cabeça] dos meses" [Êx 12:2]). O nome judaico para o seu dia do ano-novo é Rosh Hashanah, significando literalmente "Cabeça do Ano". — Veja ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS.

CABEÇA, SER. O princípio básico da chefia ou da posição como cabeça é delineado em 1 Coríntios 11:3: "A cabeça de todo homem é o Cristo; por sua vez, a cabeça da mulher é o homem; por sua vez, a cabeça do Cristo é Deus."

O Lugar do Homem. A primeira parte deste conselho sobre a posição de cabeça se aplica ao homem; ele não é independente, sem ter de reconhecer uma "cabeça". Antes, é obrigado a seguir as orientações e o padrão fornecidos por seu cabeça, Cristo. (1Jo 2:6) Isto se dá, não só com respeito às suas atividades religiosas (Mt 28:19, 20), mas também nas suas atividades pessoais. Por exemplo, caso tenha família, então, por respeito à sua própria cabeça, Cristo, deve obedecer ao conselho de morar com sua esposa segundo o conhecimento, 'atribuindo-lhe honra como a um vaso mais fraco', e deve fazer sério esforço de treinar corretamente os seus filhos. (1Pe 3:7; Ef 6:4) Este conselho foi provido na Bíblia para todos na congregação de Cristo; assim, o respeito pela posição de cabeça está envolvido em o homem acatá-lo. — Ef 5:23.

Assim como o homem teve prioridade na criação humana, é-lhe dada prioridade de posição sobre a mulher. (1Ti 2:12, 13) A mulher foi feita duma costela tirada do homem, e era osso de seus ossos e carne de sua carne. (Gên 2:22, 23) Ela foi criada por causa do homem, e não o homem por causa dela. (1Co 11:9) Portanto, a mulher, no arranjo de Deus para a família, sempre devia estar sujeita ao seu marido, e não devia usurpar a autoridade dele. (Ef 5:22, 23; 1Pe 3:1) Também, na congregação cristã, a mulher não deve instruir outros homens dedicados, nem exercer autoridade sobre eles. — 1Ti 2:12.

Entre os hebreus dos tempos antigos, reconhecia-se a posição superior ocupada pelo homem na família e no arranjo tribal. Sara era submissa, chamando Abraão de "senhor", e é mencionada de modo favorável por tal reconhecimento da posição dele como cabeça. (Gên 18:12; 1Pe 3:5, 6) Sob o pacto da Lei, enfatizava-se a posição prioritária do varão. Somente dos varões se exigia, por mandamento expresso, que se reunissem para as três festividades de Jeová, no lugar que Ele escolhera, embora as mulheres também comparecessem a elas. (De 16:16) A mulher era cerimonialmente "impura" por um período duas vezes maior depois de dar à luz uma menina, do que ao dar à luz um menino. — Le 12:2, 5.

O Lugar da Mulher. Nos tempos antigos, havia circunstâncias sob as quais a mulher colocava na cabeça uma cobertura para indicar submissão. (Gên 24:65) Ao considerar o arranjo de chefia na congregação cristã, o apóstolo Paulo explicou que, se uma mulher orasse ou profetizasse na congregação, ocupando uma posição que Deus designou ao homem, ela devia ter a cabeça coberta. Ao fazer temporariamente essas coisas, por não haver nenhum varão cristão dedicado presente para isso, mesmo que ela tenha cabelos compridos, a mulher não deve argumentar que bastam seus cabelos compridos para indicar a sua sujeição. Antes, deve deixar que suas próprias ações demonstrem sua submissão e seu reconhecimento de que o homem é a cabeça. A mulher cristã faz isso por usar uma cobertura para a cabeça como "sinal de autoridade". Isto deve ser feito "por causa dos anjos", que observam as ações dos cristãos e que, sendo aqueles que ministram à congregação cristã, estão interessados nela. Por usar uma cobertura para a cabeça quando necessário por motivos espirituais, a mulher cristã reconhece o arranjo da posição de cabeça, feito por Deus. — 1Co 11:5-16; He 1:14.

Esta ordem teocrática correta na congregação e no arranjo familiar não impede a mulher de servir a Deus, nem limita seus esforços de executar suas atividades e responsabilidades familiares. Concede-lhe liberdade plena e bíblica de servir em seu lugar, ao passo que ainda assim agrada a Deus, em harmonia com o princípio: "Deus pôs . . . os membros no corpo, cada um deles assim como lhe agradou." (1Co 12:18) Muitas mulheres dos tempos antigos tiveram excelentes privilégios, ao passo que reconheciam que o homem era a cabeça, e usufruíram uma vida feliz e satisfatória. Entre elas, Sara, Rebeca, Abigail e mulheres cristãs tais como Priscila e Febe.

Responsabilidade. O exercício da posição autorizada como cabeça concede certos direitos, mas também envolve deveres ou obrigações. 'Cristo é cabeça da congregação', e assim tem o direito de fazer decisões que a envolvem, e de demonstrar autoridade sobre ela. (Ef 5:23) Mas a posição de cabeça também o obriga a aceitar o dever de cuidar da congregação e de assumir a responsabilidade por suas decisões. De modo similar, o marido que exerce a posição como cabeça tem certos direitos no que tange a fazer decisões finais e a prover supervisão. Além disso, porém, tem o dever de aceitar a responsabilidade por sua família. Ele tem a obrigação primária de fazer provisões materiais e espirituais para sua família. — 1Ti 5:8.

O homem cristão deve exercer sua chefia de modo sábio, amando a esposa como a si mesmo. (Ef 5:33) Jesus Cristo exerce deste modo a sua posição de cabeça sobre a congregação. (Ef 5:28, 29) Como cabeça sobre os filhos, o pai não deve irritá-los, mas criá-los "na disciplina e na regulação mental de Jeová". (Ef 6:4) E os "anciãos" na congregação cristã, como pastores do rebanho de Deus, não devem dominar sobre as "ovelhas" de Deus, mas devem lembrar-se da sua sujeição a Jesus Cristo e a Jeová Deus. (1Pe 5:1-4) Jesus Cristo sempre agiu em harmonia com o princípio da chefia, manifestando em palavra e em atos pleno reconhecimento da chefia de seu Pai. Mesmo depois de governar a terra por mil anos, ele reconhecerá a chefia universal de Jeová por entregar o Reino a Jeová, sujeitando-se "Àquele que lhe sujeitou todas as coisas, para que Deus seja todas as coisas para com todos". (1Co 15:24-28; Jo 5:19, 30; 8:28; 14:28; Fil 2:5-8) Os cristãos, seguidores de Jesus Cristo, também reconhecem a suprema chefia de Jeová, dirigindo suas orações a ele, e confessando-o como Pai e Deus Todo-Poderoso. — Mt 6:9; Re 1:8; 11:16, 17; veja FAMÍLIA; MARIDO.

CABELO. Historicamente, os homens e as mulheres, em geral, têm considerado seu cabelo como ornamento, realçando sua atratividade, e, como sinal, em muitos casos, de força e de juventude. Por isso, tem-se dispensado muito cuidado ao cabelo.

Egípcios. Os egípcios, provavelmente, tinham os costumes mais peculiares com respeito ao seu cabelo. Os homens, especialmente os sacerdotes e os soldados, rapavam a cabeça e a barba. Heródoto diz que os que moravam ao longo do Nilo rapavam a cabeça dos meninos, deixando apenas umas mechas nos lados, e talvez na frente e atrás. Quando o menino atingia a madureza, estas eram removidas por serem sinais de infância. Para os homens, era sinal de luto e de desleixo deixar o cabelo e a barba crescer. Por este motivo, José, quando foi tirado da prisão, barbeou-se antes de ser levado à presença de Faraó. (Gên 41:14) Os homens egípcios, porém, às vezes usavam perucas, e amarravam barbas postiças. Algumas representações egípcias em monumentos mostram homens de alta categoria com cabelo longo, bem cuidado; não se discerne se o cabelo era o deles mesmos ou uma peruca.

Inversamente, as mulheres egípcias usavam o cabelo natural longo e trançado. Encontrou-se cabelo bem preservado e trançado em um número considerável de múmias de mulheres egípcias.

Assírios, Babilônios, Romanos. Os homens assírios e babilônios, e os asiáticos em geral, usavam cabelo comprido. Relevos assírios mostram os homens com cabelo bem penteado, com as pontas caindo sobre os ombros em cachos. A barba deles também era comprida, às vezes dividida em duas ou três camadas de cachos, com o bigode aparado e também encaracolado. Alguns acham que o cabelo bem comprido, retratado em monumentos, era parcialmente falso, sendo um acréscimo ao cabelo natural da pessoa.

Nos tempos antigos, os romanos evidentemente usavam barba, mas, por volta do terceiro século AEC, adotaram o costume de se barbear.

Hebreus. Desde o princípio, era costume entre os homens hebreus deixar a barba crescer, mas ela era bem cuidada; e aparavam os cabelos em um comprimento moderado. No caso de Absalão, seu cabelo crescia com tanta abundância que, quando ele o cortava, uma vez por ano, pesava 200 siclos (2,3 kg), possivelmente tornado mais pesado pelo uso de óleo ou de unguentos. (2Sa 14:25, 26) A Lei de Deus ordenava que os varões israelitas não 'cortassem curtas suas madeixas laterais', nem destruíssem a "extremidade" da sua barba. Não se tratava duma injunção contrária a se aparar os cabelos ou a barba, mas evidentemente destinava-se a impedir a imitação dos costumes pagãos. (Le 19:27; Je 9:25, 26; 25:23; 49:32) Deixar de cuidar dos cabelos ou da barba, provavelmente não os aparando ou deixando-os descuidados, era sinal de pesar. (2Sa 19:24) Deus ordenou aos sacerdotes, em instruções dadas mediante o profeta Ezequiel, que eles aparassem, mas não rapassem, os cabelos da sua cabeça, e que não usassem os cabelos soltos quando servissem no templo. — Ez 44: 15, 20.

As mulheres hebreias cuidavam bem de seus cabelos, como sinal de beleza (Cân 7:5), deixando-os crescer bem compridos. (Jo 11:2) Cortar a mulher os seus cabelos era sinal de pesar ou de aflição. (Is 3:24) Quando um soldado israelita capturava uma virgem duma cidade inimiga e desejava casar-se com ela, exigia-se que ela primeiro rapasse a cabeça e cuidasse de suas unhas, e passasse um período de um mês de luto por seus pais, visto que estes teriam sido mortos na tomada da cidade. — De 21:10-13; 20:10-14.

No diagnóstico da lepra, um fator que o sacerdote tinha de considerar era a cor e a condição dos pelos na parte afetada. — Le 13:1-46.

Cristãos. Os apóstolos Pedro e Paulo sentiram-se ambos induzidos a aconselhar as mulheres cristãs a não dar indevida atenção aos penteados e adornos, como era costumeiro naqueles dias. Antes, foram admoestadas a fixar sua atenção em adornar-se com a vestimenta incorruptível dum espírito quieto e brando. — 1Pe 3:3, 4; 1Ti 2:9, 10.

O apóstolo Paulo também trouxe à atenção a situação e o costume geral que prevalecia entre as pessoas às quais escreveu, e mostrou que era natural o homem ter cabelos mais curtos do que a mulher. (Veja NATUREZA.) Era uma desonra para a mulher ter seus cabelos tosados ou a cabeça rapada. Deus lhe dera cabelos compridos "em lugar de mantilha", mas, argumentou Paulo, a mulher não podia usar esta cobertura natural, que era uma glória para ela, a fim de se escusar de usar uma cobertura para a cabeça, um "sinal de autoridade", ao orar ou ao profetizar na congregação cristã. Por reconhecer este fato e usar uma cobertura em tais circunstâncias, a mulher cristã reconheceria a chefia teocrática e mostraria submissão cristã. Glorificaria, assim, tanto sua cabeça marital como Jeová Deus, Cabeça de todos. — 1Co 11:3-16.

Uso Figurado. Jó rapou a cabeça em símbolo da condição desolada em que se encontrava, tendo perdido seus filhos e seus bens. — Jó 1:20.

Ordenou-se a Ezequiel que rapasse os cabelos da cabeça e da barba, dividindo-os em três partes, e desse fim a eles dum modo que descrevesse profeticamente as coisas aflitivas que aconteceriam aos habitantes de Jerusalém na execução dos julgamentos de Deus contra ela. (Ez 5:1-13) A angústia e a aflição também eram simbolizadas por se arrancarem os cabelos ou por cortá-los. (Esd 9:3; Je 7:29; 48:37; Miq 1:16) A desonra, o desprezo ou o vitupério podiam ser expressos por se arrancarem os cabelos da cabeça ou da face de outrem. — Ne 13:25; Is 50:6.

O número de cabelos na cabeça humana (que se diz ser em média 100.000) foi usado para representar grandes números ou inumerabilidade. (Sal 40:12; 69:4) E a textura fina do cabelo foi usada figuradamente como símbolo de minúcia. (Jz 20:16) 'Nenhum cabelo de sua cabeça perecerá (ou cairá)' é uma declaração que garante plena e completa proteção e segurança. (Lu 21:18; 1Sa 14:45; 2Sa 14:11; 1Rs 1:52; At 27:34) Um sentido similar foi indicado pelas palavras de Jesus Cristo a seus discípulos quanto ao cuidado de Deus por eles: "Os próprios cabelos de vossa cabeça estão todos contados." — Mt 10:30; Lu 12:7.

As cãs mereciam respeito (Pr 16:31; 20:29), e eram usadas às vezes qual sinônimo de idade avançada e de sabedoria. (Jó 15:9, 10; veja CÃS.) Jeová, numa visão dada a Daniel, foi simbolicamente representado como tendo cabelos brancos, "como pura lã", sendo ele o "Antigo de Dias". (Da 7:9) O apóstolo João viu Jesus Cristo representado numa visão como tendo cabelos "brancos como lã branca". — Re 1:1, 14, 17, 18.

Pelos de Animais. Usavam-se pelos de cabra na fabricação de panos. (Êx 26:7) João, o Batizador, usava roupa de pelos de camelo. (Mt 3:4; Mr 1:6) Este tipo de vestimenta era oficial para profetas. (2Rs 1:8; compare isso com Gên 25:25.) Rebeca colocou pelos de cabritinho nas mãos e no pescoço de Jacó, para simular o cabelo de Esaú. — Gên 27:16; veja BARBA.

CABO. Medida que, segundo fontes rabínicas, era 1⁄18 do efa (2Rs 6:25), e, por isso, também 1⁄18 do bato. (Ez 45:11) Se o bato deve ser encarado como tendo a capacidade de 22 l, conforme a evidência arqueológica parece indicar, então o cabo tinha a capacidade de 1,22 l.

CABOM. Uma das cidades de Judá na Sefelá. (Jos 15:40) A Septuaginta grega reza "Chabra", em vez de Cabom, e isto tem induzido alguns a relacionar a cidade com Khirbet Hibra, 5 km a ESE de Laquis. No entanto, à base do nome hebraico, outros sugerem a identificação com Al Qubeiba (Horvat Kefar Lakhish), 5 km ao SO de Beit Jibrin (Bet Guvrin).

CABRITINHO. Veja CABRITO (BODE).

CABRITO (BODE). Um mamífero ruminante dotado de chifres ocos e de pelos usualmente longos e relativamente lisos. Usam-se diversos termos hebraicos e gregos para se referir aos caprídeos machos e fêmeas e sua cria. O termo hebraico comum para "cabrito" (ou caprídeo) é 'ez. (Le 3:12) Outro termo hebraico para cabrito ou bode (sa·'ír) significa literalmente "peludo". (Veja Gên 27:11, onde uma palavra da mesma forma e da mesma raiz é vertida "peludo".) O termo hebraico 'at·túdh, vertido 'cabrito', indicava um bode líder dum rebanho de caprídeos. (Núm 7:17; compare isso com Je 50:8 n.) O termo era usado figurativamente para se referir a governantes ou líderes, e tem sido traduzido por "líderes caprinos". (Is 14:9; Za 10:3) As palavras gregas para "bode" são trá·gos e éri·fos. — Mt 25:32; He 9:12, 13.

A cabra síria (Capra hircus mambrica), que se distingue pelas suas orelhas compridas e caídas, e seus chifres curvados para trás, é a raça predominante na Palestina. Estas cabras usualmente são pretas; as malhadas são exceção. (Gên 30:32, 35) Cabritos eram uma das mercadorias do comércio de Tiro. — Ez 27:21.

Nos tempos bíblicos, alguns dos rebanhos de caprídeos talvez fossem bem grandes. Por exemplo, Nabal tinha 1.000 caprídeos. (1Sa 25:2, 3) O presente de Jacó para Esaú incluiu 200 cabras e 20 cabritos. (Gên 32:13, 14) E os árabes trouxeram 7.700 cabritos ao Rei Jeosafá, de Judá. — 2Cr 17:11.

O caprídeo era valiosíssimo para os hebreus. (Pr 27:26) Supria-lhes leite, do qual se podia fazer manteiga e queijo. (Pr 27:27) Sua carne, especialmente a do cabritinho, era consumida. (Gên 27:9; De 14:4; Jz 6:19; 13:15; Lu 15:29) E, para a Páscoa, podia-se usar um carneiro de um ano ou um cabrito de um ano. (Êx 12:5) O pelo de cabra, transformado em tecido, era utilizado de várias formas. (Núm 31:20) "As tendas de Quedar" talvez fossem feitas de pelo da cabra-negra (Cân 1:5), e o pelo de cabra foi usado na construção do tabernáculo. (Êx 26:7; 35:26) O couro de cabra era transformado em odres (veja Gên 21:15), e era também usado como vestimenta, como no caso de certas testemunhas pré-cristãs de Jeová, que foram perseguidas. — He 11:37.

A Lei mosaica proibia que se comesse a gordura dum cabrito oferecido em sacrifício (Le 7:23-25), e também que se cozinhasse um cabritinho no leite de sua mãe. — Êx 23:19; 34:26; De 14:21; veja LEITE.

O cabrito servia de animal sacrificial, sendo apresentado como oferta queimada (Le 1:10; 22:18, 19), como sacrifício de participação em comum (Le 3:6, 12), como oferta pelo pecado (Esd 8:35) e como oferta pela culpa (Le 5:6). Todo primogênito dos caprídeos devia ser sacrificado, mas não antes de ter pelo menos oito dias de idade. (Le 22:27; Núm 18:17) Uma cabritinha, em seu primeiro ano (ou uma cordeira) era a prescrita oferta pelo pecado de alguém que não era nem sacerdote nem chefe. (Le 4:28, 32) Em certas ocasiões sacrificavam-se cabritos como ofertas pelo pecado da nação de Israel como um todo. (Le 23:19; Núm 28:11, 15, 16, 22, 26-30; 29:1-39; 2Cr 29:20-24; Esd 6:17) Um cabritinho servia de oferta pelo pecado dum chefe. (Le 4:22-26) No Dia da Expiação, usavam-se dois bodes. Um era sacrificado como oferta pelo pecado das 12 tribos não levíticas, e o outro era destinado para "Azazel" e era enviado ao ermo. (Le 16:1-27; veja AZAZEL; EXPIAÇÃO, DIA DA.) Naturalmente, esses bodes oferecidos em sacrifício não podiam realmente tirar pecados, mas apenas representavam o verdadeiro sacrifício expiatório de pecados, de Jesus Cristo. — He 9:11-14; 10:3, 4.

Uso Figurado e Profético. O cabelo da moça sulamita foi comparado a uma grei de caprídeos, talvez aludindo ao lustro do cabelo preto ou à luxuriante abundância das tranças da moça. (Cân 4:1; 6:5) O pequeno exército de Israel, em comparação com o dos sírios, foi assemelhado a "dois minúsculos rebanhos de caprídeos". (1Rs 20:27) Cabritos eram usados para representar pessoas, frequentemente as em oposição a Jeová. (Is 34:6, 7; compare isso com Je 51:40; Ez 34:17; Za 10:3.) Na ilustração de Jesus, a respeito das ovelhas e dos cabritos, os cabritos representam as pessoas que se recusam a fazer o bem aos mínimos dos irmãos dele. — Mt 25:31-46.

O bode da profecia de Daniel representava a Potência Mundial Grega (ou Greco-Macedônia). (Da 8:5-8, 21) A respeito disso, The Imperial Bible-Dictionary (O Dicionário Bíblico Imperial, editado por P. Fairbairn, Londres, 1874, Vol. I, p. 664) observa: "É interessante saber que este [o bode] era o símbolo reconhecido, pelos próprios macedônios, de sua nação. Ainda existem monumentos em que se apresenta este símbolo, como numa das pilastras de Persépolis, onde se representa um bode com um só enorme chifre na testa, e um persa segurando o chifre, pelo qual se pretende mostrar a sujeição da Macedônia pela Pérsia" (algo conseguido pelos persas perto do fim do sexto século AEC).

Cabrito-Montês, Cabra-Selvagem. A designação hebraica ye'e·lím, traduzida por "cabritos-monteses" (NM) e por "cabras selvagens" (BLH), é geralmente entendida como se referindo ao íbex da Núbia (Capra ibex nubiana), uma cabra-selvagem das montanhas, que possui chifres grandes, com muitas cristas e curvados para trás. Este animal tem por habitat as montanhas elevadas (Sal 104:18), onde transpõe penhascos escarpados e estreitas abas das montanhas com graciosa facilidade. No período de gestação, estas cabras procuram locais que o homem não encontra facilmente. É possível que Jó 39:1 se refira a isso, pois a pergunta ali suscitada aponta para o fato de que tais criaturas são bem independentes do homem, o nascimento de seus filhotes ocorrendo sem ser observado pelo homem.

O relato em 1 Samuel, capítulo 24, fala de Saul perseguir Davi na região rochosa de En-Gedi (significando "Fonte (Nascente) do Cabritinho") no lado ocidental do Mar Morto. Os perseguidores procuravam Davi e seus homens "nas rochas calvas dos cabritos-monteses" (1Sa 24:2), sugerindo que esta região era habitada por cabritos-monteses. Mesmo em tempos recentes se viu ali o íbex.

A forma hebraica feminina, ya·'aláh, é empregada na passagem de Provérbios 5:18, 19. Aqui se compara a esposa da juventude de um homem a uma 'encantadora cabra-montesa', aludindo-se possivelmente à graça deste animal.

Em Deuteronômio 14:4, 5, onde se faz referência aos animais aceitáveis como alimento, a palavra hebraica 'aq·qóh tem sido traduzida "cabritos selvagens", (BLH) ou "cabrito-montês". (NM) Muitos peritos creem que 'aq·qóh talvez designe o mesmo animal que ye'e·lím, isto é, o íbex da Núbia.

CABRITO-MONTÊS (OU CABRA-MONTESA). Veja CABRITO (BODE).

CABUL.

1. Cidade designada à tribo de Aser, como parte da sua herança. (Jos 19:24, 27) É representada pela moderna Cabul, situada a uns 13 km ao ESE de Aco.

2. Nome dado a um distrito de 20 cidades, dadas por Salomão ao Rei Hirão, de Tiro, presente possivelmente motivado pelo apreço de Salomão pela ajuda de Hirão no seu programa de construções. Hirão, porém, ao inspecionar essas cidades, não as achou "bem direitas aos seus olhos", dizendo a Salomão: "Que tipo de cidades são estas que me deste, meu irmão?" Depois disso, vieram a ser chamadas de "Terra de Cabul". — 1Rs 9:10-13.

Segundo Josefo, as cidades "não estavam longe de Tiro". (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], VIII, 142 [v, 3]) A Galileia é chamada por Isaías (9:1) de "Galileia das nações", e há peritos que consideram provável que as 20 cidades fossem habitadas por uma população pagã. Não parece provável que Salomão as entregasse a um rei estrangeiro se fossem habitadas por israelitas, e elas talvez se encontrassem mesmo fora das fronteiras realmente habitadas por Israel, embora ainda estivessem dentro dos limites da região originalmente prometida por Deus a Israel e conquistada pelo pai de Salomão, Davi. (Êx 23:31; 2Sa 8:1-15) A correção desta ação de Salomão tem sido questionada, devido à lei de Deus, em Levítico 25:23, 24. Esta lei talvez tenha sido considerada como se aplicando apenas à região realmente ocupada pelo povo pactuado de Deus, caso em que o presente de Salomão não teria sido incorreto. Se não foi assim, então isso era um exemplo adicional de sua falha em aderir inteiramente ao conselho divino, como no caso de ter multiplicado cavalos e também de ter tomado muitas esposas dentre as nações estrangeiras. — Compare De 17:16, 17, com 1Rs 4:26; 11:1-8.

O relato não fornece o motivo de Hirão não ter ficado satisfeito com as cidades. Alguns sugerem que os habitantes pagãos as mantinham em péssimas condições; outros sugerem que sua localização geográfica era indesejável. De qualquer modo, seu desagrado com elas resultou em receberem o nome de "Terra de Cabul". O significado de Cabul, neste texto, tem sido tema de considerável discussão. Josefo (como citado acima) diz que Cabul, "na língua fenícia, é interpretado como significando 'não agradável' ", mas peritos modernos não encontram nenhuma outra evidência para apoiar tal interpretação. Os lexicógrafos em geral aventam a sugestão de que está envolvida uma forma de trocadilho, Cabul sendo usado no sentido da frase hebraica de som similar, kevál, que significa "o mesmo que nada".

No relato paralelo dos eventos que se seguiram ao término do projeto de construções de Salomão, 2 Crônicas 8:2 menciona as cidades "que Hirão tinha dado a Salomão", cidades que Salomão reconstruiu para serem usadas pelos israelitas. Não se declara se estas cidades eram ou não as mesmas que Salomão inicialmente deu de presente a Hirão. Se eram, então este texto indicaria que Hirão rejeitou essa dádiva. Alguns também sugerem que estava envolvida uma troca de presentes de cidades, embora isto não seja mencionado no relato de Primeiro Reis 9.

CABZEEL [Deus Ajuntou]. Cidade na parte meridional de Judá. (Jos 15:21) É provisoriamente identificada com Khirbet Hora (Horvat Hur), a uns 10 km ao ENE de Berseba. O texto hebraico de 2 Samuel 23:20 e de 1 Crônicas 11:22 tem sido diversamente entendido como significando que Cabzeel era (1) o domicílio do destacado guerreiro Benaia, (2) o domicílio de um dos seus progenitores ou o lugar em que este realizou façanhas notáveis, ou (3) o cenário de muitas das façanhas de Benaia. (Veja Al; CBC; PIB; MC; NM.) Uma forma alternativa, "Jecabzeel" aparece em Neemias 11:25, numa lista de povoações pós-exílicas em Judá.

CAÇADOR DE AVES. Veja PASSARINHEIRO.

CAÇA E PESCA. Somente após o Dilúvio é que o homem foi autorizado a caçar e pescar para obter alimento. (Gên 9:3, 4) Mas, mesmo nos tempos antediluvianos, os homens talvez se empenhassem na caça em busca de peles de animais para fabricar roupas e outros itens. — Veja Gên 3:21.

Depois do Dilúvio, Ninrode foi o primeiro homem a distinguir-se como "poderoso caçador em oposição a Jeová" (Gên 10:8, 9), sem dúvida, como alguém que caçava por esporte, assim como faziam posteriormente os reis da Assíria, do Egito e de outras terras. Não existe indício de que os israelitas caçassem por esporte, embora caçassem animais, tais como gazelas e veados, para servirem de alimento (1Rs 4:22, 23), e matassem animais selvagens em defesa própria (Jz 14:5, 6), ou em defesa de animais domésticos ou das safras. — 1Sa 17:34-36; Cân 2:15.

Com respeito à caça, a Lei mosaica repetiu a proibição pós-diluviana quanto a comer sangue. (Gên 9:4; Le 17:12-14; veja SANGUE.) Adicionalmente, certos animais selváticos foram designados impuros como alimento. (Le 11:2-20; De 14:3-20) Outra lei tornava errado os israelitas tomarem a ave mãe junto com seus filhotes ou ovos. Em alguns casos, o apego dela aos filhotes a teria tornado presa fácil; no entanto, ela devia ser mandada embora, provavelmente para que produzisse mais filhotes. — De 22:6, 7.

Empregavam-se vários implementos ou dispositivos na caça, inclusive arcos e flechas (Gên 21:20; 27:3), fundas (1Sa 17:34, 40; Jó 41:1, 28), armadilhas, redes, covas e ganchos (Sal 140:5; Ez 17:20; 19:4, 9). Espadas, lanças, diferentes tipos de dardos e paus, sem dúvida, eram também usados. — Jó 41:1, 26-29.

Para capturar animais, frequentemente se armavam redes. Então, um grupo de caçadores assustava os animais, comumente por fazer barulho, para que estes corressem em direção às redes, construídas de modo a caírem sobre os animais. Cavavam-se também covas que eram depois camufladas com uma fina cobertura de galhos e terra. Capturavam-se os animais por fazê-los passar correndo sobre a cobertura. Além disso, usavam-se laços que enredavam as patas dos animais, e talvez também se empregasse uma combinação de covas e de redes. — Veja Jó 18:8-11; Je 18:22; 48:42-44; veja ARMADILHA; PASSARINHEIRO.

Pesca. Entre os hebreus, a pesca era uma ocupação; não é mencionada como praticada simplesmente por esporte. Os pescadores usavam redes, arpões e lanças, bem como anzóis e linha. (Jó 41:1, 7; Ez 26:5, 14; Hab 1:15, 17; Mt 17:27) Com frequência, pescava-se à noite. Do barco, lançavam-se redes de arrasto; depois, ou eram puxadas para a praia, ou a pesca era despejada nos barcos. Depois disso, selecionavam-se os peixes. Ficava-se com os apropriados para consumo, segundo os termos da Lei; as espécies impróprias eram jogadas fora. (Mt 13:47, 48; Lu 5:5-7; Jo 21:6, 8, 11) Uma rede muito menor do que a rede de arrasto talvez fosse lançada pelos pescadores que entravam na água ou ficavam em pé na praia. — Veja REDE DE ARRASTO.

Pescar era trabalho árduo. Exigia esforço físico, especialmente quando os homens tinham de puxar as redes cheias de peixe (Jo 21:6, 11) ou remar os barcos contra o vento. (Mr 6:47, 48) Às vezes, os pescadores labutavam a noite toda, sem pescar nada. (Lu 5:5; Jo 21:3) Depois da pesca, as redes tinham de ser postas para secar e ser consertadas. — Ez 47:10; Mt 4:21.

Os pescadores Pedro, André, Tiago e João trabalhavam juntos como sócios. (Mt 4:18, 21; Lu 5:3, 7, 10) Pelo menos em uma ocasião, sete dos discípulos de Jesus, inclusive Natanael e Tomé, pescaram juntos. (Jo 21:2, 3) Um dos dois pescadores mencionados, mas não identificados em João 21:2, talvez fosse André, irmão de Pedro; o outro talvez fosse Filipe, conforme sugerido pelo fato de que seu lar era em Betsaida (que significa "Casa do Caçador (ou: Pescador)"). — Jo 1:43, 44.

Sentido figurado. A pesca pode representar a conquista militar. (Am 4:2; Hab 1:14, 15) Por outro lado, Jesus assemelhou a obra de fazer discípulos à pesca de homens. (Mt 4:19) Jeremias 16:16, onde se faz referência a Jeová 'mandar vir muitos pescadores e caçadores', pode ser entendido quer em sentido favorável, quer desfavorável. Se este texto estiver diretamente relacionado com o versículo 15, que fala do restabelecimento dos israelitas na sua terra, então a alusão é à busca do restante judeu arrependido. De outro modo, os pescadores e caçadores seriam forças inimigas enviadas para encontrar os israelitas infiéis, não permitindo assim que alguns deles escapassem ao julgamento de Jeová. — Veja Ez 9:2-7.

CACO. Fragmento ou pedaço de louça quebrada; fragmento de cerâmica. A palavra hebraica hhé·res, embora às vezes se aplique a um vaso de barro ou a uma botija de barro inteiros (Núm 5:17; Je 19:1), possivelmente está relacionada com uma palavra árabe que significa "raspar" ou "arranhar", e assim pode indicar algo áspero, como um caco de cerâmica. Quando Satanás afligiu Jó com "um furúnculo maligno" desde o alto da cabeça até a sola dos pés, Jó "passou a tomar para si um caco para se raspar com ele". (Jó 2:7, 8) E, a respeito do leviatã, declara-se: "Suas partes de baixo são como cacos pontiagudos." — Jó 41:1, 30.

A palavra grega ó·stra·kon (que aparece na LXX, em Jó 2:8) foi aplicada pelos gregos aos cacos de cerâmica (óstracos) em que registravam votos.

Descobertas Arqueológicas. Cacos ou pedaços de cerâmica são os objetos mais numerosos encontrados pelos arqueólogos durante escavações de sítios antigos. No passado, um pedaço de vaso de cerâmica podia ser usado para coisas tais como retirar cinzas ou apanhar água. (Is 30:14) Mas os cacos eram especialmente utilizados como material de escrita barato no Egito, na Mesopotâmia e em outras partes do antigo Oriente Médio. Por exemplo, usaram-se fragmentos de cerâmica para as bem-conhecidas Cartas de Laquis, que repetidas vezes contêm o nome divino, Jeová, em forma de tetragrama (YHVH ou JHVH [IHVH]). No Egito, os arqueólogos encontraram numerosos pedaços de calcário e fragmentos de cerâmica em que aparecem desenhos e inscrições feitos com tinta (em geral na escrita hieroglífica cursiva), dos quais se diz que muitos datam aproximadamente dos séculos 16 ao 11 AEC, e que alguns possivelmente remontam aos dias de Moisés e da servidão de Israel no

Egito. Certos destes fragmentos inscritos consistem em histórias, poemas, hinos e coisas similares, alguns dos quais provavelmente escritos como lições escolares. Fragmentos de cerâmica eram evidentemente usados como material de escrita pelo povo em geral, bem semelhante a blocos de anotações e outros pedaços de papel usados hoje, para registros contábeis, vendas, contratos matrimoniais, processos judiciais, e muitos outros assuntos.

Mais de 60 óstracos inscritos a tinta em escrita paleo-hebraica foram descobertos nas ruínas do palácio real de Samaria. Parecem ser registros da produção vinícola, muitos possivelmente datando do tempo de Jeroboão II. Fornecem nomes de lugares e de pessoas, estes últimos incluindo algumas formas compostas que envolvem o uso dos nomes Baal, El e Jeová.

Óstracos gregos, encontrados no Egito, incluem vários tipos de documentos, mas, principalmente, recibos de impostos. Fornecem certa visão quanto à língua grega falada pelo povo comum daquele país durante as épocas ptolemaica, romana e bizantina, e, assim, são de certa utilidade nos estudos do grego coiné usado pelos escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Vinte óstracos gregos encontrados no Alto Egito tinham inscrições de trechos dos quatro Evangelhos, datando provavelmente do sétimo século EC.

Usados em Ilustrações. Cacos são também usados com conotações figuradas nas Escrituras. Davi, aflito e cercado por inimigos, disse num salmo que é profético dos sofrimentos do Messias: "Meu poder secou-se como um caco." (Sal 22:11-15) À medida que os objetos feitos de argila eram cozidos ao forno, eles se tornavam muito secos, e sua fragilidade se tornava evidente quando o vaso ficava reduzido a cacos.

Nos dias do Rei Salomão, evidentemente eram comuns os métodos de esmaltar, pois Provérbios 26:23 declara: "Como um revestimento de prata recobrindo um caco são os lábios fervorosos com um coração mau." Como "revestimento de prata" que ocultaria a cerâmica que recobria, os "lábios fervorosos" ocultariam um "coração mau", quando a amizade fosse só fingida.

Oolibá (Jerusalém) foi advertida por Jeová de que ela ficaria cheia de embriaguez e de pesar, bebendo o copo que sua irmã Oolá (Samaria) tinha bebido. Judá beberia este copo figurativo até esvaziá-lo, executando-se nele plenamente os julgamentos de Deus. Deus disse assim por meio de Ezequiel: "Terás de bebê-lo e de esvaziá-lo, e roerás os seus cacos." — Ez 23:4, 32-34.

A total tolice de o homem queixar-se de Deus e de achar falta no modo divino de fazer as coisas é mostrada nas palavras: "Ai daquele que contendeu com o seu Formador, como um caco com outros cacos do solo! Devia o barro dizer àquele que o forma: 'Que estás fazendo?' E devia dizer tua realização: 'Ele não tem mãos'?" — Is 45:9, 13.

CADEIA. Veja PRISÃO.

CADEIAS (LAÇOS, VÍNCULO). Algo que confina ou restringe o exercício da liberdade, tais como grilhões ou correntes, grilhetas, algemas; também confinamento (quando no plural); força ou influência que une; causa de união; vínculo unificador. Nos tempos bíblicos usavam-se diversos meios para restringir presos, inclusive grilhões, troncos, grilhetas e algemas, bem como prisões.

Nas Escrituras, a palavra hebraica nehhó·sheth, que usualmente significa "cobre", frequentemente é traduzida por "grilhões de cobre", porque os grilhões muitas vezes eram feitos de cobre ou bronze, embora se empregasse também madeira e ferro. (2Sa 3:34; 2Rs 25:7) Em Tocra, na Líbia, foram encontrados grilhões de ferro bem parecidos com os que aparecem nos relevos de palácios assírios. Aros circulares de metal de 13 cm de diâmetro, largos o bastante para envolver um tornozelo, são ligados por uma barra plana. Essa barra, que media 18 cm de uma extremidade à outra, fazia com que a pessoa tivesse que dar passos bem curtos. Assim, a pessoa tinha bastante dificuldade para andar. A palavra grega para "grilhão" é pé·de, aparentada com pous (pé). — Lu 8:29.

A palavra hebraica 'a·sár, significando "amarrar; atar; prender" (Jz 16:5; Ez 3:25; 2Rs 23:33), é a raiz de outras três palavras que têm que ver com prender. 'E·súr refere-se a "grilhões" (Je 37:15), moh·se·róhth, a "ligaduras" (Sal 2:3), e ma·só·reth, a "compromisso" (Ez 20:37). A palavra grega para laço é de·smós (Lu 8:29), ao passo que sýn·de·smos se refere a um "vínculo unificador", ou "vínculo conjugado". — Ef 4:3, Int.

Usavam-se também cadeias para prender prisioneiros. Duas palavras hebraicas para denotar uma corrente ou cadeia (rethu·qáh e rat·tóhq) derivam da raiz ra·tháq, que significa "prender". (Na 3:10) Há·ly·sis é a palavra grega para cadeia. — Mr 5:3, 4.

Muitas das fiéis testemunhas pré-cristãs sofreram laços e prisões. (He 11:36) Diz-se a respeito do filho de Jacó, José, no Egito: "Atribularam-lhe os pés com grilhetas, sua alma entrou em ferros." (Sal 105:18) Dalila usou sete tendões ainda úmidos, e mais tarde, cordas novas como laços, na tentativa de tornar Sansão cativo dos filisteus, mas ele as rompeu facilmente. Por fim, depois de ele perder a sua força e ser capturado, foi preso com dois grilhões de cobre. (Jz 16:6-12, 21) Jeremias foi posto no tronco por Pasur, comissário do templo, e foi encarcerado pelos príncipes de Judá "na casa dos grilhões". — Je 20:2, 3; 37:15.

Por causa da infidelidade, Jeová permitiu que o Rei Manassés, de Judá, fosse preso com grilhões de cobre pelo rei da Assíria. O Rei Nabucodonosor levou o Rei Zedequias cativo a Babilônia, restrito por grilhões de cobre. (2Rs 25:7; 2Cr 33:11; Je 39:7; 52:11) Jeremias foi solto, e suas algemas foram removidas pelo chefe da guarda pessoal de Nabucodonosor, Nebuzaradã. — Je 40:1, 4.

Jesus foi amarrado pelos homens que o prenderam no jardim de Getsêmani e foi conduzido a Anás, e mandado na mesma condição para Caifás. Após o seu julgamento perante o Sinédrio, ele foi amarrado às ordens deste e levado a Pilatos. (Jo 18:12, 13, 24, 28; Mr 15:1) Saulo, antes de se converter ao cristianismo e se tornar o apóstolo Paulo, foi à procura de cristãos para trazê-los amarrados à suprema corte judaica. (At 9:2, 21) Pedro foi preso com cadeias entre dois soldados, por Herodes, segundo o costume romano. — At 12:6, 7.

Durante o seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma, Paulo, em diversas das suas cartas escritas ali, menciona estar em cadeias, e refere-se a si mesmo como "embaixador em cadeias". (Ef 6:20; Fil 1:7, 13-17; Col 4:18; Flm 10, 13) Todavia, conforme indica a descrição da sua situação, em Atos 28:16-31, concedeu-se-lhe considerável liberdade de movimento, que lhe permitiu escrever, bem como receber convidados e visitantes, e pregar-lhes. Paulo foi posto em liberdade, mas depois foi novamente preso. Durante o seu segundo encarceramento em Roma, que terminou na sua execução, Paulo ficou novamente preso em cadeias. — Flm 22; 2Ti 1:16; 2:9; 4:6-8.

Prisioneiros amarrados, pintados nas plantas dos pés em envolturas de múmias. Em sentido figurado, os inimigos estavam 'postos sob os pés'.

Usos Metafóricos e Simbólicos. As expressões "laços" e "cadeias" são frequentemente usadas como metáforas nas Escrituras para o encarceramento ou alguma forma de confinamento. Com referência ao exílio babilônico, fala-se profeticamente de Sião como estando presa ou como tendo ligaduras sobre o seu pescoço. (Is 52:2) Embora muitos exilados passassem a ter suas próprias casas e gozassem de considerável liberdade, não estavam livres para retornar a Sião, ou Jerusalém. — Je 29:4, 5.

Deus restringiu os anjos desobedientes com "laços sempiternos, em profunda escuridão". (Ju 6) Diz-se que também foram entregues a "covas de profunda escuridão". (2Pe 2:4) A evidência bíblica indica que não se lhes nega toda liberdade de movimento, visto que têm conseguido apossar-se de humanos, e até mesmo tinham acesso aos céus até serem expulsos de lá por Miguel e seus anjos, e serem lançados para baixo, à Terra. (Mr 1:32; Re 12:7-9) Satanás, o Diabo, há de ser acorrentado com uma grande cadeia pelo anjo que possui a chave do abismo, e será lançado no abismo por mil anos, após o que ele será solto por um pouco. (Re 20:1-3) Visto que os anjos não são criaturas de carne e sangue, tais cadeias, sem dúvida, referem-se a alguma força restritiva que não conhecemos.

Jesus falou da mulher que ele curou, que tinha sido totalmente encurvada por meio dum espírito de fraqueza, por 18 anos, como amarrada por Satanás. (Lu 13:11, 16) Pedro chamou Simão, que tentou comprar a dádiva do espírito santo, de "laço de injustiça". — At 8:23.

As mãos duma mulher imoral são comparadas a grilhões, e o homem que vai atrás dela é exatamente como alguém "agrilhoado para a disciplina do tolo". — Ec 7:26; Pr 7:22.

Em sentido favorável, Ezequiel fala do "compromisso do pacto", graças à força vinculadora do pacto. (Ez 20:37) Os partícipes do pacto matrimonial são considerados como 'amarrados' por ele. (Ro 7:2; 1Co 7:27, 39) O amor é chamado de "perfeito vínculo de união". — Col 3:14.

CADEIRA DE JUIZ. Usualmente uma plataforma elevada, ao ar livre, acessível por meio de degraus, da qual as autoridades, sentadas, podiam falar às multidões e anunciar suas decisões. (Mt 27:19; Jo 19:13; At 12:21; 25:6, 10, 17) O que alguns acham ter sido a cadeira de juiz, ou tribuna de julgamento, (chamada Bema) de Corinto, onde Paulo compareceu perante Gálio, fora construída de mármore branco e azul. (At 18:1, 12, 16, 17) Ao lado dela havia duas salas de espera, com piso de mosaico e bancos de mármore.

Jeová Deus confiou todo o julgamento ao seu Filho (Jo 5:22, 27), por conseguinte, todos teremos de comparecer perante a "cadeira de juiz do Cristo". (2Co 5:10) Esta é também chamada corretamente de "cadeira de juiz de Deus", no sentido de que Jeová é o Originador desse arranjo, e julga por meio de seu Filho. — Ro 14:10.

CADES [Lugar Santo], CADES-BARNEIA [Lugar Santo de Barneia]. Um acampamento israelita no ermo, situado na extremidade do território edomita, perto do "caminho de Sur", talvez o moderno Darb el-Shur, que se estende desde Hébron até o Egito. (Gên 16:7, 14; Núm 20:14-16 [hebr.: 'ir (cidade) em Núm 20:16 talvez simplesmente signifique acampamento; compare isso com Núm 13:19.]) Pelo que parece, um percurso de 11 dias de viagem pelo caminho do monte Seir separava Cades-Barneia de Horebe. — De 1:2.

Menciona-se Cades como situado tanto no ermo de Parã como no ermo de Zim. É possível que Zim e Parã fossem ermos adjacentes que se ligavam em Cades, e, por conseguinte, o lugar podia ser mencionado como situado em qualquer dos dois ermos. Ou, o ermo de Zim pode ter sido parte do ermo maior de Parã. (Núm 13:26; 20:1) No tempo de Abraão, o lugar era conhecido tanto por En-Mispate como por Cades. (Gên 14:7; 20:1) É, talvez, o mesmo lugar que Quedes. — Jos 15:21, 23.

'Ain Qedeis, a uns 80 km a SSO de Berseba, tem sido sugerida como possível identificação de Cades. No meio dum ermo desolado (veja De 1:19), a água pura e doce da fonte de Qedeis sustenta um oásis de grama, arbustos e árvores. Há também duas outras fontes na vizinhança, 'Ain el-Qudeirat e 'Ain el-Qeseimeh. Atualmente, a maior das três fontes é 'Ain el-Qudeirat, e, por este motivo, alguns são a favor de identificá-la com Cades-Barneia. No entanto, 'Ain Qedeis é a fonte mais oriental. Assim, a identificação de 'Ain Qedeis com Cades-Barneia parece harmonizar-se mais com a descrição do curso E-O da fronteira meridional de Canaã: Cades-Barneia ('Ain Qedeis?), Hazar-Adar ('Ain el-Qudeirat?) e Azmom ('Ain Qeseimeh?). — Núm 34:3-5.

Se os israelitas deveras acamparam nesta área, sem dúvida usaram todas as três fontes, em vista da enorme multidão. Por exemplo, o acampamento pouco antes de cruzarem o Jordão estendia-se "desde Bete-Jesimote até Abel-Sitim". (Núm 33:49) Era uma distância de uns 8 km, segundo a localização sugerida destes lugares. A distância de Cades-Barneia ('Ain Qedeis) a Azmom ('Ain el-Qeseimeh) é de cerca de 14 km; e a Hazar-Adar ('Ain el-Qudeirat) é de 9 km. Portanto, terem usado todas as três fontes não é uma possibilidade desarrazoada. É também possível que toda aquela região fosse chamada de Cades-Barneia, preservando-se o nome na fonte SE. — Veja ADAR N.º 2; AZMOM.

No segundo ano depois de seu Êxodo do Egito, os israelitas partiram de Hazerote e acamparam em Cades-Barneia. (Veja Núm 10:11, 12, 33, 34; 12:16; 13:26.) Moisés enviou então 12 homens para espiar a Terra da Promessa. Dez desses espias trouxeram um relatório ruim, resultando em murmúrios rebeldes entre os israelitas. Jeová, portanto, sentenciou a nação a peregrinar no ermo. A subsequente tentativa de Israel, de tomar Canaã sem aprovação e orientação divina, resultou numa derrota humilhante. (Núm 13:1-16, 25-29; 14:1-9, 26-34, 44, 45; 32:7-13; De 1:41-45) Por bastante tempo, depois disso, os israelitas permaneceram em Cades-Barneia. (De 1:46) Mas não era o propósito de Jeová que permanecessem ali. Anteriormente, dissera-lhes: "Sendo que os amalequitas e os cananeus moram na baixada, virai-vos amanhã [um idiomatismo hebr. que significa "mais tarde", como em Êx 13:14] e parti, a fim de marchar para o ermo pelo caminho do Mar Vermelho." — Núm 14:25.

Por conseguinte, os israelitas partiram de Cades-Barneia e perambularam pelo ermo por 38 anos. (De 2:1, 14) Parece que, durante esses anos, passaram algum tempo em cerca de 18 lugares diferentes, sendo este o número das etapas de acampamentos alistadas depois que os israelitas partiram de Hazerote. (Veja Núm 12:16–13:3, 25, 26; 33:16-36.) Embora Israel acampasse em Cades, depois de partir de Hazerote, Números 33:18 não menciona Cades depois de Hazerote. Esta pode ter sido uma omissão intencional, ou, talvez, como alguns sugeriram no passado, Cades pode ser o mesmo que Ritmá.

Por fim, os israelitas parecem ter retornado a Cades no primeiro mês do 40.º ano depois do Êxodo. (Núm 20:1; 33:36-39) Miriã, irmã de Moisés, morreu ali. Mais tarde, Moisés e Arão perderam o privilégio de entrar na Terra da Promessa por deixarem de santificar a Jeová com relação à provisão miraculosa de água para os israelitas acampados em Cades. Dali, subsequentemente, Moisés pediu permissão a Edom para atravessar seu território. (Núm 20:1-17) Esta solicitação foi negada, e, pelo que parece, os israelitas ficaram mais tempo em Cades (Núm 20:18; Jz 11:16, 17) antes de prosseguirem para a Terra da Promessa via monte Hor. (Núm 20:22; 33:37) Quando alcançaram as planícies de Moabe, ao L do Jordão, Jeová designou Cades-Barneia como parte da fronteira S da Terra da Promessa. (Núm 33:50; 34:4) Mais tarde, os israelitas, sob Josué, conquistaram a região que se estendia de Cades-Barneia até Gaza (Jos 10:41), e Cades-Barneia veio a estar no termo meridional de Judá. — Jos 15:1-4.

O Salmo 29:8 fala da voz de Jeová como fazendo 'contorcer-se' o ermo de Cades. Isto talvez aluda a uma tempestade violenta que varre desde as montanhas do N até a região de Cades, ao S, e que sopra ali as areias de tal modo, que dão a aparência de um ermo contorcido.

CADMIEL [Deus Confronta; Deus Vai na Frente]. Levita que retornou a Jerusalém (junto com Zorobabel), acompanhado por membros da sua família. (Esd 2:1, 2, 40; Ne 7:6, 7, 43; 12:1, 8, 24) Cadmiel e seus filhos ajudaram a supervisionar a reconstrução do templo. — Esd 3:9.

O período decorrido entre o retorno do exílio babilônico (537 AEC) e a confissão dos pecados da nação contra Jeová, nos dias de Neemias (455 AEC), seguido pela atestação por selo do "arranjo fidedigno" (Ne 9:4, 5, 38; 10:1, 9, 10), não permite a identificação do mesmo Cadmiel com todos estes assuntos. Sem dúvida, um representante da casa de Cadmiel participou nestes últimos dois eventos.

CADMONEUS [duma raiz que significa "leste"]. Povo alistado entre as nações cujas terras Jeová prometeu à semente de Abrão. (Gên 15:18-21) Evidentemente, tratava-se duma tribo pastoril ou nômade, como os queneus e os quenizeus, com quem são mencionados. (Gên 15:19) A localização exata do seu território é incerta, embora se sugira que eles habitaram o deserto sírio entre a Síria-Palestina e o rio Eufrates.

O nome hebraico deste povo (qadh·moh·ní) tem a mesma forma que o adjetivo qadh·moh·ní (oriental, Ez 47:18); assim, alguns sugerem que talvez signifique apenas "orientais". (Jz 8:10) Entretanto, o fato de que este termo hebraico é usado como nome, em Gênesis 15:19, mostra que pode referir-se a uma tribo específica.

CAFARNAUM [do hebr., significando "Aldeia de Naum"; ou: "Aldeia de Consolo"]. Uma cidade de grande importância no ministério de Jesus, situada na margem NO do mar da Galileia. Possuía uma coletoria, de onde Jesus convocou Mateus para ser seu discípulo (Mt 9:9), e talvez um posto militar, pois ali residia um centurião. (Mt 8:5) Tais indícios, além do fato de que morava ali um assistente do rei, bastante rico para ter escravos (Jo 4:46-53), parecem tornar provável que Cafarnaum era de substancial tamanho e importância, e por isso digna de ser chamada de "cidade da Galileia". — Lu 4:31.

Têm-se sugerido dois lugares principais como a localização original de Cafarnaum. As ruínas de Khan Minyeh (Horvat Minnim), situadas junto ao mar da Galileia, no canto NE da planície de Genesaré, foram consideradas por muitos como o provável lugar de Cafarnaum, mas as escavações feitas ali indicam que as ruínas são de origem arábica. Isto deixa Tell Hum (Kefar Nahum), uma extensa ruína a cerca de 4 km mais adiante na margem, ao NE de Khan Minyeh, e quase na mesma distância ao SO do ponto em que o rio Jordão deságua no mar da Galileia. A planície costeira ali é bastante estreita, mas, nos tempos antigos, uma estrada saía do Jordão, descendo por Cafarnaum e atravessando a planície de Genesaré, conectando com a grande rota comercial que ia da Mesopotâmia e Damasco, através da Palestina, até o Egito. Várias fontes fluem pela planície de Genesaré, desaguando nas águas azuis do mar da Galileia, e a grande quantidade de matéria vegetal que essas águas transportam atrai grande número de peixes, tornando essa área um excelente lugar para pescadores. — FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 739.

Logo cedo no seu ministério, após o casamento em Caná, onde realizou seu primeiro milagre, Jesus, junto com sua mãe, seus irmãos e seus discípulos, viajou de Caná para baixo a Cafarnaum, passando ali alguns dias antes de subir a Jerusalém para a Páscoa do ano 30 EC. — Jo 2:12, 13.

Mais tarde, depois de iniciar seu grande ministério galileu, e enquanto novamente em Caná, Jesus realizou a distância a cura milagrosa do filho dum membro da corte real de Herodes Ântipas, sendo o menino doente curado em Cafarnaum, embora a uns 26 km de Caná. (Jo 4:46-54) A notícia deste milagre evidentemente espalhou-se rapidamente nas cidades vizinhas, de modo que, quando Jesus seguiu de Caná para a sua cidade, Nazaré, ele podia dizer aos seus ouvintes ali que eles provavelmente lhe pediriam fazer em Nazaré "as coisas que ouvimos acontecer em Cafarnaum". (Lu 4:16, 23) Partindo de Nazaré, onde as pessoas tentaram matá-lo, Jesus "veio morar em Cafarnaum, à beira do mar, nos distritos de Zebulão e Naftali" (Mt 4:13-16; Lu 4:28-31), cumprindo assim a profecia de Isaías (9:1, 2), de que os que andavam na escuridão veriam uma grande luz nesta região.

Foi possivelmente ao longo da vizinha planície de Genesaré, ao SO de Cafarnaum, que Jesus se encontrou de novo com Pedro e André (que já eram seus discípulos; Jo 1:35-42) e fez-lhes o convite explícito de se tornarem seus seguidores ativos no ministério, fazendo depois o mesmo para com Tiago e João. (Mr 1:16-21) Após isso, Jesus pregou na sinagoga de Cafarnaum, curando um homem endemoninhado presente, e desta cidade, estrategicamente situada, o relato sobre a sua pregação e os seus milagres "se espalhava por todo canto da região circunvizinha". (Lu 4:31-37; Mr 1:21-28; veja SINAGOGA.) O lar dos pescadores Pedro e André encontrava-se em Cafarnaum, e ali Jesus curou a sogra de Pedro; depois disso, a casa ficou cercada por pessoas que lhe traziam doentes e endemoninhados para que os curasse. — Mr 1:29-34; Lu 4:38-41.

Após a viagem de pregação na Galileia, acompanhado pelos quatro discípulos convocados da vizinhança de Cafarnaum, Jesus retornou a esta cidade, que então já podia ser chamada de "sua própria cidade", lugar em que se podia dizer que "ele estava em casa". (Mt 9:1; Mr 2:1) Novamente reuniram-se multidões em torno da casa, e nesta ocasião Jesus curou um paralítico que fora baixado através duma abertura no telhado. (Mr 2:2-12) Posteriormente, encontrando Mateus na coletoria, Jesus o chamou, e Mateus tornou-se o quinto discípulo a participar com Jesus no ministério ativo. Na casa de Mateus, em Cafarnaum, Jesus esteve presente numa grande festa de recepção, havendo ali muitos cobradores de impostos, um grupo desprezado pelos fariseus. — Mt 9:9-11; Lu 5:27-30.

Depois de entrar na Judeia e em Jerusalém, e assistir à Páscoa de 31 EC, Jesus retornou à Galileia, e parece provável que foi num monte na vizinhança de Cafarnaum que ele escolheu os 12 para serem seus apóstolos e que ele proferiu o famoso Sermão do Monte. (Lu 6:12-49) Entrando em Cafarnaum, vieram ao encontro dele anciãos judeus como intermediários dum oficial do exército, o qual havia demonstrado amor à nação judaica, até mesmo construindo para eles uma sinagoga naquela cidade. A inquestionável fé deste oficial gentio no poder de Jesus, de curar um escravo doente mesmo a distância (assim como já havia curado o filho do assistente do rei), induziu Jesus a se maravilhar e resultou na profecia de Jesus no sentido de que pessoas "das regiões orientais e das regiões ocidentais" se recostariam à mesa junto com Abraão, Isaque e Jacó, no Reino dos céus. — Mt 8:5-13; Lu 7:1-10.

Perto do fim da sua segunda viagem de pregação na Galileia, e após a atividade no país dos gerasenos (ou gadarenos), ao SE do mar da Galileia, Jesus 'passou novamente para a margem oposta', provavelmente para a vizinhança de Cafarnaum. (Mt 8:28; Mr 5:1, 21; Lu 8:26, 40) Entre a multidão expectante ajuntada na margem, uma mulher foi curada por simplesmente tocar na roupa de Jesus, realizando Jesus depois um milagre muito maior por trazer à vida a filha falecida de Jairo, um presidente da sinagoga. Novamente, embora Jesus desse ordens de não se contar a outros esta ressurreição, "a notícia disso espalhou-se por toda aquela região". (Mt 9:18-26; Mr 5:22-43; Lu 8:40-56) Foi possivelmente em Cafarnaum ou nas vizinhanças que Jesus também curou dois cegos, bem como um homem mudo, possesso dum demônio. — Mt 9:27-34.

Ao fim da sua terceira viagem de pregação na Galileia, e pouco antes da Páscoa de 32 EC (Jo 6:4), Jesus andou sobre as águas do mar da Galileia ao cruzá-lo para as margens de Genesaré, perto de Cafarnaum. Depois de entrar em Cafarnaum, foi encontrado por multidões que o haviam seguido do outro lado do mar. Quando Jesus proferiu um discurso destinado a corrigir o interesse basicamente materialista que a maioria tinha demonstrado ter nele, muitos dos seus discípulos abandonaram as fileiras dos seus seguidores. Isto deixou um número menor de fiéis. (Mt 14:23-34; Mr 6:53; Jo 6:17-71) Foi provavelmente em Cafarnaum, depois de ele ter assistido à Páscoa de 32 EC em Jerusalém, que Jesus censurou os tradicionalistas farisaicos por criticarem os discípulos de Jesus, enquanto ao mesmo tempo invalidavam a Palavra de Deus com as tradições deles. — Mt 15:1-20; Mr 7:1-23; Jo 7:1.

Finalmente, foi em Cafarnaum, algum tempo antes da Festividade das Barracas, no ano 32 EC, quando a sua principal atividade na Galileia e na parte setentrional do país chegava ao fim, que Jesus milagrosamente proveu dinheiro para o imposto do templo e apresentou ilustrações a respeito de ser grande no Reino dos céus, da ovelha perdida e de como resolver dificuldades. — Mt 17:24-18:35; Mr 9:33-50; Lu 9:46-50.

Cafarnaum foi por Jesus incluída entre as cidades vizinhas de Corazim e Betsaida como um dos lugares em que foi realizada a maioria das suas obras poderosas. (Mt 11:20-24; Lu 10:13-15) Cafarnaum, em sentido espiritual, havia sido enaltecida até o céu pela presença, pela pregação e pelos milagres de Jesus, mas ela seria agora como que rebaixada ao Hades, que aqui representa a profundeza do seu rebaixamento. Usando uma hipérbole, Jesus disse que a antiga Sodoma não teria sido destruída se tivesse sido tão altamente favorecida como Cafarnaum. Atualmente, Cafarnaum, assim como Sodoma, não mais existe como cidade, estendendo-se as suas ruínas em Tell Hum (Kefar Nahum) por cerca de 1,5 km ao longo da costa do mar.

CAFE [כ; final, ך]. A 11.ª letra do alfabeto hebraico. O som de kaf (no hebraico) corresponde a kh quando não contém um ponto (daghesh lene); mas com este ponto (כּ), torna-se duro como o "k", ou o "c" (não seguido por "e" ou "i"), em português. No hebraico, ela é a letra inicial de cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:81-88. As letras cafe [כ, kaf] e bete [ב, behth] são parecidas.

CAFTOR, CAFTORINS. Entre os descendentes de Cã por meio de Mizraim há os caftorins (Caftorim). (Gên 10:6, 13, 14; 1Cr 1:12) Num tempo não especificado, antes do Êxodo dos israelitas do Egito (1513 AEC), os caftorins haviam tomado terras na parte SO de Canaã, desapossando um povo conhecido como os avins. (De 2:23) Em outros lugares, o nome Caftor (também: Creta, NM) é aplicado à "ilha" ou "terra do mar" (ALA), da qual os filisteus migraram para Canaã. — Je 47:4; Am 9:7.

Tem havido muita discussão sobre a identificação de Caftor. Entre os lugares sugeridos estão a região do delta do Egito, a costa sudeste da Ásia Menor (incluindo a Cilícia), a Capadócia e Creta. A maioria dos peritos, hoje em dia, favorece a identificação com a ilha de Creta, ao SE da costa da Grécia. Alguns incluiriam também ilhas e litorais vizinhos sob o nome de Caftor. Entende-se que Caftor é representado pelo nome Kaptara, encontrado em textos assírio-babilônicos, e por Kfty(w) em inscrições egípcias. Há evidência que indica que os egípcios (também descendentes de Mizraim) negociavam com os cretenses desde tempos primitivos, talvez desde um período contemporâneo de Abraão.

Muitos peritos acham que a referência aos "caftorins", em Deuteronômio 2:23, na realidade se aplica aos filisteus. No entanto, visto que se mostra que os filisteus saíram dentre os casluins (outro ramo de descendentes de Mizraim), os filisteus só poderiam ser chamados de caftorins em sentido geográfico (e não genealógico ou racial), isto é, no sentido de terem vivido no território de Caftor antes de vir a Canaã. Seriam então chamados de caftorins no mesmo sentido em que o hebreu Jacó foi chamado de sírio (ou arameu). (De 26:5) De outro modo, deve-se entender que Deuteronômio 2:23 não se refere aos filisteus e que o grupo nacional dos caftorins tivera sua própria gente emigrando para Canaã.

CAIFÁS. José Caifás era o sumo sacerdote durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus. (Lu 3:2) Ele era genro do sumo sacerdote Anás (Jo 18:13; veja Anás) e foi designado para este cargo pelo antecessor de Pôncio Pilatos, Valério Grato, por volta de 18 EC, embora alguns digam que possa ter sido até no ano 26 EC. Reteve o cargo até por volta do ano 36 EC, por mais tempo do que qualquer um dos seus antecessores imediatos, o que se devia à sua hábil diplomacia e à sua cooperação com o governo romano. Ele e Pilatos supostamente eram bons amigos. Caifás era saduceu. — At 5:17.

Sendo um líder do complô para eliminar Jesus, Caifás profetizou, embora não de sua própria iniciativa, que Jesus morreria em breve pela nação, e empenhou-se de todo o coração neste sentido. (Jo 11:49-53; 18:12-14) No julgamento de Jesus perante o Sinédrio, Caifás rasgou a roupa e disse: "Ele blasfemou!" (Mt 26:65) Quando Jesus estava perante Pilatos, Caifás sem dúvida estava presente, clamando: "Para a estaca com ele! Para a estaca com ele!" (Jo 19:6, 11); ele foi um dos que pediram que Barrabás fosse liberto, ao invés de Jesus (Mt 27:20, 21; Mr 15:11); estava ali, bradando: "Não temos rei senão César" (Jo 19:15); também estava ali protestando contra o letreiro afixado sobre a cabeça de Jesus: "O Rei dos Judeus" (Jo 19:21).

A morte de Jesus não marcou o fim do papel de Caifás como o principal perseguidor do cristianismo em seus primórdios. Os apóstolos foram logo em seguida conduzidos à força perante este governante religioso; ordenou-se-lhes energicamente que parassem de pregar, foram ameaçados e foram até mesmo açoitados, mas em vão. Apesar de Caifás, "cada dia, no templo e de casa em casa, continuavam sem cessar". (At 4:5-7; 5:17, 18, 21, 27, 28, 40, 42) O sangue do justo Estêvão logo foi adicionado às manchas do sangue de Jesus nas abas das vestes de Caifás, que também supriu a Saulo de Tarso cartas de apresentação, para que a campanha assassina pudesse ser estendida a Damasco. (At 7:1, 54-60; 9:1, 2) No entanto, pouco depois, Vitélio, uma autoridade romana, removeu Caifás do cargo.

CAIM, I [Algo Produzido]. O primeiro filho nascido na terra, do casal humano original, Adão e Eva.

Após o nascimento de Caim, Eva disse: "Produzi um homem com o auxílio de Jeová." (Gên 4:1) Pensava ela que era a mulher predita, que produziria a semente (ou descendente) por meio de quem viria a libertação? (Gên 3:15) Neste caso, estava redondamente enganada. Todavia, ela podia validamente dizer que Caim foi produzido "com o auxílio de Jeová" porque Deus não privara Adão e Eva das faculdades reprodutivas, e porque, ao julgá-la, Deus dissera que ela 'daria à luz filhos', embora com dores de parto. — Gên 3:16.

Caim tornou-se lavrador do solo, e, "ao fim de algum tempo", ele, bem como Abel, seu irmão mais moço, trouxeram ofertas para apresentar a Jeová, sentindo a necessidade de obter o favor de Deus. No entanto, a oferta de Caim, de "alguns frutos do solo", não foi 'olhada com nenhum favor' por Deus. (Gên 4:2-5; compare isso com Núm 16:15; Am 5:22.) Ao passo que alguns indicam que não se disse que a oferta de Caim fosse dos frutos mais seletos, ao passo que se especifica que a oferta de Abel era "dos primogênitos do seu rebanho, sim, dos seus pedaços gordos", o problema não era a qualidade dos produtos oferecidos por Caim. Conforme Hebreus 11:4 indica, a oferta de Caim carecia da motivação da fé, a qual tornava aceitável o sacrifício de Abel. Não encarar Deus a oferta de Caim com favor talvez se devesse a que sua oferta era exangue, ao passo que a de Abel representava uma vida derramada.

Não se declara o modo como se fez a distinção entre a oferta aprovada e a desaprovada, mas isso ficou indubitavelmente claro tanto a Caim como a Abel. Jeová, que lê o coração do homem (1Sa 16:7; Sal 139:1-6), conhecia a atitude errada de Caim, e Sua rejeição do sacrifício de Caim resultou em se manifestar claramente essa disposição errada nele. "As obras da carne" começaram então a ser produzidas abertamente por Caim: "inimizades, rixa, ciúme, acessos de ira". (Gál 5:19, 20) Jeová mostrou a este homem carrancudo que ele poderia ser exaltado simplesmente por passar a fazer o bem. Ele poderia ter-se humilhado, imitando o proceder aprovado de seu irmão, mas preferiu ignorar o conselho de Deus, de procurar dominar o desejo pecaminoso "agachado à entrada", ansiando dominá-lo. (Gên 4:6, 7; compare isso com Tg 1:14, 15.) Este proceder desrespeitoso era a "vereda de Caim". — Ju 11.

Subsequentemente, Caim disse ao seu irmão: "Vamos ao campo." (Gên 4:8) (Embora estas palavras não ocorram no texto massorético, diversos manuscritos hebraicos têm aqui o sinal de omissão, ao passo que o Pentateuco Samaritano, a Septuaginta grega, a Pesito siríaca e textos de latim antigo todos incluem estas palavras como faladas por Caim a Abel.) No campo, Caim atacou Abel, matando-o, e assim se tornou o primeiro assassino humano. Podia-se dizer que, como tal, ele "se originou do iníquo", que é o pai dos homicidas, bem como da mentira. (1Jo 3:12; Jo 8:44) A empedernida resposta de Caim à indagação de Jeová sobre o paradeiro de Abel era evidência adicional da sua atitude; não era uma expressão de arrependimento ou remorso, mas uma réplica mentirosa: "Não sei. Sou eu guardião de meu irmão?" — Gên 4:9.

Sentenciar Deus a Caim ao banimento do solo evidentemente significava ser expulso da vizinhança do jardim do Éden, e a maldição já imposta à terra seria aumentada no caso de Caim, a terra não correspondendo ao seu cultivo. Caim lamentou a severidade da sua punição e mostrou ansiedade quanto à possibilidade de o assassinato de Abel ser vingado nele, mas, ainda assim, não expressou nenhum arrependimento sincero. Jeová 'estabeleceu um sinal para Caim', para impedir que fosse morto, mas o registro não diz que esse sinal ou marca fosse colocado de algum modo no próprio Caim. O "sinal" provavelmente consistia no próprio decreto solene de Deus, conhecido e observado por outros. — Gên 4:10-15; veja o v. 24, onde Lameque se refere a esse decreto.

Caim foi ao banimento na "terra da Fuga, ao leste do Éden", levando consigo sua esposa, uma anônima filha ou neta de Adão e Eva. (Gên 4:16, 17; compare isso com 5:4, também com o exemplo muito posterior do casamento de Abraão com sua meia-irmã Sara, Gên 20:12.) Após o nascimento de seu filho, Enoque, Caim 'empenhou-se em construir uma cidade', dando-lhe o nome do seu filho. Talvez essa cidade não fosse nada mais do que um povoado fortificado, de acordo com os padrões atuais, e o registro não declara quando foi terminada. Seus descendentes são alistados em parte, e incluem homens que se distinguiram pela pecuária nômade, por tocarem instrumentos musicais, por forjarem ferramentas de metal, bem como alguns conhecidos por praticarem a poligamia e a violência. (Gên 4:17-24) A linhagem de Caim terminou com o Dilúvio global dos dias de Noé.

CAIM, II [duma raiz que significa "produzir; adquirir; comprar"].

1. Nome usado num dito proverbial de Balaão, para se referir à tribo dos queneus. (Núm 24:22) É vertido "queneus" em Juízes 4:11. — Veja QUENEU.

2. Uma cidade na região montanhosa de Judá. (Jos 15:1, 48, 57) É identificada com en-Nebi Yaqin, a uns 6 km ao SE de Hébron.

CAINÃ.

1. Filho de Enos; antepassado da mãe terrestre de Jesus, Maria. (Lu 3:37) Cainã, evidentemente, é chamado Quenã em Gênesis 5:9-14 e 1 Crônicas 1:2.

2. Um dos alistados na genealogia de Jesus Cristo, por Lucas, como filho de Arfaxade. (Lu 3:36) O nome Cainã aparece nas listas genealógicas em cópias atuais da Septuaginta grega, tais como o Manuscrito Alexandrino, do quinto século EC (Gên 10:24; 11:12, 13; 1Cr 1:18, mas não em 1Cr 1:24), embora não seja encontrado nos manuscritos hebraicos existentes das Escrituras Hebraicas. O nome Cainã falta também em Lucas 3:36 em dois manuscritos bíblicos (Papiro Bodmer 14, 15, de c. 200 EC; Códice Bezae, do quinto século EC). Esta omissão está em harmonia com o texto massorético em Gênesis 10:24; 11:12, 15; e 1 Crônicas 1:18, segundo o qual o filho de Arfaxade é Selá, não Cainã. — Veja ARFAXADE; GENEALOGIA DE JESUS CRISTO (Um Problema na Genealogia de Jesus Registrada por Lucas).

CAIVÃ. Evidentemente um deus-astro, conforme indicado pelo fato de que o nome Caivã é colocado em paralelo com "a estrela de vosso deus". (Am 5:26) Parece referir-se ao astro acadiano kaimanu ou kaiwanu, visto que este ocorre em inscrições acadianas como o nome de Saturno (um deus-astro). No texto massorético, o nome recebeu intencionalmente sinais vocálicos para corresponder com a palavra hebraica shiq·qúts (coisa repugnante). Na Septuaginta grega, "Caivã" é vertido Rhai·fán, presumivelmente o nome egípcio de Saturno; e na citação de Estêvão, em Atos 7:43, aparece Rhom·fá no texto grego de Westcott e Hort. — Veja ASTRÓLOGOS; REFÃ.

CAIXINHA COM TEXTOS. Uma caixinha relativamente pequena com quatro trechos da Lei (Êx 13:1-10, 11-16; De 6:4-9; 11:13-21) e usada por homens judeus, presa à testa e ao braço esquerdo. A respeito da prática de usar tais caixinhas, ou filactérios, The Jewish Encyclopedia (A Enciclopédia Judaica, 1976, Vol. X, p. 21) observa: "As leis que governavam o uso de filactérios foram tiradas pelos Rabinos de quatro trechos bíblicos (Deut. vi. 8, xi. 18; Êx. xiii. 9, 16). Ao passo que esses trechos foram interpretados literalmente pela maioria dos comentaristas, . . . os Rabinos sustentavam que somente a lei geral foi expressa na Bíblia, a sua aplicação e elaboração sendo assuntos inteiramente da alçada da tradição e da dedução."

Cristo Jesus censurou os escribas e os fariseus por 'ampliarem as caixinhas com textos, que usavam como proteção'. (Mt 23:5) Por ampliarem tais caixinhas, eles aparentemente queriam impressionar outros de que eram mui zelosos e conscienciosos quanto à Lei. As palavras de Jesus indicam que os líderes religiosos encaravam essas caixinhas como salvaguardas ou amuletos. A palavra grega fy·la·kté·ri·on, de fato, significa primariamente um posto avançado, uma fortificação ou salvaguarda. — Veja FRONTAL.

CAL. Substância, branca quando pura, preparada por se calcinarem formas de carbonato de cálcio, tais como a pedra calcária, conchas ou ossos. (Am 2:1) Sendo abundante na região montanhosa da Palestina, a pedra calcária era convertida em cal (óxido de cálcio) pela queima de fragmentos de pedra calcária em fornos cônicos ou cilíndricos. Nos tempos antigos, a cal (hebr.: sidh) era um dos principais componentes da argamassa, e era usada para rebocar paredes, e para caiar paredes, sepulcros, e assim por diante. (De 27:4; Ez 13:10; Mt 23:27; At 23:3) A Bíblia também usa figuradamente a queima de cal para representar a destruição. — Is 33:12; veja FORNO DE CALCINAÇÃO.

CAL, PEDRA DE. Afloramentos desta rocha sedimentar muito macia, facilmente reduzível a pó, com alto teor de carbonato de cálcio, são encontrados em várias partes da Palestina. Por não ter valor como pedra de construção, e poder ser tão facilmente esfarelada e pulverizada, o profeta Isaías usou a pedra de cal como analogia eficaz para mostrar o que precisava ser feito aos altares idólatras de Israel, se se desejasse obter o perdão. (Is 27:9) O equivalente aramaico do termo hebraico gir (giz) ocorre em Daniel 5:5 e é traduzido "reboco". — Veja CAL; REBOCO.

CALÁ. Cidade fundada por Ninrode na Assíria, e, originalmente, parte da "grande cidade", composta de Nínive, Calá, Resem e Reobote-Ir, estes três últimos lugares sendo, aparentemente, subúrbios de Nínive. (Gên 10:9-12) Calá aparece como Kalhu nos textos cuneiformes assírios, e, durante o período do Império Assírio, tornou-se uma das três principais cidades desse domínio, junto com Nínive e Assur. Calá encontrava-se no ângulo NE da junção do rio Grande Zab com o Tigre, cerca de 35 km ao SSE de Nínive. O nome atual desse lugar é Nimrud, preservando assim o nome do antigo fundador da cidade.

No nono século AEC, Assurnasirpal II afirma ter restaurado a cidade duma condição decadente e feito dela sua capital, construindo muralhas maciças, fortificadas com dezenas de torres, um palácio real e templos; estes incluíam uma torre-zigurate de uns 38 m de altura. As pesquisas indicam que a cidade abrangia uma área de 358 ha e continha não somente palácios, templos e casas, mas também jardins e pomares, sendo regada por um canal escavado desde o rio Zab. Declara-se que o banquete provido por Assurnasirpal, ao terminar a sua nova capital, incluía todos os habitantes da cidade, mais os dignitários visitantes, num total de 69.574 pessoas.

Quando escavadas, as ruínas de Calá revelaram alguns dos melhores exemplos da arte assíria, inclusive colossais leões alados, com cabeça de homem, e touros alados, muitos baixos-relevos gigantescos que revestiam as paredes do palácio, e também uma rica descoberta de objetos de marfim, lindamente esculpidos. Encontrou-se uma estátua de Assurnasirpal, muito bem conservada, bem como a pedra chamada de Obelisco Negro de Salmaneser III, que cita o Rei Jeú, de Israel, como pagando tributo à Assíria. — Veja SALMANESER N.º 1.

Por fim, Calá sofreu a desolação junto com as outras cidades reais do domínio por ocasião da queda do Império Assírio.

CALABOUÇO. Um pequeno recinto escuro, usualmente subterrâneo, usado como prisão. A palavra hebraica para "calabouço" (mas·gér) deriva duma raiz que significa "fechar; cerrar". (Gên 19:6; Jz 3:23) Davi se sentia como se estivesse num calabouço, na época em que se escondia numa caverna, qual refugiado proscrito do Rei Saul. A situação parecia muito tenebrosa para ele, e sua vida constantemente corria perigo, havia armadilhas em seu caminho e não tinha para onde fugir. Orou a Jeová para libertá-lo. (Sal 142:7) Isaías usa simbolicamente esse termo em dois lugares: (1) Em conexão com Jeová voltar a atenção para "o exército do alto" (possivelmente significando os anjos desobedientes) e para "os reis do solo", dizendo o profeta que estes serão "encerrados no calabouço" e que se daria atenção a eles "depois de uma abundância de dias", talvez aludindo à soltura temporária dos anjos desobedientes. (Is 24:21, 22; compare isso com Re 20:1-3.) (2) Em Isaías 42:7, o profeta refere-se ao calabouço quando prediz uma libertação da escuridão e prisão espirituais. O idoso Simeão, sob inspiração, aplicou essa última profecia àqueles a quem Jesus Cristo traria a luz da verdade. — Lu 2:25-32; veja PRISÃO.

CALAI. Um sacerdote nos dias do sumo sacerdote Joiaquim. Ele era cabeça da casa paterna de Salai. — Ne 12:12, 20, 26.

CÁLAMO, CANA [hebr.: qa·néh]. A palavra hebraica qa·néh é a fonte original da palavra "cana" (bem como da palavra "cânone"), e qa·néh frequentemente é traduzida por "haste" (Gên 41:5, 22), 'hástea' (Êx 25:31, 32, ALA) ou "cana" (1Rs 14:15). Em certos textos, porém, quer o contexto, quer uma palavra modificadora, indicam que a referência é a uma planta aromática, e qa·néh é então traduzida por "cálamo" (Êx 30:23; Cân 4:14) e "cana". — Is 43:24.

Dentre os ingredientes usados na preparação do óleo de santa unção havia o "cálamo fragrante", com referência ao cheiro. (Êx 30:22-25) O Cântico de Salomão (4:14) inclui o "cálamo" entre outras especiarias odoríferas. Jeová, por meio do seu profeta Isaías (43:24), repreendeu os israelitas pecaminosos por 'não terem comprado' (hebr.: qa·ní·tha) para o serviço no seu templo nenhuma "cana [doce]" (qa·néh), fazendo assim um trocadilho em hebraico. Jeremias (6:20) refere-se à cana recebida "desde a terra longínqua", ao passo que Ezequiel (27:3, 19) inclui o cálamo entre os produtos negociados pela rica Tiro.

A palavra portuguesa "cálamo" deriva da grega ká·la·mos, usada pelos tradutores da Septuaginta grega para verter a hebraica qa·néh. Igual à palavra hebraica, ká·la·mos também tem o sentido básico de caniço ou cana, ao passo que a palavra "cálamo", hoje em dia, é usada principalmente para se referir ao cálamo-aromático (Acorus calamus) ou à sua raiz aromática.

A respeito da cana doce, ou cálamo, das Escrituras Hebraicas, muitos peritos preferem identificá-la com uma planta gramínea, aromática, da Índia, tal como Cymbopogon martini, uma gramínea perene, cujas folhas, quando esmagadas, produzem um óleo fragrante conhecido como óleo de ginger-grass. Outras variedades destas gramíneas indianas produzem óleo de citronela e óleo de erva verbena. A ideia de que uma ou mais dessas gramíneas de cheiro aromático sejam representadas pela cana doce, ou cálamo, baseia-se principalmente na referência de Jeremias ao produto como procedente de uma "terra longínqua", a qual neste caso seria a Índia. Todavia, outras regiões talvez fossem produtoras da cana aromática, ou cálamo, conforme indicado pela profecia de Ezequiel (27:19). Assim, embora a referência seja a algum tipo de caniço ou cana aromáticos, a identificação exata da planta continua incerta.

CALCANHAR. A parte traseira do pé, abaixo do tornozelo. Esta parte do corpo humano foi mencionada com frequência, em sentido figurado, na Bíblia. Segurar ou ferir o calcanhar de alguém o retardaria ou impediria. Jacó segurou o calcanhar de Esaú, seu irmão gêmeo, ao saírem do útero de sua mãe. (Gên 25:26) Por causa disso, foi chamado Jacó, que significa "Agarrador do Calcanhar; Suplantador", o que tinha significado profético. (Gên 27:36; Os 12:2, 3) O cabeça da família, Jacó, ao abençoar Dã, seu quinto filho, predisse, em sentido favorável para Dã, que este seria como uma serpente que fica à espreita à beira da estrada e que morde os talões do cavalo, derrubando seu cavaleiro. (Gên 49:17; veja VÍBORA-CORNUDA.) A tribo de Dã estava no "calcanhar" das coisas, como retaguarda de Israel durante a sua peregrinação no ermo, infligindo dano aos inimigos de Israel. — Núm 10:25.

Numa profecia, a infiel Jerusalém foi assemelhada a uma mulher de má reputação, a ser punida por se 'tratarem com violência' seus calcanhares, isto é, por ser obrigada a andar em terreno acidentado, doloroso para os seus calcanhares; isto aconteceu quando Jerusalém foi levada ao exílio em Babilônia, em 607 AEC. — Je 13:22

O Rei Davi falou em sentido figurado sobre seu companheiro traiçoeiro, Aitofel, dizendo: "[Ele] engrandeceu seu calcanhar contra mim." (Sal 41:9) Isto teve cumprimento profético em Judas Iscariotes, a quem Jesus aplicou esse texto, dizendo: "Aquele que costumava alimentar-se do meu pão ergueu o seu calcanhar contra mim." (Jo 13:18)

Assim, esta expressão indica uma ação traiçoeira, que ameaça causar dano à pessoa contra quem o calcanhar é 'engrandecido' ou 'erguido'.

A primeira profecia registrada, em Gênesis 3:15, predisse que a "serpente" machucaria o 'descendente [lit.: a semente] da mulher' no calcanhar. Embora doloroso, o ferimento no calcanhar não é algo que incapacita permanentemente. Jesus, o "descendente", ou semente (Gál 3:16), foi morto pelos agentes terrestres da grande Serpente, Satanás, o Diabo (Re 12:9), mas, no terceiro dia, recuperou-se deste 'ferimento no calcanhar' quando seu Pai, Jeová, o ressuscitou. — At 2:22-24; 10:40.

CALCEDÔNIA. A pedra moderna que tem esse nome é uma variedade criptocristalina de quartzo, transparente ou translúcida, usada para ornamentos e joias. Não é tão dura quanto o quartzo puro, e ocorre em massa nas cavidades de rochas vulcânicas. O tipo comum de calcedônia é parcialmente transparente, marcado por espirais e manchas branco-leitosas. Existe em muitas cores, tais como branca, cinza, amarela, azul e castanha.

A calcedônia era uma pedra usada comumente para joias gravadas, nos tempos antigos. Foi assim chamada segundo uma antiga cidade grega, de nome Calcedônia (na Ásia Menor), que certa vez era uma das fontes desse mineral. O único texto bíblico que se refere a esta pedra declara que o terceiro alicerce da muralha da Nova Jerusalém era de calcedônia (gr.: khal·ke·dón). — Re 21:2, 19; veja JOIAS E PEDRAS PRECIOSAS.

CALCOL [Aperfeiçoado]. Alguém cuja sabedoria, embora grande, foi excedida pela do Rei Salomão (1Rs 4:31); possivelmente o mesmo que o descendente de Judá por meio de Zerá. — 1Cr 2:4, 6.

CALDEIA, CALDEU. Originalmente, a terra e o povo que ocupava a parte meridional da planície aluvial babilônica, aquela rica região do delta dos rios Tigre e Eufrates. Outrora esses rios talvez desembocassem em separado no golfo Pérsico, as cidades de Eridu e de Ur sendo portos marítimos. Mas, com o decorrer dos anos, o aluvião dos rios aos poucos talvez enchesse a baía, empurrando a faixa costeira para o SE, e permitindo que o Tigre e o Eufrates se juntassem antes de desembocar no mar. Nos tempos primitivos, a cidade mais importante da região era Ur, cidade natal de Abraão, da qual ele e sua família partiram, às ordens de Deus, antes de 1943 AEC. (Gên 11:28, 31; 15:7; Ne 9:7; At 7:2-4) Cerca de 300 anos mais tarde, Satanás, o Diabo, fez com que incursores caldeus infligissem pesadas perdas ao fiel Jó. — Jó 1:17.

À medida que a influência dos caldeus se estendeu para o norte, todo o território de Babilônia tornou-se conhecido como "a terra dos caldeus". Isaías, nas suas profecias, previu esta ascensão dos caldeus ao poder e sua subsequente queda. (Is 13:19; 23:13; 47:1, 5; 48:14, 20) Esse domínio se manifestou especialmente durante o sétimo e o sexto séculos AEC, quando Nabopolassar, natural da Caldeia, e seus sucessores, Nabucodonosor II, Evil-Merodaque (Avil-Marduque), Neriglissar, Labasi-Marduque, Nabonido e Belsazar governavam a Terceira Potência Mundial, Babilônia. (2Rs 24:1, 2; 2Cr 36:17; Esd 5:12; Je 21:4, 9; 25:12; 32:4; 43:3; 50:1; Ez 1:3; Hab 1:6) Essa dinastia teve fim quando "foi morto Belsazar, o rei caldeu". (Da 5:30) Mais tarde, Dario, o Medo, tornou-se "rei sobre o reino dos caldeus". — Da 9:1; veja BABILÔNIA N.º 2.

Desde tempos primitivos, os caldeus eram famosos por seus conhecimentos de matemática e de astronomia. Nos dias de Daniel, um culto especial de prognosticadores que se consideravam peritos na chamada "ciência" da adivinhação era chamado de "caldeus". — Da 2:2, 5, 10; 4:7; 5:7, 11.

CALEBE [Cão].

1. Filho de Esrom, irmão de Jerameel e bisneto de Judá e Tamar (1Cr 2:3-5, 18); também chamado Quelubai (1Cr 2:9). Um dos seus descendentes era Bezalel, o artífice hábil designado a supervisionar a construção do tabernáculo. (1Cr 2:19, 20; Êx 35:30) Parece que o N.º 2, abaixo, era seu descendente.

2. Filho de Jefuné, o quenizeu, da tribo de Judá, tio de Otniel, e, provavelmente, descendente do N.º 1. (Núm 32:12; Jos 15:17; 1Cr 4:13, 15; veja OTNIEL.) Calebe, quando tinha 40 anos, era um dos doze espias enviados por Moisés num exame prévio, por 40 dias, da terra de Canaã, e, ao voltar, Calebe, juntamente com Josué, colocou-se contra a oposição de todos os demais ao dar um relatório favorável, dizendo: "Subamos logo, e forçosamente havemos de tomar posse dele." (Núm 13:6, 30; 14:6-9) Por ter 'seguido integralmente a Jeová, seu Deus', foi o único daquela geração adulta, além de Josué e de alguns levitas, a entrar na Terra da Promessa, em 1473 AEC. Seis anos depois, aos 85 anos de idade, Calebe declarou: "Agora, eis que Jeová me preservou vivo, assim como prometeu, durante estes quarenta e cinco anos desde que Jeová fez esta promessa a Moisés, quando Israel andou no ermo, e agora, eis que tenho hoje oitenta e cinco anos de idade. Contudo, sou hoje tão forte como no dia em que Moisés me enviou. Como era meu poder então, assim é meu poder agora para a guerra, tanto para sair como para entrar." — Jos 14:6-11.

A cidade de Hébron (a fortaleza chamada Quiriate-Arba, que estava em poder dos anaquins gigantes), bem como seu território circundante, inclusive a vizinha Debir, foi designada a Calebe, como posse dele. Em 1 Samuel 30:13, 14, onde se fala sobre os amalequitas incursionarem "no sul de Calebe", isso evidentemente não se refere a uma cidade com tal nome, mas, antes, a esta região designada a Calebe e chamada pelo nome dele; por isso, a incursão se deu 'no sul do território de Calebe'.

Ao receber sua possessão, Calebe declarou: "Quem golpear Quiriate-Sefer [também chamada Debir] e deveras a capturar, a este hei de dar minha filha Acsa por esposa." Otniel, seu sobrinho (o primeiro juiz de Israel depois da morte de Josué), capturou a cidade e ganhou o prêmio. Calebe, então, deu como presente de casamento à sua filha, a pedido desta, Gulote Alta e Gulote Baixa, além dum "pedaço de terra ao sul". — Jos 15:13-19; Jz 1:11-15; 3:9-11.

Acsa é alistada como filha de "Calebe, irmão de Jerameel" (o N.º 1 acima), que viveu cerca de um século e meio antes de "Calebe, filho de Jefuné". (1Cr 2:42, 49) Alguns comentadores dizem que havia apenas um Calebe. Mas o grande intervalo de tempo entre o neto de Judá, Esrom, e a povoação de Canaã, impede tal conclusão. Outros dizem que ambos os Calebes devem ter tido filhas com o mesmo nome. Entretanto, mulheres foram mencionadas em genealogias apenas quando desempenharam um papel importante na história do povo de Deus. E visto que havia apenas uma famosa Acsa, ela deve ter sido a filha do segundo Calebe, filho de Jefuné. Ainda outros comentadores retirariam do versículo (1Cr 2:49) a declaração sobre Acsa como adição deslocada de escribas, mas não têm para isso nenhuma autoridade textual. Entretanto, é mais razoável pensar que o escritor original incluiu intencionalmente esta nota abrupta no versículo 49 com um objetivo especial, usando "filha" em sentido mais amplo, para significar descendente, a fim de trazer à atenção o fato de que Acsa não era somente filha de Calebe, filho de Jefuné, mas também descendente direta de Calebe, filho de Esrom.

CALEBE-EFRATA. Este nome aparece em 1 Crônicas 2:24 no texto massorético como o lugar em que morreu Esrom, da tribo de Judá. (Veja LXX.) Não se faz nenhuma menção adicional deste lugar, nem se fez qualquer identificação com um lugar geográfico. — Veja ESROM N.º 2.

CALEBITA [De (Pertencente a) Calebe]. Designação que identifica o tolo Nabal como descendente de Calebe. — 1Sa 25:3.

CALENDÁRIO. Um calendário é um sistema ordeiro de divisão do tempo em anos, meses, semanas e dias. Muito antes da criação do homem, Deus forneceu a base para se medir o tempo dessa forma. Gênesis 1:14, 15, nos fala que um dos objetivos dos "luzeiros na expansão dos céus" é que servissem "para épocas, e para dias, e para anos". O dia solar, o ano solar e o mês lunar são assim divisões naturais do tempo, governadas respectivamente pela rotação diária da Terra em torno do seu eixo, por sua órbita anual em torno do sol, e pelas fases mensais da lua na sua relação com a Terra e o Sol. A divisão do tempo em semanas e a divisão do dia em horas, por outro lado, são arbitrárias.

Desde o primeiro homem, Adão, o tempo tem sido medido em termos de anos. Assim, Adão tinha "cento e trinta anos" de idade quando se tornou pai de Sete. — Gên 5:3.

As divisões em meses também vieram a ser usadas. Já na época do Dilúvio, encontramos o tempo dividido em meses de 30 dias, visto que se mostra que um período de 5 meses equivalia a 150 dias. (Gên 7:11, 24; 8:3, 4) O mesmo registro também indica que Noé dividia o ano em 12 meses. — Veja ANO.

Neste tempo mencionam-se períodos de sete dias, e talvez até mesmo já estivessem em uso regular desde cedo na história humana. (Gên 7:4, 10; 8:10, 12) No entanto, não existe evidência de uma divinamente requerida observância sabática semanal por parte do homem, até as instruções positivas de Deus a Israel depois do seu Êxodo do Egito. — Veja SEMANA.

Os homens, no passado, desenvolveram diversos sistemas de calendário, e vários deles continuam atualmente em uso. Os primitivos calendários eram mormente calendários lunares, isto é, os meses do ano eram contados pelos ciclos completos da lua, como, por exemplo, de uma lua nova até a próxima lua nova. Em média, tais lunações levam 29 dias, 12 horas e 44 minutos. Contavam-se usualmente os meses como tendo 29 ou 30 dias, mas, no registro bíblico, o termo "mês" geralmente significa 30 dias. — Veja De 21:13; 34:8; também Re 11:2, 3.

Um ano de 12 meses lunares resulta ter uns 11 dias a menos do que um ano solar de 365¼ dias. Visto que o ano solar determina o retorno das estações, havia necessidade de se ajustar o calendário a este ano solar, e isto resultou no que são chamados de anos lunissolares — isto é, anos em que os meses eram lunares, mas os anos eram solares. Isto era feito pela adição de vários dias por ano, ou de um mês adicional durante certos anos, para compensar o que faltava aos 12 meses lunares.

Calendário Hebraico. Os israelitas usavam tal calendário lunissolar. Isto se evidencia em Jeová Deus estabelecer o início do ano sagrado deles como o mês de abibe, na primavera setentrional, e especificou a celebração de certas festividades em datas fixas, festividades que se relacionavam com épocas de colheita. Para que essas datas coincidissem com as colheitas específicas, tinha de haver um arranjo de calendário que se sincronizasse com as estações, por compensar a diferença entre os anos lunar e solar. — Êx 12:1-14; 23:15, 16; Le 23:4-16.

A Bíblia não indica que método foi originalmente usado para determinar quando se devia inserir um mês adicional, ou intercalar. No entanto, é lógico que o equinócio da primavera, ou então o equinócio do outono, serviam de guia para indicar quando as estações se atrasavam o suficiente para exigir um ajuste no calendário. Embora não seja especificamente mencionado na Bíblia, um 13.º mês acrescentado pelos israelitas para realizar este ajuste, em tempos pós-exílicos, era chamado de veadar, ou segundo adar.

Só encontramos registros sobre uma forma definitivamente fixada ou padronizada do calendário judaico no quarto século da nossa Era Comum (c. 359 EC), quando Hilel II especificou que os anos intercalares de 13 meses deviam ser o 3.º, o 6.º, o 8.º, o 11.º, o 14.º, o 17.º e o 19.º ano de cada 19 anos. Tal ciclo de 19 anos costuma ser chamado de ciclo metônico, segundo o matemático grego Méton (do quinto século AEC), embora haja também evidência de que esse ciclo foi aperfeiçoado antes dele pelos babilônios. (Veja Babylonian Chronology, 626 B.C.–A.D. 75 [Cronologia Babilônica, 626 A.C.–A.D. 75], de R. A. Parker e W. H. Dubberstein, 1971, pp. 1, 3, 6.) Este ciclo leva em conta que a cada 19 anos as luas nova e cheia caem no mesmo dia do ano solar.

Os meses judaicos iam de lua nova a lua nova. (Is 66:23) Assim, uma só palavra hebraica, hhó·dhesh, vertida "mês" (Gên 7:11) ou "lua nova" (1Sa 20:27), é aparentada com hha·dhásh, significando "novo". Outra palavra para mês, yé·rahh, é traduzida "mês lunar". (1Rs 6:38) Em períodos posteriores, usavam-se sinais de fogo ou despachavam-se mensageiros para avisar o povo do começo de um novo mês.

Na Bíblia, os meses individuais costumam ser designados simplesmente por número segundo a sua posição no ano, do 1.º ao 12.º. (Jos 4:19; Núm 9:11; 2Cr 15:10; Je 52:6; Núm 33:38; Ez 8:1; Le 16:29; 1Rs 12:32; Esd 10:9; 2Rs 25:1; De 1:3; Je 52:31) Antes do exílio em Babilônia mencionam-se apenas quatro meses, abibe, o primeiro mês (Êx 13:4); zive, o segundo (1Rs 6:37); etanim, o sétimo (1Rs 8:2); e bul, o oitavo (1Rs 6:38). Os significados destes nomes são estritamente sazonais, fornecendo assim prova adicional de o ano ser lunissolar. — Veja os meses individuais por nome.

Em tempos pós-exílicos, os nomes dos meses usados em Babilônia foram empregados pelos israelitas, e sete deles são mencionados: nisã, o 1.º mês, substituindo abibe (Est 3:7); sivã, o 3.º mês (Est 8:9); elul, o 6.º (Ne 6:15); quisleu, o 9.º (Za 7:1); tebete, o 10.º (Est 2:16); sebate, o 11.º (Za 1:7); e adar, o 12.º (Esd 6:15).

Os nomes pós-exílicos dos restantes cinco meses aparecem no Talmude judaico e em outras obras. São íiar, o 2.º mês; tamuz, o 4.º; ab, o 5.º; tisri, o 7.º; e chesvã, o 8.º. O 13.º mês, intercalado periodicamente, chamava-se veadar, ou segundo adar.

Por fim, fixou-se a duração da maioria dos meses com um número específico de dias. Nisã (abibe), sivã, ab, tisri (etanim) e sebate tinham regularmente 30 dias cada um; íiar (zive), tamuz, elul e tebete tinham regularmente 29 dias cada um. Chesvã (bul), quisleu e adar, porém, podiam ter 29 ou 30 dias. As variações nestes últimos meses serviram para fazer os necessários ajustes no calendário lunar, mas foram também usadas para impedir que certas festividades caíssem em dias considerados proibidos por líderes religiosos judaicos posteriores.

Ao passo que o ano sagrado começava na primavera setentrional com o mês de abibe (ou nisã), segundo o decreto de Deus por ocasião do Êxodo (Êx 12:2; 13:4), o registro bíblico indica que, antes disso, os israelitas contavam o ano como decorrendo de um outono setentrional a outro. Deus reconheceu tal arranjo, de modo que, na realidade, havia um sistema duplo, de um calendário sagrado e um calendário secular ou agrícola usado pelo seu povo. (Êx 23:16; 34:22; Le 23:34; De 16:13) Nos tempos pós-exílicos, o dia 1.º de tisri, na última metade do ano, assinalava o começo do ano secular, e o Ano-Novo judaico, ou Rosh Hashanah (cabeça do ano) ainda é celebrado nesta data.

Em 1908, a única coisa parecida a um antigo calendário hebraico, escrito, foi encontrada no sítio de Gezer, e crê-se ser ele do décimo século AEC. Trata-se de um calendário agrícola, e ele descreve as atividades agrícolas que começavam no outono. Em suma, descreve dois meses para cada uma das atividades de armazenagem, de semeadura e de crescimento primaveril, seguidos por um mês para cada uma das atividades de colher o linho, a cevada, e de colheita geral, daí, dois meses para podar videiras, e, por fim, um mês de frutas de verão. — Le 26:5.

A tabela que acompanha este artigo apresenta os meses na sua relação tanto com o calendário sagrado como com o secular, e também sua correspondência aproximada aos meses de nosso atual calendário.

As frequentes referências nos relatos evangélicos e no livro de Atos às diversas estações festivas mostram que o calendário judaico continuava a ser observado pelos judeus no tempo de Jesus e dos apóstolos. Estas estações festivas servem de orientação para se determinar o tempo relativo dos acontecimentos bíblicos daqueles dias. — Mt 26:2; Mr 14:1; Lu 22:1; Jo 2:13, 23; 5:1; 6:4; 7:2, 37; 10:22; 11:55; At 2:1; 12:3, 4; 20:6, 16; 27:9.

Deve-se notar que os cristãos não são governados por algum calendário sagrado ou religioso que indique certos dias santos ou festividades, ponto que é especificamente declarado pelo apóstolo Paulo em Gálatas 4:9-11 e Colossenses 2:16, 17. O único evento que se requer observar anualmente, a Refeição Noturna do Senhor, na época da Páscoa, é governado pelo calendário lunar. — Mt 26:2, 26-29; 1Co 11:23-26; veja REFEIÇÃO NOTURNA DO SENHOR.

Calendários Juliano e Gregoriano. No ano 46 AEC, Júlio César emitiu um decreto mudando o calendário romano de ano lunar para ano solar. Este calendário juliano, baseado nos cálculos do astrônomo grego Sosígenes, tinha 12 meses de duração arbitrária e um ano regular de 365 dias, que começava em 1.º de janeiro. Também introduziu o uso de anos bissextos pela adição de um dia extra a cada quatro anos, para compensar a fração extra de um dia na duração do ano trópico, que tem um pouco menos de 365¼ dias.

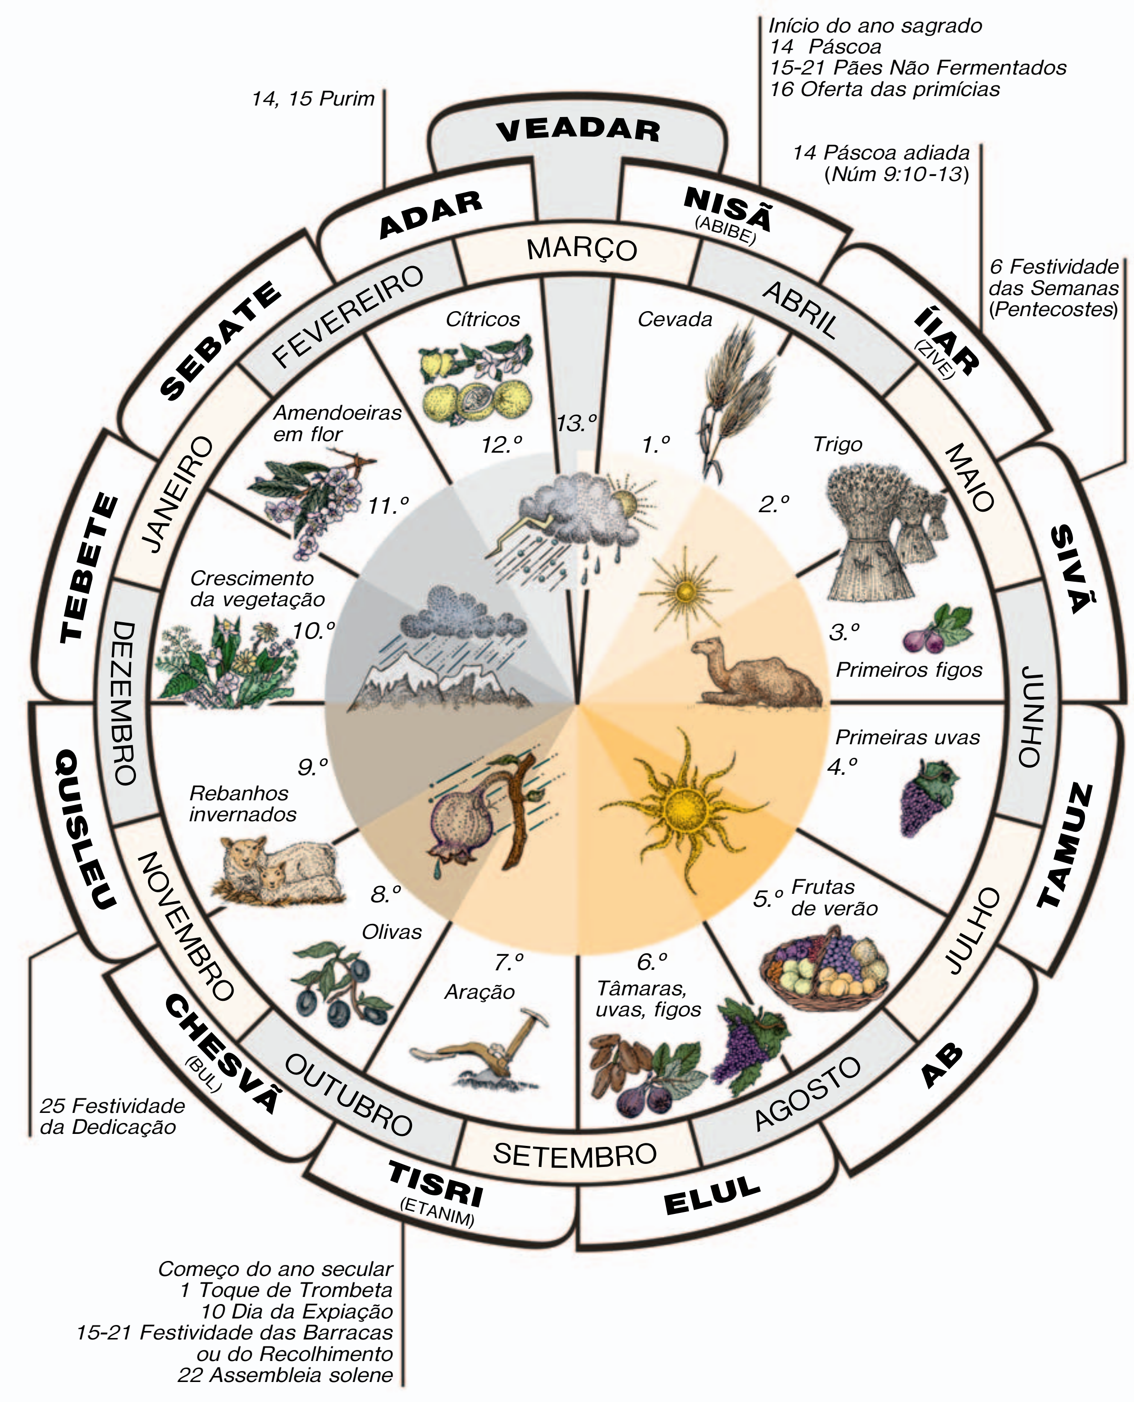
O ano do calendário juliano tinha realmente cerca de 11 minutos e 14 segundos a mais do que o verdadeiro ano solar. Assim, por volta do século 16, acumulara-se uma discrepância de 10 dias inteiros. Em 1582 EC, o Papa Gregório XIII introduziu uma ligeira revisão no calendário juliano, pela qual se retinham os anos bissextos a cada quatro anos, mas com a exceção de que apenas os anos centenários, cujo número fosse divisível por 400 deviam ser contados como anos bissextos. Por uma bula papal, em 1582, omitiram-se dez dias daquele ano, de modo que o dia depois de 4 de outubro passou a ser o 15 de outubro. O calendário gregoriano está agora em uso geral na maior parte do mundo. É a base para as datas históricas usadas em toda esta publicação.

Ao passo que os cristãos, hoje, costumam usar o calendário vigente no seu respectivo país, apercebem-se de que o Deus da eternidade, Jeová, tem seu próprio calendário referente aos eventos, não governado por sistemas humanos de cálculo. Conforme escreveu o profeta Daniel: "Ele muda os tempos e as épocas, removendo reis e estabelecendo reis, dando sabedoria aos sábios e conhecimento aos que têm discernimento. Ele revela as coisas profundas e as coisas escondidas, sabendo o que há na escuridão; e com ele habita a luz." (Da 2:21, 22) Portanto, na sua posição de Soberano Universal, ele está muito acima da Terra girante que tem dia e noite, ciclos lunares e ano solar. Todavia, na sua Palavra, a Bíblia, Deus relata prestimosamente suas ações e seus propósitos com relação a tais medições do tempo, permitindo assim que suas criaturas na Terra fiquem sabendo onde estão com relação ao Seu grandioso calendário de eventos. — Veja CRONOLOGIA.

Os Meses Calendares da Bíblia

Os meses judaicos eram contados de lua nova a lua nova. (Is 66:23) Uma palavra hebraica, hhó·dhesh, "mês" (Gên 7:11), deriva dum radical que significa "novo", ao passo que outra palavra para mês, yé·rahh, significa "lunação".

MESES		CONDIÇÕES CLIMÁTICAS	SAFRAS
Sagrado	Secular
1.º	7.º	Chuvas, neve derretida enchem o Jordão.	Ceifa de linho. Começa a ceifa da cevada.
2.º	8.º	Começa o estio. Céu geralmente claro.	Ceifa da cevada. Ceifa do trigo em regiões baixas.
3.º	9.º	Calor do verão. Ar limpo.	Ceifa do trigo. Primeiros figos. Algumas maçãs.
4.º	10.º	Crescente calor. Forte orvalho em certas regiões.	Primeiras uvas. Vegetação e mananciais secam.
5.º	11.º	Calor atinge o máximo.	Começa a vindima.
6.º	12.º	Calor continua.	Colheita de tâmaras e de figos de verão.
7.º	1.º	Verão termina. Começam primeiras chuvas.	Fim da colheita. Começa a aragem.
8.º	2.º	Chuvas leves.	Semeados trigo e cevada. Colheita de olivas.
9.º	3.º	Aumentam as chuvas. Geadas. Neve nos montes.	Brota grama.
10.º	4.º	Frio máximo. Chuvoso. Neve nos montes.	Baixadas verdejantes. Desenvolvem-se cereais, flores.
11.º	5.º	Diminui o frio. Chuva continua.	Amendoeiras em flor. Figueiras brotam.
12.º	6.º	Frequentes trovões e granizo.	Alfarrobeiras em flor. Colheita de cítricos.
13.º		Mês intercalar acrescentado sete vezes em 19 anos, em geral como segundo adar (veadar).



Início do ano sagrado
14 Páscoa
15-21 Pães Não Fermentados
16 Oferta das primícias
14, 15 Purim
VEADAR
14 Páscoa adiada
(Núm 9:10-13)
ADAR
NISÃ
(ABIBE) MARÇO
6 Festividade das Semanas
(Pentecostes)
SEBATE
FEVEREIRO
ABRIL
ÍIAR
(ZIVE)
Cítricos
Cevada
Amendoeiras em flor
13.º
12.º
1.º
Trigo
TEBETE JANEIRO
MAIO
SIVÃ
11.º
2.º
Crescimento
da vegetação
10.º
3.º
Primeiros figos
DEZEMBRO
JUNHO
Primeiras uvas
9.º
4.º
QUISLEU
Rebanhos
invernados
TAMUZ
NOVEMBRO
8.º
5.º
Frutas
de verão
Olivas
JULHO
7.º
6.º
Aração
Tâmaras,
uvas, figos
CHESVÃ
(BUL)
OUTUBRO
AGOSTO
AB
25 Festividade
da Dedicação
SETEMBRO
TISRI
(ETANIM)
ELUL
Começo do ano secular
1 Toque de Trombeta
10 Dia da Expiação
15-21 Festividade das Barracas ou do Recolhimento
22 Assembleia solene

CÁLICE. Veja COPO.

CALNÉ.

1. Cidade fundada por Ninrode na terra de Sinear. (Gên 10:10) Assim, evidentemente, encontrava-se na Mesopotâmia meridional, mas a localização é incerta. Nipur, uma antiga cidade babilônica a uns 85 km ao SE de Babilônia, já por muito tempo é sugerida como lugar dela, baseado na tradição talmúdica e em outros fatores. Alguns eruditos, porém, preferem a identificação com Kulunu, primitivo nome duma cidade de certa importância, perto de Babilônia. Uma terceira possibilidade é uma cidade dupla de Kish, chamada Hursagkalama, supondo-se que a última parte do nome (-kalama) represente Calné. Algumas traduções (BJ, BLH) vertem Calné, não como nome dum lugar, mas como "todas", de modo que o texto reza: 'Babel, Ereque e Acade, todas na terra de Sinear'. Isto, porém, requer um ajuste nos sinais vocálicos do texto massorético.

2. Lugar mencionado pelo profeta Amós, junto com as cidades de Hamate e Gate, quando avisava o povo de Israel e de Judá sobre uma vindoura calamidade. (Am 6:2) Ao passo que alguns comentadores acham que seja o N.º 1 acima, a maioria dos peritos consideram sua associação com Hamate e Gate como indicação duma localização na região adjacente ao mar Mediterrâneo oriental, em vez de na Mesopotâmia. Sugerem a identificação com a Kullani das inscrições assírias na Síria setentrional (evidentemente representada hoje pela moderna Kullan Köy, a uns 16 km ao SE de Arpade), mencionada por Tiglate-Pileser III entre os lugares subjugados durante a campanha assíria no oeste. Se esta identificação for correta, então Calné, aqui, talvez seja a mesma que Calno em Isaías 10:9.

CALNO. Uma cidade alistada na profecia de Isaías referente à jactância dos assírios das suas conquistas e da futilidade de tentar resistir ao poderio deles. (Is 10:5, 9-11) A maioria dos peritos considera Calno como grafia alternativa de Calné. (Am 6:2) A menção de Calno em conexão com Carquemis se harmonizaria com a identificação de Calné com Kullani, dos textos assírios, situada entre Carquemis e Alepo. Kullani foi conquistada por Tiglate-Pileser III, contemporâneo do Rei Menaém, de Israel.

CALÚNIA. Veja TAGARELICE, CALÚNIA.

CALVÁRIO. Veja GÓLGOTA.

CALVÍCIE. A ausência de cabelos na cabeça, embora não necessariamente uma perda total de cabelos. Não raro, a calvície ocorre em pontos ou áreas, ao passo que em outras partes da cabeça o cabelo cresce normalmente. Esta espécie de perda de cabelos é chamada de calvície de padrão e é responsável por cerca de 90 por cento de todos os casos. A Bíblia faz menção de "calva" (hebr.: qor·hháh), "calva da coroa" (hebr.: qa·rá·hhath) e "calvície da testa" (hebr.: gib·bé·ahh e gab·bá·hhath). (Le 13:41-44; 21:5) A causa exata da calvície é desconhecida. A hereditariedade é considerada o principal fator contribuinte, ao passo que infecções, o desequilíbrio hormonal, o envelhecimento, distúrbios nervosos, até mesmo alguns tratamentos médicos e a sífilis, podem constituir fatores.

A calvície é um defeito que interfere no atrativo da pessoa, e, por isso, entre povos da antiguidade, era associada com vergonha, luto e aflição. (Is 3:24; 15:2; Je 47:5; Ez 27:31; Am 8:10; Miq 1:16) No entanto, sob a Lei de Moisés, a calvície não era considerada impureza. (Le 13:40) A Lei dada por meio de Moisés não alista a calvície como defeito que impedisse alguém de servir como sacerdote. Na visão do profeta Ezequiel, deu-se a ordem de que os sacerdotes não usassem o cabelo solto, nem rapado, mas cortado. — Ez 44:20.

Eliseu, profeta de Jeová, era calvo. Depois de ter sucedido a Elias no cargo profético, ele subia de Jericó para Betel, quando foi escarnecido por uma turma de crianças que clamaram: "Sobe, careca! Sobe, careca!" O motivo primário da sua zombaria não parece ter sido a calvície de Eliseu, mas que viram um homem calvo usando o familiar manto oficial de Elias. Não queriam um sucessor de Elias por perto. Ele devia ou continuar no seu caminho a Betel, ou então ascender num vendaval aos céus, como fizera o anterior usuário daquele manto oficial. (2Rs 2:11) A fim de responder a este desafio de ele ser sucessor de Elias e para ensinar a esses jovens e aos pais deles o devido respeito pelo profeta de Jeová, Eliseu invocou o mal sobre a turma zombadora, em nome do Deus de Elias. Era uma prova de ele ser profeta. Jeová manifestou sua aprovação de Eliseu por fazer com que duas ursas saíssem da floresta vizinha e dilacerassem 42 deles. — 2Rs 2:23, 24.

Alguns povos tinham por hábito impor artificialmente a calvície, por raparem a cabeça em época de pesar pelo falecimento de um parente, ou por motivos religiosos, mas proibiu-se aos israelitas praticar isso. (De 14:1) Os sacerdotes receberam uma ordem específica de não se fazerem calvos, nem rapar as extremidades da barba por causa dos mortos. (Le 21:5) Ordenou-se a Israel que não se cortassem as madeixas laterais, nem a extremidade da barba. — Le 19:27; Je 9:26; veja BARBA.

No Egito, os homens geralmente rapavam a cabeça, e encaravam as barbas compridas como sinal de luto ou de desleixo pessoal. Por este motivo, José, quando tirado da prisão, fez a barba antes de ser conduzido à presença do Faraó. (Gên 41:14) No entanto, os egípcios cobriam a calva com perucas, e muitos dos que rapavam a cabeça e a barba usavam perucas e amarravam barbas postiças. No Papiro Ebers, um tratado médico egípcio que data do segundo milênio AEC, há 11 receitas para evitar a calvície.

Na Lei, alguém com lepra na cabeça tinha de rapar a cabeça no início de seu período de quarentena, no dia de sua purificação, e, novamente, no sétimo dia. (Le 13:33; 14:8, 9) Se um nazireu ficasse aviltado, então, na ocasião de efetivar-se a sua purificação, ele rapava a cabeça. (Núm 6:9) A mulher cativa, que um soldado israelita fosse tomar como esposa, tinha de rapar a cabeça. — De 21:12.

As tropas de Nabucodonosor sofreram calvície temporária durante o sítio estrênuo e difícil da cidade continental de Tiro. Jeová disse a Ezequiel que "toda cabeça ficou calva e todo ombro ficou esfolado", ao passo que a força militar de Nabucodonosor prestou "um grande serviço" na execução do julgamento em Tiro. A cabeça deles ficou calva pela fricção dos capacetes, e os ombros ficaram esfolados pelo atrito dos materiais (para a construção de torres e fortificações). — Ez 26:7-12; 29:17, 18.

Em alguns lugares, nos dias dos apóstolos, tais como na cidade imoral de Corinto, as mulheres apanhadas em adultério ou em fornicação eram punidas por se lhes rapar a cabeça. As escravas tinham os cabelos cortados bem curtos. Paulo, pelo que parece, aproveita tal circunstância para uma ilustração, mostrando que a mulher, na congregação cristã, que orasse ou profetizasse com a cabeça descoberta, embora tivesse os cabelos como cobertura, bem que poderia ir mais além e mostrar sua vergonha em desrespeitar o princípio de Deus sobre quem é cabeça por rapar completamente seus cabelos. — 1Co 11:3-10.

CAMA. Nos tempos bíblicos, assim como hoje, o que se usava para dormir variava de tipo, de estilo e de estrutura, conforme a condição financeira, sua situação na vida e os costumes das pessoas. O chão duro, às vezes forrado por um acolchoado ou uma esteira, frequentemente bastava para o pobre, o pastor e o viajante; os governantes e os ricos usavam mobília bem cara e muito ornamentada em suas moradias permanentes.

O termo hebraico comum para "cama" é mish·káv, da raiz sha·kháv (deitar). (Gên 49:4; Le 26:6) O costumeiro termo grego é klí·ne, de klí·no (inclinar). (Mt 9:2; Lu 9:58, Int) Outro termo grego para "cama", koí·te, que basicamente denota um lugar onde se deitar (Lu 11:7), é também usado para se referir ao "leito conjugal" (He 13:4) e a "relações ilícitas" (Ro 13:13); por metonímia, refere-se a conceber um filho. (Ro 9:10) Outros termos hebraicos para lugares em que se deitar são mit·táh (leito), 'é·res (divã) e ya·tsú·a' (leito). A palavra grega krá·bat·tos refere-se a uma maca. (Mr 2:4) Os escritores bíblicos nem sempre fizeram uma distinção entre esses diversos termos e frequentemente usavam dois ou mais deles para a mesma coisa, chamando a cama de divã (Jó 7:13), a cama de maca (Mt 9:6; Mr 2:11), o leito de divã (Sal 6:6), a cama de leito (Gên 49:4). Estes eram usados pelos que dormiam à noite ou faziam a sesta (2Sa 4:5-7; Jó 33:15), pelos doentes, pelos que tinham relações sexuais (Sal 41:3; Ez 23:17), e como lugar de repouso para os mortos numa grandiosa sepultura (2Cr 16:14). O costume de se recostar para uma refeição exigia leitos. (Est 7:8; Mt 26:20; Lu 22:14) Um leito especialmente projetado para carregar a pessoa, em estilo régio, era chamado de liteira. — Cân 3:7-10; veja LITEIRA.

Certos acessórios são geralmente ligados às camas, por exemplo, o travesseiro. Jesus, ao cruzar o mar da Galileia, adormeceu "sobre um travesseiro", na popa do barco. (Mr 4:38) Na estação mais fria, usava-se um "lençol tecido" ou outra coberta (Is 28:20), mas era comum dormir com a roupa de uso cotidiano; por isso, a Lei mosaica proibia que se retivesse a roupa de outrem depois do pôr do sol: "É a sua única cobertura. . . . Em que se deitará?" — Êx 22:26, 27.

A cama oriental, frequentemente era apenas uma esteira feita de palha ou de junco, e talvez um acolchoado ou algum tipo de colchão, para maior conforto. Quando não eram usados, eram enrolados e guardados. Um arranjo mais permanente utilizava uma armação de madeira ou estrado de cama, que elevava quem dormia acima do solo ou do chão. (Mr 4:21) Estes serviam de leitos ou divãs em que se sentar durante o dia. As camas mais simples, semelhantes a macas, eram leves, facilmente apanhadas e transportadas. — Lu 5:18, 19; Jo 5:8; At 5:15.

Os abastados possuíam camas ornadas com elegantes adornos de ricos bordados. "Arrumei o meu divã com colchas, com coisas multicolores, linho do Egito. Borrifei minha cama com mirra, aloés e canela", declarou a sedutora prostituta. (Pr 7:16, 17) Como os "leitos de ouro e de prata" dum palácio persa, assim também um "leito de luxo", "um divã damasceno" e "leitos de marfim" foram descritos pelo profeta como mobiliário do rebelde Israel. — Est 1:6; Am 3:12; 6:4.

Quartos separados ou internos eram usados por aqueles que se podiam dar ao luxo de ter uma casa grande. (Êx 8:3; 2Rs 6:12; 11:2) Durante o verão quente, os eirados mais frescos frequentemente serviam de dormitórios.

Camas e leitos são também mencionados nas Escrituras em sentido figurado. A condição dos mortos, por exemplo, é a dos deitados numa cama. (Jó 17:13; Ez 32:25) Os leais a Jeová 'gritam de júbilo nas suas camas', em contraste com os obstinados que continuam uivando e maquinando o que é mau enquanto deitados na cama. (Sal 149:5; Os 7:14; Miq 2:1) Dessemelhantes de Rubem, que com impetuosidade leviana teve relações sexuais com a concubina de seu pai Jacó, e neste sentido profanou o leito de seu pai (Gên 35:22; 49:4), os cristãos não devem de modo algum macular o sagrado arranjo matrimonial, "o leito conjugal". — He 13:4.

CAMALEÃO [hebr.: tin·shé·meth]. O nome deste réptil acha-se incluído entre as "criaturas pululantes" que eram 'impuras' segundo a Lei mosaica. (Le 11:29, 30) O nome é considerado como derivado de na·shám, um radical que significa "ofegar". (Veja Is 42:14.) Koehler e Baumgartner, pela comparação com o árabe, sugerem o significado de "bufador". (Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], Leiden, 1958, p. 1035) Ao passo que é incerta a identificação, o nome pode aplicar-se ao camaleão. O Chamaeleo chamaeleon comum é encontrado com frequência no Egito e na Palestina.

O camaleão é um réptil que se move lentamente e habita em árvores, notado por sua habilidade de mudar de cor. Esta mudança de cores é primariamente determinada pela temperatura e pela intensidade da luz e pelo estado emocional.

Em Levítico 11:18, a mesma palavra hebraica é aplicada ao cisne, entre as aves 'impuras'.

CAMBISTA. Alguém cuja função incluía cambiar uma moeda em outra, e moedas de certo valor em outras de valor diferente. Para cada transação, o cambista recebia certa taxa. Assim, a palavra grega kol·ly·bi·stés (cambista) vem do termo kól·ly·bos, a pequena moeda paga como comissão pelo câmbio do dinheiro. A palavra grega ker·ma·ti·stés (corretor de dinheiro ou trocador de moedas), em João 2:14, é aparentada com kér·ma, traduzida 'moeda' no versículo seguinte. Outros serviços mencionados na Míxena judaica como prestados pelos cambistas eram a custódia de dinheiro e o pagamento de salários diante da apresentação de ordens de pagamento. — Bava Mezia 3:11; 9:12.

No tempo do ministério terrestre de Jesus, o imposto anual do templo era de duas dracmas (uma didracma). (Mt 17:24) Uma vez que judeus de terras muito espalhadas vinham a Jerusalém para celebrar a Páscoa, e pagavam este imposto nessa ocasião, talvez fossem necessários os serviços dos cambistas, para trocar moedas estrangeiras em dinheiro aceitável como pagamento do imposto do templo, se não também para a compra dos animais sacrificiais e de outros itens. De acordo com a Míxena (Shekalim 1:3), no dia 15 de adar, ou cerca de um mês antes da Páscoa, os cambistas montavam seus negócios nas províncias. Mas no dia 25 de adar, quando os judeus e prosélitos de muitas outras terras começavam a chegar a Jerusalém, os cambistas se estabeleciam na área do templo.

Foi no templo que Jesus Cristo, em duas ocasiões, derrubou as mesas dos cambistas e os condenou por terem tornado o templo uma "casa de comércio" ou um "covil de salteadores". (Jo 2:13-16; Mt 21:12, 13; Mr 11:15-17) Isto pode sugerir que Jesus considerou exorbitantes as taxas cobradas pelos cambistas. Neste sentido, é digno de nota que houve épocas em que se obtiveram grandes lucros com a venda de animais sacrificiais. A Míxena fala de uma época em que o preço de dois pombos chegou a ser de um denar de ouro (25 denares de prata). Isto induziu Simeão, filho de Gamaliel, a declarar: "Santo Templo! Não suportarei ver passar a noite sem custarem apenas um denar [de prata]." Nesse mesmo dia, o preço foi drasticamente reduzido. — Keritot 1:7 (da tradução para o inglês por H. Danby).

Camelo árabe, bem ajustado à vida no deserto.

CAMELO [hebr.: ga·mál; bé·kher, 'macho novo do camelo' (Is 60:6); bikh·ráh, "fêmea nova de camelo" (Je 2:23); kir·ka·róhth, "velozes fêmeas de camelo" (Is 66:20); gr.: ká·me·los]. Animal que há muito tem servido ao homem como besta de carga e como meio de transporte, especialmente nas regiões desérticas. Há duas variedades de camelos, o bactriano e o árabe. O bactriano (Camelus bactrianus) possui duas corcovas ou bossas no dorso, é mais forte do que o árabe, e é capaz de transportar cargas mais pesadas; o árabe (Camelus dromedarius), o dromedário, considerado como o geralmente mencionado na Bíblia, tem apenas uma corcova ou bossa.

As características do camelo o ajustam de forma ideal à vida nas regiões desérticas, onde ocupa o lugar usualmente destinado ao cavalo ou à mula em outras terras. A pelagem grossa desse animal o abriga do calor do deserto. Suas longas narinas parecidas a fendas podem fechar-se à vontade, uma útil precaução contra a areia soprada pelo vento. Seus olhos são protegidos contra as escaldantes tempestades de areia por pesadas pálpebras e longas pestanas. Os pés do camelo têm pele endurecida e são como coxins, com uma conformação notável para pisarem sobre a areia macia e que cede ao peso. Almofadas calosas em que o animal repousa protegem seu peito e seus joelhos. Essas almofadas são inatas. Os dentes fortes do camelo o habilitam a mastigar praticamente qualquer coisa. Esta criatura precisa de poucos cereais e pode subsistir das plantas comuns do deserto, tornando-a um animal de uso bem econômico.

A bossa do camelo serve como espécie de despensa portátil. Ali é estocada a maior parte de sua reserva alimentícia em forma de gordura. Quando o camelo precisa recorrer à nutrição contida em sua reserva alimentar por demasiado tempo, a pele da bossa, em vez de manter-se erguida, cai de lado e fica pendurada como um saco vazio, ao lado da espinha dorsal. Nos tempos antigos, como atualmente, colocavam-se cargas sobre as bossas dos camelos. (Is 30:6) Faz-se também menção nas Escrituras do "cesto das mulheres da sela do camelo", que sem dúvida era colocado na bossa do camelo. — Gên 31:34.

Embora o folclore diga que o camelo armazena água na sua bossa, isto não acontece. Pensa-se, em geral, que o camelo possa passar sem água por um prolongado período, por causa da sua capacidade de reter grande parte da água que bebe. Um fator contribuinte é o formato do nariz, que habilita o animal a extrair vapor de água quando exala. O camelo pode tolerar uma perda de água de 25 por cento do seu peso, em contraste com os 12 por cento no caso dos humanos. Não perde a umidade por transpiração tão rapidamente como outras criaturas, porque a temperatura do seu corpo pode variar em 6°C sem efeito marcante. Seu sangue é peculiar, visto que a perda de fluido é mínima quando por alguns dias há pouca água. Consegue também substituir a perda de peso do corpo por beber tantos quantos 135 l em dez minutos.

Sabe-se de camelos que viajaram em velocidades notáveis. Em 1 Samuel 30:17 faz-se uma alusão a camelos velozes. Foram somente os 400 jovens que montaram camelos que conseguiram escapar quando Davi golpeou os incursores amalequitas.

De acordo com a Lei, o camelo era um animal impuro, e, por isso, não era usado como alimento pelos israelitas. (Le 11:4; De 14:7) No entanto, fabricavam-se tecidos com pelos de camelo. João, o Batizador, usava uma roupa deste tecido. (Mt 3:4; Mr 1:6) Até mesmo hoje, o tecido de pelos de camelo é usado no fabrico de artigos de vestuário.

Uso Desde Tempos Primitivos. A primeira menção bíblica do camelo se relaciona à residência temporária de Abraão no Egito, onde adquiriu vários destes animais de carga. (Gên 12:16) Quando o fiel servo de Abraão foi mandado à Mesopotâmia, a fim de procurar uma esposa para Isaque, acompanhava-o uma tropa de dez camelos, carregados com toda sorte de presentes. (Gên 24:10) Foi a uma caravana de camelos, de ismaelitas, em viagem para o Egito, que José foi vendido pelos seus meios-irmãos. — Gên 37:25-28.

Jó é apresentado como "o maior de todos os orientais". Seus bens materiais incluíam 3.000 camelos, e após a prova da sua integridade, Jeová abençoou Jó tanto, que ele veio a possuir 6.000 camelos e uma enorme quantidade de outro gado. — Jó 1:3; 42:12.

Junto com outros tipos de gado do Egito, os camelos também sofreram das pragas que Deus trouxe sobre o domínio de Faraó. (Êx 9:3, 10, 25; 12:29) Não se indica no registro bíblico se camelos acompanhavam os israelitas na sua peregrinação pelo ermo, mas isso é provável.

A primeira referência a camelos após o estabelecimento de Israel na Terra da Promessa se faz em conexão com seu uso por invasores. Quando hostes midianitas e seus 'camelos sem número' se espalharam pelo país e o empobreceram, Israel, o povo de Deus, se viu confrontado com uma situação crítica. (Jz 6:5; 7:12) Ocasionalmente, com a ajuda de Jeová, os israelitas derrotaram seus inimigos e capturaram grande número de camelos, em certa ocasião, 50.000. — 1Cr 5:21; 2Cr 14:15.

Enquanto estava proscrito da corte de Saul, Davi e seus homens guerreavam contra os gesuritas, os girzitas e os amalequitas, abatendo todos os homens e mulheres, mas apoderando-se dos animais domésticos, inclusive de camelos, como presa de guerra. (1Sa 27:8, 9) Durante o reinado de Davi, um oficial especial, Obil, era o encarregado dos seus camelos. (1Cr 27:30) A rainha de Sabá trouxe presentes ao Rei Salomão numa tropa de camelos, e Ben-Hadade II, da Síria, enviou presentes ao profeta Eliseu em 40 camelos. — 1Rs 10:1, 2; 2Rs 8:9.

Ao predizer a queda de Babilônia, o profeta Isaías aludiu aos exércitos conquistadores sob o símbolo de "um carro de guerra de camelos". (Is 21:7) De acordo com o historiador grego Heródoto (I, 80), Ciro realmente fazia uso de camelos nas suas campanhas militares. Ao descrever a iminente ruína de Rabá, capital dos amonitas, Ezequiel 25:5 diz que a cidade se tornaria "uma pastagem de camelos". Também, a casa de Israel, sem fé, no seu proceder adúltero, mantendo relações ilícitas com nações pagãs circunvizinhas, foi comparada a uma fêmea nova de camelo, em cio, correndo a esmo para lá e para cá. — Je 2:23, 24.

Fazendo lembrar as pragas que sobrevieram ao gado no Egito, Zacarias predisse um flagelo que sobreviria aos camelos e a outro gado das nações que lutassem contra o povo de Jeová na terra. (Za 14:12, 15) Depois de restabelecido do exílio, o povo de Deus é retratado como coberto de uma "massa movimentada de camelos", todos trazendo tributo. Camelos são também mencionados entre os animais de carga que trazem os irmãos dos servos de Deus a Jerusalém, procedentes de todas as nações, "como presente a Jeová". (Is 60:6; 66:20) É de interesse que, no primeiro cumprimento da profecia de Isaías sobre o restabelecimento, havia 435 camelos entre os animais dos judeus que retornavam de Babilônia, em 537 AEC. — Esd 2:67; Ne 7:69.

Uso Ilustrativo. Jesus referiu-se ao camelo dum modo ilustrativo. Em certa ocasião, indicou que seria mais fácil um camelo passar pelo orifício duma agulha do que para o rico entrar no Reino. (Mt 19:24; Mr 10:25; Lu 18:25) Surgiu uma questão quanto a se "camelo" não deveria ser traduzido mais corretamente "corda" neste caso. De fato, a tradução em inglês de George M. Lamsa usa a palavra "corda" no texto principal, e uma nota sobre Mateus 19:24 reza: "A palavra aramaica gamla significa corda e camelo." Também, as palavras gregas para corda (ká·mi·los) e camelo (ká·me·los) são muito similares, e tem-se sugerido que houve uma confusão entre as duas palavras gregas. É digno de nota, porém, que A Greek-English Lexicon (Um Léxico Grego-Inglês, de Liddell e Scott, revisado por Jones, Oxford, 1968, p. 872) define ká·mi·los como "corda", mas adiciona que provavelmente foi cunhada como emenda da frase: "É mais fácil um camelo passar pelo fundo duma agulha do que um rico entrar no reino de Deus", indicando assim que no texto grego original constava ká·me·los, em vez de ká·mi·los.

Nos mais antigos manuscritos gregos existentes do Evangelho de Mateus (o Sinaítico, o Vaticano N.º 1209 e o Alexandrino), consta a palavra ká·me·los. Mateus escreveu seu relato sobre a vida de Jesus primeiro em hebraico, e então ele mesmo talvez o traduzisse para o grego. Portanto, ele sabia exatamente o que Jesus disse e pretendia dizer. Assim, sabia qual era a palavra correta, e a palavra usada nos mais antigos manuscritos gregos existentes era ká·me·los. Portanto, há boa razão para se crer que a tradução correta é "camelo".

Por meio desta ilustração, que não se destinava a ser tomada literalmente, Jesus salientou que, assim como não era possível um camelo literal passar pelo orifício duma agulha literal, era ainda menos possível que um rico entrasse no Reino de Deus, enquanto continuasse a apegar-se às suas riquezas. — Veja ORIFÍCIO DA AGULHA.

Em sua condenação dos fariseus hipócritas, Jesus falou de 'coarem o mosquito, mas engolirem o camelo'. Esses homens costumavam coar o mosquito de seu vinho, não só por ser um inseto, mas por ser cerimonialmente impuro; todavia, figuradamente, engoliam camelos, que também eram impuros. Ao passo que insistiam no cumprimento do mínimo dos requisitos da Lei, despercebiam inteiramente os assuntos de maior peso — a justiça, a misericórdia e a fidelidade. — Mt 23:23, 24.

CAMINHO, O. Esta expressão pode ser aplicada a uma estrada, uma rua, uma trilha ou vereda; a um modo de agir ou conduta; ou a um proceder, um modo ou um método normal. Nas Escrituras é muitas vezes usada com relação a um proceder de conduta e de ação que é aprovado ou desaprovado por Jeová Deus. (Jz 2:22; 2Rs 21:22; Sal 27:11; 32:8; 86:11; Is 30:21; Je 7:23; 10:23; 21:8) Com a vinda de Jesus Cristo, usufruir alguém uma relação correta com Deus e se dirigir a ele de forma aceitável, em oração, dependia de ele aceitar Jesus Cristo. Conforme declarou o Filho de Deus: “Eu sou o caminho, e a verdade, e a vida. Ninguém vem ao Pai senão por mim.” (Jo 14:6; He 10:19-22) Aqueles que se tornaram seguidores de Jesus Cristo foram mencionados como pertencendo a “O Caminho”, isto é, aderiram a uma maneira de agir ou modo de vida que girava em torno da fé em Jesus Cristo, em seguir o exemplo dele. — At 9:2; 19:9, 23; 22:4; 24:22.

CAMOM. O lugar do sepultamento do juiz Jair. (Jz 10:5) Josefo fala de Camom como “uma cidade de Gileade”. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], V, 254 [vii, 6]) Isto parece ajustar-se à referência bíblica a Jair ser “gileadita”. (Jz 10:3) Dois lugares ao L do Jordão costumam ser apresentados para a antiga Camom. Um é Qamm, a uns 18 km ao SE do mar da Galileia. Mas as suas ruínas não fornecem nenhuma evidência de ter sido habitada antes dos tempos romanos. A outra sugestão é o lugar das menos impressionantes ruínas, de antiguidade não determinada, em Qumeim, a uns 3 km mais para o S.

CAMPAINHA (SINETA). Um vaso metálico oco. Este instrumento usualmente tem forma de pera ou campânula e dá uma nota musical dominante quando se bate nele.

A primeira menção de campainhas na Bíblia ocorre com relação ao serviço do tabernáculo, no livro de Êxodo, onde a palavra hebraica pa·ʽamóhn ocorre sete vezes. Na bainha da túnica toda azul do sumo sacerdote eram pregadas campainhas de ouro, alternadas por romãs de tecido azul, roxo e escarlate. — Êx 28:33-35; 39:25, 26.

Em Zacarias 14:20 usa-se a palavra hebraica metsil·láh para indicar as sinetas presas aos arreios dos cavalos. Esta deriva duma raiz que significa “tinir”. (1Sa 3:11) Que as sinetas dos cavalos deviam ter gravadas nelas as palavras “A santidade pertence a Jeová”, as mesmas palavras encontradas na “lâmina lustrosa” presa ao turbante do sumo sacerdote de Israel, indicava que tudo ficaria permeado pelo reconhecimento da santidade de Jeová. — Êx 39:30, 31; compare isso com Za 14:21.

CAMPO. A palavra hebraica sa·dhéh, que é a mais frequentemente traduzida “campo”, pode indicar um campo de caça, um terreno para pasto ou para lavoura, uma área florestal sem cultivo, o topo duma montanha, ou até mesmo uma região ocupada por certo povo, por exemplo, o “campo de Moabe”; o termo é também usado em contraste com “cidade”. (Gên 27:5; 31:4; 37:5-7; Jz 9:32, 36; 1Sa 14:25; Núm 21:20; De 28:3) O termo grego a·grós refere-se a um “campo” cultivado (Mt 13:24), ao “campo” em oposição à cidade (Mr 16:12), e, no plural, à “zona rural” (Mr 5:14).

Além disso, o conjunto de terrenos de diversos proprietários podia ser considerado como o “campo”, conforme se vê no relato de Rute. Ao sair para o “campo”, Rute, por acaso, “veio parar no pedaço de campo que pertencia a Boaz”, indicando que Boaz possuía apenas uma parte daquela área. (Ru 2:2, 3) Ao passo que vinhedos e jardins, pelo visto, eram cercados, as indicações mostram que os campos não eram. (Núm 22:24; Cân 4:12) A Lei ordenava que ninguém mudasse os marcos divisórios do seu próximo, indicando que era relativamente fácil fazer isso. (De 19:14) Segundo a Lei, povoados sem muralhas eram considerados como parte do campo do país. — Le 25:31.

Incêndios podiam facilmente espalhar-se de um campo para outro, e era preciso ter cuidado de controlar os animais domésticos, para que não entrassem no campo de outrem. (Êx 22:5, 6) Em Isaías 28:25 menciona-se a espelta plantada no limite do terreno. Talvez por se plantarem esta espécie inferior de trigo nas beiradas dos seus campos, os lavradores, até certo ponto, podiam proteger suas safras mais valiosas, tais como trigo e cevada, contra o gado que porventura invadisse as beiradas do campo.

É provável que fosse possível atravessar os campos em veredas, e estas também podem ter servido para separar um terreno do outro, porque é bem pouco provável que Jesus e seus discípulos atravessassem o próprio campo, pisando no cereal ao caminharem. Se tivessem feito isso, os fariseus, sem dúvida, também teriam objetado a isso. (Lu 6:1-5) Talvez fosse com referência a tais veredas que Jesus, na sua ilustração a respeito do semeador, mencionou as sementes que caíram à beira da estrada. — Mt 13:4.

CAMPO DE SANGUE. Veja ACÉLDAMA.

CAMPO DO LAVADEIRO. Evidentemente uma área perto da cidade de Jerusalém, onde trabalhavam lavadeiros.

Isaías e seu filho Sear-Jasube deviam encontrar-se com o Rei Acaz junto “à estrada principal do campo do lavadeiro”; mais tarde, os emissários de Senaqueribe chegaram ao mesmo lugar. (2Rs 18:17; Is 7:3; 36:2) Embora esta “estrada principal do campo do lavadeiro” evidentemente se encontrava fora da cidade, era bastante perto para que as zombarias dos mensageiros de Senaqueribe pudessem ser ouvidas pelos que estavam nas muralhas da cidade. — 2Rs 18:18, 26, 27; Is 36:1, 2.

Um “aqueduto” é mencionado em conexão com a “estrada principal do campo do lavadeiro”. Isto não se pode referir ao chamado túnel de Ezequias, visto que ainda não havia sido construído nos dias de Acaz. O aqueduto, portanto, parece ter sido um que percorria o vale da torrente do Cédron até a extremidade S da Cidade de Davi. O campo do lavadeiro parece ter sido situado quer nesta parte do vale, quer um pouco mais ao S, perto do sugerido lugar de En-Rogel.

CAMPO DO OLEIRO. Depois de Judas, de remorso, ter lançado no templo o preço da traição, de 30 moedas de prata (se foram siclos, US$ 66), os principais sacerdotes usaram o dinheiro para comprar "o campo do oleiro, para enterrar os estranhos". (Mt 27:3-10) O campo veio a ser conhecido como Acéldama, ou "Campo de Sangue". (At 1:18, 19; veja ACÉLDAMA.) Desde o quarto século EC, este campo tem sido identificado com um lugar na encosta S do vale de Hinom, pouco antes de se juntar ao vale do Cédron.

A expressão "o campo do oleiro" não indica especificamente se o campo simplesmente era da propriedade dum oleiro, ou se era chamado assim por ter sido, em algum ponto da sua história, uma área em que os oleiros desempenhavam o seu ofício. Este último caso, porém, parece provável, se o lugar tradicional for correto. Estaria perto do Portão dos Cacos (ou "Portão dos Oleiros", segundo J. Simons, na sua nota em Jerusalem in the Old Testament [Jerusalém no Antigo Testamento], Leiden, 1952, p. 230; "Portão dos Montes de Cinzas" em Neemias), mencionado em Jeremias 19:1, 2. (Veja Je 18:2.) A necessária matéria-prima, a argila, tem estado disponível na vizinhança dali. Também, a fabricação de cerâmica exigia um bom suprimento de água, e o lugar encontrava-se perto da fonte de En-Rogel e do reservatório de água de Siloé, bem como perto da água que se encontrava no vale de Hinom, no inverno.

CAMURÇA [hebr.: zé·mer]. Pequeno antílope, semelhante à cabra, caracterizado por chifres recurvados na ponta, e famoso por sua agilidade e seu passo firme em estonteantes alturas. O macho adulto pode medir até 80 cm no garrote, e pode pesar mais de 30 kg. A pele de verão da camurça é de cor castanho-amarelada, que fica cada vez mais escura com a chegada da estação hibernal. A camurça acha-se alistada entre os animais apropriados para alimento, segundo os requisitos da Lei. — De 14:5.

Há incerteza quanto ao animal visado pela palavra hebraica zé·mer, traduzida de forma diversa por "camurça" (KJ, NM, PIB), "cabra montês" (CBC), "cabra selvagem" (BJ, BMD, LEB), "camelo pardal" (So) ou simplesmente transliterada como "zemer" (Kx). A raiz hebraica, da qual a palavra zé·mer deriva, é considerada como aparentada com a palavra árabe zamara (pular; fugir), sugerindo um animal pulante, saltante e, por isso, parecido com a gazela. Alguns zoólogos sustentam que a camurça (Rupicapra rupicapra) nunca foi encontrada na Palestina. Entretanto, pode-se notar que variedades locais deste animal são encontradas nos montes Carpatos e Cáucaso, permitindo assim a possibilidade de que, em certa época, talvez existisse uma variedade de camurça na cordilheira do Líbano.

CANA, I [Cana; Caniço].

1. Vale de torrente que serviu de fronteira entre Efraim e Manassés. (Jos 16:8; 17:9) Hoje usualmente é relacionado com o uádi Qanah (Nahal Qana). Esta pequena corrente aflora na região montanhosa a poucos quilômetros ao SO de Nablus, e, como o uádi Ishkar, flui em direção SO e depois se junta ao uádi Yarkon (Nahal Yarqon), que desemboca no mar Mediterrâneo ao N de Tel Aviv-Yafo. Todavia, alguns peritos acreditam que, nos dias de Josué, o curso inferior do uádi Qanah talvez fluísse diretamente no Mediterrâneo, num ponto a uns 10 km mais ao N.

2. Cidade fronteiriça de Aser. (Jos 19:24, 28) É em geral identificada com a moderna Qana, a uns 12 km ao ESE de Tiro.

CANA, II [hebr.: qa·néh; gr.: ká·la·mos]. Estes termos evidentemente abrangem numerosas plantas canáceas que comumente crescem em lugares úmidos. (Jó 40:21; Sal 68:30; Is 19:6; 35:7; veja CÁLAMO, CANA.) Alguns peritos acreditam que, em muitos casos, a "cana" que se tem presente é a Arundo donax (cana-do-reino). Esta planta é comum no Egito, na Palestina e na Síria. Sua haste, que termina numa ampla pluma de flores brancas, tem um diâmetro de 5 a 8 cm na base, e atinge a altura de 2,5 a 5,5 m. As folhas têm de 30 a 90 cm de comprimento. A cana comum (Phragmites australis) também é encontrada em brejos e nas margens de rios em Israel. É uma gramínea folhosa de 1,5 a 5 m de altura, e tem no alto do seu caule rijo e liso uma pluma de flores.

Em zombaria, os soldados romanos colocaram uma cana, representando um cetro real, na mão direita de Jesus, e, mais tarde, golpearam-no com ela. Também foi usada uma cana para dar a Jesus, pendurado na estaca, uma esponja ensopada de vinho acre. — Mt 27:29, 30, 48; Jo 19:29; veja HISSOPO.

A cana era também usada para medições. O livro de Ezequiel (40:5) indica que uma cana de medir tinha 6 côvados de comprimento. De modo que a cana, baseada no côvado comum, tinha 2,67 m, e a baseada no côvado longo tinha 3,11 m. — Re 11:1; 21:15, 16; veja PESOS E MEDIDAS.

Uso Figurado. A "cana" é usada na Bíblia para representar instabilidade e fragilidade. (1Rs 14:15; Ez 29:6, 7) Comparou-se o Egito a uma cana esmagada, cujas lascas pontiagudas penetrariam na palma da mão de qualquer que se apoiasse nela. (2Rs 18:21; Is 36:6) A respeito de João, o Batizador, Jesus disse: "O que fostes ver no ermo? Uma cana jogada pelo vento?" (Mt 11:7) Essas palavras talvez visassem mostrar que João, o Batizador, não era uma pessoa hesitante ou vacilante, mas era alguém firme, estável e reto. Em Mateus 12:20 (Is 42:3), a "cana machucada" parece representar as pessoas oprimidas, como o homem com a mão ressequida a quem Jesus curou no sábado. — Mt 12:10-14; veja Mt 23:4; Mr 6:34.

CANÁ [provavelmente do hebr. qa·néh, "cana", portanto, "Lugar de Canas"]. Cidade natal de Natanael. (Jo 21:2) Evidentemente, foi logo no terceiro dia depois da apresentação de Natanael a Jesus e de ele se ter tornado seu discípulo que Jesus esteve em Caná e compareceu a uma festa de casamento, ocasião em que a sua mãe e seus irmãos também estavam presentes. Foi aqui que Jesus realizou seu primeiro sinal milagroso, o da transformação da água em vinho excelente. Daqui, ele e sua família, e seus discípulos, "desceram para Cafarnaum". (Jo 1:43-49; 2:1-12) Mais tarde, quando estava novamente em Caná, um assistente do rei se aproximou de Jesus, suplicando-lhe que "descesse" a Cafarnaum, a fim de curar seu filho moribundo. Sem fazer essa viagem, Jesus realizou a cura. — Jo 4:46-54.

A cidade, em cada caso, é chamada de "Caná da Galileia", evidentemente para distingui-la de Cana (Kanna) em Aser. (Jos 19:28) Kafr Kanna, uma cidade a 6,5 km ao NE de Nazaré, é o lugar tradicional de Caná. Algumas fontes proveem um amplo suprimento de água ali. Todavia, lexicógrafos consideram a forma Kanna uma transição bem improvável de Caná, especialmente por causa do duplo "n" (na língua original). Há motivos para se crer que a afirmação de Kafr Kanna ser Caná deriva na maior parte de ela ser facilmente acessível aos peregrinos procedentes de Nazaré, o que faz com que seja favorecida na tradição eclesiástica.

A preponderância das opiniões e o peso da evidência favorecem a identificação com Khirbet Qana, a uns 13 km ao N de Nazaré. Aqui se encontram as ruínas duma antiga aldeia num morro à beira da planície de Asochis, atualmente chamada de el-Battuf (Biqʽat Bet Netofa). As canas abundam num brejo vizinho, tornando o nome Caná bem apropriado. Em árabe ainda é conhecida como Qana el-Jelil, equivalente a Caná da Galileia. Josefo, o historiador judaico do primeiro século EC, fala de morar "numa aldeia da Galileia, chamada Caná", e, mais tarde, menciona "a grande planície, chamada de planície de Asochis, onde se encontrava meu alojamento". (The Life [A Vida], 86 [16]; 207 [41]) Este testemunho favoreceria também a localização de Caná da Galileia no lugar de Khirbet Qana, em vez de em Kafr Kanna. Embora não se encontre nenhuma fonte em Khirbet Qana, as ruínas revelam os restos de antigas cisternas; e relatou-se terem sido encontrados ali cacos (fragmentos de vasos de barro) e moedas atribuídas ao primeiro século EC. — FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 738.

Em tempos antigos, uma estrada passando por Khirbet Qana descia até as margens do mar da Galileia e seguia pelo litoral até Cafarnaum, que se encontrava a uns 206 m abaixo do nível do mar; daí a expressão 'descer' a Cafarnaum. (Jo 4:47) Pela estrada, a distância era de cerca de 40 km.

CANAÃ [Terra de Mercador; Terra do Comerciante], CANANEU.

1. O quarto filho alistado de Cã, e neto de Noé. (Gên 9:18; 10:6; 1Cr 1:8) Era o progenitor de 11 tribos que, com o tempo, habitaram a região ao longo do leste do Mediterrâneo, entre o Egito e a Síria, desta forma dando à região o nome de "a terra de Canaã". — Gên 10:15-19; 1Cr 16:18; veja o N.º 2.

Depois do incidente da embriaguez de Noé, Canaã ficou sob a maldição profética de Noé, que predizia que Canaã se tornaria escravo tanto de Sem como de Jafé. (Gên 9:20-27) Visto que o registro menciona apenas que "Cã, pai de Canaã, viu a nudez de seu pai e foi contá-lo aos seus dois irmãos lá fora", surge a pergunta sobre a razão de ter sido Canaã, em vez de Cã, o objeto dessa maldição. Comentando Gênesis 9:24, que declara que, quando Noé despertou dos efeitos do vinho, "soube o que lhe havia feito seu filho mais moço", uma nota na tradução de Rotherham, em inglês, diz: "Sem dúvida Canaã, e não Cã: Sem e Jafé, por causa de sua piedade, são abençoados; Canaã, por causa de alguma baixeza não mencionada, é amaldiçoado; Cã, por causa de sua negligência, é negligenciado." Similarmente, uma publicação judaica, The Pentateuch and Haftorahs (O Pentateuco e as Haftorás), sugere que a breve narrativa "se refere a algum ato abominável em que Canaã parece ter estado envolvido". (Editado por J. H. Hertz, Londres, 1972, p. 34) E, depois de comentar que a palavra hebraica traduzida "filho", no versículo 24 , pode significar "neto", esta fonte declara: "A referência é evidentemente feita a Canaã." The Soncino Chumash (O Chumash de Soncino) também indica que alguns creem que Canaã "se tenha entregado a uma concupiscência pervertida quanto a [Noé]", e que a expressão "filho mais moço" se refere a Canaã, que era o filho mais moço de Cã. — Editado por A. Cohen, Londres, 1956, p. 47.

Tais conceitos são, necessariamente, conjecturais, visto que o registro bíblico não fornece quaisquer pormenores sobre o envolvimento de Canaã na ofensa contra Noé. Todavia, algum envolvimento parece definitivamente tencionado pelo fato de que, pouco antes de se relatar o caso da embriaguez de Noé, introduz-se abruptamente Canaã no relato (Gên 9:18), e, ao descrever as ações de Cã, o registro se refere a ele como "Cã, pai de Canaã". (Gên 9:22) Que a expressão "viu a nudez de seu pai" talvez indique certo abuso ou perversão que envolvia Canaã, é uma conclusão razoável. Pois, na maioria dos casos em que a Bíblia fala de se 'descobrir a nudez' ou de se 'ver a nudez' de outrem, quer-se dizer incesto ou outros pecados sexuais. (Le 18:6-19; 20:17) Assim, é possível que Canaã tenha cometido ou tentado cometer algum abuso contra o inconsciente Noé, e que Cã, embora tivesse conhecimento disso, deixou de impedi-lo ou de tomar medidas disciplinares contra o ofensor, e agravou ainda mais o erro por falar a seus irmãos sobre a desonra de Noé.

Deve-se também considerar o elemento profético da maldição. Não existe evidência que indique que o próprio Canaã se tornasse escravo de Sem ou de Jafé durante sua vida. Mas, a presciência de Deus operava, e, visto que a maldição expressa por Noé fora divinamente inspirada, e visto que o desfavor de Deus não é expresso sem causa justa, é provável que Canaã já tivesse manifestado uma característica definitivamente corrupta, talvez uma natureza libidinosa, e que Deus previu os maus resultados em que, por fim, esta característica culminaria entre os descendentes de Canaã. No caso anterior de Caim, Jeová havia notado uma atitude errada de coração e ele havia avisado Caim do perigo de ser vencido pelo pecado (Gên 4:3-7); Deus discernira também a inclinação incorrigível para a iniquidade por parte da maioria da população antediluviana, justificando a destruição dela. (Gên 6:5) A evidência mais óbvia da justeza da maldição sobre Canaã assim é vista na posterior história dos seus descendentes, porque estabeleceram para si um especialmente sórdido registro de imoralidade e depravação, conforme atestado tanto pela história bíblica como pela secular. A maldição sobre Canaã teve seu cumprimento uns oito séculos após o seu proferimento, quando os descendentes de Canaã foram subjugados pelos israelitas semitas, vindo a estar posteriormente sob o domínio das potências jaféticas da Medo-Pérsia, Grécia e Roma.

2. O nome Canaã também se aplica à raça que descendeu do filho de Cã, e à terra em que residiram. Canaã era o nome mais antigo e nativo da parte da Palestina situada a O do rio Jordão (Núm 33:51; 35:10, 14), embora os amorreus cananeus invadissem a terra ao L do Jordão algum tempo antes da conquista pelos israelitas. — Núm 21:13, 26.

Limites e Primórdios Históricos. A mais antiga descrição dos limites de Canaã mostra que se estendia desde Sídon, no N, descendo até Gerar, perto de Gaza, no SO, e até Sodoma e as cidades vizinhas, no SE. (Gên 10:19) No tempo de Abraão, porém, Sodoma e as outras "cidades do Distrito" parecem ter sido consideradas como separadas de Canaã. (Gên 13:12) Os posteriores territórios de Edom e de Moabe, habitados pelos descendentes de Abraão e de Ló, evidentemente também eram considerados como fora da terra de Canaã. (Gên 36:6-8; Êx 15:15) O território de Canaã, conforme prometido à nação de Israel, acha-se delineado em mais pormenores em Números 34:2-12. Evidentemente começava mais ao N de Sídon e se estendia ao S até o "vale da torrente do Egito" e Cades-Barneia. Os filisteus, que não eram cananeus (Gên 10:13, 14), tinham ocupado a região costeira ao S da planície de Sarom, mas esta, também, tinha sido anteriormente "considerada" como terra cananeia. (Jos 13:3) Outras tribos, tais como os queneus (uma família deles sendo mais tarde associada com Midiã; Núm 10:29; Jz 1:16) e os amalequitas (descendentes de Esaú; Gên 36:12) também haviam penetrado neste território. — Gên 15:18-21; Núm 14:45.

A Bíblia não diz se os descendentes de Canaã migraram para esta terra e se estabeleceram nela logo após a dispersão em Babel (Gên 11:9), ou se primeiro acompanharam o grupo principal de camitas à África, e depois voltaram aos poucos para a região palestina. De qualquer modo, por volta de 1943 AEC, quando Abraão deixou Harã em Padã-Arã e se dirigiu para esta terra, os cananeus estavam estabelecidos ali, e Abraão tinha certos tratos tanto com amorreus como com hititas. (Gên 11:31; 12:5, 6; 13:7; 14:13; 23:2-20) Abraão recebeu repetidas promessas de Jeová Deus, de que sua semente, ou descendentes, herdariam esta terra, e foi instruído a 'percorrer o país no seu comprimento e na sua largura'. (Gên 12:7; 13:14-17; 15:7, 13-21; 17:8) À base desta promessa, e em respeito pela maldição de Deus, Abraão teve o cuidado de que a esposa de seu filho Isaque não fosse cananeia. — Gên 24:1-4.

A relativa facilidade com que Abraão, e, mais tarde, Isaque e Jacó, puderam movimentar-se nessa terra com seus grandes rebanhos e suas grandes manadas indica que a região ainda não era densamente povoada. (Veja Gên 34:21.) As investigações arqueológicas também suprem evidência de uma colonização um tanto esparsa naquele tempo, a maioria das cidades pequenas estando situadas ao longo da costa, na região do Mar Morto, no vale do Jordão e na planície de Jezreel. A respeito da Palestina na primeira parte do segundo milênio AEC,

W. F. Albright diz que a região montanhosa, na maior parte, não estava povoada por uma população fixa, de modo que a tradição bíblica está absolutamente certa em apresentar os patriarcas peregrinando pelos morros da Palestina central e pelas terras secas do sul, onde ainda havia bastante lugar para eles. (Archaeology of Palestine and the Bible [Arqueologia da Palestina e a Bíblia], 1933, pp. 131-133) Canaã, pelo visto, estava sob certa influência e domínio elamita (e, portanto semita) naquele período, conforme indicado pelo registro bíblico em Gênesis 14:1-7.

Entre as cidades em torno das quais Abraão, Isaque e Jacó acampavam estava Siquém (Gên 12:6), Betel e Ai (Gên 12:8), Hébron (Gên 13:18), Gerar (Gên 20:1) e Berseba (Gên 22:19). Embora os cananeus não pareçam ter demonstrado grande hostilidade para com os patriarcas hebreus, não obstante, a proteção divina foi o principal fator de estarem livres de ataques. (Sal 105:12-15) Assim, depois do ataque dos filhos de Jacó contra a cidade heveia de Siquém, foi porque "o terror de Deus" sobreveio às cidades vizinhas que "não foram no encalço dos filhos de Jacó". — Gên 33:18; 34:2; 35:5.

A história secular indica que o Egito exerceu suserania sobre Canaã por uns dois séculos antes da conquista pelos israelitas. Durante este período, mensagens (conhecidas como as tabuinhas de Amarna) enviadas por governantes vassalos na Síria e na Palestina aos faraós Amenotep III e Aquenatão, apresentam um quadro de muitas lutas e intrigas políticas entre as cidades naquela região. Na época da chegada de Israel à sua fronteira (1473 AEC), Canaã era uma terra de numerosas cidades-estados, ou pequeninos reinos, embora ainda mostrasse certa coesão, segundo as relações tribais. Os espias que sondaram a terra quase 40 anos antes acharam-na uma terra rica em frutos, e suas cidades bem fortificadas. — Núm 13:21-29; compare isso com De 9:1; Ne 9:25.

Distribuição das Tribos de Canaã. Dentre as 11 tribos cananeias (Gên 10:15-19), os amorreus parecem ter ocupado uma das posições principais naquela terra. (Veja AMORREU.) Além da terra conquistada por eles ao L do Jordão, em Basã e em Gileade, as referências aos amorreus mostram que eles eram fortes na região montanhosa de Canaã propriamente, tanto ao N como ao S. (Jos 10:5; 11:3; 13:4) Talvez em segundo lugar, quanto à força, estivessem os hititas, os quais, embora encontrados tanto ao S quanto Hébron, no tempo de Abraão (Gên 23:19, 20), mais tarde parecem ter-se fixado principalmente no N, na direção da Síria. — Jos 1:4; Jz 1:23-26; 1Rs 10:29.

Dentre as outras tribos, os jebuseus, os heveus e os girgaseus são as mais frequentemente mencionadas na época da conquista. Os jebuseus centralizavam-se evidentemente na região montanhosa em volta de Jerusalém. (Núm 13:29; Jos 18:16, 28) Os heveus estavam espalhados desde Gibeão, bem no sul (Jos 9:3, 7), até o sopé do monte Hermon, no N. (Jos 11:3) O território dos girgaseus não é indicado.

As 6 tribos restantes, os sidônios, os arvadeus, os hamateus, os arqueus, os sineus e os zemareus, bem que podem estar incluídas no termo abrangente "cananeus", frequentemente usado em associação com os nomes específicos de outras tribos, a menos que a expressão seja simplesmente usada para se referir a cidades ou a grupos que possuíam uma população cananeia mista. (Êx 23:23; 34:11; De 7:1; Núm 13:29) Todas essas 6 tribos parecem ter estado primariamente situadas ao N da região que originalmente foi conquistada pelos israelitas e não recebem menção específica no relato da conquista.

Conquista de Canaã por Israel. (MAPAS, Vol. 1, pp. 737, 738) No segundo ano depois do Êxodo, os israelitas fizeram uma tentativa inicial de penetrar nas fronteiras meridionais de Canaã, mas, fizeram isso sem apoio divino, e foram postos em debandada pelos cananeus e seus aliados amalequitas. (Núm 14:42-45) Perto do fim do período de 40 anos de peregrinação, Israel novamente avançou em direção aos cananeus e foi atacado pelo rei de Arade, no Negebe, mas, desta vez, as forças cananeias foram derrotadas e suas cidades foram destruídas. (Núm 21:1-3) Assim mesmo, os israelitas não deram sequência a esta vitória com uma invasão pelo S, mas deram a volta para aproximar-se pelo E. Isto os colocou em conflito com os reinos amorreus de Síon e de Ogue, e a derrota desses reis colocou toda Basã e Gileade sob controle israelita, inclusive 60 cidades "com muralha alta, portas e tranca", somente em Basã. (Núm 21:21-35; De 2:26-3:10) A derrota desses poderosos reis teve um efeito debilitante sobre os reinos cananeus ao O do Jordão, e a subsequente travessia milagrosa do Jordão, a pé enxuto, pela nação israelita, fez com que o coração dos cananeus 'começasse a derreter-se'. Assim, os cananeus não atacaram o acampamento israelita em Gilgal durante o período da recuperação de muitos dos varões israelitas que foram circuncidados, e durante a subsequente celebração da Páscoa. — Jos 2:9-11; 5:1-11.

Podendo então conseguir água em abundância do Jordão, e obter suprimentos alimentares da região conquistada ao L do Jordão, os israelitas em Gilgal tinham boa base para se lançar à conquista da terra. Jericó, a vizinha cidade de posto avançado, já rigorosamente fechada, foi seu primeiro alvo, e suas fortes muralhas caíram pelo poder de Jeová. (Jos 6:1-21) Daí, as forças invasoras subiram uns

1.000 m na região montanhosa ao N de Jerusalém, e, depois dum revés inicial, capturaram Ai e a incendiaram. (Jos 7:1-5; 8:18-28) Ao passo que os reinos cananeus em todo o país começaram a formar uma coalizão maciça para repelir os israelitas, certas cidades dos heveus procuraram então a paz com Israel por meio dum subterfúgio. Esta secessão por parte de Gibeão e de outras três cidades vizinhas foi, evidentemente, considerada pelos outros reinos cananeus como um ato de traição, pondo em perigo a unidade da inteira 'liga cananeia'. Cinco reis cananeus, portanto, uniram-se para lutar, não contra Israel, mas contra Gibeão, e as tropas israelitas, sob Josué, empreenderam uma marcha durante toda a noite para salvar a cidade sitiada. A derrota infligida por Josué aos cinco reis atacantes foi acompanhada por uma saraivada milagrosa de enormes pedras e também por Deus providenciar a demora do pôr do sol. — Jos 9:17, 24, 25; 10:1-27.

As vitoriosas forças israelitas investiram então contra toda a metade sul de Canaã (exceto as planícies da Filístia), conquistando as cidades da Sefelá, a região montanhosa e o Negebe, e então voltaram ao seu acampamento-base em Gilgal, junto ao Jordão. (Jos 10:28-43) Daí, os cananeus no setor norte, sob a liderança do rei de Hazor, começaram a juntar suas tropas e seus carros de guerra, unindo suas forças num encontro junto às águas de Merom, ao N do mar da Galileia. O exército de Josué, porém, fez um ataque de surpresa à confederação cananeia, e os pôs em fuga, após o que marchou para capturar as cidades deles, tanto ao N quanto Baal-Gade, ao sopé do monte Hermom. (Jos 11:1-20) A campanha evidentemente abrangeu considerável período de tempo e foi seguida por outra ofensiva na região montanhosa no S, ataque dirigido contra os gigantescos anaquins e suas cidades. — Jos 11:21, 22; veja ANAQUINS.

Já se haviam passado então uns seis anos desde o começo da luta. A parte principal da conquista de Canaã já tinha sido realizada, e a força das tribos cananeias tinha sido quebrantada, permitindo assim o início da distribuição da terra entre as tribos israelitas. (Veja TERMO.) No entanto, diversas regiões ainda precisavam ser subjugadas, inclusive setores importantes, tais como o território dos filisteus, os quais, embora não fossem cananeus, eram usurpadores da terra prometida aos israelitas; o território dos gesuritas (veja 1Sa 27:8); o território da região ao redor de Sídon, subindo até Gebal (Biblos), e toda a região do Líbano (Jos 13:2-6). Além destas, havia bolsões de resistência espalhados por todo o país, alguns dos quais foram mais tarde capturados pelas tribos herdeiras de Israel, ao passo que outros continuaram sem ser conquistados, ou se permitiu que permanecessem, sendo obrigados a fazer trabalhos forçados para os israelitas. — Jos 15:13-17; 16:10; 17:11-13, 16-18; Jz 1:17-21, 27-36.

Embora tantos cananeus sobrevivessem à principal conquista e resistissem à subjugação, ainda se podia dizer que "Jeová deu, pois, a Israel toda a terra que havia jurado dar aos seus antepassados", que lhes deu "descanso em todo o redor", e que "não falhou nem uma única de todas as boas promessas que Jeová fizera à casa de Israel; tudo se cumpriu". (Jos 21:43-45) Em todo o redor dos israelitas, os povos inimigos estavam amedrontados e não constituíam nenhuma genuína ameaça para a segurança deles. Deus havia declarado anteriormente que expulsaria os cananeus "pouco a pouco", para que os animais selvagens não se multiplicassem de repente numa terra desolada. (Êx 23:29, 30; De 7:22) Apesar do superior equipamento de guerra dos cananeus, inclusive carros de guerra com foices de ferro, qualquer falha dos israelitas, de finalmente não tomarem certas regiões, não podia ser atribuída a Jeová como falha da sua parte em cumprir a sua promessa. (Jos 17:16-18; Jz 4:13) Antes, o registro mostra que as poucas derrotas dos israelitas se deviam à infidelidade da sua parte. — Núm 14:44, 45; Jos 7:1-12.

Por que decretou Jeová o extermínio dos cananeus?

O relato histórico mostra que as populações das cidades cananeias conquistadas pelos israelitas foram submetidas à completa destruição. (Núm 21:1-3, 34, 35; Jos 6:20, 21; 8:21-27; 10:26-40; 11:10-14) Alguns críticos usam esse fato como meio de representar as Escrituras Hebraicas, ou "Antigo Testamento", como imbuído dum espírito de crueldade e de matança desenfreada. A questão envolvida, porém, é claramente a de se a soberania de Deus sobre a terra e seus habitantes é ou não reconhecida. Ele havia passado o direito de posse da terra de Canaã à 'descendência de Abraão', fazendo-o por meio dum pacto juramentado. (Gên 12:5-7; 15:17-21; compare isso com De 32:8; At 17:26.) O propósito de Deus, porém, envolvia mais do que a simples expulsão ou desalojamento dos ocupantes existentes dessa terra. Estava também envolvido seu direito de agir como "Juiz de toda a terra" (Gên 18:25), e de decretar a sentença de morte sobre os julgados merecedores dela, bem como Seu direito de implementar e impor a execução desse decreto.

A justeza da maldição profética de Deus sobre Canaã obteve plena confirmação nas condições que se haviam desenvolvido em Canaã até o tempo da conquista pelos israelitas. Jeová permitira que se passassem 400 anos desde o tempo de Abraão para que o 'erro dos amorreus se completasse'. (Gên 15:16) Serem as esposas hititas de Esaú uma "fonte de amargura de espírito para Isaque e Rebeca", a ponto de Rebeca 'chegar a abominar sua vida por causa delas', certamente é um indício da maldade já manifesta entre os cananeus. (Gên 26:34, 35; 27:46) Nos séculos que se seguiram, a terra de Canaã ficou saturada das práticas detestáveis de idolatria, imoralidade e derramamento de sangue. A religião cananeia era extraordinariamente vil e degradada, seus "postes sagrados" e "colunas sagradas" sendo evidentemente símbolos fálicos, e muitos dos ritos nos seus "altos" envolviam crassos excessos e depravações sexuais. (Êx 23:24; 34:12, 13; Núm 33:52; De 7:5) O incesto, a sodomia e a bestialidade eram parte 'do que faziam os da terra de Canaã', que tornava imunda a terra, a qual, por esses erros, estava para 'vomitar os seus habitantes'. (Le 18:2-25) A magia, a feitiçaria, o espiritismo e o sacrifício de seus filhos por meio do fogo achavam-se também entre as práticas abomináveis dos cananeus. — De 18:9-12.

Colunas sagradas (estelas) e uma mesa de ofertas encontradas em Hazor. A inscrição na estela do centro talvez simbolize uma petição feita ao deus-lua.

Baal era a mais destacada das deidades adoradas pelos cananeus. (Jz 2:12, 13; compare isso com Jz 6:25-32; 1Rs 16:30-32.) As deusas cananeias Astorete (Jz 2:13; 10:6; 1Sa 7:3, 4), Axerá e Anate são apresentadas num texto egípcio tanto como deusas-mães, como quais prostitutas sagradas, as quais, em paradoxo, permaneciam sempre virgens (literalmente, "as grandes deusas que concebem, mas não dão à luz"). Pelo visto, a adoração delas envolvia invariavelmente os serviços de prostitutas de templo. Essas deusas simbolizavam não só a qualidade da lascívia sexual, mas também da sádica violência e guerra. Assim, a deusa Anate é retratada na Epopeia de Baal, de Ugarite, como realizando uma matança geral de homens e depois enfeitando-se com cabeças suspensas e prendendo mãos de homens à sua cinta, ao passo que alegremente anda no sangue deles. As estatuetas da deusa Astorete, descobertas na Palestina, são de uma mulher nua, com órgãos sexuais grosseiramente exagerados. O arqueólogo W. F. Albright observa a respeito da adoração fálica deles: "No pior, . . . o aspecto erótico de seu culto deve ter mergulhado a extremamente sórdidas profundezas da degradação social." — Archaeology and the Religion of Israel (Arqueologia e a Religião de Israel), 1968, pp. 76, 77; veja ASTORETE; BAAL N.º 4.

Além das suas outras práticas degradantes, havia a do sacrifício de crianças. Segundo Merrill F. Unger: "Escavações na Palestina descobriram pilhas de cinzas e de restos de esqueletos de crianças em cemitérios ao redor de altares pagãos, indicando a ampla prática desta abominação cruel." (Archaeology and the Old Testament [Arqueologia e o Velho Testamento], 1964, p. 279) O Manual Bíblico de H. H. Halley (reimpressão de 1987, Editora Vida Nova, p. 157) diz: "Era assim, praticando a licenciosidade como rito, que os cananeus prestavam seu culto aos deuses, e também assassinando seus primogênitos, como sacrifício aos mesmos deuses. Parece que, em grande escala, a terra de Canaã tornou-se uma espécie de Sodoma e Gomorra de âmbito nacional. . . . Teria direito de continuar por mais tempo uma civilização de tão abominável imundície e brutalidade? . . . Alguns arqueólogos que têm escavado as ruínas das cidades dos cananeus admiram-se de Deus não as haver destruído há mais tempo." — FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 739.

Jeová exercera seu direito soberano de executar a sentença de morte na população iníqua do planeta inteiro, no tempo do Dilúvio global; ele o fizera com relação ao distrito inteiro das cidades de Sodoma e de Gomorra, por causa do 'alto clamor de queixa contra eles e seu pecado muito grave' (Gên 18:20; 19:13); ele executara um decreto de destruição nas forças militares de Faraó no Mar Vermelho; e também exterminara as casas de Corá e de outros rebeldes entre os próprios israelitas. No entanto, nestes casos, Deus empregara forças naturais para realizar essa destruição. Em contraste com isso, Jeová designara agora aos israelitas o dever sagrado de servirem quais principais executores do seu decreto divino, guiados pelo seu mensageiro angélico e apoiados pelo onipotente poder de Deus. (Êx 23:20-23, 27, 28; De 9:3, 4; 20:15-18; Jos 10:42) Todavia, os resultados foram precisamente os mesmos para os cananeus como seriam se Deus resolvesse destruí-los por meio de algum fenômeno, tal como uma enchente, uma explosão ardente ou um terremoto, e terem agentes humanos executado a sentença de morte nesses povos condenados, não importa quão desagradável possa parecer a tarefa deles, não pode alterar a justeza dessa medida divinamente ordenada. (Je 48:10) Por usar este instrumento humano, lançado contra "sete nações mais populosas e mais fortes" do que eles, magnificou-se o poder de Jeová e provou-se sua Divindade. — De 7:1; Le 25:38.

Os cananeus não eram ignorantes da poderosa evidência de que Israel era o povo e o instrumento escolhidos de Deus. (Jos 2:9-21, 24; 9:24-27) Entretanto, excetuando-se Raabe e sua família, e as cidades dos gibeonitas, aqueles que mereciam a destruição nem procuraram obter misericórdia, nem aproveitaram a oportunidade para fugir, mas, em vez disso, preferiram radicalizar sua rebelião contra Jeová. Ele não os obrigou a curvar-se e ceder à Sua vontade expressa, mas, antes, 'deixou seus corações ficarem obstinados para que declarassem guerra a Israel, a fim de os devotar à destruição, para que não obtivessem consideração favorável, mas para que os aniquilasse', em execução de seu julgamento contra eles. — Jos 11:19, 20.

Josué, sabiamente, "não tirou nenhuma palavra de tudo o que Jeová ordenara a Moisés" quanto à destruição dos cananeus. (Jos 11:15) Mas, a nação israelita deixou de seguir sua boa liderança nisso e de eliminar por completo a fonte de poluição daquela terra. A presença contínua dos cananeus entre eles infectou Israel, de modo que, com o passar do tempo, isso sem dúvida contribuiu para mais mortes (sem se mencionar o crime, a imoralidade e a idolatria) do que teriam resultado do extermínio decretado de todos os cananeus, caso tivesse sido fielmente executado. (Núm 33:55, 56; Jz 2:1-3, 11-23; Sal 106:34-43) Jeová tinha avisado os israelitas de que Sua justiça e Seus julgamentos não seriam parciais, e que, se os israelitas iniciassem relacionamentos com os cananeus, casando-se com eles, praticando ecumenismo, e adotando seus costumes religiosos e suas práticas degeneradas, isso inevitavelmente significaria trazerem sobre si mesmos o mesmo decreto de aniquilamento e resultaria em serem também 'vomitados da terra'. — Êx 23:32, 33; 34:12-17; Le 18:26-30; De 7:2-5, 25, 26.

Juízes 3:1, 2, declara que Jeová permitiu que algumas das nações cananeias permanecessem, "para por elas provar a Israel, isto é, a todos os que não tinham passado por nenhuma das guerras de Canaã; foi só para que as gerações dos filhos de Israel tivessem a experiência, para ensinar-lhes a guerra, isto é, somente aos que antes não tiveram experiência de tais coisas". Isto não contradiz a declaração anterior (Jz 2:20-22), de que Jeová deixou essas nações permanecer por causa da infidelidade de Israel, e para "provar a Israel, se guardarão ou não o caminho de Jeová". Antes, harmoniza-se com tal motivo e mostra que as gerações posteriores dos israelitas teriam destarte a oportunidade de demonstrar obediência às ordens de Deus com respeito aos cananeus, pondo à prova a sua fé, a ponto de porem sua vida em perigo na guerra, a fim de mostrar-se obedientes.

Em vista de tudo isso, torna-se evidente que as opiniões de alguns críticos da Bíblia, de que a destruição dos cananeus por parte de Israel não se harmoniza com o 'espírito' das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, não se ajustam aos fatos, como demonstra uma comparação de textos tais como Mateus 3:7-12; 22:1-7; 23:33; 25:41-46; Marcos 12:1-9; Lucas 19:14, 27; Romanos 1:18-32; 2 Tessalonicenses 1:6-9; 2:3; e Revelação 19:11-21.

História Posterior. Após a conquista, a situação entre os cananeus e os israelitas tornou-se gradualmente de coexistência relativamente pacífica, embora para o prejuízo de Israel. (Jz 3:5, 6; compare isso com Jz 19:11-14.) Os governantes sírios, moabitas e filisteus obtiveram sucessivamente o domínio temporário sobre os israelitas, mas não foi senão no tempo de Jabim, chamado "rei de Canaã", que os cananeus recuperaram suficiente poder para conseguir subjugar Israel por 20 anos. (Jz 4:2, 3) Depois de Baraque ter finalmente derrotado Jabim, as dificuldades de Israel, durante o período anterior ao reinado, provieram mormente de fontes não cananeias, dos midianitas, dos amonitas e dos filisteus. Semelhantemente, durante o tempo de Samuel, só são mencionados brevemente os amorreus, dentre as tribos cananeias. (1Sa 7:14) O Rei Davi expulsou os jebuseus de Jerusalém (2Sa 5:6-9), mas suas principais campanhas foram contra os filisteus, os amonitas, os moabitas, os edomitas, os amalequitas e os sírios. Assim, os cananeus, embora ainda possuíssem cidades e ocupassem terras no território de Israel (2Sa 24:7, 16-18), evidentemente haviam deixado de ser uma ameaça militar. Mencionam-se dois guerreiros hititas entre a força combatente de Davi. — 1Sa 26:6; 2Sa 23:39.

Durante seu governo, Salomão submeteu os remanescentes das tribos cananeias a trabalhos forçados em seus muitos projetos (1Rs 9:20, 21), ampliando sua obra de construções até mesmo à cidade cananeia de Hamate, bem ao N. (2Cr 8:4) Mas esposas cananeias contribuíram mais tarde para a queda de Salomão, para a perda de grande parte do reino do seu herdeiro, e para a corrupção religiosa da nação. (1Rs 11:1, 13, 31-33) Desde o reinado de Salomão (1037-998 AEC) até o governo de Jeorão, de Israel (c. 917-905 AEC), apenas os hititas parecem ter mantido considerável medida de destaque e força como tribo, embora evidentemente situados ao N do território de Israel e nas adjacências da Síria, ou dentro dela. — 1Rs 10:29; 2Rs 7:6.

O casamento misto com cananeias ainda era um problema entre os israelitas que voltaram do exílio babilônico (Esd 9:1, 2), mas os reinos cananeus, inclusive o dos hititas, evidentemente se haviam desintegrado sob o impacto da agressão síria, assíria e babilônica. O termo "Canaã" passou a referir-se primariamente à Fenícia, como na profecia de Isaías a respeito de Tiro (Is 23:1, 11 n.) e no caso da mulher "fenícia" (literalmente, "cananeia" [gr.: Kha·na·naí·a]), da região de Tiro e Sídon, que se dirigiu a Jesus. — Mt 15:22 n.; compare isso com Mr 7:26.

Importância Comercial e Geopolítica. Canaã formava uma ponte terrestre ligando o Egito com a Ásia, e, mais especificamente, com a Mesopotâmia. Embora a economia do país fosse basicamente agrícola, havia também intercâmbio comercial, e as cidades portuárias de Tiro e Sídon se tornaram importantes centros comerciais, com frotas de navios famosas em todo o mundo então conhecido. (Veja Ez 27.) Assim, desde o tempo de Jó, a palavra "cananeu" se tornou sinônimo de 'comerciante', e é assim traduzida. (Jó 41:6; Sof 1:11; note também a referência a Babilônia como "terra de Canaã", Ez 17:4, 12.) Canaã ocupava assim um lugar muitíssimo estratégico no Crescente Fértil, e era o alvo dos grandes impérios da Mesopotâmia, da Ásia Menor e da África, que procuravam controlar a passagem de forças militares e o tráfego comercial dentro dos limites de Canaã. Ter Deus colocado seu povo escolhido nessa terra, portanto, certamente atrairia a atenção das nações, e teria efeitos de longo alcance; em sentido geográfico, embora mais importante em sentido religioso, os israelitas podiam ser mencionados como habitando "no meio da terra". — Ez 38:12.

Língua. Embora o registro bíblico mostre claramente que os cananeus eram camitas, a maioria das obras de referências fala deles como tendo origem semítica. Esta classificação baseia-se na evidência duma língua semítica falada pelos cananeus. A evidência a que mais frequentemente se recorre é o grande número de textos encontrados em Ras Xamra (Ugarite), escritos numa língua ou dialeto semítico, e considerados como remontando até o século 14 AEC. Todavia, pelo visto, Ugarite não estava dentro dos limites bíblicos de Canaã. Um artigo de A. F. Rainey, publicado em The Biblical Archaeologist (O Arqueólogo Bíblico, 1965, p. 105), declara que, em bases étnicas, políticas e provavelmente linguísticas, "é agora claramente impróprio chamar Ugarite de cidade 'cananeia'". Ele apresenta evidência adicional para mostrar que "Ugarite e a terra de Canaã eram entidades políticas separadas e distintas". De modo que estas tabuinhas não estabelecem nenhuma regra clara para se saber a língua dos cananeus.

Muitas das tabuinhas de Amarna encontradas no Egito de fato procedem de cidades da própria Canaã, e estas tabuinhas, de data anterior à conquista israelita, foram escritas principalmente em cuneiforme na língua babilônica, uma língua semítica. Esta, porém, era a língua diplomática do inteiro Oriente Médio naquele tempo, de modo que era usada até mesmo ao se escrever à corte egípcia. Portanto, é de considerável interesse notar a declaração em The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible (O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete, editado por G. A. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 1, p. 495), no sentido de que "as cartas de Amarna contêm evidência para a opinião de que elementos étnicos não semíticos se estabeleceram na Palestina e na Síria numa data bastante antiga, porque diversas dessas cartas mostram uma notável influência de línguas não semíticas". (O grifo é nosso.) Os fatos indicam que ainda há incerteza sobre a língua original falada pelos primitivos habitantes de Canaã.

É verdade, porém, que o próprio relato bíblico parece indicar que Abraão e seus descendentes podiam conversar com o povo de Canaã sem necessidade dum intérprete, e pode-se notar também que, ao passo que se usaram alguns nomes dum tipo não semítico para lugares, a maioria das vilas e cidades capturadas pelos israelitas já tinham nomes semíticos. Ainda assim, os reis filisteus no tempo de Abraão, e também, evidentemente, no tempo de Davi, eram chamados de "Abimeleque" (Gên 20:2; 21:32; Sal 34:cab.), nome (ou título) inteiramente semítico, ao passo que em parte alguma se afirma que os filisteus fossem de raça semítica. Portanto, parece que as tribos cananeias, durante alguns séculos, desde o tempo da confusão das línguas em Babel (Gên 11:8, 9), evidentemente mudaram do seu original idioma camítico para uma língua semítica. Isto talvez tenha acontecido por causa da sua íntima associação com os povos de língua aramaica da Síria, em resultado do domínio mesopotâmico prevalecente por um período, ou por outros motivos agora não em evidência. Tal mudança não seria maior do que a de outras nações antigas, tais como os antigos persas, os quais, embora de descendência indo-europeia (jafética), mais tarde adotaram a língua e a escrita aramaica semítica.

"O idioma de Canaã", mencionado em Isaías 19:18, teria sido então (oitavo século AEC) a língua hebraica, principal idioma daquela terra.

CANAL. Veja NILO, CANAIS DO; RESERVATÓRIO DO CANAL.

CANANITA [do aramaico, significando "Zeloso; Entusiasta"]. Uma designação que diferenciava o apóstolo Simão do apóstolo Simão Pedro. (Mt 10:4; Mr 3:18) Pensa-se que o termo "Cananita" seja de origem aramaica, e, pelo que parece, corresponde à palavra grega ze·lo·tés, que significa "zeloso; entusiasta". — Lu 6:15; At 1:13.

CANDACE. Rainha da Etiópia, cujo tesoureiro se tornou cristão. (At 8:27) Em vez de ser um nome pessoal, específico, "Candace", como "Faraó" e "César", é considerado um título. Escritores antigos, inclusive Estrabão, Plínio, o Velho, e Eusébio, usaram essa designação para se referir às rainhas da Etiópia. Plínio, o Velho (c. 23-79 EC), escreveu que "a cidade [Méroe, capital da antiga Etiópia] possui poucos edifícios. Disseram que é governada por uma mulher, Candace, nome que tem sido transmitido por muitos anos através de uma sucessão de rainhas." — Natural History (História Natural), VI, xxxv, 186.

CANDELABRO. Base ou suporte para uma ou várias lâmpadas a óleo. Embora mencione candelabros em lares e em outros edifícios (2Rs 4:10; Da 5:5; Lu 8:16; 11:33), a Bíblia dá ênfase primariamente aos candelabros associados com a verdadeira adoração.

No Tabernáculo. Jeová orientou Moisés, numa visão, a fazer, para ser usado no tabernáculo, um candelabro (hebr.: menoh·ráh; gr.: ly·khní·a) 'de ouro puro, obra batida ao martelo'. Junto com suas lâmpadas e utensílios, devia pesar um talento. (Êx 25:31, 39, 40; 37:17, 24; Núm 8:4; He 9:2) Isto equivaleria a cerca de 34 kg, valendo, em termos modernos, uns US$ 385.350.

Formato. Esta luminária para o "Lugar Santo", o compartimento anterior do tabernáculo (He 9:2), compunha-se de uma coluna central, com seis hastes laterais. Estas hastes curvavam-se para cima, em lados opostos da coluna principal. A coluna, ou talo, central era decorada com quatro cálices esculpidos em forma de flores de amendoeira, alternando-se botões e flores. Não se tem certeza da espécie de flor representada ali; a palavra hebraica pode referir-se a qualquer flor. Cada uma das hastes laterais tinha três cálices, alternando-se botões e flores. A descrição talvez indique que os botões, na coluna central, ocorriam no ponto em que as hastes laterais se juntavam à coluna central. Lâmpadas que queimavam excelente azeite batido achavam-se colocadas no alto da coluna principal, e na extremidade de cada haste. Os acessórios consistiam em espevitadeiras, porta-lumes e vasos de azeite. — Êx 25:31-38; 37:18-23; Le 24:2; Núm 4:9.

A fabricação em si, do candelabro, foi feita sob a supervisão de Bezalel, da tribo de Judá, e Ooliabe, da tribo de Dã. (Êx 31:1-11; 35:30-35) Estes homens, sem dúvida, eram bons artífices, possivelmente tendo aprendido o ofício quando eram escravos no Egito. Mas, Jeová colocou então seu espírito sobre eles, para que o trabalho fosse feito com perfeição, exatamente segundo o modelo revelado e mencionado a Moisés. — Êx 25:9, 40; 39:43; 40:16.

Uso. Moisés "colocou o candelabro na tenda de reunião, defronte da mesa, do lado meridional do tabernáculo". Evidentemente, ficava paralelo ao lado sul da tenda (do lado esquerdo de quem entrava), defronte da mesa dos pães da proposição. A luz brilhava sobre a "área na frente do candelabro", iluminando assim o Lugar Santo, que continha também o altar de ouro para incenso. — Êx 40:22-26; Núm 8:2, 3.

Na ocasião em que Moisés terminou a montagem do tabernáculo, em 1.º de nisã de 1512 AEC, ele seguiu as instruções de Jeová, de acender as lâmpadas. (Êx 40:1, 2, 4, 25) Mais tarde, Arão fazia isso (Núm 8:3), e depois ele (e os futuros sumos sacerdotes) punham o candelabro em ordem, 'continuamente perante Jeová, desde a noitinha até à manhã'. (Le 24:3, 4) Quando Arão aprontava as lâmpadas "manhã após manhã", e quando as acendia "entre as duas noitinhas", ele oferecia também incenso no altar de ouro. — Êx 30:1, 7, 8.

O candelabro, junto com os outros utensílios do tabernáculo, durante a peregrinação no ermo, era transportado pela família coatita da tribo de Levi. Primeiro, porém, os sacerdotes tinham de cobrir os objetos, porque, conforme Jeová avisara, os que não eram sacerdotes 'não deviam entrar para ver as coisas sagradas nem pelo mínimo instante de tempo, e assim ter de morrer'. O candelabro com os seus acessórios eram cobertos com um pano azul e depois envolvidos numa cobertura de peles de focas, e então era colocado sobre uma barra para ser carregado. — Núm 4:4, 9, 10, 15, 19, 20.

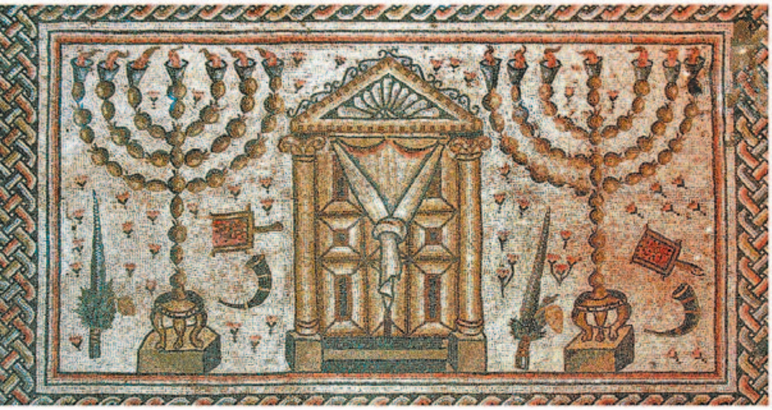
No relato sobre o Rei Davi trazer a Arca do Pacto ao monte Sião, não se faz menção do candelabro. Evidentemente, permaneceu no tabernáculo nos diversos lugares em que este passou a ficar.

Nos Templos. Davi deu a Salomão os planos arquitetônicos para o templo, planos que havia recebido por inspiração. Estes incluíam orientações para haver candelabros de ouro e candelabros de prata. (1Cr 28:11, 12, 15, 19) Havia dez candelabros de ouro, e eles foram colocados "cinco para a direita e cinco para a esquerda", ou cinco do lado meridional e cinco do lado setentrional, encarando-se o leste, no Santo do templo. (1Rs 7:48, 49; 2Cr 4:20) Todos os dez eram "do mesmo plano". (2Cr 4:7) Talvez fossem muito maiores do que aquele que havia estado no tabernáculo, em harmonia com as dimensões maiores do templo e dos seus outros apetrechos, tais como "o mar de fundição". (2Cr 3:3, 4; 1Rs 7:23-26) Os candelabros de prata, sem dúvida, eram usados nos pátios ou em outras salas, não no Santo e no Santíssimo, porque os objetos dessas duas salas eram de ouro. Assim como no tabernáculo, as lâmpadas dos candelabros de ouro eram acesas "noitinha após noitinha", constantemente. — 2Cr 13:11.

Quando o templo foi destruído pelos babilônios, em 607 AEC, os candelabros se achavam entre os objetos de ouro e de prata levados da casa de Jeová. — Je 52:19.

Templo reconstruído por Zorobabel. As Escrituras não fornecem nenhuma informação sobre candelabros no templo reconstruído por Zorobabel. Entretanto, Josefo diz que Antíoco (Epifânio) "despojou o templo, carregando com . . . os candelabros de ouro". (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XII, 250 [v. 4]) O livro apócrifo de Macabeus menciona a remoção dum "candelabro", tornando necessário a fabricação de um novo. — 1 Macabeus 1:21-23; 4:49, 50, BJ.

Templo reconstruído por Herodes. A magnificência do templo reconstruído por Herodes forneceria base para se imaginar que esse templo também deve ter contido candelabros de igual beleza e custo que os do templo de Salomão. No entanto, as Escrituras não fazem menção deles. Evidência de tal candelabro é encontrada na sua menção por Josefo e na sua representação num baixo-relevo existente numa abóbada interior do arco triunfal de Tito, em Roma. Neste arco acham-se representados certos objetos tomados de Jerusalém, quando ela foi destruída pelos romanos em 70 EC. Josefo afirmava ter sido testemunha ocular desta procissão triunfal do imperador Vespasiano e de seu filho Tito. Josefo fala de a procissão carregar "um candelabro, igualmente feito de ouro, mas construído num formato diferente daqueles que usamos na nossa vida. Presa a um pedestal havia uma coluna central, da qual se estendiam hastes finas, arranjadas em feitio de tridente, com uma lâmpada trabalhada presa à extremidade de cada haste; havia sete delas". — The Jewish War (A Guerra Judaica), VII, 148, 149, (v. 5).



Representações judaicas do candelabro do templo (numa coluna, à direita; no piso duma sinagoga, acima) têm uma base de formato diferente daquela mostrada no Arco de Tito.

Ninguém pode hoje dizer com certeza se o candelabro representado no Arco de Tito tem aspecto exatamente igual ao original no templo em Jerusalém. As diferenças de opinião referem-se principalmente ao formato da base, feita de duas formas poligonais, estando a menor acima da maior. Um conceito é que a representação romana, no arco, é exata, mas que o próprio Herodes mudara o formato, diferente da forma judaica duma base triangular, ou tripé, numa campanha de "ocidentalização" para agradar aos romanos. Outros peritos discordam de que a representação seja exata. Painéis decorativos na base retratam águias e monstros marinhos, que eles citam como aparente violação do segundo mandamento.

Alguns concluem que o candelabro original do templo erguia-se sobre um tripé, baseando isso, em parte, nas numerosas representações do candelabro, em diferentes partes da Europa e do Oriente Médio, datando do terceiro ao sexto século, que mostram um tripé como base, alguns tripés com pés de animal. A representação mais antiga do candelabro aparece em moedas de Antígono II, que reinou de 40-37 AEC. Um espécime, embora não muito bem preservado, parece indicar que a base consistia numa chapa com pés. Em 1969, encontrou-se uma representação do candelabro do templo, talhada em gesso, numa casa escavada na parte antiga de Jerusalém. O desenho esquemático indica sete hastes e uma base triangular, todas ornamentadas com botões separados por duas linhas paralelas. No Túmulo de Jasão, descoberto em Jerusalém em 1956 e remontando ao começo do primeiro século AEC, os arqueólogos encontraram desenhos dum candelabro de sete hastes riscados em gesso. A parte inferior parece estar fixa numa caixa ou pedestal.

Assim, à base destes achados arqueológicos, alguns objetam à aparência da base do candelabro no Arco de Tito e sugerem entre outras possibilidades que os entalhes são a concepção de um artista romano, influenciado por formatos judaicos que lhe eram familiares de outras fontes.

Uso Figurado. O profeta Zacarias viu, em visão, um incomum candelabro de ouro. Como no caso do candelabro preparado para o tabernáculo, tinha sete lâmpadas, mas tais lâmpadas tinham sete tubos, que os peritos entendem num sentido distributivo como significando um tubo para cada lâmpada. Também, no alto do candelabro havia uma tigela. Pelo que parece, as lâmpadas obtinham um suprimento constante de azeite através dos tubos que levavam a elas. O azeite, evidentemente, provinha das duas oliveiras que o profeta viu ao lado do candelabro. — Za 4:2, 3, 12.

Jeová Deus, mediante o glorificado Jesus Cristo, forneceu ao apóstolo João uma visão em que este viu "sete candelabros de ouro, e no meio dos candelabros alguém semelhante a um filho de homem". Este, cuja descrição revela ser Jesus Cristo, explicou a João que os candelabros significavam sete congregações. (Re 1:1, 12, 13, 20) Estes candelabros visionários eram provavelmente como aquele que iluminava o tabernáculo, para que os sacerdotes pudessem cumprir seus deveres ali. O uso deles para representar congregações se harmoniza com as palavras de Jesus àqueles que são servos dedicados de Deus: "Vós sois a luz do mundo." (Mt 5:14) Como aquele "que anda no meio dos sete candelabros de ouro", ele supervisiona toda a atividade deles como portadores de luz. — Re 2:1.

Ao aconselhar a congregação em Éfeso, Cristo avisou que removeria o candelabro do seu lugar, a menos que se arrependessem. Isto, sem dúvida, significaria que não mais seriam usados para difundir a luz da verdade naquela região, mas que sua luz se apagaria. — Re 2:1-5; compare isso com Mt 6:22, 23.

A menção final de candelabros na Bíblia tem certa semelhança com a visão de Zacarias. "Duas testemunhas", que haviam de profetizar trajadas de saco, são mencionadas como simbolizadas pelas "duas oliveiras e pelos dois candelabros". — Re 11:3, 4.

CANÉ. Lugar mencionado junto com Harã e Éden, como estando entre os negociantes da antiga Tiro. (Ez 27:23) Sua associação com Harã e Éden parece situá-lo na Mesopotâmia setentrional, no meio do curso do rio Eufrates. Alguns peritos encaram o nome como forma contrata de Calné.

CANELA [hebr.: qin·na·móhn; gr.: kin·ná·mo·mon]. A caneleira (Cinnamomum zeylanicum) faz parte da família das lauráceas, à qual pertencem tanto a cássia (canela-da-china) como a canforeira. Cresce melhor em solo leve, arenoso, úmido, e é abundante em Sri Lanka e em Java. O nome hebraico, possivelmente, tem origem estrangeira, e o produto parece ter sido importado na Terra da Promessa.

A caneleira atinge uma altura máxima de cerca de 9 m e tem casca lisa, de cor cinza, e ramos de ampla extensão. As folhas lanceoladas, sempre-verdes, são verdes na parte de cima, porém brancas na parte de baixo, e medem cerca de 20 a 23 cm de comprimento e tem uns 5 cm de largura. Suas flores pequenas, brancas ou amareladas, crescem em panículas. A casca exterior é quase inodora, e tem pouco valor. A canela comercializada é obtida da casca interna, mais escura. Extrai-se também um óleo aromático da casca.

A canela era usada na preparação do óleo de santa unção, como um dos "mais seletos perfumes". (Êx 30:23) Era borrifada sobre as camas (Pr 7:17), foi usada figuradamente para descrever a amada sulamita (Cân 4:13, 14), e acha-se incluída entre os produtos que os mercadores viajantes vendem a "Babilônia, a Grande", antes da destruição dela. — Re 18:2, 11-13.

CANELA-DA-CHINA. Veja CÁSSIA.

CÂNON (da Bíblia). Originalmente, a cana (hebr.: qa·néh) servia de régua ou instrumento de medir. (Ez 40:3-8; 41:8; 42:16-19) O apóstolo Paulo aplicou ka·nón ao "território" delineado como sua designação, e novamente à "regra de conduta", pela qual os cristãos deviam medir como estavam agindo. (2Co 10:13-16; Gál 6:16) O "cânon bíblico" passou a referir-se ao catálogo dos livros inspirados, dignos de serem usados como régua para medir a fé, a doutrina e a conduta. — Veja BÍBLIA.

A mera escrita de um livro religioso, sua preservação durante centenas de anos e ser estimado por milhões de pessoas não provam que ele seja de origem divina ou canônico. Precisa ter credenciais da Autoria Divina, demonstrando que foi inspirado por Deus. O apóstolo Pedro declara: "A profecia nunca foi produzida pela vontade do homem, mas os homens falaram da parte de Deus conforme eram movidos por espírito santo." (2Pe 1:21) O exame do cânon bíblico mostra que seu conteúdo está à altura deste critério, em todos os sentidos.

Escrituras Hebraicas. A Bíblia teve início com os escritos de Moisés, em 1513 AEC. Nestes se acham preservados os mandamentos e preceitos de Deus para Adão, Noé, Abraão, Isaque e Jacó, bem como os regulamentos do pacto da Lei. O que é chamado de Pentateuco inclui cinco livros: Gênesis, Êxodo, Levítico, Números e Deuteronômio. Jó, evidentemente também escrito por Moisés, preenche a história após a morte de José (1657 AEC) e antes de Moisés mostrar ser servo íntegro de Deus, um período em que 'não havia ninguém igual a Jó na terra'. (Jó 1:8; 2:3) Moisés escreveu também o Salmo 90, e, possivelmente, o 91.

De que esses escritos de Moisés eram de origem divina, inspirados por Deus, canônicos, e uma orientação segura para a adoração pura, não pode haver dúvida, à luz da evidência interna. Não foi por iniciativa de Moisés que ele se tornou o líder e comandante dos israelitas; no começo, Moisés recuou diante desta sugestão. (Êx 3:10, 11; 4:10-14) Antes, Deus suscitou Moisés e o investiu de poderes tão milagrosos, que até mesmo os sacerdotes-magos de Faraó se viram compelidos a reconhecer que aquilo que Moisés fazia originava-se de Deus. (Êx 4:1-9; 8:16-19) De modo que Moisés não tinha a ambição pessoal de ser orador e escritor. Antes, em obediência à ordem de Deus, e com as credenciais divinas do espírito santo, Moisés foi induzido primeiro a falar e depois a assentar por escrito parte do cânon bíblico. — Êx 17:14.

O próprio Jeová estabeleceu o precedente para que fossem assentados por escrito leis e mandamentos. Depois de falar a Moisés no monte Sinai, Jeová "passou a dar a Moisés duas tábuas do Testemunho, tábuas de pedra, inscritas pelo dedo de Deus". (Êx 31:18) Mais tarde, lemos: "E Jeová prosseguiu, dizendo a Moisés: 'Escreve para ti estas palavras.'" (Êx 34:27) Portanto, foi Jeová quem se comunicou com Moisés e lhe mandou que escrevesse e preservasse os primeiros cinco livros do cânon bíblico. Nenhum concílio de homens os tornou canônicos; desde o começo, eles tinham a aprovação divina.

"Assim que Moisés terminara de escrever as palavras desta lei num livro", ele deu ordens aos levitas, dizendo: "Tomando este livro da lei, tendes de colocá-lo ao lado da Arca do Pacto de Jeová, vosso Deus, e ali tem de servir de testemunha contra ti." (De 31:9, 24-26) É digno de nota que Israel reconheceu este registro dos tratos de Deus e não negou estes fatos. Visto que o conteúdo dos livros, em muitos casos, era um descrédito para a nação em geral, podia-se esperar que o povo os rejeitasse, se fosse possível, mas esta questão nunca parece ter surgido.

Igual a Moisés, a classe sacerdotal foi usada por Deus tanto para preservar estes mandamentos escritos, como para ensiná-los ao povo. Quando a Arca foi levada ao templo de Salomão (1026 AEC), quase 500 anos depois de Moisés começar a escrever o Pentateuco, as duas tábuas de pedra ainda se encontravam na Arca (1Rs 8:9), e 384 anos depois disso, quando "o próprio livro da lei" foi encontrado na casa de Jeová, durante o 18.º ano de Josias (642 AEC), ainda se mostrava a mesma alta estima por ele. (2Rs 22:3, 8-20) De modo similar, houve "muitíssima alegria" quando, depois do retorno do exílio babilônico, Esdras leu o livro da Lei durante uma assembleia de oito dias. — Ne 8:5-18.

Após a morte de Moisés, acrescentaram-se os escritos de Josué, Samuel, Gade e Natã (Josué, Juízes, Rute, 1 e 2 Samuel). Os reis Davi e Salomão também fizeram contribuições para o crescente cânon dos Escritos Sagrados. Depois vieram os profetas de Jonas a Malaquias, cada um contribuindo para o cânon bíblico, cada um dotado de milagrosa habilidade profética da parte de Deus, cada um por sua vez satisfazendo os requisitos de verdadeiros profetas, conforme delineados por Jeová, a saber, falaram em nome de Jeová, sua profecia se cumpriu e eles voltaram o povo para Deus. (De 13:1-3; 18:20-22) Quando Hananias e Jeremias foram testados nos últimos dois pontos (ambos falaram em nome de Jeová), apenas as palavras de Jeremias se cumpriram. Jeremias mostrou assim ser profeta de Jeová. — Je 28:10-17.

Assim como Jeová inspirou homens a escrever, segue-se logicamente que ele orientaria e supervisionaria a coleção e a preservação desses escritos inspirados, a fim de que a humanidade tivesse uma duradoura régua canônica para a verdadeira adoração. Segundo a tradição judaica, Esdras teve algo que ver com esta obra, depois que os judeus exilados se estabeleceram novamente em Judá. Ele certamente estava qualificado para a obra, sendo um dos escritores bíblicos inspirados, sacerdote, e também "copista destro da lei de Moisés". (Esd 7:1-11) Só faltavam os livros de Neemias e Malaquias a ser acrescentados. O cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas, portanto, estava bem estabelecido no fim do quinto século AEC, contendo os mesmos escritos que nós temos hoje.

O cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas era tradicionalmente dividido em três seções: a Lei, os Profetas e os Escritos, ou Hagiógrafos, contidos em 24 livros, conforme mostrado na tabela. Pela combinação adicional de Rute com Juízes, e Lamentações com Jeremias, algumas autoridades judaicas contam 22, o mesmo número que o das letras no alfabeto hebraico. Jerônimo, no seu prólogo dos livros de Samuel e Reis, embora parecendo favorecer a contagem de 22, disse: "Alguns incluiriam tanto Rute como Lamentações entre os Hagiógrafos . . . e assim obteriam vinte e quatro livros."

O historiador judaico Josefo, respondendo a opositores na sua obra Against Apion (Contra Apião, I, 38-40 [8]), por volta do ano 100 EC, confirma que até então o cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas há muito já estava estabelecido. Ele escreveu: "Não possuímos miríades de livros incoerentes, em conflito uns com os outros. Nossos livros, aqueles que são corretamente acreditados, são apenas dois e vinte, e contêm o registro de todos os tempos. Dentre estes, cinco são os livros de Moisés, abrangendo as leis e a história tradicional desde o nascimento do homem até a morte do legislador. . . . Desde a morte de Moisés até Artaxerxes, que sucedeu a Xerxes como rei da Pérsia, os profetas depois de Moisés escreveram a história dos eventos dos seus próprios tempos em treze livros. Os quatro livros remanescentes contêm hinos a Deus e preceitos para a conduta da vida humana."

A canonicidade de um livro, portanto, não depende inteiramente ou em parte de ter sido aceito ou rejeitado por algum concílio, uma comissão ou uma comunidade. A voz de tais homens não inspirados só tem valor como testemunha do que o próprio Deus já fizera por meio de seus representantes acreditados.

O número exato dos livros nas Escrituras Hebraicas não é importante (quer dois deles tenham sido combinados ou deixados separados), nem o é determinada ordem em que se seguem um ao outro, visto que os livros permaneceram como rolos separados muito depois de se encerrar o cânon. Antigos catálogos variam na ordem em que os livros estão alistados, como, por exemplo, uma lista colocando Isaías depois do livro de Ezequiel. O que é de máxima importância, porém, é quais são os livros incluídos. Na realidade, apenas os livros que agora se encontram no cânon têm alguma reivindicação sólida de canonicidade. Desde os tempos antigos houve resistência aos esforços de incluir outros escritos. Dois conselhos judaicos realizados em Yavne ou Jâmnia, um pouco ao S de Jope, respectivamente por volta de 90 e 118 EC, ao considerar as Escrituras Hebraicas, expressamente excluíram todos os escritos apócrifos.

Josefo dá testemunho desta opinião judaica geral sobre os escritos apócrifos, ao dizer: "Desde Artaxerxes até o nosso próprio tempo, escreveu-se a história completa, mas não tem sido considerada digna de receber crédito igual ao dos registros anteriores, por causa da falta da sucessão exata dos profetas. Apresentamos prova prática da nossa reverência pelas nossas próprias Escrituras. Pois, embora já se tenham passado eras tão longas, ninguém se aventurou quer a acrescentar, quer a remover, quer a alterar uma sílaba; e é um instinto em cada judeu, desde o dia do seu nascimento, considerá-las como os decretos de Deus, acatá-las, e, se for preciso, alegremente morrer por elas." — Against Apion, I, 41, 42 (8).

Esta atitude histórica de longa data, dos judeus, para com o cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas é muito importante, em vista do que Paulo escreveu aos romanos. Os judeus, diz o apóstolo, "foram incumbidos das proclamações sagradas de Deus", o que incluía escrever e proteger o cânon bíblico. — Ro 3:1, 2.

Antigos concílios (Laodiceia, 367 EC; Calcedônia, 451 EC) e os chamados pais da igreja, que na maior parte concordaram em aceitar o cânon judaico estabelecido e em rejeitar os livros apócrifos, reconheceram, mas de modo algum determinaram o cânon bíblico que o espírito santo de Deus havia autorizado. Exemplos de tais homens incluem: Justino, o Mártir, apologista cristão (falecido em c. 165 EC); Melito, "bispo" de Sardes (2.º século EC); Orígenes, erudito bíblico (185?-254? EC); Hilário, "bispo" de Poitiers (morreu em 367? EC); Epifânio, "bispo" de Constantia (Salamina; desde 367 EC); Gregório Nazianzeno (330?-389? EC); Rufino de Aquileia, "o erudito tradutor de Orígenes" (345?-410 EC); Jerônimo (340?-420 EC), erudito bíblico da igreja latina e compilador da Vulgata. No seu prólogo dos livros de Samuel e Reis, depois de enumerar os 22 livros das Escrituras Hebraicas, Jerônimo diz: "Tudo o que houver além destes tem de ser posto nos apócrifos."

O testemunho mais conclusivo da canonicidade das Escrituras Hebraicas é a palavra incontestável de Jesus Cristo e dos escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Embora eles, em parte alguma, indiquem o número exato de livros, a conclusão inconfundível tirada do que disseram é que o cânon das Escrituras Hebraicas não continha os livros apócrifos.

CÂNON JUDAICO DAS ESCRITURAS

A Lei	Os Profetas	Os Escritos (Hagiógrafos)
1. Gênesis	6. Josué	14. Salmos
2. Êxodo	7. Juízes	15. Provérbios
3. Levítico	8. 1, 2 Samuel	16. Jó
4. Números	9. 1, 2 Reis	17. Cântico de Salomão
5. Deuteronômio	10. Isaías	18. Rute
	11. Jeremias	19. Lamentações
	12. Ezequiel	20. Eclesiastes
	13. Os Doze Profetas (Oseias, Joel, Amós, Obadias, Jonas, Miqueias, Naum, Habacuque, Sofonias, Ageu, Zacarias, Malaquias)	21. Ester
		22. Daniel
		23. Esdras, Neemias
		24. 1, 2 Crônicas

Se não existisse uma coleção definida de Escritos Sagrados que eles e aqueles a quem falaram e escreveram conhecessem ou reconhecessem, eles não teriam usado expressões tais como "as Escrituras" (Mt 22:29; At 18:24); "Escrituras sagradas" (Ro 1:2); "os escritos sagrados" (2Ti 3:15); a "Lei", que muitas vezes se refere ao corpo inteiro das Escrituras (Jo 10:34; 12:34; 15:25); "a Lei e os Profetas", usado como termo genérico, referindo-se às inteiras Escrituras Hebraicas e não simplesmente à primeira e à segunda seção destas Escrituras (Mt 5:17; 7:12; 22:40; Lu 16:16). Quando Paulo se referiu à "Lei", ele citou Isaías. — 1Co 14:21; Is 28:11.

É mui pouco provável que a Septuaginta grega original contivesse os livros apócrifos. (Veja APÓCRIFOS.) No entanto, mesmo que alguns desses escritos de origem duvidosa se tivessem introduzido em cópias subsequentes da Septuaginta em uso nos dias de Jesus, nem ele, nem os escritores das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs citaram deles, embora usassem a Septuaginta; nunca citaram como "Escrituras", ou como produto do espírito santo, quaisquer escritos apócrifos. De modo que não só falta aos livros apócrifos a evidência interna de inspiração divina e a atestação de antigos escritores inspirados das Escrituras Hebraicas, mas falta-lhes também o cunho de aprovação de Jesus e dos seus apóstolos divinamente acreditados. Todavia, Jesus aprovou o cânon hebraico, referindo-se às inteiras Escrituras Hebraicas quando falou sobre "todas as coisas escritas na lei de Moisés, e nos Profetas, e nos Salmos", sendo os Salmos o primeiro e mais extenso livro na seção chamada de Hagiógrafos, ou Escritos Sagrados. — Lu 24:44.

As palavras de Jesus em Mateus 23:35 (e em Lu 11:50, 51) também são muito significativas: "Para que venha sobre vós todo o sangue justo derramado na terra, desde o sangue do justo Abel até o sangue de Zacarias, filho de Baraquias, a quem assassinastes entre o santuário e o altar." No que diz respeito à época, o profeta Urijá foi morto durante o reinado de Jeoiaquim, mais de dois séculos depois do assassinato de Zacarias, perto do fim do reinado de Jeoás. (Je 26:20-23) Portanto, se Jesus queria citar toda a lista de mártires, por que não disse 'de Abel a Urijá'? Evidentemente foi porque o caso de Zacarias é encontrado em 2 Crônicas 24:20, 21, e, portanto, perto do fim do tradicional cânon hebraico. Portanto, neste sentido, a declaração de Jesus abrangeu mesmo todas as testemunhas de Jeová assassinadas que são mencionadas nas Escrituras Hebraicas, desde Abel, alistado no primeiro livro (Gênesis), até Zacarias, mencionado no último livro (Crônicas), o que, como ilustração, equivaleria a dizermos "de Gênesis a Revelação".

Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Tanto a escrita como a compilação dos 27 livros que constituem o cânon das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs foram similares às das Escrituras Hebraicas. Cristo "deu dádivas em homens", sim, "ele deu alguns como apóstolos, alguns como profetas, alguns como evangelizadores, alguns como pastores e instrutores". (Ef 4:8, 11-13) Tendo eles o espírito santo de Deus, apresentaram doutrinas sólidas à congregação cristã, e, "por meio dum lembrete", repetiram muitas coisas já escritas nas Escrituras. — 2Pe 1:12, 13; 3:1; Ro 15:15.

Fora das próprias Escrituras há evidência de que, já em 90-100 EC, pelo menos dez das cartas de Paulo tinham sido compiladas. É certo que, logo cedo, os cristãos compilavam os inspirados escritos cristãos.

Lemos que "perto do fim do 1.º séc., Clemente, bispo de Roma, estava familiarizado com a carta de Paulo à igreja em Corinto. Depois dele, as cartas tanto de Inácio, bispo de Antioquia, como de Policarpo, bispo de Esmirna, atestam a disseminação das cartas paulinas por volta da segunda década do 2.º século". (The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia [A Enciclopédia Bíblica Padrão Internacional], editada por G. W. Bromiley, 1979, Vol. 1, p. 603) Todos estes eram escritores antigos — Clemente de Roma (30?-100? EC), Policarpo (69?-155? EC) e Inácio de Antioquia (fim do 1.º e começo do 2.º século EC) — que intercalaram citações e trechos de diversos livros das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, mostrando que conheciam esses escritos canônicos.

Justino, o Mártir (morreu c. 165 EC), no seu "Diálogo com o Judeu Trífão" (XLIX), usou a expressão "está escrito" ao citar Mateus, do mesmo modo como fazem os próprios Evangelhos ao se referirem às Escrituras Hebraicas. O mesmo ocorre também numa anterior obra anônima, "A Epístola de Barnabé" (IV). Justino, o Mártir, em "A Primeira Apologia" (LXVI, LXVII) chama as "memórias dos apóstolos" de "Evangelhos". — The Ante-Nicene Fathers (Os Pais Antenicenos), Vol. I, pp. 220, 139, 185, 186.

Teófilo de Antioquia (2.º século EC) declarou: "A respeito da justiça ordenada pela lei, encontram-se expressões confirmatórias tanto nos profetas como nos Evangelhos, porque todos eles falaram inspirados por um só Espírito de Deus." Teófilo usa então expressões tais como 'diz o Evangelho' (citando Mt 5:28, 32, 44, 46; 6:3) e "a palavra divina nos dá instruções" (citando 1Ti 2:2 e Ro 13:7, 8). — The Ante-Nicene Fathers, 1962, Vol. II, pp. 114, 115, "Teófilo a Autólico" (XII, XIII).

Por volta do fim do segundo século não havia dúvida de que o cânon das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs estava completo, e encontramos homens tais como Irineu, Clemente de Alexandria, e Tertuliano, reconhecendo os escritos que constituem as Escrituras Cristãs como tendo autoridade igual à das Escrituras Hebraicas. Irineu, recorrendo às Escrituras, faz tantas quantas 200 citações das cartas de Paulo. Clemente diz que responderá aos seus oponentes com "as Escrituras que cremos serem válidas, em vista da sua onipotente autoridade", quer dizer, "pela lei e pelos profetas, e, além disso, pelo bendito Evangelho". — The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. II, p. 409, "Os Estrômatos, ou Miscelâneas".

Alguns têm disputado a canonicidade de certos livros específicos das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, mas os argumentos contra tais são muito fracos. Por exemplo, para os críticos rejeitarem o livro de Hebreus, simplesmente porque não leva o nome de Paulo e porque difere ligeiramente em estilo das suas outras cartas, é um argumento superficial. B. F. Westcott observou que "a autoridade canônica da Epístola é independente da sua autoria paulina". (The Epistle to the Hebrews [A Epístola aos Hebreus], 1892, p. lxxi) A objeção à base de não se saber o nome do escritor é sobrepujada em muito pela presença de Hebreus no Papiro Chester Beatty N.º 2 (P^{46}) (datado dentro de 150 anos após a morte de Paulo), que contém a carta junto com mais oito de Paulo.

Às vezes se questiona a canonicidade de livros pequenos tais como Tiago, Judas, a Segunda e a Terceira de João, e a Segunda de Pedro, à base de que estes livros são muito pouco citados pelos primitivos escritores. Todavia, todos juntos constituem apenas uma trigésima sexta parte das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, e, por isso, era menos provável serem mencionados. Neste respeito, pode-se observar que a Segunda de Pedro é citada por Irineu como tendo a mesma evidência de canonicidade que as restantes das Escrituras Gregas. O mesmo se dá com a Segunda de João. (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. I, pp. 551, 557, 341, 443, "Irineu Contra Heresias") Revelação, também rejeitada por alguns, foi confirmada por muitos primitivos comentadores, inclusive Pápias, Justino, o Mártir, Melito e Irineu.

A verdadeira prova de canonicidade, porém, não consiste em quantas vezes ou por que escritores não apostólicos certo livro é citado. O conteúdo do próprio livro tem de dar evidência de ser produto do espírito santo. Por conseguinte, não pode conter superstições ou demonismo, nem pode incentivar à adoração de criaturas. Tem de estar em total harmonia e completa unidade com o restante da Bíblia, apoiando assim a autoria de Jeová Deus. Cada livro tem de harmonizar-se com o divino "modelo de palavras salutares" e estar em harmonia com os ensinos e as atividades de Cristo Jesus. (2Ti 1:13; 1Co 4:17) Os apóstolos claramente possuíam abonação divina e falavam em confirmação de outros escritores, tais como Lucas e Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus. Por meio do espírito santo, os apóstolos tinham "discernimento de pronunciações inspiradas", quanto a se eram de Deus, ou não. (1Co 12:4, 10) Com a morte de João, o último dos apóstolos, esta corrente fidedigna de homens divinamente inspirados chegou ao fim, e, portanto, com a Revelação, o Evangelho de João e suas epístolas, o cânon bíblico foi encerrado.

Os 66 livros canônicos da nossa Bíblia, na sua harmoniosa unidade e equilíbrio, atestam a unicidade e inteireza da Bíblia e a recomendam a nós como de fato serem a Palavra de Jeová, de verdade inspirada, preservada até agora contra todos os seus inimigos. (1Pe 1:25) Para consultar a lista completa dos 66 livros que constituem o inteiro cânon bíblico, os escritores e quando os livros foram completados, bem como o tempo abrangido por cada um deles, veja a "Tabela dos Livros da Bíblia na Ordem em Que Foram Terminados", sob BÍBLIA. — Veja também o artigo sobre cada livro específico da Bíblia.

CÂNTICO. Uma composição, incluindo música e letra; uma composição poética. (Veja MÚSICA.) Cerca de um décimo de toda a Bíblia compõe-se de cânticos, os exemplos mais destacados sendo os Salmos, O Cântico de Salomão e Lamentações. Ao passo que as Escrituras deveras se referem a cantos temporais, cantos de desprezo e de sedução, a maioria das cerca de 300 referências da Bíblia ao assunto se relacionam com a adoração de Jeová Deus. Na maior parte, o cantar está associado com a alegria, como quando o discípulo Tiago escreveu: "Há alguém bem animado? Cante salmos [cânticos de louvor a Deus]." (Tg 5:13) Cânticos que expressam pesar poderiam ser mais apropriadamente chamados de endechas. — Am 8:10; veja ENDECHA.

O primeiro cântico registrado na Bíblia foi o entoado por Moisés e pelos homens de Israel, ao qual Miriã e as mulheres responderam, após o seu livramento do Mar Vermelho. (Êx 15:1-21) Entre outros, há o cântico de despedida de Moisés, o cântico de vitória de Débora e Baraque, e a endecha de Davi, lamentando a morte de Saul e do querido amigo de Davi, Jonatã. (De 31:30; 32:1-43; Jz 5:1-31; 2Sa 1:17-27) Composições adicionais de Davi incluem pelo menos 73 dos Salmos. A Bíblia refere-se também ao "canto de Jeová", mencionado em conexão com o restabelecimento da adoração pura por Ezequias, bem como ao 'cântico de Moisés e do Cordeiro'. — 2Cr 29:27; Re 15:3, 4.

Referências a "um novo cântico" não só aparecem nos Salmos, mas também nos escritos de Isaías e do apóstolo João. (Sal 33:3; 40:3; 96:1; 98:1; 144:9; 149:1; Is 42:10; Re 5:9; 14:3) Um exame do contexto da maioria das ocorrências da expressão "novo cântico" revela que este é cantado por causa de um novo desenvolvimento no exercício da soberania universal por Jeová. Conforme proclamado alegremente no Salmo 96:10: "O próprio Jeová se tornou rei." Os novos desenvolvimentos na ampliação do seu reinado por Jeová, bem como o que estes significam para o céu e para a terra, parecem ser o assunto deste "novo cântico". — Sal 96:11-13; 98:9; Is 42:10, 13.

CÂNTICO DE SALOMÃO, O. Um livro poético das Escrituras Hebraicas, que fala do inabalável amor de uma jovem sulamita (uma camponesa de Suném, ou Sulém) por um pastor, e da tentativa frustrada do Rei Salomão, de conquistar o amor dela. As palavras iniciais do texto hebraico designam este poema de "cântico dos cânticos", isto é, um "cântico superlativo", o mais lindo, o mais excelente cântico. (Veja NM, n. sobre o título.) Trata-se apenas de um único cântico, e não de uma coleção de cânticos.

Logo no início, Salomão é identificado como o escritor. (Cân 1:1) A evidência interna concorda com isto, pois revela que o escritor era alguém bem familiarizado com a criação de Deus, como se dava com Salomão. (1Rs 4:29-33) Repetidas vezes, plantas, animais, pedras preciosas e metais figuram nas imagens vívidas do livro. (Cân 1:12-14, 17; 2:1, 3, 7, 9, 12-15; 4:8, 13, 14; 5:11-15; 7:2, 3, 7, 8, 11-13) O escritor, como se esperaria de um rei como Salomão, estava bem familiarizado com a terra habitada pelos israelitas — a planície costeira, as baixadas (2:1), as cadeias montanhosas do Líbano, Hermom, Antilíbano e Carmelo (4:8; 7:5), os vinhedos de En-Gedi (1:14) e "as lagoas de Hésbon, junto ao portão de Bate-Rabim" (7:4).

O poema foi composto quando Salomão possuía 60 rainhas e 80 concubinas. (Cân 6:8) Isto aponta para a parte inicial do seu reinado de 40 anos (1037-998 AEC), visto que Salomão finalmente veio a possuir 700 esposas e 300 concubinas. — 1Rs 11:3.

As expressões de afeto contidas em O Cântico de Salomão talvez pareçam muito incomuns para o leitor ocidental. Mas deve-se lembrar que o cenário para este cântico era um cenário oriental de cerca de 3.000 anos atrás.

Pessoas Envolvidas. A figura central do Cântico de Salomão é a sulamita. Outras pessoas mencionadas no poema são seu amado pastor (Cân 1:7), e sua mãe e seus irmãos (1:6; 8:2), o Rei Salomão (3:11), as "filhas de Jerusalém" (as damas da corte de Salomão) e as "filhas de Sião" (mulheres residentes em Jerusalém) (3:5, 11). As pessoas podem ser distinguidas pelo que dizem sobre si mesmas ou o que se diz a elas. No texto hebraico, as formas gramaticais amiúde dão a entender o gênero (masculino ou feminino), bem como o número (singular ou plural), destarte facilitando a identificação dos personagens. Para tornar mais evidente essa diferença em certas línguas, amiúde é necessário acrescentar palavras esclarecedoras para transmitir plenamente o sentido do original. Assim, em O Cântico de Salomão 1:5, o hebraico reza literalmente: "Preta eu e linda." As palavras hebraicas para "preta" e "linda" acham-se no gênero feminino, como em português. Para destacar isso, a Tradução do Novo Mundo reza: "Sou uma moça preta, mas linda."

O Drama. A sulamita conheceu o pastor no local do nascimento dele. (Cân 8:5b) Zelosos pela castidade de sua irmã, os irmãos da sulamita tentaram protegê-la da tentação. Portanto, quando ela queria

DESTAQUES DO CÂNTICO DE SALOMÃO

O inabalável amor duma donzela sulamita a um jovem pastor, apesar das tentativas do Rei Salomão de consegui-la para si.

Escrito por Salomão, evidentemente bastante cedo no seu reinado.

A donzela sulamita no acampamento de Salomão. (1:1–3:5)

Ela anela o amor de seu querido, um pastor, e deseja que ele a retire do ambiente régio.

Explica às mulheres da corte que o motivo de sua tez escura é a exposição ao sol, enquanto trabalhava nos vinhedos de seus irmãos.

Salomão promete-lhe enfeites de ouro e de prata, mas ela insiste que continuará a amar seu querido.

Aparece seu pastor e louva a beleza da sulamita, comparando-a a um lírio entre ervas daninhas.

A sulamita diz às mulheres da corte que o pastor dela é como uma macieira, cuja sombra ela deseja apaixonadamente; ela as põe sob juramento de não despertar nela amor a Salomão; lembra-se de quando seu amado a convidou a acompanhá-lo; entretanto, os irmãos dela disseram-lhe que era preciso proteger os vinhedos contra as pequenas raposas.

À noite, ela sonha que procura seu amado e o encontra.

Testada na cidade de Jerusalém. (3:6–8:4)

O magnificente cortejo de Salomão começa o regresso a Jerusalém.

O pastor entra novamente em contato com a sulamita (agora velada) e fala-lhe sobre a beleza dela, comparando-a a um jardim trancado, cheio de plantas aromáticas.

Ela o convida a entrar neste jardim e a deleitar-se com os seus frutos.

A sulamita conta às mulheres da corte o pesadelo que teve: Seu amado chegou quando ela estava na cama; ele partiu antes de ela poder abrir a porta; procurou-o em vão na cidade e foi maltratada pelos vigias da cidade.

As filhas de Jerusalém perguntam-lhe sobre o seu querido, e ela responde por dar-lhes uma descrição elogiosa dele.

Salomão expressa então seu amor à sulamita, dizendo que ela é mais bela do que suas 60 rainhas e 80 concubinas.

A sulamita fica impassível, indicando que ela só está ali porque a execução dum serviço a levara perto do acampamento dele.

Salomão descreve vividamente a beleza dela, mas a sulamita resiste à conversa hábil dele, insistindo em que ela pertencia ao seu querido.

A sulamita retorna, tendo provado sua lealdade. (8:5-14)

A sulamita volta para casa, apoiando-se no seu querido.

Anteriormente, seus irmãos se perguntaram se ela seria constante como uma muralha, ou instável como uma porta girante, que admite a qualquer um.

A sulamita rejeitou tudo o que Salomão podia oferecer, provando sua devoção exclusiva ao seu querido; o amor dela é tão forte como a morte, e as suas labaredas, como a chama de Jah.

---

aceitar o convite de seu amado, de ir com ele ver as belezas do começo da primavera (2:8-14), eles ficaram irados com ela, e, aproveitando-se da necessidade sazonal, designaram-na para guardar os vinhedos contra as depredações das pequenas raposas. (1:6; 2:15) Exposta aos raios solares, a sulamita perdeu a alvura da sua pele. — 1:5, 6.

Mais tarde, quando estava a caminho do jardim das nogueiras, ela, sem querer, chegou ao acampamento do Rei Salomão. (Cân 6:11, 12) Quer tenha sido vista ali pelo próprio rei, quer observada por outrem e então recomendada a ele, a sulamita foi levada ao acampamento de Salomão. O Rei Salomão revelou sua admiração por ela. Mas ela não sentiu nenhuma atração por ele, e expressou saudades de seu amado pastor. (1:2-4, 7) As “filhas de Jerusalém”, por conseguinte, recomendaram que ela deixasse o acampamento e procurasse seu amado. (1:8) Salomão, porém, não estava disposto a deixá-la ir embora e começou a louvar-lhe a beleza, prometendo modelar argolinhas de ouro e botõezinhos de prata para ela. (1:9-11) A sulamita informou então o rei que o objeto de seu amor era outra pessoa. — 1:12-14.

Depois disso, o amado pastor da sulamita veio ao acampamento de Salomão e expressou seu afeto por ela. Ela também lhe assegurou o seu amor. (Cân 1:15-2:2) Ao falar às “filhas de Jerusalém”, a sulamita comparou seu amado a uma árvore frutífera entre as árvores da floresta, e solenemente as pôs sob juramento, pelo que era lindo e gracioso, a não tentarem suscitar nela um amor indesejado. (2:3-7) Sempre, mesmo durante as horas noturnas, ela continuava a ansiar o seu amado pastor, e relembrou às “filhas de Jerusalém” que elas estavam sob juramento de não tentarem despertar nela o amor até que estivesse disposto a isso. — 2:16-3:5.

Voltando a Jerusalém, Salomão levou junto a sulamita. Vendo o cortejo que se aproximava da cidade, várias “filhas de Sião” comentaram a aparência do cortejo. (Cân 3:6-11) Em Jerusalém, o amado pastor, tendo seguido o cortejo, entrou em contato com a sulamita e louvou a beleza dela, assegurando-lhe assim seu amor. (4:1-5) A sulamita expres-sou seu desejo de partir da cidade (4:6), e ele continuou a expressar sua admiração por ela. (4:7-16a) "Entre meu querido no seu jardim e coma dos seus frutos seletos", disse ela. (4:16b) A resposta dele a este convite foi: "Entrei no meu jardim, ó minha irmã, noiva minha." (5:1a) As mulheres de Jerusalém os encorajaram, dizendo: "Comei, companheiros! Bebei e embriagai-vos com expressões de afeto!" — 5:1b.

Quando a sulamita, depois de um pesadelo, contou-o às "filhas de Jerusalém" e disse-lhes que estava desfalecida de amor (Cân 5:2-8), elas queriam saber o que havia de tão especial no seu querido. A sulamita passou então a descrever seu amado em termos elogiosos. (5:10-16) Perguntada por elas onde ele se encontrava, informou-as que ele estava pastoreando entre os jardins. (6:1-3) Mais uma vez, Salomão confrontou a sulamita com expressões de louvor. (6:4-10) Informado de que ela não procurara a companhia dele (6:11, 12), Salomão rogou que ela voltasse. (6:13a) Isto induziu-a a perguntar: "Que estais contemplando na sulamita?" (6:13b) Salomão aproveitou isso como oportunidade para expressar mais admiração por ela. (7:1-9) Mas a sulamita continuou imutável no seu amor e exortou as "filhas de Jerusalém" a não despertar nela o amor, quando este não estava disposto a surgir espontaneamente. — 7:10-8:4.

Evidentemente, Salomão permitiu então que a sulamita voltasse para casa. Vendo-a chegar, os irmãos dela perguntaram: "Quem é esta mulher subindo do ermo, encostando-se no seu querido?" (Cân 8:5a) Os irmãos da sulamita não se haviam dado conta de que sua irmã tinha tal constância no amor. Em anos anteriores, um irmão dissera a respeito dela: "Temos uma pequena irmã que não tem peitos. Que faremos por nossa irmã no dia em que for pedida?" (8:8) Outro irmão respondeu: "Se ela for uma muralha, construiremos sobre ela um parapeito de prata; mas se ela for uma porta, nós a bloquearemos com uma tábua de cedro." (8:9) No entanto, visto que a sulamita havia resistido com bom êxito a todos os induzimentos, satisfazendo-se com o seu próprio vinhedo e permanecendo leal no seu afeto ao seu amado (8:6, 7, 11, 12), ela podia dizer corretamente: "Sou uma muralha, e meus peitos são como torres. Neste caso me tornei aos seus olhos como aquela que acha paz." — 8:10.

O cântico conclui com uma expressão do desejo de seu pastor amado de ouvir a voz dela (Cân 8:13), e com a expressão do desejo dela, de que ele viesse pulando, cruzando os montes que os separavam. — 8:14.

Valor. O Cântico de Salomão ilustra a beleza do amor perseverante e constante. Tal amor inabalável é refletido na relação entre Cristo Jesus e sua noiva. (Ef 5:25-32) Assim, o Cântico de Salomão pode servir de encorajamento aos que professam ser da noiva de Cristo, para permanecerem fiéis ao seu noivo celestial. — Veja 2Co 11:2.

CANTORES, CANTAR. Veja MÚSICA.

CÃO [hebr.: ké·lev; gr.: ký·on; ky·ná·ri·on, 'cachorrinho' (Mt 15:26)]. Para os israelitas, este animal era cerimonialmente impuro, e, portanto, é improvável que pensassem em treinar cães. (Le 11:27; Is 66:3) Embora se mencionem muitas vezes ovelhas e pastores na Bíblia, apenas Jó, um não israelita, fala dos "cães do meu rebanho". — Jó 30:1.

Os cães (Canis familiaris), iguais às aves necrófagas, comiam carne em putrefação, especialmente nas cidades. A Lei mandava que se jogasse aos cães a carne dilacerada por um animal selvagem. (Êx 22:31) Às vezes, o julgamento de Jeová contra seus inimigos era que os cadáveres deles fossem consumidos ou seu sangue lambido por cães necrófagos. Por causa do proceder de grave infidelidade seguido pelos reis Jeroboão, Baasa e Acabe, todos os que pertencessem às suas respectivas famílias e que morressem na cidade haviam de ser devorados por cães. (1Rs 14:11; 16:4; 21:24) Em cumprimento da palavra de Jeová, os cães lamberam o sangue de Acabe, e a carne de sua esposa Jezabel tornou-se alimento para cães. (1Rs 21:19; 22:38; 21:23; 2Rs 9:10, 35, 36) Indicando que os cães lamberiam o sangue dos adversários do povo de Jeová, o salmista escreveu: "Para que a língua dos teus cães tenha a sua porção da parte dos inimigos." (Sal 68:23) Predisse-se que os cães participariam na ruína que sobreviria às infiéis Jerusalém e Judá. Os cães arrastariam os cadáveres, mutilando-os, devorando-os, e lambendo o sangue. — Je 15:3.

Uso Ilustrativo. O hábito repulsivo do cão, de regurgitar o alimento que havia engolido apressadamente, e daí passar de novo a comê-lo mais tarde, é usado para ilustrar o proceder dos que abandonam a vereda da justiça e voltam a seu anterior estado aviltado. (2Pe 2:20-22; Pr 26:11) As pessoas moralmente impuras são chamadas de cães. A lei de Deus para Israel declarava: "Não deves trazer a paga duma meretriz nem o preço dum cão ["homens destinados à prostituição", BMD; "provavelmente um pederasta; alguém praticando cópula anal, especialmente com um menino", NM n.] à casa de Jeová, teu Deus, para algum voto, porque são algo detestável para Jeová, teu Deus, sim, ambas estas coisas." (De 23:18) Todos aqueles que, semelhantes a cães necrófagos das ruas, praticam coisas repugnantes, tais como a sodomia, o lesbianismo, a depravação e a crueldade, têm barrado seu acesso à Nova Jerusalém. — Re 22:15; veja também Fil 3:2.

Um indício adicional do desprezo que se tinha destes cães selvagens, necrófagos, são os seguintes exemplos: "Sou eu algum cão?" berrou Golias para Davi, porque este último viera a ele com um bastão. (1Sa 17:43) "No encalço de quem vais? Atrás de um cão morto?" perguntou Davi ao Rei Saul, mostrando assim que ele era insignificante e não podia prejudicar Saul assim como um cão morto não o podia. (1Sa 24:14) De modo similar, Mefibosete, filho de Jonatã, ao falar ao Rei Davi, chamou a si mesmo de "cão morto", a condição mais baixa possível. (2Sa 9:8; veja também 2Sa 3:8; 16:9; 2Rs 8:13.) O profeta Isaías comparou os professos vigias espirituais de Deus a cães mudos, cochilantes, cheios de desejos de alma, totalmente ineficazes no caso dum perigo. (Is 56:10, 11) Os inimigos dos servos de Jeová eram comparados a cães, e assim também os gentios. (Sal 22:16, 20; 59:6, 14; Mt 15:26, 27; veja SIRO-FENÍCIA.) Jesus Cristo comparou as pessoas que não têm apreço pelas coisas espirituais a cães, dizendo: "Não deis aos cães o que é santo." — Mt 7:6.

À luz do sentido figurado desfavorável ligado ao cão, a condição muito baixa do Lázaro da ilustração de Jesus é claramente refletida nas palavras: "Os cães vinham e lambiam as suas úlceras." (Lu 16:21) Todavia, até mesmo o desprezado cão está em situação melhor do que um leão morto, porque o cão vivo está consciente, ao passo que o leão morto, o animal régio, não está consciente de absolutamente nada. — Ec 9:4, 5.

A maneira de o cão lamber a água, enquanto ao mesmo tempo mantém os olhos abertos para com as condições ao redor, foi mencionada quando Deus prescreveu uma prova aos voluntários do exército de Gideão. Apenas os que estavam atentos, lambendo a água da mão, "assim como lambe o cão", deviam ser escolhidos para a luta conta Midiã. — Jz 7:5.

CAPA. Veja VESTIMENTA.

CAPACETE. Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA.

CAPADÓCIA. Nos dias dos apóstolos, a Capadócia era uma grande região interiorana na parte oriental da Ásia Menor, com um clima predominantemente frio e com florestas esparsas. Ocupava um planalto com elevações de 900 m em grande parte da região. Embora seus limites se alterassem no decorrer da sua história, eram basicamente o Ponto ao N, a Galácia e a Licaônia no O, a Cilícia e os montes Tauro no S, e a Armênia e o alto rio Eufrates no L. Havia muita criação de ovelhas, e também eram abundantes o gado bovino e bons cavalos. O trigo era o principal cereal cultivado.

A Capadócia foi tornada parte do Império Persa sob Ciro, e a região original foi constituída nas duas satrapias do Ponto e da Capadócia. Durante a dinastia selêucida da Síria, permitia-se que governassem reis tributários. O imperador romano Tibério pôs fim a isso em 17 EC, e a Capadócia se tornou província romana, sob a administração de um procurador. Vespasiano ampliou a província em 70 EC, combinando-a com a Armênia, formando assim uma importante província fronteiriça no Leste. A Capadócia tinha importância estratégica por causa das estradas que atravessavam a região, uma delas indo de Tarso, junto ao Mediterrâneo, através do desfiladeiro conhecido como Portas Cilicianas, na cordilheira do Tauro, seguindo pela Capadócia até a província do Ponto, e até portos do Mar Negro.

Os naturais da Capadócia eram evidentemente arianos do ramo jafético, mas povoados judaicos estavam em evidência por volta do segundo século AEC. Judeus da Capadócia estavam presentes em Jerusalém em Pentecostes de 33 EC. (At 2:9) Provavelmente em resultado disso, o cristianismo espalhou-se na Capadócia já bastante cedo, e cristãos capadócios estavam entre aqueles a quem Pedro se dirigiu na sua primeira carta. — 1Pe 1:1.

CAPITÃO DO TEMPLO. O oficial, segundo em dignidade após o sumo sacerdote (At 4:1), encarregado do sacerdócio oficiante e dos levitas, os quais estavam organizados sob capitães de menor categoria para guardar o templo em Jerusalém e para manter a ordem. (Lu 22:4, 52) Havia 24 turmas de levitas, turmas que serviam uma semana por vez, em rodízio, duas vezes por ano. Cada turma provavelmente dispunha também de um capitão, havendo vários capitães de grupos menores.

Os capitães eram homens influentes. Conspiraram junto com os principais sacerdotes em contratar Judas para trair a Jesus. Trouxeram suas forças, junto com os sacerdotes, para prender Jesus. (Lu 22:3, 4, 52) Foi o capitão do templo quem deu caráter oficial à prisão de Pedro e de João no templo. (At 4:1, 3) Numa ocasião posterior, depois de Pedro e alguns dos apóstolos terem sido soltos da prisão por um anjo, o capitão do templo foi com seus oficiais para levá-los perante o Sinédrio dum modo aparentemente legal, sem violência. — At 5:24-26.

CAPITEL. A parte superior e a decoração de remate duma coluna dum edifício. Capitéis maciços encimavam Jaquim e Boaz, as colunas situadas na frente do templo de Salomão. (2Cr 3:15-17) Esses capitéis, e as colunas sobre as quais se assentavam, foram feitos sob a direção do artífice Hirão, por ocasião da construção do templo (1034-1027 AEC), e sobreviveram mais de 400 anos, até que Jerusalém foi saqueada pelos babilônios em 607 AEC. (2Cr 4:11-13; Je 52:17, 22) Em todas as referências a esses capitéis, exceto em uma, usa-se a palavra hebraica ko·thé·reth. Deriva da raiz ka·thár ('cercar'; Jz 20:43) e é aparentada com ké·ther ("toucado"; Est 1:11). A palavra hebraica para "capitel", que ocorre em 2 Crônicas 3:15 (tsé·feth), deriva do verbo radical tsa·fáh, que significa "recobrir". — Êx 25:11.

As próprias colunas eram de cobre fundido, com cerca de 1,70 m de diâmetro e 18 côvados (8 m) de altura. Além disso, os capitéis tinham 5 côvados (2,20 m) de altura. (1Rs 7:15, 16) Em vista das passagens que indicam que os capitéis tinham cinco côvados de altura, diversos peritos concluíram que a referência a "três côvados", em 2 Reis 25:17, é um erro de escriba. Este é o motivo de algumas traduções da Bíblia (por exemplo: BJ, PIB) substituírem "três côvados" com "cinco côvados". Visto que as colunas eram ocas, com paredes de uns 7,5 cm de espessura, é razoável supor-se que os capitéis eram de construção similar e também foram fundidos em moldes de argila "no Distrito do Jordão". — 2Cr 4:17; Je 52:21.

Pela descrição limitada destes capitéis em forma de tigela é impossível descrever sua aparência ou formato exato. Ao redor da parte inferior de cada um havia sete redes de cobre entrelaçadas, e destas pendiam duas fileiras de 100 romãs de cobre cada uma, suspensas por correntes de cobre. Estas estavam dispostas como colares em torno dos capitéis. (1Rs 7:17, 18, 20, 42; 2Cr 3:16) Parece que do lado do capitel junto ao templo, quatro romãs em cada corrente de 100 ficavam um tanto fora da vista, pois Jeremias diz que "vieram a ser noventa e seis, aos lados" (literalmente, "do lado que sopra o vento"; "aos lados", ALA; "que se viam", So). (Je 52:23) Acima destas romãs decorativas havia "um trabalho de lírio" de 4 côvados (1,8 m). — 1Rs 7:19, 22.

Outros capitéis mencionados na Bíblia são os "capitéis" de Nínive (hebr.: kaf·toh·rím), condenados a ser frequentados por 'pelicanos e porco-espinhos'. — Sof 2:13, 14.

CAPRÍDEO. Veja CABRITO (BODE).

CARCA [Piso]. Lugar na fronteira S de Judá, entre Adar (N.º 2) e Azmom. (Jos 15:1-4) A localização exata hoje é incerta. Alguns peritos o identificam provisoriamente com um bem construído reservatório de água na confluência do uádi el-ʽAin e o uádi Umm Hashim, a uns 4 km ESE de Azmom (ʽAin el-Qeseimeh). — Veja CADES, CADES-BARNEIA.

CARCAS. Um dos sete oficiais da corte do Rei Assuero, por meio de quem fez a não atendida convocação da presença de Vasti. — Est 1:10-12; veja OFICIAL DA CORTE.

CARCEREIRO. Alguém que mantém, sob sua custódia, pessoas acusadas de terem violado a lei; um guarda carcerário. Duas palavras gregas são traduzidas nas Escrituras como carcereiro: ba·sa·ni·stés, que significa "atormentador" ou "torturador", e de·smo·fý·lax, composta de de·smós (banda, grilhão) e fý·lax (guarda).

Os carcereiros frequentemente infligiam torturas cruéis aos presos, daí serem chamados de ba·sa·ni·stés. Por exemplo, os devedores eram às vezes lançados na prisão por deixarem de pagar o que deviam. Ali, o carcereiro talvez os açoitasse e torturasse, e não seriam soltos até que, como Jesus disse, tivessem 'pago a última moeda de pouco valor'. (Mt 5:25, 26) Este era também o ponto da ilustração de Jesus sobre o escravo desapiedado. Quando o amo soube o que seu escravo ingrato fizera, "entregou-o aos carcereiros [ba·sa·ni·stais], até que pagasse de volta tudo o que devia". — Mt 18:34, 35; compare isso com Re 14:11, onde "tormento" é tradução de ba·sa·ni·smoú.

Se os presos escapassem, os carcereiros eram passíveis de sofrer a pena imposta ao fugitivo, segundo o costume romano. Por isso, quando Pedro foi liberto da prisão por um anjo, lemos que Herodes "examinou os guardas e mandou que fossem levados à punição". — At 12:19.

Em Filipos, Paulo e Silas foram arrastados perante os magistrados civis, que ordenaram que fossem espancados com varas, e "depois de lhes terem infligido muitos golpes, lançaram-nos na prisão, ordenando ao carcereiro [de·smo·fý·la·ki] que os mantivesse seguros. Ele, por ter recebido tal ordem, lançou-os na prisão interior e prendeu os seus pés no tronco". (At 16:22-24) Daí, no meio da noite, um grande terremoto abriu todas as portas da prisão. Isto fez com que o carcereiro imaginasse que os presos tinham escapado, e compreendendo o severo castigo que receberia neste caso, estava prestes a matar-se quando Paulo o avisou de que todos estavam ali. Estes acontecimentos, junto com as instruções de Paulo, moveram esse carcereiro a ter fé, e ele e os da sua casa se tornaram crentes batizados. — At 16:25-36.

CARCOR. O acampamento ao L do Jordão, do qual as remanescentes forças dos reis midianitas Zeba e Zalmuna foram desbaratadas pela manobra militar de surpresa do juiz Gideão. (Jz 8:10, 11) A localização exata de Carcor hoje é desconhecida.

CARDOS. Veja ABROLHO, CARDO.

CAREÁ [Calvo; Calvície]. Homem de Judá, cujos filhos Joanã e Jonatã eram chefes das forças militares em Judá. Isto era no tempo em que Gedalias foi comissionado pelo rei de Babilônia a governar os judeus que não haviam sido levados ao exílio babilônico, depois da destruição de Jerusalém em 607 AEC. — 2Rs 25:21-23; Je 40:7, 8.

CARGA. Veja FARDO.

CARMELITA. Veja CARMELO N.º 2.

CARMELO [Pomar]. O nome tanto de uma cadeia montanhosa como de uma cidade. A palavra hebraica kar·mél é usada para se referir a um "pomar". — Is 16:10; 32:15; Je 2:7.

1. A cadeia do Carmelo é um contraforte de aresta da cordilheira central de Israel, estendendo-se dali na direção NO, com seu promontório NO chegando a cerca de 180 m do mar Mediterrâneo. A cadeia inteira tem cerca de 50 km de comprimento, estendendo-se desde o Mediterrâneo até a planície de Dotã, além da qual estão as colinas de Samaria. A cadeia possui três seções distintas, estando as serras do NO e do SE separadas por uma bacia rochosa ou planalto de menor altitude no centro. A seção NO, situada ao NO de ʽIsfiya, possui o ponto mais elevado, uns 545 m acima do nível do mar. Não se tem certeza se o nome Carmelo, nos tempos bíblicos, se aplicava à inteira cadeia ou apenas à serra ao NO, que tem cerca de 21 km de extensão. Nos tempos modernos, o nome Monte Carmelo (Jebel el-Karmal; Har Karmel) é atribuído a essa última parte. Jocneão, cidade real cananeia, estava situada no extremo SE desta seção superior e é mencionada como estando "no Carmelo". Megido e Taanaque, nas encostas L da seção SE, não são chamadas assim. — Jos 12:22.

A terra para a qual Israel se mudou quando cruzou o Jordão pode ser dividida geograficamente em três seções básicas, cada uma estendendo-se por todo o comprimento da terra, de N a S: o vale do Jordão, a região das colinas e a planície costeira. A cadeia do Carmelo, porém, interrompe de forma definida este padrão geral. Interrompendo a continuidade das cadeias montanhosas N-S, produz o bem conhecido vale de Jezreel, ou Esdrelom, que flanqueia o lado SE da cadeia do Carmelo. Similarmente, o cabo ou promontório do Carmelo, projetando-se na planície costeira mediterrânea, separa a planície de Aser (ao N do Carmelo) das planícies de Sarom e da Filístia (ao S do Carmelo). Logo ao N do promontório do Carmelo, a orla marítima recua fortemente para formar a baía de Aco, onde a moderna Haifa é agora um importante porto marítimo. O Carmelo constituía um dos marcos limítrofes do território da tribo de Aser. — Jos 19:24-26.

O Carmelo constituía um bloqueio natural para as caravanas e os exércitos que viajavam entre a Mesopotâmia e o Egito. As encostas orientais (que dão para a planície de Aser e para o vale de Jezreel) elevam-se de forma muito íngreme, e, desde tempos antigos, a serra do Carmelo está coberta de densa vegetação, composta de árvores e arbustos, que torna a passagem difícil. Existe uma estreita faixa de terra entre o sopé do promontório do Carmelo e o mar, mas tomar esta rota significava um considerável desvio, e também colocava os exércitos em avanço numa posição vulnerável. Havia passos nas montanhas que levavam do vale de Jezreel através da serra, junto às cidades-fortalezas de Jocneão e Taanaque, mas o passo em Megido, entre essas duas, era muito mais fácil de atravessar, e, assim, era mais vital. Outra rota principal, porém, ia para o S, desde a cidade de Megido na encruzilhada, passava ao largo do restante da cadeia do Carmelo, e então virava para o O, para a costa, através da planície de Dotã.

O Carmelo muitas vezes é associado com regiões férteis, tais como o Líbano, Sarom e Basã. (Is 35:2; Je 50:19) O Rei Uzias, "amante da agricultura", tinha lavradores e vinhateiros no Carmelo (2Cr 26:10), e os restos de numerosos lagares de vinho e de azeite, de pedra lavrada, são ali encontrados. Os profetas simbolizaram os efeitos desastrosos do julgamento adverso de Jeová contra Israel com o secamento da abundante vegetação do Carmelo. (Is 33:9; Am 1:2; Na 1:4) Suas encostas, varridas pelos ventos marítimos, ainda têm pomares, olivais e vinhedos, e na primavera ficam atapetadas de magnífica exibição de flores. No Cântico de Salomão (7:5), a cabeça da donzela sulamita é assemelhada ao Carmelo, a semelhança referindo-se quer aos seus cabelos abundantes, quer à forma como sua cabeça bem modelada se erguia majestosamente sobre o pescoço. A aparência majestosa do Carmelo, em especial o promontório que se eleva dramaticamente da costa, assim como o monte Tabor ascende impressionantemente no vale de Jezreel, também foi usada para representar a imponente figura de Nabucodonosor, ao avançar para a conquista do Egito. — Je 46:18.

O Carmelo era, evidentemente, um dos principais lugares para onde fugia o povo de Samaria ao procurar refúgio. Embora não fosse de maneira alguma a cadeia de maior altitude, sua população esparsa, sua densa cobertura florestal, e também as numerosas cavernas existentes na macia rocha calcária das suas encostas rochosas, serviam para ocultar os refugiados. No entanto, o profeta Amós mostrou que tal refúgio resultaria em ser fútil para aqueles que fugissem do julgamento justo de Jeová. — Am 9:3.

Historicamente, o monte Carmelo figura mormente nas atividades dos profetas Elias e Eliseu. (FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 950) Foi ali que Elias fez que o Rei Acabe reunisse o povo para presenciar a prova entre Baal, representado pelos 450 profetas de Baal, e Jeová, o verdadeiro Deus, representado por Elias. (1Rs 18:19-39) Depois desta prova, Elias mandou levar os falsos profetas para o vale da torrente do

Quisom, que corre ao longo do sopé oriental do Carmelo, antes de terminar na baía de Aco, e ali os abateu. (1Rs 18:40) Do cume do Carmelo, Elias orou pedindo o fim da seca de três anos e meio, e dali seu ajudante viu a pequena nuvem que prenunciava o forte temporal que se seguiu. (1Rs 18:42-45; Tg 5:17) Dali Elias correu pelo menos 30 km até Jezreel, em todo o caminho, com a ajuda de Jeová, sempre à frente do carro de Acabe. — 1Rs 18:46.

Eliseu, sucessor de Elias, depois da separação deles junto ao rio Jordão, partindo de Jericó, via Betel foi até o Carmelo. (2Rs 2:15, 23, 25) Eliseu estava de novo no monte Carmelo, quando a mulher de Suném (a curta distância ao N de Jezreel) veio procurar sua ajuda para o filho dela que morrera. — 2Rs 4:8, 20, 25.

2. Cidade na região montanhosa de Judá (Jos 15:1, 48, 55), identificada pela maioria dos geógrafos como Khirbet el-Kirmil (Horvat Karmel), cerca de 11 km a SSE de Hébron.

O Rei Saul erigiu "um monumento [hebr.: yadh]" no Carmelo, evidentemente comemorando sua vitória sobre os amalequitas. (1Sa 15:12) Embora a palavra hebraica yadh que aparece neste texto usualmente seja traduzida por "mão", ela pode também referir-se a um "monumento" ou memorial erguido, conforme mostrado pelo uso da acompanhante frase verbal "estava erigindo", em conexão com o ato de Saul e pelo fato de que anos mais tarde o "Monumento de Absalão", ou yadh dele, é especificamente chamado de coluna. — 2Sa 18:18.

No tempo em que Davi era fugitivo diante do homicida Saul, "Nabal, o carmelita" (embora evidentemente morasse na vizinha Maom) apascentava seus grandes rebanhos nas pastagens das ondulantes regiões montanhosas do Carmelo. (1Sa 25:2; 30:5; 2Sa 2:2; 3:3) Quando Nabal se negou a compensar com merecidas provisões as forças protetoras de Davi, a iniciativa e o tato da esposa de Nabal, "Abigail, a carmelita", serviram para refrear Davi de ter culpa de sangue. (1Sa 25:2-35) Abigail tornou-se mais tarde esposa de Davi. — 1Sa 25:36-42; 27:3; 1Cr 3:1.

"Hezro, o carmelita", estava entre os poderosos das forças militares de Davi. — 2Sa 23:8, 35; 1Cr 11:26, 37.

CARMESIM. Veja CORES.

CARMI [possivelmente: Vinhateiro].

1. Filho de Rubem e irmão de Anoque, Palu e Esrom; antepassado dos carmitas. Carmi, com os demais da casa de Jacó, foi ao Egito. — Gên 46:9; Êx 6:14; Núm 26:6; 1Cr 5:3.

2. Pai de Acã; descendente de Judá e Tamar, por meio de Zerá e de Zabdi. (Jos 7:1, 18) A designação "filhos de Judá", em 1 Crônicas 4:1, onde se alista Carmi, evidentemente deve ser entendida como incluindo descendentes posteriores. — Veja 1Cr 2:4-7.

CARMITAS [De (Pertencente a) Carmi]. Uma família descendente de Carmi, filho de Rubem. — Núm 26:5, 6.

CARNE. A palavra hebraica ba·sár e a grega sarx referem-se primariamente à substância macia dum corpo físico, quer de homem, animal, ave, quer de peixe; mais especificamente, às partes compostas principalmente de músculo e de gordura. A Bíblia indica que a carne das várias espécies de coisas vivas difere. (1Co 15:39) Os pesquisadores comprovaram isto; notaram que a composição química e a estrutura celular da carne da humanidade, dos animais, das aves e dos peixes variam grandemente.

Jeová Deus, o Criador, é responsável pela existência de toda a carne, e por sua vida. A Bíblia se refere a ele como "Jeová, o Deus dos espíritos [inclusive a força de vida] de toda sorte de carne". (Núm 27:16; compare isso com Gên 6:17.) Ele declara que a alma (vida) da criatura carnal está no sangue. (Le 17:11-14) Originalmente, a vegetação e as frutas, e não a carne, foram dadas ao homem como sua alimentação. Mas, após o Dilúvio, Deus adicionou a carne animal à alimentação, ordenando, porém, que "a carne com a sua alma — seu sangue — não deveis comer". — Gên 9:3, 4.

Comer carne humana era mencionado como uma maldição de Deus. Os israelitas tinham aversão a isso, já que é uma prática naturalmente repulsiva para a mente humana. (De 28:45, 53-57; 2Rs 6:28-30) Tampouco podiam comer a carne de um animal dilacerado por um animal selvagem, ou a de um que simplesmente morrera. Estas seriam detestáveis, além de não se ter feito o devido sangramento. — Êx 22:31; Le 17:15, 16; De 14:21.

Deus ordenou que, antes de comer a carne dum animal, seu povo devia derramar o sangue dele no solo e cobri-lo com pó, tendo cuidado de não comer o sangue, sob pena de morte. (De 12:23-25; Le 7:27) O corpo governante da primitiva congregação cristã repetiu esta proibição, proscrevendo comer animais estrangulados ou não sangrados. Além disso, proibiu comer carne como parte duma oferta de participação em comum feita a ídolos, prática costumeira entre os pagãos daqueles dias. (At 15:19, 20, 28, 29) Os cristãos podem corretamente comer carne, mas o apóstolo Paulo salientou que a carne não é absolutamente essencial ao homem como alimento, ao dizer que, se comer ele carne fosse motivo de tropeço para outros cristãos, 'nunca mais comeria carne alguma'. — Ro 14:21; 1Co 8:13; veja ALIMENTO; ÍDOLOS, CARNES OFERECIDAS AOS.

O corpo carnal dado ao homem devia ser considerado inviolável e não ser deliberadamente submetido a maus-tratos ou mutilado, quer pela própria pessoa, quer por outrem. — Le 19:28; De 14:1; Êx 21:12-27.

Parentesco. O parentesco é expresso pelo termo "carne". Eva era do parentesco mais achegado possível a Adão, no sentido de que era, como ele disse, "osso dos meus ossos e carne da minha carne". (Gên 2:23; veja também Gên 29:14; 37:27; 2Sa 5:1.) O íntimo relacionamento entre marido e mulher é vigorosamente declarado: "Têm de tornar-se uma só carne." (Gên 2:24; Mt 19:5, 6) Paulo chama Jesus de alguém que "procedeu do descendente [lit.: da semente] de Davi segundo a carne". — Ro 1:3; compare isso com 9:3.

A Pessoa, a Humanidade, a Criação Carnal. Uma extensão da ideia de que a carne constitui as partes visíveis e tangíveis do corpo é o uso da palavra "carne" para se referir, de modo geral, ao corpo inteiro. (Le 17:14; 1Rs 21:27; 2Rs 4:34) Também é usada para se referir à pessoa, ou ao indivíduo, como humano de carne. (Ro 7:18; Col 2:1, 5) Toda a humanidade, em especial do ponto de vista de Deus, o Espírito, é descrita como "carne" (Gên 6:12; Is 66:16; Lu 3:6), e, às vezes, a criação animal é incluída. (Gên 7:16, 21) A Bíblia frequentemente contrasta a carne com Deus, o Espírito, destacando em especial a relativa insignificância do homem. (Gên 6:3; 2Cr 32:8; Sal 56:4) Jeová, mesmo em sua posição superior, reconhece este fato, e, concordemente, leva-o em conta ao lidar com a humanidade com transcendente benevolência e misericordiosa longanimidade. — Sal 78:39; compare isso com Sal 103:13-15; 1Pe 1:24, 25.

A palavra "carne" pode referir-se também a uma parte do corpo, especialmente ao órgão genital masculino. Levítico 15:2 declara: "Caso algum homem venha a ter um fluxo do seu órgão genital [literalmente: "da sua carne"], seu fluxo é impuro." — Veja Gên 17:11; Êx 28:42; Ef 2:11; Col 2:13.

Corpos Espirituais. O apóstolo Paulo declara que, "se há corpo físico, há também um espiritual". (1Co 15:44) Isto é corroborado pelo apóstolo Pedro quando diz a pessoas de natureza carnal, humana, chamadas para serem co-herdeiros de Cristo, que elas hão de tornar-se parceiros "na natureza divina", a saber, da vida espiritual nos céus invisíveis. (2Pe 1:4) Isto requer uma mudança de organismo, porque "carne e sangue não podem herdar o reino de Deus, nem pode a corrupção herdar a incorrupção". — 1Co 15:50-54.

O Corpo Carnal de Jesus Cristo. Jesus, que era a "Palavra" de Deus, vindo "do céu", despojou-se da natureza espiritual e "se tornou carne". (Jo 1:1; 1Co 15:47; Fil 2:5-8; Jo 1:14; 1Ti 3:16) Que ele, ao nascer como humano, não era nenhum espírito, e que ele não assumiu simplesmente um corpo carnal, como anjos tinham feito no passado (Gên 18:1-3; 19:1; Jos 5:13-15), é atestado pelo apóstolo João, que diz ser anticristo aquele que nega que Jesus Cristo veio "na carne". (1Jo 4:2, 3) A fim de prover o resgate para a humanidade, e destarte ajudar aqueles que seriam seus associados na chamada celeste, a Palavra tornou-se carne, nascendo todo ele humano, não sendo nenhuma encarnação. A Bíblia nos diz o seguinte: "Visto que as 'criancinhas' são partícipes de sangue e carne, ele participou também similarmente das mesmas coisas." (He 2:14-16) Sua peregrinação terrestre foi mencionada como os "dias da sua carne". (He 5:7) "O pão que eu hei de dar é a minha carne a favor da vida do mundo", disse Jesus. Ele passou a declarar que aqueles que esperavam continuar em união com ele tinham de 'comer sua carne e beber seu sangue'. Não avaliando o significado espiritual, simbólico, de suas palavras, alguns interpretaram essa declaração como canibalística, e ficaram chocados. — Jo 6:50-60.

Durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus, embora ele soubesse que seria morto como sacrifício resgatador, sua carne 'residiu em esperança'. Isto se deu porque sabia que seu Pai o ressuscitaria, que seu sacrifício serviria com bom êxito ao propósito do resgate e que sua carne não veria a corrupção. (At 2:26, 31) Evidentemente, Jeová Deus deu fim ao corpo carnal de Jesus do seu próprio modo (possivelmente desintegrando-o nos átomos dos quais fora constituído). (Lu 24:2, 3, 22, 23; Jo 20:2) Jesus não tomou de volta seu corpo carnal e assim não cancelou o resgate pelo qual foi dado. O apóstolo Pedro atesta que Cristo foi para o céu, o domínio de espíritos, não em carne, "sendo morto na carne, mas vivificado no espírito". (1Pe 3:18) Antes da sua ascensão ao céu, Cristo, como poderosa e imortal pessoa espiritual, materializou de fato diversos corpos carnais, segundo a ocasião, a fim de dar aos seus apóstolos evidência visível, palpável, da sua ressurreição. — Jo 20:13-17, 25-27; 21:1, 4; Lu 24:15, 16.

Na carta de Paulo aos hebreus, a cortina no santuário, diante do Santíssimo, que representava o próprio céu, é mostrada como simbólica, representando a carne de Jesus, porque antes de ele sacrificar seu corpo carnal, o caminho para a vida no céu não estava aberto. — He 9:24; 10:19, 20.

O Homem na Sua Imperfeição. "Carne" é frequentemente usada na Bíblia para representar o homem em sua condição imperfeita, 'concebido em pecado', como descendente do rebelde Adão. (Sal 51:5; Ro 5:12; Ef 2:3) Nos humanos que procuram servir a Deus, 'o espírito [a força impelente emanando do coração figurativo] está ansioso, mas a carne é fraca'. (Mt 26:41) Dentro destes servos de Deus ocorre um constante conflito; o espírito santo de Deus é uma força em prol da justiça, mas a carne pecaminosa guerreia continuamente contra a influência do espírito e exerce pressão para induzir a pessoa a fazer as obras da carne. (Ro 7:18-20; Gál 5:17) As obras da carne pecaminosa são contrastadas com os frutos do espírito, em Gálatas 5:19-23.

O apóstolo Paulo também nos diz que a Lei dada a Israel, mediante Moisés, era "fraca por intermédio da carne", a carne imperfeita daqueles que estavam sob a Lei. A Lei sob a qual servia o sacerdócio arônico era espiritual, provinda de Deus, mas, por meio dela, as pessoas carnais, 'vendidas sob o pecado', foram condenadas, em vez de serem declaradas justas. (Ro 8:3; 7:14; He 7:28) Os sumos sacerdotes da linhagem carnal de Arão, designados pela Lei, não conseguiam oferecer um sacrifício adequado pelo pecado. — He 7:11-14, 23; 10:1-4.

Ao dizer que "a carne . . . não está em sujeição à lei de Deus, de fato, nem pode estar", o apóstolo Paulo não está dizendo que a carne em si mesma necessariamente tem de ser corrupta. Ele nos diz que Jesus Cristo, embora participasse de sangue e carne, tornando-se "igual aos seus 'irmãos'", era "cândido, imaculado, separado dos pecadores", "provado em todos os sentidos como nós mesmos, porém, sem pecado". (Ro 8:7; He 2:14, 17; 4:15; 7:26) Jeová provou que a carne humana pode ser sem pecado: "Deus, por enviar o seu próprio Filho na semelhança da carne pecaminosa e concernente ao pecado, condenou o pecado na carne." (Ro 8:3) Por fim, mediante a provisão do sacrifício de Cristo, todos os que exercerem fé se tornarão perfeitos, e as leis justas de Deus serão então cumpridas perfeitamente pela humanidade. — Re 21:4.

Uma das tentações que influenciaram Eva a pecar era "o desejo da carne". O Diabo usou este contra Cristo, mas falhou. (1Jo 2:16; Gên 3:6; Lu 4:1-4) Os seguidores de Jesus, por permitirem que o espírito de Deus opere livremente na sua vida, e pela benignidade imerecida de Jeová, derrotam a carne pecaminosa. — Gál 5:16, 22-26; Ro 8:1-4.

Não Há Luta com os Que São de Carne. Não é o raciocínio carnal, mas sim o espírito de Jeová, que revela os propósitos de Deus aos homens de fé e os orienta. (Mt 16:17; 1Co 2:9, 14; Ef 3:5) Assim, os cristãos não travam seu combate cristão 'segundo a carne', e não precisam lutar com pessoas de carne e sangue; tampouco usam armas carnais contra alguém. Seu combate é com as "forças espirituais iníquas nos lugares celestiais". (2Co 10:3, 4; Ef 6:12) Confiam, não no 'braço de carne', mas em Jeová, o Espírito. (Je 17:5; 2Co 3:17) Empenham-se, com a ajuda de Deus, a purificar-se de "toda imundície da carne e do espírito", e Deus os encara e julga, não segundo o que são na carne, como o homem muitas vezes faz, mas segundo o que são em sentido espiritual. — 1Co 4:3-5; 2Co 5:16, 17; 7:1; 1Pe 4:6; veja ALMA; DECLARAR JUSTO; ESPÍRITO.

CARPINTEIRO. Artesão, artífice ou trabalhador em madeira. O termo hebraico hha·rásh é a designação geral dum "artífice", "trabalhador" ou "construtor", o qual usava diversos materiais, tais como madeira, metal ou pedra. (2Rs 12:11; 2Cr 24:12; Êx 28:11; 1Cr 14:1) O equivalente grego é tékton, traduzido "carpinteiro" em Mateus 13:55 e Marcos 6:3.

Noé e seus três filhos tiveram muito trabalho de carpintaria a fazer na construção da enorme arca, segundo o modelo dado por Jeová. — Gên 6:14-16.

O carpinteiro em Israel era contratado para construir casas, e, em tempos posteriores, edifícios tais como sinagogas. Embora os prédios na maior parte fossem feitos de pedra ou terra, usava-se madeira, por exemplo, nas vigas e nas portas. As coisas construídas pelo carpinteiro, nos tempos bíblicos, incluíam mobília, tal como mesas, assentos e bancos. Muitos implementos, tais como arados e trenós debulhadores eram parcial ou inteiramente feitos de madeira. (2Sa 24:22) Na construção do tabernáculo e da sua mobília, Bezalel e Ooliabe foram especialmente orientados por Jeová Deus. O espírito dele acentuava as suas habilidades para fazerem o melhor trabalho em madeira, bem como em outros materiais. (Êx 31:2-11) Peritos trabalhadores em madeira foram trazidos de Tiro para a construção da casa de Davi. (2Sa 5:11) Zorobabel usou carpinteiros na construção do segundo templo em Jerusalém. — Esd 3:7.

Jesus não só foi chamado de "o filho do carpinteiro" (Mt 13:55), mas também de "o carpinteiro". (Mr 6:3) Visto que o pai hebreu costumava ensinar ao filho seu próprio ofício, Jesus, sem dúvida, aprendeu o ofício da carpintaria do seu pai adotivo, José.

CARPO [Fruto]. Cristão que morava em Trôade, com quem Paulo deixara seu manto. É provável que Carpo tenha sido o hospedeiro de Paulo, quando o apóstolo esteve ali em visita. — 2Ti 4:13.

CARQUEMIS. Importante centro comercial situado na margem O do Eufrates superior, junto a um dos principais vaus daquele rio. De Nínive até Harã (a apenas uns 88 km ao L de Carquemis) passava uma das principais rotas comerciais, cruzando então o Eufrates em Carquemis e continuando até o vale do Orontes, no Líbano, ponto do qual outras rotas levavam ao Mediterrâneo ou ao S, à Palestina e ao Egito. As caravanas que passavam por ali proviam recursos em forma de impostos, e a cidade, evidentemente, tornou-se bem opulenta.

Devido à sua posição estratégica, tanto comercial como militar, o controle de Carquemis era buscado por reinos agressores desde tempos antigos. O Faraó Tutmés III (de meados do segundo milênio AEC) a saqueou, e Ramsés III também registra um ataque a essa cidade. Assurnasirpal II (do nono século AEC) descreve sua travessia do Eufrates em balsas que boiavam graças a couros de cabra inflados, e afirma ter recebido tributo do rei de Carquemis, que incluía 20 talentos de prata, 100 talentos de cobre, 250 talentos de ferro, além de objetos de ouro, mobília marchetada de marfim, roupas de linho e de lã, e outros despojos.

Carquemis figura no relato bíblico de Isaías 10:9-11, onde Jeová predisse o ataque assírio contra Israel e Judá. O jactancioso governante assírio é descrito como alistando Carquemis entre os reinos que não puderam resistir ao seu poderio. Isto, sem dúvida, refere-se à conquista assíria do reino independente de Carquemis por Sargão II, contemporâneo do Rei Ezequias. Depois disso, Carquemis foi regida por um governador assírio.

Daí, depois da queda de Nínive, a capital assíria, o Faraó Neco levou seu exército para o N, para ajudar os assírios. O Rei Josias, de Judá, tentou insensatamente fazer recuar as forças egípcias em Megido, e foi morto nessa tentativa (c. 629 AEC). (2Cr 35:20-24) Em 625 AEC, travou-se uma decisiva batalha em Carquemis entre os exércitos egípcio e babilônio. Nabucodonosor conduziu os babilônios a uma esmagadora vitória sobre as forças do Faraó Neco, e avançou sobre a Síria e Canaã. Esta batalha assinalou o fim da força imperial egípcia nessas regiões. O relato das Crônicas Babilônicas (B.M. 21946) é paralelo ao relato bíblico em Jeremias 46:2, ambos descrevendo a derrota do exército egípcio.

Fizeram-se escavações no impressionante morro de Carquemis, que fica ao SE da pequena cidade turca de Karkamış (chamada antigamente de Cerablus ou Barak). A cidade síria de Jerablus, na fronteira entre a Turquia e a Síria, faz parte da área, que tem 93-ha. Encontrou-se grande número de documentos na língua atualmente chamada de "hieroglífica hitita", e crê-se que Carquemis foi dominada por cerca de dois séculos, durante a última parte do segundo milênio AEC, pelo império cuja capital era Hatusa. (Todavia, veja HITITAS.) Encontraram-se também relevos que traziam, entre outras coisas, a imagem duma esfinge, bem como o símbolo da cruz ansada, ou ankh, indicando forte influência egípcia.

CARRO. Veículo de duas rodas, puxado a cavalo, desenvolvido primariamente para o campo de batalha, ao invés de para o movimento de tropas por trás das linhas de frente. Todos os quatro termos hebraicos referentes a carro (mer·káv [1Rs 4:26]; mer·ka·váh [Gên 41:43]; ré·khev [1Rs 1:5]; rekhúv [Sal 104:3]) derivam do verbo radical ra·kháv, que significa "montar; seguir em carro". (Gên 24:61; 1Sa 25:42; 1Rs 18:45) O termo grego é hár·ma. (At 8:28) O carro fornecia transporte rápido em combate, dava aos soldados uma plataforma móvel de fogo, e lhes dava o poder de causar impacto psicológico quando se arremessavam sobre as fileiras dos soldados de infantaria. Carros de muitas variações em formato são amplamente ilustrados em antigos monumentos, atestando tanto a sua antiguidade como o seu amplo uso.

Basicamente, o carro em geral consistia numa plataforma montada sobre um único eixo, tendo laterais à altura da coxa; a traseira aberta do carro permitia a entrada rápida e fácil. O carro possuía uma lança e um tipo de canga a que se prendiam cavalos velozes. Não raro os carros eram dotados de equipamento auxiliar, que consistia em aljava e porta-arcos, escudos e lanças. Uma ameaça adicional para os soldados de infantaria era o costume de usar foices de ferro que se estendiam dos cubos das rodas de alguns carros de guerra. (Jos 17:16, 18; Jz 1:19) Quando havia apenas um auriga, as rédeas eram presas em torno da cintura ou dos quadris dele, na batalha, deixando-lhe as mãos livres para manejar as armas. Os carros maiores e mais pesados, com múltiplas parelhas de cavalos, possuíam equipes de dois, três ou quatro homens, tendo um condutor e um ou dois combatentes, e talvez um escudeiro. — Êx 14:7 n.

A velocidade, a maneabilidade e a estabilidade eram fatores fundamentais que foram aprimorados no seu contínuo desenvolvimento. Por exemplo, com a mudança do eixo para mais perto da traseira, conseguiu-se maior maneabilidade e estabilidade. A substituição das rodas maciças por rodas com raios reduziu seu peso e aumentou sua velocidade. (1Rs 7:33) A roda de seis raios se tornou a mais comum, embora algumas rodas fossem projetadas com quatro, oito ou mais raios. O uso de madeiras mais leves, tendo apenas os aprestos de couro, bronze ou ferro, tornou os carros suficientemente leves para que um ou dois homens pudessem transportá-los por terreno acidentado ou pequenos riachos.

Carros de guerra eram empregados por muitas nações pagãs que se opunham a Israel. No Mar Vermelho, em 1513 AEC, o inteiro exército de Faraó, inclusive seus 600 carros de guerra especiais, "e todos os outros carros do Egito", foram destruídos por Jeová. (Êx 14:6, 7; 15:4, 19; Jos 24:6) Na conquista da Terra da Promessa, os israelitas desbarataram os inimigos e queimaram muitos dos seus carros capturados. (Jos 11:4-9) Jabim, o rei de Canaã, manteve os israelitas em servidão por 20 anos, até que Jeová deteve e destruiu sua frota de 900 carros equipados com foices de ferro e comandados por Sísera, no vale da torrente do Quisom. (Jz 4:2, 3, 13, 15, 16; 5:28) Durante o período dos reis de Israel, numa ou noutra ocasião, os filisteus, os egípcios, os etíopes, os sírios, os assírios e os babilônios lutaram contra eles com grandes forças de carros, em certa ocasião com tantos quantos 32.000 carros. (1Sa 13:5; 2Sa 1:6; 1Cr 19:6, 7, 18; 2Cr 12:2, 3; 14:9; 16:8; Is 37:21, 24) Em pronúncias de condenação, os profetas às vezes mencionavam os carros de que essas nações se orgulhavam. — Je 50:37; 51:21; Miq 5:10, 15.

Os lugares mais planos, tais como as planícies da Filístia e o amplo vale de Jezreel, eram mais adequados para a guerra de carros do que as regiões colinosas. Em certa ocasião, os sírios se jactaram de que seus carros venceriam Israel, se este pudesse ser induzido a sair das montanhas para lutar em terreno plano, porque, conforme pensavam, "o Deus [de Israel] é um Deus de montes". No entanto, a grande derrota sofrida pelos sírios provou que Jeová também é "Deus de baixadas". — 1Rs 20:23-30.

Em Israel, não se criou nenhuma força nacional de carros de tamanho apreciável, senão no tempo de Salomão. Isto se devia em grande parte ao aviso de Deus, de que o rei não deveria multiplicar cavalos, como se a segurança daquela nação dependesse deles. Esta restrição limitava o uso de carros, visto que se usavam cavalos para puxar esses veículos. (De 17:16) Quando Samuel avisou sobre a carga que os reis humanos imporiam ao povo, ele lhes disse: "Tomará os vossos filhos e os porá como seus nos seus carros." (1Sa 8:11) Tanto Absalão como Adonias, ao tentarem usurpar o reinado, mandaram fazer para si um carro, com 50 homens para correr na frente dele. (2Sa 15:1; 1Rs 1:5) Quando Davi derrotou o rei de Zobá, preservou 100 cavalos de tiro. — 2Sa 8:3, 4; 10:18.

O Rei Salomão, ao reforçar o exército de Israel, aumentou o número de carros para 1.400. (1Rs 10:26, 29; 2Cr 1:14, 17) Além de Jerusalém, outras cidades conhecidas como "cidades para os carros" dispunham de instalações especiais para se cuidar de todo esse mecanizado equipamento de guerra. — 1Rs 9:19, 22; 2Cr 8:6, 9; 9:25.

Após a morte de Salomão, eram comuns os carros, tanto no reino setentrional como no meridional. O reino setentrional possuía um "chefe da metade dos carros", indicando que havia duas divisões principais de carros. (1Rs 16:9) O Rei Jeú era reconhecido pela maneira furiosa de guiar seu carro. (2Rs 9:20) Diversos reis, tanto de Judá como de Israel, a saber, Acabe, Jeorão, Acazias e Josias, foram fatalmente feridos nos seus carros. — 1Rs 22:34-38; 2Rs 9:21, 24, 27; 2Cr 18:33, 34; 35:23, 24.

O profeta Isaías declarou ao rebelde Israel: "Ai dos que descem ao Egito por auxílio, os que confiam em meros cavalos e os que põem a sua confiança em carros de guerra, por serem numerosos, e em corcéis, por serem muito fortes, mas que não atentaram para o Santo de Israel e que não buscaram o próprio Jeová." — Is 31:1.

O carro era principalmente um instrumento de guerra, e era útil para caçar animais selvagens. Havia também casos em que era usado para fins pacíficos. José, como administrador de alimentos do Egito, andava num carro de honra, secundário apenas ao de Faraó. Andou no seu carro ao encontro do seu pai, quando Jacó entrou no Egito. (Gên 41:43; 46:29) Quando Jacó morreu, muitos carros estavam no cortejo fúnebre que foi do Egito a Macpela, a sepultura que Abraão havia comprado. (Gên 50:7-14) Carros também eram empregados como meio de transporte pelos reis Roboão e Acabe, por Naamã, o chefe do exército sírio, e pelo oficial etíope, que convidou o evangelista Filipe a subir nele na estrada que descia a Gaza. (1Rs 12:18; 18:44, 45; 2Rs 5:21, 26; At 8:28-31, 38) Carros ricamente ornamentados e com guarda-sol levavam governantes vitoriosos em cortejos. Carros sagrados e os cavalos que os puxavam foram dedicados à adoração do sol por governantes apóstatas de Judá. — 2Rs 23:11.

Uso Figurado. Em sentido figurado e profético, os carros são símbolos de guerra, do mesmo modo que o arco e a espada. (Is 21:7, 9; Za 9:10) Diz-se que "os carros de guerra de Deus" são "dezenas de milhares, milhares repetidos vez após vez", denotando o poder invencível de Deus para destruir os seus inimigos. — Sal 68:17; 2Rs 6:17.

CARROÇA. A carroça ou carreta dos tempos antigos era um veículo simples, geralmente de madeira, tendo rodas com raios ou do tipo maciço. (1Sa 6:14) Algumas eram pouco mais do que tablados abertos sobre duas rodas, equipados com um timão ou lança horizontal na frente. Outras possuíam pranchas laterais, e algumas eram cobertas, tais como as seis carroças cobertas (puxadas por dois touros cada uma), usadas para o transporte dos objetos do tabernáculo. (Núm 7:2-9) Os "carros" de Revelação 18:13 talvez indiquem carroças ou carruagens de quatro rodas.

Em Israel, especialmente nos primeiros tempos, a carroça era geralmente puxada por bois, em vez de por cavalos, estes sendo usados especialmente para carros e na guerra. (2Sa 6:3, 6; 15:1; 1Cr 13:7, 9; Pr 21:31) Empregavam-se carroças para transportar pessoas (Gên 45:19, 21, 27; 46:5), cereais e outras cargas. (1Sa 6:7-14; Am 2:13) As usadas na guerra (conforme mencionadas no Sal 46:9) podem ter sido carroças bagageiras militares. No tempo de Isaías, quando os israelitas possuíam muitos cavalos (Is 2:7), usavam-se carroças puxadas por cavalos para debulhar cereais. — Is 28:27, 28.

O profeta Isaías proferiu ai sobre as pessoas 'que puxavam o erro como que com cordas de carroça', indicando possivelmente que tais pessoas estavam tão presas ao pecado como os animais presos com cordas às carroças que puxavam. — Is 5:18.

CARSENA. O primeiro na lista dos sete príncipes da Média e da Pérsia consultados por Assuero sobre o assunto da desobediência de Vasti. — Est 1:14; veja MEMUCÃ.

CARTA [duma raiz que significa "cidade"]. Cidade dada aos levitas meraritas dentre a herança de Zebulão. (Jos 21:34) Alguns acham tratar-se de Catate. — Jos 19:15.

CARTÃ [forma de Quiriataim, significando "Cidade Dupla"]. Cidade de Naftali dada aos levitas gersonitas. (Jos 21:27, 32) Evidentemente, ela é chamada de Quiriataim em 1 Crônicas 6:76. Cartã costuma ser identificada com Khirbet el-Qureiyeh, a uns 21 km ao ONO da bacia de Hulé.

CARTAS. A escrita e o envio de cartas oficiais, comerciais ou pessoais era um meio de comunicação amplamente usado nos tempos antigos. — 2Sa 11:14; 2Rs 5:5-7; 10:1, 2; 2Cr 30:1; Esd 4:7; Is 37:14; Je 29:1; At 9:1, 2; 28:21; 2Te 2:2; He 13:22.

A palavra hebraica sé·fer refere-se a algo escrito e tem os diversos sentidos de "livro; carta; escrita; certificado; escritura; documento escrito". A palavra grega grám·ma pode denotar uma letra do alfabeto ou um documento escrito. (2Co 3:7; At 28:21) O termo grego e·pi·sto·lé é usado apenas com referência a uma mensagem escrita. — 1Co 5:9.

Cartas confidenciais usualmente eram lacradas. (1Rs 21:8) A ação desrespeitosa de Sambalá em enviar uma carta aberta a Neemias, pode ter tido a intenção de que as acusações falsas contidas nela se tornassem de conhecimento público. — Ne 6:5.

Em adição ao papiro, os materiais empregados para se escrever cartas nos tempos antigos incluíam óstracos (cacos de vasos de cerâmica ou de barro) e tabuinhas de argila. Encontraram-se milhares de tabuinhas de argila em Babilônia e em outras regiões. Argila lavada, limpa e lisa era usada para a fabricação da tabuinha, a qual, enquanto ainda úmida, era inscrita por meio dum estilo, imprimindo-se nela caracteres em forma de cunha (cuneiformes). Estas tabuinhas frequentemente eram encerradas em invólucros de argila. No caso de contratos, o texto às vezes era repetido no invólucro. Esses invólucros eram selados e depois cozidos num forno ou secados ao sol, para torná-los duros e resistentes. — Veja ARQUEOLOGIA.

A escrita das cartas muitas vezes era feita por escribas profissionais. Como se dava na corte persa, esses escribas usualmente estavam a postos para escrever a correspondência oficial do governo. (Est 8:9; Esd 4:8) Os escribas também eram encontrados nos mercados perto dos portões da cidade, onde podiam ser contratados pela população para escrever cartas e para registrar transações comerciais.

As cartas eram às vezes entregues por mensageiros (2Rs 19:14), ou por correios (2Cr 30:6; Est 3:13; 8:14). O serviço postal propriamente parece ter-se restringido à correspondência oficial até os tempos dos romanos. De modo que as pessoas medianas tinham de depender de conhecidos ou mercadores viajantes para entregar suas cartas.

Antigamente também se usavam cartas de recomendação. No entanto, o apóstolo Paulo não precisava de tais cartas para os cristãos de Corinto, ou da parte deles, a fim de provar que era ministro. Ele os havia ajudado a se tornarem cristãos, e, portanto, podia dizer-lhes: "Vós mesmos sois a nossa carta, inscrita nos nossos corações, e conhecida e lida por toda a humanidade." — 2Co 3:1-3.

No primeiro século EC, cartas de Paulo, Tiago, Pedro, João, Judas e do corpo governante em Jerusalém contribuíram para o crescimento e para a preservação da unidade e da pureza da congregação cristã. — At 15:22-31; 16:4, 5; 2Co 7:8, 9; 10:8-11.

CARVÃO DE LENHA. Forma negra, quebradiça e porosa de carbono, sendo geralmente o resíduo de lenha parcialmente queimada. Nos tempos antigos, era fabricado por se cobrir uma pilha de lenha com terra e deixá-la queimar lentamente por vários dias, apenas com ar suficiente para a queima dos gases. Isto produzia uma forma relativamente pura de carbono. Tratava-se dum processo lento, que exigia cuidadosa supervisão, mas o carvão de lenha era o combustível preferido quando se desejava obter calor intenso, uniforme, sem fumaça. Não há evidência do uso de carvão mineral, natural, no antigo Israel.

O carvão de lenha, numa fogueira ao ar livre ou num braseiro, era usado para aquecer a pessoa num tempo frio. (Is 47:14; Je 36:22; Jo 18:18) Seu calor uniforme, sem chamas ou fumaça, também o recomendava muito para cozinhar alimentos. (Jo 21:9) Para fundir e refinar metais, o carvão de lenha era indispensável; sem ele, dificilmente seria possível atingir e manter as elevadas temperaturas exigidas para se reduzir os minérios aos metais básicos. (Is 44:12; 54:16; veja REFINAÇÃO, REFINADOR.) Quase do mesmo modo como é feito hoje para se alimentar um alto-forno siderúrgico, o minério era colocado entre camadas de carvão de lenha. Esta prática evidentemente deu origem ao provérbio: A bondade para com um inimigo é como brasas vivas sobre a cabeça dele; amaina sua ira e faz surgir o que há de bom nele. (Pr 25:22; Ro 12:20) O fulgor do carvão de lenha que queima lentamente foi usado pela "mulher sábia" de Tecoa como ilustração da posteridade viva. — 2Sa 14:1-7.

No entanto, as palavras hebraicas ga·hhé·leth e pe·hhám nem sempre são traduzidas por "carvão de lenha", porque muitas vezes referem-se apenas a carvões, carvões acesos ou brasas. Usava-se lenha como combustível para o altar do tabernáculo (Le 1:7, 8; 3:5), e no Dia da Expiação "brasas de fogo de cima do altar" faziam o incenso espalhar-se sobre a Arca do Pacto como uma nuvem. (Le 16:12, 13) Isaías descreveu o idólatra que fabricava um deus com parte da mesma árvore com que acendia um fogo, cozendo pão com as brasas dela. — Is 44:14, 15, 19.

Em diversas passagens das Escrituras usam-se "carvões" em certo sentido figurado ou ilustrativo, indicando alguma espécie de substância incandescente, quente, acesa. (2Sa 22:9; Jó 41:21; Sal 18:8, 12, 13; 140:10; Is 6:6; Ez 1:13; 10:2; 24:11) Os quentes "carvões acesos de giestas-das-vassouras" foram usados para representar a retribuição dada àquele que tem "língua dolosa". — Sal 120:2-4.

CÃS. O embranquecimento da cor do cabelo causado pela redução dos pigmentos no cabelo, em resultado de mudanças na química do organismo. Há casos infrequentes do encanecer prematuro, mas usualmente o encanecer acompanha o envelhecimento. É com relação a este último aspecto que ocorrem na Bíblia o verbo hebraico siv (encanecer), e, mais frequentemente, o substantivo hebraico seh·váh (cãs, cabelos grisalhos, velhice). (Ru 4:15; 1Sa 12:2; 1Rs 2:6, 9; Jó 15:10; Sal 71:18) Abraão, Gideão e Davi viveram até uma "boa velhice [seh·váh]". — Gên 15:15; 25:8; Jz 8:32; 1Cr 29:28.

A Bíblia reconhece tanto a beleza da juventude como o esplendor da velhice. "A beleza dos jovens é o seu poder e o esplendor dos anciãos são as suas cãs." (Pr 20:29) Esta última parte é especialmente veraz se tais pessoas estiverem adorando e servindo a Jeová. "As cãs são uma coroa de beleza quando se acham no caminho da justiça." (Pr 16:31) "Os que foram plantados na casa de Jeová . . . continuarão ainda a medrar durante o encanecer." (Sal 92:13, 14) Não serão abandonados por seu Deus. (Is 46:4) A lei de Jeová é: "Deves levantar-te diante do cabelo grisalho e tens de mostrar consideração para com a pessoa dum homem idoso." — Le 19:32.

O encanecer nada tem que ver com o sexo dos indivíduos; nem constitui um fator a cor natural dos cabelos, quer louros, quer escuros, quer ruivos. O embranquecimento dos cabelos há muito tem sido reconhecido como além do poder do homem ou da ciência médica de impedir ou remediar. Este foi um ponto frisado por Jesus Cristo, depois de dizer que não devíamos jurar por nossa cabeça. — Mt 5:36.

Tingir o cabelo não é algo moderno, porque era praticado pelos gregos e pelos romanos. Segundo Josefo, relatou-se que Herodes, o Grande, tingia seu cabelo grisalho para ocultar a sua idade avançada. — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), XVI, 233 (viii, 1).

CASA. A palavra "casa", conforme usada na Bíblia (hebr.: bá·yith; gr.: oí·kos ou oi·kí·a), pode indicar, entre outras coisas: (1) uma família ou toda a descendência de um único homem (Gên 12:1; 17:13, 23; Ob 17, 18; Miq 1:5); (2) uma casa de moradia (Gên 19:2-4); (3) uma cadeia, ou, figuradamente, um país de escravização (Gên 40:3, 14; Êx 13:3); (4) um lugar de moradia de animais e de aves (Jó 39:6; Sal 104:17; (5) uma teia de aranha (Jó 8:14); (6) uma residência ou palácio real (2Sa 5:11; 7:2); (7) uma linhagem sacerdotal (1Sa 2:35); (8) uma dinastia real (1Sa 25:28; 2Sa 7:11); (9) o tabernáculo ou o templo de Jeová, tanto literais como mencionados em sentido ilustrativo (Êx 23:19; 34:26; 1Rs 6:1; 1Pe 2:5); (10) a morada de Jeová, o próprio céu (Jo 14:2); (11) o santuário de um deus falso (Jz 9:27; 1Sa 5:2; 1Rs 16:32; 2Rs 5:18); (12) o corpo físico, corruptível, de humanos (Ec 12:3; 2Co 5:1-4); (13) o corpo espiritual, incorruptível (2Co 5:1); (14) a sepultura comum (Jó 17:13; Ec 12:5); (15) uma associação de trabalhadores empenhados na mesma profissão (1Cr 4:21) e (16) um prédio para abrigar registros oficiais do estado (Esd 6:1).

Uma forma da palavra hebraica para casa (bá·yith) muitas vezes constitui parte dum nome próprio, como no caso de Betel (que significa "Casa de Deus") e Belém (que significa "Casa de Pão").

Materiais e Métodos de Construção. Antigamente, como hoje, existiam diferentes tipos de moradias. As técnicas de construção variavam segundo a época, a situação econômica do construtor e os materiais disponíveis. Os construtores de Babel, por exemplo, usaram tijolos em vez de pedras, e o "betume servia-lhes de argamassa". — Gên 11:3.

Muitos dos israelitas começaram a morar nas casas dos cananeus desalojados, e, provavelmente, continuaram a utilizar métodos similares de construção por muitos anos depois. (De 6:10, 11) Pelo que parece, preferiam-se casas de pedra (Is 9:10; Am 5:11), visto que eram mais sólidas e mais seguras contra intrusos do que as feitas de tijolos de barro. Ladrões podiam penetrar facilmente em casas de barro por simplesmente abrirem um buraco na parede. (Veja Jó 24:16.) No entanto, nas baixadas, onde havia pouca disponibilidade de pedra calcária e de arenito de boa qualidade, usavam-se tijolos de barro secados ao sol, ou, às vezes, cozidos no forno, para as paredes das moradias. Usavam-se vigas e caibros de sicômoro, de junípero, e, especialmente nas casas melhores, de cedro. — Cân 1:17; Is 9:10.

Arqueólogos escavaram as ruínas de diversos tipos de antigas moradias palestinas. Frequentemente havia um forno no pátio e às vezes também um poço ou uma cisterna. (2Sa 17:18) As ruínas das casas encontradas indicam uma considerável variedade no tamanho. Uma era quadrada com apenas uns 5 m de cada lado, ao passo que outra media 32 por 30 m. Os aposentos frequentemente tinham cerca de 3,5 a 4,5 m de cada lado.

Algumas casas eram construídas no alto dos muros largos das cidades. (Jos 2:15) Mas, preferivelmente, eram construídas sobre rocha (Mt 7:24), e, em geral, não se assentavam os tijolos de barro senão depois de se colocarem duas ou três fiadas de pedras. Quando não se podia erguer uma casa sobre a rocha, com frequência se colocava um alicerce sólido, a sua profundidade abaixo do solo sendo equivalente à altura da parede de pedra acima do solo. Alguns alicerces eram construídos com grandes pedras brutas, e nas junções se colocavam pedras menores; outros eram construídos de pedras lavradas. As ruínas de certa casa de tijolos de barro, escavada por arqueólogos, possuía uma base de pedra da altura de mais de 50 cm; em outra, a construção de pedra se elevava à altura de cerca de 1 m. As paredes de algumas casas tinham cerca de 1 m de espessura. Não raro se aplicava às paredes externas uma espécie de cal (Ez 13:11, 15), e as paredes de tijolos de barro do lado da rua às vezes eram revestidas de seixos para proteger sua superfície.

As pedras de construção eram alinhadas e ligadas com pedras angulares cuidadosamente alisadas e ajustadas. (Veja Sal 118:22; Is 28:16.) Uma mistura de argila e palha comumente servia de argamassa. Às vezes, esta mistura incluía cal, cinzas, fragmentos pulverizados de cerâmica, conchas trituradas ou pedras calcárias. Aplicava-se esta mistura aos tijolos ou às pedras para ligá-los, e era também usada como reboco para as paredes internas. (Le 14:41, 42) Em alguns casos, porém, as pedras eram cortadas com tanta precisão que não era necessário usar argamassa.

Pisos. Os pisos, inclusive os do pátio, consistiam em terra batida ou eram pavimentados com pedra, tijolo ou reboco de cal. Uma depressão no piso costumava servir de lareira, mas usavam-se braseiros para aquecer casas melhores. (Je 36:22, 23) A fumaça saía por uma abertura no telhado. (Os 13:3) Os aposentos de casas palaciais talvez tivessem soalho, igual ao templo. — 1Rs 6:15.

Janelas. Aberturas retangulares nas paredes serviam de janelas. Pelo menos algumas delas eram suficientemente grandes para um homem passar por elas. (Jos 2:15; 1Sa 19:12; At 20:9) Especialmente as janelas que davam para a rua eram equipadas com gelosias. — Jz 5:28; Pr 7:6.

Portas. As portas costumavam ser feitas de madeira e giravam em gonzos (Pr 26:14) fixados em encaixes na madeira, ou na padieira e soleira de pedra. Dois postes eretos de madeira serviam de ombreiras. (Êx 12:22, 23) Embora algumas casas tivessem duas entradas, usualmente apenas uma porta levava da rua para o pátio, do qual se tinha acesso a todos os aposentos da casa.

Decoração interior e mobiliário. Nas casas luxuosas, as paredes dos aposentos eram revestidas de cedro ou de outras madeiras valiosas, e besuntadas de vermelhão. (Je 22:14; Ag 1:4) As "casas de marfim" de alguns abastados evidentemente possuíam aposentos revestidos de madeira incrustrada de marfim. (1Rs 22:39; Am 3:15) Além dos vários utensílios culinários, vasos, cestos e outros itens domésticos, a mobília da casa podia incluir camas ou divãs, cadeiras, banquinhos, mesas e candelabros. (Veja 2Sa 4:11; 2Rs 4:10; Sal 41:3; Mt 5:15.) A mobília das casas de algumas pessoas ricas era embelezada com incrustações de marfim, ouro e prata. — Veja Est 1:6; Am 3:12; 6:4.

Quarto de terraço e de andar superior. A maioria dos terraços ou eirados eram planos, e a Lei exigia que os terraços dos israelitas fossem cercados de um parapeito para impedir acidentes. (De 22:8) Quando se dava ao terraço uma pequena inclinação, esta permitia o escoamento da água da chuva. O terraço pousava sobre fortes vigas de madeira que iam de uma parede a outra. Colocavam-se caibros menores de madeira atravessados nestas vigas, que, por sua vez, eram cobertos de ramos, juncos e coisas semelhantes. Em seguida havia uma camada de terra, de vários centímetros de espessura, que era reboco grosso de argila, ou de argila e cal. Podia-se facilmente fazer uma abertura nesse terraço de terra, como foi feita por alguns homens que se esforçaram a levar um paralítico à presença de Jesus, para que fosse curado. (Mr 2:4) As vigas do terraço costumavam ser sustentadas por uma fileira de postes retos de madeira que descansavam sobre bases de pedra. Em tais terraços ou telhados podia brotar grama (Sal 129:6), e era difícil impedir que tivessem goteiras. (Pr 19:13; 27:15; Ec 10:18) Provavelmente, antes de a estação chuvosa começar, consertavam-se e alisavam-se os terraços ou telhados para permitir melhor escoamento da água.

Os terraços eram pontos de considerável atividade, tanto em tempos pacíficos como em calamitosos. (Is 22:1; Je 48:38) Deles podiam ser feitos anúncios, ou se podia avisar rapidamente o público sobre certas ações. (2Sa 16:22; Mt 10:27) Secava-se o linho sobre os terraços (Jos 2:6), e as pessoas podiam ali conversar (1Sa 9:25), andar numa noitinha fresca (2Sa 11:2), empenhar-se na adoração verdadeira ou na falsa (Je 19:13; Sof 1:5; At 10:9), ou até mesmo dormir (1Sa 9:26). Na Festividade do Recolhimento, erigiam-se barracas sobre os terraços e nos pátios das casas. — Ne 8:16.

Com frequência se construía no alto da casa um quarto de terraço ou de andar superior. Este era um aposento agradável e fresco, que frequentemente servia de quarto de hóspede. (Jz 3:20; 1Rs 17:19; 2Rs 1:2; 4:10) Naturalmente, algumas casas eram prédios de dois pavimentos, com um andar superior normal. Numa grande sala de andar superior, quer um quarto de terraço ou uma sala de sobrado, Jesus celebrou a última Páscoa com seus discípulos e instituiu a comemoração da Refeição Noturna do Senhor. (Lu 22:11, 12, 19, 20) E, no dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, cerca de 120 discípulos achavam-se, pelo que parece, numa sala de andar superior duma casa em Jerusalém, quando o espírito de Deus foi derramado sobre eles. — At 1:13-15; 2:1-4.

Geralmente, escadarias externas, ou, nas casas mais pobres, escadas de madeira levavam do pátio ao terraço. Portanto, quando necessário, alguém no terraço podia partir sem ter de entrar na casa. Visto que muitas casas eram construídas de modo contíguo, não raro era possível passar-se andando de terraço em terraço. Esses fatores talvez tivessem algo que ver com o significado do conselho de Jesus em Mateus 24:17 e em Marcos 13:15. Nas casas melhores, uma escada interna dava acesso ao pavimento superior.

A Lei Protegia Direitos de Propriedade. Era do propósito de Jeová que seu povo obediente tivesse a alegria de viver em casa própria. (Veja Is 65:21.) Ocupar outro a casa de quem a construiu era uma calamidade que havia de sobrevir aos desobedientes. (De 28:30; La 5:2) E o homem que ainda não tivesse inaugurado a sua nova casa estava isento do serviço militar. — De 20:5, 6.

Certas provisões da lei de Deus para Israel protegiam os direitos de propriedade. A Lei condenava a cobiça dos bens de outrem, inclusive a sua casa (Êx 20:17), e Jeová, por meio dos seus profetas, denunciou o confisco ilegal de casas. (Miq 2:2; compare isso com Ne 5:1-5, 11.) O credor não podia à força entrar na casa do seu devedor e apoderar-se dum penhor. (De 24:10, 11) O israelita que santificasse sua casa para Jeová podia comprá-la de volta por pagar ao santuário 120 por cento do valor calculado dela. (Le 27:14, 15) Também, os que tiveram de vender sua casa retinham os direitos da recompra, pelo menos por algum tempo. As casas em aldeias sem muros podiam ser compradas de volta pelos seus donos originais, e elas tinham de ser devolvidas a eles no ano do jubileu. Mas as casas em cidades muradas tornavam-se propriedade permanente do comprador, se não eram compradas de volta no prazo estipulado de um ano, durante o qual o direito da readquisição permanecia em vigor. O direito de readquisição era permanente no caso das casas situadas nas cidades muradas dos levitas. Se não eram compradas de volta mais cedo, todas as casas anteriormente pertencentes aos levitas tinham de ser devolvidas aos seus donos originais no ano do jubileu. — Le 25:29-33.

Lugar de Instrução Espiritual. Desde os tempos mais antigos, o lar funcionava como centro de instrução na adoração pura. A lei de Deus para Israel mandava especificamente que os pais ensinassem a seus filhos quando sentados em casa, bem como em outras ocasiões. (De 6:6, 7; 11:19) Também, a lei de Deus devia ser escrita, evidentemente em sentido figurado, nas ombreiras das portas das suas casas (De 6:9; 11:20), e o lar devia ser mantido livre de todos os acessórios da idolatria. (De 7:26) Visto que a casa era usada para tal propósito sagrado, as casas infectadas com "lepra maligna" deviam ser derrubadas. (Veja LEPRA.) A lei a respeito das casas leprosas lembraria aos israelitas que eles somente podiam morar em casas que estivessem limpas do ponto de vista de Deus. — Le 14:33-57.

Com o estabelecimento do cristianismo, a pregação e o ensino de casa em casa tornaram-se parte destacada da adoração verdadeira. (At 20:20) Os seguidores de Jesus valiam-se da hospitalidade que lhes era oferecida pelos 'merecedores' ou 'amigos da paz', e ficavam na casa de tais pessoas até terminarem seu ministério em determinada cidade. (Mt 10:11; Lu 10:6, 7; veja PREGADOR, PREGAÇÃO ["De Casa em Casa"].) Com frequência, grupos ou congregações de cristãos se reuniam regularmente em casas para considerar a Palavra de Deus. (Ro 16:5; 1Co 16:19; Col 4:15; Flm 2) Mas, qualquer pessoa que se desviasse do ensino de Cristo não era bem-vinda em casas particulares. — 2Jo 10.

CASA DA FLORESTA DO LÍBANO. Parte do conjunto de prédios governamentais erguidos pelo Rei Salomão durante seu programa de edificações, de 13 anos, depois de ter concluído o templo de Jerusalém (1027-1014 AEC). O prédio era evidentemente usado para armazenagem, e para a exposição de valiosas armas e utensílios. Este edifício, situado ao S do templo, recebeu seu nome quer por ter sido construído de cedro-do-líbano, quer porque suas muitas grandes colunas de cedro faziam lembrar as florestas de lá.

A Casa da Floresta do Líbano tinha 100 côvados (44 m) de comprimento, 50 côvados (22 m) de largura e 30 côvados (13 m) de altura. Parece ter tido paredes de pedra (1Rs 7:9), tendo vigas de cedro, cujas extremidades estavam inseridas nas paredes e que eram adicionalmente apoiadas por quatro fileiras de colunas ("quatro", no texto hebraico; "três" na Septuaginta grega). Acima das colunas havia, evidentemente, aposentos revestidos de cedro. Algumas reconstituições sugeridas desta casa apresentam três níveis de aposentos acima das colunas, e estes dão para um pátio aberto no meio do prédio. Diz-se que os aposentos possuíam uma "abertura de iluminação defronte de outra abertura de iluminação, em três fileiras sobrepostas". Isto parece significar que, voltadas para o pátio, havia aberturas ou grandes janelas que davam para as janelas correspondentes nos aposentos do lado oposto do pátio. Ou, possivelmente significa que em cada aposento havia uma janela que dava para o pátio, e uma que dava para o lado externo. As entradas (provavelmente os vãos de portas que davam para os aposentos e talvez entre eles) "formavam retângulo com a guarnição". Assim, não tinham forma de arco, nem eram abobadadas. As janelas tinham formato similar. — 1Rs 7:2-5.

Surge um problema quanto ao número de fileiras de colunas, já mencionadas. Pois o texto hebraico diz que havia quatro fileiras, e, mais tarde, menciona 45 colunas, e então diz: "Eram quinze por fileira." (1Rs 7:2, 3) Alguns pensam que o texto se aplica neste caso aos aposentos em três níveis, 15 aposentos por fileira, e que pode ter havido um número maior de colunas colocadas nas quatro fileiras. Outros preferem a leitura da Septuaginta, de "três" fileiras de colunas. Diversas traduções alteram a versão do texto para que o número "quarenta e cinco" se refira às vigas, em vez de às colunas ou pilares eretos. — Veja ALA, NE, NAB, AT, AS.

Depois de Salomão ter terminado a casa, colocou nela 200 escudos grandes de liga de ouro, cada um revestido de 600 siclos de ouro (no valor de c. US$ 77.000), e 300 broquéis de liga de ouro, cada um revestido de três minas de ouro (no valor de c. US$ 19.300). Isto seria ouro no valor de mais de 21 milhões de dólares americanos nos escudos e nos broquéis. Além disso, havia um número não especificado de vasos de ouro usados na casa. (1Rs 10:16, 17, 21; 2Cr 9:15, 16, 20) Esses escudos de ouro foram levados pelo Rei Sisaque, do Egito, durante o reinado do filho de Salomão, Roboão. Roboão substituiu-os com escudos de cobre, os quais entregou aos cuidados dos chefes dos batedores, os guardas da entrada da casa do rei. — 1Rs 14:25-28; 2Cr 12:9-11.

A Casa da Floresta do Líbano é também chamada de "a armaria da casa da floresta" em Isaías 22:8.

CASA DE AMARRAÇÃO DOS PASTORES. Lugar na estrada de Jezreel a Samaria, onde Jeú, junto a uma cisterna, encontrou e matou os irmãos do Rei Acazias de Judá. (2Rs 10:12-14) O nome evidentemente indica uma casa em que se amarravam as ovelhas para facilitar o trabalho da tosquia. Algumas versões vertem behth·ʽé·qedh como "casa de reunião", indicando uma estalagem em que "os pastores" (ha·ro·ʽím) se reuniam; outras simplesmente transliteram o nome hebraico, considerando-o como nome duma cidade. Em geral é identificado com Beit Qad (Bet Qad), a uns 6 km ao ENE da moderna Jenin. Neste lugar há diversas cisternas.

CASAMENTO. A união de um homem e de uma mulher como esposo e esposa, segundo o padrão estabelecido por Deus. O casamento é uma instituição divina, autorizada e estabelecida por Jeová no Éden. O casamento traz à existência a unidade familiar, o círculo familiar. Sua finalidade básica era a reprodução dos membros da família humana, para trazer à existência mais criaturas da espécie humana. Jeová, o Criador, fez macho e fêmea, e ordenou o casamento como o arranjo apropriado para a multiplicação da raça humana. (Gên 1:27, 28) O primeiro casamento humano foi realizado por Jeová, conforme descrito em Gênesis 2:22-24.

O casamento visava formar um vínculo permanente de união entre o homem e a mulher, para que pudessem ser prestativos um ao outro. Vivendo juntos em amor e confiança, podiam usufruir grande felicidade. Jeová criou a mulher como cônjuge para o homem, por usar a costela do homem como base, dessa maneira tornando a mulher a parenta carnal mais próxima do homem na Terra, sua própria carne. (Gên 2:21) Conforme Jesus indicou, não foi Adão, e sim Deus, quem disse: "Por isso é que o homem deixará seu pai e sua mãe, e tem de se apegar à sua esposa, e eles têm de tornar-se uma só carne." A fraseologia deste texto torna evidente que a monogamia era o padrão original para o casamento, aos olhos de Jeová Deus. — Mt 19:4-6; Gên 2:24.

O casamento era o modo normal de vida entre os hebreus. Não existe nenhuma palavra para celibatário nas Escrituras Hebraicas. Uma vez que o propósito básico do casamento era o de ter filhos, é compreensível a expressão de bênção da família de Rebeca: "Que tu . . . te tornes milhares de vezes dez mil" (Gên 24:60), também o apelo de Raquel a Jacó: "Dá-me filhos, senão serei uma mulher morta." — Gên 30:1.

O casamento era um assunto que afetava a família, e não somente a família, mas a inteira tribo ou comunidade patriarcal, porque podia influir na força da tribo, bem como na sua economia. Assim, era natural e aparentemente necessário que a escolha duma esposa, e o arranjo de todos os assuntos contratuais e financeiros relacionados com isso, fossem decididos pelos pais ou guardiães envolvidos, embora às vezes se procurasse obter o consentimento das partes envolvidas (Gên 24:8) e a atração romântica frequentemente acompanhasse esses arranjos. (Gên 29:20; 1Sa 18:20, 27, 28) Os passos iniciais ou pedidos de casamento geralmente eram feitos pelos pais do moço, mas às vezes pelo pai da moça, especialmente quando havia uma diferença de categoria social. — Jos 15:16, 17; 1Sa 18:20-27.

Parece ter sido geralmente costumeiro que o homem procurasse uma esposa no círculo de suas próprias relações ou tribo. Este princípio é indicado pela declaração de Labão a Jacó: "É melhor para mim dá-la [minha filha] a ti do que dá-la a outro homem." (Gên 29:19) Isto era especialmente observado entre os adoradores de Jeová, conforme exemplificado por Abraão, que mandou buscar uma esposa para seu filho Isaque dentre seus parentes em seu próprio país, em vez de tomar uma das filhas dos cananeus entre os quais morava. (Gên 24:3, 4) O casamento com os que não adoravam a Jeová não era visto com bons olhos, e era fortemente desencorajado. Era uma forma de deslealdade. (Gên 26:34, 35) Sob a Lei, foram proibidas as alianças matrimoniais com pessoas dentre as sete nações cananeias. (De 7:1-4) No entanto, um soldado talvez se casasse com uma virgem cativa de outra nação estrangeira, depois de ela ter passado por um período de purificação, durante o qual ela pranteava seus pais mortos e se livrava de todos os aspectos de suas anteriores conexões religiosas. — De 21:10-14.

Preço de Noiva. Antes de ser fechado o contrato de casamento, o moço, ou o pai do moço, tinha de pagar o preço de noiva ou preço de casamento ao pai da moça. (Gên 34:11, 12; Êx 22:16; 1Sa 18:23, 25) Isto era, sem dúvida, considerado como compensação pela perda dos serviços da filha, e pelos esforços e despesas incorridas pelos pais em cuidar dela e em educá-la. Às vezes, o preço de noiva era pago em serviços prestados ao pai. (Gên 29:18, 20, 27; 31:15) Na Lei, havia um preço de compra fixado para uma virgem não noiva que fosse seduzida por um homem. — Êx 22:16.

Cerimônia. Quanto ao próprio casamento, a modalidade central e característica era a de levar solenemente a noiva da casa do pai dela, na data combinada, para a casa do marido, ato em que se expressava o significado do casamento como representando a admissão da noiva na família de seu marido. (Mt 1:24) Isto constituía o casamento nos dias patriarcais, antes da Lei. Era um assunto inteiramente civil. Não havia nenhuma cerimônia ou formalidade religiosa, e nenhum sacerdote ou clérigo oficiava ou validava o casamento. O noivo levava a noiva para sua casa, ou para a tenda ou casa de seus pais. O assunto se tornava de conhecimento público, sendo reconhecido e registrado, e o casamento era válido. — Gên 24:67.

Todavia, assim que os arranjos de casamento eram concluídos e as partes ficavam noivas, eram consideradas como já estando vinculadas em casamento. As filhas de Ló ainda estavam na casa dele, sob a jurisdição dele, mas os homens que eram noivos delas foram chamados de "genros [de Ló], que haviam de tomar suas filhas". (Gên 19:14) Embora Sansão jamais se casasse com certa filisteia, mas fosse somente noivo dela, ela foi mencionada como sua esposa. (Jz 14:10, 17, 20) A Lei declarava que, se uma moça noiva cometesse fornicação, ela e o homem culpado deviam ser mortos. Se ela fosse violentada, contra sua vontade, o homem devia ser morto. No entanto, qualquer caso que envolvesse uma moça que não era noiva era resolvido de forma diferente. — De 22:22-27.

Os casamentos eram registrados. Sob a Lei, os casamentos, bem como os nascimentos resultantes dessa união, eram anotados nos registros oficiais da comunidade. Por este motivo, temos a genealogia exata de Jesus Cristo. — Mt 1:1-16; Lu 3:23-38; compare isso com Lucas 2:1-5.

Celebração. Ao passo que o próprio casamento não consistia em nenhuma cerimônia formal, a celebração dos casamentos em Israel, contudo, era muitíssimo alegre. No dia das núpcias, na sua própria casa, a noiva usualmente fazia preparativos elaborados. Primeiro, ela se banhava e esfregava no corpo óleo perfumado. (Veja Ru 3:3; Ez 23:40.) Às vezes, auxiliada por mulheres ajudantes, ela colocava faixas para o busto e um manto branco, muitas vezes ricamente bordado, segundo sua condição financeira. (Je 2:32; Re 19:7, 8; Sal 45:13, 14) Ela se adornava com enfeites e joias, se tivesse os meios para isso (Is 49:18; 61:10; Re 21:2), e então se cobria com uma veste leve, uma forma de véu, que se estendia da cabeça aos pés. (Is 3:19, 23) Isto explica porque Labão pôde enganar tão facilmente a Jacó, de modo que Jacó não sabia que Labão lhe estava dando Leia, em vez de Raquel. (Gên 29:23, 25) Rebeca cobriu a cabeça com um lenço ao se aproximar de Isaque. (Gên 24:65) Isto simbolizava a sujeição da noiva ao noivo — à autoridade dele. — 1Co 11:5, 10.

O noivo, semelhantemente, vestia-se das suas melhores roupas e não raro tinha um lindo turbante e uma grinalda na cabeça. (Cân 3:11; Is 61:10) Escoltado por seus amigos, deixava sua casa à noitinha para se dirigir à casa dos pais da noiva. (Mt 9:15) Dali, o cortejo se dirigia à casa do noivo ou à casa de seu pai, acompanhado por músicos e cantores, e usualmente por pessoas que levavam lâmpadas.

As pessoas ao longo do trajeto se interessavam grandemente no cortejo. Podiam-se ouvir as vozes jubilantes da noiva e do noivo. Alguns se juntavam ao cortejo, especialmente donzelas que portavam lâmpadas. (Je 7:34; 16:9; Is 62:5; Mt 25:1) O noivo talvez gastasse considerável tempo na sua casa, e, por outro lado, talvez houvesse certa demora antes de o cortejo deixar a casa da noiva, de modo que já seria bem tarde, e alguns que esperavam ao longo do caminho talvez ficassem sonolentos e adormecessem, como na ilustração de Jesus a respeito das dez virgens. Talvez se pudesse ouvir o canto e a alegria a certa distância à frente, clamando aqueles que os ouviam: "Aqui está o noivo!" Os ajudantes estavam prontos para saudar o noivo quando ele chegasse, e os convidados para a ceia nupcial entrariam na casa. Depois que o noivo e seus acompanhantes entravam na casa e fechavam a porta, era tarde demais para entrarem os convidados atrasados. (Mt 25:1-12; 22:1-3; Gên 29:22) Era considerado grave insulto rejeitar o convite para a festa de casamento. (Mt 22:8) Talvez se fornecessem mantos para os convidados (Mt 22:11), e seus lugares respectivos na festa eram frequentemente designados por aquele que fazia o convite. — Lu 14:8-10.

Amigo do Noivo. "O amigo do noivo" tinha grande participação nos arranjos, e era considerado como ajuntando a noiva e o noivo. O amigo do noivo se regozijava em ouvir a voz do noivo conversando com a noiva, e podia então sentir-se contente por terem os seus deveres sido abençoados com um final bem-sucedido. — Jo 3:29.

Prova da Virgindade. Depois da ceia, o marido levava sua noiva para a câmara nupcial. (Sal 19:5; Jl 2:16) Na noite das núpcias, usava-se um lençol ou uma roupa, que era então guardado ou dado aos pais da esposa, de modo que as manchas de sangue da virgindade da moça constituíssem proteção legal para ela no caso de ela ser mais tarde acusada de não ter sido virgem, ou de ter sido prostituta antes de seu casamento. De outra forma, ela podia ser apedrejada até morrer, por ter-se apresentado no casamento como virgem imaculada, e por trazer grande vitupério à casa de seu pai. (De 22:13-21) Este costume de guardar o lençol continuou entre alguns povos do Oriente Médio até tempos recentes.

Privilégios e Deveres. O marido era cabeça da casa, e cabia-lhe a decisão final sobre assuntos que afetavam o bem-estar e a economia da família. Se julgasse que a família seria adversamente afetada, podia até anular um voto de sua esposa ou de sua filha. Esta autoridade, como é evidente, também era do homem que era noivo. (Núm 30:3-8, 10-15) O marido era o senhor, o amo da casa, e era considerado como dono (hebr.: bá·ʽal) da mulher. — De 22:22.

Provérbios 31 descreve alguns dos deveres da esposa para com seu marido, ou dono, os quais incluíam as tarefas domésticas, fazer roupas e cuidar delas, até mesmo parte das compras e vendas, e a supervisão geral da casa. A mulher, embora sujeita ao marido, e, em certo sentido, sendo propriedade dele, usufruía excelente situação e muitos privilégios. O marido dela devia amá-la, e isto se dava mesmo que ela fosse uma esposa secundária, ou uma esposa que tinha sido tomada como cativa. Não devia ser maltratada, e se lhe garantia o alimento, a roupa e o abrigo, e os deveres conjugais, sem diminuição. Também, o marido não podia constituir como seu primogênito o filho da esposa favorita, em detrimento do filho da esposa "odiada" (ou menos preferida). (Êx 21:7-11; De 21:11, 14-17) Os fiéis homens hebreus amavam suas esposas, e, se a esposa era sábia e agia em harmonia com a lei de Deus, não raro o marido lhe dava ouvidos ou aprovava as ações dela. — Gên 21:8-14; 27:41-46; 28:1-4.

Mesmo a virgem que não era noiva, mas que fosse seduzida por um homem não casado, era protegida, pois, caso o pai dela permitisse, o sedutor tinha de esposar a moça, e jamais podia divorciar-se dela durante toda a vida. (De 22:28, 29) Se a esposa fosse acusada formalmente pelo marido de não ter sido virgem na ocasião do casamento, e a acusação se provasse falsa, o marido era multado e jamais podia divorciar-se dela. (De 22:17-19) A mulher acusada de adultério secreto, caso inocente, devia então ser engravidada pelo marido, de modo que pudesse ter um filho e assim dar testemunho público da sua inocência. A dignidade da pessoa da esposa era respeitada. Eram proibidas as relações sexuais com ela durante a menstruação. — Le 18:19; Núm 5:12-28.

Casamentos Proibidos. Além da proibição de alianças matrimoniais com os que não eram adoradores de Jeová, em especial com as sete nações na terra de Canaã (Êx 34:14-16; De 7:1-4), eram proibidos outros casamentos quando havia certo grau de consanguinidade ou afinidade. — Le 18:6-17.

Proibia-se ao sumo sacerdote casar-se com uma mulher viúva, divorciada ou violentada, ou com uma prostituta; ele devia casar-se apenas com uma virgem do seu povo. (Le 21:10, 13, 14) Os outros sacerdotes não podiam casar-se com uma prostituta ou com uma mulher violentada, nem com uma mulher divorciada do marido. (Le 21:1, 7) De acordo com Ezequiel 44:22, podiam casar-se com uma virgem da casa de Israel, ou com uma viúva que fosse viúva dum sacerdote.

Se uma filha herdasse uma propriedade, ela não devia casar-se com alguém de outra tribo. Isto impedia que a possessão hereditária circulasse de tribo em tribo. — Núm 36:8, 9.

Divórcio. Por ocasião da instituição do casamento pelo Criador, ele não fez nenhuma provisão para divórcio. O homem deve apegar-se à sua esposa, e "eles têm de tornar-se uma só carne". (Gên 2:24) Portanto, o homem teria uma só esposa, considerada como uma só carne com ele. Foi somente após a queda do homem, e as consequentes imperfeições e degradações, que surgiu o divórcio.

Ao dar a Lei a Israel, Deus não escolheu naquela ocasião impor o padrão original, mas regulou o divórcio para que não causasse a dissolução do arranjo familiar em Israel ou resultasse em indevida dificuldade. Todavia, no tempo devido de Deus, seu padrão original foi restabelecido. Jesus declarou o princípio que governa a congregação cristã — que a "fornicação" (gr.: por·nei·a) é a única base válida para um divórcio. Explicou que Deus não impôs esta norma por meio de Moisés em consideração da dureza de coração dos israelitas. — Mt 19:3-9; Mr 10:1-11.

Na congregação cristã, portanto, fora da morte, que automaticamente rompe o vínculo marital, a única outra maneira de ser rompido é por motivo de "fornicação", que faz com que a pessoa ofensora se torne uma só carne com um parceiro ou parceira ilícitos. Portanto, pode ser usada por parte da pessoa inocente como base para a dissolução do casamento, se quiser fazer isso, e a pessoa inocente pode então casar-se de novo. (Mt 5:32; Ro 7:2, 3) À parte de fazerem esta concessão no caso de "fornicação" (gr.: por·nei·a), as Escrituras Gregas aconselham aos cristãos nem mesmo separar-se de seu cônjuge, quer crente, quer incrédulo, e requerem que, caso façam isso, não tenham relações sexuais com outra pessoa. — 1Co 7:10, 11; Mt 19:9.

Sob a Lei, o marido podia divorciar-se da esposa por motivo de algo 'indecente' da parte dela. Isto, naturalmente, não incluiria o adultério, porque este acarretava a pena de morte. Podiam ser ofensas tais como grande desrespeito pelo marido ou pela casa do pai deste, ou algo que lançasse vitupério sobre a sua casa. Requeria-se que o marido lhe fornecesse por escrito um certificado de divórcio, o que subentendia que, aos olhos da comunidade, ele tinha de ter motivos suficientes para se divorciar dela. Visto que o certificado era um documento legal, subentende-se que envolvia uma consulta aos anciãos ou autoridades da sua cidade. A mulher podia então casar-se de novo, sendo protegida pelo certificado de qualquer subsequente acusação de adultério. Não se permitia o divórcio a um homem que havia seduzido a moça antes do casamento, ou quando ele, após o casamento, levantava a acusação falsa de ela o ter enganado ao afirmar ser virgem na época do seu casamento. — De 22:13-19, 28, 29.

Após o divórcio, se a mulher se casasse com outro homem e este mais tarde se divorciasse dela ou morresse, o primeiro marido não se podia casar de novo com ela. Isto servia para impedir qualquer trama de provocar um divórcio do segundo marido ou talvez até mesmo a sua morte, para que o casal original se pudesse casar de novo. — De 24:1-4.

Jeová odiava o divórcio injusto, especialmente quando uma adoradora fiel sua sofria traição com o fim de se conseguir outro casamento com uma mulher pagã que não era membro do seu escolhido povo pactuado. — Mal 2:14-16; veja DIVÓRCIO.

Poligamia. Visto que o padrão original de Deus para a humanidade era que o marido e a esposa se tornassem uma só carne, não se intencionava a poligamia, e esta é proibida na congregação cristã. Os superintendentes e os servos ministeriais, que devem dar o exemplo para a congregação, devem ser homens que não têm mais de uma esposa viva. (1Ti 3:2, 12; Tit 1:5, 6) Isto se harmoniza com aquilo que o verdadeiro casamento é usado para representar, a saber, o relacionamento de Jesus Cristo e sua congregação, a única esposa que Jesus possui. — Ef 5:21-33.

Como no caso do divórcio, a poligamia, embora não fosse o arranjo original de Deus, foi tolerada até o tempo da congregação cristã. A poligamia começou não muito depois do desvio de Adão. A primeira menção dela na Bíblia refere-se a um descendente de Caim, Lameque, a respeito de quem ela diz: "[Ele] passou a tomar para si duas esposas." (Gên 4:19) Quanto a alguns anjos, a Bíblia menciona que, antes do Dilúvio, "os filhos do verdadeiro Deus . . . foram tomar para si esposas, a saber, todas as que escolheram". — Gên 6:2.

O concubinato era praticado sob a lei patriarcal e sob o pacto da Lei. A concubina tinha uma situação legal; a posição dela não era uma questão de fornicação ou de adultério. Sob a Lei, se o filho primogênito dum homem fosse filho da sua concubina, era este filho quem receberia a herança de primogênito. — De 21:15-17.

O concubinato e a poligamia, sem dúvida, habilitaram os israelitas a aumentar numericamente com muito mais rapidez, e, assim, ao passo que Deus não estabeleceu esses arranjos, mas apenas os permitiu e regulou, eles cumpriram certo objetivo naquele tempo. (Êx 1:7) Até mesmo Jacó, que foi logrado a entrar em poligamia por seu sogro, foi abençoado em ter 12 filhos e algumas filhas de suas duas esposas e as criadas delas, as quais se tornaram concubinas de Jacó. — Gên 29:23-29; 46:7-25.

Casamento Cristão. Jesus Cristo mostrou sua aprovação do casamento quando compareceu à festa de casamento em Caná da Galileia. (Jo 2:1, 2) Conforme já foi declarado, a monogamia é o padrão original de Deus, restabelecido por Jesus Cristo na congregação cristã. (Gên 2:24; Mt 19:4-8; Mr 10:2-9) Visto que o homem e a mulher foram originalmente dotados da faculdade de expressar amor e afeição, tal arranjo deveria ser feliz, abençoado e pacífico. O apóstolo Paulo usa a ilustração de Cristo como marido e cabeça da congregação, sua noiva. É um exemplo excelente da benevolência e dos cuidados ternos que o marido deve ter para com sua esposa, amando-a como ao seu próprio corpo. Ele salienta também que, por outro lado, a esposa deve ter profundo respeito pelo marido. (Ef 5:21-33) O apóstolo Pedro aconselha as esposas a estarem sujeitas a seu marido, agradando-o por meio de conduta casta, profundo respeito e um espírito quieto e brando. Usa Sara, que chamava de "senhor" o seu marido, Abraão, como exemplo a imitar. — 1Pe 3:1-6.

A pureza e a lealdade no vínculo matrimonial são enfatizadas em todas as Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Paulo diz: "O matrimônio seja honroso entre todos e o leito conjugal imaculado, porque Deus julgará os fornicadores e os adúlteros." (He 13:4) Ele aconselha o respeito mútuo entre marido e mulher, e o cumprimento dos deveres conjugais.

'Casar no Senhor' é a admoestação do apóstolo, a qual se harmoniza com o costume dos antigos adoradores de Deus, de só se casarem com aqueles que eram igualmente adoradores verdadeiros. (1Co 7:39) No entanto, o apóstolo aconselha aqueles que não são casados, para que possam servir ao Senhor sem distração, caso permaneçam solteiros. Diz que, em vista do tempo, aqueles que se casam devem viver 'como se não tivessem esposa', em outras palavras, que não se deviam devotar aos privilégios e às responsabilidades matrimoniais a ponto de fazer toda a sua vida girar em torno disso, mas que deviam buscar e servir os interesses do Reino, ao passo que não excluem suas responsabilidades conjugais. — 1Co 7:29-38.

Paulo aconselhou que viúvas mais jovens, só porque diziam que pretendiam devotar-se exclusivamente às atividades ministeriais cristãs, não deviam ser colocadas na lista dos que eram cuidados pela congregação; era melhor que se casassem de novo. Isto porque, disse ele, seus impulsos sexuais podiam induzi-las a agir de forma contrária à sua expressão de fé, o que poderia levar a aceitarem o apoio financeiro da congregação como trabalhadoras árduas, ao passo que, ao mesmo tempo, tentavam conseguir um marido e se tornavam desocupadas e intrometidas. Desta forma fariam jus a um julgamento desfavorável. Casar-se, ter filhos e cuidar da casa, ao passo que conservavam a fé cristã, as manteria efetivamente ocupadas, protegendo-as da tagarelice e de falar de coisas de que não deviam. Isto possibilitaria a congregação a dar assistência àquelas que realmente eram viúvas e que se habilitavam a tal ajuda. — 1Ti 5:9-16; 2:15.

Celibato. O apóstolo Paulo adverte que uma das características identificadoras da apostasia que iria surgir era o celibato obrigatório, a 'proibição do casamento'. (1Ti 4:1, 3) Alguns dos apóstolos eram casados. (1Co 9:5; Lu 4:38) Paulo, ao delinear as habilitações para superintendentes e para servos ministeriais na congregação cristã, diz que tais homens (se casados) devem ter apenas uma única esposa. — 1Ti 3:1, 2, 12; Tit 1:5, 6.

Cristãos e Leis de Casamento Civil. Atualmente, na maioria dos países na terra, o casamento é governado por leis das autoridades civis, "César", e o cristão deve normalmente acatá-las. (Mt 22:21) Em parte alguma apresenta o registro bíblico o requisito de uma cerimônia religiosa ou dos serviços dum clérigo. Segundo o arranjo existente nos tempos bíblicos, o requisito coerente seria que o casamento seja legalizado segundo as leis do país, e que casamentos e nascimentos sejam registrados onde tal provisão existe por lei. Visto que os governos de "César" exercem tal controle sobre o casamento, o cristão está obrigado a recorrer a eles para legalizar o casamento. E mesmo que desejasse usar o adultério do seu cônjuge como base bíblica para a terminação do matrimônio, ele teria de obter um divórcio legal, se isto fosse possível. O cristão que se casasse de novo sem o devido respeito pelos requisitos bíblicos e legais, portanto, violaria as leis de Deus. — Mt 19:9; Ro 13:1.

Casamento e a Ressurreição. Um grupo de opositores de Jesus, que não criam na ressurreição, fizeram uma pergunta a Jesus, visando embaraçá-lo. Ao responder-lhes, ele revelou que "os que têm sido contados dignos de ganhar aquele sistema de coisas e a ressurreição dentre os mortos nem se casam nem são dados em casamento". — Lu 20:34, 35; Mt 22:30.

Usos Simbólicos. Em todas as Escrituras, Jeová fala de si mesmo como marido. Ele se considerava casado com a nação de Israel. (Is 54:1, 5, 6; 62:4) Quando Israel se rebelou contra Deus por praticar a idolatria ou alguma outra forma de pecado contra ele, isto foi chamado de prostituição, igual a uma esposa infiel, dando motivos para Ele se divorciar da nação. — Is 1:21; Je 3:1-20; Os 2.

Em Gálatas, capítulo 4, o apóstolo Paulo assemelha a nação de Israel à escrava Agar, concubina de Abraão, e o povo judeu a Ismael, filho de Agar. Assim como Ismael era filho da esposa secundária de Abraão, assim também os judeus eram filhos da "esposa" secundária de Jeová. O vínculo que unia Israel a Jeová era o pacto da Lei. Paulo assemelha a "Jerusalém de cima", a "mulher" de Jeová, a Sara, a esposa livre de Abraão. Os cristãos são os filhos espirituais livres dessa mulher livre, a "Jerusalém de cima". — Gál 4:21-31; compare isso com Is 54:1-6.

Como o grande Pai, Jeová Deus, semelhante a Abraão, supervisiona a escolha duma noiva para seu filho, Jesus Cristo — não uma mulher terrestre, mas a congregação cristã. (Gên 24:1-4; 2Te 2:13; 1Pe 2:5) Os primeiros membros da congregação de Jesus lhe foram apresentados pelo "amigo do noivo", João, o Batizador, a quem Jeová enviou adiante do seu Filho. (Jo 3:28, 29) Esta noiva congregacional é "um só espírito" com Cristo, como corpo dele. (1Co 6:17; Ef 1:22, 23; 5:22, 23) Assim como a noiva em Israel se banhava e se adornava, Jesus Cristo se certifica de que sua noiva, em preparação para o casamento, esteja banhada, de modo que fique perfeitamente limpa, sem mancha ou defeito. (Ef 5:25-27) No Salmo 45 e em Revelação 21, ela é apresentada como estando belamente adornada para o casamento.

Também no livro de Revelação, Jeová prediz o tempo em que o casamento de seu Filho se aproximaria e a noiva seria preparada, vestida de linho resplandecente, puro e fino. Ele descreve os convidados à refeição noturna do casamento do Cordeiro como felizes. (Re 19:7-9; 21:2, 9-21) Na noite anterior à sua morte, Jesus instituiu a Refeição Noturna do Senhor, a Comemoração da sua morte, e instruiu seus discípulos a continuarem a observá-la. (Lu 22:19) Esta observância deve ser continuada "até que ele chegue". (1Co 11:26) Assim como, nos tempos antigos, o noivo chegava à casa da noiva, a fim de levá-la da casa dos pais dela para o lar que ele tinha preparado para ela na casa do pai dele, assim Jesus Cristo vem para levar seus seguidores ungidos do anterior lar terrestre deles, levando-os consigo, a fim de que, onde ele estiver, eles também estejam, na casa do seu Pai, no céu. — Jo 14:1-3.

Veja CASAMENTO DE CUNHADO.

CASAMENTO DE CUNHADO. Também conhecido como casamento levirato; o costume pelo qual um homem se casava com a viúva sem filhos varões de seu irmão falecido, a fim de produzir descendência para continuar a linhagem de seu irmão. O verbo hebraico significando "realizar um casamento de cunhado" é ya·vám, aparentado com os termos hebraicos para "cunhado" e "viúva de irmão". — Gên 38:8; De 25:5 n.; 25:7.

A lei a respeito do casamento de cunhado, em Deuteronômio 25:5, 6, reza: "Caso irmãos morem juntos e um deles morra sem ter filho, a esposa do morto não deve vir a pertencer a um homem estranho, alheio. Seu cunhado deve chegar-se a ela e tem de tomá-la por sua esposa, e tem de realizar com ela o casamento de cunhado. E tem de dar-se que o primogênito que ela der à luz deve suceder ao nome de seu falecido irmão, para que seu nome não seja extinto em Israel." Isto sem dúvida se aplicava, quer o irmão sobrevivente fosse casado, quer não.

Jeová é aquele "a quem toda família no céu e na terra deve o seu nome". (Ef 3:15) Ele mostra preocupação com a preservação do nome e da linhagem familiares. Este princípio era seguido nos tempos patriarcais e foi posteriormente incorporado no pacto da Lei com Israel. A mulher não devia "vir a pertencer a um homem estranho, alheio", isto é, ela não devia casar-se com alguém de fora da família. Quando seu cunhado a tomava, o primogênito levava, não o nome do cunhado, mas o do falecido. Isto não significa que o filho sempre levava o mesmo nome pessoal, mas que dava continuidade à linhagem familiar, e a possessão hereditária permanecia na família do falecido.

"Caso irmãos morem juntos", pelo que parece, não significava que moravam na mesma casa, mas na mesma vizinhança. Todavia, a Míxena (Yevamot 2:1, 2) diz que isto significava, não na mesma comunidade, mas na mesma época. Naturalmente, morarem a grande distância um do outro dificultaria ao irmão cuidar da sua própria herança e da de seu irmão, até que um herdeiro pudesse fazê-lo. Mas, as heranças familiares usualmente ficavam na mesma região.

Um exemplo do casamento de cunhado nos tempos patriarcais é o caso de Judá. Ele tomou uma esposa, Tamar, para Er, seu primogênito, e quando Er mostrou ser iníquo aos olhos de Jeová, Jeová o entregou à morte. "Em vista disso, Judá disse a Onã [irmão de Er]: 'Tem relações com a esposa de teu irmão e realiza um casamento de cunhado com ela, e suscita descendência para teu irmão.' Mas Onã sabia que a descendência não se tornaria sua; e deu-se que, quando teve relações com a esposa de seu irmão, desperdiçou o seu sêmen na terra, para não dar descendência a seu irmão." (Gên 38:8, 9) Visto que Onã se negou a cumprir sua obrigação em conexão com o arranjo do casamento de cunhado, Jeová o entregou à morte. Judá disse então a Tamar que esperasse até que seu terceiro filho, Selá, amadurecesse, mas Judá não exigiu que Selá cumprisse com seu dever para com Tamar.

Após um tempo, depois da morte da esposa de Judá, Tamar manobrou as coisas de modo a obter um herdeiro de seu sogro. Fez isso por se disfarçar, cobrindo-se com um xale e um véu, e sentando-se à beira da estrada pela qual sabia que Judá passaria. Judá tomou-a por meretriz e teve relações sexuais com ela. Ela obteve dele objetos como evidência dessas relações, e quando se revelou a verdade, Judá não a culpou, mas declarou que ela era mais justa do que ele. O registro diz que não teve mais relações sexuais com ela, quando soube quem ela era. Deste modo, o próprio Judá, sem o saber, produziu um herdeiro para Er, por meio da sua nora. — Gên 38.

Sob a Lei, caso um cunhado não quisesse cumprir seu dever, a viúva devia levar o assunto aos anciãos da cidade e informá-los desse fato. Ele devia comparecer perante eles e declarar que não desejava casar-se com ela. Daí, a viúva retiraria a sandália do pé dele e lhe cuspiria no rosto. Depois disso, o 'nome daquele homem tinha de ser chamado em Israel: "A casa daquele a quem se tirou a sandália"', expressão de vitupério para com a sua casa. — De 25:7-10.

O costume de retirar a sandália pode ter surgido do fato de que, quando alguém tomava posse dum terreno, ele o fazia pisando no solo e afirmando seu direito de posse por ficar em pé sobre ele, de sandália. Ao retirar a sandália e a entregar a outrem, ele renunciava à sua posição e à sua propriedade perante as testemunhas constituídas, mais idosas, junto ao portão da cidade. — Ru 4:7.

No livro de Rute se lança luz adicional sobre este assunto. Um homem de Judá, chamado Elimeleque, morreu, assim como seus dois filhos, deixando viúva a Noemi, e duas noras enviuvadas. Havia um homem mencionado na Bíblia como "Fulano", que era parente próximo de Elimeleque, talvez irmão. Este, sendo o parente mais próximo, era o chamado go·'él, ou resgatador. Este se recusou a cumprir seu dever, mas tirou sua sandália e evidentemente a entregou a Boaz, deixando assim Boaz como o parente mais próximo que tinha o direito de resgate. Boaz comprou então a terra de Elimeleque, e assim tomou Noemi, mas, visto que Noemi era idosa demais para ter filhos, Rute, sua nora enviuvada, foi realmente aquela que se tornou esposa de Boaz, a fim de suscitar um filho para o nome de Elimeleque. Quando a criança, Obede, nasceu, as senhoras vizinhas disseram: "À Noemi nasceu um filho", considerando a criança como filho de Elimeleque e Noemi. Boaz e Rute prestaram um serviço a Jeová, o nome dado a seu filho significando "Servo; Servidor". Jeová abençoou este arranjo, pois Obede tornou-se antepassado de Davi e estava, portanto, na linhagem direta de Jesus Cristo. — Ru 4.

O direito ao casamento levirato evidentemente passava para o parente masculino mais próximo, conforme delineado na lei que governava a herança de propriedades, a saber, o irmão mais velho, outros irmãos conforme a idade, daí o tio paterno, e assim por diante. (Núm 27:5-11) Na referência feita ao casamento de cunhado, em Mateus 22:23-28 e Lucas 20:27-33, indica-se que o dever de se casar com a viúva de um homem que não deixou filhos passava de um irmão para o outro, no caso de suas mortes sucessivas. Outro irmão, evidentemente, não podia passar à frente do irmão mais velho, que tinha tal obrigação prioritariamente, a menos que o irmão mais velho se recusasse a exercê-la.

CASA PATERNA. A expressão hebraica behth 'av (plural: behth 'a·vóhth) podia referir-se (1) a uma moradia (De 22:21); (2) à família do pai da pessoa no lugar onde este morava (Gên 31:30; 38:11); (3) aos que constituíam a própria família, mesmo num lugar afastado do lar ancestral (Gên 46:31; Jz 9:18); ou (4), conforme diversamente traduzido, à "casa do pai", "casa principal", "casa ancestral", "casa paterna", a qual, em alguns casos, abrangia diversas famílias. Por exemplo, no tempo da contagem dos israelitas no ermo, quatro famílias eram consideradas como constituindo a casa paterna de Coate. (Núm 3:19, 30; veja também Êx 6:14; Núm 26:20-22; Jos 7:17.) Várias casas paternas juntas constituíam uma tribo (tal como a tribo de Levi, composta das casas paternas de Gérson, Coate e Merari).

Os termos "casa paterna", ou "casa do pai", "casa de nosso pai", e assim por diante, porém, nem sempre se limitavam aos usos acima. (Quanto a um uso mais amplo de "casa paterna", veja Núm 17:2, 6, onde uma casa paterna é uma tribo.)

Com o aumento da população de Israel, e ao passo que diversas regiões da Terra da Promessa foram colonizadas, as casas paternas também aumentavam em número. Os sacerdotes foram organizados por Davi em 24 turmas de serviço, segundo as suas casas paternas, 16 turmas para Eleazar e 8 para Itamar. Os 24 chefes foram chamados de "cabeças das suas casas paternas". (1Cr 24:4-6) O restante dos levitas foram escolhidos por sorte para determinados deveres, sem consideração de alguma prioridade de idade dos cabeças das suas casas paternas. — 1Cr 24:20-31.

Cada casa paterna israelita era representada por seu cabeça hereditário em conexão com negócios oficiais da tribo e na administração de justiça. (Ne 7:70, 71; 11:13) Por ocasião da celebração da Páscoa em Jerusalém, no tempo do Rei Josias, o povo, pelo visto, entrou no pátio do templo segundo as suas casas paternas para oferecer sacrifícios. Os levitas, pelas suas turmas baseadas nas casas paternas, receberam os sacrifícios do povo e os prepararam. — 2Cr 35:4, 5, 12.

Jesus Cristo prometeu aos seus seguidores que ele ia embora a fim de preparar para eles um lugar na 'casa de seu Pai', referindo-se com isso à morada celestial de Jeová. — Jo 14:2; veja FAMÍLIA.

CASAS DA ALMA. Esta expressão traduzida literalmente por "casas da alma" provavelmente se refere a "receptáculos para perfume". Elas talvez ficassem suspensas duma correntinha ou colar, e fossem usadas penduradas no pescoço pelas 'soberbas filhas de Sião'. — Is 3:16, 18, 20.

A expressão hebraica é bot·téh han·né·fesh. Né·fesh (alma), neste caso, pode significar "aquilo que é inalado" ou "cheirado", e bot·téh (casas de) pode significar "receptáculos de".

CASCALHO. Pedrinhas ou seixos. Nas Escrituras, usa-se "cascalho" em sentido ilustrativo. Os efeitos danosos posteriores de se ganhar o pão por meio de falsidade são comparados a se ter a boca cheia de cascalho. (Pr 20:17) Também, o tratamento severo a que Jeová submeteu a infiel Jerusalém por meio dos babilônios é assemelhado a 'quebrar os dentes com cascalho'. (La 3:16) De acordo com o pensamento judaico tradicional, os levados para o exílio babilônico realmente passaram por isso. A tradição afirma que eram obrigados a cozer pão em covas escavadas no solo, e que, em resultado disso, o pão continha areia grossa.

CASIFIA [possivelmente: Lugar de Prateiros]. Uma "localidade" evidentemente situada em Babilônia, e, pelo visto, perto do ponto de ajuntamento dos exilados que retornaram com Esdras a Jerusalém, em 468 AEC. (Esd 8:17-20) Além de dizer que era a região desde a qual Esdras recrutou levitas e netineus, enquanto estava acampado junto ao rio Aava, a Bíblia não identifica com precisão Casifia, quer como cidade, quer como distrito.

CASLUIM. Um filho ou povo descendente de Mizraim, filho de Cã. O registro bíblico mostra que foi de Casluim que "procederam os filisteus". (Gên 10:6, 13, 14; 1Cr 1:8, 11, 12) Visto que outros textos falam de os filisteus procederem de Caftor ou Creta (Je 47:4; Am 9:7), alguns peritos sugerem que a frase acima devia ser transposta, para vir depois do último descendente mencionado de Mizraim, Caftorim. Todavia, não é necessário presumir uma contradição nesses textos. O registro em Gênesis (acompanhado pelo de Crônicas) é genealógico. As outras referências aos filisteus como procedentes de Caftor provavelmente são geográficas, indicando uma migração desde o território dos caftorins.

Os casluins não aparecem em nenhum outro lugar na Bíblia e não deixaram nenhum sinal específico na história secular. Além de descenderem de Mizraim, cujo nome era equivalente a Egito, nos tempos bíblicos, não há nenhuma informação para mostrar onde se estabeleceram.

CÁSSIA (CANELA-DA-CHINA) [hebr.: qid·dáh; qetsi·ʽáh]. Embora sejam usadas duas palavras hebraicas para referir-se a esta planta na Bíblia, as versões Siríaca e do Targum indicam que se aplicam à mesma árvore ou a um produto dela. A canela-da-china (Cinnamomum cassia) cresce agora na Ásia oriental e é da mesma família da caneleira, ou cinamomo. Pode atingir uma altura de 12 m, e possui folhas lustrosas, coriáceas. A casca interna dos ramos (chamada Cassia lignea), quando cortada, seca-se e solta-se, enrolando-se em tubinhos, que são então comercializados. A casca da canela-da-china é mais tosca e mais pungente do que a casca do cinamomo. Os brotos são usados como cravos na preparação de pratos culinários, e as flores maduras, quando secadas, servem de incenso aromático.

Quando se preparava o óleo da santa unção, no tempo de se erguer o tabernáculo, a cássia (canela-da-china) foi incluída entre os ingredientes, como um dos "mais seletos perfumes". (Êx 30:23-25) A cássia tinha destaque entre os produtos com que lidavam os mercadores e os comerciantes da cidade de Tiro. (Ez 27:19) No Salmo 45:8, a palavra qetsi·ʽáh é usada para descrever as vestimentas do rei como exalando deleitosa fragrância, na ocasião de seu casamento. A única outra ocorrência desta palavra é como nome da segunda filha de Jó, Quezia, nascida depois que ele se recuperou da sua doença. — Jó 42:14.

CASTELO. A palavra hebraica bi·ráh, traduzida "castelo" ou 'forte', ocorre apenas nos livros de Daniel, Ester, Crônicas e Neemias, que foram concluídos entre 536 e algum tempo depois de 443 AEC, após o exílio babilônico. — 1Cr 29:1 n.; 2Cr 17:12; Est 1:2 n.

Escrevendo na linguagem dos seus dias, Esdras registra que Davi chamou o templo de Salomão de "castelo", ao encorajar as pessoas a apoiar plenamente a sua construção. — 1Cr 29:1, 19.

Neemias construiu um castelo ou fortaleza um pouco ao NO do templo reconstruído, direção em que o terreno adjacente era mais vulnerável. (Ne 2:8; 7:2) Evidentemente, esse castelo foi substituído pelos macabeus e reconstruído por Herodes, o Grande, que o chamou de Torre (Fortaleza) de Antônia. Foi ali que Paulo foi interrogado pelo comandante militar romano. — At 21:31, 32, 37; 22:24; veja ANTÔNIA, TORRE DE.

"Susã, o castelo", cerca de 360 km ao L de Babilônia, era uma residência temporária do rei persa. Neemias trabalhava ali como copeiro real antes de partir para Jerusalém. (Ne 1:1) Este também foi o cenário de uma das visões de Daniel. (Da 8:2) Mas, "Susã, o castelo", é mais conhecido como o cenário para o livro de Ester. (Est 1:2, 5; 3:15; 8:14) "Susã, o castelo", pelo que parece, não era determinado prédio, mas sim um conjunto de edifícios reais dentro de uma área fortificada. Isto é apoiado por certos pormenores fornecidos no relato. A "casa das mulheres", onde as virgens foram preparadas para serem apresentadas a Assuero, estava situada ali. (Est 2:3, 8) Antes de sua elevação ao governo, Mordecai se punha diariamente "no portão do rei", situado em "Susã, o castelo". — Est 2:5, 21; 3:2-4; veja SUSÃ.

CATATE. Uma cidade de Zebulão (Jos 19:10, 15), muitas vezes considerada ser a mesma que Quitrom. — Jz 1:30.

CATIVEIRO. Na história bíblica, mencionam-se diversos cativeiros diferentes. (Núm 21:29; 2Cr 29:9; Is 46:2; Ez 30:17, 18; Da 11:33; Na 3:10; Re 13:10; veja CATIVO.) No entanto, "o cativeiro" refere-se, em geral, ao grande exílio dos judeus da Terra da Promessa, no oitavo e no sétimo século AEC, causado pelas Potências Mundiais Assíria e Babilônica, e é também chamado de "Exílio" e de "deportação". — Esd 3:8; 6:21; Mt 1:17; veja EXÍLIO.

Jeremias, Ezequiel e outros profetas avisaram sobre esta grande calamidade em declarações tais como estas: "Quem for para o cativeiro, para o cativeiro!" "No que se refere a ti, ó Pasur, e a todos os habitantes da tua casa, vós ireis ao cativeiro; e chegarás a Babilônia." "Há esta pronúncia contra Jerusalém e contra toda a casa de Israel . . . 'Irão para o exílio, para o cativeiro.' " (Je 15:2; 20:6; Ez 12:10, 11) Mais tarde, referente ao retorno do cativeiro babilônico, Neemias (7:6) relata: "Estes são os filhos do distrito jurisdicional, que subiram do cativeiro do povo exilado que Nabucodonosor, rei de Babilônia, tinha levado ao exílio e que mais tarde retornaram a Jerusalém e a Judá." — Veja também Esd 2:1; 3:8; 8:35; Ne 1:2, 3; 8:17.

Parece que a Assíria foi a primeira a introduzir a política de desarraigar e remover da terra natal a inteira população das cidades capturadas, repovoando o território com cativos de outras partes do império. Esta política de deportação, por parte da Assíria, não foi implementada somente contra os judeus, pois, quando Damasco, a capital da Síria, caiu sob a esmagadora investida militar desta segunda potência mundial, o seu povo foi banido para Quir, conforme predito pelo profeta Amós. (2Rs 16:8, 9; Am 1:5) Esta prática tinha um efeito duplo: Desencorajava os poucos remanescentes de empenhar-se em atividades subversivas; e as nações circunvizinhas, que talvez tivessem sido amigáveis com os levados cativos, ficavam menos inclinadas a ajudar e a socorrer o novo elemento estrangeiro trazido de lugares distantes.

Tanto no reino setentrional das dez tribos, de Israel, como no reino meridional das duas tribos, de Judá, a causa básica que resultou no cativeiro foi a mesma: o abandono da adoração verdadeira de Jeová em favor da adoração de deuses falsos. (De 28:15, 62-68; 2Rs 17:7-18; 21:10-15) Jeová, da sua parte, enviava continuamente seus profetas para avisar a ambos os reinos, mas isso de nada adiantou. (2Rs 17:13) Nenhum dentre os reis do reino das dez tribos, de Israel, chegou a fazer um expurgo completo da adoração falsa instituída por Jeroboão, o primeiro rei daquela nação. Judá, a nação-reino sua irmã ao S, deixou de acatar tanto os avisos diretos de Jeová como o exemplo do cativeiro em que Israel havia caído. (Je 3:6-10) Os habitantes de ambos esses reinos foram por fim levados para o exílio, cada nação sofrendo mais de uma deportação principal.

Início do Exílio. Durante o reinado do rei israelita Peca, em Samaria (c. 778-759 AEC), o rei assírio Pul (Tiglate-Pileser III) veio contra Israel, capturou um grande setor no N e deportou os habitantes para as partes orientais do seu império. (2Rs 15:29) Este mesmo monarca também captu-rou algum território ao L do Jordão, e, dessa região, "levou ao exílio os dos rubenitas, e dos gaditas, e da meia tribo de Manassés, e os levou a Hala, e a Habor, e a Hara, e ao rio Gozã, ficando eles lá até o dia de hoje". — 1Cr 5:26.

Em 742 AEC, o exército assírio, sob Salmaneser V, sitiou Samaria. (2Rs 18:9, 10) Quando Samaria caiu, em 740 AEC, terminando assim o reino das dez tribos, seus habitantes foram levados ao exílio "em Hala e em Habor, junto ao rio Gozã, e nas cidades dos medos". Isto se deu porque, como dizem as Escrituras, "não tinham escutado a voz de Jeová, seu Deus, mas tinham persistido em infringir seu pacto, sim, tudo o que Moisés, servo de Jeová, ordenara. Não escutaram nem fizeram isso". — 2Rs 18:11, 12; 17:6; veja SARGÃO.

Cativos de outros lugares muito espalhados foram então trazidos e estabelecidos nas cidades de Samaria. "Subsequentemente, o rei da Assíria trouxe gente de Babilônia, e de Cuta, e de Ava, e de Hamate, e de Sefarvaim, e os fez morar nas cidades de Samaria, em lugar dos filhos de Israel; e começaram a tomar posse de Samaria e a morar nas suas cidades." (2Rs 17:24) Este elemento estrangeiro trouxe consigo sua religião pagã; "cada nação diferente veio a fazer o seu próprio deus". E por não mostrarem nenhuma consideração ou respeito para com Jeová, este "enviou no meio deles leões e estes vieram a ser matadores entre eles". O rei da Assíria fez então voltar um dos sacerdotes israelitas, "e ele veio a ser instrutor deles quanto a como deviam temer a Jeová". Assim, conforme diz então o relato: "Tornaram-se tementes de Jeová, porém, mostraram ser adoradores dos seus próprios deuses, segundo a religião das nações dentre as quais os tinham levado ao exílio." — 2Rs 17:25-33.

Durante o mais de um século que se seguiu à derrubada do reino setentrional, começaram outros notáveis exílios. Antes da derrota humilhante de Senaqueribe às mãos de Deus, em 732 AEC, ele atacou diversos lugares em Judá. Senaqueribe afirma, em seus anais, ter capturado 200.150 pessoas das cidades e fortalezas no território de Judá, embora, a julgar pelo tom dos anais, esse número é provavelmente exagerado. (2Rs 18:13) Tanto Esar-Hadom, sucessor dele, como o monarca assírio que o seguiu, Asenapar (Assurbanipal), transportaram cativos para territórios estrangeiros. — Esd 4:2, 10.

Em 628 AEC, o Faraó Neco, do Egito, mandou acorrentar Jeoacaz, filho de Josias, do reino meridional, e o levou como cativo para o Egito. (2Cr 36:1-5) No entanto, foi mais de uma década depois, em 617 AEC, que os primeiros cativos de Jerusalém foram levados ao exílio em Babilônia. Nabucodonosor avançou contra aquela cidade rebelde e levou embora dali a classe alta dentre a população, inclusive o Rei Joaquim e a mãe dele, e homens tais como Ezequiel, Daniel, Hananias, Misael e Azarias, junto com "os príncipes, e todos os poderosos, valentes — levando dez mil ao exílio — e também todo artífice e construtor de baluartes. Não se deixou ficar ninguém, exceto a classe de condição humilde do povo . . . Oficiais da corte, e os principais homens do país ele levou como povo exilado de Jerusalém a Babilônia. Quanto a todos os homens valentes, sete mil, e os artífices e os construtores de baluartes, mil, todos os poderosos que travavam guerra, o rei de Babilônia os passou a levar como povo exilado a Babilônia." Ele também se apoderou de grande parte do tesouro do templo. (2Rs 24:12-16; Est 2:6; Ez 1:1-3; Da 1:2, 6) Zedequias, tio de Joaquim, foi deixado como rei vassalo. Uns poucos outros de destaque, inclusive o profeta Jeremias, também permaneceram em Jerusalém. Em vista do grande número de cativos registrado em 2 Reis 24:14, o total de 3.023 fornecido em Jeremias 52:28 refere-se, pelo que parece, aos de certa categoria, ou aos que eram cabeças de famílias — não se incluindo nesse total as esposas e os filhos deles, que chegavam a milhares.

A captura final de Jerusalém por Nabucodonosor foi concluída em 607 AEC, depois de 18 meses de sítio. (2Rs 25:1-4) Desta vez, a cidade foi esvaziada da maioria de seus habitantes. Alguns dos humildes da terra tiveram permissão de ficar "como vinhateiros e como trabalhadores compulsórios", sob a governança de Gedalias, em Mispá. (Je 52:16; 40:7-10; 2Rs 25:22) Os levados cativos a Babilônia incluíam "alguns dos de condição humilde do povo, e o resto do povo que fora deixado na cidade, e os desertores . . . e o resto dos operários-mestres". A expressão "que fora deixado na cidade" indica, aparentemente, que grande número de pessoas havia morrido de fome, de doença, ou pelo fogo, ou que haviam sido mortas na guerra. (Je 52:15; 2Rs 25:11) Os filhos de Zedequias, os príncipes de Judá, os oficiais da corte, certos sacerdotes, e muitos outros cidadãos de destaque, foram mortos por ordem do rei de Babilônia. (2Rs 25:7, 18-21; Je 52:10, 24-27) Tudo isso poderia explicar o número um tanto reduzido daqueles que foram realmente incluídos na lista dos exilados levados embora, o número fornecido sendo de apenas 832, provavelmente cabeças das famílias, não se contando as esposas e os filhos deles. — Je 52:29.

Cerca de dois meses depois, após o assassinato de Gedalias, o restante dos judeus deixados em Judá fugiu para o Egito, levando consigo Jeremias e Baruque. (2Rs 25:8-12, 25, 26; Je 43:5-7) Alguns dos judeus talvez também tivessem fugido para outras nações circunvizinhas. É provável que procedessem dessas nações os 745 cativos, como cabeças de família, que foram exilados cinco anos mais tarde, quando Nabucodonosor, como a clava simbólica de Jeová, espatifou as nações fronteiriças de Judá. (Je 51:20; 52:30) Josefo diz que, cinco anos após a queda de Jerusalém, Nabucodonosor conquistou rapidamente Amom e Moabe, e então desceu e se vingou do Egito. — Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas), X, 181, 182 (ix, 7).

A situação de Jerusalém diferia da de outras cidades conquistadas, tais como Samaria, que foram repovoadas por cativos trazidos de outras partes do Império Assírio. Em contraste com a usual política dos babilônios para com as cidades conquistadas, Jerusalém e sua vizinhança foram esvaziadas e deixadas desoladas, assim como Jeová predeterminara. Os críticos da Bíblia talvez questionem que a terra de Judá, outrora próspera, se tenha tornado subitamente "um baldio desolado, sem habitante", mas admitidamente não existe nenhuma evidência histórica, nenhum registro desse período, que prove o contrário. (Je 9:11; 32:43) O arqueólogo G. Ernest Wright declara: "A violência que sobreveio a Judá torna-se clara . . . pelas pesquisas arqueológicas que mostram que cidade após cidade deixou de ser habitada naquele tempo, muitas jamais sendo reocupadas." (Biblical Archaeology [Arqueologia Bíblica], 1962, p. 182) William F. Albright concorda: "Não existe um único caso conhecido de uma cidade de Judá propriamente dita ter sido continuamente ocupada durante todo o período do exílio." — The Archaeology of Palestine (A Arqueologia da Palestina), 1971, p. 142.

Situação dos Exilados. O cativeiro, em geral, era considerado como período de opressão e de servidão. Jeová disse que, em vez de mostrar misericórdia a Israel, 'Babilônia fez muito pesado o seu jugo sobre o homem idoso'. (Is 47:5, 6) Sem dúvida, eles eram obrigados a fazer certos pagamentos (de imposto, tributo, pedágio), baseados no que conseguiam produzir ou ganhar, da mesma forma que estes eram exigidos de outros cativos. Certamente constituía um estado de opressão o próprio fato de que o grandioso templo de Jeová em Jerusalém tinha sido despojado e destruído, seu sacerdócio, morto ou levado ao exílio, seus adoradores, levados ao cativeiro e tornados súditos duma potência estrangeira.

Todavia, ser exilado para uma terra estrangeira não era tão ruim quanto ser vendido à cruel escravidão perpétua, ou ser executado da forma sádica que era típica das conquistas feitas pelos assírios e pelos babilônios. (Is 14:4-6; Je 50:17) Os judeus exilados, pelo que parece, gozavam de certa medida de liberdade de locomoção e exerciam certo grau de administração interna dos seus assuntos. (Esd 8:1, 16, 17; Ez 1:1; 14:1; 20:1) "A todo o povo exilado que fiz ir ao exílio, de Jerusalém a Babilônia", disse Jeová: "Construí casas e habitai nelas, e plantai jardins e comei dos seus frutos. Tomai esposas e tornai-vos pais de filhos e de filhas; e tomai esposas para os vossos próprios filhos e dai as vossas próprias filhas a maridos, para que deem à luz filhos e filhas; e tornai-vos ali muitos e não vos torneis poucos. Também, buscai a paz da cidade à qual vos exilei e orai por ela a Jeová, porque na sua paz se mostrará haver paz para vós mesmos." (Je 29:4-7) Alguns deles desenvolveram habilidades em diversos ofícios que se mostraram úteis depois de terminado o exílio. (Ne 3:8, 31, 32) Empenhar-se em empreendimentos comerciais e no comércio em geral tornaram-se suas especialidades. Encontraram-se muitos nomes judaicos em registros comerciais. Em resultado deste intercâmbio comercial e contato social com não judeus, a língua hebraica começou a refletir influência aramaica.

O período de cativeiro, que chegou a ser de 80 anos para alguns, influiu naturalmente na adoração comunitária do verdadeiro Deus, Jeová. Não dispondo de templo, nem de altar, e não tendo sacerdócio organizado, não era possível ofertar os sacrifícios diários. No entanto, a prática da circuncisão, a abstenção de alimentos impuros, a observância do sábado e a constância na oração eram coisas que os fiéis podiam manter, apesar do desprezo e da zombaria de outros. O fato de o cativo Daniel 'servir com constância' a seu Deus era bem conhecido ao Rei Dario e a outros. Mesmo quando se legalizou um interdito que proibia, sob pena de morte, fazer uma petição a qualquer pessoa a não ser ao rei, "[Daniel] foi pôr-se de joelhos, até mesmo três vezes por dia, e orava e oferecia louvor perante seu Deus, assim como havia feito regularmente antes disso". (Da 6:4-23) Tal fidelidade na sua adoração limitada ajudou a impedir que esses exilados perdessem sua identidade nacional. Podiam também tirar proveito do contraste que observavam entre a simplicidade pura da adoração de Jeová e o ostentoso materialismo idólatra de Babilônia. Sem dúvida, também se beneficiaram da presença dos profetas de Jeová, Ezequiel e Daniel. — Ez 8:1; Da 1:6; 10:1, 2.

Ao se desenvolver entre os judeus o arranjo duma sinagoga local, intensificou-se a necessidade de cópias das Escrituras para as comunidades dos exilados judeus em toda a Média, Pérsia e Babilônia. Esdras era conhecido como "copista destro da lei de Moisés", indicando que cópias da lei de Jeová tinham sido trazidas de Judá, fazendo-se reproduções delas. (Esd 7:6) Sem dúvida, estes preciosos rolos de gerações passadas incluíam o livro de Sal-mos, com a probabilidade de que o Salmo 137, e talvez também o Salmo 126, fossem compostos durante o cativeiro, ou pouco depois. Os seis chamados Salmos Hallel (113 a 118) eram entoados nas grandes festas da Páscoa, depois da volta do restante de Babilônia.

Restauração e a Dispersão. Na política de Babilônia, de não haver retorno, não se encontrava nenhuma esperança de soltura do cativeiro. O Egito, a quem Israel havia certa vez recorrido em busca de ajuda, não estava nem militarmente, nem de outro modo, em condições de ajudar, e as outras nações eram igualmente impotentes, se não francamente hostis aos judeus. Somente nas promessas proféticas de Jeová havia alguma base para esperança. Moisés e Salomão, séculos antes, haviam falado duma restauração após o cativeiro. (De 30:1-5; 1Rs 8:46-53) Outros profetas também asseguravam o livramento do exílio. (Je 30:10; 46:27; Ez 39:25-27; Am 9:13-15; Sof 2:7; 3:20) Isaías, nos últimos 18 capítulos (49-66) da sua profecia, desenvolveu este tema de restauração até um clímax arrebatador. Os falsos profetas, porém, mostraram estar errados ao predizerem um pronto livramento, e todos os que confiaram neles ficaram tristemente desapontados. — Je 28:1-17.

O fiel Jeremias mostrou ser aquele que indicou a duração correta da desolação de Jerusalém e de Judá como 70 anos, após o que viria o tempo de restauração. (Je 25:11, 12; 29:10-14; 30:3, 18) A respeito disso, Daniel, no primeiro ano de Dario, o medo, 'compreendeu pelos livros o número de anos a respeito dos quais viera a haver a palavra de Jeová para Jeremias, o profeta, para se cumprirem as devastações de Jerusalém, a saber, setenta anos'. — Da 9:1, 2.

Quantos exilados retornaram a Jerusalém de Babilônia em 537 AEC?

No começo de 537 AEC, o rei persa Ciro II emitiu um decreto, permitindo aos cativos retornar a Jerusalém e reconstruir o templo. (2Cr 36:20, 21; Esd 1:1-4) Logo houve preparativos em andamento. Sob a direção do governador Zorobabel e do sumo sacerdote Jesua, os exilados que retornaram, somando 42.360, além de 7.537 escravos e cantores, fizeram a viagem que durou uns quatro meses. Os livros de Esdras e Neemias registram números diferentes para a quantidade de famílias israelitas que retornaram, porém ambos concordam quanto ao número total delas. (Veja NEEMIAS, LIVRO DE.) Por volta do sétimo mês, no outono setentrional, estavam estabelecidos nas suas cidades. (Esd 1:5-3:1) Providencialmente, a linhagem real de Davi, levando a Cristo, havia sido preservada por meio de Joaquim (Jeconias) e de Zorobabel. Também, a linhagem do sumo sacerdote levítico continuou ininterrupta por meio de Jeozadaque, e, por sua vez, pelo seu filho Jesua. — Mt 1:11-16; 1Cr 6:15; Esd 3:2, 8.

Posteriormente, mais cativos retornaram à Palestina. Em 468 AEC, Esdras foi acompanhado por mais de 1.750 pessoas, número que aparentemente inclui apenas varões adultos. (Esd 7:1-8:32) Alguns anos mais tarde, Neemias fez pelo menos duas viagens de Babilônia a Jerusalém, mas não se revela quantos judeus retornaram com ele. — Ne 2:5, 6, 11; 13:6, 7.

O cativeiro pôs fim à separação de Judá e Israel. Os conquistadores não fizeram distinção segundo origens tribais, ao deportarem os exilados. "Os filhos de Israel e os filhos de Judá estão sendo oprimidos juntos", observou Jeová. (Je 50:33) Quando o primeiro contingente retornou em 537 AEC, havia entre eles representantes de todas as tribos de Israel. Mais tarde, ao terminar a reconstrução do templo, fez-se um sacrifício de 12 bodes, "segundo o número das tribos de Israel". (Esd 6:16, 17) Esta reunificação após o cativeiro foi indicada em profecia. Por exemplo, Jeová prometeu "trazer Israel de volta". (Je 50:19) Além disso, Jeová disse: "Vou trazer de volta os cativos de Judá e os cativos de Israel, e vou edificá-los assim como no princípio." (Je 33:7) A ilustração de Ezequiel, a respeito das duas varetas que se tornaram uma só (37:15-28), indicava que os dois reinos se tornariam novamente uma só nação. Isaías predisse que Jesus Cristo se tornaria uma pedra de tropeço "para ambas as casas de Israel", o que dificilmente significava que Jesus, ou os 12 que ele enviou durante a sua terceira viagem pela Galileia, teriam de visitar povoações na longínqua Média, a fim de pregar a descendentes de israelitas do reino setentrional. (Is 8:14; Mt 10:5, 6; 1Pe 2:8) A profetisa Ana, em Jerusalém, na época do nascimento de Jesus, era da tribo de Aser, a qual era antes contada com o reino setentrional. — Lu 2:36.

Nem todos os judeus retornaram a Jerusalém junto com Zorobabel, mas apenas "um mero restante". (Is 10:21, 22) Entre os que retornaram, havia muito poucos que tinham visto o templo original. A velhice impediu muitos de arriscar as penúrias da viagem. Outros, que dum ponto de vista físico poderiam ter feito a viagem, preferiram permanecer onde estavam. Muitos, sem dúvida, no decorrer dos anos, haviam conseguido certo êxito material e estavam satisfeitos de continuar onde se encontravam. Se a reconstrução do templo de Jeová não ocupasse o primeiro lugar na sua vida, não estariam inclinados a fazer a viagem perigosa, com um futuro incerto à frente. E, naturalmente, os que se mostravam apóstatas não tinham nenhum incentivo para voltar.

Isto significa que, como povo, parte dos judeus permaneceu espalhada e veio a ser conhecida como a Di·a·spo·rá, ou "Dispersão". No quinto século AEC, havia comunidades de judeus em todos os 127 distritos jurisdicionais do Império Persa. (Est 1:1; 3:8) Certos descendentes dos exilados até mesmo obtiveram elevadas posições em cargos governamentais: por exemplo, Mordecai e Ester, sob o rei persa Assuero (Xerxes I), e Neemias, como copeiro real de Artaxerxes Longímano. (Est 9:29-31; 10:2, 3; Ne 1:11) Esdras, ao compilar Crônicas, escreveu que muitos daqueles dispersos em várias cidades no L 'ficam lá até o dia de hoje' (c. 460 AEC). (1Cr 5:26) Com a ascensão do Império Grego, alguns judeus foram levados por Alexandre Magno para a sua nova cidade egípcia de Alexandria, onde aprenderam a falar grego. Foi ali que, no terceiro século AEC, começou a tradução das Escrituras Hebraicas para o grego, para produzir a Septuaginta. A guerras siro-egípcias resultaram na transferência de muitos judeus respectivamente para a Ásia Menor e para o Egito. Pompeu, ao conquistar Jerusalém, em 63 AEC, levou judeus a Roma, como escravos.

A grande dispersão dos judeus através do Império Romano foi fator contribuinte para a rápida difusão do cristianismo. Jesus Cristo limitou sua própria pregação ao solo de Israel, mas ordenou que seus seguidores se espalhassem e estendessem seu ministério "até à parte mais distante da terra". (At 1:8) Judeus de diferentes partes do Império Romano estavam presentes em Jerusalém na festividade de Pentecostes de 33 EC, e eles ouviram os cristãos gerados pelo espírito pregar sobre Jesus nas línguas de Pártia, Média, Elão, Mesopotâmia, Capadócia, Ponto, o distrito da Ásia, Frígia, Panfília, Egito, Líbia, Creta, Arábia e Roma. Milhares deles, ao voltarem às suas terras, levaram consigo a sua recém-encontrada fé. (At 2:1-11) Na maioria das cidades visitadas por Paulo ele encontrou sinagogas em que podia prontamente falar aos judeus da Dispersão. Em Listra, Paulo conheceu Timóteo, cuja mãe era judia. Áquila e Priscila tinham recentemente chegado de Roma, quando Paulo chegou a Corinto, por volta de 50 EC. (At 13:14; 14:1; 16:1; 17:1, 2; 18:1, 2, 7; 19:8) O grande número de judeus em Babilônia e em seus arredores fez com que valesse a pena Pedro fazer empenho de ir para lá a fim de realizar seu ministério entre "os circuncisos". (Gál 2:8; 1Pe 5:13) Esta comunidade de judeus na região ao redor de Babilônia continuou como o mais importante centro do judaísmo por bastante tempo após a destruição de Jerusalém em 70 EC.

CATIVO. Alguém em servidão, exílio, confinamento ou sob restrição, especialmente alguém preso e levado em resultado duma guerra. (Núm 21:1) Nos tempos antigos, os despojos de guerra muitas vezes incluíam, além do gado capturado, a população das cidades e dos territórios conquistados. (1Cr 5:21; 2Cr 14:14, 15; Am 4:10) Numa ocasião, a Arca do Pacto foi levada como presa, com graves consequências para os seus captores filisteus. (1Sa 4:11–5:12) As referências a cativos remontam aos tempos patriarcais; o primeiro mencionado na Bíblia é Ló, que foi resgatado das forças de Quedorlaomer por Abraão. (Gên 14:14; 31:26; 34:25-29) Em certo sentido, Jó, embora não fosse vítima de guerra, estava numa "condição cativa", até que Jeová o resgatou do seu estado lastimável. — Jó 42:10.

Quando os israelitas entraram para tomar posse da Terra da Promessa, certas cidades, inclusive sua população, foram inteiramente devotadas à destruição, como, por exemplo, Jericó, as primícias da conquista. (Jos 6:17, 21) Quando capturaram outras cidades não devotadas à destruição, os israelitas, dessemelhantes das nações pagãs, não tinham permissão de estuprar as mulheres. Se desejassem uma mulher cativa por esposa, tinham de satisfazer primeiro certos requisitos. — La 5:11; Núm 31:9-19, 26, 27; De 21:10-14.

Entretanto, quando nações inimigas vinham contra os israelitas, Jeová às vezes permitia que seu povo fosse levado cativo, quando tinha sido infiel a ele. (2Cr 21:16, 17; 28:5, 17; 29:9) Os exemplos mais notáveis disso ocorreram no oitavo e no sétimo século AEC, quando milhares de israelitas foram exilados como cativos pelas Potências Mundiais Assíria e Babilônica. (Veja CATIVEIRO.) Aijá e Jeremias predisseram esta vindoura calamidade nacional. (1Rs 14:15; Je 15:2) Moisés também havia advertido que os filhos e as filhas deles iriam "ao cativeiro", como penalidade pela desobediência a Jeová, acrescentando que, se os cativos se arrependessem, com o tempo retornariam. (De 28:41; 30:3) Salomão previu o cativeiro resultante de infidelidade, e orou a Jeová para que livrasse os cativos, se eles se arrependessem. — 1Rs 8:46-52; 2Cr 6:36-39; veja também 2Cr 30:9; Esd 9:7.

O tratamento dispensado aos cativos variava muito, dependendo de muitas circunstâncias. Às vezes se lhes permitia permanecer na sua própria terra, sob a condição de pagarem tributo e de não se rebelarem contra o seu novo amo. (Gên 14:1-4; 2Sa 8:5, 6; 2Rs 17:1-4) Permitia-se, ocasionalmente, a um monarca vencido continuar a reinar como rei vassalo, ou talvez fosse substituído. (2Rs 23:34; 24:1, 17) Em alguns casos, grandes números de cativos eram mortos, como os 10.000 que foram lançados dum rochedo, de modo que "todos eles rebentaram". (2Cr 25:12) Alguns conquistadores eram muito cruéis e perversos no seu tratamento dos cativos, pendurando-os "só pela sua mão" (La 5:12), cortando-lhes o nariz e as orelhas (Ez 23:25), cegando-os com ferros em brasa ou furando-lhes os olhos com lanças ou punhais (Jz 16:21; 1Sa 11:2; Je 52:11), ou por "estriparem as mulheres grávidas" duma cidade capturada. (Am 1:13) Os sádicos assírios, especialmente conhecidos pela sua extrema crueldade, são retratados em monumentos como amarrando cativos e depois os esfolando vivos.

Frequentemente, os cativos eram levados para trabalhos forçados (2Sa 12:29-31; 1Cr 20:3), levados para a escravidão ou vendidos como escravos (1Sa 30:1, 2; 2Rs 5:2; Is 14:3, 4). Muitas vezes, os conquistadores tinham prazer em amarrar juntos os cativos pelo pescoço ou pela cabeça (veja Is 52:2), ou prendê-los com grilhões (2Rs 25:7) e levá-los embora "nus e descalços, e com as nádegas desnudas", para a sua humilhação e vergonha. — Is 20:4.

A soltura e o retorno dos cativos judeus era o tema alegre de muitas profecias. (Is 49:24, 25; Je 29:14; 46:27; Ez 39:28; Os 6:11; Jl 3:1; Am 9:14; Sof 3:20) O salmista também aguardava o tempo de "Jeová ajuntar de volta os cativos do seu povo". (Sal 14:7; 53:6; 85:1; 126:1, 4) Muitas destas profecias se cumpriram em miniatura a partir de 537 AEC, quando um restante dos cativos que vieram a estar sob o controle do Império Persa começaram a afluir de volta a Jerusalém para reconstruir a cidade e seu grandioso templo. (Esd 2:1; 3:8; 8:35; Ne 1:2, 3; 7:6; 8:17) Certos inimigos do povo de Jeová foram especialmente mencionados como eles mesmos destinados ao cativeiro, nações tais como Babilônia (Is 46:1, 2; Je 50:1, 2), Egito (Je 43:11, 12; Ez 30:17, 18) e Moabe (Je 48:46).

Jesus citou Isaías 61:1, 2, aplicando-o a si mesmo como enviado por Jeová "para pregar livramento aos cativos e recuperação da vista aos cegos". (Lu 4:16-21) O apóstolo Paulo tira ilustrações da antiga prática de conquistadores tomarem cativos. (Ef 4:8; 2Co 10:5) No último livro da Bíblia apresenta-se o princípio: "Se alguém é destinado ao cativeiro, ele vai ao cativeiro." — Re 13:10.

CAUDA. Ilha ao largo da costa SO de Creta, pela qual passaram o apóstolo Paulo e Lucas em sua viagem para Roma, por volta de 58 EC. Tendo levantado âncora em Bons Portos, seu barco beirou a costa S de Creta até que, provavelmente depois de contornar o cabo Matala, foram apanhados e impelidos por um vento tempestuoso que podia ter empurrado o barco sobre as areias movediças ao largo das praias da África do Norte. No entanto, chegaram ao abrigo de "certa ilha pequena chamada Cauda", e a posição desta ilha evidentemente quebrantou a força do vento, fornecendo-lhes águas mais tranquilas, provavelmente ao longo de sua costa SO. Isto deu à tripulação tempo suficiente para içar o escaler, cingir o barco com cabos e arriar seus aparelhos. — At 27:13-17.

A Cauda da narrativa de Lucas é atualmente chamada Gavdos, uma ilha de 11 km de comprimento por 5 km de largura, que dista cerca de 65 km ao OSO de Bons Portos.

CAUDILHO. Homem que é designado, empossado, investido como príncipe ou o principal. Cinco maiorais midianitas, "caudilhos [ou: duques] de Síon", chamados "reis de Midiã" em Números 31:8, foram mortos quando Israel tomou vingança dos midianitas pela questão de Baal de Peor. (Jos 13:21) Os líderes dos inimigos do povo de Deus são chamados "caudilhos [duques]" ("príncipes", Al, ALA, IBB) no Salmo 83:11. O termo hebraico na·sikh (caudilho; duque) aparece também em Ezequiel 32:30.

Uma profecia messiânica declara que, quando os inimigos do povo de Deus vierem contra eles, "sete pastores, sim, oito caudilhos [duques] da humanidade ["príncipes dentre os homens", Al; ALA]" serão suscitados. Sendo que sete representa inteireza, os "oito caudilhos [duques]" evidentemente significariam um número considerável de homens capazes designados sob o Messias que tomariam a dianteira entre o povo de Jeová. — Miq 5:5.

CAUSA JURÍDICA. Assunto a ser resolvido num tribunal; audiência ou ação judicial. O principal verbo hebraico que tem que ver com causas jurídicas é riv, que significa "altercar; contender, pleitear causa jurídica". (Gên 26:20; De 33:8; Pr 25:8) A forma substantiva é vertida "controvérsia; disputa; causa jurídica". (Êx 23:2; De 17:8; Sal 35:23; Is 34:8) A palavra hebraica din (julgamento) às vezes é vertida "causa jurídica; demanda judicial; litígio". (Jó 35:14; Sal 140:12; Pr 22:10) Uma causa jurídica, entre os servos de Deus, tinha por objetivo primário satisfazer os requisitos divinos, e, em segundo lugar, fazer justiça à pessoa ou às pessoas envolvidas, junto com compensação, quando devida. Deus considerava-se envolvido até mesmo em ofensas pessoais entre humanos, como se observa nas palavras de Moisés aos juízes israelitas em Deuteronômio 1:16, 17.

Uma causa jurídica estava em ação no jardim do Éden, para trazer a lume os fatos desta causa e as questões envolvidas, e para fundamentá-los como caso de registro público, e também para sentenciar os ofensores. Jeová convocou Adão e Eva à sua presença para interrogá-los. Embora ele soubesse de tudo, realizou uma audiência, deixou bem claro quais eram as acusações, levantou os fatos por interrogá-los e deu-lhes a oportunidade de se expressarem em sua própria defesa. Obteve uma confissão dos ofensores. Jeová fez então sua decisão no assunto, e, com justiça e benignidade imerecida, aplicou a lei, exercendo misericórdia para com a descendência ainda por nascer de Adão e Eva por adiar por algum tempo a execução da pena de morte nos ofensores. — Gên 3:6-19.

Jeová Deus, o Juiz Supremo, fixou aqui o padrão para todas as futuras ações jurídicas entre seu povo. (Gên 3:1-24) As causas jurídicas conduzidas segundo os regulamentos judiciais de Deus visavam descobrir os fatos e discuti-los, com o fim de fazer justiça — quando possível, justiça temperada com misericórdia. (De 16:20; Pr 28:13; compare isso com Mt 5:7; Tg 2:13.) Todo esse procedimento visava manter incontaminada a nação de Israel e promover o bem-estar individual de seus membros, bem como dos residentes forasteiros e colonos entre eles. (Le 19:33, 34; Núm 15:15, 16; De 1:16, 17) A Lei dada àquela nação estipulava o procedimento a ser seguido nos processos civis e também nos casos de contravenções ou de crimes (inclusive os perpetrados contra Deus e o Estado), mal-entendidos, disputas pessoais, e problemas nos níveis individual, familiar, tribal e nacional.

Procedimento. Se as disputas eram de natureza pessoal, incentivava-se os litigantes a evitar altercações e a resolver esses assuntos em particular. (Pr 17:14; 25:8, 9) Se não pudessem chegar a um acordo, podiam recorrer aos juízes. (Mt 5:25) Jesus ofereceu esse conselho. (Mt 18:15-17) Não havia nenhum procedimento formal ou complicado nas causas jurídicas, quer durante o período pré-mosaico, quer sob a Lei, embora se infiltrasse certo grau de formalismo depois do estabelecimento do Sinédrio. Não obstante, as causas eram conduzidas de modo ordeiro e objetivo. Os tribunais eram franqueados às mulheres, aos escravos e ao residente forasteiro, para que a justiça fosse administrada a todos. (Jó 31:13, 14; Núm 27:1-5; Le 24:22) O acusado estava presente quando se apresentava testemunho contra ele, e podia apresentar sua defesa. Não se evidencia nenhum equivalente a um promotor público, quer nos tribunais patriarcais, quer nos dos israelitas; tampouco se precisava dum advogado de defesa. Os trâmites legais não acarretavam custas para os litigantes.

A pessoa que tinha uma causa cível ou uma queixa de ordem criminal apresentava sua causa aos juízes. Convocava-se a outra parte, juntavam-se as testemunhas, e a audiência era realizada geralmente num local público, com mais frequência nos portões da cidade. (De 21:19; Ru 4:1) Os juízes interrogavam os litigantes e examinavam a evidência e o testemunho. Proferiam seu veredito sem demora, a menos que faltasse evidência, ou, se o assunto era difícil demais, os juízes transferiam a causa para um tribunal superior. As sentenças, tais como açoites e a pena de morte, eram executadas imediatamente. Na Lei não se ordenava o encarceramento. Só se utilizava a detenção no caso em que Jeová tinha de ser consultado para se obter uma decisão. — Le 24:12; veja CRIME E PUNIÇÃO; TRIBUNAL DE JUSTIÇA.

A culpa sempre trazia a imputabilidade; não havia exceções. A culpa não podia ser desconsiderada. Sempre que a Lei o exigia, era preciso administrar punição, ou, em alguns casos, fazer-se uma compensação. Daí o culpado, a fim de ficar em paz com Deus, tinha de apresentar uma oferta no santuário. Em qualquer caso de culpa exigiam-se sacrifícios expiatórios. (Le 5:1-19) Até mesmo o pecado desintencional resultava em culpa, e era preciso fazer ofertas para conseguir a expiação. (Le 4:1-35) Em certas transgressões, inclusive engano, fraude e extorsão, em que a pessoa se arrependia e confessava voluntariamente, ela tinha de fazer uma compensação e também apresentar uma oferta pela culpa. — Le 6:1-7.

Evidência. Quando alguém foi testemunha de atos apóstatas, de sedição, de homicídio, que poluíam a terra, e de determinados outros crimes graves, ele tinha a obrigação de relatar isso e de testificar o que sabia a respeito, ou ficaria sujeito à maldição divina, proclamada em público. (Le 5:1; De 13:8; compare isso com Pr 29:24; Est 6:2.) Contudo, não era suficiente uma única testemunha para atestar um assunto. Exigiam-se duas ou mais. (Núm 35:30; De 17:6; 19:15; compare isso com Jo 8:17, 18; 1Ti 5:19; He 10:28.) A Lei ordenava que as testemunhas falassem a verdade (Êx 20:16; 23:7), e, em alguns casos, elas eram colocadas sob juramento. (Mt 26:63) Isto se dava especialmente quando a pessoa que estava sob suspeita era a única testemunha do assunto. (Êx 22:10, 11) Visto que os envolvidos numa causa jurídica diante dos juízes, ou os que se apresentavam no santuário para julgamento dum assunto, eram considerados como em pé diante de Jeová, as testemunhas deviam reconhecer que tinham de prestar contas a Deus. (Êx 22:8; De 1:17; 19:17) A testemunha não devia aceitar suborno, nem permitir que alguém iníquo a persuadisse a falar de forma inverídica ou a tramar a violência. (Êx 23:1, 8) Não devia permitir que seu testemunho fosse deturpado pela pressão duma multidão, ou pela riqueza ou pobreza dos envolvidos no processo. (Êx 23:2, 3) Até mesmo o mais íntimo parentesco familiar não devia refrear a pessoa de testificar contra um iníquo violador da lei, tal como um apóstata ou um rebelde. — De 13:6-11; 21:18-21; Za 13:3.

Alguém que mostrava ser testemunha falsa recebia o castigo que o acusado teria recebido se fosse julgado culpado. (De 19:17-21) Exigia-se que as testemunhas, em todas as condenações à morte, atirassem a primeira pedra na execução do condenado. Assim, as testemunhas eram obrigadas por lei a demonstrar seu zelo pela adoração verdadeira e limpa, e pela eliminação do que era mau em Israel. Isto também atuava como fator dissuasório contra o falso testemunho. Teria de ser alguém bem empedernido para levantar uma acusação falsa, sabendo que teria de ser o primeiro a agir na execução do acusado. — De 17:7.

Evidência material e circunstancial. Quando se tinha confiado algum gado à custódia de outro, o responsável podia trazer a carcaça do animal dilacerado como evidência de que fora morto por uma fera, e assim ficava livre da responsabilidade. (Êx 22:10-13) Quando uma mulher casada era acusada pelo marido de falsamente ter afirmado ser virgem por ocasião do casamento, o pai da moça podia trazer o manto do leito nupcial como evidência da virgindade dela, a ser apresentada perante os juízes, a fim de livrá-la da acusação. (De 22:13-21) Mesmo sob a lei patriarcal, em alguns casos se aceitava evidência material. (Gên 38:24-26) As circunstâncias eram levadas em consideração, como evidência. Se uma moça noiva fosse atacada na cidade, deixar de gritar era considerado evidência de submissão voluntária e de culpa. — De 22:23-27.

Adultério secreto. O homem que suspeitava que a esposa tinha cometido adultério secreto, para o qual ele não tinha nenhuma confissão ou testemunha ocular, podia levá-la perante o sacerdote, onde ela seria julgada por Jeová, aquele que vê e conhece todos os fatos. Não se tratava dum julgamento por ordálio. Não havia nada no próprio procedimento que prejudicasse a mulher ou manifestasse a inocência ou a culpa dela, mas era Jeová que julgava a mulher e tornava conhecido o seu veredito. Se ela era inocente, ficava incólume e devia ser engravidada pelo marido. Se era culpada, seus órgãos reprodutivos ficavam afetados de modo que não podia ficar grávida. Se tivesse havido as duas testemunhas exigidas, o assunto não teria sido levado desta maneira perante Jeová, mas ela teria sido considerada culpada pelos juízes e teria sido apedrejada até morrer. — Núm 5:11-31.

Documentos. Usavam-se registros ou documentos de vários tipos. Exigia-se do marido dar à esposa um certificado de divórcio quando a despedia. (De 24:1; Je 3:8; compare isso com Is 50:1.) Estavam disponíveis registros genealógicos, como vemos especialmente em Primeiro Crônicas. Faz-se menção de escrituras que registravam a venda de imóveis. (Je 32:9-11) Escreveram-se muitas cartas, algumas das quais talvez fossem retidas e constassem em causas jurídicas. — 2Sa 11:14; 1Rs 21:8-14; 2Rs 10:1; Ne 2:7.

Julgamento de Jesus. A maior farsa judicial que já houve foi o julgamento e a condenação de Jesus Cristo. Antes de seu julgamento, os principais sacerdotes e anciãos do povo deliberaram entre si matar Jesus. Assim, os juízes nutriam preconceito e já tinham decidido qual seria o veredito antes de se efetuar o julgamento. (Mt 26:3, 4) Subornaram Judas para trair Jesus a eles. (Lu 22:2-6) Devido à ilicitude de suas ações, não prenderam Jesus no templo à luz do dia, mas esperaram até poder agir sob o manto da escuridão e então mandaram uma multidão armada de paus e espadas, para prendê-lo num lugar isolado, fora da cidade. — Lu 22:52, 53.

Jesus foi então levado primeiro à casa de Anás, o ex-sumo sacerdote, que ainda exercia grande autoridade, pois o seu genro, Caifás, era o sumo sacerdote naquele tempo. (Jo 18:13) Ali Jesus foi interrogado e esbofeteado. (Jo 18:22) Em seguida, foi conduzido amarrado até Caifás, o sumo sacerdote. Os principais sacerdotes e todo o Sinédrio procuraram falsas testemunhas. Muitas de tais testemunhas se apresentaram, mas não podiam concordar no seu testemunho, exceto duas que torceram as palavras de Jesus registradas em João 2:19. (Mt 26:59-61; Mr 14:56-59) Por fim, Jesus foi posto sob juramento pelo sumo sacerdote, e interrogado quanto a se era o Cristo, o Filho de Deus. Quando Jesus respondeu afirmativamente, e fez alusão à profecia de Daniel 7:13, o sumo sacerdote rasgou suas vestes e concitou o tribunal a declarar Jesus culpado de blasfêmia. Proferiu-se este veredito, e ele foi condenado à morte. Depois disso, cuspiram-lhe na face e o esmurraram, zombando dele, o que era contrário à Lei. — Mt 26:57-68; Lu 22:66-71; compare De 25:1, 2, com Jo 7:51 e At 23:3.

Depois deste julgamento noturno ilegal, o Sinédrio se reuniu bem cedo de manhã para confirmar seu julgamento e para uma consulta. (Mr 15:1) Jesus foi então conduzido, novamente amarrado, ao palácio do governador, a Pilatos, visto que disseram: "Não nos é lícito matar alguém." (Jo 18:31) Aí Jesus foi acusado de proibir o pagamento de impostos a César e de afirmar que ele mesmo era Cristo, um rei. Aos olhos dos romanos, a acusação de blasfêmia contra o Deus dos judeus não seria tão grave como seria a de sedição. Pilatos, depois de tentativas fúteis de conseguir que Jesus testificasse contra si mesmo, disse aos judeus que não encontrou nenhum crime nele. Descobrindo, porém, que Jesus era galileu, Pilatos ficou contente de enviá-lo a Herodes, que tinha jurisdição sobre a Galileia. Herodes interrogou Jesus, esperando vê-lo realizar algum sinal, mas Jesus se recusou. Herodes então menosprezou Jesus, zombando dele, e o mandou de volta a Pilatos. — Lu 23:1-11.

Pilatos então tentou libertar Jesus, em harmonia com o costume daquela época, mas os judeus se recusaram a isso, clamando, ao invés, pela libertação de um sedicioso e assassino. (Jo 18:38-40) Assim, Pilatos mandou açoitar Jesus, e os soldados novamente o maltrataram. Depois disso, Pilatos trouxe Jesus para fora e tentou conseguir sua libertação, mas os judeus insistiram: "Para a estaca com ele! Para a estaca com ele!" Por fim, expediu a ordem para que Jesus fosse pregado numa estaca. — Mt 27:15-26; Lu 23:13-25; Jo 19:1-16.

Que leis de Deus violaram os sacerdotes judeus pela maneira em que realizaram o julgamento de Jesus Cristo?

As seguintes são algumas das leis de Deus que foram flagrantemente violadas pelos judeus no julgamento de Cristo: suborno (De 16:19; 27:25); conspiração e perversão do julgamento e da justiça (Êx 23:1, 2, 6, 7; Le 19:15, 35); falso testemunho, com a conivência dos juízes nesta questão (Êx 20:16); permitir que fosse solto um assassino (Barrabás), desta forma trazendo culpa de sangue sobre eles próprios e sobre a terra (Núm 35:31-34; De 19:11-13); agir em turba, ou 'acompanhar a multidão para fazer o mal' (Êx 23:2, 3); ao clamarem para que Jesus fosse pregado numa estaca, violaram a lei que proibia que se seguisse os estatutos de outras nações e que também não prescrevia a tortura, mas que provia que o criminoso fosse apedrejado até morrer ou fosse morto antes de ser pendurado numa estaca (Le 18:3-5; De 21:22); aceitaram como rei alguém que não era da sua própria nação, mas era pagão (César), e rejeitaram o Rei a quem Deus havia escolhido (De 17:14, 15); e, por último, foram culpados de assassínio (Êx 20:13).

CAVALO [hebr.: sus; ré·khev (cavalos de carros); ré·khesh (parelhas de cavalos; cavalos de posta); gr.: híp·pos]. Jeová, o Criador deste animal, ao repreender Jó, descreveu algumas das principais características do cavalo: sua grande força, seu resfolegar através de suas grandes narinas, seu escarvar o chão com impaciência, sua excitação diante da perspectiva de batalha, e não ficar aterrorizado diante do embate de armas. (Jó 39:19-25) Este animal conhecido, desde tempos antigos tem estado intimamente associado com o homem, o qual tem usado o freio e o chicote para controlá-lo. — Sal 32:9; Pr 26:3; Tg 3:3.

Uso Militar. Exceto por seu uso por reis, príncipes e autoridades do estado, ou para sistemas de comunicação rápida (2Sa 15:1; Ec 10:7; Est 6:7, 8; 8:14; Je 17:25; 22:4), o cavalo, nos tempos antigos, era usado principalmente na guerra. — Pr 21:31; Is 5:28; Je 4:13; 8:16; 46:4, 9.

Os cavalos, porém, não se prestam bem para uso militar em terreno montanhoso, escabroso. (Am 6:12) Por isso, quando o Rei Acabe, de Israel, derrotou o exército da Síria, os servos de Ben-Hadade apresentaram a desculpa de que isso aconteceu porque o Deus de Israel era "um Deus de montes", não de planícies, onde os cavalos e os carros operam com vantagem. Não obstante, Jeová deu a Israel a vitória mesmo nas planícies. — 1Rs 20:23-29.

O cavalo representava uma parte tão formidável duma força eficaz de combate, que o mero som dum grande número de cavalos e carros bastava para inspirar temor e fazer com que um exército que se considerava inferior em número recorresse à fuga em pânico. (2Rs 7:6, 7) O poderio militar do Egito, da Assíria, de Babilônia, da Medo-Pérsia e de outras nações, dependia mormente de cavalos. (Is 31:1, 3; Je 6:22, 23; 50:35, 37, 41, 42; 51:27, 28; Ez 23:5, 6, 23; 26:7, 10, 11; Na 3:1, 2; Hab 1:6, 8) Repetidas vezes, cavalos equipados de freios, rédeas, ornamentos na cabeça, xairéis e outros arreios são representados em monumentos antigos.

O povo escolhido de Deus dos tempos antigos, os israelitas, contudo, não devia ser semelhante aos egípcios e a outras nações contemporâneas, que consideravam os cavalos e os carros indispensáveis para a segurança e a independência. Proibia-se aos reis de Israel aumentar para si cavalos. (De 17:15, 16) Em vez de confiar no poderio militar, em cavalos e em carros, os israelitas deviam voltar-se para Jeová em busca de ajuda e jamais ficar com medo do equipamento de guerra dos seus inimigos. — De 20:1-4; Sal 20:7; 33:17; Os 1:7.

O Rei Davi, de Israel, mostrou-se consciente da proibição de Jeová contra a multiplicação de cavalos. Em sua vitória sobre Hadadezer, de Zobá, Davi podia ter acrescentado muitos cavalos ao seu exército, mas, em vez disso, conservou apenas o número julgado suficiente para seus fins imediatos, e ordenou que os restantes fossem jarretados. — 2Sa 8:3, 4; 1Cr 18:3, 4; compare isso com Jos 11:6, 9; veja JARRETE, JARRETAR.

De Salomão Até o Retorno do Exílio. Entretanto, Salomão, filho e sucessor de Davi, começou a acumular milhares de cavalos. (1Rs 4:26 [aqui, "quarenta mil baias para cavalos", segundo geralmente se crê, é erro de escriba, devendo ser "quatro mil"]; compare isso com 2Cr 9:25.) Do Egito, bem como de outras terras, o Rei Salomão recebia cavalos (2Cr 9:28), e cavalos achavam-se entre os presentes trazidos por aqueles que desejavam ouvir a sabedoria dele. (1Rs 10:24, 25; 2Cr 9:23, 24) Os animais eram mantidos em estábulos em cidades especiais para carros, e também em Jerusalém. (1Rs 9:17-19; 10:26) Os prepostos regionais, encarregados de fornecer alimento para a mesa real, forneciam a cevada e a palha supridas como forragem para os cavalos. — 1Rs 4:27, 28.

Durante o reinado de Salomão, mercadores reais negociavam cavalos e carros. O preço dum cavalo era de 150 peças de prata (US$ 330, se as peças de prata eram siclos), e o preço dum carro era de 600 peças de prata (c. US$ 1.320, se eram siclos). — 1Rs 10:28, 29; 2Cr 1:16, 17.

Em anos posteriores, os reis de Judá e de Israel usavam cavalos na guerra. (1Rs 22:4; 2Rs 3:7) Com referência a Judá, o profeta Isaías declarou que a terra estava cheia de cavalos. (Is 2:1, 7) Embora, em determinadas épocas da história de Israel, as condições de seca, de fome e de reveses militares reduzissem grandemente o número de cavalos (1Rs 17:1; 18:1, 2, 5; 2Rs 7:13, 14; 13:7; Am 4:10), o povo ainda depositava sua confiança em cavalos, e se voltava para o Egito em busca de ajuda militar. (Is 30:16; 31:1, 3) Reis iníquos de Judá até mesmo dedicaram certos cavalos ao culto pagão do Sol, trazendo-os aos recintos sagrados do templo de Jeová. (2Rs 23:11) Zedequias, o último rei de Judá, rebelou-se contra o Rei Nabucodonosor, de Babilônia, e então recorreu ao Egito em busca de cavalos e de ajuda militar. (2Cr 36:11, 13; Ez 17:15) Em resultado disso, no cumprimento duma profecia, Judá foi para o exílio. — Ez 17:16-21; Je 52:11-14.

Os cavalos são mencionados entre os animais de carga que seriam usados para transportar o povo espalhado de Deus a Jerusalém. (Is 66:20) Por conseguinte, é digno de nota que, no primeiro cumprimento das profecias de restauração, os judeus que retornaram trouxeram consigo 736 cavalos. — Esd 2:1, 66; Ne 7:68.

Uso Ilustrativo. Na Escritura, o cavalo figura repetidas vezes num contexto ilustrativo. Os filhos adúlteros da infiel Jerusalém são assemelhados a “cavalos em cio”. (Je 5:7, 8) A infiel Jerusalém se prostituía com governantes das nações pagãs, apaixonada por eles à moda das concubinas pertencentes aos dotados de descomedida potência sexual, semelhantes a garanhões. (Ez 23:20, 21) A atitude teimosa, impenitente, dum povo apóstata é comparada à forma impetuosa de o cavalo lançar-se na batalha, sem considerar as consequências. — Je 8:6.

A atenção especial e os abundantes adornos colocados sobre um corcel real são a figura de retórica usada para representar Jeová voltando sua atenção favorável para seu povo arrependido, tornando-o como um vitorioso cavalo de guerra. — Za 10:3-6.

Quando Jeová, por meio do profeta Joel, predisse a penosa praga que sobreviria aos que professavam ser seu povo, mas que, de fato, eram apóstatas, ele descreveu pestes consumidoras como tendo “a aparência de cavalos”. (Jl 2:1-4) O apóstolo João recebeu uma visão similar duma grande praga de gafanhotos, os quais “pareciam cavalos preparados para a batalha”. — Re 9:7.

João também viu exércitos de cavalaria, no total de duas miríades de miríades (200.000.000), com poder para executar os julgamentos destrutivos da parte de Deus. Os cavalos tinham poder mortífero tanto na cabeça como na cauda. Todos esses cavalos estavam aparentemente sob a direção dos quatro anjos que tinham sido amarrados junto ao rio Eufrates. — Re 9:14-19.

O equipamento bélico celeste, invisível, de Jeová é representado por cavalos e carros, de fogo. (2Rs 2:11, 12) Eliseu, em certa ocasião, orou para que fossem abertos os olhos de seu ajudante aterrorizado, para que ele visse que “a região montanhosa estava cheia de cavalos e de carros de guerra, de fogo, em torno de Eliseu”, para protegê-lo das forças circundantes dos sírios, enviadas para capturá-lo. — 2Rs 6:17.

Séculos mais tarde, Zacarias recebeu uma visão que envolvia quatro carros, o primeiro com cavalos vermelhos, o segundo com cavalos pretos, o terceiro com cavalos brancos e o quarto com cavalos malhados, variegados. Estes são identificados como os “quatro espíritos dos céus”. — Za 6:1-8; veja também Za 1:8-11.

A profecia de Zacarias sobre aqueles que prestavam serviço militar contra Jerusalém indicava que Jeová iria socorrer Seu povo e traria destruição sobre o inimigo e os cavalos deste. (Za 14:12-15; veja também Ez 38 e 39.) Como um dos benditos resultados de tal ação, não mais se usaria o cavalo na guerra. Antes, seria empregado como instrumento de serviço para a glória de Deus, conforme subentendido nas palavras: “Virá a haver sobre as sinetas do cavalo: ‘A santidade pertence a Jeová!’” (Za 14:20; compare isso com Êx 28:36, 37.) Também, a eliminação de carros e cavalos de guerra denota a restauração da paz. — Za 9:10.

Na visão simbólica do apóstolo João, o glorificado Jesus Cristo é representado como cavalgando num cavalo branco, e como acompanhado por um exército, todos os membros dele montados em cavalos brancos. Esta visão foi revelada a João como representando a justiça e a retidão da guerra que Cristo travará contra todos os inimigos, a favor de seu Deus e Pai, Jeová. (Re 19:11, 14) Antes disso, agir Cristo de modo régio e as calamidades que se seguem são representados por diferentes cavaleiros e suas montarias. — Re 6:2-8.

CAVALOS, PORTÃO DOS. Veja PORTA, PORTÃO.

CAVERNA. Uma cavidade subterrânea ou gruta com uma abertura para a superfície. A palavra "caverna" traduz a palavra hebraica me'a·ráh (Gên 19:30) e a grega spé·lai·on. (Jo 11:38) A palavra hebraica hhor ou hhohr denota um "buraco", às vezes suficientemente grande para humanos penetrarem nele. (1Sa 14:11; Jó 30:6; 2Rs 12:9) Outra palavra hebraica, para "cavidade", é mehhil·láh. — Is 2:19.

Há abundantes cavernas nas rochas calcárias da Palestina; o monte Carmelo e a vizinhança de Jerusalém, por exemplo, estavam minados de muitas cavernas. Portanto, são muitas vezes mencionadas nas Escrituras, às vezes em sentido figurativo. Algumas delas eram bastante grandes para conter centenas de pessoas e eram usadas como moradias permanentes, como em Petra, ou eram usadas como abrigos temporários, sepulcros, cisternas, estábulos ou armazéns. Destes abrigos naturais recuperaram-se muitos artefatos.

As cavernas ofereciam refúgio em tempos de perigo. A primeira menção de tal lugar tem que ver com Ló e suas duas filhas morando numa caverna depois de saírem de Zoar por medo. (Gên 19:30) Em Maquedá, cinco reis amorreus confederados esconderam-se de Josué numa caverna, que depois se tornou seu túmulo comum. (Jos 10:16-27) Alguns israelitas, fugindo dos filisteus nos dias do Rei Saul, esconderam-se em cavernas. (1Sa 13:6; 14:11) A fim de escapar da fúria de Saul, Davi se refugiou numa caverna perto de Adulão, e ali se juntaram a ele "cerca de quatrocentos homens". (1Sa 22:1, 2) Novamente perseguido por Saul, Davi ocultou-se numa caverna no ermo de En-Gedi, e foi ali que Davi cortou a aba da túnica de Saul, quando este entrou "para satisfazer uma necessidade natural". (1Sa 24:1-15) Talvez fossem as experiências de Davi nestas duas ocasiões que o induziram a compor os Salmos 57 e 142, conforme mostram os cabeçalhos. Depois de Davi ter sido feito rei, a caverna de Adulão parece ter servido de quartel-general durante uma campanha contra os filisteus. (2Sa 23:13; 1Cr 11:15) Quando a iníqua Jezabel tentou exterminar todos os profetas de Jeová, Obadias alimentou 100 deles que se esconderam em cavernas. (1Rs 18:4, 13) Também Elias fugiu diante da ira de Jezabel para uma caverna em Horebe, e foi ali que recebeu instruções divinas para voltar e ungir Hazael, bem como Jeú. (1Rs 19:1-17) De modo que Paulo, em vista destes exemplos, tinha ampla base para escrever que homens de fé "vagueavam . . . pelas cavernas, e pelas covas da terra". (He 11:38) Muitos anos depois, as catacumbas de Roma serviram de refúgio e lugar de reunião subterrâneos para os perseguidos cristãos.

Frequentemente, sepultavam-se os mortos em cavernas. O solo muito rochoso em grande parte da Palestina tornava difícil a escavação de sepulturas. A segunda menção duma caverna na Bíblia refere-se à de Macpela, em Hébron, que Abraão comprou e usou como sepultura, onde foram sepultados Sara, Abraão, Isaque, Rebeca, Jacó e Leia. (Gên 23:7-20; 25:9, 10; 49:29-32; 50:13) O túmulo memorial do amigo de Jesus, Lázaro, "era, de fato, uma caverna". — Jo 11:38.

As cavernas muitas vezes serviam de excelentes depósitos, especialmente em tempos de perigo. Assim, para proteger suas safras contra os incursores midianitas, nos dias de Gideão, "os filhos de Israel fizeram para si os depósitos subterrâneos que estavam nos montes, e as cavernas e os lugares de difícil acesso". (Jz 6:2) De modo similar, os Rolos do Mar Morto evidentemente foram escondidos, para salvaguarda, em cavernas perto do uádi Qumran, ao NO do Mar Morto, onde ficaram sem ser perturbados por muitos séculos, até começarem a ser descobertos em 1947.

Uso Figurado. Jesus acusou os cambistas de tornar o templo "um covil de salteadores". (Mt 21:13; Je 7:11) As profecias registradas por Isaías e em Revelação dizem que alguns tentarão escapar do julgamento de Deus, "o pavor de Jeová", por se esconderem em "cavernas", mas, segundo Ezequiel, as "cavernas" que eles transformam em baluartes não oferecerão nenhuma proteção contra Deus. — Is 2:19-21; Re 6:15-17; Ez 33:27.

CEBOLA [hebr.: ba·tsál]. Planta bulbosa bienal, de forte sabor, de folhas delgadas, cilíndricas. A cebola (Allium cepa) era um dos itens de alimentação que a multidão mista e os israelitas ansiavam no ermo, depois de serem libertos do Egito. (Núm 11:4, 5) Nesta terra do cativeiro de Israel, cultivavam-se cebolas de modo extensivo. O historiador grego Heródoto (II, 125) até mesmo fala de uma inscrição que alistava a cebola entre os alimentos providos aos trabalhadores em certa pirâmide egípcia. No Egito, as cebolas, usualmente trançadas em réstias, eram ofertadas às deidades, embora não se permitisse aos sacerdotes consumi-las. As cebolas do Egito têm sido descritas como macias, e por isso mais digestíveis do que outras variedades, bem como de gosto mais suave do que picante e acre.

CEDRO [hebr.: 'é·rez]. Os cedros, especialmente os do Líbano, eram famosos nos tempos bíblicos, e se destacam especialmente no relato da construção do templo por Salomão.

O cedro-do-líbano (Cedrus libani) é uma majestosa árvore de gigantescas proporções, dotada de raízes profundas e fortes. Houve época em que grandes florestas destes cedros recobriam as montanhas do Líbano, mas, atualmente, só restam alguns pequenos bosques deles, devido ao uso indiscriminado e à falta de reposição das árvores através da conservação e replantio adequados. As devastações da guerra, sem dúvida, também contribuíram para esse número reduzido. (Is 14:5-8) No entanto, as árvores remanescentes ainda apresentam um espetáculo impressionante. — Veja Cân 5:15.

Os cedros às vezes atingem a altura de 37 m, e o tronco pode ter uma circunferência de até 12 m. Os ramos longos, extensos, que se espalham horizontalmente do tronco, podem dar-lhes uma circunferência total de 60 a 90 m. As árvores têm uma forma um tanto piramidal, quando novas, mas tendem a achatar-se no topo ao amadurecerem. A folhagem cresce em camadas horizontais distintas (ao invés de se entrelaçarem), os galhos apresentando ramalhetes redondos, floriformes, de agulhas verde-vivas de cerca de 1,3 cm de comprimento, e cones de coloração castanho-amarelada que exsudam uma resina aromática. A casca é de cor marrom-avermelhada e bastante áspera. O tronco torna-se nodoso com a idade.

A madeira do cedro possui tonalidade vermelho-viva, sem nós, e era altamente apreciada para fins de construção, por causa da sua beleza, fragrância, durabilidade e resistência ao ataque de insetos. (Cân 1:17; 4:11) Os construtores fenícios de navios usavam-no para seus mastros. (Ez 27:5) O Rei Hirão, de Tiro, supriu homens e materiais para a construção de uma "casa de cedros" para Davi, em Jerusalém. (2Sa 5:11; 7:2; 2Cr 2:3) Mais tarde, Salomão usou madeira de cedro no templo, para vigas (1Rs 6:9), para recobrir o altar de incenso (1Rs 6:20) e para revestir todo o interior do templo, de modo que "não se via pedra". (1Rs 6:15-18) "A Casa da Floresta do Líbano", construída mais tarde, foi provavelmente chamada assim por causa das suas 45 colunas de cedro. (1Rs 7:2, 3) Usou-se também o cedro no Pórtico do Trono e no pátio do templo. — 1Rs 7:7-12.

Tal uso extensivo do cedro exigia o trabalho de milhares de trabalhadores para cortar as árvores, transportá-las até Tiro ou Sídon, na costa do Mediterrâneo, armá-las em jangadas e fazê-las flutuar costa abaixo, provavelmente até Jope. Eram então transportadas por terra até Jerusalém. Isto foi combinado através dum contrato entre Salomão e Hirão. (1Rs 5:6-18; 2Cr 2:3-10) Depois disso, o fluxo de madeira continuou, de modo que se podia dizer que Salomão tornou a 'madeira de cedro igual aos sicômoros, por causa da grande quantidade' dela durante seu reinado. — 1Rs 10:27; compare isso com Is 9:9, 10.

Após o exílio, obtiveram-se novamente madeiras de cedro do Líbano para a obra de reconstrução do templo. — Esd 3:7.

Uso Figurado. Nas Escrituras, o majestoso cedro é usado figuradamente para representar imponência, eminência e força, quer real, quer aparente. (Ez 31:2-14; Am 2:9; Za 11:1, 2) Assim, o Rei Jeoás, de Israel, tencionava que sua réplica ao Rei Amazias, de Judá, fosse um fulminante insulto, ao comparar o reino de Amazias a uma "planta espinhosa", enquanto assemelhava seu próprio reino a um maciço cedro-do-líbano. (2Rs 14:9; compare isso com Jz 9:15, 20.) O cedro figura de modo dramático no enigma de Ezequiel (cap. 17), em que o reino e os príncipes de Judá são assemelhados ao topo dum cedro-do-líbano levado para Babilônia. (Ez 17:1-4, 12, 13) Depois, o Messias é representado profeticamente como um rebento do próprio topo do cedro, que Jeová então planta num monte elevado. — Ez 17:22-24; compare isso com Is 11:1; Je 23:5; 33:15; Sal 2:6; Re 14:1; Da 4:17.

A madeira de cedro usada no ermo pelos israelitas evidentemente era dum tipo de cedro diferente daquele do Líbano. Sugeriram-se o zimbro de bagas castanho-avermelhadas (Juniperus oxycedrus) e o junípero fenício (Juniperus phoenicia), ambos bem conhecidos na região desértica do Sinai. Certos ritos de purificação exigiam o uso de lenha de cedro, e talvez, por causa da sua bem conhecida resistência à decomposição, fosse usada ali para simbolizar isenção de corrupção ou de doença. — Le 14:2-7, 49-53; Núm 19:6.

Que o cedro servia figuradamente, em sentido tanto adverso como favorável, é evidente. Tornou-se símbolo de posição social entre os infiéis reis materialistas de Judá, e simbolizava a exaltação de si mesmos e a falsa segurança. (Je 22:13-15, 23; Is 2:11-13) Todavia, o crescimento e o desenvolvimento do homem justo é assemelhado ao do cedro firmemente arraigado. (Sal 92:12; compare Is 61:3 com Sal 104:16.) Assim, ao passo que, por um lado, Jeová promete manifestar seu poder por destroçar os poderosos cedros do Líbano e fazê-los 'saltitar pelos montes como bezerros' (Sal 29:4-6), por outro lado, ele prediz o tempo em que fará com que o cedro cresça até mesmo nas regiões ermas (Is 41:19, 20) e o destaca entre as árvores como uma das muitas criações que louvarão Seu enaltecido nome. — Sal 148:9, 13.

CÉDRON, VALE DA TORRENTE DO [possivelmente duma raiz que significa "escuro"]. Vale profundo que separa Jerusalém do monte das Oliveiras e que corre primeiro para o sudeste e depois para o sul, ao longo da cidade. O vale do Cédron (Nahal Qidron), sem água mesmo no inverno, exceto no caso de uma chuva especialmente forte, começa a certa distância ao N das muralhas de Jerusalém. Sendo no começo um vale amplo e raso, continua a estreitar-se e a aprofundar-se. Defronte da antiga área do templo, tem aproximadamente 30 m de profundeza e 120 m de largura. Mais para o S, juntavam-se ao vale do Cédron respectivamente o vale do Tiropeom e o vale de Hinom. Dali em diante, prosseguia para o sudeste através do árido ermo de Judá para o Mar Morto. O moderno nome aplicado ao curso inferior do vale é uádi en-Nar (que significa "Uádi de Fogo"), indicando que é quente e seco na maior parte do tempo.

Defronte de Jerusalém, túmulos escavados na rocha ocupam as encostas íngremes e rochosas do lado L do vale. No seu lado O, a meio caminho entre a anterior área do templo e a junção dos vales do Tiropeom e do Cédron, encontra-se a fonte de Giom. (Veja GIOM N.º 2.) Não muito longe desta fonte, o vale do Cédron alarga-se e forma um espaço aberto. Sugeriu-se que esta área aberta talvez correspondesse ao antigo "jardim do rei". — 2Rs 25:4.

O Rei Davi, ao fugir do rebelde Absalão, cruzou o vale do Cédron a pé. (2Sa 15:14, 23, 30) Simei, por amaldiçoar Davi nesta ocasião, foi mais tarde confinado a Jerusalém, por Salomão, e não tinha permissão de cruzar o vale do Cédron, sob pena de morte. (1Rs 2:8, 9, 36, 37) Foi este mesmo vale que Jesus atravessou em caminho para o jardim de Getsêmani. (Jo 18:1) Durante os reinados dos reis de Judá, Asa, Ezequias e Josias, o vale do Cédron foi usado como lugar para a eliminação dos apetrechos de idolatria. (1Rs 15:13; 2Rs 23:4, 6, 12; 2Cr 15:16; 29:16; 30:14) Serviu também de lugar de sepultamento. (2Rs 23:6) Isto tornou o vale do Cédron uma área impura, e, por isso, é significativo que a profecia de Jeremias apontou para um tempo em que, em contraste, "todos os socalcos até o vale da torrente do Cédron" seriam "algo sagrado para Jeová". — Je 31:40.

CEFAS. Veja PEDRO.

CEGONHA [hebr.: hhasi·dháh]. O nome desta ave é a forma feminina da palavra hebraica para "alguém leal; alguém de benevolência". (Veja 1Sa 2:9; Sal 18:25 n.) Esta descrição se ajusta bem à cegonha, visto que ela é conhecida pelos ternos cuidados dispensados aos seus filhotes e pela sua fidelidade ao seu par vitalício.

A cegonha é uma ave grande, pernalta, vadeante, similar ao íbis e à garça. A cegonha-branca (Ciconia ciconia) possui plumagem branca, exceto nas rêmiges das suas asas, que são de um negro lustroso. A cegonha adulta pode atingir a altura de tanto quanto 1,2 m, medindo quase 1,2 m de comprimento do corpo, com uma magnífica envergadura das asas, que podem estender-se até 2 m. Seu longo bico vermelho, amplo na base e pontiagudo, é usado pela cegonha para buscar no lodaçal rãs, peixes ou pequenos répteis. Além de pequenas criaturas aquáticas, alimenta-se de gafanhotos e locustas, e pode também recorrer a carniça e detritos. A cegonha foi incluída na lista das criaturas impuras, as quais, segundo o pacto da Lei, os israelitas eram proibidos de comer. — Le 11:19; De 14:18.

Ao repreender o povo apóstata de Judá, que deixou de discernir o tempo do julgamento por Jeová, o profeta Jeremias chamou atenção para a cegonha e para outras aves, que 'conhecem bem seus tempos designados'. (Je 8:7) A cegonha migra regularmente pela Palestina e Síria desde os seus ninhos hibernais na África, aparecendo em grandes bandos durante março e abril. Das duas espécies de cegonha encontradas em Israel, a cegonha-branca e a cegonha-preta (Ciconia nigra), a primeira apenas ocasionalmente permanece nesta região para procriar, usualmente fazendo seu ninho em árvores, mas também em estruturas erguidas pelo homem. A cegonha-preta, chamada assim por ter cabeça, pescoço e costas pretas, é mais comum nos vales Hulé e Bet She'an, e procura árvores, onde houver, para construir seu ninho. O salmista refere-se às cegonhas como fazendo ninhos em altos juníperos. — Sal 104:17.

Contrastando o avestruz, que não voa, com a cegonha, que voa alto, Jeová perguntou a Jó: "Acaso a asa da fêmea de avestruz bateu alegremente, ou tem ela as plumas duma cegonha e a plumagem?" (Jó 39:13) As rêmiges da cegonha são bem largas e fortes, as rêmiges secundárias e terciárias, quase tão compridas como as primárias, proveem à asa de uma enorme superfície e habilitam a cegonha a ser uma ave de voo alto e de longa duração. A cegonha planando alto nas suas poderosas asas, com pescoço esticado e suas longas pernas estendidas retas para trás, apresenta um espetáculo imponente. As duas mulheres observadas na visão de Zacarias (Za 5:6-11) carregando a medida de um efa, contendo uma mulher chamada "Iniquidade", são descritas como tendo "asas semelhantes às asas da cegonha". A referência ao "vento nas suas asas" (v. 9) harmoniza-se também com o ruído produzido pela passagem do ar através das rêmiges da cegonha. As rêmiges primárias são estendidas em leque durante o voo, de modo que se formam aberturas nas extremidades das asas, controlando-se assim a passagem do ar por cima das asas e melhorando o poder de sustentação.

CEGUEIRA. As palavras hebraica e grega para "cego" são 'iw·wér e ty·flós, ambas usadas em sentido literal e figurativo. — De 27:18; Is 56:10; Mt 15:30; 23:16.

A cegueira parece ter sido um padecimento bastante comum no antigo Oriente Médio. Além de um considerável número de referências a ela na Bíblia, escritos seculares, tais como o Papiro Ebers, do Egito, frequentemente se referem a esta condição, descrevendo diversas formas dela e seus sintomas, prescrevendo colírios e mencionando alguns dos instrumentos cirúrgicos usados. A lei de retaliação, de Israel, que exigia alma por alma, olho por olho, dente por dente, mão por mão, pé por pé, não só enfatizava a santidade da vida, mas também incutia fortemente nos israelitas a necessidade de extraordinários cuidados para evitar ferir outrem. Salientava também a necessidade de as pessoas terem certeza de que qualquer testemunho que apresentassem no tribunal era verdadeiro e exato, visto que aquele que dava falso testemunho recebia a mesma punição que ele teria causado ao inocente. (Êx 21:23, 24; De 19:18-21; Le 24:19, 20) Quando um amo causava ao seu escravo a perda de um olho, não se tirava um dos olhos do próprio amo, mas o escravo ficava livre. (Êx 21:26) Embora se pudesse exigir que os escravos trabalhassem e eles pudessem ser espancados se fossem rebeldes, ainda assim o amo ficava deste modo cônscio da necessidade de se refrear de ser indevidamente severo.

Era uma prática comum dos assírios e dos babilônios furar os olhos dos que eles derrotaram na guerra. Sansão foi cegado pelos filisteus, e o rei Zedequias, por Nabucodonosor. (Jz 16:21; 2Rs 25:7; Je 39:7) Naás, rei dos amonitas, disse que aceitaria a rendição da cidade de Jabes de Gileade "na condição de se furar todo olho direito vosso, e terei de pô-lo como vitupério sobre todo o Israel". — 1Sa 11:2; veja NAÁS N.º 1.

A Bíblia registra diversos casos de cegueira por senilidade ou velhice, casos em que os olhos não estavam enfermos, mas 'turvos' ou "parados". Por causa disso, Isaque foi levado a conceder a bênção ao merecedor dela, Jacó. O sumo sacerdote Eli começou a perder a visão algum tempo antes da sua morte à idade de 98 anos. A esposa de Jeroboão maquinou tirar vantagem da cegueira do idoso profeta Aijá, mas Jeová frustrou a trama. (Gên 27:1; 1Sa 3:2; 4:14-18; 1Rs 14:4, 5) Relata-se, porém, a respeito de Moisés que, na idade avançada de 120 anos, "seu olho não se havia turvado". — De 34:7.

Jeová, que fez o olho, pode também causar cegueira. (Êx 4:11) Ele advertiu a nação de Israel de que, se rejeitasse os Seus estatutos e violasse o Seu pacto, traria sobre ela uma febre ardente, fazendo os olhos falhar. (Le 26:15, 16; De 28:28) Os homens iníquos de Sodoma e o feiticeiro Elimas foram golpeados com cegueira. (Gên 19:11; At 13:11) Saulo de Tarso foi cegado pelo brilho da luz, quando Jesus apareceu a ele "como a alguém nascido prematuramente". Ele recuperou a vista quando Ananias pôs as mãos nele e "caíram-lhe dos olhos o que parecia escamas". (1Co 15:8; At 9:3, 8, 9, 12, 17, 18) Numa pronunciação profética pelo profeta Zacarias, Jeová indica que os cavalos daqueles que vêm contra Jerusalém serão golpeados com a perda da vista (Za 12:4) e que, no dia pertencente a Jeová, todos os povos que realmente prestarem serviço militar contra Jerusalém sentirão um flagelo, em que os próprios olhos deles "apodrecerão nas suas órbitas". — Za 14:1, 12.

A cegueira que sobreveio à força militar dos sírios à palavra de Eliseu evidentemente era uma cegueira mental. Se todo o exército tivesse sido golpeado com cegueira física, todos teriam de ser levados pela mão. Mas o relato diz simplesmente que Eliseu lhes disse: "Este não é o caminho e esta não é a cidade. Segui-me." Sobre este fenômeno, William James, na sua obra Principles of Psychology (Princípios de Psicologia, 1981, Vol. 1, p. 59) declara: "A cegueira mental é um dos resultados mais curiosos de distúrbio funcional do córtice cerebral. Não é tanto a insensibilidade às impressões óticas como é a incapacidade de compreendê-las. Psicologicamente se interpreta isso como perda de associações entre as sensações óticas e o significado delas; e qualquer interrupção das vias entre os centros óticos e os centros de outras ideias deve causar isto." Esta foi evidentemente a espécie de cegueira removida por Jeová quando o exército sírio chegou a Samaria. (2Rs 6:18-20) Tal cegueira mental também pode ter estado envolvida no caso dos homens de Sodoma, visto que o relato mostra que, em vez de ficarem aflitos por causa da perda da faculdade da visão, eles persistiram em tentar achar a porta da casa de Ló. — Gên 19:11.

A cegueira desqualificava o homem de servir como sacerdote no santuário de Jeová. (Le 21:17, 18, 21-23) O sacrifício de um animal cego tampouco era aceitável a Jeová. (De 15:21; Mal 1:8) Mas a lei de Jeová refletia consideração e compaixão para com os cegos. Quem colocasse um obstáculo no caminho dum cego ou que o desencaminhasse era amaldiçoado. (Le 19:14; De 27:18) Jó, justo servo de Deus, disse: "Tornei-me olhos para o cego." (Jó 29:15) O próprio Jeová indica que, no tempo devido, acabará com a cegueira. — Is 35:5.

Quando Jesus Cristo esteve na terra, ele restaurou milagrosamente a visão de muitos cegos. (Mt 11:5; 15:30, 31; 21:14; Lu 7:21, 22) Quando Jesus esteve perto de Jericó, ele curou o cego Bartimeu e seu companheiro. (Mt 20:29-34; Mr 10:46-52; Lu 18:35-43) Em outra ocasião, curou dois cegos ao mesmo tempo. (Mt 9:27-31) Novamente, ele curou um homem endemoninhado que tanto era cego como incapaz de falar. (Mt 12:22; compare isso com Lu 11:14.) A vista de um homem foi restabelecida gradualmente. Isto talvez fosse para habilitar o homem tão habituado a estar no escuro a acostumar seus olhos ao brilho da luz solar. (Mr 8:22-26) Outro homem, cego de nascença, quando se lhe deu visão, tornou-se crente em Jesus. (Jo 9:1, 35-38) Nos últimos dois casos, Jesus usou saliva ou saliva misturada com barro, mas esta suposta semelhança com remédios populares não diminui o aspecto milagroso das curas. No caso do homem cego de nascença, mandou-se-lhe que fosse lavar-se no reservatório de água de Siloé, antes de obter visão. (Jo 9:7) Sem dúvida, esta foi uma prova da sua fé, assim como se requereu de Naamã banhar-se no rio Jordão antes de ficar livre da sua lepra. — 2Rs 5:10-14.

Uso Figurado. Muitas vezes, o andar às apalpadelas dos cegos serve como ilustração de desamparo. (De 28:29; La 4:14; Is 59:10; Sof 1:17; Lu 6:39) Os jebuseus eram tão confiantes em que sua cidadela era inexpugnável, que escarneceram de Davi, dizendo que os cegos debilitados deles, embora fracos, poderiam defender a fortaleza de Sião contra Israel. — 2Sa 5:6, 8.

A desvirtuação da justiça por meio de corrupção judicial era simbolizada pela cegueira, e na Lei há muitas exortações contra suborno, presentes ou preconceito, visto que tais coisas podem cegar o juiz e impedir a aplicação imparcial da justiça. "O suborno cega os perspicazes." (Êx 23:8) "O suborno cega os olhos dos sábios." (De 16:19) O juiz, não importa quão reto e discernidor, pode consciente ou mesmo inconscientemente ser afetado por um presente dado pelos envolvidos no processo. A lei de Deus, refletidamente, considera o efeito cegante não só dum presente, mas também do sentimento, pois declara: "Não deves tratar com parcialidade ao de condição humilde e não deves dar preferência à pessoa do grande." (Le 19:15) Assim, por motivo de sentimentalismo ou pela popularidade junto à multidão, o juiz não devia dar o seu veredicto contra os ricos, apenas porque eram ricos. — Êx 23:2, 3.

Cegueira Espiritual. A Bíblia atribui muito maior importância à visão espiritual do que à física. Jesus aproveitou a ocasião da cura do cego de nascença para salientar quão repreensíveis eram os fariseus, porque professavam ter visão espiritual e ainda assim recusavam sair da sua condição cega. Eram iguais àqueles que amavam mais a escuridão do que a luz. (Jo 9:39-41; 3:19, 20) O apóstolo Paulo falou à congregação efésia sobre eles iluminarem os olhos do coração deles. (Ef 1:16, 18) Jesus salientou que aqueles que professam ser cristãos, mas que não estão cônscios da sua necessidade espiritual, estão cegos e nus, não discernindo sua condição lastimável, andando às apalpadelas. (Re 3:17) Assim como ficar no escuro por um longo período causa cegueira aos olhos naturais, assim o apóstolo João indica que o cristão que odeia seu irmão anda sem rumo numa escuridão cegante (1Jo 2:11); e Pedro adverte que aquele que não desenvolve frutos cristãos, o maior deles sendo o amor, "é cego, fechando os seus olhos à luz". (2Pe 1:5-9) A fonte de tal escuridão e cegueira espiritual é Satanás, o Diabo, o qual, transformando-se num anjo de luz, na realidade é "o deus deste sistema de coisas" e o deus da escuridão, que tem cegado a mente dos incrédulos, para que não discirnam as boas novas a respeito do Cristo. — Lu 22:53; 2Co 4:4; 11:14, 15.

CEIA, ÚLTIMA. Veja REFEIÇÃO NOTURNA DO SENHOR.

CEIFEIRO, CEIFAR. A ceifa de cereais, nos tempos antigos, era realizada por se cortar os cereais com uma foice (De 16:9; Mr 4:29), ou, às vezes, por arrancá-los do solo. Neste último caso, a haste inteira era ceifada por se arrancarem as raízes do solo, o que era importante em terras áridas, onde a palha era escassa e o cereal não crescia muito alto.

A antiga foice era feita de madeira ou de osso, e tinha lascas de pederneira incrustada, que serviam como fio de corte. Mais tarde, usava-se a mais conhecida lâmina curva de metal. O ceifeiro segurava as hastes com uma mão e as cortava com a outra.

Ordenou-se aos israelitas não ceifarem as beiradas dos seus campos. Antes, deviam deixar um pouco de cereal em pé, "para o atribulado e para o residente forasteiro". (Le 19:9, 10) Depois de ceifado o cereal, este era ajuntado, amarrado em feixes e empilhado em montes, talvez na eira. — Gên 37:6, 7; Ru 3:6, 7.

Uso Figurado. O ceifar é muitas vezes usado em sentido figurado, nas Escrituras, para ilustrar o resultado final das obras da pessoa, quer boas, quer más. O princípio divino é que "o que o homem semear, isso também ceifará". Paulo mostrou que, ao passo que aquele que semeia visando a carne ceifa disso a corrupção, "aquele que semeia visando o espírito, ceifará do espírito vida eterna", e assegurou aos cristãos gálatas que eles ceifariam se não desfalecessem. (Gál 6:7-9; Pr 22:8; Os 8:1, 7) Exortando à generosidade cristã para com os necessitados concrentes na Judeia, o apóstolo disse aos coríntios: "Quem semear parcimoniosamente, ceifará também parcimoniosamente; e quem semear generosamente, ceifará também generosamente." — 2Co 9:5-7.

Jesus Cristo enviou seus discípulos a 'ceifar', subentendendo-se que eles deviam ajuntar aqueles que reagissem favoravelmente como seus discípulos. (Jo 4:35-38) Segundo a ilustração de Jesus a respeito dos simbólicos "trigo" e "joio", "na terminação do sistema de coisas", o Filho do homem envia seus ceifeiros angélicos para reunir "dentre o seu reino todas as coisas que causam tropeço e os que fazem o que é contra a lei". Este "joio" ("os filhos do iníquo") é lançado numa figurativa fornalha ardente, ao passo que "o trigo" ("os filhos do reino") é preservado, e estes "brilharão tão claramente como o sol, no reino de seu Pai". — Mt 13:24-30, 36-43.

Que o glorificado e entronizado Jesus Cristo dirige esta obra de ceifar e separar é mostrado pela visão de João, em Revelação, onde Cristo é retratado como alguém "semelhante a um filho de homem, com uma coroa de ouro na cabeça e uma foice afiada na mão". Em resposta ao clamor angélico: "Mete a tua foice e ceifa, pois chegou a hora para ceifar, porque a colheita da terra está inteiramente madura", João viu como este "meteu a sua foice na terra e a terra foi ceifada". O apóstolo observou, depois, que "a videira da terra" foi ajuntada e lançada "no grande lagar da ira de Deus". — Re 14:14-20; compare isso com Re 19:11-16.

CELEIRO. Veja DEPÓSITO.

CENCREIA. O relato em Atos 18:18 conta que Paulo, em Cencreia, fez cortar rente seu cabelo por causa dum voto que fez, e, depois, parece que ele navegou de Cencreia para Éfeso, acompanhado por Priscila e Áquila (em c. 52 EC). Cerca de quatro anos depois, escrevendo a Roma, o apóstolo referiu-se à "congregação que está em Cencreia". A carta de Paulo aos romanos talvez tenha sido levada ao seu destino por Febe, da cidade de Cencreia. — Ro 16:1, 2.

Cencreia encontrava-se do lado do golfo Sarônico num estreito istmo a uns 11 km ao L de Corinto, e estava ligada àquela cidade por uma cadeia de fortificações militares. Cencreia era o porto de Corinto para os pontos ao L da Grécia, ao passo que Lecaion, no lado oposto do istmo, servia de porto de Corinto para a Itália e para o oeste. As ruínas nesta região incluem hoje prédios e quebra-mares perto da atual aldeia de Kechriais.

CENSO. Veja REGISTRO.

CENSURA, CENSURAR. A ideia de expressar forte desaprovação ou de frear por meio de palavras ou ações usualmente é transmitida pelo verbo hebraico ga·ʽár. (Gên 37:10) Outro verbo hebraico vertido 'censurar' ou 'reprovar' significa literalmente "humilhar" (Jó 11:3); um substantivo hebraico traduzido por 'censura' tem o sentido literal de "repreensão". (2Rs 19:3) Em grego, o sentido de "censurar" é transmitido por e·pi·ti·má·o, que pode significar também "advertir estritamente", "dizer severamente", "advertir". — Mt 12:16; Lu 18:39; 2Ti 4:2; veja REPREENSÃO.

Um sentido de censurar não limitado a pessoas é o de "impedir, frear", "fazer parar alguma coisa". Censurar Jeová a semente semeada denota ele impedir uma boa colheita. (Mal 2:3) Censurar ele insetos devoradores significa que põe fim a estes causarem sérios danos às safras. (Mal 3:11) O salmista, falando dos inimigos do povo de Deus sob a figura de animais, solicitou ao Altíssimo que freasse o poder deles de causarem dano: "Censura a fera do canavial, a assembleia dos touros." (Sal 68:30) Jesus Cristo censurou o vento e uma febre. — Mr 4:39; Lu 4:39.

Às vezes, "censura" transmite a ideia de "ameaça". De modo que as palavras "censura da tua face" podem indicar que o semblante havia assumido um aspecto ameaçador. — Sal 80:16.

O efeito duma censura pode trazer à atenção o grande poder de Jeová. Um exemplo notável disso foi a partição do Mar Vermelho. — Sal 106:9.

Válida ou Injustificada. A censura pode ser ou válida, ou injustificada. Visto que um sonho contado por José continha ideias que pareciam violar o senso natural de propriedade com respeito à relação entre pai e filho, seu pai Jacó o censurou. (Gên 37:10) Quando Jesus Cristo disse aos seus discípulos que o aguardavam sofrimento e uma morte por execução, Pedro o censurou com as palavras: "Sê benigno contigo mesmo, Senhor; não terás absolutamente tal destino." (Mt 16:22) Visto que Pedro estava errado, Jesus corretamente o censurou em termos bem fortes: "Para trás de mim, Satanás, porque não tens os pensamentos de Deus, mas os de homens." — Mr 8:33.

Proveitosa. Embora a censura dada por um sábio possa magoar, o conselho inspirado é: "Melhor é ouvir a censura de um sábio, do que ser o homem que ouve o canto dos estúpidos." (Ec 7:5) A censura de um sábio, quando aceita com o espírito correto e acatada, pode resultar num melhoramento na conduta da pessoa. A pessoa sensata é mais profundamente afetada por uma simples censura do que o insensato que recebe 100 golpes por uma má ação. (Pr 17:10) A censura congregacional, na forma de desassociação, pode fazer o transgressor cair em si, como parece ter acontecido no caso do homem incestuoso em Corinto. — 2Co 2:6, 7; 1Co 5:1-5.

CENTURIÃO. Veja OFICIAL DO EXÉRCITO.

CERA. As referências bíblicas à cera, pelo que parece, relacionam-se com a cera de abelha, uma substância amarelo-escura que as abelhas usam para fazer as paredes das células dos favos, onde depositam mel ou larvas. A cera é produzida pelas abelhas operárias, as quais, depois de consumirem grande quantidade de mel, fabricam a cera em glândulas especiais em seu abdome. A cera é excretada através de diminutos poros e se forma em plaquinhas brancas no exterior do abdome. As plaquinhas de cera são então transferidas para a boca da abelha, onde são mascadas antes de seu uso na construção. A abelha tem controle sobre a produção de cera e a produz apenas quando se precisa dum suprimento dela. — Veja ABELHA.

A cera é facilmente separada do mel por se derretê-la em água quente. Isto faz a cera subir à superfície, onde pode ser retirada com escumadeira. O derretimento da cera é usado em ilustrações bíblicas poéticas para expressar a condição aflita do coração (Sal 22:14), a dissolução de montes e de baixadas (Sal 97:5; Miq 1:4) e a destruição dos inimigos de Deus; o salmista exclamou: "Como a cera se derrete por causa do fogo, assim pereçam os iníquos diante de Deus." — Sal 68:1, 2.

CERCO. Veja ESCARPA.

CERVA. Veja CORÇA.

CERVEJA. Bebida de baixo teor alcoólico, preparada por lenta fermentação de trigo ou de outros cereais. A palavra hebraica só·ve', traduzida "cerveja de trigo", também pode ser vertida "bebida alcoólica". — Is 1:22 n.; Os 4:18 n.; Na 1:10 n.

Tabuinhas cuneiformes revelam que a arte da preparação de cerveja à base de cereais era praticada na antiga Mesopotâmia já no terceiro milênio AEC. Quando Abraão chegou ao Egito, ele provavelmente verificou que ali a cerveja já era uma bebida comum. Numa data posterior, segundo se diz, Ramsés III prezava tanto a cerveja, que ofertava uns 114.000 l por ano aos seus deuses. Encontraram-se muitas canecas de cerveja filisteias com bicos coadores. Parece que essas diversas nações possuíam uma grande variedade de cervejas para agradar a todos os gostos — cerveja doce, cerveja escura, cerveja perfumada, cerveja cintilante, cerveja aromatizada — servidas quentes ou frias, diluídas ou grossas e melosas. — Veja VINHO E BEBIDA FORTE.

CERVIZ. Veja PESCOÇO.

CERVO. Veja VEADO.

CÉSAR. Nome romano de família que se tornou título. Em 46 AEC, Caio Júlio César foi nomeado ditador de Roma por dez anos, mas foi assassinado em 44 AEC. César era o nome da sua família (sendo Caio seu nome pessoal e Júlio o do seu clã ou casa). O nome de família passou para o seu filho adotivo e depois sucessor, Caio Júlio César Otaviano. Otaviano estabeleceu seu governo sobre o domínio em 31 AEC, e em 27 AEC foi-lhe concedido o título de Augusto pelo Senado romano, passando a ser conhecido como César Augusto. — Lu 2:1-7.

Depois, os próximos quatro imperadores romanos (Tibério, Caio [Calígula], Cláudio e Nero) reivindicaram o nome à base quer dum verdadeiro parentesco, quer de adoção. O nome de família passou assim a ficar tão intimamente associado com a posição de governante soberano que, mesmo depois do fim da dinastia cesariana, o nome foi retido como título régio, equivalente ao de imperador, produzindo as formas posteriores de cáiser (alemã) e czar (russa).

Os césares que governavam durante o período abrangido pelas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, junto com os seus reinados e os principais eventos da Bíblia que ocorreram durante estes, acham-se alistados na tabela acompanhante. Dentre estes, apenas três são mencionados por nome na própria Bíblia: Augusto, Tibério e Cláudio. Para uma consideração mais plena, veja artigos sob os seus respectivos nomes.

Deus e César. A única referência registrada de Jesus a César é a em que estabeleceu o princípio: "Portanto, pagai de volta a César as coisas de César, mas a Deus as coisas de Deus." (Mt 22:17-21; Mr 12:14-17; Lu 20:22-25) A pergunta que suscitou esta declaração foi com respeito ao pagamento do "imposto por cabeça" ao estado romano por parte dos judeus. Portanto, envolvia uma lei ou prática regular estabelecida, e assim nem a pergunta, nem a resposta, evidentemente visavam restringir-se a Tibério, que então governava. (Veja Mt 17:25.) "César" significava ou simbolizava a autoridade civil, o estado, representado pelos seus devidamente nomeados representantes, chamados por Paulo de "autoridades superiores" e expressos por Pedro como "rei" e seus "governadores". — Ro 13:1-7; Tit 3:1; 1Pe 2:13-17; veja AUTORIDADES SUPERIORES.

"As coisas" de César, portanto, eram o pagamento devido por serviços prestados pelo governo secular, serviços pelos quais o governo arrecadava impostos ou tributos. Apesar da sua natureza imperialista, o estado romano provia numerosos serviços aos seus povos subjugados, inclusive a construção de estradas principais, e uma forma de serviço postal, bem como a manutenção da ordem civil e a proteção contra elementos criminosos. O povo pagava impostos por estes serviços. Isto é sublinhado pela referência de Jesus à moeda de César, chamada de "moeda do imposto por cabeça". — Mt 22:19.

Que não se podia deixar que a autoridade de "César", de exigir pagamento mesmo dos cristãos, infringisse o serviço que o cristão prestava a Deus foi demonstrado pela declaração de Jesus, de que 'se deviam pagar de volta a Deus as coisas de Deus'. (Mt 22:21) Os apóstolos de Jesus mostraram que entenderam que seu dever para com as autoridades humanas era limitado, ou relativo, e não absoluto, porque, quando mais tarde foram levados perante a suprema corte judaica, eles declararam firmemente: "Temos de obedecer a Deus como governante antes que aos homens", isto é, quando as leis ou os requisitos humanos se chocam com os de Deus. — At 5:29.

Nome	Anos de Governo	Principais Eventos Bíblicos Durante o Reinado
Augusto (Otaviano)	31 AEC–14 EC	Nascimento de João (o Batizador); decreto de registro, e nascimento de Jesus em Belém (Lu 2:1); morte de Herodes, o Grande.
Tibério	14-37 EC	Ministérios tanto de João como de Jesus (Lu 3:1); também suas mortes. Pentecostes de 33 EC e a atividade inicial da recém-estabelecida congregação cristã. A conversão de Saulo (Paulo).
Caio (Calígula)	37-41 EC
Cláudio	41-54 EC	As primeiras duas viagens missionárias de Paulo e parte da terceira. Uma grande fome; judeus banidos de Roma. (At 11:28; 18:2)
Nero	54-68 EC	Primeiro julgamento de Paulo em Roma. (At 25:21; 26:32) Início da forte perseguição oficial contra os cristãos, após o grande incêndio em Roma; provavelmente, também o segundo julgamento e a execução de Paulo. Começo da revolta judaica (66 EC).
Galba	68-69 EC
Otão	69 EC
Vitélio	69 EC
Vespasiano	69-79 EC	Destruição de Jerusalém (70 EC).
Tito	79-81 EC
Domiciano	81-96 EC	O apóstolo João exilado a Patmos. (Re 1:9)
Nerva	96-98 EC
Trajano	98-117 EC	Cânon da Bíblia foi provavelmente completado no primeiro ano do seu reinado.

O Julgamento de Jesus. Quando Jesus foi levado a julgamento perante o governador romano Pôncio Pilatos, ele foi acusado pelos líderes religiosos de graves delitos: de estar "subvertendo a nossa nação [judaica] e proibindo o pagamento de impostos a César, e dizendo que ele mesmo é Cristo, um rei". (Lu 23:1, 2) Esta acusação tríplice na realidade significava que eles acusavam Jesus de alta traição, ou, conforme os romanos o expressavam, crimen laesae majestatis (hoje conhecido como crime de lesa-majestade). Pilatos reconheceu isto, porque, mais tarde, ele disse: "Trouxestes-me este homem como alguém que incita o povo à revolta." (Lu 23:13, 14) Em 48 AEC, a lei chamada lex Julia majestatis tornara delito empenhar-se em qualquer atividade contra o poder soberano de Roma. Esta lei teve uma aplicação ampla, de modo que, no tempo de Jesus, virtualmente qualquer insulto contra César ou qualquer atividade com aparência de sedição podia ser motivo para a acusação de traição. Tibério, o César que então reinava, era especialmente sensível a críticas ou oposição, e seu governo era famoso por estimular "informantes" que levantassem acusações contra supostos traidores.

Em todo o Império Romano, nenhum rei podia governar sem o consentimento de César. Portanto, Pilatos, ao interrogar Jesus, evidentemente concentrou seu interrogatório na questão do reinado de Jesus. (Mt 27:11; Mr 15:2; Lu 23:3; Jo 18:33-37) Pilatos esforçou-se a libertar Jesus como inculpe, mas os líderes judaicos clamaram: "Se livrares este homem, não és amigo de César. Todo homem que se faz rei fala contra César." (Jo 19:12) O termo "amigo de César" era um título de honra frequentemente concedido a governadores provinciais; mas os líderes judaicos, aqui, evidentemente o usaram de modo geral, dando a entender que Pilatos se expunha à acusação de tolerar alta traição. Temer um imperador ciumento foi um dos fatores que influenciaram Pilatos para proferir a sentença de morte contra um homem inocente. Entrementes, os sacerdotes proclamaram altamente sua lealdade ao trono imperial, dizendo: "Não temos rei senão César", rejeitando assim qualquer governo teocrático. (Jo 19:13-16; compare isso com Is 9:6, 7; 33:22.) Objetaram em vão ao título "Rei dos Judeus" que Pilatos colocara na estaca de Jesus. (Jo 19:19-22) Os romanos costumavam colocar um letreiro indicando o crime pelo qual o criminoso fora condenado.

Apelo e Prisão de Paulo. Quando os líderes religiosos judeus em Tessalônica formaram uma turba para tentar impedir a pregação de Paulo e Silas, também inventaram uma acusação similar de traição contra o trono imperial. (At 17:1-9)

Quem governava então como César era Cláudio (41-54 EC). — At 11:28.

As demais referências bíblicas a César aplicam-se a Nero, que governou de 54 a 68 EC, quando cometeu suicídio à idade de cerca de 31 anos. Foi a Nero que Paulo se referiu quando em julgamento em Cesareia, perante Festo, evidentemente por volta de 58 EC. Paulo negou ser culpado de atos contra César e recusou submeter-se a um julgamento em Jerusalém, dizendo: "Estou perante a cadeira de juiz de César, onde devo ser julgado. . . . Apelo para César!" (At 25:1, 6-11) Paulo exercia ali seus direitos de cidadão romano. Podia-se fazer tal apelação para César quer depois do proferimento da sentença, quer em qualquer ponto anterior durante o julgamento. Visto que Festo dava evidências de não querer ele mesmo decidir o assunto, e visto que um julgamento em Jerusalém virtualmente não apresentava nenhuma esperança de justiça, Paulo fez esta petição formal para ser julgado pelo tribunal mais alto do império. Parece que, em alguns casos, a apelação podia ser negada, como, por exemplo, no caso de um ladrão, um pirata ou um sedicioso apanhados em flagrante. Provavelmente por esta razão Festo consultou primeiro "a assembleia dos conselheiros", antes de admitir a apelação. A subsequente audiência perante o visitante Herodes Agripa II tinha por fim obter Festo informações mais claras para apresentar ao transferir o caso de Paulo ao "Augusto", Nero. (At 25:12-27; 26:32; 28:19) A apelação de Paulo serviu mais um propósito, o de levá-lo a Roma, cumprindo uma intenção expressa anteriormente. (At 19:21; Ro 15:22-28) A promessa profética de Jesus e a mensagem angélica recebida posteriormente mostraram ambas a direção divina neste assunto. — At 23:11; 27:23, 24.

Evidentemente, foi durante o primeiro encarceramento de Paulo em Roma que ele escreveu sua carta aos filipenses (c. 60-61 EC). No fim da carta, Paulo incluiu os cumprimentos de irmãos em Roma, e "especialmente os da família de César". (Fil 4:21, 22) O termo "família de César" não necessariamente se refere à família imediata de Nero, que então reinava, mas pode aplicar-se aos no serviço governamental, escravos e autoridades menores de César. Não se declara se estes cristãos da casa de César eram fruto da pregação de Paulo. Se o lugar em que estava preso ficava de algum modo ligado à Guarda Pretoriana (Fil 1:13), isto o colocava, bem como a pregação que fazia, nas proximidades do palácio de Nero, portanto, perto de muitos da família de César. (At 28:16, 30, 31) Não importa qual tenha sido a maneira de ele se encontrar com esses cristãos da família de César, estes evidentemente tinham interesse especial nos irmãos em Filipos. Visto que Filipos era colônia romana, com muitos soldados e servidores governamentais aposentados, pode ser que diversos dos cristãos ali fossem parentes ou amigos daqueles em nome de quem Paulo transmitiu cumprimentos.

Um grande incêndio assolou Roma em 64 EC, destruindo cerca de um quarto da cidade. Circulavam rumores de que Nero era responsável por ele, e, segundo o historiador romano Tácito, Nero tentou proteger-se por lançar a culpa sobre os cristãos. (Anais, XV, XLIV; Clássicos Jackson, Vol. XXV) Seguiram-se prisões em massa, e cristãos bem como os suspeitos de serem cristãos foram torturados, mortos em grandes números, e alguns até mesmo sendo queimados vivos em público. Isto parece ter assinalado o começo duma grande onda de perseguição, não da parte de opositores religiosos, mas de fontes políticas, decididas a exterminar a congregação cristã. É provável que Paulo, evidentemente solto depois de dois anos de encarceramento em Roma (c. 59-61 EC), tenha sofrido então o seu segundo encarceramento (c. 65 EC). Acredita-se geralmente que ele, depois, foi morto por ordem de Nero. — Veja 2Ti 1:16, 17; 4:6-8.

A revolta judaica começou em 66 EC, dois anos antes da morte de Nero, mas só foi suprimida em 70 EC, no reinado de Vespasiano (69-79 EC). Pensa-se que o apóstolo João tenha sido exilado para a ilha de Patmos durante o governo de Domiciano (81-96 EC), duro opositor do cristianismo. — Re 1:9.

CESAREIA [De (Pertencente a) César]. Importante cidade e porto marítimo, construída por Herodes, o Grande, na costa mediterrânea durante a segunda parte do primeiro século AEC. O lugar era anteriormente conhecido como Torre de Estratão ou Estrato, chamado segundo um governante sidônio, conforme se pensa. O antigo nome tem sido preservado no nome árabe Qaisariye (hoje chamada Horvat Qesari, em hebraico). Encontra-se a uns 40 km ao S do monte Carmelo e a uns 87 km ao NNO de Jerusalém.

O historiador judeu Josefo é a fonte primária de informações sobre a construção e a história inicial da cidade. Herodes, o Grande, recebera o lugar, junto com Samaria e outras cidades, como presente de César Augusto. Depois de reconstruir Samaria, que ele chamou de Sebaste (Sebástie), ele voltou sua atenção para o litoral e passou a construir um magnífico porto e cidade em Torre de Estratão, construção que abrangeu um período de 10 a 12 anos, ocorrendo a sua dedicação por volta do ano 10 AEC (segundo alguns peritos). A estes projetos Herodes deu nomes em honra de César Augusto — a cidade foi chamada de Cesareia, ao passo que seu porto marítimo foi chamado de Sebastos (grego para Augusto). A cidade era muito bonita, tanto quanto aos materiais usados, como quanto à construção, e tinha um templo, um teatro, e um anfiteatro bastante amplo para acomodar uma grande multidão de pessoas. Um aqueduto supria Cesareia de água potável, e um sistema de drenagem por baixo da cidade levava a água servida e o esgoto para o mar. A maior façanha, porém, foi a construção do porto artificial da cidade.

Depois da destituição de Arquelau, filho de Herodes, o Grande, Cesareia tornou-se a residência oficial dos procuradores romanos que governavam a Judeia. No relato bíblico de Atos dos Apóstolos, a cidade tem destaque tanto como porto marítimo como qual sede de governo.

Filipe, que havia realizado um serviço missionário bem-sucedido em Samaria, empenhou-se subsequentemente em 'declarar as boas novas' no território litorâneo, desde a cidade de Asdode, por todas as cidades até Cesareia, a uns 90 km ao N. (At 8:5-8, 40) Pouco depois, ocorreu a conversão de Paulo, e, por causa de uma trama contra ele, quando começou a pregar em Jerusalém, os discípulos ali levaram seu novo irmão ao porto de Cesareia e o mandaram para a sua cidade natal, Tarso. — At 9:28-30.

Cesareia, como quartel-general das forças militares romanas, era um lugar lógico para o centurião Cornélio morar. A cidade, embora tivesse um número substancial de habitantes judeus, é considerada como tendo tido uma população principalmente gentia. Assim, no ano 36 EC, Pedro foi divinamente dirigido a um lugar apropriado para dar testemunho ao incircunciso Cornélio, seus parentes e amigos íntimos, e para estes serem batizados como os primeiros gentios incircuncisos a ser admitidos na congregação cristã. — At 10:1-48.

Foi para Cesareia que Herodes Agripa I se retirou depois do malogrado encarceramento de Pedro, e foi ali que recebeu as delegações de Tiro e de Sídon, e pouco depois faleceu (44 EC), como expressão do julgamento adverso de Deus. (At 12:18-23) Paulo passou por Cesareia ao voltar à Palestina, perto do fim das suas segunda e terceira viagens missionárias. (At 18:21, 22; 21:7, 8) Por ocasião da sua segunda visita, Paulo e seus companheiros se hospedaram com Filipe, o evangelizador, o qual possivelmente se estabelecera em Cesareia ao fim da sua anterior viagem de pregação. Alguns dos discípulos locais acompanharam então o apóstolo daquele porto marítimo a Jerusalém, embora Paulo, enquanto em Cesareia, fosse avisado pelo profeta Ágabo do perigo que o aguardava. — At 21:10-16.

Por causa de uma trama para assassiná-lo em Jerusalém, Paulo, como preso, foi depois levado a Cesareia sob forte guarda e entregue ao Governador Félix para ser julgado. (At 23:23, 24) O notável contraste entre o emocional preconceito religioso, acompanhado por condições de distúrbio, em Jerusalém, e as condições relativamente ordeiras em Cesareia, é tomado como evidência da forte influência romana nesta última cidade, bem como da sua posição de principal guarnição de tropas romanas. O Governador Festo, que sucedeu a Félix, obrigou os opositores judeus de Paulo em Jerusalém a descer a Cesareia para levantar suas acusações contra este, ocasião em que Paulo apelou para César, em vez de enfrentar um julgamento em Jerusalém. (At 25:1-12) Enquanto ainda estava em Cesareia esperando ser transferido para Roma, Paulo pôde dar um forte testemunho a respeito do cristianismo perante Festo e seus visitantes reais, o Rei Agripa II e sua irmã Berenice. (At 25:13, 22-27; 26:1-32) De Cesareia, Paulo, como prisioneiro, empreendeu a viagem que por fim o levaria a Roma. — At 27:1, 2.

Cesareia, com um quebra-mar (hoje coberto pela água) construído por Herodes, o Grande, para formar um porto artificial.

Durante o reinado de Nero, irrompeu uma amarga rivalidade entre os habitantes judeus e sírios de Cesareia, e os incidentes ocorridos ali são considerados como tendo servido de estopim para a revolta que finalmente levou à destruição de Jerusalém, em 70 EC.

Em 1961, encontrou-se no teatro de Cesareia uma pedra com uma inscrição em latim que inclui o nome de Pôncio Pilatos, a primeira de tais inscrições encontradas.

CESAREIA DE FILIPE. Cidade situada junto às cabeceiras do rio Jordão, hoje representada pela pequena vila de Bânias. Sua localização numa altitude de 350 m acima do nível do mar é de grande beleza natural. A vila está rodeada em três lados por montes, com o monte Hermom, de cume nevado, erguendo-se majestosamente ao NE, ao passo que ao O se estende uma luxuriante planície verde, regada por uma das principais fontes do Jordão, que nasce numa caverna próxima.

A cidade foi o palco duma batalha entre o Egito e as forças vitoriosas de Antíoco III (o Grande) (c. 200 AEC). Era então conhecida como Paneas, nome dado à cidade em homenagem ao deus pagão Pã, divindade da fertilidade, adorado ali. No ano 20 AEC, César Augusto deu Paneas a Herodes, o Grande, o qual depois construiu naquele lugar um templo de mármore branco, dedicando-o a Augusto. O filho de Herodes, Filipe, o tetrarca, ampliou e embelezou mais tarde a cidade em honra de Tibério César. Foi então que ela recebeu o nome de Cesareia, e, para diferenciá-la da cidade portuária do mesmo nome, foi chamada de Cesareia de Filipe. Ainda mais tarde, a cidade foi novamente ampliada e adornada por Herodes Agripa II, e o nome dela foi mudado para Nerônia, embora este nome logo deixasse de ser usado após a morte de Nero. Josefo relata que, após a destruição de Jerusalém, em 70 EC, o General Tito realizou ali eventos gladiatórios, usando judeus cativos como vítimas. (The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], VII, 23, 24 [ii, 1]) No decorrer do tempo, o nome da cidade reverteu para o seu antigo nome de Paneas, e, em árabe (que não usa o "p"), isto se tornou Banyas (Bânias).

Foi em caminho para "as aldeias de Cesareia de Filipe" que Jesus interrogou seus discípulos: "Quem dizem os homens ser o Filho do homem?" dando início à palestra significativa sobre o alicerce de rocha da congregação cristã e o uso das chaves do Reino dos céus. — Mr 8:27; Mt 16:13-20.

CESTO. Recipiente feito de materiais tais como fibras de folha de palmeira, canas, juncos, cordas, galhos, e varas de salgueiro, costumava ser usado pelas pessoas nos tempos antigos para fins agrícolas, domésticos e outros. Os cestos variavam grandemente em tamanho, formato e feitio. Havia os trançados abertos e outros fechados. Alguns tinham asas e tampas, ao passo que a outros faltava uma ou ambas estas coisas.

As Escrituras não fornecem descrições detalhadas dos diferentes tipos de cestos, ou cestas, usados na antiguidade, nas terras bíblicas, e usam-se diversas palavras hebraicas e gregas para cestos. A palavra hebraica mais empregada para indicar um cesto é sal. É usada para os três cestos de pão branco que o chefe dos padeiros de Faraó sonhou levar sobre a cabeça, sonho que José interpretou corretamente como significando a morte para o sonhador. (Gên 40:16-19, 22) Sal é também usado para o cesto em que se colocaram pão não fermentado, bolos e obreias, para serem usados na investidura do sacerdócio de Israel, sendo ele ainda chamado de "cesto da investidura". (Êx 29:3, 23, 32; Le 8:2, 26, 31) O mesmo termo hebraico foi usado para o cesto que continha os pães não fermentados e as obreias usados cerimonialmente no dia em que se completava o nazireado de alguém. (Núm 6:13, 15, 17, 19) Também, foi num sal que Gideão colocou a carne que pôs diante do anjo de Jeová. (Jz 6:19) Embora as Escrituras não descrevam o sal, parece que este tipo de cesto tinha trançado fino, e, pelo menos em tempos posteriores, era feito de varas descascadas de salgueiro ou de folhas de palmeira. Pode ter sido bastante grande e raso, sendo assim do tipo conveniente para carregar pão, como no sonho profético do padeiro real. No Museu Britânico existe um modelo pintado de madeira, de uma mulher egípcia equilibrando na cabeça um cesto grande, raso e aberto, cheio de provisões alimentícias supostamente para os mortos.

Durante a servidão dos israelitas no Egito e sua "dura escravidão, em argamassa argilosa e em tijolos" (Êx 1:14), eles evidentemente usavam cestos para carregar materiais de construção, argila para tijolos, e os próprios tijolos. Refletindo sobre a maneira em que Jeová realizou a libertação de Israel da escravidão egípcia, o salmista Asafe representa Deus como dizendo: "Suas próprias mãos ficaram livres da cesta [mid·dúdh]." (Sal 81:4-6) Este mesmo termo hebraico (dudh) é aplicado a uma cesta para carregar figos. (Je 24:1, 2) Denota também um tipo de panela ("caldeira de duas asas" [1Sa 2:14]); 'caldeirão' [2Cr 35:13]) e "uma fornalha". — Jó 41:20.

O té·ne' hebraico era um cesto em que se colocavam as primícias dos frutos colhidos para serem apresentados a Deus, sendo depositado perante o altar de Jeová. (De 26:2, 4) Este cesto servia de recipiente para os produtos do solo, e provavelmente era um receptáculo grande e fundo. Moisés usou o termo hebraico té·ne' para "cesto", quando avisou Israel sobre as consequências da obediência e da desobediência a Jeová. Ele disse: "Bendito será teu cesto e tua amassadeira", quando se seguisse o proceder de obediência, mas: "Maldito será teu cesto e tua amassadeira" se Israel desobedecesse. — De 28:5, 17.

A palavra hebraica kelúv talvez denote um cesto trançado de juncos ou de folhas. Este termo é empregado para "cesto" em Amós 8:1, 2, onde o profeta relata que Jeová o fez ver "um cesto de frutas de verão". É também usado para se referir a uma "gaiola" para aves, em Jeremias 5:27.

Mais outra palavra hebraica que se refere a um tipo de cesto é kar, traduzida "cesto das mulheres da sela", em Gênesis 31:34.

Depois de Jesus Cristo ter milagrosamente multiplicado pães e peixes para alimentar cerca de 5.000 homens, além de mulheres e crianças, sobraram 12 cestos cheios de pedaços excedentes. (Mt 14:20; Mr 6:43; Lu 9:17; Jo 6:13) Para este tipo de cesto, usado para recolher as sobras, todos os quatro escritores dos Evangelhos usaram a palavra grega kó·fi·nos. Este tipo talvez fosse um cestinho de vime, relativamente pequeno, em que se podiam carregar provisões para uma viagem, ou que, possivelmente, tinha uma corda como alça, pela qual o cesto podia ser carregado nas costas. Sua capacidade geral pode ser deduzida do fato de que este termo grego é também usado para a medida beócia de aproximadamente 7,5 l.

Depois de Mateus e de Marcos contarem que Jesus alimentou cerca de 4.000 homens, além de mulheres e crianças, com os sete pães e uns poucos peixes pequenos, eles mostram que se recolheram sete cestos de sobras. Mas eles usam uma palavra grega diferente, sfy·rís (ou: spy·rís); esta indica um grande cesto de provisões ou um cabaz. (Mt 15:37; Mr 8:8) Ao passo que o kó·fi·nos menor bastaria para se viajar em território judeu e ficar apenas pouco tempo fora de casa, seria necessário um cesto maior para se empreender uma viagem extensa através de regiões estrangeiras. Às vezes, este tipo era bastante grande para conter um homem. Os escritores dos Evangelhos fazem uma distinção entre o kó·fi·nos e o sfy·rís (a NM usa "cestos" para o primeiro e "cabazes" para o último) ao relatar as posteriores referências de Jesus Cristo aos seus atos de milagrosamente multiplicar alimentos. — Mt 16:9, 10; Mr 8:19, 20.

O sfy·rís é o tipo de cesto em que Paulo foi baixado ao chão através de uma abertura no muro de Damasco. (At 9:25) Contando aos cristãos coríntios sobre essa fuga, o apóstolo usou a palavra grega sar·gá·ne, que indica um "cesto de vime" feito de corda ou vergas entrelaçadas. Ambos estes termos gregos podem ser usados para o mesmo tipo de cesto. — 2Co 11:32, 33.

Jesus Cristo, depois de identificar seus discípulos como "a luz do mundo", disse-lhes: "As pessoas acendem uma lâmpada e a colocam, não debaixo do cesto de medida, mas no velador, e ela brilha sobre todos na casa." Tal "cesto de medida" (gr.: mó·di·os) era uma medida para secos, com a capacidade de cerca de 9 l, mas Cristo o usou para ilustrar uma cobertura. Jesus incentivou seus discípulos a não ocultarem sua luz espiritual sob um figurativo "cesto de medida". Antes, admoestou-os: "Deixai brilhar a vossa luz perante os homens, para que vejam as vossas obras excelentes e deem glória ao vosso Pai, que está nos céus." — Mt 5:1, 2, 14-16; veja também Mr 4:21; Lu 11:33.

CETRO. Bastão ou vara empunhados por um governante como emblema de autoridade régia. Ocasionalmente, "cetro" é usado em sentido figurado para representar reis (Ez 19:10, 11, 14) ou autoridade (Za 10:11), especialmente autoridade régia.

Na antiga Pérsia, a menos que o monarca estendesse o cetro de ouro, todo aquele que se comparecesse perante o rei sem ter sido convidado era morto. — Est 4:11; 5:2; 8:4.

As palavras proféticas de Jacó, de que 'o cetro não se afastaria de Judá', indicavam que o reinado viria a pertencer à tribo de Judá e permaneceria assim até que viesse Siló. (Gên 49:10; veja COMANDANTE, BASTÃO DE.) Séculos mais tarde, os babilônios, atuando como "espada" executora de Jeová, destruíram o reino de Judá e levaram seu rei cativo. A isto aludiram as palavras de Jeová por meio de Ezequiel: "Uma espada, uma espada! Ela foi afiada e está também polida. . . . Acaso rejeita o cetro de meu próprio filho, assim como faz com toda árvore? . . . Pois, fez-se um extermínio, e que tem, se também rejeitar o cetro?" (Ez 21:9, 10, 13) De modo que a "espada" tratou o "cetro" de Judá da dinastia davídica igual a toda árvore (para ser abatida), ou igual a outros reis ou reinos que arruinou.

O Salmo 2, uma profecia que Pedro aplicou a Jesus Cristo (At 4:25-27), mostrava que o ungido de Jeová usaria um cetro de ferro para quebrantar as nações. (Sal 2:2, 6, 9; compare isso com Re 12:5; 19:15.) Visto que Jesus Cristo sempre usa sua autoridade real de modo correto, seu cetro é um de retidão. — Sal 45:6, 7; He 1:8, 9.

O Salmo 125:3 declara que "o cetro da iniquidade não continuará a pousar sobre a sorte dos justos". Estas palavras garantem que os justos não serão oprimidos para sempre por aqueles que exercem autoridade de modo iníquo.

CÉU, I. A palavra hebraica sha·má·yim (sempre no plural), traduzida "céu(s)", parece ter o sentido básico de algo alto ou elevado. (Sal 103:11; Pr 25:3; Is 55:9) A etimologia da palavra grega para céu (ou·ra·nós) é incerta.

Céus Físicos. O pleno alcance dos céus físicos é abrangido pelo termo da língua original. O contexto usualmente provê informações suficientes para se determinar a que área dos céus físicos se refere o termo.

Céus da atmosfera terrestre. "O(s) céu(s)" pode(m) aplicar-se à plena extensão da atmosfera da terra, em que se formam orvalho e geada (Gên 27:28; Jó 38:29), as aves voam (De 4:17; Pr 30:19; Mt 6:26), os ventos sopram (Sal 78:26), os raios lampejam (Lu 17:24), e as nuvens flutuam e deixam cair chuva, neve ou granizo (Jos 10:11; 1Rs 18:45; Is 55:10; At 14:17). A referência ao "céu" às vezes é à abóbada aparente ou visível, que se arqueia por cima da terra. — Mt 16:1-3; At 1:10, 11.

Esta região atmosférica corresponde em geral à "expansão [hebr.: ra·qí·a']" formada durante o segundo período criativo, descrito em Gênesis 1:6-8. Evidentemente é a este 'céu' que Gênesis 2:4; Êxodo 20:11; 31:17 se referem ao falar da criação "dos céus e da terra". — Veja EXPANSÃO.

Quando foi formada a expansão da atmosfera, as águas na superfície da terra foram separadas de outras águas acima da expansão. Isto explica a expressão usada com respeito ao Dilúvio global dos dias de Noé, que "romperam-se todos os mananciais da vasta água de profundeza e abriram-se as comportas dos céus". (Gên 7:11; compare isso com Pr 8:27, 28.) No Dilúvio, as águas suspensas sobre a expansão evidentemente desceram como que por certos canais, bem como por chuva. Quando este enorme reservatório se esvaziara, essas "comportas dos céus" como que "fecharam-se". — Gên 8:2.

Espaço sideral. Os "céus" físicos estendem-se através da atmosfera da terra e mais além para as regiões do espaço sideral, com seus corpos estelares, "todo o exército dos céus" — sol, lua, estrelas e constelações. (De 4:19; Is 13:10; 1Co 15:40, 41; He 11:12) O primeiro versículo da Bíblia descreve a criação desses céus estrelados antes da preparação da terra para a habitação humana. (Gên 1:1) Esses céus mostram a glória de Deus, assim como faz a expansão da atmosfera, sendo a obra dos "dedos" de Deus. (Sal 8:3; 19:1-6) Os divinamente determinados "estatutos dos céus" controlam todos estes corpos celestes. Os astrônomos, apesar do seu equipamento moderno e do avançado conhecimento de matemática, ainda não conseguem compreender plenamente estes estatutos. (Jó 38:33; Je 33:25) Suas descobertas, porém, confirmam a impossibilidade de o homem pôr medida em tais céus ou de contar os corpos estelares. (Je 31:37; 33:22; veja ESTRELA.) Todavia, eles são contados por Deus, que os chama por nome. — Sal 147:4; Is 40:26.

O "meio do céu" e as "extremidades dos céus". A expressão "meio do céu" aplica-se à região dentro da expansão da atmosfera terrestre onde voam aves tais como a águia. (Re 8:13; 14:6; 19:17; De 4:11 [hebr.: "coração dos céus"]) Algo similar é a expressão "entre a terra e os céus". (1Cr 21:16; 2Sa 18:9) O avanço dos que atacariam Babilônia desde "a extremidade dos céus" evidentemente significa chegarem a ela desde o horizonte distante (onde a terra e o céu parecem encontrar-se, e o sol parece levantar-se e pôr-se). (Is 13:5; compare isso com Sal 19:4-6.) Similarmente, "das quatro extremidades dos céus" parece referir-se aos quatro pontos cardeais, indicando assim o abrangimento dos quatro cantos da terra. (Je 49:36; compare isso com Da 8:8; 11:4; Mt 24:31; Mr 13:27.) Assim como os céus rodeiam a terra em todos os lados, assim a visão de Jeová, de tudo "debaixo dos céus inteiros", abrange todo o globo. — Jó 28:24.

Os céus nublados. Outro termo, o hebraico shá·hhaq, também é usado para se referir aos "céus" ou às suas nuvens. (De 33:26; Pr 3:20; Is 45:8) Esta palavra tem o sentido básico de algo triturado ou pulverizado, como "a camada fina de pó" (shá·hhaq) em Isaías 40:15. É definitivamente apropriado este sentido, visto que as nuvens se formam quando o ar quente, subindo da terra, esfria ao que se conhece como ponto de orvalho, e o vapor de água nele se condensa em minúsculas partículas às vezes chamadas de poeira de água. (Compare isso com Jó 36:27, 28; veja NUVEM.) Acrescentando algo à exatidão disso, o efeito visual da abóbada azul do céu é causado pela difusão dos raios do sol por moléculas de gás e outras partículas (inclusive pó) que compõem a atmosfera. Por Deus formar essa atmosfera, ele, na realidade, 'achatou o céu nublado, duro como um espelho fundido', dando um limite definido, ou uma clara demarcação da abóbada atmosférica azul acima do homem. — Jó 37:18.

"Céus dos céus." A expressão "céus dos céus" é considerada como se referindo aos céus mais altos e abrangeria a plena extensão dos céus físicos, não importa quão vastos, visto que os céus se estendem da terra em todas as direções. — De 10:14; Ne 9:6.

Salomão, construtor do templo em Jerusalém, declarou que os "céus, sim, o céu dos céus", não podem conter a Deus. (1Rs 8:27) A posição de Jeová, como Criador dos céus, é muito acima de todos eles, e "só o seu nome é inalcançavelmente elevado. Sua dignidade está acima da terra e do céu". (Sal 148:13) Jeová mede os céus físicos com a mesma facilidade que um homem mediria um objeto por estender os dedos, para que o objeto ficasse entre a ponta do polegar e a do mindinho. (Is 40:12) A declaração de Salomão não significa que Deus não tenha um lugar específico de residência. Tampouco significa que ele seja onipresente, no sentido de literalmente estar em toda a parte e em tudo. Isto se pode ver em Salomão falar também de Jeová como ouvindo "desde os céus, teu lugar estabelecido de morada", isto é, os céus do domínio espiritual. — 1Rs 8:30, 39.

Assim, em sentido físico, o termo "céus" tem grande latitude. Ao passo que pode referir-se aos mais distantes pontos do espaço universal, pode também referir-se a algo que simplesmente é alto, ou elevado, num grau fora do comum. Assim, diz-se que aqueles que se encontram em navios jogados pelo vento tempestuoso "sobem aos céus, descem às profundezas". (Sal 107:26) Neste respeito, também, os construtores da Torre de Babel pretendiam erguer um edifício "com o seu topo nos céus", como que um "arranha-céu". (Gên 11:4; compare isso com Je 51:53.) E a profecia em Amós 9:2 fala de homens como 'subindo aos céus' no esforço vão de escapar dos julgamentos de Jeová, o que evidentemente significa que tentariam refugiar-se nas regiões montanhosas elevadas.

Céus Espirituais. As mesmas palavras das línguas originais usadas para os céus físicos também são aplicadas aos céus espirituais. Conforme vimos, Jeová Deus não reside nos céus físicos, por ser Espírito. Todavia, visto que ele é "o Enaltecido e Elevado", que reside "no alto" (Is 57:15), o sentido básico daquilo que é "enaltecido" ou "elevado", expresso na palavra da língua hebraica, torna-a apropriada para descrever a "morada excelsa de santidade e beleza". (Is 63:15; Sal 33:13, 14; 115:3) Jeová, como Produtor dos céus físicos (Gên 14:19; Sal 33:6), é também seu Dono. (Sal 115:15, 16) Faz neles o que se agrada de fazer, inclusive atos milagrosos. — Sal 135:6.

Portanto, em muitos textos, os "céus" representam o próprio Deus e sua posição soberana. Seu trono está nos céus, quer dizer, no domínio espiritual que ele também governa. (Sal 103:19-21; 2Cr 20:6; Mt 23:22; At 7:49) Jeová, desde a sua posição suprema e máxima, realmente, 'olha para baixo', para os céus e a terra físicos (Sal 14:2; 102:19; 113:6), e também, da sua posição elevada, ele fala, atende petições e faz julgamentos. (1Rs 8:49; Sal 2:4-6; 76:8; Mt 3:17) De modo que lemos que Ezequias e Isaías, em face duma grave ameaça, "oravam . . . e clamavam aos céus por socorro". (2Cr 32:20; compare isso com 2Cr 30:27.) Também Jesus usou os céus como representativos de Deus ao perguntar aos líderes religiosos se a origem do batismo de João era "do céu ou dos homens". (Mt 21:25; compare isso com Jo 3:27.) O filho pródigo confessou ter pecado "contra o céu", bem como contra o seu próprio pai. (Lu 15:18, 21) "O reino dos céus", portanto, não significa apenas ele ter sua sede nos céus espirituais ou governar dali, mas também ser "o reino de Deus". — Da 2:44; Mt 4:17; 21:43; 2Ti 4:18.

Também, por causa da posição celestial de Deus, tanto homens como anjos elevavam mãos ou face para os céus ao pedir que ele atuasse (Êx 9:22, 23; 10:21, 22), ao fazer um juramento (Da 12:7) e em oração (1Rs 8:22, 23; La 3:41; Mt 14:19; Jo 17:1). Em Deuteronômio 32:40, Jeová fala de si mesmo como 'levantando a mão para o céu em juramento'. Em harmonia com Hebreus 6:13, isto evidentemente significa que Jeová jura por si mesmo. — Veja Is 45:23.

Moradia angélica. Os céus espirituais são também a "moradia correta" dos filhos espirituais de Deus. (Ju 6; Gên 28:12, 13; Mt 18:10; 24:36) A expressão "o exército dos céus", frequentemente aplicada à criação estelar, às vezes descreve esses filhos angélicos de Deus. (1Rs 22:19; compare isso com Sal 103:20, 21; Da 7:10; Lu 2:13; Re 19:14.) Assim, também, "os céus" são personificados como representando os anjos, a "congregação dos santos". — Sal 89:5-7; compare isso com Lu 15:7, 10; Re 12:12.

Representando Governo. Vimos que os céus podem referir-se a Jeová Deus na sua posição soberana. Assim, quando Daniel disse a Nabucodonosor que a experiência pela qual passaria esse imperador babilônio faria com que ele 'soubesse que são os céus que governam', isso queria dizer o mesmo que saber "que o Altíssimo é Governante no reino da humanidade". — Da 4:25, 26.

Todavia, fora da sua referência ao Soberano Supremo, o termo "céus" pode também referir-se a outros poderes governantes enaltecidos ou elevados acima dos seus povos sujeitos. A própria dinastia de reis babilônios, que Nabucodonosor representava, é descrita em Isaías 14:12 como estelar, um "brilhante, filho da alva". Por meio da conquista de Jerusalém, em 607 AEC, esta dinastia babilônica elevara seu trono "acima das estrelas de Deus", sendo que estas "estrelas" evidentemente se referem à linhagem davídica de reis de Judá (do mesmo modo que o Herdeiro do trono davídico, Cristo Jesus, é chamado de "a resplandecente estrela da manhã", em Re 22:16; compare isso com Núm 24:17). Por ter derrubado o divinamente autorizado trono davídico, a dinastia babilônica, na realidade, enalteceu-se até os céus. (Is 14:13, 14) Esta enaltecida grandiosidade e extenso domínio foram também representados no sonho de Nabucodonosor por uma árvore simbólica, cuja altura "atingiu os céus". — Da 4:20-22.

Novos céus e nova terra. A ligação dos "céus" com poder governante ajuda no entendimento do sentido da expressão "novos céus e uma nova terra", encontrada em Isaías 65:17; 66:22, e citada pelo apóstolo Pedro em 2 Pedro 3:13. Observando esta relação, a Cyclopædia (Ciclopédia, 1891, Vol. IV, p. 122) de M'Clintock e Strong comenta: "Em Isa. lxv, 17, um novo céu e um nova terra significam um novo governo, novo reino, novo povo."

Assim como a "terra" pode referir-se a uma sociedade de pessoas (Sal 96:1; veja TERRA); assim também "céus" pode simbolizar o superior poder dominante ou governo sobre essa "terra". A profecia que apresenta a promessa de "novos céus e uma nova terra", dada por meio de Isaías, tratava inicialmente da restauração de Israel do exílio babilônico. Quando os israelitas retornaram à sua pátria, eles entraram num novo sistema de coisas. Ciro, o Grande, foi destacadamente usado por Deus para realizar esta restauração. De volta em Jerusalém, Zorobabel (descendente de Davi) serviu como governador, e Josué, como sumo sacerdote. Em harmonia com o propósito de Jeová, este novo arranjo governamental, ou "novos céus", dirigia ou supervisionava o povo sujeito. (2Cr 36:23; Ag 1:1, 14) Assim, conforme predisse o versículo 18 do capítulo 65 de Isaías, Jerusalém tornou-se "causa para júbilo e seu povo como causa para exultação".

A citação de Pedro, porém, mostra que se devia aguardar um cumprimento futuro, à base da promessa de Deus. (2Pe 3:13) Visto que, neste caso, a promessa de Deus se relaciona com a presença de Cristo Jesus, conforme mostra o versículo 4, os "novos céus e uma nova terra" devem relacionar-se com o Reino messiânico de Deus e seu domínio sobre súditos obedientes. Cristo Jesus, por meio da sua ressurreição e ascensão à mão direita de Deus, passou a ser "mais alto do que os céus" (He 7:26), no sentido de que ele foi assim colocado "muito acima de todo governo, e autoridade, e poder, e senhorio . . . não só neste sistema de coisas, mas também no que há de vir". — Ef 1:19-21; Mt 28:18.

Os seguidores cristãos de Jesus, como "participantes da chamada celestial" (He 3:1), são designados por Deus "herdeiros" em união com Cristo, por meio de quem Deus se propôs "ajuntar novamente todas as coisas". "As coisas nos céus", quer dizer, os chamados para a vida celestial, são os primeiros a serem assim ajuntados em união com Deus por meio de Cristo. (Ef 1:8-11) Sua herança lhes é "reservada nos céus". (1Pe 1:3, 4; Col 1:5; compare isso com Jo 14:2, 3.) Estão "alistados" e têm sua "cidadania" nos céus. (He 12:20-23; Fil 3:20) Constituem a "Nova Jerusalém" observada na visão de João como "descendo do céu, da parte de Deus". (Re 21:2, 9, 10; compare isso com Ef 5:24-27.) Uma vez que esta visão é inicialmente declarada ser de "um novo céu e uma nova terra" (Re 21:1), segue-se que ambos são representados no que se descreve depois. Portanto, o "novo céu" deve corresponder a Cristo junto com sua "noiva", a "Nova Jerusalém", e a "nova terra" é vista nos 'povos da humanidade', que são seus súditos e que recebem as bênçãos do seu governo, conforme descrito nos versículos 3 e 4.

Terceiro céu. Em 2 Coríntios 12:2-4, o apóstolo Paulo fala de um homem que "foi arrebatado . . . até o terceiro céu" e "para o paraíso". As Escrituras não mencionam nenhuma outra pessoa que tenha tido uma experiência como essa. Por isso, parece lógico concluir que Paulo estava falando de sua própria experiência. Alguns têm buscado relacionar a referência de Paulo ao terceiro céu com o antigo conceito rabínico de que existem três estágios de céu, até mesmo "sete céus". No entanto, não há nada nas Escrituras que apoie esse ponto de vista. Como vimos, os céus não foram descritos aqui de modo específico como se estivessem divididos em níveis ou estágios. Por isso, deve-se levar em conta o contexto para determinar se Paulo estava falando dos céus dentro da atmosfera terrestre, dos céus no espaço sideral, dos céus espirituais ou de outra coisa. Assim, tudo indica que "o terceiro céu" se refere à superioridade do governo do Reino do Messias. Para dar ênfase, palavras e expressões são repetidas três vezes na Bíblia. Veja como isso ocorre em Isaías 6:3, Ezequiel 21:27, João 21:15-17 e Revelação 4:8.

O passar do céu e da terra anteriores. A visão de João menciona passarem "o céu anterior e a terra anterior". (Re 21:1; compare isso com 20:11.) Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, os governos terrestres e seus povos são mostrados estarem sujeitos ao governo satânico. (Mt 4:8, 9; Jo 12:31; 2Co 4:3, 4; Re 12:9; 16:13, 14) O apóstolo Paulo referiu-se a "forças espirituais iníquas nos lugares celestiais", junto com seus governos, suas autoridades e seus governantes mundiais. (Ef 6:12) De modo que passar "o céu anterior" indica o fim de governos políticos influenciados por Satanás e seus demônios. Isso está de acordo com o que 2 Pedro 3:7-12 diz sobre a destruição, como que por fogo, dos "céus . . . que agora existem". O texto de Revelação (Apocalipse) 19:17-21 também descreve a destruição do sistema político mundial e de seus apoiadores. Lá diz que a fera simbólica será lançada "no lago ardente que queima com enxofre". (Veja Re 13:1, 2) Quanto a Satanás, Revelação 20:1-3 diz que ele será lançado "no abismo", onde ficará preso por mil anos, e depois será "solto por um pouco".

Rebaixamento do Que É Enaltecido. Visto que os céus representam o que é elevado, o rebaixamento dessas coisas enaltecidas é às vezes representado pela derrubada, ou pelo 'abalo' ou pela 'agitação' dos céus. Diz-se que Jeová "lançou a beleza de Israel do céu para a terra" quando esse foi desolado. Esta beleza incluía o seu reino, e os seus governantes principescos, e o poder destes, e esta beleza foi como que devorada pelo fogo. (La 2:1-3) Mas o conquistador de Israel, Babilônia, mais tarde sofreu a agitação de seu próprio "céu" e o tremor da sua "terra", quando os medos e os persas derrubaram Babilônia, e os deuses celestiais dela mostraram-se falsos e incapazes de salvá-la da perda de seu domínio sobre o país. — Is 13:1, 10-13.

De modo similar, profetizou-se que a posição de Edom, alta como o céu, não o salvaria da destruição, e que a espada de julgamento de Jeová ficaria encharcada nas alturas, ou "céus", de Edom, sem que lhe viesse alguma ajuda de fonte celestial, ou enaltecida. (Is 34:4-7; compare isso com Ob 1-4, 8.) Aqueles que fazem grandes jactâncias, falando iniquamente num estilo elevado como que 'pondo sua boca nos próprios céus', certamente cairão em ruína. (Sal 73:8, 9, 18; compare isso com Re 13:5, 6.) A cidade de Cafarnaum tinha motivos para sentir-se muito favorecida, por causa da atenção que recebeu de Jesus e seu ministério. Entretanto, visto que deixou de aceitar as poderosas obras dele, Jesus perguntou: "Serás por acaso enaltecida ao céu?" e predisse, em vez disso: "Até o Hades descerás." — Mt 11:23.

Escurecimento dos Céus. O escurecimento dos céus ou dos corpos estelares é muitas vezes usado para representar a eliminação das condições prósperas, favoráveis, e sua substituição por perspectivas e condições ameaçadoras, tenebrosas, como quando nuvens escuras eclipsam toda a luz, dia e noite. (Veja Is 50:2, 3, 10.) Este uso dos céus físicos em conexão com a perspectiva mental dos humanos é um tanto similar à antiga expressão árabe: "O céu dele caiu por terra", significando que a superioridade ou prosperidade de alguém diminuiu muito. Em algumas ocasiões Deus usou fenômenos celestiais para demonstrar sua ira. Alguns desses fenômenos escureceram os céus de forma literal. — Êx 10:21-23; Jos 10:12-14; Lu 23:44, 45.

A Judá sobreveio tal dia de escuridão em cumprimento do julgamento feito por Jeová por meio do seu profeta Joel, e atingiu seu clímax na desolação de Judá por Babilônia. (Jl 2:1, 2, 10, 30, 31; compare isso com Je 4:23, 28.) Qualquer esperança de ajuda da parte duma fonte celestial parecia ter-se esgotado, e conforme predito em Deuteronômio 28:65-67, ficaram 'apavorados noite e dia', sem alívio ou esperança de luz do sol de manhã ou de luar à noite. No entanto, por meio do mesmo profeta, Joel, Jeová advertiu os inimigos de Judá que eles sofreriam a mesma situação quando ele executasse o julgamento neles. (Jl 3:12-16) Ezequiel e Isaías usaram este mesmo quadro figurativo ao predizer o julgamento de Deus sobre o Egito e sobre Babilônia, respectivamente. — Ez 32:7, 8, 12; Is 13:1, 10, 11.

O apóstolo Pedro citou a profecia de Joel no dia de Pentecostes, ao exortar uma multidão de ouvintes a 'serem salvos desta geração pervertida'. (At 2:1, 16-21, 40) Os daquela geração que não acataram isso presenciaram um tempo de grave escuridão, quando os romanos sitiaram e finalmente assolaram Jerusalém menos de 40 anos depois. Antes de Pentecostes, porém, Jesus fez uma profecia similar e mostrou que ela se cumpriria no tempo da sua presença. — Mt 24:29-31; Lu 21:25-27; compre isso com Re 6:12-17.

Permanência dos Céus Físicos. Elifaz, o temanita, disse a respeito de Deus: "Eis que não confia nem nos seus santos, e os próprios céus não são realmente puros aos seus olhos." Todavia, Jeová disse a Elifaz que este e seus dois companheiros 'não falaram a verdade a meu respeito assim como fez meu servo Jó'. (Jó 15:1, 15; 42:7) Em contraste, Êxodo 24:10 refere-se aos céus como representando pureza. De modo que, na Bíblia, não se menciona nenhum motivo para Deus destruir os céus físicos.

Que os céus físicos são permanentes é mostrado pelo fato de que são usados em símiles relacionados com coisas eternas, tais como os resultados pacíficos e justos do reino davídico herdado pelo Filho de Deus. (Sal 72:5-7; Lu 1:32, 33) De modo que textos tais como Salmo 102:25, 26, que falam de os céus 'perecerem' e serem 'substituídos assim como uma vestimenta gasta', não devem ser entendidos em sentido literal.

Em Lucas 21:33, Jesus diz que "céu e terra passarão, mas as minhas palavras de modo algum passarão". Outros textos mostram que "céu e terra" vão sempre existir. (Gên 9:16; Sal 104:5; Ec 1:4) Portanto, o "céu e terra" mencionados aqui podem muito bem ser simbólicos, assim como "o céu anterior e a terra anterior" em Revelação 21:1; compare isso com Mateus 24:35.

O Salmo 102:25-27 enfatiza a eternidade e a imperecibilidade de Deus, ao passo que a sua criação física dos céus e da terra é perecível, quer dizer, poderia ser destruída — se fosse do propósito de Deus. Dessemelhante da existência eterna de Deus, a permanência de qualquer parte da sua criação física não é independente. Conforme se vê na terra, a criação física tem de passar por um contínuo processo de renovação, se há de perdurar ou reter sua forma existente. Que os céus físicos dependem da vontade e do poder sustentador de Deus é indicado no Salmo 148, onde, depois de se referir ao sol, à lua e às estrelas, junto com outras partes da criação de Deus, o versículo 6 declara que Deus "os mantém estabelecidos para sempre, por tempo indefinido. Deu um regulamento, e este não passará".

As palavras do Salmo 102:25, 26, aplicam-se a Jeová Deus, mas o apóstolo Paulo as cita com referência a Jesus Cristo. Isto se dá porque o Filho unigênito de Deus era o Agente pessoal de Deus usado na criação do universo físico. Paulo contrasta a permanência do Filho com a da criação física, a qual Deus, se intencionasse isso, poderia 'enrolar assim como a uma capa' e pôr de lado. — He 1:1, 2, 8, 10-12; compare isso com 1Pe 2:3 n.

Várias Expressões Poéticas e Figuradas. Visto que os céus físicos desempenham um papel vital em sustentar e fazer prosperar a vida na terra — pela luz do sol, a chuva, o orvalho, ventos refrescantes e outros benefícios atmosféricos — eles são mencionados poeticamente como "bom depósito" de Jeová. (De 28:11, 12; 33:13, 14) Jeová abre as "portas" desse para abençoar seus servos, assim como quando fez o maná, "o cereal do céu", descer para o solo. (Sal 78:23, 24; Jo 6:31) As nuvens são como "talhas de água" nas câmaras superiores desse depósito, e a chuva cai dali como que por "condutos", certos fatores, tais como montes ou mesmo a intervenção milagrosa de Deus, causando a condensação de água e a subsequente precipitação pluvial em regiões específicas. (Jó 38:37; Je 10:12, 13; 1Rs 18:41-45) Por outro lado, a retirada da bênção de Deus em certas ocasiões resultou em os céus sobre a terra de Canaã serem 'cerrados', tornando-se, na aparência, tão duros e não porosos como o ferro, e tendo um brilho metálico da cor de cobre, com uma atmosfera cheia de pó, sem chuva. — Le 26:19; De 11:16, 17; 28:23, 24; 1Rs 8:35, 36.

Isto ajuda a entender o quadro apresentado em Oseias 2:21-23. Depois de predizer os resultados devastadores da infidelidade de Israel, Jeová fala então do tempo do seu restabelecimento e das resultantes bênçãos. Naquele dia, ele diz, "responderei aos céus, e eles, da sua parte, responderão à terra; e a terra, da sua parte, responderá ao cereal, e ao vinho doce, e ao azeite; e eles, da sua parte, responderão a Jezreel". Evidentemente, isto representa pedir Israel a bênção de Jeová por meio da série de coisas da criação Dele mencionadas aqui. Por este motivo, essas coisas são encaradas como personificadas, e, por isso, como que capazes de fazer uma solicitação ou um pedido. Israel pede cereais, vinho e azeite; estes produtos, por sua vez, procuram sua nutrição e água da terra; a terra, a fim de suprir estas necessidades, requer (ou figuradamente solicita) sol, chuva e orvalho dos céus; e os céus (até então 'cerrados', por causa da retirada da bênção de Deus) podem responder somente se Deus aceitar o pedido e restabelecer seu favor à nação, pondo assim em movimento o ciclo de produção. A profecia oferece garantia de que ele fará isso.

Em 2 Samuel 22:8-15, Davi aparentemente usa a figura dum tremendo temporal para representar o efeito da intervenção de Deus em favor de Davi, libertando-o dos seus inimigos. A ferocidade deste temporal simbólico agita os alicerces dos céus, e estes 'se curvam para baixo' em nuvens escuras, baixas. Compare isso com as condições literais dum temporal descrito em Êxodo 19:16-18; também com as expressões poéticas em Isaías 64:1, 2.

Jeová, o "Pai das luzes celestiais" (Tg 1:17), é frequentemente mencionado como tendo 'estendido os céus', assim como se faria com um pano de tenda. (Sal 104:1, 2; Is 45:12) Os céus, tanto a expansão atmosférica de dia como os céus estrelados à noite, do ponto de vista dos humanos na terra, têm a aparência duma imensa abóbada. Em Isaías 40:22, o símile é de se estender "uma gaze fina", em vez de o pano de tenda mais grosso. Isto expressa a delicada ornamentação desta abóbada celeste. Numa noite clara, os milhares de estrelas, de fato, constituem um tecido rendado estendido sobre o fundo de veludo negro do espaço. Pode-se também notar que até mesmo a enorme galáxia conhecida como Via Láctea, na qual se encontra o nosso sistema solar, tem uma aparência de fina gaze, do ponto de vista da terra.

Do precedente se pode notar que sempre se precisa considerar o contexto para determinar o sentido das expressões figuradas. Assim, quando Moisés chamou "os céus e a terra" por testemunhas das coisas que declarava a Israel, é óbvio que ele não se referia à criação inanimada, mas, antes, aos habitantes inteligentes dos céus e da terra. (De 4:25, 26; 30:19; compare isso com Ef 1:9, 10; Fil 2:9, 10; Re 13:6.) Isto também se aplica à alegria dos céus e da terra com a queda de Babilônia, em Jeremias 51:48. (Veja Re 18:5; 19:1-3.) Igualmente, devem ser os céus espirituais que 'escoam justiça', conforme descrito em Isaías 45:8. Em outros casos, fala-se dos céus literais, mas eles são descritos figuradamente como alegrando-se ou bradando. Por ocasião da vinda de Jeová como juiz à terra, conforme descrito no Salmo 96:11-13, os céus, junto com a terra, o mar e a campina assumem aspecto alegre. (Veja Is 44:23.) Os céus físicos também louvam seu Criador, do mesmo modo que um produto de belo aspecto dá louvor ao artífice que o produz. Na realidade, falam do poder, da sabedoria e da majestade de Jeová. — Sal 19:1-4; 69:34.

Ascensão ao Céu. Em 2 Reis 2:11, 12, o profeta Elias é descrito como "subindo aos céus no vendaval". Os céus, aqui, referem-se aos céus atmosféricos, nos quais ocorrem vendavais, não aos céus espirituais da presença de Deus. Elias não morreu por ocasião desta ascensão, mas continuou vivo por alguns anos após o seu transporte celestial para longe do seu sucessor Eliseu. Tampouco ascendeu Elias aos céus espirituais quando faleceu, visto que Jesus, enquanto na terra, disse claramente que "nenhum homem ascendeu ao céu". (Jo 3:13; veja ELIAS N.º 1 (Eliseu o Sucede).) Em Pentecostes, Pedro disse igualmente a respeito de Davi, que ele "não ascendeu aos céus". (At 2:34) Na realidade, nada nas Escrituras indica que se oferecesse aos servos de Deus uma esperança celestial antes da vinda de Cristo Jesus. Esta esperança surge pela primeira vez nas expressões de Jesus aos seus discípulos (Mt 19:21, 23-28; Lu 12:32; Jo 14:2, 3) e foi por eles plenamente compreendida apenas após Pentecostes de 33 EC. — At 1:6-8; 2:1-4, 29-36; Ro 8:16, 17.

As Escrituras mostram que Cristo Jesus foi o primeiro a ascender da terra aos céus da presença de Deus. (1Co 15:20; He 9:24) Por meio desta ascensão, e de ele apresentar ali o seu sacrifício de resgate, ele 'abriu o caminho' para os que seguiriam — os membros da sua congregação, gerados pelo espírito. (Jo 14:2, 3; He 6:19, 20; 10:19, 20) Estes, ao serem ressuscitados, têm de levar "a imagem do celestial", Cristo Jesus, a fim de ascender aos céus do plano espiritual, porque "carne e sangue" não podem herdar o Reino celestial. — 1Co 15:42-50.

Como podem pessoas "nos lugares celestiais" ainda estar na terra?

O apóstolo Paulo, na sua carta aos efésios, fala de cristãos então vivos na terra como se já estivessem usufruindo uma posição celestial, levantados e 'assentados junto nos lugares celestiais, em união com Cristo Jesus'. (Ef 1:3; 2:6) O contexto mostra que os cristãos ungidos são encarados assim por Deus, por ele os ter 'designado herdeiros' junto com seu Filho na herança celestial. Enquanto ainda na terra, eles foram enaltecidos, ou 'levantados', por meio desta designação. (Ef 1:11, 18-20; 2:4-7, 22) Estes pontos também lançam luz sobre a visão simbólica de Revelação 11:12. Fornecem também a chave para o entendimento do quadro profético de Daniel 8:9-12, onde aquilo que anteriormente foi mostrado representar um poder político é mencionado como 'tornando-se cada vez maior até atingir o exército dos céus', e até mesmo causando que alguns deste exército e das estrelas caíssem para a terra. Em Daniel 12:3, esses servos de Deus, na terra, no predito tempo do fim, são mencionados como raiando "como as estrelas por tempo indefinido". Note também o uso simbólico de estrelas no livro de Revelação, capítulos 1 a 3, onde o contexto mostra que essas "estrelas" se referem a pessoas que obviamente vivem na terra e passam por experiências e tentações terrenas, estrelas que são responsáveis pelas congregações aos seus cuidados. — Re 1:20; 2:1, 8, 12, 18; 3:1, 7, 14.

O caminho para a vida celestial. O caminho para a vida celestial envolve mais do que apenas ter fé no sacrifício resgatador de Cristo e obras de fé em obediência às instruções de Deus. Os escritos inspirados dos apóstolos e discípulos mostram que precisa haver também uma chamada e escolha da pessoa por Deus, mediante seu Filho. (2Ti 1:9, 10; Mt 22:14; 1Pe 2:9) Este convite envolve uma série de passos, ou ações, a fim de qualificar a pessoa para a herança celestial; muitos desses passos são dados por Deus, outros pela pessoa chamada. Entre esses passos, ou ações, encontram-se declarar justo o cristão chamado (Ro 3:23, 24, 28; 8:33, 34); produzi-lo ('gerá-lo') com espírito santo (Jo 1:12, 13; 3:3-6; Tg 1:18); ser ele batizado na morte de Cristo (Ro 6:3, 4; Fil 3:8-11); ungi-lo (2Co 1:21; 1Jo 2:20, 27); santificá-lo (Jo 17:17). O chamado tem de manter a integridade até a morte (2Ti 2:11-13; Re 2:10), e depois de se ter mostrado fiel na sua chamada e escolha (Re 17:14), ele finalmente é ressuscitado para a vida espiritual. — Jo 6:39, 40; Ro 6:5; 1Co 15:42-49; veja DECLARAR JUSTO; RESSURREIÇÃO; SANTIFICAÇÃO; UNGIDO, UNÇÃO.

CÉU, II. "Céu [hebr.: shá·hhaq]", conforme usado pelos escritores bíblicos, pode significar a expansão da atmosfera que cerca a terra, na qual flutuam as nuvens (Is 45:8), ou pode significar a aparente abóbada ou dossel sobre a terra que de dia é azul e de noite está cravejado de estrelas. (Sal 89:37) Na maioria dos casos, o escritor evidentemente apenas se refere àquilo que é alto acima do homem, sem especificar qual o aspecto do "céu" que está envolvido. — Sal 57:10; 108:4.

As finas partículas de pó na atmosfera, as moléculas de vapor de água, e, até certo ponto, as moléculas de outros gases na atmosfera, tais como oxigênio, nitrogênio e bióxido de carbono, difundem os raios de luz, os raios azuis sendo os mais difundidos, o que dá ao céu claro a sua característica cor azul. As finas partículas de pó também desempenham um grande papel na produção de nuvens, ajuntando-se o vapor de água em torno destas partículas.

A palavra hebraica shá·hhaq (céu) também é traduzida "camada fina de pó", "nuvem", "céu nublado"; evidentemente, deriva duma raiz que significa "pulverizar". (2Sa 22:43) Jeová fala de si mesmo como aquele que 'achatou o céu nublado, duro como um espelho fundido'. (Jó 37:18) As partículas que constituem a atmosfera de fato são comprimidas pela força da gravidade, e seus limites superiores se encontram dentro de termos fixos, impedidos pela gravidade de escapar da terra. (Gên 1:6-8) Refletem a luz do sol à maneira de um espelho. Por causa disso, o céu parece luminoso, ao passo que sem a atmosfera o observador na terra veria apenas negrume no céu, com os corpos celestes reluzindo brilhantemente contra um fundo negro, como se dá com a lua desprovida de atmosfera. Os astronautas podem observar a atmosfera da terra desde o espaço sideral como halo iluminado, reluzente.

Jeová usou de linguagem figurada ao avisar Israel de que, em caso de desobediência, os céus acima se tornariam cobre e a terra debaixo, ferro, e a poeira e o pó seriam a chuva da sua terra. Sem dúvida, sob tais condições de falta de chuva, os céus 'cerrados', sem nuvens, se tornariam avermelhados, da cor de cobre, visto que o aumento das partículas de pó na atmosfera tende a difundir a luz azul a ponto de que as ondas vermelhas se destacam mais, assim como o sol, quando se põe, parece vermelho por causa da maior profundidade ou grossura da atmosfera que os raios solares têm de atravessar. — De 28:23, 24; compare isso com 1Rs 8:35, onde se usa "céu" com referência à expansão.

Outra palavra hebraica ocasionalmente traduzida "céus" é sha·má·yim. (De 28:23) Similarmente, a palavra grega ou·ra·nós, também é traduzida "céu".

Quando Jesus ascendeu em direção ao céu, uma nuvem o arrebatou da vista dos discípulos. Enquanto fitavam os olhos no céu, apareceram anjos e disseram: "Homens da Galileia, por que estais parados aí olhando para o céu? Este Jesus, que dentre vós foi acolhido em cima, no céu, virá assim da mesma maneira em que o observastes ir para o céu." (At 1:9-11 n.) Os anjos, na realidade, disseram aos discípulos que não adiantava fitarem o céu, esperando que aparecesse para o verem ali. Pois a nuvem o arrebatara, e ele se tornara invisível. Mas, ele voltaria da mesma maneira, invisivelmente, sem ser observado pelos olhos físicos.

Ocasionalmente, shá·hhaq ("céu") é usado como paralelo de sha·má·yim ("céu[s]"). — Veja Céu, I.

CEVA. Um "principal sacerdote" judeu. Seus sete filhos estavam entre "certos dos judeus itinerantes, que praticavam a expulsão dos demônios". Num caso, na cidade de Éfeso, tentaram exorcismar um demônio por dizer: "Eu vos advirto solenemente por Jesus, a quem Paulo prega." O espírito iníquo respondeu por dizer: "Eu sei de Jesus e estou familiarizado com Paulo; mas quem sois vós?" O homem possesso pelo espírito pulou então sobre os sete filhos de Ceva e os expulsou da casa nus e feridos. Isto resultou no enaltecimento do nome do Senhor e induziu muitos a dar atenção às boas novas pregadas por Paulo. — At 19:13-20.

Nenhum sacerdote judeu de nome Ceva é mencionado em outra parte, a menos que Ceva tenha sido o nome latino dum sacerdote também conhecido por um nome hebraico.

CEVADA [hebr.: se'o·ráh; gr.: kri·thé]. Um importante cereal do gênero Hordeum, de amplo cultivo desde os tempos antigos até agora. Era um dos produtos valiosos que aguardava os israelitas na Terra da Promessa, e aquela região continua a ser "uma terra de trigo e de cevada" até o dia de hoje. — De 8:8.

O nome hebraico da cevada (se'o·ráh) é aparentado com a palavra para "cabelo" (se·'ár) e é descritivo das longas e finas cerdas que formam a característica barba da espiga de cevada. É uma planta muito resistente, mais apta para resistir à seca e adaptada para uma gama mais ampla de climas do que qualquer outro cereal. Quando madura, atinge cerca de 1 m de altura, tendo folhas um pouco mais largas que as do trigo.

A colheita da cevada tem destaque nos eventos dramáticos do livro de Rute. Em Israel semeava-se a cevada no mês de bul (outubro-novembro) após terem começado as chuvas temporãs e o solo se tornar arável. (Is 28:24, 25) A cevada amadurece mais rápido do que o trigo (Êx 9:31, 32), e iniciava-se a colheita no começo da primavera, no mês de nisã (março-abril), começando no quente vale do Jordão e continuando depois nas partes mais elevadas, mais temperadas, até chegar à região planaltina ao L do Jordão, no mês de zive (abril-maio). A colheita da cevada marcava assim um período definido do ano (Ru 1:22; 2Sa 21:9), e seu início correspondia ao tempo da Páscoa, o molho de cereal movido pelo sacerdote no dia 16 de nisã sendo das primícias da cevada. — Le 23:10, 11.

Considerava-se a cevada de valor inferior ao do trigo, apenas um terço daquele do trigo na visão de João, em Revelação 6:6. Era bastante comum e abundante para poder ser usada como forragem para os cavalos de Salomão (1Rs 4:28), finalidade que ainda tem nos tempos modernos. Era moída, para farinha, e então usada na fabricação de pão, muitas vezes na forma de bolo redondo (2Rs 4:42; Ez 4:12; Jo 6:9, 13), e às vezes era misturada com outros cereais. — Ez 4:9.

Embora, sem dúvida, fosse usada mais frequentemente entre os pobres, por causa do seu custo inferior, não há nada que indique que a cevada fosse encarada com desprezo pelos israelitas, nem mesmo pelos que podiam comprar trigo. Assim, estava incluída nas provisões próprias para serem oferecidas à companhia do Rei Davi na sua chegada a Gileade, durante o tempo da revolta de Absalão. (2Sa 17:27-29) Salomão proveu a Hirão 20.000 coros (4.400 kl) de cevada, junto com uma correspondente quantidade de trigo, e grandes quantidades de azeite e de vinho, como suprimentos para os servos do rei tírio, que preparavam materiais para o templo. (2Cr 2:10, 15) O Rei Jotão, de Judá, exigiu tributo do rei de Amom, inclusive 10.000 coros (2.200 kl) de cevada. (2Cr 27:5) Homens que procuravam evitar ser mortos às mãos do assassino Ismael, após a queda de Jerusalém, asseguraram-lhe que possuíam "tesouros escondidos no campo, trigo, e cevada, e azeite, e mel". — Je 41:8.

No entanto, a cevada era um alimento comum e inferior, e alguns comentadores sugerem que estas qualidades estão representadas na figura de "um bolo redondo de pão de cevada" visto no sonho do midianita e que simbolizava o exército humilde de Gideão. — Jz 7:13, 14.

Oseias pagou 15 peças de prata (se foram siclos, US$ 33), e um ômer e meio (330 l) de cevada para comprar de volta a adúltera Gômer como esposa (Os 1:3; 3:1, 2), preço que alguns comentadores consideram ser equivalente ao preço de um escravo, 30 siclos de prata (US$ 66). (Êx 21:32) A 'oferta do ciúme' que a Lei exigia no caso de um homem suspeitar infidelidade sexual da parte da sua esposa era um décimo de um efa (2,2 l) de farinha de cevada. (Núm 5:14, 15) A cevada era também usada na medição, sendo a quantidade necessária para se semear um campo o meio legal para se determinar o valor do campo. — Le 27:16.

CHACAL [hebr.: tan]. Uma espécie de cão selvagem com focinho comprido e pontudo, e basta cauda, e que se assemelha à raposa. Este animal (Canis aureus) ainda é encontrado na Palestina. Embora o chacal possa atacar e matar aves e até mesmo cordeiros, e, de fato, alimentar-se de quase tudo, inclusive de frutas, é basicamente um necrófago que se alimenta de carniça. Assim, este animal presta um serviço útil, visto que a carniça, de outro modo, poderia ser um foco de germes. Os chacais costumam caçar à noite, sozinhos, em pares ou em pequenas matilhas. Durante o dia, usualmente dormem em lugares desolados, em buracos no solo, em cavernas, em prédios abandonados ou em ruínas.

Visto que os chacais são habitantes de regiões ermas, solitárias e mesmo desérticas, o domínio do chacal é usado figuradamente nas Escrituras para representar um estado de completa desolação, sem habitante humano. Diversas profecias usam esta figura de retórica para predizer a desolação de Jerusalém, das cidades de Judá, de Hazor, de Babilônia e de Edom. (Je 9:11; 10:22; 49:33; 51:37; Is 34:5, 13; Mal 1:3) A Bíblia faz também referência ao uivo ou aulido lamuriento do chacal. (Is 13:22; Miq 1:8) O lamento do chacal começa ao pôr-do-sol e é um uivo prolongado, repetido três ou quatro vezes, cada vez sendo num diapasão um pouco mais elevado do que o anterior. O uivo finalmente termina numa série de latidos curtos, altos e esganiçados.

Nas Escrituras, o chacal figura repetidas vezes num cenário ilustrativo. Jó, ao descrever seu próprio estado lamentável, exclama que se tornou "irmão de chacais". (Jó 30:29) Com respeito à derrota humilhante do povo de Deus, o salmista, talvez com referência ao campo de batalha, onde os chacais se reúnem para se alimentar dos mortos (veja Sal 68:23), lamentou: "Tu nos quebrantaste no lugar dos chacais." (Sal 44:19) O sítio de Jerusalém por Babilônia, em 607 AEC, trouxe a tensão da fome, com o resultado de que mães tratavam cruelmente seus próprios filhos. Neste respeito, Jeremias apropriadamente contrastou a crueldade "do meu povo" com os cuidados maternos dos chacais. — La 4:3, 10.

Por causa das intensas secas na terra de Judá, quando não tinha a bênção de Jeová, as zebras são representadas como fungando o vento, isto é, respirando ofegantes, assim como os chacais. (Je 14:1, 2, 6) Por outro lado, com referência à restauração do seu povo, Jeová prometeu que o lugar de permanência de chacais passaria a ter grama, juncos e papiros. E prover Jeová água ao seu povo no ermo faria com que animais tais como o chacal o glorificassem. — Is 35:7; 43:20, 21.

CHAVE. Instrumento usado para trancar ou destrancar portas e portões. O termo "chave" é usado na Bíblia tanto literalmente como de modo figurado.

A chave dos tempos bíblicos frequentemente era uma peça chata de madeira, com pinos que correspondiam aos buracos na lingueta dentro da porta dum lar. Essa chave servia para empurrar a lingueta ou o ferrolho dentro da porta, em vez de girar na fechadura, assim como faz a chave moderna. A chave era frequentemente carregada no cinto, ou era presa a outro objeto e carregada sobre o ombro. — Is 22:22.

Encontraram-se chaves egípcias de bronze ou de ferro, consistindo numa haste reta de aproximadamente 13 cm de comprimento, com três ou mais dentes salientes na extremidade. Os romanos também usavam chaves de metal, inclusive algumas do tipo feito para girar na fechadura. Descobriram-se chaves de bronze na Palestina.

O rei moabita Eglom usava uma fechadura e chave para a porta do seu quarto de terraço. (Jz 3:15-17, 20-25) Certos levitas pós-exílicos foram encarregados do serviço de guarda no templo, sendo "encarregados da chave, sim, para abrir de manhã em manhã". — 1Cr 9:26, 27.

Uso Figurado. Em sentido figurado, a Bíblia usa o termo "chave" para simbolizar autoridade, governo e poder. Eliaquim, elevado a uma posição de confiança e honra, teve "a chave da casa de Davi" posta sobre o seu ombro. (Is 22:20-22) No Oriente Médio, em tempos mais recentes, uma chave grande sobre o ombro de um homem o identificava como pessoa de destaque ou importância. Antigamente, o conselheiro do rei, encarregado do poder das chaves, talvez exercesse a supervisão geral dos aposentos reais e também pudesse determinar os candidatos hábeis para o serviço do rei. Na mensagem angélica à congregação em Filadélfia, fala-se do enaltecido Jesus Cristo como tendo "a chave de Davi", e é ele quem "abre de modo que ninguém feche, e fecha de modo que ninguém abra". (Re 3:7, 8) Como o Herdeiro do pacto para um Reino, feito com Davi, Jesus Cristo foi encarregado do governo da família da fé e da chefia do Israel espiritual. (Lu 1:32, 33) Pela sua autoridade, simbolizada pela "chave de Davi", ele pode abrir ou fechar portas figurativas, ou oportunidades e privilégios. — Veja 1Co 16:9; 2Co 2:12, 13.

Como usou Pedro "as chaves do reino" que lhe foram confiadas?

Jesus disse a Pedro: "Eu te darei as chaves do reino dos céus, e tudo o que amarrares na terra, será a coisa amarrada nos céus, e tudo o que soltares na terra será a coisa solta nos céus." (Mt 16:19) A identificação destas chaves logicamente tem de basear-se em outras informações bíblicas. Jesus fez outra referência ao assunto de chaves quando disse aos líderes religiosos, versados na Lei: "Tirastes a chave do conhecimento; vós mesmos não entrastes e impedistes os que estavam entrando!" (Lu 11:52) A comparação deste texto com Mateus 23:13 indica que o 'entrar' de que se falou refere-se à entrada no "reino dos céus". De modo que o uso da palavra "chave" na declaração de Jesus a Pedro indica que Pedro teria o privilégio de iniciar um programa de instrução, que abriria a porta para oportunidades especiais com respeito ao Reino dos céus.

Pedro, diferente dos líderes religiosos hipócritas daquele tempo, claramente usou o divinamente provido conhecimento para ajudar pessoas a 'entrar no reino', notavelmente em três ocasiões. Uma delas foi no dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, quando Pedro, sob inspiração, revelou a uma multidão reunida que Jeová Deus ressuscitara a Jesus e o enaltecera à Sua própria mão direita nos céus, e que Jesus, naquela posição régia, derramara espírito santo sobre os seus discípulos reunidos. Em resultado deste conhecimento, e agindo em harmonia com a exortação de Pedro: "Arrependei-vos, e cada um de vós seja batizado no nome de Jesus Cristo, para o perdão de vossos pecados, e recebereis a dádiva gratuita do espírito santo", cerca de 3.000 judeus (e conversos judeus) deram o passo que levou a se tornarem prospectivos membros do "reino dos céus". Outros judeus, posteriormente, seguiram o exemplo deles. — At 2:1-41.

Em outra ocasião, Pedro e João foram enviados aos samaritanos, os quais não haviam recebido o espírito santo, embora tivessem sido batizados. No entanto, os dois apóstolos 'oraram por eles' e "impuseram-lhes então as suas mãos", e estes receberam espírito santo. — At 8:14-17.

A terceira ocasião em que Pedro foi usado de modo especial para abrir a pessoas o privilégio de ser herdeiros do Reino foi quando ele foi enviado ao lar do gentio Cornélio, um centurião italiano. Pedro, por revelação divina, reconheceu e declarou a imparcialidade de Deus com respeito aos judeus e aos gentios, e que pessoas das nações, se temessem a Deus e praticassem a justiça, eram então aceitáveis a Deus, assim como seus equivalentes judeus. Enquanto Pedro apresentava este conhecimento aos ouvintes gentios, veio sobre eles a dádiva celestial do espírito santo e eles falaram milagrosamente em línguas. Foram subsequentemente batizados e tornaram-se os primeiros prospectivos membros do "reino dos céus" dentre os gentios. A descerrada porta de oportunidade, para crentes gentios se tornarem membros da congregação cristã, permaneceu daí em diante aberta. — At 10:1-48; 15:7-9.

Mateus 16:19 pode ser vertido com precisão gramatical: "Tudo o que amarrares na terra, será a coisa amarrada [ou: a coisa já amarrada] nos céus, e tudo o que soltares na terra, será a coisa solta [ou: a coisa já solta] nos céus." A tradução, em inglês, de Charles B. Williams, reza aqui: "Seja o que for que proibires na terra tem de ser o que já é proibido no céu, e seja o que for que permitires na terra, tem de ser o que já é permitido no céu." A tradução literal do perito em grego Robert Young reza: "Seja o que for que possas ligar na terra, já terá sido ligado nos céus, e seja o que for que possas soltar na terra, já terá sido solto nos céus." Visto que outros textos tornam claro que o ressuscitado Jesus continuou sendo a única Cabeça verdadeira da congregação cristã, é óbvio que a sua promessa a Pedro não significava que Pedro ditaria ao céu o que devia ou não devia ser solto, mas, antes, que Pedro seria usado como instrumento do céu para descerrar, ou soltar, determinadas coisas. — 1Co 11:3; Ef 4:15, 16; 5:23; Col 2:8-10.

"Chave do abismo." Em Revelação 9:1-11, apresenta-se a visão de uma "estrela" desde o céu a que foi dada "a chave da cova do abismo" e que abre esta cova e solta um enxame de gafanhotos, cujo rei é "o anjo do abismo". Visto que o abismo, conforme mostrado em Romanos 10:6, 7, evidentemente inclui o Hades (embora não se limite ao Hades), parece que "a chave da cova do abismo" inclui "as chaves da morte e do Hades", na posse do ressuscitado Jesus Cristo, conforme declarado em Revelação 1:18. Estas "chaves", sem dúvida, são simbólicas da autoridade de Jesus, de libertar pessoas duma restrição que está além do poder de outrem, exceto Deus ou seu representante autorizado. Portanto, as "chaves" incluem a autoridade de ressuscitar literalmente pessoas, libertando-as das restrições da sepultura, bem como de livrar pessoas dum figurativo estado de morte. (Jo 5:24-29; compare isso com Re 11:3-12; veja MORTE [Mudança de estado ou condição espiritual].) O último uso registrado de "a chave do abismo" ocorre em Revelação 20:1-7, onde a visão descreve um anjo com essa chave lançando Satanás no abismo, fechando-o e selando-o sobre ele por mil anos. Ao fim deste período, Satanás é solto da sua "prisão", evidentemente pelo uso da "chave" de autoridade. — Veja ABISMO.

CHEFIA. Veja CABEÇA, SER.

CHESVÃ. Veja CALENDÁRIO.

CHIBATEAMENTO. Veja ESPANCAMENTO.

CHIBOLETE. Veja XIBOLETE.

CHICOTE. Usualmente uma corda ou um açoite de couro com cabo, flexíveis. Este instrumento tem sido usado desde tempos antigos para chicotear humanos (2Cr 10:11, 14), bem como para enxotar e dirigir animais. — Pr 26:3; Na 3:2.

O Rei Roboão gabou-se de que, ao passo que seu pai Salomão havia castigado os israelitas com "chicotes", ele o faria com "azorragues". A expressão de Roboão era figurativa, mas os azorragues mencionados talvez fossem açoites equipados com pontas agudas, visto que a palavra hebraica (ʽaq·rab·bím) para "azorragues" literalmente significa "escorpiões". — 1Rs 12:11, 14, n.; 2Cr 10:11, 14.

Elifaz, o temanita, falou "do chicote da língua". (Jó 4:1; 5:21) Evidentemente alude-se ao uso da língua para infligir feridas, como por calúnia ou ultraje. — Veja Pr 12:18; Tg 3:5-10.

No tempo da Páscoa de 30 EC, Jesus, "depois de fazer um chicote de cordas, expulsou do templo a todos com as ovelhas e o gado". O que indica que Jesus usou o chicote somente em animais, não nos homens com ovelhas e gado, é o fato de que expulsou os vendedores de pombas verbalmente, não com o chicote. Também, por expulsar o gado com o chicote, ele transtornou as atividades comerciais desses homens, e estes, naturalmente, iriam atrás do gado, para recuperá-lo. — Jo 2:13-17.

CHIFRE (BUZINA). Chifres de animais eram usados em Israel como recipientes para azeite, como vasos para beber, como tinteiros e como receptáculos para cosméticos, bem como quais instrumentos musicais ou de sinalização. — 1Sa 16:1, 13; 1Rs 1:39; Ez 9:2; veja TINTEIRO DE SECRETÁRIO.

Instrumentos Musicais e de Sinalização. A palavra hebraica qé·ren é a designação costumeira de chifre de animal. (Gên 22:13) É usada uma vez para se referir a um instrumento de sopro, a saber, na expressão "corno [hebr.: qé·ren] de carneiro", em Josué 6:5. Esta expressão é colocada em paralelo com a palavra hebraica shoh·fár (buzina), um termo que sempre se refere ao chifre de carneiro usado como instrumento musical. O moderno shoh·fár é um chifre oco de carneiro, de uns 36 cm de comprimento, desentortado por aquecimento, mas curvado para cima na ponta do pavilhão. Tem um bocal separado, para facilitar o sopro. O shoh·fár dos tempos bíblicos, segundo se pensa, não tinha bocal separado, e, de acordo com o Talmude, o chifre de carneiro não era endireitado, mas deixado curvo.

O shoh·fár era usado basicamente como instrumento de sinalização. Reunia as forças israelitas, às vezes tocava o "sinal de alarme" contra uma cidade a ser atacada, e dirigia outras manobras na guerra. (Jz 3:27; 6:34; 2Sa 2:28; Jl 2:1; Sof 1:16) No caso dum ataque inimigo, o shoh·fár dava o aviso. (Ne 4:18-20) Por ter sido apenas um instrumento de sinalização na batalha, o toque de 300 dessas buzinas, em circunstâncias normais, indicaria um exército de considerável tamanho. Portanto, quando os midianitas ouviram o toque de buzinas por todos os que compunham o grupo de 300 homens de Gideão, "o acampamento inteiro pôs-se a correr", aterrorizado. — Jz 7:15-22.

Além de a buzina anunciar toda lua nova, proclamava também o ano de jubileu e contribuía para o espírito alegre de outras ocasiões. (Sal 81:3; Le 25:8-10; 2Sa 6:15; 2Cr 15:14) Quando Jeová especificou os termos do pacto da Lei, o milagroso som duma buzina foi um dos aspectos do espetáculo no monte Sinai. (Êx 19:16-19; 20:18) Proclamar o começo e o fim do sábado com o shoh·fár parece ter sido um costume estabelecido antes da Era Comum.

Parece que israelitas de todas as posições sociais sabiam usar o shoh·fár. Os sacerdotes o tocavam ao marchar em volta de Jericó, e provavelmente eram os que anunciavam com ele o jubileu. (Jos 6:4, 5, 15, 16, 20; Le 25:8-10) Ser ele tocado por Eúde, por Gideão e seus 300 homens, e por Joabe, bem como pelos vigias, que não necessariamente eram levitas, indica uma familiaridade geral com este instrumento. — Jz 3:27; 6:34; 7:22; 2Sa 2:28; Ez 33:2-6.

O termo hebraico yoh·vél (carneiro) é usado como sinônimo de shoh·fár em Êxodo 19:13, onde é vertido "buzina de carneiro". Em Daniel 3:5, 7, 10, 15, aparece qé·ren em aramaico como parte da orquestra babilônica. — Veja TROMBETA.

Chifres de Altares. Os chifres, tanto do altar de incenso como do altar de sacrifícios, no tabernáculo, eram projeções em forma de chifre, estendendo-se dos quatro cantos. Eram recobertos com o mesmo material que o altar, quer cobre, quer ouro. (Êx 27:2; 37:25, 26) Os altares no templo de Salomão provavelmente seguiam o modelo daqueles do tabernáculo. — 1Rs 6:20, 22.

Foi nos chifres do altar de sacrifícios que Moisés pôs um pouco do sangue do touro da oferta pelo pecado, por ocasião da investidura, a fim de "purificar de pecado o altar". (Le 8:14, 15) Segundo a orientação de Jeová, o sacerdote devia pôr o sangue de certos sacrifícios nos chifres quer de um altar, quer do outro, dependendo do sacrifício oferecido. — Le 4:7, 18, 25, 30, 34; 16:18.

Jeová disse que os pecados de Judá estavam gravados "nos chifres dos seus altares" (Je 17:1), tornando os altares impuros e seus sacrifícios inaceitáveis; e em Amós 3:14 Jeová declara seu propósito de dessagrar os altares da adoração do bezerro, em Betel, por cortar-lhes os chifres.

A declaração em Êxodo 21:14 talvez signifique que mesmo um sacerdote devia ser executado por assassínio, ou que o ato de agarrar os chifres do altar não protegeria nenhum assassino deliberado. — Veja 1Rs 2:28-34.

Os altares observados em visão por Ezequiel e por João tinham chifres. — Ez 43:15; Re 9:13, 14.

Uso Figurado. O chifre dum animal (hebr.: qé·ren; gr.: ké·ras) é uma arma terrível e foi biblicamente usado com bastante frequência em sentido figurado, especialmente nas Escrituras Hebraicas. Governantes e dinastias regentes, tanto justos como iníquos, eram simbolizados por chifres, e obterem eles conquistas era comparado a marrar com chifres. — De 33:17; Da 7:24; 8:2-10, 20-24; Za 1:18-21; Lu 1:69-71; Re 13:1, 11; 17:3, 12; veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.

Num caso, Jeová, ao assegurar a seu povo a vitória, disse que 'mudaria o chifre da filha de Sião em ferro'. (Miq 4:13) Ao passo que Jeová enaltecia o chifre do seu povo, ou fazia que ficasse exaltado, os iníquos eram avisados a não exaltarem arrogantemente seu chifre, porque os chifres dos iníquos seriam cortados. (1Sa 2:1; Sal 75:4, 5, 10; 89:17; Am 6:12-14) Ao expressar seu sentimento de completo abandono, Jó declara em lamento: "Enfiei meu chifre no próprio pó." — Jó 16:15.

"Chifre" pode também ser usado para descrever um objeto em forma de chifre. Em Ezequiel 27:15, os "chifres de marfim" provavelmente se referem a defesas de elefante. Em Isaías 5:1, a frase hebraica "um chifre, filho de óleo [ou gordura]" evidentemente se refere a uma "ladeira fértil", usando-se o "chifre" para representar o aclive da colina. — NM n.

CHIPRE. Ilha no canto NE do mar Mediterrâneo, situada a uns 70 km da costa da Cilícia, na Ásia Menor, e a uns 100 km da costa síria. Chipre é a terceira maior ilha do Mediterrâneo, depois da Sicília e da Sardenha. A área principal de Chipre tem cerca de 160 km de comprimento, mas um braço estreito de terra estende-se no canto NE por mais uns 72 km. A ilha tem 97 km de largura no ponto mais amplo. As montanhas Tróodos no SO têm o pico mais alto, o monte Olimpo, que atinge 1.951 m. Outra cadeia de montanhas se estende ao longo da costa setentrional, e entre estas duas cadeias há a planície central. O inverno cobre os picos dos montes com neve, ao passo que o verão traz um tempo quente e seco às planícies. Desde tempos antigos, a ilha era famosa pelas suas ricas reservas de cobre, e o nome da ilha tornou-se sinônimo deste metal. (A palavra portuguesa "cobre" deriva da grega Ký·pros.)

A evidência histórica aponta principalmente Chipre como a "Quitim" das Escrituras Hebraicas. (Is 23:1, 12; Da 11:30) A ilha era famosa não somente por causa do cobre, mas também por sua excelente madeira, especialmente cipreste, o qual, pelo visto, era exportado para Tiro, na costa fenícia, para ser usado na construção de navios. — Ez 27:2, 6.

Em vista das suas associações com a Quitim bíblica, seria de esperar que a população original de Chipre evidenciasse alguma conexão com a Grécia. (Veja Gên 10:4; Javã era o progenitor dos jônios ou primitivos gregos.) E, conforme mostrado no artigo QUITIM, esta conexão existiu mesmo.

Os reis das cidades-estados de Chipre se aliaram a Alexandre Magno depois de sua vitória na batalha de Isso, em 333 AEC. Após a morte de Alexandre, a dinastia ptolomaica do Egito assumiu o controle, e Chipre permaneceu, de modo geral, dentro do domínio egípcio até 58 AEC, quando foi anexada por Roma. Embora não fossem especificamente alistados, é provável que judeus de Chipre estivessem presentes em Jerusalém na festa de Pentecostes de 33 EC. O levita José, mais conhecido como Barnabé, nasceu em Chipre. — At 4:36.

Cristianismo. Em resultado da perseguição movida aos cristãos após o martírio de Estêvão, os discípulos foram dispersos, e alguns deles foram para Chipre, onde testemunharam aos judeus residentes ali. Certos cristãos cipriotas foram à cidade de Antioquia, defronte de Chipre, na costa síria, e pregaram com muito êxito entre pessoas que, como eles, falavam grego. (At 11:19, 20) Quando Paulo e Barnabé, acompanhados por João Marcos, foram enviados de Antioquia na sua primeira viagem missionária (c. 47-48 EC), seu território inicial estava na ilha pátria de Barnabé, Chipre. Chegando à importante cidade comercial de Salamina, na costa E de Chipre, encontraram ali mais de uma sinagoga, indicando uma população judaica de substancial tamanho. Depois de publicarem a palavra de Deus ali, atravessaram a ilha inteira até Pafos, na costa O, naquele tempo a capital provincial romana. Ali se deu o encontro com o interessado procônsul, Sérgio Paulo, e com o feiticeiro opositor, Elimas (Barjesus). — At 13:1-12.

A referência do historiador Lucas a um procônsul em Chipre é correta. Chipre tinha sido transferida para o controle do Senado romano, em 22 AEC, e, portanto, o governador designado da ilha levava daí em diante o título, não de legado, mas de procônsul, governador adjunto, atuando como representante do Senado.

Do porto de Pafos, Paulo e seus companheiros navegaram para a Panfília, na costa da Ásia Menor. (At 13:13) Cerca de dois anos depois, Barnabé retornou à sua pátria com João Marcos, para mais trabalho de fazer discípulos, ao passo que Paulo empreendeu a sua segunda viagem missionária através da Ásia Menor (c. 49 EC). (At 15:36-41) No fim da terceira viagem de Paulo (c. 56 EC), navegando de Pátara, na costa SO da Ásia Menor, em caminho para a Fenícia, o apóstolo passou à vista de Chipre, mas 'deixando-a atrás, pela esquerda', evidentemente passando pela extremidade SO da ilha, visto que o navio se dirigia a Tiro. (At 21:1-3) Não muito tempo depois, ao chegar a Jerusalém, Paulo foi acolhido no lar de Mnáson, o qual, assim como Barnabé, era natural de Chipre. (At 21:15, 16) Na viagem de Paulo para Roma, seu navio velejou "sob o abrigo de Chipre, porque os ventos eram contrários". Visto que os ventos prevalecentes naquela época do ano são do O e do NO, o que dificultaria a travessia do mar aberto, isto evidentemente fez com que o navio velejasse em torno do extremo L de Chipre e depois ao longo da costa da Ásia Menor, onde as brisas vindas da terra o ajudariam a seguir seu rumo para o O. — At 27:4, 5, 9, 12.

CHOCALHO. Veja SISTRO.

CHORO. Uma expressão de forte emoção (tal como pesar) por se verterem lágrimas. Tanto homens como mulheres do passado, inclusive poderosos guerreiros, tais como Davi, choraram, não considerando isso um sinal de fraqueza. (Gên 42:24; 43:30; 45:2, 3, 14, 15; 46:29; Ru 1:9, 14; 2Sa 13:36; Jó 30:25; Sal 6:6-8) A morte de um ente querido ou de um amigo era uma das principais causas de choro. (2Sa 18:33-19:4; Lu 7:11-15; 8:49-56; Jo 20:11-15) E o falecimento de pessoas respeitadas e amadas podia dar origem a um choro nacional (2Sa 3:31-34), devotando-se às vezes longos períodos a tal expressão de pesar. (Gên 50:1-3, 10, 11; Núm 20:29; De 34:8) Outras circunstâncias que ocasionavam choro eram uma derrota na guerra (De 1:44, 45; Je 31:15; La 1:16), cativeiro (Sal 137:1), opressão (Ec 4:1), grande calamidade (Est 3:13, 14; 4:1-4) e remorso pelo pecado (Esd 10:1-4; Je 3:21, 22; 31:9; Jl 2:12; Lu 22:54-62; Tg 4:8, 9; veja PRANTO). Choro numa cerimônia religiosa era associado com a adoração do deus babilônico Tamuz. — Ez 8:14.

Além dos sentimentos de perda pessoal ou de aflição, uma profunda preocupação ou um intenso sentimento a favor de outros frequentemente provocava choro. Neste respeito, o apóstolo Paulo falou de ter admoestado e corrigido concrentes com lágrimas. (At 20:31; 2Co 2:4) Com choro, ele mencionou aqueles que estavam "andando como inimigos da estaca de tortura do Cristo". (Fil 3:18, 19) E por causa do íntimo vínculo de amor existente entre Paulo e os superintendentes da congregação de Éfeso, todos choraram ao saberem da possibilidade de nunca mais verem o rosto do apóstolo. — At 20:36-38.

Havia ocasiões em que os adoradores de Jeová choravam durante a oração, assim como fizeram Ana, Ezequias e Neemias. (1Sa 1:9-11; 2Rs 20:1-5; Ne 1:2-4; Sal 39:12) Até mesmo Jesus Cristo, enquanto na terra, suplicava e rogava ao seu Pai "com fortes clamores e lágrimas". — He 5:7.

CHOUPOS [hebr.: ‛ara·vím (plural)]. O nome hebraico desta árvore corresponde ao árabe gharab, que continua a ser usado para o choupo do Eufrates. Assim, embora o choupo e o salgueiro sejam da mesma família de árvores, e ambos sejam comuns no Oriente Médio, os modernos lexicógrafos favorecem o choupo (Populus euphratica) na tradução. — Veja Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento) de Koehler e Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 733; Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento) de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 788; The New Westminster Dictionary of the Bible (O Novo Dicionário Bíblico de Westminster), editado por H. Gehman, 1970, p. 998.

O choupo é muito comum ao longo das margens do Eufrates (ao passo que o salgueiro é comparativamente raro ali), e assim se ajusta bem à referência no Salmo 137:1, 2, que descreve os exilados judeus em choro pendurando suas harpas nos choupos. As folhas pequenas, viçosas, em forma de coração, do choupo do Eufrates (também chamado álamo), têm pecíolos achatados, que pendem obliquamente do caule principal, e isto resulta em balouçarem com a mais leve brisa, movimento que poderia sugerir a agitação emocional de pessoas chorando de pesar.

Os choupos do Eufrates são também encontrados ao longo das margens de rios e correntes na Síria e na Palestina, e especialmente no vale do rio Jordão. Ali, junto com as tamargueiras, frequentemente constituem densos matagais, ao passo que em outros lugares talvez atinjam a altura de 9 a 14 m. Em todas as referências bíblicas, esses choupos são associados com cursos de água ou ‘vales de torrente’. Estavam incluídos nas árvores cujos galhos eram usados na Festividade das Barracas (Le 23:40); ofereciam abrigo para o poderoso “beemote” (hipopótamo) ao longo do rio (Jó 40:15, 22); e a facilidade com que brotam ao longo de lugares bem regados é usada em Isaías 44:3, 4, para descrever o rápido crescimento e aumento resultante de Jeová derramar bênçãos e espírito.

CHOUPOS, VALE DA TORRENTE DOS. Em Isaías 15:7, o profeta descreve os fugitivos moabitas como escapando, com seus bens, através do “vale da torrente dos choupos”. Se a fuga deles foi para o S, como é provável, então este vale de torrente parece referir-se ao “vale da torrente de Zerede” (Núm 21:12; De 2:13), que servia de fronteira entre Moabe e Edom, ao S. O vale da torrente de Zerede em geral é identificado com o uádi el-Hasa’, que desemboca na extremidade S do Mar Morto. No seu curso inferior passa através duma pequena planície que em alguns pontos é um pouco pantanosa, e assim poderia ser um lugar apropriado para choupos. — Veja ZEREDE, VALE DA TORRENTE DE.

CHUMBO. Um dos elementos metálicos mais pesados, com o peso específico de 11,34. O metal cinza-opaco era útil como peso nas linhas de pesca e nas redes, e para tampas ou coberturas pesadas. Moisés cantou poeticamente em triunfo que os egípcios “afundaram como chumbo [hebr.: ‛o·fé·reth]” no Mar Vermelho. (Êx 15:10) O verbo grego traduzido ‘sondar’ em At 27:28 (bo·lí·zo) significa literalmente “lançar o chumbo”. A palavra hebraica traduzida “prumo” em Amós 7:7, 8 (’anákh) talvez significasse “chumbo” ou “estanho”. Para dar-lhes permanência e legibilidade, às vezes derramava-se chumbo líquido nas gravuras em pedra — um costume que remonta pelo menos aos dias de Jó. (Jó 19:23, 24) “Soldadura” (hebr.: dé·veq) é mencionada em Isaías 41:7, em conexão com a fabricação de ídolos, mas não se sabe se a soldadura era feita com chumbo e estanho, como hoje.

A fonte mais comum de chumbo era galena, o minério sulfeto de chumbo. Era extraído no Arabá, entre a extremidade S do Mar Morto e o golfo de Acaba. Társis (Espanha) era outra fonte de fornecimento. (Ez 27:12) O minério de chumbo tinha de ser fundido num forno igual aos minérios de outros metais. (Je 6:29; Ez 22:18-20; compare isso com Núm 31:22, 23.) O primeiro passo no processo de refinamento convertia o sulfeto de chumbo em óxido de chumbo, que às vezes era usado como esmalte para cerâmica, conforme evidenciado nas ruínas do Egito e de Nínive. — Veja REFINAÇÃO, REFINADOR.

CHUVA. Parte vital do ciclo pelo qual a água que se eleva na atmosfera em forma de vapor, desde as superfícies de terra e de água do globo, mais tarde se condensa e cai para o solo, assim provendo a umidade necessária para a vida vegetal e animal. A Bíblia menciona a chuva em conexão com este ciclo sabiamente provido e confiável. — Jó 36:27, 28; Ec 1:7; Is 55:10.

Em adição às palavras comuns para chuva, vários termos hebraicos e gregos que se referem à chuva têm os sentidos diversos de “aguaceiro; chuvada” (1Rs 18:41; Ez 1:28), “chuva contínua” (Pr 27:15), “chuva outonal ou temporã” e “chuva primaveril ou serôdia” (De 11:14; Tg 5:7), “chuvas suaves” (De 32:2), “temporal” (Is 4:6) e “chuvas copiosas” (Sal 65:10).

Num ponto logo cedo na história da preparação da terra, “Deus não fizera chover sobre a terra”, mas “uma neblina subia da terra e regava toda a superfície do solo”. O tempo a que isso se refere evidentemente é cedo no terceiro “dia” criativo, antes de aparecer a vegetação. (Gên 1:9-13; 2:5, 6; veja BRUMA, NEBLINA, NÉVOA.) O primeiro caso, no registro bíblico, em que se menciona especificamente chuva caindo é no relato sobre o Dilúvio. Então, “abriram-se as comportas dos céus”, e “o aguaceiro sobre a terra continuou por quarenta dias e quarenta noites”. — Gên 7:11, 12; 8:2.

Formação. Entre as perguntas que Jeová fez a Jó, enfatizando o limitado entendimento do homem a respeito das forças e das leis da criação e da terra, estava a seguinte: “Acaso existe um pai para a chuva?” (Jó 38:28) Embora os meteorologistas tenham estudado extensamente a formação da chuva, o que surgiu disso são “teorias”, conforme diz The World Book Encyclopedia (A Enciclopédia do Livro Mundial, 1987, Vol. 16, pp. 123, 124). Ao passo que o ar quente, com vapor de água, ascende e esfria, a umidade se condensa formando gotículas de água. Uma teoria sustenta que, quando gotas maiores caem através da nuvem, colidem com as gotículas menores e as absorvem, até se tornarem pesadas demais para o ar sustentá-las. Outra teoria argumenta que cristais de gelo se formam no alto das nuvens, onde a temperatura é abaixo de zero, e se transformam em chuva ao cair através de ar mais quente.

Jeová Como Fonte. Jeová não era mero “deus da chuva” para Israel. Não era como Baal, que os cananeus achavam trazia a estação chuvosa ao despertar para a vida. Os israelitas fiéis reconheciam que Jeová, não Baal, podia reter a preciosa chuva. Isto foi claramente ilustrado quando Jeová causou uma seca em Israel na época em que a adoração de Baal estava no seu apogeu, no tempo do profeta Elias. — 1Rs 17:1, 7; Tg 5:17, 18.

Foi Jeová quem preparou a chuva para a terra. (Sal 147:8; Is 30:23) Ele “abriu um canal para a inundação”, referindo-se talvez ao modo em que Deus faz com que as nuvens canalizem a chuva para baixo, sobre certas partes do globo. (Jó 38:25-27; compare isso com Sal 135:7; Je 10:13.) Sua capacidade de controlar a chuva em harmonia com o seu propósito é uma das coisas que diferenciava Jeová dos deuses-ídolos sem vida, adorados pelas nações ao redor de Israel. (Je 14:22) Na Terra da Promessa, os israelitas tinham ainda maiores motivos para apreciar isso do que quando estavam no Egito, onde a chuva era bem infrequente. — De 11:10, 11.

Paulo e Barnabé, ao pregarem a gregos em Listra, explicaram que as chuvas serviam de testemunhas do “Deus vivente” e de demonstração da sua bondade. (At 14:14-17) Os benefícios da chuva são sentidos não apenas pelos bons e justos, mas por todas as pessoas; portanto, Jesus salientou que o amor de Deus, neste respeito, devia servir de modelo para os humanos. — Mt 5:43-48.

Chuva na Terra da Promessa. Uma particularidade distintiva do clima da Terra da Promessa é sua variedade na questão das chuvas. Dois fatores principais que determinam a quantidade de chuva são a proximidade do mar e a altitude do terreno. As planícies ao longo do Mediterrâneo recebem considerável chuva durante a estação chuvosa, decrescendo a quantidade do N para o S. Tende a haver mais chuvas nas colinas e nos montes, porque a umidade levada para o leste, desde o mar, se condensa mais ali. O vale do Jordão jaz numa espécie de “sombra da chuva”, porque o ar passando por cima dos montes já cedeu então a maior parte da sua umidade, e o ar é aquecido ao passar para o vale. Todavia, quando este ar se encontra com o elevado planalto ao L do Jordão, formam-se novamente nuvens, resultando em alguma chuva. Isto torna uma faixa de terra ao L do Jordão própria para pastagens ou para lavoura limitada. Mais ao L encontra-se o deserto, onde a chuva é leve e irregular demais para ser útil para as plantações ou para pastar manadas.

Estações. As duas estações principais na Terra da Promessa, o verão e o inverno, podem ser consideradas com bastante exatidão como estação seca e estação chuvosa. (Veja Sal 32:4; Cân 2:11 n.) Desde cerca de meados de abril até meados de outubro cai muito pouca chuva. A chuva é escassa neste período em que se faz a colheita. Provérbios 26:1 mostra que a chuva, na época da colheita, era considerada bastante inoportuna. (Veja 1Sa 12:17-19.) Durante a estação chuvosa, a chuva não é constante; alterna com dias claros. Visto que este também é o período frio, a exposição à chuva faz a pessoa sentir bastante frio. (Esd 10:9, 13) Portanto, um abrigo confortável é muito apreciado. — Is 4:6; 25:4; 32:2; Jó 24:8.

Chuva outonal e primaveril. A Bíblia menciona “a chuva outonal [temporã ou anterior] e a chuva primaveril [serôdia ou posterior]”, prometidas por Deus como bênção para os israelitas fiéis. (De 11:14 n.; Je 5:24; Jl 2:23, 24) O lavrador aguardava pacientemente as chuvas destes períodos entre o verão e o inverno. (Tg 5:7; compare isso com Jó 29:23.) A chuva temporã ou outonal (que começava por volta de meados de outubro) era ansiosamente aguardada para aliviar o calor e a secura do verão. Ela era necessária antes de se poder começar a plantar, porque a chuva amolecia o solo e permitia ao lavrador arar a sua terra. De modo similar, a chuva serôdia ou primaveril (por volta de meados de abril) era necessária para regar as plantações em crescimento, para que pudessem amadurecer, e especialmente para que os cereais pudessem sazonar. — Za 10:1; Am 4:7; Cân 2:11-13.

Uso Figurado. Quando Deus abençoava Israel com chuvas no tempo certo, resultava disso uma abundância. Portanto, Oseias podia prometer que Jeová ‘chegaria como um aguaceiro’, “como a chuva primaveril que satura a terra”, para aqueles que buscassem conhecê-lo. (Os 6:3) As instruções de Deus haviam de 'gotejar como a chuva' e suas declarações "como chuvas suaves sobre a relva, e como chuvas copiosas sobre a vegetação". (De 32:2) Elas poderiam ser assimiladas aos poucos, mas o suficiente para prover pleno revigoramento, assim como as chuvadas sobre a vegetação. De modo similar, uma fonte de revigoramento e abundância foi retratada na comparação do ajuntado restante de Jacó com "chuvas copiosas sobre a vegetação". — Miq 5:7.

O reinado do rei de Deus, descrito no Salmo 72, ficaria marcado por prosperidade e bênção. Por conseguinte, ele foi representado descendo "como chuva sobre a grama cortada, como chuvas copiosas que molham a terra" e produzem nova vegetação. (Sal 72:1, 6; compare isso com 2Sa 23:3, 4.) A boa vontade de um rei era comparada à "nuvem da chuva primaveril", porque evidenciava vindouras condições agradáveis, assim como as nuvens de chuva asseguram a água necessária para as safras se desenvolverem. — Pr 16:15.

Todavia, a precipitação pluvial nem sempre resulta em vegetação que é uma bênção para o cultivador humano; a terra regada pode produzir espinhos e abrolhos. Paulo usou isso como exemplo, comparando o solo regado pela chuva a cristãos que "provaram a dádiva celestial gratuita, e que se tornaram participantes de espírito santo". Se não produzirem os frutos do espírito, mas se afastarem da verdade, eles hão de ser queimados, assim como um campo que produz apenas espinhos. — He 6:4-8.

Na visão de João, em Revelação, ele viu "duas testemunhas" com "autoridade para fechar o céu, para que não caia chuva durante os dias do seu profetizar". (Re 11:3-6) Estas "testemunhas" que representam a Deus como 'profetas', ou porta-vozes, não profeririam o favor ou a bênção de Deus sobre os planos e as obras dos homens iníquos na terra. Iguais a Elias, que anunciou uma seca de três anos e meio em Israel, por causa da sua prática da adoração de Baal promovida pelo Rei Acabe e sua esposa Jezabel, assim estas "duas testemunhas", em sentido figurado, 'fecharam o céu' para que nenhuma "chuva" refrescante da parte de Deus fizesse prosperar esses esforços dos homens. — 1Rs 17:1-18:45; Lu 4:25, 26; Tg 5:17, 18.

CIDADÃO, CIDADANIA. Cidadão é o habitante nativo ou naturalizado duma cidade ou dum estado, no gozo de certos direitos e privilégios negados a outros, e que, por sua vez, assume as responsabilidades relacionadas com tais direitos conforme determinadas pelas autoridades que concedem a cidadania. Na Bíblia, os termos "cidadão" e "cidadania" ocorrem apenas nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. As palavras gregas po·lí·tes (cidadão), po·li·tei·a (direitos de cidadão; cidadania; estado), po·lí·teu·ma (cidadania; vida como cidadãos), syn·po·lí·tes (concidadão), e po·li·teú·o·mai (agir como cidadão) são todas aparentadas com pó·lis, que significa "cidade".

Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, embora não se encontrem os termos "cidadão" e "cidadania", o conceito de cidadão e não cidadão existe ali nos termos "natural" e "residente forasteiro". (Le 24:22) Sob o arranjo da Lei mosaica, a congregação, na realidade, era uma comunidade em que forasteiros, com certas restrições, podiam ser admitidos, para usufruir ali muitos dos benefícios que os israelitas naturais desfrutavam. A naturalização, poderia dizer-se, ocorria quando o varão residente forasteiro era circuncidado, concedendo-se-lhe assim a oportunidade de ingressar plenamente nos privilégios maiores na adoração de Jeová, mesmo a ponto de participar da festividade anual da Páscoa. — Êx 12:43-49; Núm 9:14; veja ESTRANGEIRO; RESIDENTE FORASTEIRO.

Cidadania Romana. A cidadania romana garantia à pessoa direitos especiais e imunidades, reconhecidos e respeitados em todo o império. Por exemplo, era ilegal torturar ou açoitar um cidadão romano, com o fim de extrair dele uma confissão, formas de punição consideradas muito servis e apenas próprias para escravos. Em Jerusalém, soldados romanos resgataram Paulo duma turba judaica. Paulo, no começo, não se identificou como cidadão romano, mas, quando estava para ser açoitado, ele disse a um oficial romano parado ali: "É lícito que açoiteis um homem que é romano e que não está condenado?" "Pois bem", continua o relato, "ouvindo isso o oficial do exército, foi ter com o comandante militar e fez um relatório, dizendo: 'Que pretendes fazer? Ora, este homem é romano.'" Quando se soube da verdade do assunto, "os homens que estavam prestes a examiná-lo com tortura retiraram-se dele imediatamente; e o comandante militar ficou com medo ao averiguar que ele era romano e que o havia amarrado". — At 21:27-39; 22:25-29; veja também At 16:37-40.

Outra vantagem e privilégio usufruído sob a cidadania romana era o direito de apelar da decisão dum governador provincial para o imperador de Roma. No caso dum crime capital, o cidadão romano tinha o direito de ser enviado a Roma para ser julgado perante o próprio imperador. Foi assim que, quando defendeu seu caso perante Festo, Paulo declarou: "Estou perante a cadeira de juiz de César, onde devo ser julgado. . . . nenhum homem me pode entregar [aos judeus] como favor. Apelo para César!" (At 25:10-12) Uma vez recorrido ao direito de apelar para Roma, este não podia ser anulado. Assim, depois de examinar o caso de Paulo, o Rei Agripa II disse a Festo: "Este homem podia ter sido livrado, se não tivesse apelado para César." — At 26:32.

A cidadania romana podia ser adquirida de diversas maneiras. Às vezes, os imperadores concediam este favor especial a cidades ou distritos inteiros, ou a pessoas, por serviços prestados. Às vezes era também possível comprar a cidadania diretamente por uma soma de dinheiro, o que foi o caso do comandante militar Cláudio Lísias, que disse a Paulo: "Eu comprei estes direitos de cidadão por grande soma de dinheiro." Mas, Paulo replicou à resposta de Cláudio Lísias, de ter comprado os direitos de cidadão, dizendo: "Mas eu até nasci com eles." — At 22:28.

Cidadania Espiritual. Paulo, nas suas cartas, também se refere à cidadania espiritual. Descreve gentios incircuncisos, que se tornaram israelitas espirituais, como aqueles que antes estavam sem Cristo, apartados de Israel e estranhos aos pactos, sem esperança, sem Deus, mas, "agora, em união com Cristo Jesus". "Portanto", prossegue ele neste sentido, "certamente não sois mais estranhos e residentes forasteiros, mas sois concidadãos dos santos". (Ef 2:12, 13, 19) Era especialmente significativo quando Paulo escreveu aos cristãos em Filipos, uma das cidades a que se concedeu cidadania romana, onde dez anos antes sua cidadania romana havia sido violada: "Quanto a nós, nossa cidadania existe nos céus." (Fil 3:20) Nesta mesma carta, ele exortou concrentes a 'comportar-se da maneira digna das boas novas'. A palavra grega traduzida 'comportar-se' (po·li·teú·o·mai) significa literalmente "comportar-se como cidadão". — Fil 1:27; veja Int.

CIDADE. Área compacta, povoada, maior em tamanho, população ou importância que uma vila ou aldeia. A palavra hebraica 'ir, traduzida "cidade", ocorre quase 1.100 vezes nas Escrituras. Às vezes se usa a palavra qir·yáh (vila) como sinônimo ou num paralelismo — por exemplo: "Depois serás chamada Cidade ['ir] de Justiça, Vila [qir·yáh] Fiel", ou: "Como é que não foi abandonada a cidade ['ir] de louvor, a vila [qir·yáth] de exultação?" — Is 1:26; Je 49:25.

"Povoados" (hebr.: hhatse·rím), "aldeias dependentes" (hebr.: ba·nóth) e "aldeias" (hebr.: kefa·rím), também mencionados nas Escrituras Hebraicas, eram diferenciados das "cidades" e das "vilas" por não serem comunidades muradas, mas estavam associados com o campo aberto. (1Sa 6:18) Estas comunidades, quando situadas nos subúrbios ou na vizinhança imediata duma cidade ou vila fortificada, eram descritas como "aldeias dependentes", literalmente, "filhas" da cidade murada. (Núm 21:25; veja ALDEIAS DEPENDENTES.) A Lei de Moisés também fazia uma distinção legal entre cidades e vilas muradas, e povoados e aldeias sem muros. Quando alguém que morava num povoado sem muros vendia sua casa, ele sempre retinha o direito de comprá-la de volta, mas, se não tivesse condições para isso, ela lhe era devolvida no ano do jubileu. Por outro lado, quando se vendia uma casa numa cidade murada, o vendedor tinha de comprá-la de volta durante o ano seguinte, senão ela se tornava irrevogavelmente propriedade do comprador, exceto no caso das cidades levitas. (Le 25:29-34) A mesma distinção é mantida nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, onde pó·lis usualmente indica uma "cidade" murada, e kó·me usualmente se refere a uma "aldeia" sem muros. A palavra grega ko·mó·po·lis, em Marcos 1:38, pode ser vertida 'cidade-vila' ou 'cidade-aldeia'. (Veja Int.) João chamou Belém de "aldeia onde Davi costumava estar", e Lucas (apercebido que Roboão tinha fortificado a aldeia) falou dela como cidade. — Jo 7:42; Lu 2:4; 2Cr 11:5, 6.

O primeiro construtor de cidade foi Caim, que deu à cidade o nome de seu filho, Enoque. (Gên 4:17) Caso tenha havido outras cidades antes do Dilúvio, seus nomes desapareceram junto com elas no Dilúvio, em 2370 AEC. Após o Dilúvio, as cidades de Babel, Ereque, Acade e Calné, na terra de Sinear, constituíam o núcleo inicial do reino de Ninrode. Ele o expandiu então por construir Nínive, Reobote-Ir, Calá e Resem (coletivamente descritas como "a grande cidade") ao N, no vale mesopotâmico. (Gên 10:10-12) Por outro lado, os patriarcas Abraão, Isaque e Jacó não construíram cidades, mas viviam como residentes forasteiros em tendas, mesmo quando visitavam cidades e aldeias em Canaã e no Egito. (He 11:9) Todavia, bem mais tarde, os espias que entraram em Canaã relataram que havia muitas cidades grandemente fortificadas no país. — Núm 13:28; De 9:1.

Objetivo da Construção. Começaram-se a construir cidades por diversos motivos: para proteção, indústria, comércio e religião. A julgar pela quantidade e pelo tamanho dos templos desenterrados pelos arqueólogos, a religião, sem dúvida, era uma das principais motivações por detrás da construção de muitas cidades antigas. A cidade de Babel, com sua torre religiosa, é um exemplo disso. "Vamos!" disseram seus construtores um ao outro: "Construamos para nós uma cidade e também uma torre com o seu topo nos céus, e façamos para nós um nome célebre, para que não sejamos espalhados por toda a superfície da terra." (Gên 11:4-9) O perigo de se tornar escravos de indivíduos guerreiros decididos a fazer conquistas era outro motivo compulsivo para pessoas temerosas se juntarem em cidades. Elas invariavelmente cercavam estas cidades com muros, e fechavam os portões à noite e em épocas de perigo. — Jos 2:5; 2Cr 26:6.

Os habitantes das cidades frequentemente trabalhavam na lavoura e na pecuária, atividades realizadas fora dos muros da cidade; o típico lavrador ainda morava na cidade, em vez de na fazenda. Outros empenhavam-se em indústrias artesanais. As cidades serviam de depósitos, centros comerciais e mercados de distribuição. Cidades tais como Tiro, Sídon e Jope passaram a ser primariamente centros de navegação e de intercâmbio comercial entre o tráfego das vias marítimas e as caravanas terrestres. — Ez 27.

Muitas cidades começaram como simples aldeias, cresceram ao tamanho duma vila ou à condição de cidade, e às vezes tornaram-se grandes cidades-estados, controlando a vida de centenas de milhares de pessoas. Com tal aumento, o governo e o poder judicial passaram a ficar concentrados nas mãos de uns poucos líderes políticos e militares, e frequentemente o poder supremo que ditava o modo de vida urbano residia na hierarquia de déspotas sacerdotais. Portanto, constituía um nítido contraste quando começaram a surgir no cenário do mundo cidades israelitas, cujo regime estava nas mãos de administradores teocraticamente designados, com o dever de fazer vigorar as leis constitucionais dadas por Deus. Jeová era o Rei, Legislador e Juiz daquela nação, e quando seus representantes visíveis cumpriam fielmente com seus deveres, o povo se alegrava. — Is 33:22; Esd 7:25, 26; Pr 29:2.

Escolha de Lugares. A escolha dum lugar para uma cidade dependia de diversos fatores. Visto que a defesa geralmente era de importância primária, as cidades antigas usualmente eram situadas em grandes elevações. Embora ficassem assim bem à vista, o acesso a elas era difícil. (Mt 5:14) Cidades costeiras e aquelas situadas às margens de rios eram exceções. Além das barreiras naturais, muitas vezes construíam-se muralhas maciças ou um conjunto de muralhas e torres, e, em alguns casos, fossos em torno da cidade. (2Rs 9:17; Ne 3:1-4:23; 6:1-15; Da 9:25) Ao passo que as cidades cresciam, às vezes era necessário estender as muralhas para incluir perímetros maiores. As entradas pelas muralhas eram protegidas por fortes portões, que podiam resistir a um prolongado sítio. (Veja FORTIFICAÇÕES; MUROS; PORTA, PORTÃO.) Fora e além das muralhas havia campos, pastagens e subúrbios, que muitas vezes ficavam indefesos durante um ataque. — Núm 35:1-8; Jos 21:41, 42.

Um bom suprimento de água por perto era absolutamente essencial e não podia ser desconsiderado na escolha dum lugar para a cidade. Por isso, era considerado ideal quando as cidades tinham fontes ou poços dentro dos seus limites. Em certos casos, notavelmente em Megido, Gibeão e Jerusalém, havia túneis e condutos subterrâneos para levar para dentro das muralhas a água procedente de fontes externas. (2Sa 5:8; 2Rs 20:20; 2Cr 32:20) Frequentemente se construíam reservatórios e cisternas para captar e armazenar água durante a estação chuvosa, para uso numa época posterior. Em alguns casos, o terreno estava cheio de cisternas, visto que cada família se esforçava a ter o seu próprio suprimento de água. — 2Cr 26:10.

Objetivos e propósitos comuns na construção das cidades antigas também levaram a grandes similaridades no seu formato e na sua disposição. E, visto que a passagem de séculos causou poucas mudanças, certas cidades são hoje bem parecidas ao que eram há dois ou três milênios. Entrando pelos portões, encontrava-se um grande espaço aberto, o mercado da cidade, a praça pública, onde se realizavam todos os tipos de transações comerciais, e se fechavam e selavam contratos perante testemunhas. (Gên 23:10-18; 2Rs 7:1; Na 2:4) Ali era o foro público, onde se recebiam e transmitiam notícias (Ne 8:1, 3; Je 17:19), onde os anciãos faziam julgamentos (Ru 4:1-10), e onde o viajante podia passar a noite, se por acaso não se lhe oferecesse hospedagem particular. (Jz 19:15-21) Às vezes havia na cidade outras acomodações disponíveis para o visitante. — Jos 2:1; Jz 16:1; Lu 2:4-7; 10:35; veja HOSPEDARIA.

Certas cidades foram construídas para funções especiais, como, por exemplo, Pitom e Ramsés, construídas por trabalho escravo israelita como armazéns para Faraó (Êx 1:11), também as cidades-armazéns, cidades para carros e cidades para cavaleiros, de Salomão (1Rs 9:17-19), bem como as cidades-armazéns de Jeosafá. (2Cr 17:12) Quarenta e oito cidades foram reservadas para os levitas — 13 para sacerdotes, e 6 eram cidades de refúgio, para o homicida desintencional. — Núm 35:6-8; Jos 21:19, 41, 42; veja CIDADES DE CARROS; CIDADES DE REFÚGIO; CIDADES DOS SACERDOTES.

O tamanho de muitas cidades antigas pode ser calculado à base dos restos das suas muralhas, mas não se pode calcular com algum grau de certeza o número dos habitantes. A respeito de Nínive, somos informados que ela era uma metrópole muito grande: "Nínive, a grande cidade, em que há mais de cento e vinte mil homens que absolutamente não sabem a diferença entre a sua direita e a sua esquerda." — Jon 4:11; 3:3.

O nome dado na Bíblia às cidades mencionadas usualmente tinha algum sentido ou objetivo — localização, característica, ancestrais dos habitantes, e até mesmo significado profético é revelado por muitos de seus nomes. (Gên 11:9; 21:31; Jz 18:29) Às vezes, para distinguir uma cidade de outra do mesmo nome, acrescentava-se a localização tribal, como no caso de "Belém, em Judá", porque havia também uma Belém em Zebulão. (Jz 17:7; Jos 19:10, 15) Cidades encravadas eram as pertencentes a uma tribo, mas situadas no território de outra tribo. — Jos 16:9; veja CIDADES ENCRAVADAS.

Uso Figurado. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, cidades são usadas em sentido figurado. (Pr 21:22; Je 1:18) Encontramos Jesus empregando cidades nas suas ilustrações (Mt 12:25; Lu 19:17, 19), e também Paulo, em linguagem figurada. (He 11:10, 16; 12:22; 13:14) Em Revelação usam-se cidades para ilustrar diversas coisas: "a cidade santa" pisada pelas nações (Re 11:2), a "grande cidade" chamada Sodoma e Egito, em sentido espiritual (Re 11:8), a "grande cidade, Babilônia" (Re 18:10-21; 17:18), e "a cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém, descendo do céu, da parte de Deus, e preparada como noiva adornada para seu marido". — Re 21:2-27; 22:14, 19; 3:12.

CIDADE DE DAVI. Veja DAVI, CIDADE DE.

CIDADE DO SAL. Veja SAL, CIDADE DO.

CIDADES-ARMAZÉNS. Cidades projetadas especialmente como centros de armazenagem do governo. Reservas de provisões tais como cereais, bem como outras coisas, eram conservadas em depósitos e celeiros construídos nestes lugares.

Sob opressão egípcia, os israelitas foram obrigados a construir "cidades como lugares de armazenagem para Faraó, a saber, Pitom e Ramsés". (Êx 1:11) Cidades-armazéns foram também construídas por Salomão. (1Rs 9:17-19; 2Cr 8:4-6) Mais tarde, quando o Rei Jeosafá prosperou, "ele prosseguiu, construindo em Judá fortes e cidades-armazéns". — 2Cr 17:12; veja DEPÓSITO.

CIDADES DE CARROS. Cidades dos tempos antigos reservadas como lugares para manter carros, especialmente carros de guerra. (2Cr 1:14; 9:25) Salomão tinha tais cidades. — 1Rs 9:17-19; 10:26; 2Cr 8:5, 6.

CIDADES DE REFÚGIO. A lei de Jeová a respeito da santidade do sangue era bem explícita. O derramamento de sangue humano poluía a terra na qual os filhos de Israel viviam, no meio da qual Jeová residia, e só podia ser expiado com o sangue daquele que o derramou. (Gên 9:5, 6; Núm 35:33, 34) Portanto, no caso dum assassino, o sangue da sua vítima era vingado e a lei de 'vida por vida' era cumprida quando o assassino, "sem falta", era morto pelo vingador do sangue. (Êx 21:23; Núm 35:21) Mas, que dizer do homicida desintencional que, por exemplo, matou seu irmão quando o ferro do machado acidentalmente se soltou enquanto estava cortando lenha? (De 19:4, 5) Para tais infelizes, Jeová proveu amorosamente cidades de refúgio, seis em número, onde o derramador acidental de sangue podia encontrar proteção e asilo contra o vingador do sangue. — Núm 35:6-32; Jos 20:2-9.

Localizações. Antes de morrer, Moisés designou três dessas cidades ao L do Jordão. A primeira, Bezer, no S do planalto do território que pertencia à tribo de Rubem, encontrava-se ao L da extremidade setentrional do Mar Morto; a segunda, Ramote, em Gileade, pertencia à tribo de Gade, e encontrava-se aproximadamente no meio da parte oriental da terra ocupada por Israel; a terceira, Golã, em Basã, estava no N do território de Manassés. (De 4:43; Jos 21:27, 36, 38) Depois de os israelitas terem cruzado para o lado O do Jordão, Josué designou mais três cidades de refúgio: Hébron, no S do território de Judá; Siquém, na região montanhosa central de Efraim; e, para o N, Quedes, no território de Naftali, que mais tarde era conhecido como a região da Galileia. (Jos 21:13, 21, 32) Todas essas cidades eram cidades levitas, e uma delas, Hébron, era cidade sacerdotal. Além disso, por terem sido postas à parte como cidades de refúgio, tinham categoria sagrada. — Jos 20:7.

Processo Legal. Chegando à cidade de refúgio, o fugitivo devia expor seu caso aos anciãos junto ao portão da cidade, e devia ser recebido hospitaleiramente. Para impedir que assassinos deliberados se aproveitassem desta provisão, o fugitivo, depois de ter entrado na cidade de refúgio, tinha de ser julgado junto aos portões da cidade que tinha jurisdição sobre o lugar onde ocorreu o homicídio, para provar a sua inocência. Quando julgado inocente, era devolvido à cidade de refúgio. Todavia, sua segurança só podia ser garantida se permanecesse na cidade pelo resto da sua vida, ou até a morte do sumo sacerdote. Não se podia aceitar nenhum resgate para alterar esses termos. (Núm 35:22-29, 32; Jos 20:4-6) Nem mesmo o altar sagrado de Jeová provia proteção aos assassinos, como foi ilustrado no caso de Joabe. — Êx 21:14; 1Rs 1:50; 2:28-34; veja VINGADOR DO SANGUE.

Quão diferente, então, era o arranjo de Jeová para a proteção de homicidas desintencionais daquele dos santuários providos pelas antigas nações pagãs, e pelas igrejas da cristandade no decorrer dos séculos! Ao passo que estes últimos santuários ofereciam abrigo a criminosos, junto com os inocentes, as cidades de refúgio de Israel só davam proteção ao homicida desintencional, e assim mesmo apenas sob restrições, e deste modo se promovia o respeito pela santidade da vida.

CIDADES DOS SACERDOTES. Lugares na Terra da Promessa reservados como locais de residência para os sacerdotes arônicos e suas famílias. Dentre as 48 cidades dadas à tribo de Levi pelas outras tribos de Israel, 13 foram designadas aos sacerdotes coatitas da família de Arão. (Jos 21:1-42; 1Cr 6:54-81) As tribos de Judá e de Simeão deram-lhes nove cidades, e quatro foram dadas pela tribo de Benjamim. Assim, "todas as cidades dos filhos de Arão, os sacerdotes, eram treze cidades e seus pastios". (Jos 21:4, 9-19) Estas cidades eram Hébron (uma cidade de refúgio), Libna, Jatir, Estemoa, Holom (evidentemente Hilém), Debir, Aim (Asã), Jutá, Bete-Semes, Gibeão, Geba, Anatote e Almom (Alemete), todas, com exceção de Jutá e Gibeão, são novamente mencionadas em 1 Crônicas 6:54-60.

Davi avisou os sacerdotes nas suas diversas cidades para que se reunissem, quando estava para levar a arca de Jeová para Jerusalém. (1Cr 13:1-5) E faz-se referência específica à designação de homens para distribuir as porções contribuídas entre seus irmãos sacerdotais que moravam nas cidades dos sacerdotes durante o reinado do Rei Ezequias. — 2Cr 31:11-19.

CIDADES ENCRAVADAS. Cidades de determinado povo ou tribo, encerradas no território de outra tribo. Entre os exemplos modernos de enclaves estão o que era a Berlim Ocidental, cercada pelo território da Alemanha Oriental, e a propriedade cedida às Nações Unidas, totalmente encerrada na cidade de Nova York. Parte da antiga Jerusalém permaneceu um enclave jebuseu dentro do território de Israel por quatro séculos, até que Davi finalmente a capturou. — Jos 15:63; Jz 1:21; 19:11, 12; 2Sa 5:6-9.

Na divisão da Terra da Promessa entre as 12 tribos, havia cidades dentro do território geral de uma tribo que pertenciam a outra tribo. Segundo Josué 16:9, "os filhos de Efraim possuíam cidades encravadas [ou: "separadas; isoladas"] no meio da herança dos filhos de Manassés" (NM n.), isto é, "cidades reservadas aos filhos de Efraim no meio da herança dos filhos de Manassés". (BJ; veja também Jos 17:8, 9.) Alguns dos filhos de Manassés moravam em cidades dentro dos limites de Issacar e de Aser. — Jos 17:11; 1Cr 7:29.

A herança de Simeão consistia em cidades situadas dentro do território de Judá, porque o quinhão desta última "mostrou ser grande demais para eles". (Jos 19:1-9; MAPAS, Vol. 1, pp. 744, 947) As 48 cidades administradas pelos levitas, inclusive as 6 cidades de refúgio, eram todas encravadas no território de outras tribos. (Jos 21:3-41) Desta maneira a profecia do leito de morte de Jacó, a respeito de Simeão e Levi, cumpriu-se, que 'teriam uma parte em Jacó, mas seriam espalhados em Israel'. — Gên 49:7.

CILÍCIA. Região relativamente pequena e estreita do SE da Ásia Menor. Ao S encontrava-se o mar Mediterrâneo, ao O estava a Panfília, ao N, a cordilheira do Tauro a separava da Licaônia e da Capadócia, e ao L, os montes Amanus (agora Nur) que constituem o ramo meridional dos montes Tauro, a separavam da Síria. Estas, pelo menos, eram as suas fronteiras durante grande parte da sua história antiga.

Basicamente, esta região estava dividida em duas partes naturais: a ocidental, chamada de Cilícia Traqueia (Cilícia, a Áspera) e a oriental, chamada de Cilícia Pedias (Cilícia Plana). A Cilícia Traqueia era uma região planaltina agreste dos montes Tauro, rica em florestas. Seu litoral acidentado, recortado por cabos rochosos, fornecia numerosos portos e enseadas de abrigo. Desde tempos primitivos, era abrigo para assaltantes e para piratas, que pilhavam a navegação costeira. A Cilícia Pedias abrangia a vasta planície costeira, uma região bem regada e extremamente fértil. Nos tempos romanos, esta planície estava pontilhada de cidades semiautônomas, a mais destacada delas sendo Tarso, terra natal de Saulo (Paulo). — At 21:39; 22:3; 23:34.

Além de trigo, linho e frutas, a Cilícia produzia pelo de cabra, conhecido como cilicium nos tempos romanos. Seu uso na fabricação de tendas talvez explique parcialmente a experiência inicial de Paulo como fabricante de tendas.

A Cilícia ocupava uma posição estratégica, tanto militar como comercial. A principal rota comercial saindo da Síria passava pelas Portas Sírias, um elevado passo através dos montes Amanus (agora Nur), a uns 30 km ao N de Antioquia, e depois atravessava a Cilícia até Tarso, e subia os montes Tauro até as Portas Cilicianas, os íngremes desfiladeiros, ou fendas, que dão acesso à Ásia Menor central e ocidental.

Sob o primitivo Império Romano, a província foi dividida, sendo parte da seção ocidental entregue ao domínio de dinastias locais, ao passo que o restante evidentemente era administrado por reinos associados vizinhos. Foi só no tempo de Vespasiano (72 EC) que as partes orientais e ocidentais da Cilícia foram reunidas numa única província. Assim, durante a parte inicial dos tempos apostólicos, havia uma relação especialmente íntima entre a Cilícia e a Síria, e esta parece refletir-se em Atos 15:23, 41, e em Gálatas 1:21, sendo que alguns pesquisadores sugerem que a "Cilícia", nestes textos, refere-se à Cilícia Pedias. Por outro lado, quando Atos 27:5 diz que Paulo navegou "através do mar aberto ao longo de Cilícia e Panfília" em caminho para ser julgado em Roma, a "Cilícia", aqui, evidentemente inclui a região inteira da Cilícia oriental e ocidental.

Judeus da Cilícia estavam entre os que discutiam com Estêvão antes da morte deste. (At 6:9) Por volta de 49 EC, já havia congregações na Cilícia, às quais o conselho cristão em Jerusalém enviou uma carta. (At 15:23) O roteiro da segunda e da terceira viagem missionária de Paulo naturalmente o levaria através da Cilícia e das Portas Cilicianas.

CÍMBALOS. Nos tempos bíblicos, um instrumento de percussão similar aos címbalos modernos, usado para acompanhar a harpa, a trombeta e outros instrumentos. (2Sa 6:5; 1Cr 15:28; 2Cr 5:12, 13) As duas palavras hebraicas para címbalos (tsel·tselím e metsil·tá·yim) derivam da raiz tsa·lál, que significa "tinir; tremer". (1Sa 3:11; Hab 3:16) De acordo com 1 Crônicas 15:19, os címbalos para o templo de Jeová eram feitos de cobre, mas, além disso, não se fornece outra descrição bíblica. Encontrou-se um par de címbalos num antigo túmulo egípcio, que talvez sejam de certo modo representativos dos címbalos bíblicos. Têm cerca de 14 cm de diâmetro, com alças no centro, e foram feitos de uma liga de cobre com uma pequena quantidade de prata.

O Salmo 150:5 indica que talvez se conhecesse mais de um tipo de címbalo em Israel. A primeira ocorrência do termo neste texto descreve "címbalos de som melodioso", ao passo que a segunda referência é a "címbalos retumbantes". Visto que cada estrofe dos versículos 3 e 4, deste cântico, refere-se a um ou mais instrumentos musicais, as duas estrofes no versículo 5, de modo bem coerente, talvez se refiram primeiro a címbalos menores, tinintes e, segundo, a címbalos de maior diâmetro, que produziam sons mais altos e mais graves quando percutidos com força.

A figura de retórica, de "um címbalo que retine", é usada pelo apóstolo Paulo para ilustrar a superficialidade de se falar em línguas, se faltar a motivação do amor. (1Co 13:1) Entretanto, outras referências a címbalos, além das já mencionadas, relacionam-se com a adoração de Jeová. (1Cr 13:8; 16:5, 42; 25:1, 6; 2Cr 29:25; Esd 3:10; Ne 12:27) Sempre que envolvia o serviço do templo, levitas treinados eram os instrumentistas. (1Cr 16:4, 5, 42) Ao passo que alguns peritos estão inclinados a crer que os címbalos eram estritamente um instrumento levítico e até mesmo sacerdotal, o Salmo 150:1, 5, pode indicar um uso mais generalizado: "Louvai a Jah! . . . Louvai-o com os címbalos."

CINTO. Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA; VESTIMENTA.

CINZAS. Termo muitas vezes empregado nas Escrituras para os resíduos da queima de materiais, frequentemente tendo conotações simbólicas ou figuradas. A palavra "cinzas" traduz duas palavras hebraicas. Uma ('é·fer; Núm 19:9) também é traduzida "poeira". (Mal 4:3) Dé·shen, além de denotar "cinzas gordurosas", pode também referir-se a "gordura". (Le 1:16; Is 55:2) O substantivo grego spo·dós significa "cinzas" (Mt 11:21), ao passo que o verbo te·fró·o significa "reduzir a cinzas". (2Pe 2:6) Os resíduos da queima também poderiam ser chamados de "pó" ('a·fár). — Núm 19:17; 2Rs 23:4.

Todo dia, um sacerdote levítico removia as cinzas gordurosas (dé·shen) resultantes da queima dos sacrifícios de animais no altar e as levava "a um lugar limpo, fora do acampamento". (Le 6:9-11) De acordo com Números, capítulo 19, também se abatia e queimava fora do acampamento uma vaca vermelha, sadia, sem defeito, e sobre a qual não se pusera ainda jugo. As cinzas desta "oferta pelo pecado" eram depositadas num lugar limpo fora do acampamento (Núm 19:9), e assim havia uma parte disponível para ser misturada com água, a fim de ser aspergida sobre pessoas ou coisas impuras para purificá-las. (Núm 19:17) O apóstolo Paulo referiu-se à figurativa purificação da carne por meio das "cinzas [gr.: spo·dós] duma novilha", para destacar a purificação muito maior de "consciências de obras mortas", possível pelo "sangue do Cristo". — He 9:13, 14.

Jeremias 31:40 refere-se à "baixada dos cadáveres e das cinzas gordurosas [wehad·dé·shen]", evidentemente uma parte do vale do filho de Hinom. Até tempos relativamente recentes, um monte de cinzas perto do vale do Cédron era um ponto característico conhecido. Diz-se que tinha cerca de 150 m de comprimento, 60 m de largura e 18 m de profundidade, e é considerado por alguns como relacionado com o lugar mencionado por Jeremias. Parte do vale do filho de Hinom talvez fosse reservada como depósito das cinzas que sobravam após a queima dos sacrifícios (Le 4:12), antes de Josias transformar Tofete em vale impróprio para adoração. (2Rs 23:10) Mas as carcaças de animais e os cadáveres de criminosos vis talvez fossem também lançados no vale, e o monte ali talvez incluísse até mesmo cinzas de humanos outrora sacrificados em ritos da religião falsa. — Je 32:35.

Nos tempos bíblicos era costume incendiar cidades capturadas, de modo que 'reduzir um lugar a cinzas' era indicativo da sua completa destruição, conforme mostrado nos casos de Tiro, Sodoma e Gomorra. — Ez 28:18; 2Pe 2:6.

Cinzas serviam também de figura de linguagem para indicar algo insignificante ou sem valor, sendo que Abraão, por exemplo, admitiu perante Jeová: "Eu [sou] pó e cinzas." (Gên 18:27; veja também Is 44:20; Jó 30:19.) E Jó comparou as declarações dos seus falsos consoladores a "provérbios de cinzas". — Jó 13:12.

Nos dias bíblicos era costume sentar-se nas cinzas ou espalhá-las sobre si mesmo em símbolo de luto, humilhação ou arrependimento. (Est 4:1-3; Je 6:26; 2Sa 13:19) Profunda angústia e aflição são relacionadas figurativamente com 'comer cinzas' (Sal 102:9), e o aflito Jó estava sentado "no meio de cinzas". — Jó 2:8.

Serapilheira e cinzas às vezes estavam associadas com jejum, choro ou tristeza. (Est 4:3; Is 58:5; Ez 27:30, 31; Da 9:3) Um exemplo nacional de humilhação e arrependimento é fornecido no caso de Nínive, nos dias de Jonas, quando até mesmo seu rei se cobriu de serapilheira e se assentou nas cinzas. (Jon 3:5, 6) Arrepender-se em saco (ou: serapilheira) e cinzas era uma situação mencionada por Jesus Cristo (Mt 11:21), e, ao responder a Jeová, Jó declarou contrito: "Deveras me arrependo em pó e cinzas." — Jó 42:6.

Durante os 70 anos de desolação de Judá, os judeus em Babilônia lamentavam a desolação de Sião ou Jerusalém, e do templo dela. Mas, através de Isaías dera-se-lhes garantia de que, sob o poder do espírito de Jeová, haveria uma ação "para designar aos que pranteiam por Sião, para dar-lhes uma cobertura para a cabeça em lugar de cinzas". Jesus Cristo aplicou a passagem de Isaías 61:1-3 a si mesmo, como o Libertador messiânico, que seria o meio de aliviar desolação e pranto espirituais maiores. (Lu 4:16-21) Foi também predito que os iníquos se tornariam como pulverizadas, poeirentas cinzas para os justos, porque Malaquias escreveu: "'E vós haveis de pisotear os iníquos, pois tornar-se-ão como poeira ['é·fer] sob a sola de vossos pés no dia em que eu agir', disse Jeová dos exércitos." — Mal 4:3.

CINZAS, PORTA DOS MONTES DE. Veja PORTA, PORTÃO.

CIPRESTE [hebr.: te'ash·shúr]. Árvore sempreverde da família das coníferas. O cipreste está incluído entre outras árvores como constituindo a "glória do Líbano", e isto indica o lugar onde crescia e também sugere uma árvore de qualidades desejáveis ou de aparência impressionante. O "buxo" mencionado na versão Almeida, atualizada, não é uma tradução viável, visto que, segundo alguns peritos, o buxo não cresce na Palestina, e na Síria é apenas um pequeno arbusto. (Unger's Bible Dictionary [Dicionário Bíblico de Unger], 1965, p. 1134; The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible [O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete], editado por G. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 2, p. 292) O cipreste é considerado por muitos como a árvore a que provavelmente se refere esta palavra hebraica em Isaías 41:19; 60:13. — Veja a versão da Liga de Estudos Bíblicos e A Bíblia de Jerusalém; A Dictionary of Life in Bible Times (Dicionário da Vida nos Tempos Bíblicos), de W. Corswant, Suffolk, 1960, p. 55; The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, Vol. 1, p. 459; Vol. 2, p. 292; Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento), de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 1017.

O cipreste (Cupressus sempervirens) tem folhagem verde-escura e ramos que se estendem para cima um tanto parecidos aos do choupo-preto. Tem altura média de 9 a 15 m, mas às vezes chega a atingir tantos quantos 24 m. Seu cultivo é comum na Palestina; alguns espécimes foram encontrados em estado silvestre em Gileade, Edom e nas encostas do monte Líbano. A madeira tem uma rica tonalidade avermelhada, é fragrante e de grande durabilidade. Possivelmente foi empregada por fenícios, cretenses e gregos na construção de navios (Ez 27:6), e alguns têm sugerido que a "árvore resinosa" da qual Noé obteve a madeira para a arca era o cipreste. — Gên 6:14; veja ÁRVORE RESINOSA.

Em Isaías 41:19, Jeová promete fazer com que árvores que normalmente crescem em terras férteis vicejem também em regiões desérticas, e numa profecia a respeito do enaltecimento e da prosperidade futuros de Sião, prediz-se que o cipreste, junto com o freixo e o junípero, serão usados para embelezar o lugar do santuário de Deus. — Is 60:13.

Em Ezequiel 27:6, a expressão "em madeira de cipreste" está de acordo com os targuns. Entretanto, a palavra hebraica é bath-'ashu·rím e significa "a filha dos asuritas". Diversos peritos concluíram que estas duas palavras hebraicas deveriam ser lidas como uma só palavra, bith·'ash·shu·rím, significando "em madeira de cipreste".

CIRCUNCISÃO. A remoção da pele que cobre a glande, ou prepúcio, do pênis masculino. O verbo hebraico mul (circuncidar) é usado em sentido literal e figurativo. O substantivo grego pe·ri·to·mé (circuncisão) significa literalmente "um corte em volta". (Jo 7:22) "Incircuncisão" verte o termo grego a·kro·by·stí·a, usado na Septuaginta grega para traduzir a palavra hebraica para "prepúcio". — Ro 2:25; Gên 17:11, LXX.

Jeová Deus tornou obrigatória a circuncisão para Abraão, em 1919 AEC, um ano antes de nascer Isaque. Deus disse: "Este é o meu pacto que guardareis . . . Cada macho vosso terá de ser circuncidado." Todo varão na casa de Abraão, tanto dos seus descendentes como dos dependentes, estava incluído, e assim, Abraão, seu filho Ismael, de 13 anos, e todos os seus escravos receberam em si mesmos este "sinal do pacto". Escravos novos trazidos também tinham de ser circuncidados. Daí em diante, todo varão da casa, escravo ou livre, devia ser circuncidado no oitavo dia após o nascimento. A desconsideração deste requisito divino era punível com a morte. — Gên 17:1, 9-14, 23-27.

A circuncisão era praticada no Egito, conforme ilustrada em murais e observada em múmias, mas é incerto quando foi introduzida naquele país, e até que ponto era praticada. Alguns dizem que José, como administrador de alimentos, a introduziu no Egito. Outros citam Heródoto como autoridade para sua afirmação de que Abraão simplesmente imitou o costume dos egípcios. Respondendo a estas últimas afirmações, W. M. Thomson diz: "Quanto ao testemunho de Heródoto, que veio para o Egito quinze séculos depois, e, com grande erudição e pesquisa, muitas vezes escreve grande dose de tolices, recuso-me peremptoriamente a colocá-lo na mesma categoria que Moisés. O grande fundador da comunidade judaica — o maior legislador de que há registro — nascido e criado no Egito, declara os fatos relativos à introdução da circuncisão entre seu povo. Um simples viajante e historiador — estrangeiro e grego — aparece muito mais tarde e faz declarações que são parcialmente verídicas, parcialmente errôneas, como Josefo mostra na sua resposta a Apião; e então autores cépticos, mais de vinte séculos depois de Heródoto, apresentam as declarações imperfeitas dele, e, torcendo-as e ampliando-as, tentam provar que Abraão não recebeu de Deus a circuncisão (como Moisés diz claramente que recebeu), mas dos egípcios! Não será com tais armas que se poderá combater com êxito a veracidade de Moisés." — The Land and the Book (A Terra e o Livro), revisado por J. Grande, 1910, p. 593.

Não só os egípcios praticavam a circuncisão, mas também os moabitas, os amonitas e os edomitas. (Je 9:25, 26) Mais tarde, os samaritanos, que aderiram aos requisitos especificados no Pentateuco, também eram circuncidados. Por outro lado, os assírios, os babilônios, os gregos e notavelmente os filisteus não praticavam a circuncisão. Especialmente estes últimos, em vez de os cananeus em geral, são mencionados de modo depreciativo como "incircuncisos", e foi das lutas contra eles que se trouxeram troféus de prepúcios. — Jz 14:3; 15:18; 1Sa 14:6; 17:26; 18:25-27; 2Sa 1:20; 1Cr 10:4.

Os descendentes de Abraão por meio de Isaque e Jacó guardaram fielmente o pacto da circuncisão. "Abraão passou a circuncidar Isaque, seu filho, aos oito dias de idade, assim como Deus lhe mandara." (Gên 21:4; At 7:8; Ro 4:9-12) Os bisnetos de Abraão disseram a Siquém e seus concidadãos: "Não é possível . . . dar a nossa irmã [Diná] a um homem que tem prepúcio . . . Apenas nesta condição podemos dar-te consentimento, que vos torneis como nós, sendo circuncidado cada macho dos vossos." (Gên 34:13-24) Evidentemente, porque Moisés deixara de circuncidar seu filho, ele incorreu na ira de Deus, até que Zípora o fez por ele. — Êx 4:24-26; veja ZÍPORA.

A Circuncisão sob a Lei. A circuncisão foi tornada um requisito obrigatório da Lei mosaica. "No oitavo dia [após o nascimento dum menino] circuncidar-se-á a carne do prepúcio dele." (Le 12:2, 3) Isto era tão importante que, se o oitavo dia caísse no altamente respeitado sábado, ainda assim se devia realizar a circuncisão. (Jo 7:22, 23) Exemplos de pais sob a Lei, que fielmente providenciaram que seus filhos fossem circuncidados no oitavo dia, incluem os pais de João, o Batizador, de Jesus e de Paulo. (Lu 1:59; 2:21; Fil 3:4, 5) A Lei exigia também que estrangeiros fossem circuncidados antes de se lhes permitir comer a páscoa. — Êx 12:43-48.

Por que especificava a Lei que a circuncisão fosse feita no oitavo dia?

Jeová não explicou isso, nem era necessário que o fizesse. Seus modos são sempre corretos; seus motivos, os melhores. (2Sa 22:31) Entretanto, nos últimos anos, o homem aprendeu alguns dos motivos físicos pelos quais o oitavo dia é um bom tempo para a circuncisão. Quantidades normais do elemento coagulador do sangue, chamado vitamina K, só são encontradas no sangue a partir do quinto ao sétimo dia após o nascimento. Outro fator coagulante conhecido como protrombina está presente no terceiro dia em quantidades de apenas 30 por cento do normal, mas no oitavo dia estas são mais elevadas do que em qualquer outro tempo na vida da criança — tantas quantas 110 por cento do normal. Portanto, seguir as instruções de Jeová ajudava a evitar o perigo duma hemorragia. Conforme observou o Dr. S. I. McMillen: "Com base na consideração das determinações de vitamina K e de protrombina, o dia perfeito para se realizar uma circuncisão é o oitavo dia . . . [o] dia escolhido pelo Criador da vitamina K." — None of These Diseases (Nenhuma Dessas Doenças), 1986, p. 21.

A circuncisão era usualmente, mas nem sempre, feita pelo chefe da casa. Em tempos posteriores, usava-se uma autoridade designada e treinada para esta operação. Já no primeiro século parece ter sido costumeiro dar nome ao menino quando era circuncidado. — Lu 1:59, 60; 2:21.

Durante a peregrinação de 40 anos no ermo, não se realizava a circuncisão de meninos. Assim, depois de cruzarem o Jordão, Josué fez com que todos os varões fossem circuncidados com facas de pederneira, em Gilgal, e Jeová os protegeu até se recuperarem. — Jos 5:2-9; veja VITUPÉRIO.

Após o Exílio. Dois séculos depois de os judeus voltarem de Babilônia, a influência grega começou a predominar no Oriente Médio, e muitos povos abandonaram a circuncisão. Mas, quando o rei sírio Antíoco IV (Epifânio) proscreveu a circuncisão, ele encontrou mães judias dispostas antes a morrer do que a negar aos seus filhos o "sinal do pacto". (Gên 17:11) Anos mais tarde, o imperador romano Adriano obteve os mesmos resultados quando proibiu aos judeus circuncidar seus meninos. Alguns atletas judeus, porém, que desejavam participar dos jogos helenísticos (em que os corredores não usavam roupa), esforçavam-se a se tornar "incircuncisos" por meio duma operação destinada a restabelecer certa semelhança de prepúcio, no empenho de evitar zombaria e ridículo. Paulo talvez aludisse a tal prática quando aconselhou aos cristãos: "Foi alguém chamado no estado circunciso? Que não se torne incircunciso." (1Co 7:18) O verbo grego aqui vertido por 'tornar-se incircunciso' (e·pi·spá·o·mai) significa literalmente "puxar sobre", evidentemente referindo-se a puxar o prepúcio para a frente, a fim de se tornar como incircunciso. — Veja Int.

Não Exigida dos Cristãos. Depois de Jeová ter demonstrado sua aceitação de gentios na congregação cristã, e visto que muitas pessoas das nações aceitavam a pregação das boas novas, o corpo governante em Jerusalém teve de tomar uma decisão sobre a questão: É necessário que os cristãos gentios sejam circuncidados na carne? A conclusão do assunto: As "coisas necessárias" tanto para gentios como para judeus não incluíam a circuncisão. — At 15:6-29.

Paulo circuncidou Timóteo pouco depois de se emitir este decreto, não como questão de fé, mas para evitar criar preconceito entre os judeus aos quais iam pregar. (At 16:1-3; 1Co 9:20) O apóstolo tratou do assunto em diversas cartas. (Ro 2:25-29; Gál 2:11-14; 5:2-6; 6:12-15; Col 2:11; 3:11) "Nós somos os que temos a verdadeira circuncisão [do coração], os que prestamos serviço sagrado pelo espírito de Deus", escreveu Paulo a cristãos gentios em Filipos. (Fil 3:3) E aos em Corinto ele escreveu: "A circuncisão não significa coisa alguma e a incircuncisão não significa coisa alguma, mas sim a observância dos mandamentos de Deus." — 1Co 7:19.

Uso Figurado. A "circuncisão" é usada de modo figurado em diversas maneiras. Por exemplo, depois de se plantar uma árvore na Terra da Promessa, dizia-se que ela 'continuava incircuncisa' por três anos; seu fruto era considerado como seu "prepúcio" e não devia ser consumido. (Le 19:23) Moisés disse a Jeová: "Eis que sou de lábios incircuncisos; portanto, como é que me escutará Faraó?" (Êx 6:12, 30) Em sentido figurado, o termo "incircuncisos" descreve com desprezo repulsivo aqueles que só merecem ser sepultados num lugar comum junto com os mortos da mais baixa espécie. — Ez 32:18-32.

A circuncisão do coração era um requisito divino até mesmo para os israelitas que já eram circuncisos na carne. Moisés disse a Israel: "Tendes de circuncidar o prepúcio dos vossos corações e não mais deveis endurecer a vossa cerviz." "Jeová, teu Deus, terá de circuncidar teu coração e o coração da tua descendência, para que ames a Jeová, teu Deus, de todo o teu coração e de toda a tua alma, no interesse da tua vida." (De 10:16; 30:6) Jeremias lembrou a mesma coisa à nação inconstante dos seus dias. (Je 4:4) A 'circuncisão do coração' significa livrar-se no pensamento, nas afeições ou nas motivações da pessoa de tudo o que é desagradável e impuro aos olhos de Jeová, e que torna o coração obtuso. De modo similar, os ouvidos que não são sensíveis ou atentos são chamados de "incircuncisos". — Je 6:10; At 7:51.

CIRENE, CIRENEU. Cirene era a antiga capital inicial do distrito de Cirenaica, na costa N da África, quase defronte da ilha de Creta. Estava situada a uns 16 km terra adentro e num planalto de 550 m acima do mar Mediterrâneo. A antiga Cirene é hoje um montão de escombros desabitados, perto da moderna Shahhat (anteriormente Cirene), na Líbia.

Pelo que parece, Cirene foi inicialmente povoada pelos gregos, no sétimo século AEC, e passou a ser considerada uma das suas maiores colônias. Por volta de 96 AEC, Cirene estava sob controle político romano, e em 67 AEC, o distrito de Cirenaica e a ilha de Creta foram unidos para constituir uma única província.

Simão, de Cirene (talvez um judeu helenístico), obrigado a ajudar a carregar a estaca de tortura de Jesus, é chamado de "nativo" daquela cidade. (Mt 27:32; Mr 15:21; Lu 23:26) Pode ser que Simão, embora nascido em Cirene, mais tarde se tenha fixado na Palestina. À base de Atos 6:9, a respeito dos "cireneus" que discutiam com Estêvão, muitos peritos acreditam que havia um número suficiente de judeus de Cirene regularmente morando na Palestina, para terem estabelecido sua própria sinagoga em Jerusalém.

Por outro lado, Simão, "um nativo de Cirene", pode ter sido um dos outros forasteiros que apinharam Jerusalém na época da Páscoa. De modo similar, 51 dias depois, um grande número de "homens reverentes, de toda nação", inclusive alguns de "partes da Líbia, do lado de Cirene", estavam presentes na festividade judaica de Pentecostes. (At 2:5, 10, 41) Alguns destes últimos provavelmente estavam entre as "cerca de três mil almas" que foram batizadas após o derramamento do espírito santo e o subsequente discurso de Pedro, e eles talvez levassem depois a mensagem do cristianismo consigo à sua pátria.

Cristianismo. Alguns anos mais tarde, depois de Cornélio se ter tornado cristão, homens de Cirene ajudaram a tomar a dianteira na apresentação das "boas novas do Senhor Jesus", na Antioquia da Síria, entre os chamados (pela maioria dos textos gregos de At 11:20) de Hel·le·ni·stás. Visto que esta mesma palavra grega é traduzida "judeus que falavam grego" (AT, NM), em Atos 6:1, alguns chegaram à conclusão de que aqueles a quem se pregava em Antioquia da Síria também devem ter sido judeus ou prosélitos circuncisos que falavam a língua grega. Todavia, embora a pregação a judeus e prosélitos de língua grega tivesse sido feita desde o dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC, a conversão de grande número de pessoas em Antioquia parece ter sido algo novo e incomum, visto que Barnabé foi mandado àquela cidade, provavelmente para investigar isso, bem como para incentivar a obra ali. (At 11:22, 23) Indicando também que se tratava duma mudança no processo de fazer discípulos há o fato de que a obra feita pelos cireneus e seus colaboradores parece ter sido contrastada com a pregação feita "senão a judeus" por outros que haviam viajado a Antioquia. (At 11:19, 20) Em vista disso, e também do fato de que vários manuscritos antigos, dignos de confiança, usam a palavra Hél·le·nas (significando "gregos"; veja At 16:3) em vez de Hel·le·ni·stás, a maioria dos modernos tradutores referem-se aos convertidos com a ajuda dos homens de Cirene como "gregos" (Al, ALA, BJ, BV, CBC, IBB, LEB, PIB), embora outros prefiram "pagãos" (CK) ou "não judeus" (BLH, NTI), termos que indicariam que aqueles em Antioquia não eram adeptos da religião judaica. Todavia, alguns peritos admitem a possibilidade de que estes, em Antioquia, talvez fossem tanto judeus como gentios que conheciam a língua grega, e assim os descrevem com a expressão "povo que falava grego". (NM) "Lúcio de Cirene" foi alistado entre os instrutores e profetas nesta congregação de Antioquia, quando Paulo iniciou sua primeira viagem missionária, por volta de 47 EC. — At 11:20; 13:1.

CIRO. O fundador do Império Persa e conquistador de Babilônia; chamado "Ciro, o Grande", para distingui-lo de Ciro I, seu avô.

Depois de ter conquistado o Império Babilônico, Ciro é apresentado no documento cuneiforme conhecido por Cilindro de Ciro como dizendo: "Eu sou Ciro, rei do mundo, grande rei, rei legítimo, rei de Babilônia, rei da Suméria e de Acade, rei das quatro extremidades (da Terra), filho de Cambises (Ka-am-bu-zi-ia), grande rei, rei de Anzã, neto de Ciro [I], . . . descendente de Teíspes . . . de uma família (que) sempre (exerceu) a realeza." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 316) Mostra-se assim que Ciro pertencia à linhagem real dos reis de Anzã, uma cidade e distrito de localização um tanto incerta, mas que hoje se acredita que ficava ao L de Elão. Esta linhagem de reis é chamada de aquemênida, segundo Aquêmenes, pai de Teíspes.

Os primórdios históricos de Ciro II são um tanto obscuros, dependendo na maior parte de relatos bastante fantasiosos de Heródoto (historiador grego do quinto século AEC) e de Xenofonte (outro escritor grego de aproximadamente meio século mais tarde). No entanto, ambos apresentam Ciro como filho do governante persa Cambises, com sua esposa Mandane, filha de Astíages, rei dos medos. (História, de Heródoto, Clássicos Jackson, Vol. XXIII, Livro I, sec. 107, 108; Ciropedia, de Xenofonte, Clássicos Jackson, Vol. I, Livro I, p. 7) Este parentesco de Ciro com os medos é negado por Ctésias, outro historiador grego do mesmo período, que afirma, ao invés, que Ciro se tornou genro de Astíages por casar-se com a filha deste, Amitis.

Ciro sucedeu ao seu pai Cambises I no trono de Anzã, que então estava sob a suserania do rei medo Astíages. Diodoro (do primeiro século AEC) coloca o início do reinado de Ciro no primeiro ano da 55.ª Olimpíada, ou em 560/559 AEC. Heródoto relata que Ciro se revoltou contra o domínio medo, e, por causa da defecção de tropas de Astíages, conseguiu uma vitória fácil e capturou a capital dos medos, Ecbátana. De acordo com a Crônica de Nabonido, o Rei Ishtumegu (Astíages) "convocou suas tropas e marchou contra Ciro, rei de Anzã, a fim de en[frentá-lo em batalha]. O exército de Ishtumegu revoltou-se contra ele e o en[tregou] em cadeias a Ciro". (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 305) Ciro conseguiu granjear a lealdade dos medos, e assim os medos e os persas, depois disso, lutaram unidos sob a sua liderança. Nos anos seguintes, Ciro agiu para consolidar seu controle sobre o setor ocidental do Império Medo, avançando até a fronteira oriental do Império Lídio, no rio Hális, na Ásia Menor.

A seguir, Ciro derrotou o rico Rei Creso, da Lídia, e capturou Sardes. Depois subjugou as cidades jônicas e colocou toda a Ásia Menor dentro do domínio do Império Persa. Assim, em questão de poucos anos, Ciro tornara-se o maior rival de Babilônia e seu rei, Nabonido.

A Conquista de Babilônia. Ciro aprontou-se então para um confronto com a poderosa Babilônia, e especialmente deste ponto em diante ele figurou no cumprimento de profecias bíblicas. Na profecia inspirada de Isaías, sobre a restauração de Jerusalém e de seu templo, este governante persa havia sido mencionado por nome como o designado por Jeová Deus para realizar a derrubada de Babilônia e a libertação dos judeus que estariam exilados ali. (Is 44:26–45:7) Embora esta profecia tivesse sido registrada bem mais de um século e meio antes da ascensão de Ciro ao poder, e embora a desolação de Judá evidentemente ocorresse antes de Ciro até mesmo ter nascido, ainda assim Jeová declarou que Ciro atuaria como Seu "pastor" a favor do povo judeu. (Is 44:28; compare isso com Ro 4:17.) Em virtude desta designação antecipada, Ciro foi chamado de "ungido" (uma forma do hebraico ma·shi·ahh, messias, e do grego khri·stós, cristo) de Jeová. (Is 45:1) Ter Deus 'o chamado pelo seu nome' (Is 45:4) com tanta antecedência não significa que Ele tenha dado a Ciro o nome dele por ocasião do nascimento, mas significa que Jeová sabia de antemão que um homem com este nome surgiria e que a chamada dele por Jeová não seria anônima, mas direta, específica, por nome.

Assim, sem que o soubesse o Rei Ciro, que provavelmente era pagão devotado ao zoroastrismo, Jeová Deus, figurativamente, 'tomara a direita de Ciro' para guiá-lo e fortalecê-lo, cingindo-o, e preparando e aplainando o caminho para ele realizar o propósito divino: a conquista de Babilônia. (Is 45:1, 2, 5) Como Aquele "que desde o princípio conta o final e desde outrora as coisas que não se fizeram", o Deus Todo-Poderoso ajustara as circunstâncias dos assuntos humanos para executar plenamente o seu conselho. Chamara Ciro "desde o nascente", da Pérsia (ao L de Babilônia), onde foi construída a capital favorita de Ciro, Pasárgada, e Ciro havia de ser como "ave de rapina" ao mergulhar rapidamente sobre Babilônia. (Is 46:10, 11) É digno de nota, segundo The Encyclopædia Britannica (A Enciclopédia Britânica, 1910, Vol. X, p. 454), que "os persas traziam uma águia afixada na ponta duma lança, e o sol, como sua divindade, também estava representado em seus estandartes, que . . . eram guardados com o maior zelo pelos homens de maior bravura do exército".

Como desviou Ciro a água do Eufrates?

As profecias bíblicas relacionadas com a predita conquista de Babilônia por Ciro prediziam que os rios dela se secariam e que seus portões ficariam abertos, que haveria uma invasão repentina da cidade e que não haveria resistência por parte dos soldados de Babilônia. (Is 44:27; 45:1, 2; Je 50:35-38; 51:30-32) Heródoto descreve um fosso profundo e largo em volta de Babilônia, relatando que muitos portões de bronze (ou cobre) facultavam o acesso através das muralhas interiores ao longo do rio Eufrates, o qual cortava a cidade. Ao sitiar a cidade, segundo Heródoto (I, 191, 192), Ciro foi "desviar o rio por meio dum canal para o lago [o lago artificial alegadamente feito em época anterior pela Rainha Nitócris], o qual até então era um brejo, fez o rio baixar até que seu anterior leito pudesse ser vadeado. Quando isto se deu, os persas, postados com este objetivo, entraram em Babilônia pelo leito do Eufrates, tendo a água baixado até cerca do meio da coxa de um homem. Ora, se os babilônios tivessem sabido ou percebido de antemão o que Ciro planejava, teriam deixado os persas entrar na cidade e acabado com eles; porque teriam então fechado todos os portões que davam para o rio e teriam subido às muralhas que beiravam as margens do rio, e assim apanhado seus inimigos como numa armadilha. Mas, conforme aconteceu, os persas os pegaram desprevenidos; e, em vista da grande extensão da cidade — assim dizem os que moram ali — aqueles que se encontravam mais afastados do centro dela foram vencidos, mas os habitantes na parte central não sabiam de nada; durante todo este tempo eles dançavam e se divertiam numa festa . . . até se darem bem conta da verdade. [Veja Da 5:1-4, 30; Je 50:24; 51:31, 32.] Assim foi Babilônia então tomada pela primeira vez."

O relato de Xenofonte difere um pouco nos pormenores, mas contém os mesmos elementos básicos do relato de Heródoto. Xenofonte descreve Ciro como achando quase impossível atacar as enormes muralhas de Babilônia, e daí passa a relatar que ele sitiou a cidade, desviou as águas do Eufrates para valas, e, enquanto a cidade estava em festa, mandou suas forças leito do rio acima, passando pelas muralhas da cidade. As tropas sob o comando de Gobrias e Gadatas apanharam os guardas desprevenidos e conseguiram entrar pelos próprios portões do palácio. Em uma só noite, "a cidade foi tomada e o rei foi morto", e os soldados babilônios que ocupavam as diversas cidadelas renderam-se na manhã seguinte. — Cyropaedia (Ciropedia), VII, v, 33; veja Je 51:30.

Josefo, historiador judeu, registra uma narração da conquista realizada por Ciro, escrita por Beroso, sacerdote babilônio (do terceiro século AEC), como segue: "No décimo sétimo ano do seu reinado [o de Nabonido], Ciro veio da Pérsia com um grande exército, e, depois de subjugar o restante do reino, marchou contra Babilônia. Informado sobre a sua vinda, Nabonedo [Nabonido] levou seu exército ao encontro dele, lutou e foi derrotado, fugindo depois com uns poucos acompanhantes e encerrando-se na cidade de Borsipa [a cidade gêmea de Babilônia]. Ciro tomou Babilônia, e depois de dar ordens para a demolição das muralhas externas da cidade, porque ela apresentava uma aparência temível e enorme, passou para Borsipa, para sitiar Nabonedo. Este rendeu-se, sem esperar a investida, foi tratado humanitariamente por Ciro, que o mandou embora de Babilônia, mas deu-lhe Carmânia como residência. Ali, Nabonedo passou o resto da sua vida, e ali morreu." (Against Apion [Contra Apião], I, 150-153 [20]) Este relato difere dos outros principalmente por causa das declarações feitas a respeito das ações de Nabonido e dos tratos de Ciro com ele. Entretanto, harmoniza-se com o relato bíblico, de que Belsazar, em vez de Nabonido, foi o rei morto na noite da queda de Babilônia. — Veja BELSAZAR.

As tabuinhas em escrita cuneiforme encontradas pelos arqueólogos, embora não forneçam pormenores sobre o modo exato da conquista, confirmam deveras a queda repentina de Babilônia diante de Ciro. Segundo a Crônica de Nabonido, no que resultou ser o último ano do reinado de Nabonido (539 AEC), no mês de tisri (setembro-outubro), Ciro atacou as forças babilônicas em Ópis e as derrotou. A inscrição prossegue: "No 14.º dia, Sipar foi capturada sem luta. Nabonido fugiu. No 16.º dia, Gobrias (Ugbaru), o governador de Gutium, e o exército de Ciro entraram em Babilônia sem luta. Depois disso, Nabonido foi preso em Babilônia ao voltar . . . No mês de arahshamnu [marchesvã, ou marquesvã (outubro-novembro)], no 3.º dia, Ciro entrou em Babilônia." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 306) Por meio desta inscrição pode-se fixar a data da queda de Babilônia em 16 de tisri de 539 AEC, Ciro entrando 17 dias depois, em 3 de marchesvã.

Começa o domínio ariano do mundo. Por meio desta vitória, Ciro pôs fim ao domínio da Mesopotâmia e do Oriente Médio por governantes semíticos, e produziu a primeira potência mundial dominante de origem ariana. O Cilindro de Ciro, um documento em escrita cuneiforme, que os historiadores consideram ter sido escrito para publicação em Babilônia, é fortemente religioso, e nele Ciro é representado como dando o crédito pela sua vitória a Marduque, principal deus de Babilônia, dizendo: "Ele [Marduque] vistoriou e inspecionou todos os países, à procura dum governante justo, disposto a liderá-lo . . . (na procissão anual). (Daí) pronunciou o nome de Ciro (Ku-ra-as), rei de Anzã, declarou-o (lit.: pronunciou [seu] nome) para se (tornar) o governante de todo o mundo. . . . Marduque, o grande senhor, um protetor de seu povo/adoradores, viu com prazer suas boas ações (i.e., as de Ciro) e sua mente (lit.: coração) reta, (e assim) ordenou-lhe que marchasse contra sua cidade, Babilônia (Ká.dingir.ra). Fez com que se pusesse na estrada para Babilônia (DIN.TIR^{ki}), seguindo ao seu lado como verdadeiro amigo. Suas tropas espalhadas — seu número, como o da água dum rio, não podia ser determinado — caminhavam junto dele, com as armas guardadas. Sem nenhuma batalha, ele o fez entrar na sua cidade, Babilônia (Su.an.na), poupando Babilônia (Kádingir.ra[ki]) de qualquer calamidade." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 315.

Por que explica o Cilindro de Ciro a queda de Babilônia de modo diferente do feito pela Bíblia?

Apesar desta interpretação pagã dos eventos, a Bíblia mostra que, ao fazer sua proclamação que autorizava os judeus exilados a voltar a Jerusalém e a reconstruir ali o templo, Ciro reconheceu: "Jeová, o Deus dos céus, deu-me todos os reinos da terra, e ele mesmo me comissionou para lhe construir uma casa em Jerusalém, que está em Judá." (Esd 1:1, 2) Isto, naturalmente, não quer dizer que Ciro se tornou um converso judeu, mas simplesmente que ele sabia dos fatos bíblicos relacionados com a sua vitória. Em vista da elevada posição administrativa em que Daniel fora colocado, tanto antes como depois da queda de Babilônia (Da 5:29; 6:1-3, 28), seria muitíssimo incomum que Ciro não fosse informado das profecias que os profetas de Jeová haviam registrado e proferido, inclusive a profecia de Isaías que continha o próprio nome de Ciro. Quanto ao Cilindro de Ciro, já mencionado, reconhece-se que outros, além do rei, podem ter tido parte na preparação deste documento cuneiforme. O livro Biblical Archaeology (Arqueologia Bíblica), de G. Ernest Wright (1962, p. 203) fala do "rei, ou do conselho, que formulou o documento" (compare isso com o caso similar de Dario, em Da 6:6-9), ao passo que o Dr. Emil G. Kraeling (Rand McNally Bible Atlas [Atlas Bíblico de Rand McNally], 1966, p. 328) chama o Cilindro de Ciro de "um documento de propaganda, elaborado pelos sacerdotes babilônios". De fato, pode ter sido composto sob a influência do clero babilônio (Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 315, n. 1), servindo assim ao objetivo deste de atenuar o completo fracasso de Marduque (também conhecido como Bel) e de outros deuses babilônios em salvar a cidade, chegando mesmo a ponto de atribuir a Marduque justamente as coisas que Jeová havia feito. — Veja Is 46:1, 2; 47:11-15.

O Decreto de Ciro para a Volta dos Exilados. Por decretar o fim do exílio dos judeus, Ciro cumpriu sua comissão como 'pastor ungido' de Jeová para Israel. (2Cr 36:22, 23; Esd 1:1-4) A proclamação foi feita "no primeiro ano de Ciro, rei da Pérsia", significando seu primeiro ano como governante da conquistada Babilônia. O registro bíblico em Daniel 9:1 menciona o "primeiro ano de Dario", e este talvez ocorresse entre a queda de Babilônia e o "primeiro ano de Ciro" dominando Babilônia. Se for assim, significa que o escritor talvez tenha considerado o primeiro ano de Ciro como tendo começado em fins do ano 538 AEC. No entanto, se o governo de Dario sobre Babilônia for encarado como o dum vice-rei, de modo que o seu reinado era concomitante com o de Ciro, o costume babilônico terá colocado o primeiro ano do reinado de Ciro como transcorrendo de nisã de 538 a nisã de 537 AEC.

Em vista do registro bíblico, o decreto de Ciro que liberava os judeus para voltarem a Jerusalém provavelmente foi emitido em fins do ano 538 ou no começo de 537 AEC. Isto daria tempo para que os exilados judeus se preparassem para sair de Babilônia, e para empreender a longa viagem a Judá e Jerusalém (que talvez levasse cerca de quatro meses, segundo Esd 7:9), e ainda assim se estabelecerem "nas suas cidades" em Judá até o "sétimo mês" (tisri) do ano 537 AEC. (Esd 3:1, 6) Isto assinalou o fim dos profetizados 70 anos da desolação de Judá, que começaram no mesmo mês, tisri, em 607 AEC. — 2Rs 25:22-26; 2Cr 36:20, 21.

A cooperação de Ciro com os judeus estabelecia um notável contraste com o tratamento que receberam de anteriores governantes pagãos. Ele devolveu os preciosos utensílios do templo, que Nabucodonosor II levara para Babilônia, deu permissão real para eles importarem cedros do Líbano e autorizou a alocação de fundos da casa real para arcar com as despesas da construção. (Esd 1:7-11; 3:7; 6:3-5) De acordo com o Cilindro de Ciro (FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 332), o governante persa seguia uma política geralmente humanitária e tolerante para com os povos conquistados no seu domínio. A inscrição o cita como dizendo: "Devolvi a [certas anteriormente mencionadas] cidades sagradas, do outro lado do Tigre, cujos santuários ficaram arruinados por longo tempo, as imagens que (costumavam) viver neles, e estabeleci para elas santuários permanentes. Eu (também) reuni todos os seus (anteriores) habitantes e devolvi(-lhes) suas habitações." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 316.

Além da proclamação real citada em Esdras 1:1-4, o registro bíblico fala de outro documento emitido por Ciro, um "memorando", arquivado na casa de registros em Ecbátana, na Média, e descoberto ali durante o reinado de Dario, o persa. (Esd 5:13-17; 6:1-5) A respeito deste segundo documento, diz o Professor G. Ernest Wright que "[ele] é explicitamente intitulado de dikrona, termo aramaico oficial para o memorando que registrava uma decisão oral do rei ou de outra autoridade, e que dava início a uma ação administrativa. Jamais se visa-va publicá-lo, mas era unicamente para ser visto pela autoridade devida, após o que era guardado nos arquivos governamentais". — Biblical Archaeology, p. 203.

Morte, e o Significado Profético. Crê-se que Ciro tenha morrido em batalha em 530 AEC, embora os pormenores sejam um tanto obscuros. Antes da sua morte, seu filho Cambises II evidentemente tornou-se seu corregente, sucedendo-lhe no trono persa como único governante, quando seu pai faleceu.

As profecias a respeito da repentina queda da simbólica Babilônia, a Grande, conforme apresentadas no livro de Revelação (Apocalipse), correspondem nos principais aspectos à descrição da conquista da cidade literal de Babilônia por Ciro. (Compare Re 16:12; 18:7, 8, com Is 44:27, 28; 47:8, 9.) O rei à frente das poderosas forças militares, descrito logo depois do relato sobre a queda da simbólica Babilônia, porém, não é um rei terreno, mas é a celestial "Palavra de Deus", o verdadeiro Pastor ungido de Jeová, Cristo Jesus. — Re 19:1-3, 11-16.

CISNE [hebr.: tin·shé·meth]. Ave aquática grande e graciosa, com um longo e delgado pescoço curvo. Alguns cisnes chegam a pesar até 18 kg e podem ter uma envergadura de uns 2,5 m.

O nome hebraico (tin·shé·meth), que aparece na lista das criaturas voadoras impuras (Le 11:13, 18; De 14:12, 16), deriva dum radical que significa "ofegar". (Is 42:14) Talvez descreva o cisne com seu alto grito sibilante, lançado quando a ave está excitada ou irada, e é assim vertido em diversas traduções (BV, NM, PIB). Esta identificação remonta pelo menos à Vulgata latina, na qual Jerônimo verteu a palavra hebraica tin·shé·meth (em Le 11:18) pela palavra latina cycnus (cisne). A anterior Septuaginta grega reza aqui "porfirião" (gr.: por·fy·rí·on), referindo-se evidentemente a um tipo de frango-d'água (Porphyrio porphyrio). Todavia, ambas estas antigas versões traduzem tin·shé·meth por "íbis", em Deuteronômio 14:16, mostrando assim incerteza.

O cisne, embora encontrado na Palestina, não é comum ali nos tempos modernos. Por causa disso, e também porque o cisne é primariamente vegetariano, muitos tradutores modernos preferem identificar o tin·shé·meth com a "galinha-d'água" (RS, Mo), o "mocho" (AT), o "íbis" (MC), ou com outras aves conhecidas como carnívoras ou necrófagas. Todavia, a raridade do aparecimento do cisne na Palestina, nos tempos modernos, não é evidência certa de que não era comum ali na antiguidade. Do mesmo modo, deve-se reconhecer que o conceito de que a classificação de certas aves como impuras dependia de serem quer aves de rapina quer necrófagas é apenas uma dedução, e não é diretamente declarado na Bíblia.

Além da sua alimentação costumeira de sementes, de raízes de plantas aquáticas e de minhocas, sabe-se que o cisne alimenta-se também de mariscos.

CISTERNA. Cavidade subterrânea artificial usada costumeiramente como depósito de água. As cisternas, diferentes dos poços escavados para captar a água subterrânea natural, destinam-se comumente a captar e reter a água da chuva, ou a água que escoa de fontes. Não sendo abertas como os reservatórios, costumam ser cobertas. A palavra hebraica bohr, traduzida por "cisterna", é também traduzida por "cova", especialmente quando parece que não continha água (Gên 37:20-29; 2Sa 23:20, Al), por "masmorra", quando usada para este fim (Gên 40:15), e por "poço", quando se refere ao "Seol" ou em paralelo a ele (Sal 30:3; Pr 1:12; Ez 31:14, 16).

As cisternas eram vitais na Terra da Promessa. Frequentemente, eram o único meio de manter um suprimento suficiente de água, porque os poços e as fontes não eram abundantes na região montanhosa, e, onde existiam, costumavam secar perto do fim do verão. Cisternas de água artificiais até mesmo permitiam que surgissem povoados em lugares onde o suprimento de água, de outro modo, era escasso demais, tais como o Negebe. Tranquilizadoramente, Jeová prometeu ao seu povo que este encontraria cisternas já escavadas ao entrar na Terra da Promessa. (De 6:10, 11; Ne 9:25) Menciona-se o Rei Uzias como escavando "muitas cisternas" em toda a Judá. (2Cr 26:1, 10) Desde a Galileia superior para baixo, até o Negebe, havia literalmente milhares de cisternas, e muitas delas foram descobertas, praticamente pontilhando partes do terreno. Parecia desejável que cada família tivesse a sua própria cisterna, mesmo entre os moabitas. De acordo com a Pedra Moabita, inscrita no nono século AEC, o Rei Mesa declarou: "Não havia nenhuma cisterna dentro da cidade de Qarhoh, assim, eu disse a todo o povo: 'Que cada um de vós cave uma cisterna para si mesmo em sua casa!'" (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 320) Senaqueribe tentou seduzir os habitantes de Jerusalém por prometer que, se capitulassem diante dele, 'beberiam cada um a água da sua própria cisterna'. — 2Rs 18:31; Is 36:16.

As cisternas costumavam ser escavadas na rocha. Se a rocha era maciça e não tinha fendas, havia poucos problemas de vazamento, mas, na porosa pedra calcária que cobria grande parte da Palestina, era necessário impermeabilizar as paredes internas com reboco. As cisternas escavadas em terra eram revestidas com tijolos ou com pedras, e então rebocadas para que tivessem paredes sólidas. Estas cisternas costumavam ter a forma de pera, sendo mais largas no fundo e estreitando-se no topo; às vezes, a boca tinha apenas uns 30 a 60 cm de diâmetro. Quando cavernas naturais eram modificadas ou ampliadas para servir de cisternas, deixava-se que colunas de rocha natural sustentassem o teto, ou, como no caso de algumas descobertas no Negebe, construíam-se arcos dentro da cisterna com o mesmo fim. Canais nas encostas das colinas levavam a água da chuva para o reservatório subterrâneo.

Eclesiastes 12:6 menciona "a roda de água para a cisterna", mas usualmente se retirava a água por meio de jarros suspensos em cordas. A quebra ocasional de tais jarros explica os fragmentos de cerâmica encontrados no fundo da maioria das cisternas. O costume primitivo de jogar terra numa cisterna de água estagnada ou poluída, para que a escuma se assentasse, sem dúvida explica em parte por que muitas delas estão parcialmente cheias de terra. Coberturas sobre a abertura até certo ponto impediam a contaminação da água, e que pessoas ou animais caíssem nelas, embora a queda acidental de um corpo morto não tornasse a água cerimonialmente impura; aquele que o tirasse, porém, tornava-se impuro. (Êx 21:33; Le 11:35, 36) Além disso, a cobertura sobre uma cisterna ajudava a manter a água fresca e reduzia a perda dela por evaporação. (Je 6:7) Algumas cisternas grandes possuíam diversas aberturas, por meio das quais se podia tirar água. Nas cisternas de grandes dimensões e profundidade havia escadas descendo tanto quanto 30 m ou mais.

Outros Usos. Há uns poucos casos em que as cisternas eram usadas para fins diferentes da armazenagem de água. Em localidades secas, e quando vedadas contra a umidade, ratos e insetos, eram bons depósitos para cereais, sendo também facilmente camuflados contra roubo; algumas cisternas encontradas em terreno onde não há fontes naturais de água evidentemente foram construídas em especial como celeiros. Cisternas vazias às vezes eram usadas como prisões. (Za 9:11) Os irmãos de José lançaram-no em uma de tais cisternas (Gên 37:20-24), e, mais tarde, ele se viu numa masmorra (literalmente: "cisterna"), lá no Egito. (Gên 40:15 n.; 41:14) A décima praga sobre o Egito atingiu "até o primogênito do cativo que se achava na masmorra [literalmente: "casa da cisterna"]". (Êx 12:29) Jeremias foi encarcerado "na casa da cisterna" e mais tarde lançado numa cova lamacenta. (Je 37:16; 38:6-13) Certa vez, quando os israelitas fugiam de diante dos filisteus, alguns deles esconderam-se nas cisternas (covas), e, em outra ocasião, a grande cisterna de Asa tornou-se o túmulo de 70 cadáveres. (1Sa 13:6; Je 41:4-9) Por causa da sua natureza permanente, algumas cisternas serviam de marcos geográficos. — 1Sa 19:22; 2Sa 3:26; 2Rs 10:14.

Uso Figurado. Em duas passagens dignas de nota, usa-se "cisterna" de modo figurado. Jeová diz que aqueles que o abandonaram e que procuraram outras fontes de proteção e ajuda, na realidade, abandonaram "a fonte de água viva, a fim de escavarem para si cisternas, cisternas rotas, que não podem conter água". (Je 2:13, 18) Salomão, admoestando manter a fidelidade marital, disse: "Bebe água da tua própria cisterna." — Pr 5:15.

CITA. Povo nômade, feroz, geralmente associado com a região ao N e ao NE do mar Negro. A evidência sugere que eles estenderam suas andanças até a Sibéria ocidental, perto da fronteira da Mongólia. No primeiro século EC, a palavra "cita" dava a entender o povo mais incivilizado. Todavia, mesmo tais pessoas podiam tornar-se cristãos e estar em pé de igualdade com os demais crentes como membros do corpo de Cristo. O apóstolo Paulo escreveu: "Não [há] nem grego nem judeu, circuncisão nem incircuncisão, estrangeiro, cita, escravo, homem livre, mas Cristo é todas as coisas e em todos." — Col 3:11; veja CORTES.

CÍTARA. A Bíblia não fornece nenhuma descrição do instrumento musical designado pela palavra aramaica qath·róhs, mas era provavelmente um tipo de instrumento de cordas. Se este termo estiver relacionado com o grego ki·thá·ra (um instrumento de cordas), do qual derivam diversas palavras portuguesas, inclusive "cítara", então "cítara" é uma transliteração aproximada. O qath·róhs era um dos instrumentos da orquestra de Nabucodonosor. — Da 3:5, 7, 10, 15.

CIUMENTO, CIÚME. Segundo o uso bíblico, o "ciúme" pode ser uma emoção positiva ou negativa. (Pr 14:30; Za 1:14) O substantivo hebraico qin·'áh tem os sentidos diversos de "insistência em devoção exclusiva; não tolerar rivalidade; zelo; fervor; ciúme [justo ou pecaminoso]; inveja". A palavra grega zé·los tem um significado similar. — 2Co 11:2; 12:20.

O Ciúme de Jeová. Jeová descreve a si próprio como "um deus que exige devoção exclusiva". (Êx 20:5 n.; De 4:24; 5:9; 6:15) Ele diz também: "Jeová, cujo nome é Ciumento, é um Deus ciumento." (Êx 34:14) Ciumento de que, e com que tipo de ciúme? Não o ciúme invejoso, egoísta, dos humanos. Trata-se dum ciúme, zelo ou fervor pelo seu santo nome, a respeito do qual ele mesmo diz: "Vou mostrar devoção exclusiva ao meu santo nome." — Ez 39:25.

Pelo seu nome. Quando se considera o que o nome de Deus representa, torna-se clara a razão da sua "insistência em devoção exclusiva". (Ez 5:13) Seu nome representa tudo o que é correto e justo. Ele é santo, puro, reto, leal, em grau superlativo. (Is 6:3; Re 4:8; 16:5) Sua soberania é necessária para a existência do Universo, e a lealdade à sua soberania e às suas leis é essencial para a ordem e a paz de toda a criação. (Pr 29:2; 1Co 14:33) Seu ciúme, portanto, é um ciúme puro e limpo, e é inteiramente em benefício das suas criaturas, visto que a devoção delas não traz para ele — o Criador, Provedor e Dador de todas as boas coisas — nenhum lucro. (Jó 41:11; Sal 145:16; Ro 11:35; Tg 1:17; Re 4:11) Mas, na sua devoção à justiça, seu coração se alegra com apreço amoroso quando seus servos se mantêm firmes a favor da justiça e lhe prestam devoção exclusiva. — Pr 23:15, 16; 27:11.

Aqueles que servem a Deus podem confiar que ele estabelece a justiça, confiantes no Seu zelo a favor do Seu nome. Ele ilustrou seu zelo nos seus tratos com o antigo Israel, e nos informa a respeito da destruição de governos terrestres e do estabelecimento do governo do Príncipe da Paz, com justiça e equidade, dizendo: "O próprio zelo de Jeová dos exércitos fará isso." — Is 9:6, 7; Sof 3:8, 9.

Pela justiça. No seu amor à justiça e na sua insistência na devoção exclusiva, Jeová é imparcial. Moisés advertiu Israel, o povo pactuado de Deus, que, se alguém abandonasse o pacto, "a ira de Jeová e seu fervor [fumegariam] contra aquele homem . . . e Jeová deveras [extinguiria] seu nome de debaixo dos céus". (De 29:19-21) Deus disse à apóstata, idólatra e imoral cidade de Jerusalém que ele a julgaria e lhe daria "o sangue de furor e de ciúme". (Ez 16:38; 23:25) Isto ocorreu quando os babilônios destruíram a cidade e o templo sobre o qual se colocara o nome de Jeová, nome este que eles haviam crassamente difamado. Todavia, seu ciúme não obscureceu ou eliminou seus propósitos e sua misericórdia, porque Jeová poupou um restante, para que este voltasse e reconstruísse o templo.

Pelo seu povo. Por causa do Seu amor ao Seu povo, e porque este leva o Seu santo nome, Jeová é ciumento dele com zelo ardente. Assim como o marido protege com ciúme sua esposa, por lhe ser preciosa, assim Jeová diz: "Aquele que toca em vós, toca no globo do meu olho." (Za 2:8) Concordemente, por causa dos atos maldosos das nações para com o seu povo, Deus predisse: "Com grande ciúme vou ser ciumento de Sião e com grande furor vou ser ciumento dela", também, que ele seria zeloso pela sua terra e teria compaixão do seu povo. — Za 8:2; 1:14; Jl 2:18.

Provocar Jeová ao ciúme. Não se deve mofar de Jeová, porque ele insiste em devoção exclusiva. (Gál 6:7) Qualquer dos seus servos que se nega a dar-lhe devoção de todo o coração, deixando de amá-lo de todo o coração, mente, alma e força, está tentando servir a dois amos. Jesus explicou que o resultado de tal proceder seria desastroso, porque esse homem amaria um amo e desprezaria o outro. (Mt 6:24) Tal pessoa 'provoca Jeová ao ciúme'. (De 32:16; 1Rs 14:22) Numa visão dada a Ezequiel, Jeová mostrou-lhe um "símbolo de ciúme", evidentemente idólatra, no portão do templo. (Ez 8:3, 5) Por Judá se ter desviado da devoção exclusiva a Jeová, o ciúme dele ardeu contra eles.

O apóstolo Paulo diz aos cristãos: "Não podeis estar participando da 'mesa de Jeová' e da mesa de demônios. Ou 'estamos incitando Jeová ao ciúme'? Será que somos mais fortes do que ele?" (1Co 10:21, 22; De 32:21) Ele salienta que, quando um cristão pratica o pecado deliberadamente depois de ter recebido o conhecimento exato da verdade, ele pode esperar apenas o julgamento e "um ciúme ardente que vai consumir os que estão em oposição". — He 10:26, 27.

Jesus Cristo. O Filho de Deus, mais íntimo do Pai do que qualquer outra das suas criaturas, e mais habilitado a imitá-lo e a revelá-lo a outros, podia dizer: "Quem me tem visto, tem visto também o Pai." (Jo 14:9; Mt 11:27; Jo 1:18) Por conseguinte, seu zelo e seu ciúme a favor da justiça e do nome de seu Pai excediam os de todos os outros. (He 1:9; Sal 45:7) Ele sempre dava devoção exclusiva a Jeová. (Mt 4:10; Jo 8:19) Quando na Terra, seu coração ardia com fervoroso zelo, com ciúme por causa da difamação do nome de Jeová, causada pelos vendedores amantes do dinheiro, no templo. (Jo 2:13-17) Assim como ele cumpriu ali a profecia do Salmo 69:9: "Consumiu-me o puro zelo pela tua casa", assim seus seguidores podem ter certeza do zelo dele a favor do pleno estabelecimento de permanente justiça, equidade e respeito pelo nome e pela soberania de Jeová, em cumprimento da profecia do Salmo 45:3-6.

Os Que Adoram a Deus com Devoção Exclusiva. Todos os que têm sido verdadeiros adoradores de Deus têm tido zelo pelo serviço dele e ciúme pelo nome dele. O profeta Elias, que fez obras poderosas ao desviar muitos em Israel da adoração falsa para a adoração de Jeová, disse: "Fui absolutamente ciumento por Jeová, o Deus dos exércitos." (1Rs 19:10, 14) Fineias demonstrou a devoção que agradou a Deus e salvou Israel do extermínio por seu zelo em matar um maioral de Israel, que havia contaminado o acampamento por introduzir nele a imunda adoração fálica de Baal. Isto se deu porque Fineias, como israelita e sacerdote, 'não tolerou nenhuma rivalidade para com' Jeová. — Núm 25:11; compare isso com 2Rs 10:16.

A congregação cristã tem de exercer a mesma vigilância ciumenta, para que nenhuma coisa impura surja como "raiz venenosa", de modo a causar dificuldades e aviltar a muitos. (He 12:15) Caso se infiltre alguém corrupto e tente aviltar outros, a congregação terá de 'exercer fervor, purificando-se diante de Jeová com indignação e zelo'. Terá de 'remover o homem iníquo de entre eles'. — 1Co 5:4, 5, 13; 2Co 7:11, 12.

Portanto, é bom que os cristãos exerçam "ciúme piedoso" a favor de concristãos. Quer dizer, devem ter o ardente desejo de fazer todo o possível para se ajudarem mutuamente a manter devoção exclusiva a Deus e obediência a Cristo. O apóstolo Paulo comparou os seus irmãos espirituais a uma virgem prometida em casamento a Cristo como prospectiva noiva dele. Protegia-os ciumentamente, para que pudessem permanecer imaculados para Cristo. (2Co 11:2; compare isso com Re 19:7, 8.) Seu zelo por eles é demonstrado em muitas expressões nas suas cartas, à congregação coríntia e a outros. E o ciúme que o próprio Cristo tem da sua "noiva" (Re 21:9) é demonstrado nas suas fortes declarações às congregações, conforme registradas em Revelação (Apocalipse), capítulos 1 a 3.

Incitar ao ciúme de modo correto. Jeová mostrou misericórdia para com a nação de Israel, depois de toda ela, com exceção dum restante, haver rejeitado o Messias. O restante de judeus crentes foi o começo da congregação cristã; o favor de Jeová estava agora sobre esta, em vez de sobre a rejeitada nação judaica. Jeová demonstrou esta mudança dos seus modos de agir por meio de sinais, portentos e obras poderosas. (He 2:3, 4) Abriu o caminho para gentios obterem seu favor. Mas ele 'não fechou totalmente a porta' para Israel. Conforme as Escrituras salientam: "Tropeçaram eles [todos os israelitas], de modo que caíram completamente? Que isso nunca aconteça! Mas, por seu passo em falso há salvação para pessoas das nações, para incitá-los ao ciúme." (Ro 11:11) Foi isto o que Jeová, com séculos de antecedência, disse que faria, resultando na salvação de alguns. (De 32:21; Ro 10:19) O apóstolo Paulo, que fervorosamente buscava o bem para os coisraelitas, seguiu este princípio, dizendo: "Visto que sou, na realidade, apóstolo para as nações, glorifico o meu ministério, para ver se de algum modo posso incitar ao ciúme os que são da minha própria carne e salvar alguns dentre eles." — Ro 11:13, 14; 10:1.

Zelo mal Aplicado. Alguém pode ser sinceramente zeloso, ou ciumento, de certa causa, e ainda assim estar errado e desagradar a Deus. Isto se dava com muitos dos judeus do primeiro século. Esperavam que a justiça resultasse das suas próprias obras sob a Lei mosaica. Mas, Paulo mostrou que o zelo deles era mal aplicado, por falta de conhecimento exato. Portanto não conseguiram a verdadeira justiça que provém de Deus. Teriam de reconhecer seu erro e voltar-se para Deus, por meio de Cristo, a fim de receber justiça e livramento da condenação da Lei. (Ro 10:1-10) Saulo de Tarso era um de tais, sendo extremamente zeloso pelo judaísmo, até o excesso, 'perseguindo a congregação e devastando-a'. Guardava escrupulosamente a Lei como "um que se mostrou inculpe". (Gál 1:13, 14; Fil 3:6) Todavia, seu ciúme do judaísmo era mal aplicado. Tinha coração sincero, motivo pelo qual Jeová exerceu benignidade imerecida, por meio de Cristo, por dirigi-lo ao caminho da verdadeira adoração. — 1Ti 1:12, 13.

Ciúme e Inveja. Quem tem ciúme incorreto suspeita dos outros sem motivo adequado, ou se ressente de se conceder a outro o que ele injustificadamente reivindica como seu. O invejoso, de modo descontente, deseja ou cobiça o bom êxito e as consecuções de outros. O contexto frequentemente determina o sentido em que se usam na Bíblia as palavras hebraicas usualmente traduzidas por "ciumento" ou "ciúme", mas às vezes por "inveja". O mesmo se dá com a palavra grega para "ciúme", mas a língua grega tem também uma palavra distinta para "inveja", fthó·nos.

Na congregação coríntia, do primeiro século, haviam penetrado homens ambiciosos que chamavam atenção para si mesmos, jactando-se de homens, e esses causavam rixas na congregação. A congregação estava dividida em facções, que ciumentamente se voltavam para homens, exaltando-os e seguindo-os. Paulo salientou que tal ciúme era carnal, não espiritual. (1Co 3:3; 2Co 12:20) Ele explicou que o amor piedoso não é ciumento de modo impróprio, mas, em vez disso, é confiante e esperançoso, sempre agindo nos interesses dos outros. — 1Co 13:4, 5, 7.

O tipo de ciúme condenado por Paulo na congregação coríntia não é direito. Não é a favor da devoção exclusiva a Jeová. Antes, é uma forma de idolatria, de origem demoníaca, e gera inveja e rixa. A Bíblia repetidas vezes adverte contra ele, mostrando que ele afeta o próprio coração. Tiago, meio-irmão de Jesus, escreveu: "Se tiverdes ciúme amargo e briga nos vossos corações, não vos jacteis e não mintais contra a verdade. Esta não é a sabedoria que desce de cima, mas é a terrena, animalesca, demoníaca. Porque, onde há ciúme e briga, ali há desordem e toda coisa ruim." — Tg 3:14-16; Ro 13:13; Gál 5:19-21.

O ciúme do tipo errado tem efeito prejudicial sobre a saúde física, pois "o coração calmo é a vida do organismo carnal, mas o ciúme é podridão para os ossos". (Pr 14:30) O ciúme resulta de se abrigar suspeita e ressentimento no íntimo. Pode ser mais destrutivo do que o furor ou a ira, porque pode ter raízes mais profundas, ser mais duradouro e persistente, e menos facilmente aplacado. Rejeita geralmente o uso da razão. (Pr 27:4) E o ciúme de um homem, que de direito está enfurecido com outro que comete adultério com a sua esposa, não aceita nenhuma espécie de desculpa ou resgate! — Pr 6:32-35.

O tipo errado de ciúme pode levar a pessoa a ponto de pecar contra Deus, assim como fizeram os dez meios-irmãos de José. (Gên 37:11; At 7:9) Pode levar à perda da vida dessa pessoa e de outros envolvidos, assim como se deu no caso de Datã e Abirão, e os seus familiares. (Sal 106:16, 17) Pior ainda, o ciúme induziu os judeus descrentes a cometer crimes graves contra os apóstolos, e, ainda mais, blasfêmia e tentativa de assassinato. — At 13:45, 50; 14:19.

Ciúme Conjugal. O ciúme de alguém para com o seu cônjuge é bom, se for ciúme correto, zelo em prol do benefício e do bem-estar do cônjuge. Mas o ciúme incorreto, ou a desconfiança sem base, é errado e não demonstra amor, e pode arruinar o casamento. — 1Co 13:4, 7.

Sob a Lei mosaica faziam-se provisões para os casos de ciúme, em que o marido suspeitava dum adultério secreto da sua esposa. Não havendo as duas testemunhas exigidas para provar a acusação, a fim de que os juízes humanos pudessem agir na aplicação da sentença de morte, o procedimento determinado pela Lei era que o casal devia comparecer perante o representante de Jeová, o sacerdote. Esta ação constituía um apelo a Jeová, o qual se apercebia de todos os fatos, a fim de que desse seu julgamento. Se a mulher era adúltera, ela recebia, em punição direta da parte de Jeová, a perda da sua faculdade de procriação. Se o ciúme do marido não tinha base, então ele tinha de admitir a inocência dela por ter relações sexuais com ela, a fim de que ela tivesse um filho. — Núm 5:11-31.

Os Servos de Deus São Avisados Contra a Rivalidade. Rivalidade ou competição, tão comuns no atual sistema de coisas, não são próprias. O escritor do livro de Eclesiastes diz: "Eu mesmo vi todo o trabalho árduo e toda a proficiência no trabalho, que significa rivalidade [hebr.: qin·'áth] de um para com o outro; também isto é vaidade e um esforço para alcançar o vento." — Ec 4:4; compare isso com Gál 5:26.

Por ter ciúme do êxito, dos bens ou das realizações de outros, o servo de Deus pode ficar com inveja e cobiça, chegando até a ficar invejoso dos que são maus, mas que prosperam. As Escrituras advertem contra isso; embora pareça longo o tempo em que prosperam, no devido tempo de Deus receberão um pronto julgamento, conforme está escrito: "Não te acalores por causa dos malfeitores. Não invejes os que fazem injustiça. Pois murcharão rapidamente como a erva." (Sal 37:1, 2) Invejar a tais pode levar a pessoa a imitar os modos violentos deles, o que é detestável para Jeová. — Pr 3:31, 32; 23:17; 24:1, 19; compare isso com Sal 73:2, 3, 17-19, 21-23.

CLÃ. Grande grupo social que possui uma herança comum, e que, em sua magnitude, se assemelha a uma tribo.

Em todos os três casos em que ocorre a palavra hebraica 'um·máh, ela se refere a um grande grupo de não israelitas e é traduzida por "clã". Por exemplo, descendentes dos 12 filhos de Ismael são descritos como "clãs" logo cedo na história desse grupo étnico. (Gên 25:16) O mesmo se dá com os descendentes de Midiã. (Núm 25:15) O termo é também encontrado na poesia hebraica, no Salmo 117:1, onde aparece num paralelismo com "nações".

A palavra hebraica shé·vet, que costuma ser vertida "tribo", é traduzida por "clã" em Números 18:2. Trata-se dum caso excepcional, para mostrar a diferença feita pelo texto hebraico, porque neste versículo aparecem as duas palavras mat·téh e shé·vet, ambas normalmente traduzidas por "tribo".

CLÁUDIA. Mulher cristã de Roma, cujos cumprimentos Paulo incluiu na sua segunda carta a Timóteo. — 2Ti 4:21.

CLÁUDIO. Quarto imperador de Roma; filho de Druso, irmão de Tibério, e tio de Calígula, a quem sucedeu no trono, em 41 EC. Cláudio não era fisicamente muito forte, nem tinha muita força de vontade, e embora estivesse interessado em história, em escrever e em outros empenhos acadêmicos, seus predecessores o julgaram mentalmente incompetente para manejar as rédeas do poder e por isso favoreceram outros como sucessores. No entanto, durante o tumulto que se seguiu ao assassinato de Calígula, a Guarda Pretoriana prevaleceu e fez com que Cláudio fosse proclamado Imperador. Um de seus apoiadores nesta luta pelo poder foi Herodes Agripa I, a quem Cláudio recompensou por confirmar-lhe o reinado, e por acrescentar a Judeia e Samaria ao seu domínio. Cláudio conseguiu também granjear o favor do Senado. Sua quarta esposa supostamente o envenenou com cogumelos, em 54 EC, no 14.º ano do seu reinado. Nero assumiu então o poder.

"Uma grande fome . . . sobre toda a terra habitada" foi predita pelo profeta Ágabo, "a qual, de fato, ocorreu no tempo de Cláudio". Isto precipitou "uma subministração de socorros" por parte dos cristãos em Antioquia para seus irmãos em Jerusalém e na Judeia. (At 11:27-30) Tal fome na Palestina, no reinado de Cláudio, é chamada por Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XX, 49-53 [ii, 5]; XX, 101 [v, 2]) de "grande fome", e é datada de por volta de 46 EC.

"Cláudio . . . ordenou que todos os judeus abandonassem Roma", emitindo seu decreto em 49 ou no começo de 50 EC, no nono ano do seu reinado. O biógrafo e historiador romano Suetônio corrobora o banimento dos judeus de Roma, por ordem de Cláudio. (The Lives of the Caesars [A Vida dos Césares], Cláudio, XXV, 4) Em consequência desta ordem de expulsão, dois judeus cristãos, Áquila e Priscila, partiram de Roma para Corinto, onde pouco depois da sua chegada se encontraram com o apóstolo Paulo, na chegada dele ali provavelmente no outono setentrional do ano 50 EC. (At 18:1-3) Perto do começo do seu reinado, Cláudio estivera favoravelmente disposto para com os judeus, até mesmo ordenando tolerância para com eles e concedendo-lhes diversas liberdades em todo o império. No entanto, parece que muitos judeus em Roma eram bastante tumultuosos, o que resultou em Cláudio expulsá-los da cidade.

CLÁUDIO LÍSIAS. Comandante militar da guarnição romana em Jerusalém quando o apóstolo Paulo esteve ali pela última vez, por volta de 56 EC. Como comandante militar (quiliarca), Cláudio Lísias tinha 1.000 homens sob o seu comando. Seu nome grego, Lísias, sugere que era grego de nascença. Adquiriu a cidadania romana por uma grande soma de dinheiro, provavelmente durante o reinado de Cláudio, época em que, como era costume entre os que procuravam obter a cidadania, ele adotou o nome do imperador governante. (At 22:28; 23:26) De acordo com o historiador romano Dio Cassius, logo cedo no reinado do Imperador Cláudio, a cidadania romana muitas vezes era vendida por grandes somas de dinheiro. — Dio's Roman History (História Romana de Dio), LX, 17, 5, 6.

Cláudio Lísias figura no relato de Atos por causa dos seus tratos com o apóstolo Paulo. Ele, os soldados e os oficiais do exército que o acompanhavam, resgataram Paulo da morte às mãos duma turba amotinada. Agarrando Paulo, Cláudio Lísias mandou que o apóstolo fosse amarrado, e quando, por causa do tumulto, não conseguiu averiguar a natureza da acusação contra ele, ordenou que o apóstolo fosse levado ao quartel, situado na Torre de Antônia. — At 21:30-34.

Cláudio Lísias concluiu erroneamente que Paulo era o egípcio que anteriormente havia provocado uma sedição e levado os 4.000 "faquistas" para o ermo. Mas, ao saber que não era assim, concedeu ao apóstolo permissão para se dirigir à multidão, da escadaria, provavelmente a da fortaleza. Quando a violência recomeçou logo depois de Paulo mencionar sua comissão de ir às nações, Cláudio Lísias ordenou que fosse levado para dentro, ao quartel, e que fosse examinado sob açoites. — At 21:35-40; 22:21-24.

Ao ser informado de que Paulo era cidadão romano e depois de fazer indagação pessoal, Cláudio Lísias ficou com medo, por ter violado os direitos dum romano por mandar amarrá-lo. (At 22:25-29) Aceitar ele a afirmação de Paulo, de ser cidadão romano, à base da própria declaração do apóstolo, pode ser entendido melhor quando se considera que havia pouca probabilidade de alguém falsamente afirmar possuir os direitos de cidadão romano, visto que isso o sujeitaria à pena capital. Diz o historiador Suetônio: O imperador "proibiu que homens de origem estrangeira usassem nomes romanos, no que se referia aos dos clãs. Aqueles que usurpavam os privilégios da cidadania romana ele executava no campo Esquilino". — The Lives of the Caesars (A Vida dos Césares), Cláudio XXV, 3.

Ainda querendo saber a verdade a respeito da acusação contra Paulo, Cláudio Lísias ordenou que o Sinédrio se reunisse. Nesta ocasião, Paulo introduziu o assunto da ressurreição, o que resultou em tanta dissensão entre os membros do Sinédrio, que Cláudio Lísias, temendo que Paulo fosse dilacerado por eles, mandou que os soldados arrebatassem o apóstolo do meio deles. — At 22:30; 23:6-10.

Mais tarde, ao ser informado pelo próprio sobrinho de Paulo sobre uma trama judaica para assassinar o apóstolo, Cláudio Lísias convocou dois de seus oficiais do exército e ordenou que aprontassem 200 soldados, 70 cavaleiros e 200 lanceiros, a fim de partirem para Cesareia por volta das 9 horas da noite, para levar Paulo ao Governador Félix. (At 23:16-24) De acordo com a lei romana, também enviou uma declaração do caso ao Governador Félix. Esta carta, porém, não era inteiramente segundo os fatos. Embora reconhecendo a inocência de Paulo, Cláudio Lísias dava a impressão de que resgatara Paulo por ter sabido que o apóstolo era romano, quando na realidade ele havia violado os direitos de cidadão, de Paulo, por mandar amarrá-lo e até mesmo ordenar que fosse examinado sob açoites. — At 23:25-30.

No que se refere ao conhecimento do discípulo Lucas sobre o conteúdo da carta, é possível que a carta tenha sido lida por ocasião da audiência de Paulo. O apóstolo Paulo talvez tenha até mesmo recebido uma cópia dela, após o seu apelo para César.

CLAVA DE GUERRA. Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA.

CLEMENTE. Fiel cristão, que lutou lado a lado com o apóstolo Paulo, presumivelmente em Filipos, pela causa das "boas novas". (Fil 4:3) O nome Clemente era bastante comum, e, por isso, não fornece nenhuma base válida para ligá-lo com Clemente de Roma, conforme faz Orígenes.

CLÉOPAS [possivelmente uma contração de Cleópatro, significando "Famoso Pai"]. Um dos dois discípulos, nenhum dos quais apóstolo, que iam a Emaús no dia da ressurreição de Jesus. Quando Jesus se juntou a eles como estranho e perguntou sobre o que estavam falando, Cléopas respondeu: "Moras sozinho, como forasteiro, em Jerusalém, e não sabes as coisas que ocorreram nela nestes dias?" Depois de Jesus lhes explicar muitos textos e então se identificar, Cléopas e seu companheiro, em vez de pernoitarem em Emaús, apressaram-se a voltar a Jerusalém e relataram essas coisas aos outros. (Lu 24:13-35) Este nome grego, Cléopas, não deve ser confundido com Clopas, nome aramaico. — Jo 19:25.

CLOE [dum radical significando "verde"; provavelmente: Primeiro Rebento Verde das Plantas]. Mulher, pela casa de quem Paulo recebeu relatos a respeito de dissensões existentes na congregação coríntia. (1Co 1:11) Embora a carta de Paulo não declare que Cloe era cristã que morava em Corinto, ou em Éfeso, onde a carta foi escrita, em vista da referência do apóstolo a esta casa por nome, parece que pelo menos alguns membros dela, quer familiares, quer escravos, eram cristãos conhecidos dos coríntios.

CLOPAS. Marido de uma das Marias paradas perto de Jesus, quando ele estava pregado na estaca de tortura. (Jo 19:25) Presumivelmente, ele era marido da "outra Maria", e pai do apóstolo Tiago, o Menor, e do irmão deste, Josés. (Mt 27:56; 28:1; Mr 15:40; 16:1; Lu 24:10) É bem provável, e geralmente reconhecido, que Clopas e Alfeu fossem a mesma pessoa. (Mt 10:3; Mr 3:18; Lu 6:15; At 1:13) Os dois nomes talvez sejam variantes de pronúncia do radical aramaico, ou a mesma pessoa talvez tenha tido dois nomes, usados de modo intercambiável, costume nada incomum naquele tempo. Que Clopas era irmão de José, pai adotivo de Jesus, é uma conjectura baseada apenas em tradição.

CNIDO. Cidade situada na península Resadiye, que se estende do canto SO da Ásia Menor ao mar Egeu, entre as ilhas Rodes e Cós.

Embora Cnido não seja mencionada em nenhuma das duas ocasiões, o apóstolo Paulo provavelmente passou pela cidade quando retornou da sua segunda viagem missionária, por volta de 52 EC (At 18:21, 22), e novamente perto do fim da sua terceira viagem, por volta de 56 EC, quando seu navio fez escala em Rodes e em Cós. (At 21:1) Todavia, é especificamente mencionada em Atos 27, em conexão com a viagem de Paulo, aproximadamente em 58 EC, para comparecer perante o Imperador Nero em Roma. Partindo de Mirra, o navio em que Paulo e outros prisioneiros viajavam chegou a Cnido. (At 27:5-7) Com ventos favoráveis, esta viagem de cerca de 240 km, talvez durasse apenas um dia, mas o vento contrário mencionado no relato explica por que levaram "muitos dias" neste trecho específico. O "barco de Alexandria" em que viajavam era uma embarcação de cereais, talvez uma das muitas que regularmente levavam produtos agrícolas do Egito para Roma, e que talvez normalmente atravessassem o mar Mediterrâneo numa rota mais direta de Alexandria a Roma. (At 27:38) Todavia, o forte vento mencionado nos versículos 4 e 7 talvez obrigasse este navio a alterar a rota e a atracar em Mirra. Uma embarcação grande, de difícil manejo, carregada de cereais, avançaria devagar contra o vento, e, compreensivelmente, chegaria por fim, "com dificuldade", a Cnido. Recentes escavações nesta região revelaram muito sobre este sítio. The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible [O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete], Volume Suplementar, p. 169, descreve a localidade: "Um istmo baixo e estreito . . . junta-se à parte principal da península cnidiana num ponto elevado de terra, abrigando a sotavento, em ambos os lados do istmo, dois portos bons. O porto maior ao S deve ter sido o porto comercial, onde navios com destino ao oeste ou ao norte, tais como o de Paulo (Atos 27:7) podiam deixar o tempo desfavorável passar, antes de prosseguir viagem além do cabo ventoso. Às margens dos portos havia ancoradouros; armazéns . . ., mercados; pequenos teatros; e um templo de Dioniso." — Editado por K. Crim, 1976.

Depois de mencionar a chegada a Cnido, o registro declara que, "visto que o vento não nos deixava prosseguir, navegamos sob o abrigo de Creta, na altura de Salmone". (At 27:7) Parece que não podiam "prosseguir" com a sua pretendida rota, de cruzar o mar Egeu passando pela extremidade meridional da Grécia e daí para Roma, sendo obrigados pelos ventos adversos a tomar uma rota meridional para Creta, e a velejar ao abrigo de seu litoral. Conforme Atos 27:9 mostra, era o outono do ano, e os encarregados do navio sem dúvida sentiam a urgência de fazer o máximo progresso possível antes de as condições sazonais tornarem a navegação ainda mais perigosa.

COA. Povo ou região mencionada junto com Pecode e Soa em Ezequiel 23:23, e predito por Jeová como fornecendo parte das forças inimigas que atacariam as infiéis Jerusalém e Judá. Coa provavelmente estava situado ao L de Babilônia, e geralmente tem sido relacionado com os Qutu, um povo que residia ao L do Tigre, nas estepes entre as partes superiores dos rios ʽAdhaim e Diyala. Os Qutu são frequentemente relacionados com os Sutu (talvez os Soa de Ez 23:23) em inscrições assírias, registros que os mostram lutando contra a Assíria.

COATE. Segundo filho mencionado dos três de Levi (Gên 46:11; Êx 6:16; 1Cr 6:1) e pai de Anrão, Izar, Hébron e Uziel. (Êx 6:18; Núm 3:19; 1Cr 6:2) Era o progenitor dos coatitas, uma das três divisões principais dos levitas. (Núm 3:17, 27) Nasceu provavelmente na terra de Canaã e está alistado entre as 66 almas que "vieram a Jacó ao Egito". (Gên 46:8, 11, 26; veja, porém, BENJAMIM N.º 1.) Os descendentes de Coate incluem Moisés, Arão, Miriã (Êx 6:18, 20; Núm 26:58, 59), e o rebelde Corá. (Núm 16:1-3) Coate viveu 133 anos. — Êx 6:18.

COATITA [De (Pertencente a) Coate]. Descendente do cabeça familiar Coate, um dos três filhos de Levi. (Gên 46:11; Núm 26:57) Os "coatitas", ou "filhos de Coate", estavam divididos em quatro famílias, descendentes dos quatro filhos de Coate: os anramitas, os izaritas, os hebronitas e os uzielitas. (Núm 3:19, 27) Seu maioral, por ocasião do acampamento de Israel junto ao monte Sinai (1513 AEC), era Elizafã, filho de Uziel. — Núm 3:30.

Moisés e Arão eram coatitas da família anramita (Êx 6:18, 20); o rebelde Corá era coatita da família dos izaritas (Núm 16:1), assim como também era o fiel profeta Samuel. — 1Sa 1:1, 19, 20; 1Cr 6:33-38.

O recenseamento feito no ermo do Sinai revelou que havia 8.600 varões de um mês de idade para cima pertencentes às famílias dos coatitas. (Núm 3:27, 28) Segundo alguns manuscritos da Septuaginta grega, a cifra é 8.300. Quando o número menor é adicionado aos 7.500 e aos 6.200 de Números 3:22, 34, o total é 22.000 — a mesma cifra encontrada em Números 3:39. Seus varões entre 30 e 50 anos de idade, "que entraram no grupo de serviço para o serviço na tenda de reunião", somaram 2.750. — Núm 4:34-37.

Durante a peregrinação no ermo, os coatitas tinham a designação de se acamparem ao lado S do tabernáculo (Núm 3:29), entre este e o acampamento das tribos de Rubem, Simeão e Gade. (Núm 2:10, 12, 14) Os coatitas tinham o privilégio e a responsabilidade de transportar a Arca do Pacto, a mesa dos pães da proposição, o candelabro, os altares e os utensílios do lugar santo, bem como o reposteiro do Santíssimo (Núm 3:30, 31), depois de estes itens terem sido acondicionados e cobertos por Arão e seus filhos, que também eram coatitas. Não se permitia aos outros coatitas, além de Arão e seus filhos, ver os utensílios nem mesmo por um instante, nem tocar o lugar santo, porque isso significaria morte. (Núm 4:4-15, 20) Embora Israel provesse aos levitas gado e carroças para o transporte do equipamento do tabernáculo, os coatitas não os receberam. Sem dúvida, por causa da santidade dos seus fardos, levavam a carga sobre os ombros. (Núm 7:2-9) Eram os últimos levitas a se afastar do acampamento. — Núm 10:17-21.

Depois da conquista de Canaã, quando se designaram certas cidades aos levitas, os coatitas receberam 23; aos "filhos" de Arão (isto é, os coatitas) foram designadas 13 cidades dos territórios de Judá, Simeão e Benjamim, e aos demais coatitas foram designadas outras 10 cidades dos territórios de Efraim, Dã e da meia tribo de Manassés. — Jos 21:1-5, 9-26; 1Cr 6:54-61, 66-70.

Hemã, coatita da família de Izar, recebeu de Davi um cargo relacionado com o canto no santuário de Jeová. (1Cr 6:31-38) Cento e vinte coatitas sob Uriel, seu chefe, estavam entre os designados por Davi para levar a arca de Jeová da casa de Obede-Edom para Jerusalém, ocasião em que Hemã se destacou na música e no canto. (1Cr 15:4, 5, 11-17, 19, 25) De acordo com Primeiro Crônicas, quando Davi separou os levitas em turmas, ou divisões, alguns coatitas eram cantores (25:1, 4-6) e porteiros (26:1-9); outros estavam encarregados dos depósitos e das coisas tornadas sagradas (26:23-28); e alguns atuavam como oficiais, juízes e administradores. (26:29-32) Certos coatitas cuidavam da cozedura e da preparação do pão de pilha para o sábado. — 1Cr 9:31, 32.

Os coatitas louvaram a Jeová quando souberam que ele daria a Judá, sob Jeosafá, a vitória sobre as forças conjuntas de Amom, Moabe e Seir. (2Cr 20:14-19) Levitas coatitas participaram da limpe-za da casa de Jeová nos dias do Rei Ezequias. (2Cr 29:12-17) Também, os coatitas Zacarias e Mesulão estavam entre os que agiam como supervisores quando o Rei Josias mandou consertar o templo. — 2Cr 34:8-13.

COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA. Entre os hebreus dava-se pouca ênfase à cobertura para a cabeça como peça regular do vestuário. Quando necessário, o povo comum talvez usasse ocasionalmente o manto ou a veste comprida para este fim. Coberturas ornamentais para a cabeça, porém, frequentemente eram usadas por homens em cargos oficiais, e tanto por homens como por mulheres em ocasiões festivas ou especiais. Os sacerdotes de Israel tinham sua forma prescrita de cobertura para a cabeça. — Êx 28:4, 39, 40; veja COROA; VESTIMENTA.

Tipos de Cobertura para a Cabeça nas Escrituras Hebraicas. A primeira cobertura para a cabeça mencionada na Bíblia é o lenço com que Rebeca cobriu a cabeça ao se encontrar com Isaque. (Gên 24:65) A palavra hebraica usada aqui é tsa·ʽíf, em outras partes traduzida por "xale". (Gên 38:14, 19) O uso deste "lenço para a cabeça" evidentemente significava a sujeição de Rebeca ao seu noivo Isaque.

O turbante (hebr.: mits·né·feth) do sumo sacerdote era de linho fino, enrolado na cabeça, com uma lâmina de ouro na parte da frente, amarrada com um cordel azul. (Êx 28:36-39; Le 16:4) A ornamental cobertura para a cabeça dos subsacerdotes também era 'enrolada' na cabeça, mas usa-se uma palavra hebraica diferente (migh·ba·ʽáh) para a sua cobertura para a cabeça, indicando que tinha forma diferente e talvez não fosse tão requintada como o turbante do sumo sacerdote. A cobertura para a cabeça, dos subsacerdotes, tampouco tinha uma lâmina de ouro. — Le 8:13.

Jó menciona o turbante em sentido figurado, comparando a justiça dele a um turbante. (Jó 29:14; compare isso com Pr 1:9; 4:7-9.) Mulheres às vezes usavam turbante. (Is 3:23) Neste caso, a palavra hebraica é tsa·níf. Ela é usada na expressão "turbante régio", em Isaías 62:3, e em Zacarias 3:5, referente à cobertura para a cabeça do sumo sacerdote.

O pe'ér, evidentemente em forma de turbante, era usado pelo noivo (Is 61:10) e era símbolo de alegria. (Is 61:3; compare isso com Ez 24:17, 23.) Esta palavra é também usada referente à cobertura para a cabeça das mulheres (Is 3:20) e para a dos sacerdotes. — Ez 44:18.

As fitas para a cabeça (hebr.: shevi·sím) parecem ter sido feitas de malha. (Is 3:18) Os "turbantes pendentes" (hebr.: tevu·lím), descritos por Ezequiel como usados na cabeça por guerreiros caldeus talvez fossem bem coloridos e decorados. — Ez 23:14, 15.

Os três jovens companheiros hebreus de Daniel, plenamente trajados e até mesmo usando gorros, foram lançados na fornalha de Nabucodonosor. Os gorros talvez fossem usados para indicar seu título ou categoria. Alguns acham que tinham forma cônica. — Da 3:21.

Coberturas Antigas e Modernas para a Cabeça. A maioria das representações em monumentos e altos-relevos do Egito, de Babilônia e da Assíria retratam cenas de guerra e de caça, ou do palácio real ou de templos. No entanto, especialmente os egípcios têm muitas ilustrações de artífices empenhados em diversas artes e ofícios. Nestas, os reis, os maiorais e os nobres são mostrados usando uma ampla variedade de coberturas para a cabeça, ao passo que o povo comum frequentemente é retratado sem nada na cabeça, ou às vezes com um gorro um tanto justo.

Uma forma bastante similar de cobertura para a cabeça usada hoje no Oriente Médio é o kaffiyeh, usado pelos beduínos. Consiste num pano quadrado, dobrado de tal modo que três pontas caiam sobre as costas e os ombros. É preso na cabeça por um cordão, deixando a face exposta, e protegendo a cabeça e o pescoço do sol e do vento. É possível que tal cobertura para a cabeça fosse usada antigamente pelos hebreus.

Cobrir a Cabeça e Sujeição Feminina. O apóstolo Paulo orientou que as mulheres cobrissem a cabeça ao orar ou ao profetizar na congregação cristã. A mulher reconhece assim o princípio da chefia, segundo o qual o homem é a cabeça da mulher, Cristo é a cabeça do homem, e Deus, por sua vez, é a cabeça do Cristo. Paulo disse que o cabelo comprido da mulher lhe é dado por natureza "em lugar de mantilha". O apóstolo escrevia então aos cristãos em Corinto, que viviam no meio de europeus e de semitas, entre os quais existia a diferença natural entre homens e mulheres quanto ao comprimento do cabelo. Rapava-se a cabeça de escravas e de mulheres apanhadas em fornicação ou adultério. Paulo salientou que o cabelo comprido da mulher era uma evidência natural da sua posição feminina sob a chefia do homem. A mulher, vendo este lembrete natural da sua sujeição, portanto, devia usar alguma forma de cobertura na cabeça, como "sinal de autoridade", ao orar ou profetizar na congregação, demonstrando assim perante outros, inclusive os anjos, seu reconhecimento pessoal do princípio da chefia. (1Co 11:3-16) Sem dúvida, este era o costume das profetisas dos tempos antigos, tais como Débora (Jz 4:4) e Ana (Lu 2:36-38), quando profetizavam. — Veja CABELO; COBRIR A CABEÇA.

COBIÇA. Veja GANÂNCIA.

COBRA. Veja COBRA-ARDENTE; COBRA-CUSPIDEIRA; SERPENTE, COBRA.

COBRA-ARDENTE. O substantivo hebraico sa·ráf, no plural, é traduzido por "serafins" em Isaías 6:2, 6, e significa literalmente "o ardente", ou "o abrasador". É também usado em conjunto com o termo hebraico geral para serpente (na·hhásh) e tem sido traduzido por 'venenoso', referindo-se talvez ao efeito ardente e inflamatório do veneno. (De 8:15) É primeiro mencionado na época de Deus infligir punição aos israelitas rebeldes por enviar "serpentes venenosas [han·nehha·shím has·sera·fím]" entre eles. Depois da intercessão de Moisés, Jeová mandou que esse fizesse "uma cobra-ardente" e a colocasse numa haste de sinal. Se os mordidos olhassem para ela, seriam curados e viveriam. Moisés fez tal serpente de cobre. (Núm 21:6-9; 1Co 10:9) Jesus deu a isso significado profético por declarar: "Assim como Moisés ergueu a serpente no ermo, assim tem de ser erguido o Filho do homem, para que todo o que nele crer tenha vida eterna." — Jo 3:14, 15.

Em Isaías 14:29 e 30:6, menciona-se uma "cobra-ardente, voadora", no julgamento de Deus contra a Filístia e na descrição da região do ermo ao S de Judá. A expressão "voadora" é por alguns considerada como se referindo ao movimento rápido ou aos botes relampagueantes pelo ar, de algumas das cobras venenosas quando atacam.

COBRA-CUSPIDEIRA [hebr.: qip·póhz]. Uma cobra, também conhecida como cobra-flecha, que dá botes e pula sobre sua presa, à maneira da cascavel. O radical hebraico de que o nome deriva parece ser aparentado com o verbo radical árabe que significa "saltar" ou "pular". A cobra-cuspideira é mencionada na profecia de Isaías (34:15) como uma das criaturas que habitariam Edom. Isto enfatizaria que Edom se tornaria uma ruína tão desolada, que seria um lugar seguro para a cobra-cuspideira 'fazer o seu ninho, e botar ovos, e chocá-los e ajuntá-los sob a sua sombra'. A maioria das cobras são ovíparas, e este texto talvez se refira ao costume de algumas cobras de se enroscarem em volta dos seus ovos. Diz o livro Snakes: A Natural History (Cobras: Uma História Natural, 1977, p. 55), de H. W. Parker: "O hábito de 'chocar' e o corpo enroscado proveem certa medida de controle de temperatura, bem como proteção, porque a mãe pode cobrir ou descobrir seus ovos à vontade, segundo a variação do tempo, e assim assegurar uma temperatura mais uniforme, e provavelmente mais alta; ao mesmo tempo, o enroscamento reduz as superfícies expostas."

Samuel Bochart (1599-1667), na sua obra Hierozoicon (Leipzig, 1796, Vol. 3, Parte II, Livro III, cap. XI, pp. 194-204), fez um estudo detalhado da palavra hebraica qip·póhz, e chegou à conclusão de que se refere à cobra chamada em grego de a·kon·ti·as e em latim de jaculus — a cobra-cuspideira, ou cobra-flecha. Todavia, modernos lexicógrafos não estão de acordo sobre o significado desta palavra hebraica.

COBRADOR DE IMPOSTOS. No Império Romano, oficiais imperiais coletavam impostos por cabeça e impostos territoriais como parte das suas funções oficiais. Mas a autorização para coletar impostos sobre exportações, importações e bens transportados por mercadores através do respectivo país era adquirido em hasta pública. Assim, o direito de coletar tais impostos ficava com os que davam o maior lance. Quando coletavam impostos, lucravam com a receita que ultrapassasse o total do seu lance. Esses homens, conhecidos como publicanos, subcontratavam o direito de coletar impostos em certas partes do seu território. Os subcontratantes, por sua vez, tinham ao seu cargo outros homens que faziam a coleta dos impostos propriamente dita. Zaqueu, por exemplo, parece ter sido o chefe dos cobradores de impostos em Jericó e arredores. (Lu 19:1, 2) E Mateus, a quem Jesus chamou para ser apóstolo, era um daqueles que faziam a coleta propriamente dita dos impostos, encontrando-se sua coletoria evidentemente em Cafarnaum ou perto dali. — Mt 10:3; Mr 2:1, 14.

De modo que na Palestina atuavam muitos cobradores judeus de impostos. Eram tidos em pouca estima pelos seus patrícios, visto que frequentemente exigiam mais do que a taxa do imposto. (Mt 5:46; Lu 3:12, 13; 19:7, 8) Os demais judeus geralmente evitavam a associação voluntária com cobradores de impostos e os classificavam com aqueles conhecidos como pecadores, inclusive as meretrizes. (Mt 9:11; 11:19; 21:32; Mr 2:15; Lu 5:30; 7:34) Tinham também ressentimento dos cobradores de impostos por estes estarem a serviço duma potência estrangeira, Roma, e em contato íntimo com gentios "impuros". Por isso, tratar um "irmão" que se mostrou transgressor impenitente como "cobrador de impostos" significava não ter nenhuma associação voluntária com ele. — Mt 18:15-17.

Cristo Jesus não compactuava com a corrupção prevalecente entre os cobradores de impostos. Estava disposto a ajudar espiritualmente aqueles que mostrassem o desejo de ouvi-lo, embora fosse criticado por isso. (Mt 9:9-13; Lu 15:1-7) Numa das suas ilustrações, Jesus mostrou que o cobrador de impostos que humildemente reconhecia que era pecador e se arrependia era mais justo do que o fariseu que orgulhosamente se considerava justo. (Lu 18:9-14) E cobradores de impostos humildes, arrependidos (tais como Mateus e Zaqueu), tornaram-se prospectivos membros do Reino dos céus. — Mt 21:31, 32.

COBRA-FLECHA. Veja COBRA-CUSPIDEIRA.

COBRE, LATÃO, BRONZE. O cobre (hebr.: nehhó·sheth; gr.: khal·kós), um metal mole, era facilmente batido e moldado em muitas formas. Não há nenhuma evidência de que os antigos tivessem um método secreto para endurecer o cobre puro pela têmpera, mas sabiam endurecer o fio de corte de implementos pela simples malhada a frio. Em liga com outros metais, sua dureza aumenta em muito. Uma dessas ligas é o bronze, cobre que contém estanho (alguns achados antigos contêm de 2 a 18 por cento de estanho). O latão, uma liga de cobre e zinco, era usado pelos povos antigos, embora o método que usavam para produzi-lo seja diferente do usado hoje. Todavia, conforme usado na versão Brasileira, e em outras, o "latão", na sua definição mais antiga, pode incluir qualquer liga de cobre.

A palavra hebraica hhash·man·ním, traduzida por "objetos de bronze" (NM, BLH n.) e "bronze" (RS), é encontrada apenas uma vez na Bíblia. (Sal 68:31) Esta palavra hebraica é de sentido incerto e tem sido traduzida, de forma variada, por "embaixadores" (Al, BLH, IBB), "enviados" (NIV), "grandes" (v. 32, BJ, MC), "príncipes" (ALA) e "tributo" (NE).

O cobre, no estado nativo, não era abundante; minérios consistindo em óxidos, carbonatos ou sulfetos tinham de ser fundidos para liberarem o cobre metálico. Encontraram-se minas de cobre no uádi Arabá, aquela parte árida do vale de abatimento tectônico que se estende do Mar Morto para o S, até o golfo de ʽAqaba, na ponta L do Mar Vermelho. (Jó 28:2-4) Os montes da Terra da Promessa continham cobre. (De 8:9) Salomão fez fundições de objetos de cobre perto de Sucote. (1Rs 7:14-46; 2Cr 4:1-18) O cobre era encontrado em abundância em Chipre. A Bíblia fala também de Javã, Tubal e Meseque como fontes de cobre. — Ez 27:13.

O cobre e suas ligas tinham muitas utilidades práticas e variadas. Sendo um dos mais antigos metais conhecidos, Tubalcaim, antes do Dilúvio dos dias de Noé, forjava ferramentas de cobre. (Gên 4:22) Utensílios domésticos e do santuário incluíam potes, bacias, panelas, pás e garfos. (Êx 38:3; Le 6:28; Je 52:18) Usava-se o cobre para portas, portões, colunas e instrumentos musicais (2Rs 25:13; 1Cr 15:19; Sal 107:16; Is 45:2); armaduras, escudos, armas e grilhões (1Sa 17:5, 6, 38; 2Sa 22:35; 2Rs 25:7; 2Cr 12:10). Esse metal era usado na fabricação de ídolos. (Re 9:20) Moedas de cobre circulavam durante o ministério terrestre de Jesus. (Mt 10:9) As Escrituras falam também do cobre em sentido figurado ou simbólico. — Le 26:19; Jó 6:12; Is 48:4; 60:17; Je 1:18; Ez 1:7; Da 2:32; Re 1:15; 2:18.

Em 1 Coríntios 13:1, a palavra grega khal·kós é traduzida por "[pedaço de] latão", e pode ser entendida como referindo-se a um gongo.

Veja também MAR DE FUNDIÇÃO; MINAS, MINERAÇÃO; REFINAÇÃO, REFINADOR; TRABALHADOR EM METAL.

COBRIR A CABEÇA. Além de a cobertura para a cabeça ser uma peça do vestuário, ela tem também significância espiritual entre os servos de Deus, relacionada com a chefia (ou a posição como cabeça) e a sujeição. O apóstolo Paulo apresenta o princípio da chefia ordenado por Deus, vigente na congregação cristã, dizendo: "A cabeça de todo homem é o Cristo; por sua vez, a cabeça da mulher é o homem; por sua vez, a cabeça do Cristo é Deus." (1 Co 11:3) Paulo salienta que a cobertura na cabeça é "um sinal de autoridade", que a mulher deve usar em reconhecimento de o homem ser cabeça, sujeitando-se ela à devida autoridade teocrática quando ora ou profetiza na congregação. — 1Co 11:4-6, 10.

Inversamente, o apóstolo mostra que o homem não deve usar uma cobertura na cabeça quando toma a dianteira na congregação, como quando ora ou profetiza. Esta é a sua posição normal no arranjo de Deus. Se o homem, nestes casos, usasse uma cobertura na cabeça, ele envergonharia a sua própria cabeça. Indicaria também desrespeito para com Jesus Cristo, como cabeça, bem como para com a Cabeça Suprema, Jeová Deus, porque o homem é "imagem e glória de Deus", tendo sido originalmente constituído representante de Deus na Terra. Ele não deveria obscurecer este fato por usar uma cobertura na cabeça. O homem foi criado primeiro, antes da mulher; a mulher procede "do homem" e foi criada "por causa do homem". As qualidades dela são expressão da honra e dignidade do homem, assim como as qualidades do homem refletem a honra e dignidade de Deus. Portanto, a mulher cristã deve sentir-se feliz de reconhecer sua posição subordinada pela modéstia e sujeição que demonstra, e deve estar disposta a demonstrar isso visivelmente por usar um véu ou outro tipo de cobertura na cabeça. Não deve tentar usurpar o lugar do homem, mas, antes, deve defender a posição dele como cabeça. — 1Co 11:4, 7-10.

Paulo traz à atenção o cabelo, por natureza longo, das mulheres na congregação à qual escreveu, como contínuo lembrete dado por Deus de que a mulher, por natureza, está sujeita ao homem. Portanto, ela deve reconhecer isso ao realizar na congregação cristã tarefas que costumeiramente cabem ao homem, e ela deve usar algum tipo de cobertura na cabeça, além do cabelo que sempre possui normalmente. Mostra assim que reconhece o princípio da chefia, ordenado por Deus, e que ela diferencia suas atividades diárias normais das tarefas especiais realizadas na congregação, quando, por exemplo, não há varão qualificado presente, ou quando ela individualmente ensina outros, numa sessão formal de estudo bíblico, na presença de seu marido ou dum varão da congregação. — 1Co 11:11-15.

Como forte motivo para a congregação de Deus seguir este proceder, o apóstolo indica os anjos de Deus, que são "enviados para ministrar aos que hão de herdar a salvação". (He 1:13, 14) Essas poderosas pessoas espirituais interessam-se e preocupam-se em que os cristãos mantenham seu lugar dentro do arranjo de Deus, para que se preserve a ordem teocrática e a adoração pura perante Deus. — 1Co 11:10.

Entendemos melhor a necessidade deste conselho dado à congregação na antiga Corinto quando nos damos conta de que era costume geral, naquele tempo, que as mulheres sempre andassem veladas em público. Apenas as de moral baixa andavam sem véu. E as sacerdotisas pagãs, nos templos, evidentemente seguiam a prática de tirar o véu e deixar seu cabelo cair desgrenhado, quando afirmavam estar sob inspiração divina. Uma prática assim, na congregação cristã, seria vergonhosa e escarneceria do arranjo de chefia e de sujeição, provido por Jeová Deus. Paulo concluiu seu argumento por dizer que, se alguém estivesse disputando a favor de outro costume, diferente do apresentado por Paulo, a congregação, todavia, devia seguir o conselho do apóstolo a respeito do uso duma cobertura para a cabeça. Isto torna essa instrução aplicável na congregação cristã em todas as épocas e em todos os lugares. — 1Co 11:16.

Os hebreus, na antiguidade, além de usarem uma cobertura para a cabeça como peça da vestimenta, cobriam a cabeça para indicar uma condição de pesar. (2Sa 15:30; Je 14:3) Também as mulheres mostravam assim modéstia. Quando Rebeca estava para se encontrar com Isaque, "ela passou a tomar um lenço para a cabeça e a cobrir-se", evidentemente em símbolo da sua sujeição a ele, como aquele que havia de tornar-se seu esposo. — Gên 24:65; veja CABEÇA, SER; COBERTURA PARA A CABEÇA.

CÓDICE. Veja LIVRO.

CODORNIZ [hebr.: seláw]. Ave pequena, de corpo rechonchudo, de uns 18 cm de comprimento, a qual passa a maior parte do seu tempo no solo. Sua carne é bem comestível, e relata-se que, por volta de 1920, o Egito exportava anualmente uns três milhões de codornizes para mercados estrangeiros, embora esta exportação tenha diminuído desde então.

As aves descritas na Bíblia evidentemente são as codornizes migratórias comuns (Coturnix coturnix), que na primavera partem do interior da África para o norte, chegando ao Egito por volta de março, passando então pela Arábia e pela Palestina, e retornam com a aproximação do inverno. Migram em grandes bandos, fazendo a migração em estágios, e frequentemente voam de noite. Suas asas lhes possibilitam um voo veloz, mas não a distâncias muito grandes. Devido ao peso do seu corpo em relação à força das suas asas, às vezes chegam ao seu destino num estado de esgotamento. As codornizes, portanto, voam com o vento e costumam voar em altitudes relativamente baixas. O Coronel Richard Meinertzhagen relata que em Port Said, Egito, os homens às vezes usam redes de caçar borboletas para apanhar codornizes quando as aves voam pelas ruas ao amanhecer. — Birds of Arabia (Aves da Arábia), Edimburgo, 1954, p. 569.

A primeira referência a codornizes no relato bíblico (Êx 16:13) relaciona-se com os eventos na primavera setentrional (Êx 16:1), de modo que as aves devem ter estado voando para o norte. Os israelitas estavam no ermo de Sim, na península de Sinai, queixando-se dos seus suprimentos de alimentos. Em resposta, Jeová assegurou a Moisés que "entre as duas noitinhas" eles comeriam carne, e de manhã se saciariam de pão. (Êx 16:12) Naquela noitinha, "começaram a vir codornizes e passaram a cobrir o acampamento", ao passo que de manhã apareceu o maná sobre a terra. (Êx 16:13-15; Sal 105:40) De novo, evidentemente na primavera (Núm 10:11, 33), cerca de um ano mais tarde, os resmungos dos israelitas, por causa da sua alimentação limitada ao maná, induziram Jeová a predizer que comeriam carne "até um mês de dias", até ficarem com aversão dela. (Núm 11:4, 18-23) Deus então fez que um vento, provavelmente do L ou SE, impelisse codornizes desde o mar e as fizesse "cair sobre o acampamento", abundantes "quais os grãos de areia", sobre uma ampla área de vários quilômetros em torno do perímetro do acampamento. — Núm 11:31; Sal 78:25-28.

A expressão "por cerca de dois côvados [c. 1 m] acima da superfície da terra" tem sido explicada de diversas maneiras. (Núm 11:31) Alguns acham que as codornizes realmente caíram ao solo e que, em alguns lugares, ficaram empilhadas até esta altura. Outros, objetando que tal ação, sem dúvida, resultaria em grande parte delas morrerem e assim se tornarem impróprias para o consumo pelos israelitas, entendem que o texto significa que as codornizes voavam nesta baixa altitude acima do solo, tornando assim bastante fácil para os israelitas as abaterem e capturarem. Expressando uma ideia similar, a Septuaginta grega reza: "todo em volta do acampamento, a cerca de dois côvados da terra"; e a Vulgata latina diz: "todo em volta do acampamento, e voavam no ar numa altitude de dois côvados acima da terra".

Os israelitas passaram um dia e meio recolhendo as codornizes; "quem recolhia menos ajuntou dez ômeres [2.200 l]". (Núm 11:32) Em vista dos "seiscentos mil homens a pé", mencionados por Moisés (Núm 11:21), a quantidade de codornizes recolhidas deve ter sido de muitos milhões; de modo que não era uma simples caça resultante duma migração comum, mas, antes, era uma forte demonstração de poder divino. A quantidade recolhida era grande demais para eles comerem então; por isso, os cobiçosos israelitas "estendiam-nas para si por toda a parte, em volta do acampamento". (Núm 11:32) O objetivo disso talvez fosse secar a carne das codornizes abatidas, a fim de preservar o máximo número delas para consumo futuro. Tal medida seria similar ao antigo costume egípcio, descrito por Heródoto (II, 77), de pôr peixes ao sol para secar.

COENTRO, SEMENTE DE [hebr.: gadh]. O maná que os israelitas comeram no ermo, segundo se disse, era "branco como a semente de coentro" (Êx 16:31), evidentemente assemelhando-se a ela não só na cor, mas também na aparência geral. — Núm 11:7.

O coentro (Coriandrum sativum) é uma planta anual da família da cenoura ou salsa, atingindo cerca de 40 a 50 cm de altura, com folhas semelhantes às da salsa, e umbelas de flores róseas ou brancas. O fruto consiste em sementes globulosas de cor branco-acinzentada, e de 1 a 3 mm de diâmetro. As sementes contêm um óleo aromático de sabor agradável e são usadas como condimento, bem como medicinalmente, para leves distúrbios estomacais.

As sementes de coentro eram usadas no Egito desde tempos antigos, e assim, sem dúvida, eram bem conhecidas pelos israelitas desde antes do Êxodo. Ele cresce de forma silvestre naquele país, bem como na região palestina.

COFE [ק]. A 19.ª letra do alfabeto hebraico. Quando ocorre na tradução de nomes hebraicos, a letra cofe (qohf) usualmente é representada em português por "c" ou "qu", como em "Cainã" e "Quis". O som é mais forte do que o da letra cafe (kaf כ) e é pronunciada mais no fundo da garganta. No hebraico, é a letra inicial de cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:145-152.

COISA ABOMINÁVEL. Veja ABOMINÁVEL, COISA.

COISA DEVOTADA. Veja DEVOTADA, COISA.

COISA RASTEJANTE. Veja RASTEJANTE, COISA.

COISA REPUGNANTE. Veja REPUGNANTE, COISA.

COLAÍAS.

1. Pai do falso profeta Acabe, que estava entre os judeus no exílio babilônico antes da destruição de Jerusalém em 607 AEC. — Je 29:21; veja ACABE N.º 2.

2. Benjamita, e evidentemente antepassado de um certo Salu, que morava em Jerusalém nos dias de Neemias, após o exílio babilônico. — Ne 11:4, 7.

COLAR. Corrente ou cordão ornamental de contas, de ouro, de prata, de corais, de pedras preciosas e de coisas semelhantes, usado em torno do pescoço. Antigamente, os colares eram usados por mulheres (Cân 1:10; 4:9; compare isso com Ez 16:11) e até por homens, especialmente os em alta posição. (Gên 41:41, 42; Da 5:7, 16, 17, 29) Os midianitas, nos dias de Gideão, colocavam colares no pescoço dos seus camelos, e nestes colares, pelo que parece, havia pendentes em forma de lua. (Jz 8:21, 26) Às vezes usavam-se correntes em estilo de colares quais ornamentos, como no caso das colunas do templo, Jaquim e Boaz. — 2Cr 3:15-17.

A respeito dos jactanciosos e iníquos, diz-se que "a altivez serviu-lhes de colar". (Sal 73:3, 6) Por outro lado, a disciplina do pai e a lei da mãe são como um fino colar para a garganta do filho. — Pr 1:8, 9.

COLETA. Enquanto Paulo estava em Éfeso, por volta de 55 EC, ele escreveu aos coríntios: "Agora, quanto à coleta que é para os santos, assim como dei ordens às congregações da Galácia, fazei do mesmo modo também vós." (1Co 16:1, 2) A palavra grega lo·gí·a ("coleta") estava em uso pelo menos a partir do terceiro século AEC. Ocorre apenas nestes dois versículos da Bíblia.

Mateus 17:24 descreve "homens que cobravam as duas dracmas de imposto", mas aqui se usa uma palavra diferente (lam·bá·no), que transmite a ideia de "receber". (Veja Int, So.) Igualmente, a expressão "cobrar dízimos", em Hebreus 7:5, deriva de outra palavra (a·po·de·ka·tó·o), bem diferente de lo·gí·a.

Todavia, a escolha de palavras por Paulo indica mesmo que a coleta provavelmente era de dinheiro, e não de alimentos ou vestuário, e quando ele diz "à coleta", isso indica uma coleta especial e já conhecida dos coríntios. As instruções de Paulo referiam-se apenas à maneira em que se devia fazer a coleta. Devia ser de modo particular, "na sua própria casa" de cada um deles, em base voluntária, conforme cada um 'tivesse prosperado', assim como se fazia nas "congregações da Galácia". — 1Co 16:1, 2.

Paulo estava dando "ordens", não no sentido de ordens arbitrárias, compulsórias, mas como alguém que tomava a dianteira e supervisionava o assunto inteiro, que envolvia diversas congregações. (1Co 16:1) Ele e outros haviam cuidadosamente planejado este projeto. Além de se preocupar com as necessidades espirituais das congregações, Paulo sempre tomava em conta as necessidades físicas de cristãos pobres, e parece que esta coleta se fazia em especial a favor de cristãos da Judeia que estavam em apuros naquela época. (Gál 2:10) Em outras partes, Paulo referiu-se a esta coleta com expressões tais como "contribuição para os pobres que são dos santos em Jerusalém" (Ro 15:26), o "ministério que é para os santos" (2Co 9:1), "a vossa abundante dádiva, anteriormente prometida", este "serviço público" (2Co 9:5, 12), "dádivas de misericórdia" (At 24:17). Essa preocupação amorosa com as necessidades de concristãos era um dos sinais identificadores do cristianismo do primeiro século. — Jo 13:35; veja CONTRIBUIÇÃO.

COLHEITA. O recolhimento das safras; uma das coisas que nunca cessarão "por todos os dias que a terra continuar". (Gên 8:22) A época da colheita vem acompanhada de grande alegria, embora, naturalmente, requeira muito trabalho árduo recolher as safras. (Sal 126:5, 6; Is 9:3; 16:9, 10) Certos acontecimentos bíblicos foram mencionados como ocorrendo com relação à época da colheita. — Gên 30:14; Jos 3:15; Jz 15:1; Ru 1:22; 2:23; 1Sa 6:13; 2Sa 21:9; 23:13.

Sábados e o Jubileu. A lei de Deus dada a Israel especificava certos requisitos e provisões relacionados com a colheita. Embora ela fosse importante, os israelitas não ficavam desobrigados de observar o sábado, não se fazendo na Lei nenhuma provisão para se fazer colheita nesse dia, em caso de emergência. (Êx 34:21; compare isso com Ne 13:15.) Visto que não devia haver semeadura durante o ano sabático, nem no ano do jubileu, naturalmente, não haveria safras para recolher, com exceção do que crescera de grãos caídos na colheita anterior. No entanto, nem mesmo isso devia ser colhido pelo dono, embora ele, seus escravos e seus trabalhadores contratados, os colonos e os residentes forasteiros, bem como os animais domésticos e os animais selváticos pudessem comer os produtos da terra. — Êx 23:10, 11; Le 25:3-7, 11, 12, 20-22.

Primícias, e o Cuidado com os Pobres. As primícias de cada colheita deviam ser apresentadas a Jeová. (Le 23:10, 11; De 26:1-4) Os frutos duma árvore só deviam ser colhidos para uso pessoal a partir do quinto ano. — Le 19:23-25.

O israelita, quando faminto, podia entrar no campo ou no vinhedo de outro e comer do seu produto até se saciar, mas não podia levar nada consigo num recipiente, nem usar foice para cortar os cereais de seu próximo. — De 23:24, 25; compare isso com Mt 12:1; Lu 6:1; veja RESPIGA, REBUSCA.

Na época da colheita, os israelitas não deviam ceifar completamente os cantos dos seus campos, nem apanhar a respiga, visto que tais sobras de seus campos de cereais e de seus vinhedos eram para os aflitos e os residentes forasteiros. — Le 19:9, 10; 23:22; De 24:19.

Clima. Na Terra da Promessa, na antiguidade, bem como hoje, raras vezes chovia na época da colheita; de fato, quando Jeová fez com que chovesse e trovejasse em resposta à oração de Samuel, isto provou aos israelitas que eles tinham cometido um grande mal por pedirem um rei humano. (1Sa 12:17-19; veja também Pr 26:1.) Mas o rio Jordão transbordava suas margens por causa das chuvas tardias no começo da primavera e das neves derretidas dos montes do Líbano. — Jos 3:15; 5:10, 11.

O clima é quente na época da colheita, tornando uma nuvem de orvalho bem refrescante. (Is 18:4) Uma bebida refrigerada com neve procedente dos montes é bem-vinda, e é antes a isto, em vez de à nevada, que evidentemente se refere o paralelismo em Provérbios 25:13, visto que a neve durante a colheita seria uma calamidade.

Linho, Cevada, Trigo. Nas vizinhanças de Jericó, começava-se a colher o linho no 12.º mês, adar (fevereiro-março), ou em princípios de nisã (março-abril), o primeiro mês do ano sagrado dos hebreus. As hastes de linho eram arrancadas, ou retiradas com enxada, e depois estendidas para secar. Havia hastes de linho no terraço de Raabe, quando ela escondeu os espiões (Jos 2:6) nos primeiros dias de nisã. — Jos 2:16, 22, 23; 3:1, 2; 4:19.

A seguir vinha a colheita da cevada, no mês de nisã (março-abril). Os israelitas entraram na Terra da Promessa na época da colheita da cevada e começaram a comer dos produtos da terra em 15 de nisã. (Jos 3:15; 5:10, 11) Ao passo que a colheita da cevada continuava nas colinas da Palestina, nas planícies seguia-se a colheita do trigo (Ru 1:22; 2:23; 2Sa 21:9), começando durante o mês de zive, ou íiar (abril-maio).

Daí, no mês de sivã (maio-junho), realizava-se a colheita do trigo nas terras altas. O ceifeiro, segurando as hastes do cereal com uma mão, cortava-as com uma foice. — Veja De 23:25; Is 17:5.

Uvas, Tâmaras, Figos, Olivas. O mês de tamuz (junho-julho) trazia as primeiras uvas maduras, começando a vindima no mês de ab (julho-agosto), época em que as olivas (ou azeitonas) também estavam maduras nas baixadas. Durante o mês de elul (agosto-setembro), fazia-se a vindima geral, as tâmaras estavam maduras, as romãs estavam amadurecendo e os figos de verão eram colhi-

dos. (Núm 13:23) A colheita geralmente terminava por volta do mês de etanim, ou tisri (setembro-outubro), embora talvez ainda se recolhessem olivas na Galileia setentrional no mês de bul, ou chesvã (marchesvã, ou marquesvã) (outubro-novembro). Colhiam-se as olivas por bater os galhos da árvore com um pau. — De 24:20; veja CALENDÁRIO.

Festividades. As três principais festividades de Israel estavam diretamente associadas com a colheita. (Êx 23:14-17) A Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados, começando em 15 de nisã, coincidia com a colheita da cevada. Em 16 de nisã, "no dia depois do sábado" (não necessariamente um sábado semanal, visto que o dia inicial da festividade era designado como sábado, sem tomar em conta em que dia caísse), o sumo sacerdote devia mover para lá e para cá um molho das primícias da colheita da cevada perante Jeová. — Le 23:6-11.

A Festividade das Semanas, ou Pentecostes, caía no 50.º dia a partir de 16 de nisã. Era a época da colheita do trigo. Dois pães fermentados das primícias do novo cereal deviam ser apresentados a Jeová como oferta movida. (Le 23:15-17) Evidentemente, com referência às sete semanas de colheita, entre a Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados e a Festividade de Pentecostes, Jeremias descreve a Jeová como "Aquele que guarda até mesmo as semanas prescritas da colheita para nós", preservando este período como estação seca, visto que a chuva prejudicaria a colheita. — Je 5:24; compare isso com Am 4:7.

A Festividade das Barracas, ou do Recolhimento, que começava no 15.º dia do sétimo mês, etanim, ou tisri, encerrava a parte principal do ano agrícola de forma alegre, visto que a colheita, em geral, já havia sido então completada. — Le 23:33-36, 39-43; veja FESTIVIDADE, e as respectivas festividades sob o seu próprio tópico.

Uso Figurado. A volta do povo do exílio e o ajuntamento de pessoas para a vida são comparados à colheita (Os 6:11; Mt 9:37, 38; Lu 10:2; Jo 4:35-38), assim como também o ajuntamento e a destruição dos iníquos. (Je 51:33; Re 14:17-20) Cristo Jesus referiu-se à "terminação do sistema de coisas" como a uma colheita, ocasião em que os anjos, atuando na qualidade de ceifeiros, ajuntariam todos os semelhantes ao joio e os lançariam na "fornalha ardente", ao passo que os semelhantes ao trigo 'brilhariam tão claramente como o sol, no reino de seu Pai'. (Mt 13:24-30, 36-43) Esta obra de colheita é feita sob a direção de Jesus Cristo, porque no livro de Revelação (Apocalipse), ele, como "alguém semelhante a um filho de homem", é retratado com uma foice afiada na mão. — Re 14:14-16; veja AGRICULTURA.

COL-HOZÉ. Veja COLOZÉ.

COLINA. Veja MORRO.

COLINA DE MARTE. Veja AREÓPAGO.

COLONO. Veja RESIDENTE FORASTEIRO.

COLOSSENSES, CARTA AOS. A inspirada carta do apóstolo Paulo aos cristãos em Colossos. Da forma como usualmente é colocada nas atuais versões da Bíblia em português, é o 12.º livro das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Paulo identifica-se com o escritor desta carta inspirada por iniciá-la com as palavras: "Paulo, apóstolo de Cristo Jesus, pela vontade de Deus, e Timóteo, nosso irmão, aos santos e irmãos fiéis em união com Cristo, em Colossos." (Col 1:1, 2) Que o apóstolo foi o escritor é também confirmado pelo cumprimento final, escrito pelo próprio punho dele. — Col 4:18.

Existe uma similaridade bastante grande entre Colossenses e Efésios, outra das cartas de Paulo. Embora isso talvez se deva à proximidade na questão do tempo da escrita e à possibilidade de que prevaleciam situações similares em cada uma destas cidades, esta correspondência também significa que, se Paulo for aceito como escritor de Efésios, ele terá de ser aceito também como escritor de Colossenses. (Para ver exemplos, compare Col 1:24-29 com Ef 3:1-7; Col 2:13, 14, com Ef 2:1-5, 13-16; Col 2:19 com Ef 4:16; Col 3:8-10, 12, 13, com Ef 4:20-25, 31, 32; Col 3:18-25; 4:1 com Ef 5:21-23; 6:1-9.) Além disso, a inclusão da carta aos colossenses junto com as outras cartas de Paulo no Papiro Chester Beatty N.º 2 (P^{46}, de cerca de 200 EC) mostra claramente que os primitivos cristãos encaravam Colossenses como um dos escritos inspirados de Paulo.

Dois fatores evidentemente motivaram Paulo a escrever sua carta aos colossenses. Em primeiro lugar, Epafras trouxera ao apóstolo um relato sobre a condição espiritual da congregação. Parte da informação causava preocupação; mas havia também boas notícias, porque Paulo disse que Epafras "nos expôs também o vosso amor em sentido espiritual". (Col 1:7, 8) Embora houvesse problemas na congregação, a situação não era crítica, e havia também muita coisa a elogiar. Outrossim, também, Onésimo, escravo de Filêmon, estava retornando ao seu amo em Colossos. De modo que Paulo aproveitou esta situação para enviar sua carta à congregação ali por meio de Onésimo, e seu companheiro Tíquico. — Col 4:7-9.

Data e Lugar da Escrita. Não se declara diretamente onde Paulo se encontrava ao escrever aos colossenses. Alguns têm sugerido Éfeso. Todavia, a carta indica que o apóstolo estava na prisão (Col 1:24; 4:10, 18), e não há nenhum relato bíblico sobre ele estar preso em Éfeso. Os comentários que

Paulo faz em Colossenses 4:2-4, 11, parecem ser mais compatíveis com a situação do apóstolo durante o seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma (c. 59-61 EC). É verdade que Paulo esteve preso em Cesareia (At 23:33-35), e que Félix ordenou que houvesse algum abrandamento da detenção do apóstolo. (At 24:23) Mas, evidentemente, não era uma liberdade tão grande como a que Paulo teve durante o seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma, quando permaneceu por dois anos na sua própria casa alugada e pôde pregar o Reino de Deus aos que o visitavam ali. — At 28:16, 23, 30, 31.

Outro fator que parece indicar que a carta foi escrita em Roma é que Onésimo estava no lugar onde Paulo a escreveu, e ia acompanhar Tíquico na entrega dela em Colossos. Certamente, Roma, com sua numerosa população, proveria mui provavelmente refúgio a um escravo fugitivo. A carta aos colossenses foi evidentemente escrita perto do fim do primeiro encarceramento de Paulo em Roma, ou por volta de 60-61 EC, quando também escreveu a carta a Filêmon. Tíquico e Onésimo não só entregaram a carta aos colossenses, mas também a carta do apóstolo a Filêmon. (Flm 10-12) Visto que Paulo, na sua carta a Filêmon, expressa a esperança (v. 22) de ser liberto, pode-se concluir que, igual à dirigida a Filêmon, a carta aos colossenses foi escrita perto do fim do primeiro encarceramento de Paulo em Roma.

Rebatidos Falsos Conceitos. Uma filosofia enganosa estava sendo fomentada por falsos instrutores em Colossos. Dava-se ênfase à observância da Lei mosaica. Promovia-se também a prática do ascetismo. O apóstolo avisou os cristãos colossenses a cuidarem de que ninguém os levasse "como presa sua, por intermédio de filosofia e de vão engano, segundo a tradição de homens, segundo as coisas elementares do mundo e não segundo Cristo". (Col 2:8) Paulo exortou também seus concrentes a não permitir que alguém os julgasse pelo comer e pelo beber, "ou com respeito a uma festividade ou à observância da lua nova ou dum sábado; pois estas coisas são sombra das coisas vindouras, mas a realidade pertence ao Cristo". (Col 2:16, 17) O apóstolo reconheceu a humildade fingida pelo que realmente é, e expôs o ascetismo, dizendo: "Estas mesmas coisas, deveras, têm aparência de sabedoria numa forma de adoração imposta a si próprio e em humildade fingida, no tratamento severo do corpo; mas, não são de valor algum em combater a satisfação da carne." — Col 2:20-23.

Paulo deu ênfase à posição de superioridade, dada por Deus, que Cristo usufrui. (Col 1:13-20) Esta verdade neutralizaria a filosofia pagã, a tradição judaica e outra prática, uma "forma de adoração dos anjos". (Col 2:18) As Escrituras não esclarecem se os envolvidos nela pretendiam realizar a forma de adoração que os anjos supostamente rea-

DESTAQUES DE COLOSSENSES

A carta destaca o apreço pela posição de Cristo, dada por Deus, como o meio para neutralizar conceitos e práticas erradas.

Escrita por Paulo perto do fim do seu primeiro encarceramento em Roma.

Apreço pela posição de Cristo. (1:1–2:12)

Elogiada a fé em conexão com Cristo e o amor a todos os santos, com quem compartilhavam a esperança celestial.

Posição de destaque dada a Cristo: Ele é a imagem de Deus, o primogênito de toda a criação, aquele por intermédio de quem foram criadas todas as outras coisas, cabeça da congregação, primogênito dentre os mortos.

A reconciliação com Deus é realizada por meio de Cristo.

Ocultos em Cristo se acham todos os tesouros de verdadeira sabedoria e conhecimento.

Prossigam andando em união com ele; não se deixem levar por alguém como presa, por meio de filosofias humanas.

A Lei mosaica foi tirada do caminho por Deus mediante Cristo. (2:13-23)

Deus, figurativamente, pregou o pacto da Lei na estaca de tortura na qual Cristo morreu.

Os requisitos da Lei eram sombra; a realidade pertence ao Cristo.

Que nenhum homem o prive do prêmio por induzi-lo a seguir mandamentos e ensinos de homens, em vez de se apegar a Cristo como cabeça.

Revista-se da nova personalidade, sujeitando-se à autoridade de Cristo. (3:1-17)

Mantenha a mente fixa nas coisas de cima, não nas coisas na terra.

Amorteça os desejos impuros da carne; afaste de si atitudes e conversa erradas.

Revista-se de compaixão, benignidade, humildade mental, brandura, longanimidade, amor.

Deixe a paz de Cristo dominar no coração.

Faça tudo no nome do Senhor Jesus, agradecendo a Deus por meio dele.

As relações com outros devem ser influenciadas pelo apreço por Deus e Cristo. (3:18–4:18)

Esposas, maridos, filhos, escravos e amos devem cumprir com as responsabilidades, não como para agradar a homens, mas com temor de Jeová, reconhecendo que Cristo, no céu, é nosso Amo.

Persevere em oração; ande em sabedoria.

Cumprimentos pessoais a conservos do Senhor.

lizam, se pensavam estar imitando a atitude reverente dos anjos ou se realmente adoravam essas criaturas espirituais.

COLOSSOS [possivelmente: Colossal]. Uma cidade do SO da Ásia Menor. Nos dias do apóstolo Paulo, Colossos encontrava-se na província romana da Ásia, embora fosse parte da antiga região da Frígia. Atualmente, a localidade é desabitada. Ela se encontrava perto da extremidade superior do vale do rio Lico, a uns 18 km ao ESE de Laodiceia (perto da moderna Denizli). O vale do rio Lico é estreito na região de Colossos, ladeado por grandes penhascos, mas amplia-se à medida que segue para o NO e para a junção do Lico com o rio Meandro (Menderes). Por este vale passava a estrada principal que levava de Éfeso e a costa egeia para o L, até o Eufrates. Dali partia uma estrada para Sardes e Pérgamo, para o NO. Durante o período romano, porém, o sistema de estradas foi mudado, e Laodiceia e a vizinha Hierápolis (Col 4:13) ultrapassaram Colossos em importância. Não obstante, Colossos continuou a ser conhecida como centro têxtil, famosa pela sua excelente lã de tonalidade incomum, chamada colossinus. Encontrava-se à beira duma solitária região de estepe, onde pastavam rebanhos de ovelhas. A uns 5 km ao S, eleva-se Honaz Dagi (Mte. Cadmo) a 2.750 m, cujas neves alimentavam riachos que passavam por Colossos.

No dia de Pentecostes de 33 EC havia frígios presentes em Jerusalém, alguns deles talvez de Colossos. (At 2:10) Embora Colossos estivesse na principal rota E-O, a maioria dos peritos acredita que Paulo seguiu uma rota mais setentrional na sua terceira viagem missionária, levando-o por terra a Éfeso. (At 18:22, 23; 19:1) Sua carta aos colossenses indica que não havia visitado Colossos e que a congregação ali era fruto da obra de Epafras, a quem Paulo descreve como representante seu e dos seus colaboradores, por fielmente ministrar aos crentes em Colossos. (Col 1:7, 8; 2:1; 4:12) No entanto, Paulo conhecia diversos cristãos de Colossos. Ele menciona Onésimo, Arquipo, Filêmon e Áfia. — Col 4:9, 17; Flm 1, 2, 10-12.

Além da população frígia original de Colossos havia nela elementos gregos e judeus. (Veja Col 3:11.) Os antigos frígios demonstravam ter uma forte tendência para o fanatismo espírita, os gregos entregavam-se a muita especulação e a argumentos filosóficos, e os judeus advogavam a Lei mosaica e os requisitos alimentares e sabáticos desta. Paulo tratou de todas estas atitudes no conselho que deu à congregação colossense. — Col 2:4, 8, 16, 18, 20-23.

COLOZÉ [Todo (Cada) Visionário; ou: Ele Visiona Tudo].

1. Israelita, cujo filho Salune ajudou a consertar a muralha de Jerusalém nos dias de Neemias. — Ne 3:15.

2. Filho de Hazaías, da tribo de Judá. (Ne 11:4, 5) Talvez o mesmo que o N.º 1.

COLUNA. Estrutura ereta de sustentação, ou pilar, ou algo semelhante ou comparável a tal pilar de sustentação.

Alguns povos antigos do Oriente Médio erguiam colunas sagradas relacionadas com a sua religião falsa; é bem provável que elas envolvessem o simbolismo fálico. Os israelitas, ao entrarem na Terra da Promessa, deviam destruir essas colunas sagradas, e foram proibidos de erguer colunas deste tipo. (De 7:5; 16:22) Todavia, em certas épocas, adotaram a religião pagã e usaram colunas sagradas. — 1Rs 14:23; 2Rs 3:2; veja COLUNA SAGRADA.

Bem diferente da utilização imprópria de colunas odiadas por Deus, as Escrituras Hebraicas mencionam a ereção de colunas ou pedras de natureza comemorativa. Estas colunas não eram nem objetos de adoração idólatra, nem simbólicas de órgãos sexuais. Serviam para relembrar atos ou eventos históricos.

Jacó, em duas ocasiões, erigiu colunas de pedra em Betel. Ambos os casos envolviam aperceber-se de como Jeová lidou de modo especial com Jacó naquele lugar. (Gên 28:18, 19, 22; 31:13; 35:14, 15) A coluna que Jacó postou sobre a sepultura de Raquel, sem dúvida, era de pedra e ainda existia nos dias de Moisés. (Gên 35:19, 20) Quando os israelitas aceitaram as leis que Moisés recebera de Deus, Moisés construiu um altar e "doze colunas correspondentes às doze tribos de Israel". (Êx 24:4) Josué deu instruções similares, envolvendo pedras para representar as tribos, embora o relato não as chame de colunas. Essas deviam servir de marco comemorativo para Israel e ofereceriam a oportunidade para os pais explicarem aos filhos o significado das doze pedras. — Jos 4:1-9, 20-24.

Um pacto ou uma vitória podiam ser assinalados pela ereção duma pedra, frequentemente uma coluna. (Gên 31:44-53; Jos 24:26; 1Sa 7:10-12) O Rei Saul, depois da sua vitória sobre os amalequitas, 'erigiu para si um monumento em Carmelo'. (1Sa 15:12) A palavra hebraica aqui traduzida por "monumento" usualmente é vertida por "mão", mas ela também é usada em 2 Samuel 18:18, em conexão com a "coluna" que Absalão erigiu, chamada de "Monumento de Absalão" (NM, ALA, CBC), de modo que Saul, evidentemente, erigiu um monumento ou coluna de vitória. — Compare isso com Is 56:5; veja ABSALÃO.

A ideia de uma coluna como monumento comemorativo talvez esteja envolvida na profecia de Isaías 19:19. Escrita no oitavo século AEC, ela tratava das circunstâncias existentes após a destruição de Jerusalém, em 607 AEC. Alguns dos judeus deixados no país pelos babilônios fugiram para o Egito e moraram em cidades egípcias, conforme predito em Isaías 19:18. (Je 43:4-7; 44:1) De modo que a promessa, de que haveria "uma coluna a Jeová" ao lado do termo do Egito, tem sido entendida por muitos comentadores como significando que Jeová seria notado ou comemorado no Egito, quer houvesse uma coluna literal, quer não. — Veja Is 19:20-22.

Colunas Estruturais. As referências bíblicas e as descobertas arqueológicas mostram colunas de madeira, de pedra e de tijolo usadas no Oriente Médio como estruturas de sustentação. Frequentemente, as vigas do teto ou os andares superiores dum prédio eram sustentados por colunas verticais. (Pr 9:1; Jz 16:25, 29; 1Rs 7:2) As colunas de madeira ou de tijolo talvez descansassem em bases de pedra. A Casa da Floresta do Líbano, de Salomão, tinha fileiras de colunas de cedro que sustentavam as vigas e as câmaras superiores. Evidentemente, proceder o cedro do Líbano, ou a semelhança das colunas com uma floresta, resultou no nome dado ao edifício. O vizinho Pórtico das Colunas obviamente também era famoso pelas suas abundantes colunas, embora o registro não forneça nem o número delas nem o material de que eram feitas. (1Rs 7:1-6; compare isso com Ez 40:16, 48, 49.) Colunas de mármore foram usadas no pátio do palácio de Assuero. — Est 1:6.

As colunas mais dignas de nota no templo de Salomão eram duas enormes colunas de cobre, chamadas Jaquim e Boaz, na frente do pórtico. (1Rs 7:15; 2Rs 25:17; Je 52:21; veja CAPITEL.) O Novo Dicionário da Bíblia, editado por J. D. Douglas (1966, tradução de João Bentes, p. 304) sugere que o rei se punha de pé perto de uma dessas colunas durante ocasiões cerimoniais, mas isso não pode ser confirmado, porque a Bíblia só diz que o rei estava "de pé junto à sua coluna na entrada". (2Cr 23:13; 2Rs 11:14; 23:3) Pode ter estado de pé no portão do pátio interno ou em outro lugar elevado para falar ao povo.

Colunas menores foram usadas no tabernáculo, quatro de acácia, para sustentar a cortina entre o Santo e o Santíssimo, e cinco para sustentar o reposteiro da entrada. (Êx 26:32-37) Mais sessenta colunas sustentavam os cortinados de linho em torno do pátio e o reposteiro do portão do pátio. — Êx 27:9-16.

Pequenas colunas decorativas de prata evidentemente sustentavam o baldaquino da liteira de Salomão. — Cân 3:9, 10.

Uso Figurado. O material e a função de colunas estruturais tornavam-nas símbolos apropriados de firme apoio. Ilustravam aquilo que sustenta com segurança. A congregação cristã podia ser chamada de "coluna e amparo da verdade", porque sustenta a verdade em contraste com o erro religioso. (1Ti 3:15) Tiago, Cefas e João foram chamados de aqueles "que pareciam ser colunas" na primitiva congregação; estavam solidamente estabelecidos e eram fortes apoiadores dela. (Gál 2:9) Os cristãos vencedores serão constituídos em colunas no "templo" de Deus, obtendo uma posição permanente na estrutura espiritual. (Re 3:12) A ideia da firmeza duma coluna é encontrada nas alusões a colunas na descrição dos pés dum anjo forte. (Re 10:1) As pernas do pastor amado pela sulamita eram como "colunas de mármore", tanto belas como fortes. — Cân 5:15.

Quanto tempo permaneceram com o acampamento de Israel as colunas miraculosas de nuvem e de fogo?

Jeová guiou milagrosamente os israelitas para fora do Egito e através do ermo, indo "na frente deles, de dia numa coluna de nuvem, . . . e de noite numa coluna de fogo, para dar-lhes luz". (Êx 13:21) Não se tratava de duas colunas, mas de uma só "coluna de fogo e de nuvem", que de dia pareceria normalmente como nuvem, e de noite, como fogo. (Êx 14:24) Quando os egípcios perseguiram os israelitas, a coluna passou para a retaguarda, estendendo-se talvez como parede. (Sal 105:38, 39) Produzia escuridão do lado egípcio, mas lançava luz do lado israelita. (Êx 14:19, 20) Quando o tabernáculo foi erguido, a coluna acima dele servia de sinal de que Jeová estava no seu lugar santo. (Êx 40:35) A coluna representava a Jeová, e ele falava de dentro dela. (Núm 14:14; 12:5; Sal 99:7) A última observação histórica a respeito da coluna ocorreu pouco antes de Israel entrar na Terra da Promessa. (De 31:15) Quando se estabeleceram na sua terra, a coluna de guia não era mais necessária, assim como fora durante a sua peregrinação. — Veja Êx 40:38; Is 4:5.

COLUNA SAGRADA. O termo hebraico assim traduzido refere-se basicamente a algo erigido ou postado. Evidentemente, era um símbolo fálico de Baal, ou, às vezes, de outros deuses falsos. (Êx 23:24; 2Rs 3:2; 10:27) Encontraram-se em diversos lugares do Oriente Médio colunas de pedra, eretas, sem aparente função estrutural. Serem descobertas junto com artefatos de natureza religiosa sugere que eram colunas sagradas. Algumas delas são toscas e têm 1,8 m ou mais de altura.

Antes de os israelitas entrarem na Terra da Promessa, ordenou-se-lhes não erigir nenhuma coluna sagrada, e eles foram instruídos a derrubar ou destroçar as colunas sagradas existentes dos cananeus. (Êx 34:13; Le 26:1; De 12:3; 16:22) A maneira em que estas deviam ser destruídas indica que provavelmente eram de pedra. Em 2 Reis 10:26, porém, menciona-se a queima de colunas sagradas, sugerindo que algumas eram de madeira. Neste caso, porém, a referência talvez seja ao poste sagrado, ou Axerá. — Veja POSTE SAGRADO.

Israel desconsiderou os claros avisos de Deus, dados por meio de Moisés. O território do reino de Judá e o do reino das dez tribos ficaram cheios de colunas sagradas. (1Rs 14:22, 23; 2Rs 17:10) No entanto, reis fiéis de Judá, tais como Asa, Ezequias e Josias, destroçaram as colunas sagradas (2Rs 18:4; 23:14; 2Cr 14:3), e quando Jeú erradicou a adoração de Baal do reino das dez tribos, demoliu-se a coluna sagrada de Baal. — 2Rs 10:27, 28.

COLUNATA DE SALOMÃO. Segundo os escritos de Josefo, esta colunata foi originalmente construída por Salomão sobre um aterro do lado L do templo. A colunata existente no primeiro século EC, porém, é atribuída à obra de reconstrução de Herodes. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas] VIII, 95-98 [iii, 9]; XX, 219-221 [ix, 7]; The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], I, 401 [xxi, 1]; V, 184-189 [v, 1]) Na Festividade da Dedicação, no inverno setentrional de 32 EC, Jesus foi confrontado pelos judeus na colunata de Salomão com a demanda de que se identificasse como o Cristo. (Jo 10:22-24) Depois da ascensão de Jesus aos céus, seus discípulos continuaram a frequentar esta área, evidentemente para pregar aos judeus ali. — At 3:11; 5:12; FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 745.

COMANDANTE. Veja COMANDANTE MILITAR.

COMANDANTE, BASTÃO DE. Uma longa vara que servia de símbolo do direito do comandante de emitir ordens. A expressão "bastão de comandante" ocorre quatro vezes na Tradução do Novo Mundo, traduzindo o particípio mehho·qéq, que vem do radical hebraico hha·qáq, significando "inscrever" ou "gravar", e, portanto, "decretar" ou "legislar". (Is 30:8; Ez 4:1; Pr 8:27; Is 10:1) Na antiguidade, as leis sancionadas eram inscritas ou gravadas em tabuinhas de pedra ou de metal. A mesma palavra hebraica pode aplicar-se a um comandante que emite decretos, um "legislador". (De 33:21) Jeová não tem igual entre os legisladores, sendo o supremo "Legislador". — Is 33:22.

Quando um comandante estava sentado, seu longo bastão frequentemente pousava no chão e ficava encostado na dobra da sua veste comprida, entre os joelhos. Este fato dá significado à bênção que Jacó, no leito de morte, conferiu a Judá: "O cetro não se afastará de Judá, nem o bastão de comandante de entre os seus pés, até que venha Siló." (Gên 49:10) Aqui, a palavra hebraica mehho·qéq foi vertida por "legislador" em algumas traduções (Al; Tr), mas o seu outro significado, "bastão de comandante" (NM; Ro), é mais apropriado neste caso e tem o apoio de modernos lexicógrafos. (Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de Koehler e Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 328; A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, p. 349) Que em Gênesis 49:10 a referência evidentemente é a um objeto, e não a uma pessoa, é o entendimento transmitido por diversas traduções, com versões tais como "bastão de chefe" (BJ), "bastão de comando" (BMD; BV; CBC; PIB) e "bastão" (AT). Algum tipo de bastão, um "bastão de comandante", é também um bom paralelo para o "cetro" e se harmoniza com a frase "de entre os seus pés", que aparece no mesmo versículo. Um uso similar é encontrado em Números 21:17, 18, onde se fala de um poço escavado "com bastão de comandante, com seus próprios bastões", embora uma possível versão seja "com um comandante, com seus governantes". Em Gênesis 49:10, uma versão alternativa para "nem o bastão de comandante" é "nem um comandante".

Visto que um cetro é um bastão ou uma vara, alguns talvez concluam que não há diferença entre "o cetro" e "o bastão de comandante", de Gênesis 49:10. Todavia, parece que Jacó pretendeu fazer uma distinção entre eles. Termos paralelos são muitas vezes usados em expressões poéticas. Embora sejam similares, num exame mais de perto, um termo parece transmitir à mente uma ideia ligeiramente diferente daquela que o outro transmite, e isso frequentemente aumenta o entendimento que se tem do que foi dito. Jacó parece ter usado este artifício ao abençoar seus filhos. Por exemplo, ele declarou que Dã 'mostrar-se-ia uma serpente à beira da estrada, uma cobra-cornuda à beira da vereda' (Gên 49:17), usando estas expressões paralelas num sentido bom, para indicar que Dã constituiria um perigo para os adversários de Israel.

O próprio Deus é identificado como dizendo: "Judá é meu bastão de comandante." (Sal 60:7; 108:8) Ao passo que segurar um bastão de comandante indica que o possuidor dele seria líder, com o poder de mandar, o cetro na mão dum monarca significa estar ele de posse da soberania régia ou da prerrogativa como governante real. (Sal 45:6) Portanto, o uso dos termos "cetro" e "bastão de comandante" em Gênesis 49:10 evidentemente indica que a tribo de Judá possuiria significativa autoridade e poder. No entanto, que estava envolvido mais do que apenas autoridade e dominância tribal é evidente visto que Siló, a quem "pertencerá a obediência dos povos", havia de vir da tribo de Judá. Esta circunstância indica autoridade e poder régio sobre o povo. Quando Davi, descendente de Judá, se tornou rei de Israel, o cetro e o bastão de comandante mostraram estar na posse da tribo de Judá, e eles não se afastariam dela até a vinda de Siló, o Messias. (2Sa 7:8-16) Deus deveras deu o Siló vindouro, Jesus Cristo, descendente de Judá e de Davi, como "líder e comandante para os grupos nacionais". (Is 55:4) Predisse-se que o Governante messiânico exerceria domínio e poder sobre nações e povos. (Sal 2:8, 9; Da 7:13, 14) Portanto, ele não somente segura "o cetro", ou a soberania régia, mas possui também "o bastão de comandante", tendo o poder de comandar. — Veja SILÓ.

COMANDANTE MILITAR. A palavra grega khi·lí·ar·khos (quiliarco) significa "comandante de 1.000 soldados". Com a exceção de seu uso em Revelação (Apocalipse), refere-se a um tribuno militar romano. Havia seis tribunos em cada legião romana. A legião, porém, não ficava dividida em seis comandos diferentes; antes, cada tribuno comandava a legião inteira um sexto do tempo. Em cada período de dois meses, dois tribunos serviam em dias alternados. — Veja EXÉRCITO (Romano).

Tal comandante militar estava investido de grande autoridade. Ele nomeava e designava centuriões. Presidia a cortes marciais e podia aplicar a pena capital. Tinha um corpo de assistentes servindo como ajudantes. Sua categoria era reconhecida pelo seu traje: uma faixa púrpura na sua toga e um anel de ouro, de distinção. Houve época em que tais tribunos eram eleitos pelo povo; mais tarde, o Senado e outro pessoal civil ou militar eram os principais responsáveis pela sua designação. Normalmente, requeria dez anos de serviço na infantaria ou cinco anos na cavalaria. Augusto permitiu que filhos de senadores iniciassem sua carreira como tribunos. Tibério reservava para si o direito da nomeação.

Por ocasião da celebração do aniversário natalício de Herodes, estes comandantes estavam entre os convidados de honra entretidos pela dançarina Salomé. Na presença de tais homens de categoria, Herodes sentiu-se obrigado a cumprir seu juramento, e, assim, ordenou que João, o Batizador, fosse decapitado. (Mr 6:21-26) Um comandante militar (quiliarco) acompanhou os soldados que prenderam Jesus. — Jo 18:12.

Por volta de 56 EC, Cláudio Lísias era o comandante militar da guarnição de Jerusalém. Foi ele quem resgatou Paulo tanto da turba de rua, como do Sinédrio amotinado, e que escreveu uma carta de explicação ao Governador Félix, quando Paulo foi secretamente enviado para Cesareia. (At 21:30-24:22) Muitos comandantes militares estavam presentes quando Paulo compareceu perante Herodes Agripa II. — At 25:23.

"Comandantes militares" são também mencionados na visão de João, no livro de Revelação, como estando entre aqueles em quem se executam os julgamentos de Deus. — Re 6:15; 19:18.

COMBUSTÍVEL. Literalmente, "alimento" para o fogo. (Is 9:5, 19; Ez 15:4) Carvão (Is 47:14; Jo 18:18), pedaços de pau (Je 7:18), juncos (Jó 41:20), espinhos (Ec 7:6), lenha (Jos 9:27; Is 44:14-16), bem como pau de videira (Ez 15:6), estão entre os combustíveis especificamente mencionados na Bíblia. Adicionalmente, era comum usar azeite de oliveira como combustível para lâmpadas. (Êx 27:20; Mt 25:3, 4) A lenha, em seu estado natural ou na forma de carvão, provavelmente era o combustível mais comum dos israelitas. Para fins de aquecimento, costumava-se queimar carvão de lenha num braseiro. (Je 36:22) Em outras ocasiões, era queimado sem recipiente, como sem dúvida foi o caso quando Jesus Cristo, depois da sua ressurreição, preparou um desjejum sobre um fogo de brasas. — Jo 21:9, 10; veja CARVÃO DE LENHA.

Para retratar a severidade do sítio de Jerusalém, mandou-se que Ezequiel usasse excremento humano como combustível, mas quando ele objetou, Jeová permitiu-lhe usar em vez disso estrume de gado. (Ez 4:8, 12-15) Embora estrume de gado, seco, seja hoje usado por alguns no Oriente Médio, por causa da escassez de lenha, isto não necessariamente significa que os israelitas o usassem comumente, em especial visto que a antiga Palestina tinha mais florestas do que agora.

COMEMORAÇÃO DA MORTE DE CRISTO. Veja REFEIÇÃO NOTURNA DO SENHOR.

COMERCIANTE. Veja MERCADOR, COMERCIANTE.

COMINHO [hebr.: kam·món, gr.: ký·mi·non], COMINHO-PRETO (NIGELA) [hebr.: qé·tsahh]. O cominho (Cuminum cyminum) é da família da cenoura ou da salsa, crescendo até uns 30 a 60 cm, tendo folhas longas, delgadas e umbelas (inflorescências parecidas a um buquê) de pequenas flores rosadas ou brancas, que brotam nas pontas dos ramos voltados para cima. A planta é mais conhecida pelas suas sementes pungentemente aromáticas, usadas no Oriente Médio e em outros países como especiaria para aromatizar pão, bolos, cozidos e até mesmo licores. As sementes de cariz (alcaravia), a que as sementes do cominho se assemelham em sabor e aparência, têm-se tornado de uso mais comum do que o cominho, por seu sabor mais brando e seu maior valor nutritivo.

Junto com o cominho menciona-se em Isaías 28:25, 27, a planta descrita pela palavra hebraica qé·tsahh. Os tradutores a identificam de forma variada como "ervilhaca" (Al), "endro" (ALA); mas o contexto e também o nome correspondente em árabe (qazha) parecem favorecer a "nigela" (BJ; CBC; IBB; PIB), "cominho-preto" (NM). Apesar de chamada por alguns de cominho-preto, a nigela (Nigella sativa) não é botanicamente classificada como cominho, e embora seja conhecida como "a flor da noz-moscada", difere igualmente da noz-moscada cultivada. Pertence à família das ranunculáceas (ranúnculos), cresce mais ou menos até a mesma altura do cominho, tem folhas penadas similares, mas tem atrativas flores individuais, com pétalas que vão do branco ao azul. Os pericarpos têm compartimentos interiores, e as pequeninas sementes pretas, menores do que as do cominho, são acres, bem como aromáticas, e são usadas nos alimentos como tempero um tanto apimentado. Era um tempero favorito dos antigos gregos e romanos. — FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 543.

Embora nem o cominho, nem a nigela (cominho-preto) sejam hoje amplamente cultivados na região da Palestina, nos tempos bíblicos, ambos eram ali mais populares. Jeová, por meio do seu profeta Isaías, descreve como o lavrador israelita esparrama as sementes sobre o solo arado, ao passo que dá maior cuidado à semeadura de grãos mais valiosos, tais como trigo, painço e cevada. Mostra igualmente que, depois da colheita, a debulha das sementes do cominho e da nigela não era feita com pesadas rodas ou rolos de instrumentos de debulha, mas por malhar as cápsulas das sementes com uma vara, ou, no caso das cascas mais resistentes da nigela, com um bastão, para que estas sementes mais tenras e menores não fossem danificadas. Vindo logo depois da exortação de Jeová ao povo de Israel, de parar de zombar, em vista do iminente extermínio que confrontava o reino setentrional, esta ilustração, pelo visto, foi dada para mostrar que as pessoas tinham a opção de aceitar o espancamento disciplinar pela vara de Jeová, ou de ficar sujeitas à severa e incessante debulha sob o peso esmagador duma pesada carroça de rolos. — Is 28:22-29.

Sob a Lei mosaica, os israelitas deviam pagar o dízimo ou o décimo "de todos os produtos da tua semente", o que parece incluir tudo o que era cultivado. (De 14:22; Le 27:30) Nos dias de Jesus, os fariseus eram escrupulosos em pagar o décimo de produtos tão pequenos como a hortelã, o endro e o cominho (todos produtos negociáveis), mas eram culpados de desconsiderar as obrigações mais sérias. — Mt 23:23; compare isso com Lu 11:42.

COMPAIXÃO. Percepção bondosa do sofrimento, ou adversidade, de outrem, junto com o desejo de aliviá-lo. Uma das palavras hebraicas que transmitem a ideia de compaixão é o verbo hhamál, que significa "ter (mostrar ou sentir) compaixão; poupar". (Êx 2:6; Mal 3:17; Je 50:14) O verbo grego oi·ktei·ro significa "compadecer-se" ou "mostrar compaixão", ao passo que o substantivo oi·ktirmós descreve o sentimento íntimo da compaixão, ou terna misericórdia. (Ro 9:15; 12:1; 2Co 1:3; Fil 2:1; Col 3:12; He 10:28) A palavra grega splág·khna (intestinos) pode ter o sentido de ternas compaixões. — 1Jo 3:17.

O mais notável exemplo de compaixão é o próprio Jeová. Isto é bem ilustrado nos seus tratos com os israelitas. Ele não somente se compadecia vivamente deles durante as aflições que sofriam no Egito, mas finalmente os resgatou das mãos dos seus opressores e amorosamente cuidou deles no ermo. (Is 63:7-9) Apesar das repetidas recaídas deles na infidelidade depois de se terem estabelecido na Terra da Promessa, ele vez após vez os libertou das mãos dos seus inimigos, respondendo ao seu clamor por ajuda. — Jz 2:11-19.

Finalmente, porém, os israelitas atingiram o ponto além da possibilidade de arrependimento. Praticaram a idolatria em larga escala, levando ídolos para dentro do próprio santuário de Jeová e profanando-o. O povo continuou a zombar dos profetas e a desprezar a palavra de Jeová. O Altíssimo não mais podia ser compassivo para com eles. De modo que os entregou nas mãos do Rei Nabucodonosor, cumprindo o julgamento anunciado de antemão por meio dos profetas. — 2Cr 36:15-17; Je 13:14; 21:7; Ez 5:11; 8:17, 18.

Quando Não Ter Compaixão. Imitando a Jeová, todos os que realmente chegam a conhecê-lo esforçam-se a ser compassivos. (Ef 4:32-5:1) Todavia, há ocasiões em que a compaixão é imprópria. No caso das pessoas que persistem no pecado e que se colocam deliberadamente contra os caminhos justos de Jeová, seria errado protegê-las compassivamente contra a penalidade que seu proceder merece. — De 13:6-11; He 10:28.

Ceder à pressão para ter compaixão quando isso é contrário à vontade de Deus pode ter sérias consequências. Isto é revelado por aquilo que aconteceu com o Rei Saul. Chegara o tempo para a execução do julgamento divino contra os amalequitas, o primeiro povo a lançar um ataque não provocado contra os israelitas, depois da partida destes do Egito. Ordenou-se a Saul a não ter compaixão deles. Cedendo à pressão dos seus súditos, não cumpriu plenamente a ordem de Jeová. Por isso, Jeová rejeitou Saul de ser rei. (1Sa 15:2-24) Quem cultiva profundo apreço pela justeza dos caminhos de Jeová e coloca a lealdade a Ele acima de tudo pode evitar errar assim como Saul e perder a aprovação divina.

COMPANHIA. Veja ASSOCIAÇÃO.

COMPASSO. Instrumento usado por um carpinteiro ou outro artífice para marcar ou inscrever um círculo ou um arco em madeira ou em outro material. A única referência bíblica a um compasso ocorre em Isaías 44:13. Ali diz que o idólatra escultor de madeira usa o cordel de medir, giz vermelho e uma raspadeira para talhar um ídolo. E "continua a demarcá-la com o compasso [evidentemente, para certificar-se de que fique bem proporcionada], e aos poucos a faz semelhante à representação de um homem, semelhante à beleza da humanidade, para ficar assentada numa casa". A palavra hebraica para "compasso" (mehhu·gháh) é aparentada com hhugh (círculo). — Pr 8:27; Is 40:22..

COMPENSAÇÃO. O equivalente dado ou recebido por serviços prestados, perdas ou ferimentos. O verbo hebraico traduzido por 'dar compensação' (sha·lém) é aparentado com sha·lóhm, que significa "paz". (Êx 21:36; 1Rs 5:12) Assim, o verbo subentende um restabelecimento da paz por meio de pagamento ou restituição. Sob a lei dada a Israel mediante Moisés, exigia-se uma compensação quando havia danos ou perdas em qualquer campo das relações humanas. Também se tinha de dar compensação por trabalhos feitos ou serviços prestados. Trabalhadores contratados, quer israelitas, quer residentes forasteiros, quer outros, deviam receber seu salário no mesmo dia. — Le 19:13; De 24:14, 15.

Ferimentos Causados a Pessoas. Quem ferisse outro numa briga por golpeá-lo tinha de darlhe compensação pelo tempo de trabalho perdido, até que ele sarasse completamente. — Êx 21:18, 19.

Se, no decorrer duma luta entre homens, uma gestante fosse ferida ou seu(s) filho(s) 'saíssem', mas não houvesse acidente fatal, o dono da mulher devia cobrar uma indenização do homem culpado. (Se o marido fizesse uma exigência exorbitante, os juízes determinariam a soma a ser paga.) — Êx 21:22.

Se um touro tinha o hábito de escornar e seu dono tivesse sido avisado disso, mas não mantivesse o animal sob guarda, então, se este escornasse fatalmente um escravo, o amo do escravo devia receber do dono do touro 30 siclos (US$ 66) em compensação. Segundo comentadores judeus, isto se aplicava a escravos estrangeiros, não hebreus. Se o touro escornasse uma pessoa livre, então o dono dele devia morrer. Todavia, se aos olhos dos juízes as circunstâncias ou outros fatores permitissem uma pena mais leve, podia-se-lhe impor um resgate. Neste caso, o dono do touro escornante tinha de pagar a quantia imposta pelos juízes. Além disso, o dono sofria a perda do touro, o qual era apedrejado até morrer. A carne dele não podia ser consumida. (Êx 21:28-32) Esta lei evidentemente aplicava-se também no caso de outros animais capazes de causar ferimentos mortais.

Se um homem seduzisse uma virgem não prometida em casamento, ele tinha de tomá-la por esposa; mesmo que o pai terminantemente se recusasse a entregá-la a ele, tinha de pagar ao pai dela o preço de compra de virgens (50 siclos; US$ 110), o costumeiro preço de noiva, porque se teria de compensar agora o valor reduzido dela como noiva. — Êx 22:16, 17; De 22:28, 29.

Calúnia. O homem que acusasse falsamente a esposa de alegar enganosamente ser virgem por ocasião do seu casamento tinha de pagar ao pai dela em dobro o preço de virgens (2 x 50 siclos; US$ 220), por dar má reputação a uma virgem de Israel. — De 22:13-19.

Também estava envolvida uma forma de compensação no caso de um homem acusar falsamente a esposa de infidelidade. Se a acusação fosse verdade, ela sofreria o definhamento dos seus órgãos reprodutivos, perdendo o privilégio de ter filhos, ao passo que, quando achada inocente, seu marido tinha de engravidá-la. Assim ela podia ser abençoada com um filho. — Núm 5:11-15, 22, 28.

Furto. A Lei dissuadia o furto. A respeito do ladrão, ela rezava: "Sem falta deve dar uma compensação. Se não tiver nada, então terá de ser vendido pelas coisas que furtou. Se aquilo que foi furtado for indubitavelmente achado vivo na sua mão, desde o touro até o jumento e o ovídeo, deve dar dupla compensação." Isto incluía dinheiro ou outros objetos, bem como animais. Se o ladrão tivesse abatido o animal furtado ou o tivesse vendido, então teria de fazer uma compensação mais pesada, a saber, por um touro, cinco da manada, e por uma ovelha, quatro do rebanho. (Êx 22:1, 3, 4, 7) Esta lei tinha por efeito proteger e recompensar a vítima, e fazer o ladrão trabalhar para pagar pelo seu crime, em vez de ficar sentado numa cadeia, como fardo econômico para a comunidade, sem a vítima ser compensada pela sua perda.

Danos Físicos e à Propriedade. O homem que matasse o animal de outro tinha de pagar por ele. (Le 24:18, 21) Quando um touro havia matado outro, vendia-se o vivo, e tanto o preço obtido por ele como o do animal morto eram divididos em partes iguais entre os donos. Todavia, se se sabia que o touro era feroz, o dono compensava o outro por dar-lhe um touro vivo e ficar com o morto, que, consequentemente, valia muito menos. — Êx 21:35, 36.

A melhor parte do próprio campo ou vinhedo de alguém devia ser dada em compensação pelos danos causados por um animal que invadiu o campo de outro e pastou nele. Se alguém causasse um incêndio que então passasse para o campo de outro e causasse danos, o dono tinha de ser compensado de forma equânime. O julgamento mais pesado pelos danos causados por um animal invasor se devia a que animais são mais facilmente controláveis do que o fogo, e também porque o animal, ao pastar, derivou disso benefícios injustos, igual ao ladrão; por isso, exigia-se mais do que uma compensação equânime. — Êx 22:5, 6.

Bens em Depósito. Quando objetos ou bens eram deixados aos cuidados de outro e eram furtados neste tempo, o ladrão, quando encontrado, tinha de dar a usual dupla compensação. Dinheiro e objetos deixados com alguém não precisavam receber cuidados especiais, mas deviam ser guardados num lugar seguro. No caso de um animal doméstico guardado para outro, aquele que guardava o animal (depositário) tinha de ter o mesmo cuidado com ele como com o seu próprio rebanho ou manada. Tais depositários usualmente eram pagos pelo alimento necessitado pelos animais, e às vezes provavelmente eram também pagos pelo trabalho extra de guardar os animais. Se um animal morresse por si só, fosse dilacerado por uma fera ou fosse levado por um bando de saqueadores, o depositário estava livre de culpa. A perda estava além do seu controle. Poderia ter acontecido com os seus próprios animais, mas se fosse furtado (por alguém a quem o depositário poderia ter impedido, ou devido à sua negligência), então o depositário era responsável e tinha de fazer compensação. — Êx 22:7-13; veja Gên 31:38-42.

O homem que tomasse emprestado um animal de outro para seu próprio uso tinha de compensar quaisquer danos. (Êx 22:14) Se o dono dele o acompanhasse, não se requeria nenhuma compensação, à base do princípio de que a pessoa poderia ter cuidado da sua própria propriedade. Se fosse um item alugado, o dono sofria a perda, porque supostamente considerou o risco ao fixar o preço do aluguel. — Êx 22:15.

COMPRA. Algo adquirido em troca de itens de valor — dinheiro, bens, serviços ou mesmo uma vida.

Já nos dias de Abraão, as pessoas compravam e vendiam formalmente bens, propriedades ou serviços, usando um meio de troca tal como dinheiro, bem similar a hoje. Abraão 'comprou com dinheiro' escravos. (Gên 17:12, 13) Por ocasião da morte de Sara, Abraão comprou formalmente de Efrom, um dos filhos de Hete, um lote para sepultamento familiar. (Gên 23:3-20; 49:29-32) Os pormenores deste primeiro contrato legal da história, registrado nas Escrituras, são interessantes.

Numa genuína demonstração de cortesia, Abraão curvou-se ao fazer a sua oferta. Não era o campo, mas apenas a caverna que 'se achava na extremidade do campo' de Efrom que Abraão queria comprar. Efrom fez uma contraproposta. Não se sabe ao certo se ele fingia liberalidade oriental ao dizer que daria a propriedade a Abraão (Gên 23:7-11), ou, conforme alguns pensam, estava apenas expressando sua disposição de cedê-la, isto é, 'dá-la' por um preço. O que é certo é sua insistência em que tanto a caverna como o campo fossem incluídos na transação. Chegou-se a um acordo final, mencionou-se o preço, fez-se a transação e pesou-se cuidadosamente o dinheiro, "quatrocentos siclos de prata, moeda corrente entre os mercadores". (c. US$ 880) (Gên 23:16) Naqueles dias, o dinheiro não era cunhado em forma de moeda de dinheiro, mas pesado em balanças. Assim, "o campo e a caverna que havia nele, e todas as árvores que havia no campo, que estavam dentro de todos os seus termos ao redor, foram confirmados a Abraão como sua compra". Toda esta transação legal se deu na presença de ambas as partes e de testemunhas, sim, "diante dos olhos dos filhos de Hete, entre todos os que entravam pelo portão de sua cidade". (Gên 23:17, 18) De modo similar, Jacó comprou mais tarde um lote de terra dos siquemitas. — Gên 33:18, 19.

Durante uma fome de sete anos, José, como primeiro-ministro do Egito, vendeu cereais, primeiro por dinheiro, e quando este se esgotou, aceitou como pagamento os animais domésticos das pessoas, a seguir a terra delas e finalmente elas próprias. — Gên 42:2-25; 47:13-23.

A Lei de Moisés proibia estritamente as compras e as vendas no sábado, assim como proibia também tratos comerciais escusos. Durante a apostasia de Israel, essas leis eram com frequência violadas. — Le 25:14-17; Ne 10:31; 13:15-18; Am 8:4-6.

Quando o Rei Davi quis comprar a eira de Araúna (Ornã), este homem bondosamente tentou dá-la ao rei. Todavia, Davi insistiu em pagar a soma de 50 siclos de prata (US$ 110) pelo próprio lugar do altar, mais os materiais necessários para o sacrifício. Parece que, posteriormente, acrescentaram-se outras propriedades vizinhas, para abranger uma área suficientemente grande para todo o local do templo, o preço de compra sendo 600 siclos de ouro por peso (c. US$ 77.070). (2Sa 24:21-24; 1Cr 21:22-25) Durante os reinados tanto do Rei Jeoás como do Rei Josias, faziam-se compras de materiais e contratos de serviço para o conserto do templo. — 2Rs 12:9-12; 22:3-7.

Jeremias comprou um campo na sua cidade de Anatote, descrevendo a transação legal do seguinte modo: "Escrevi então numa escritura e apus o selo, e tomei testemunhas ao pesar o dinheiro na balança." — Je 32:9-16, 25, 44.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs há também diversas referências a compra de bens e de materiais — comestíveis, óleo, vestimentas, pérolas, campos, casas, ouro, unguento para os olhos, mercadorias em geral, animais, e até humanos. (Mt 13:44-46; 25:8-10; 27:7; Mr 6:37; Jo 4:8; 13:29; At 1:18; 4:34-37; 5:1-3; Re 3:18; 13:17; 18:11-13; veja BANCO, BANQUEIRO.) Os judeus crentes foram por meio duma compra libertos da maldição da Lei, mediante Cristo, o qual se tornou maldição em lugar deles, quando ele, embora inocente, foi pendurado numa estaca. (Gál 3:13; 4:5) "Com o sangue do seu próprio Filho", Jeová comprou a inteira "congregação de Deus". — At 20:28.

COMPREENSÃO. Veja ENTENDIMENTO.

COMUNICAÇÃO. Informações e ideias eram transmitidas de pessoa a pessoa numa variedade de maneiras, nas terras bíblicas da antiguidade. Em grande parte, notícias comuns locais e estrangeiras eram transmitidas oralmente. (2Sa 3:17, 19; Jó 37:20) Viajantes, que muitas vezes acompanhavam caravanas, contavam notícias de lugares distantes quando paravam para obter comida, água e outras provisões em cidades ou paradas ao longo das rotas das caravanas. A terra da Palestina, em vista da sua posição peculiar com relação à Ásia, África e Europa, era atravessada por caravanas que iam e vinham de pontos distantes. De modo que seus habitantes podiam prontamente obter informações a respeito de eventos significativos em terras estrangeiras. Notícias, tanto nacionais como estrangeiras, frequentemente podiam ser obtidas no mercado da cidade.

A comunicação a curta distância era às vezes conseguida pelo uso de sinais audíveis ou visuais, ou oralmente. (Jos 8:18, 19; 1Sa 20:20-22, 35-39) Depois de Israel ter partido do Egito, Moisés recebeu instruções para fazer duas trombetas de prata para fins de comunicação. Os toques destas trombetas pelos sacerdotes arônicos assinalavam coisas tais como a convocação da assembleia, a reunião dos maiorais, o levantamento ordeiro do acampamento, ou uma convocação para a guerra contra o inimigo. (Núm 10:1-10) O toque duma buzina de chifre, por Gideão, serviu de sinal para seus homens começarem a batalha vitoriosa contra Midiã. — Jz 7:18-22; Veja CHIFRE (BUZINA); TROMBETA.

Mensagens orais ou escritas enviadas por oficiais frequentemente eram levadas por correios. (2Sa 18:19-32) Correios levaram as cartas do Rei Ezequias por todo o Israel e Judá, convocando o povo a Jerusalém para uma celebração da Páscoa. (2Cr 30:6-12) Os correios a serviço do rei persa Assuero montavam velozes cavalos de posta, e assim se divulgou o decreto real em contrário, que frustrou a trama de Hamã, de aniquilar os judeus no Império Persa. (Est 8:10-17) Cartas e documentos escritos eram usados pela maioria dos governos da antiguidade para uma administração eficiente. Dependendo do tempo e do lugar, usualmente eram escritos em materiais tais como tabuinhas de argila, papiro e peles de animais. Arqueólogos têm encontrado muitas antigas comunicações governamentais ou documentos comerciais. Decretos reais eram proclamados por arautos. (Da 3:4-6) Naturalmente, outras pessoas, além de governantes, também usavam mensageiros. — Veja ARAUTO; CORREIO; MENSAGEIRO.

A comunicação dentro de um país, ou mesmo a uma distância maior, passou a depender em grande parte de vias ou estradas. No primitivo Israel e Judá havia boas estradas, e estas eram mantidas em boas condições. Mais tarde, os romanos construíram excelentes estradas de Roma a todas as partes do Império, facilitando assim a comunicação oficial e o movimento de tropas. Quando Jesus Cristo estava na Terra, grande número de pessoas viajavam por essas estradas. Cristãos, em especial Paulo e seus comissionários, fizeram uso delas ao viajarem à Ásia Menor e à Europa, para estabelecer e revisitar congregações cristãs.

Comunicações oficiais junto com notícias em geral também eram levadas por navios, que velejavam pelo mar Mediterrâneo, atracando em diversos portos. O governo romano usava navios em certas ocasiões (usualmente no verão) para levar mensagens oficiais, mas parece que o grosso de tais comunicações era transmitido por vias terrestres. Estas eram mais confiáveis.

Os romanos desenvolveram um serviço postal oficial, mas este era usado apenas para comunicações governamentais. O povo em geral tinha de depender de conhecidos para entregar suas cartas. Quando o corpo governante em Jerusalém resolveu a questão da circuncisão e enviou uma carta como meio de comunicação, esta foi entregue de modo pessoal, em mãos. (At 15:22-31) Isto se deu também com cartas inspiradas tais como a que Paulo enviou aos cristãos em Colossos, que foi levada por Tíquico e Onésimo. — Col 4:7-9; veja CARTAS.

Jeová é um Deus comunicativo, e reconheceu a necessidade de seu povo ter uma comunicação escrita. Ele mesmo foi responsável pela composição dos Dez Mandamentos em tábuas de pedra. (Êx 31:18) Por inspiração divina, diversos fiéis homens hebreus (começando com Moisés, em 1513 AEC) foram induzidos a assentar por escrito as comunicações de Jeová.

CONANIAS [Jeová Estabeleceu Firmemente].

1. Levita encarregado das contribuições para o serviço do templo durante o reinado de Ezequias. — 2Cr 31:4, 12, 13.

2. Chefe levita dentre aqueles que generosamente contribuíram ovelhas, cabritos e gado para a grande celebração de Páscoa realizada no 18.º ano do reinado de Josias. — 2Cr 35:9, 19.

CONCUBINA. Entre os hebreus, a concubina ocupava uma posição de natureza comparável à duma esposa secundária e era às vezes chamada de esposa. Parece que as concubinas eram escravas de um de três tipos: (1) moça hebreia vendida pelo pai (Êx 21:7-9), (2) escrava estrangeira comprada, ou (3) moça estrangeira capturada na guerra (De 21:10-14). Algumas eram escravas ou servas da esposa livre, como nos casos de Sara, Leia e Raquel. — Gên 16:3, 4; 30:3-13; Jz 8:31; 9:18.

O concubinato já existia antes do pacto da Lei, e foi reconhecido e regulamentado pela Lei, que protegia os direitos tanto das esposas como das concubinas. (Êx 21:7-11; De 21:14-17) As concubinas não possuíam todos os direitos na casa, que a esposa possuía, e o homem talvez tivesse uma pluralidade de esposas, junto com concubinas. (1Rs 11:3; 2Cr 11:21) Nos casos em que a esposa era estéril, ela às vezes dava sua serva ao marido como concubina, e o filho nascido da concubina era então considerado como filho da esposa livre, a senhora dela. (Gên 16:2; 30:3) Os filhos das concubinas eram legítimos e podiam receber herança. — Gên 49:16-21; compare isso com Gên 30:3-12.

Visto que, por costume oriental, as esposas e as concubinas de um rei só podiam passar a pertencer ao seu sucessor legítimo, Absalão, que demonstrou o maior desrespeito por Davi, tentou reforçar seus empenhos para obter o reinado por ter relações sexuais com as dez concubinas de seu pai, Davi. (2Sa 16:21, 22) Depois que o Rei Salomão foi entronizado, Adonias, irmão mais velho de Salomão, que já havia tentado conseguir o reinado, dirigiu-se à mãe de Salomão, Bate-Seba, dizendo: "Tu mesma bem sabes que o reinado ia tornar-se meu", e então pediu que ela solicitasse a Salomão Abisague, a sunamita, que parece ter sido encarada como esposa ou concubina de Davi. Salomão respondeu irado: "Pede também para ele o reinado", e então ordenou que Adonias fosse morto, indicando que encarava a solicitação de Adonias como esforço para conseguir o reino. — 1Rs 1:5-7; 2:13-25.

Deus só achou próprio restabelecer a norma original de monogamia, que estabelecera no jardim do Éden, com o aparecimento de Jesus Cristo, mas protegeu a concubina por meio duma legislação. Logicamente, o concubinato contribuiu para um aumento mais rápido da população de Israel. — Mt 19:5, 6; 1Co 7:2; 1Ti 3:2; veja CASAMENTO (Poligamia).

Uso Figurado. O apóstolo Paulo compara Jeová ao marido duma esposa livre, a "Jerusalém de cima", que é a "mãe" de cristãos gerados pelo espírito, assim como Abraão era marido de Sara. Compara a relação de Jeová com a nação de Israel, representada pela sua capital Jerusalém, à de um marido com uma concubina. Por meio do pacto da Lei, Jeová estava 'casado' com Jerusalém qual "serva", 'concubina', análogo à relação de Abraão com a escrava e concubina Agar. — Gál 4:22-29; compare isso com Is 54:1-6.

CONDUTA DESENFREADA. Atos que refletem uma atitude descarada, uma atitude que mostra desrespeito, até mesmo desprezo, para com a lei e a autoridade. A palavra hebraica zim·máh é traduzida por "conduta desenfreada" e "moral desenfreada". (Le 18:17; 19:29) O termo grego a·sél·gei·a (conduta desenfreada) também pode ser vertido por "licenciosidade; libertinagem; impudicícia; conduta lasciva". (Gál 5:19, n.; 2Pe 2:7, n.) Nenhum destes termos se restringe à imoralidade sexual. As Escrituras classificam como conduta desenfreada coisas tais como estupro por bando (Jz 19:25; 20:6), prostituição (Je 13:27; Ez 23:44) e derramamento de sangue (Sal 26:9, 10; Ez 22:9; Os 6:9). "Homem sem princípios" é aquele de quem se diz que trama conduta desenfreada, e aqueles para quem tal conduta é "como um divertimento" são classificados como estúpidos, ou moralmente imprestáveis. — Is 32:7; Pr 10:23.

'Do Coração.' Jesus salienta que a conduta desenfreada reflete o que a pessoa é por dentro. Ele diz: "De dentro, dos corações dos homens, saem raciocínios prejudiciais: fornicações, . . . adultérios, . . . conduta desenfreada . . . Todas estas coisas iníquas saem de dentro e aviltam o homem." (Mr 7:20-23) A conduta desenfreada é uma das "obras da carne", um dos desejos carnais que "travam um combate contra a alma". "Os que praticam tais coisas não herdarão o reino de Deus", diz a Palavra de Deus. — Gál 5:19, 21; 1Pe 2:11.

Diz-se aos cristãos que amam a luz da verdade: "Andemos decentemente, como em pleno dia, não em festanças e em bebedeiras, nem em relações ilícitas e em conduta desenfreada." (Ro 13:13; Jo 3:19-21) O apóstolo Pedro argumenta: "Porque já basta o tempo decorrido [antes de vos tornardes servos de Deus] para terdes feito a vontade das nações, quando procedestes em ações de conduta desenfreada." (1Pe 4:3) O apóstolo Paulo também admoesta os cristãos, descrevendo o proceder das nações mundanas, com as quais eles anteriormente se associavam, como estando 'mentalmente em escuridão e apartadas da vida que pertence a Deus . . . Tendo ficado além de todo o senso moral, entregaram-se à conduta desenfreada para fazerem com ganância toda sorte de impureza'. — Ef 4:17-19.

Não obstante, alguns que afirmam ser servos de Deus e de Cristo desviam-se do caminho da luz e demonstram uma atitude descarada, desafiante, para com a lei e autoridade divinas. Paulo foi entristecido por aqueles da congregação coríntia que não se haviam arrependido da "impureza, e fornicação, e conduta desenfreada que praticaram", apesar da admoestação em contrário. (2Co 12:21) Pedro advertiu os primitivos cristãos que falsos instrutores viriam das próprias fileiras deles e que muitos seguiriam os seus atos de conduta desenfreada, lançando vitupério sobre o caminho da verdade. (2Pe 2:1, 2) As palavras de Jesus às congregações de Pérgamo e de Tiatira, registradas pelo apóstolo João por volta de 96 EC, indicam que a profecia de Pedro, até certo ponto, se cumpria naquele tempo. (Re 2:12, 14, 18, 20) Tanto Pedro como Judas expressaram o vindouro julgamento que sobreviria aos praticantes da conduta desenfreada. — 2Pe 2:17-22; Ju 7.

O argumento de alguns dos que praticam a conduta desenfreada, na sua tentativa de engodar e enganar outros na congregação cristã, é que a benignidade imerecida de Deus é grande e que ele desconsiderará os pecados deles, visto que reconhece suas imperfeições e fraquezas carnais. Mas o meio-irmão de Jesus, Judas, falou a respeito de tais como "homens ímpios, que transformam a benignidade imerecida de nosso Deus numa desculpa para conduta desenfreada e que se mostram falsos para com o nosso único Dono e Senhor, Jesus Cristo". (Ju 4) O professo cristianismo de tais é sem valor. Seu serviço não é aceitável a Deus; é assim como disse o escritor sábio de Israel: "O sacrifício dos iníquos é algo detestável. Quanto mais quando é trazido junto com conduta desenfreada." — Pr 21:27.

Sob a Lei, expressou-se o mesmo ponto de vista contra a conduta desenfreada. Deus não mudou neste respeito. Legislou-se contra a conduta desenfreada, e a penalidade era a morte. (Le 18:17; 20:14) Davi apelou para Deus, para não lhe tirar a vida junto com "os homens culpados de sangue, em cujas mãos há conduta desenfreada". — Sal 26:9, 10.

Jeová, por meio de seus profetas Jeremias e Ezequiel, avisou os de Israel sobre os Seus julgamentos contra eles, por praticarem a conduta desenfreada tanto em sentido físico como espiritual. — Je 13:26, 27; Ez 16:27, 43, 58; 22:9; 23:21-49; 24:13.

CONFLITO. Veja ALTERCAÇÃO.

CONGREGAÇÃO. Um grupo de pessoas reunidas para determinado propósito ou atividade. A palavra hebraica usualmente traduzida por "congregação", na Tradução do Novo Mundo, é qa·hál, que deriva dum radical que significa "convocar; congregar". (Núm 20:8; De 4:10) É frequentemente usada para um grupo organizado, encontrada nas expressões "congregação de Israel" (Le 16:17; Jos 8:35; 1Rs 8:14), "congregação do verdadeiro Deus" (Ne 13:1) e "congregação de Jeová" (Núm 20:4; De 23:2, 3; 1Cr 28:8; Miq 2:5). Qa·hál designa diversos tipos de reuniões humanas, como para fins religiosos (De 9:10; 18:16; 1Rs 8:65; Sal 22:25; 107:32), para tratar de assuntos civis (1Rs 12:3), e para guerra (1Sa 17:47; Ez 16:40). No livro de Eclesiastes, Salomão é identificado como "o congregante" (hebr.: qo·hé·leth). (Ec 1:1, 12) Ele, como rei, congregava ou reunia o povo para a adoração de Jeová, um caso notável disso sendo quando reuniu seus súditos ao recém-construído templo em Jerusalém. — 1Rs 8:1-5; 2Cr 5:2-6.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, a palavra grega traduzida por "congregação" é ek·kle·sí·a, da qual deriva a palavra portuguesa "eclésia". Ek·kle·sí·a deriva de duas palavras gregas, ek, que significa "para fora", e ka·lé·o, que significa "chamar". Portanto, refere-se a um grupo de pessoas chamadas para fora, ou convocadas, quer oficial quer extraoficialmente. É a palavra usada com referência à congregação de Israel, em Atos 7:38, e é também empregada para a "assembleia" convocada pelo prateiro Demétrio contra Paulo e seus associados, em Éfeso. (At 19:23, 24, 29, 32, 41) Na maioria das vezes, porém, é usada com referência à congregação cristã. É aplicada à congregação cristã em geral (1Co 12:28); a uma congregação numa cidade específica, tal como Jerusalém (At 8:1), Antioquia (At 13:1) ou Corinto (2Co 1:1); ou a um grupo específico que se reunia na casa de alguém (Ro 16:5; Flm 2). Concordemente, mencionam-se também determinadas congregações cristãs ou "congregações de Deus". (At 15:41; 1Co 11:16) Versões em português costumam usar "igreja" em textos referentes à congregação cristã, como em 1 Coríntios 16:19. (Ex.: Al; PIB) Visto que muitos consideram que uma igreja seja um edifício para ofícios religiosos, em vez de uma congregação empenhada num culto, traduzir a palavra por "igreja" pode ser enganoso.

A palavra grega ek·kle·sí·a frequentemente é usada na Septuaginta para traduzir a palavra hebraica qa·hál, como no Salmo 22:22 (21:23, LXX). — Veja NM n.

A Congregação de Israel. Desde o tempo de Moisés, a nação de Israel era chamada de congregação. Jeová providenciou que a congregação fosse governada, não democraticamente pelo povo, mas teocraticamente, pelo próprio Deus. Para este fim, a nação foi introduzida no pacto da Lei. (Êx 19:3-9; 24:6-8) Visto que Moisés era o mediador deste pacto, podia-se dizer: "Moisés nos ordenou uma lei, possessão da congregação de Jacó." (De 33:4) Jeová era seu Juiz, Legislador e Rei. (Is 33:22) Assim, a nação era uma congregação de Deus e podia ser chamada de "congregação de Jeová". — Núm 16:3; 1Cr 28:8.

Ocasionalmente, a palavra hebraica qa·hál (congregação) é usada em conjunto com a palavra hebraica ʽe·dháh (assembleia). (Le 4:13; Núm 20:8, 10) ʽE·dháh deriva dum radical que significa "designar", indicando assim um grupo reunido por designação, e é frequentemente aplicado à comunidade de Israel, como na expressão 'assembleia de Israel'. (Êx 12:3) Na nação de Israel, aqueles que realmente constituíam a população hebraica compunham a congregação (qa·hál; Núm 15:15), ao passo que a assembleia (ʽe·dháh) parece ter abrangido tanto os israelitas como os residentes forasteiros associados com eles. (Êx 12:19) De modo que o rol de membros da congregação, numa aplicação geral, ampliada, parece ter incluído os residentes forasteiros circuncisos. — Núm 15:14-16.

Todavia, havia exceções quanto a alguém ser membro da "congregação de Jeová". Nenhum homem castrado ou alguém a quem "se cortou o membro viril" podia ingressar nela; filhos ilegítimos, varões amonitas e varões moabitas estavam excluídos dela, "mesmo até a décima geração". Mas os filhos nascidos a edomitas e egípcios "como a terceira geração" podiam "por si mesmos entrar na congregação de Jeová". (De 23:1-8) A exclusão "até a décima geração" dos filhos de alguém ilegítimo apoiava a lei de Jeová contra o adultério. (Êx 20:14) E embora os sexualmente mutilados fossem excluídos da "congregação de Jeová", esses podiam consolar-se com as palavras registradas por Isaías, conforme encontradas em Isaías 56:1-7. Naturalmente, os excluídos da "congregação de Jeová", no antigo Israel, tinham a possibilidade de beneficiar-se das provisões e bênçãos que Jeová fez para os povos das nações em geral. — Gên 22:15-18.

Mostrava-se misericórdia àqueles que eram membros da congregação de Israel, se pecassem por engano. Mas eles eram decepados na morte por deliberadamente fazerem algo de errado. (Núm 15:27-31) Por exemplo, a pessoa seria decepada da congregação, e da própria vida, por negar-se a se purificar quando estava cerimonialmente impura, por comer da carne do sacrifício de participação em comum enquanto em tal condição, por comer a gordura das ofertas, ou sangue, ou por comer coisas sagradas enquanto impuro. (Núm 19:20; Le 7:21-27; 17:10, 14; 22:3) As pessoas também eram decepadas por trabalhar no sábado (Êx 31:14), por dar seus filhos a Moloque, por recorrer a médiuns espíritas e a prognosticadores profissionais de eventos, por certos tipos de imoralidade sexual, e por não se 'afligirem' no Dia da Expiação anual. — Le 20:1-6, 17, 18; 23:27-30; veja também Êx 30:31-33; Le 17:3, 4, 8, 9; 18:29; 19:5-8.

Ao passo que pessoas compunham a congregação de Israel, a própria nação consistia em tribos, famílias e casas. O incidente que envolveu Acã parece mostrar este arranjo organizacional, porque, neste caso, Israel se apresentou, primeiro por tribo, depois por família, a seguir por casa, e finalmente por varão vigoroso, até que Acã foi indicado como o transgressor. — Jos 7:10-19.

Em Israel, representantes responsáveis frequentemente atuavam em nome do povo. (Esd 10:14) Assim, "maiorais das tribos" fizeram oferendas depois de se erigir o tabernáculo. (Núm 7:1-11) Também, quem representativamente atestou por selo o "arranjo fidedigno" nos dias de Neemias foram sacerdotes, levitas e "os cabeças do povo". (Ne 9:38-10:27) Durante a peregrinação de Israel pelo ermo, havia "maiorais da assembleia, convocados da reunião, homens de fama", sendo que 250 deles se juntaram a Corá, Datã, Abirão e Om, em congregar-se contra Moisés e Arão. (Núm 16:1-3) Em harmonia com a orientação divina, Moisés selecionou 70 dos anciãos de Israel, que eram oficiais, para ajudá-lo a levar "a carga do povo", que ele era incapaz de levar sozinho. (Núm 11:16, 17, 24, 25) Levítico 4:15 menciona "os anciãos da assembleia", e parece que os representantes do povo eram os anciãos da nação, seus cabeças, seus juízes e seus oficiais. — Núm 1:4, 16; Jos 23:2; 24:1.

No ermo, usavam-se duas trombetas de prata para convocar a assembleia e para levantar o acampamento. A assembleia mantinha seus encontros com Moisés à entrada da tenda de reunião quando se tocavam ambas essas trombetas. Quando se tocava apenas uma, "os maiorais como cabeças dos milhares de Israel" compareciam ali.

(Núm 10:1-4) Às vezes, reis convocavam reuniões (1Rs 8:5; 2Cr 20:4, 5), Ezequias usando correios para convocar o povo a Jerusalém para a grandiosa celebração da Páscoa, nos seus dias. — 2Cr 30:1, 2, 10-13.

Em tempos posteriores, considerável poder era exercido por um corpo judicial conhecido como Sinédrio, composto de 71 membros — o sumo sacerdote e mais 70 dos homens principais da nação, "a assembleia dos anciãos do povo". — Mt 26:59; Lu 22:66.

Durante o exílio dos judeus em Babilônia, ou pouco depois, entraram em uso geral as sinagogas, como prédios em que os judeus se congregavam. Com o tempo, estabeleceram-se sinagogas em diversos lugares; Jesus, por exemplo, transmitiu instruções na sinagoga de Nazaré. (Lu 4:16-21) As sinagogas, na realidade, eram escolas em que se liam e ensinavam as Escrituras, e eram lugares de oração e de se dar louvor a Deus. — At 15:21; veja SINAGOGA.

A congregação de Israel estava numa situação ímpar. Moisés lembrou-lhe: "És um povo santo para Jeová, teu Deus. Foi a ti que Jeová, teu Deus, escolheu para te tornares seu povo, uma propriedade especial dentre todos os povos que há na superfície do solo." (De 7:6) Mas a congregação judaica deixou de ser a congregação de Deus, repudiada por ter rejeitado o Filho dele. — At 4:24-28; 13:23-29; Mt 21:43; 23:37, 38; Lu 19:41-44.

A Congregação Cristã de Deus. Antes da rejeição da nação judaica e do fim da sua posição como congregação de Deus, Jesus Cristo identificou-se como a "rocha" sobre a qual edificaria o que classificou como "a minha congregação". (Mt 16:18) Foi assim que Pedro, a quem falou, entendeu o assunto, porque o apóstolo, mais tarde, identificou Jesus como a figurativa "pedra", rejeitada pelos homens, mas "escolhida e preciosa para Deus", e como "pedra angular de alicerce", na qual se podia basear a fé sem desapontamento. (1Pe 2:4-6; Sal 118:22; Is 28:16) Paulo identificou também definitivamente a Jesus Cristo como o alicerce sobre o qual a congregação cristã é edificada. (Ef 2:19-22; 1Co 3:11) E, visto que ela pertence a Jeová, é apropriadamente chamada de "a congregação de Deus". — At 20:28; Gál 1:13.

Esta congregação cristã (gr.: ek·kle·sí·a), fundada em Cristo, o tem também como cabeça. De modo que se declara: "[Deus] sujeitou também todas as coisas debaixo dos pés dele, e o fez cabeça sobre todas as coisas para a congregação, a qual é o seu corpo, a plenitude daquele que em tudo preenche todas as coisas." — Ef 1:22, 23; veja também Col 1:18.

A congregação cristã de Deus passou a ocupar o lugar da congregação de Israel em Pentecostes de 33 EC, quando se derramou espírito santo sobre os seguidores de Jesus em Jerusalém. Os primeiros prospectivos membros dessa congregação foram escolhidos pouco depois do batismo de Jesus, no começo do seu ministério na terra. (At 2:1-4; Jo 1:35-43) Dentre seus primitivos seguidores, Jesus escolheu 12 apóstolos (Lu 6:12-16), e, mais tarde, escolheu Saulo de Tarso, o qual se tornou "apóstolo para as nações". (At 9:1-19; Ro 11:13) Os 12 apóstolos fiéis do Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo, incluindo Matias, que substituiu Judas, constituem alicerces secundários da congregação cristã. — At 1:23-26; Re 21:1, 2, 14.

Esta congregação é mencionada como a "congregação dos primogênitos que foram alistados nos céus", cujo pleno número, sob Cristo, a cabeça, é 144.000. (He 12:23; Re 7:4) Estes chamados são "comprados dentre a humanidade" para executar uma obra especial aqui na terra, e para então estar com Cristo no céu, como sua noiva. Assim como havia requisitos para alguém ser membro da congregação hebraica de Deus, assim há requisitos para ser membro da cristã "congregação de Deus". Aqueles que a constituem são virgens espirituais que continuam a seguir o Cordeiro, Jesus Cristo, para onde quer que ele vá, "e não se achou falsidade na sua boca; não têm mácula". — Re 14:1-5.

Os membros da congregação cristã de Deus são selecionados por Jeová. (Ro 8:30; 2Te 2:13) Os primeiros membros dela foram chamados dentre a rejeitada congregação judaica, que não havia aceito o Filho de Deus como seu Messias. Todavia, a começar com Cornélio, em 36 EC, membros da congregação cristã foram também chamados dentre as nações em geral, de modo que Paulo podia dizer: "Não há nem judeu nem grego, não há nem escravo nem homem livre, não há nem macho nem fêmea; pois todos vós sois um só em união com Cristo Jesus." (Gál 3:28; At 10:34, 35; Ro 10:12; Ef 2:11-16) E ao passo que o pacto da Lei, mediado por Moisés e sob o qual a congregação de Israel era regulamentada, foi cumprido por Cristo e foi tirado do caminho por Jeová Deus (Mt 5:17; 2Co 3:14; Col 2:13, 14), os membros da congregação cristã de Deus participam dos benefícios do novo pacto mediado pelo Moisés Maior, Jesus Cristo. (Mt 26:28; He 12:22-24; At 3:19-23) Também, ao passo que os sacerdotes e os reis de Israel eram ungidos com óleo (Êx 30:22-30; 2Rs 9:6), os escolhidos por Deus para ser membros da congregação cristã são ungidos com espírito santo (2Co 1:21, 22; 1Jo 2:20) e são adotados por Jeová Deus como seus filhos. — Ef 1:5.

A congregação hebraica compunha-se basicamente de israelitas naturais. Os que constituem a ungida congregação cristã de Deus são israelitas espirituais, formando as tribos do Israel espiritual. (Re 7:4-8) Visto que a maioria dos israelitas naturais rejeitou a Jesus Cristo, "nem todos os que procedem de Israel são realmente 'Israel' ", quer dizer, Israel espiritual. (Ro 9:6-9) E a respeito da congregação cristã de Deus, composta de judeus espirituais, Paulo declarou: "Não é judeu aquele que o é por fora, nem é circuncisão aquela que a é por fora, na carne. Mas judeu é aquele que o é no íntimo, e a sua circuncisão é a do coração, por espírito." — Ro 2:28, 29.

Usualmente, quando as Escrituras Gregas Cristãs mencionam "a congregação" em sentido geral, a referência é aos 144.000 membros dela, os seguidores ungidos de Cristo, não incluindo o próprio Jesus. (Ef 5:32; He 12:23, 24) Todavia, a inspirada aplicação a Jesus Cristo, das palavras de Davi registradas no Salmo 22:22, feita em Hebreus 2:12, mostra que o termo "congregação" pode ser aplicado para incluir a própria cabeça dela, Jesus Cristo. Citando parcialmente Davi, o escritor aos hebreus declarou: "Porque tanto aquele que santifica como os que estão sendo santificados provêm todos de um só, e por esta causa ele [Jesus Cristo] não se envergonha de chamá-los 'irmãos', dizendo: 'Declararei o teu nome a meus irmãos; no meio da congregação louvar-te-ei com cântico.' " (He 2:11, 12) Igual a Davi, que era membro da congregação de Israel, no meio da qual louvava a Jeová, Jesus Cristo, neste caso, pode ser encarado como parte da congregação espiritual, os outros nela sendo chamados de seus "irmãos". (Veja Mt 25:39, 40.) Davi pertencia à congregação israelita de Jeová Deus, e também Jesus Cristo era membro dela enquanto na terra, pregando no meio dos seus membros. Um restante daquela congregação tornou-se parte da congregação de Jesus.

Organização da Congregação Cristã. Embora se estabelecessem congregações cristãs de Deus em diversos lugares, elas não funcionavam de modo independente uma da outra. Antes, todas reconheciam a autoridade do corpo governante cristão em Jerusalém. Este corpo governante compunha-se dos apóstolos e anciãos da congregação de Jerusalém, não havendo nenhum corpo rival em outra parte que procurasse supervisionar a congregação. Foi ao fiel corpo governante cristão do primeiro século EC que se apresentou a questão da circuncisão para consideração. Quando o corpo governante tomou a sua decisão, conforme dirigido pelo espírito santo, esta decisão foi aceita e tornou-se obrigatória para todas as congregações cristãs, as quais se sujeitaram voluntariamente a ela. — At 15:22-31.

O corpo governante cristão, em Jerusalém, enviava representantes viajantes. Assim, Paulo e outros entregaram a decisão do corpo governante, que acabamos de mencionar, declarando-se: "Ora, enquanto viajavam através das cidades, entregavam aos que estavam ali, para a sua observância, os decretos decididos pelos apóstolos e anciãos, que estavam em Jerusalém." Diz-se sobre o efeito produzido: "Portanto, as congregações continuavam deveras a ser firmadas na fé e a aumentar em número, dia a dia." (At 16:4, 5) Anteriormente, quando os apóstolos em Jerusalém "ouviram que Samaria havia aceito a palavra de Deus, mandaram-lhes Pedro e João; e estes desceram e oraram para que recebessem espírito santo". — At 8:14, 15.

As congregações individuais aderiam de perto à direção do corpo governante cristão, o qual supervisionava a designação de anciãos. (Tit 1:1, 5) Era assim, conforme dirigidos pelo corpo governante cristão, sob a influência do espírito santo, que se designavam superintendentes, bem como ajudantes, servos ministeriais, para cada congregação. Os homens colocados nestes cargos de confiança e responsabilidade tinham de satisfazer qualificações específicas. (1Ti 3:1-13; Tit 1:5-9) Representantes viajantes do corpo governante, tais como Paulo, seguiam a Cristo e davam um excelente exemplo a ser imitado. (1Co 11:1; Fil 4:9) De fato, todos os que ocupavam posição de pastores espirituais deviam tornar-se "exemplos para o rebanho" (1Pe 5:2, 3), mostrar amorosa preocupação com as pessoas dentro da congregação (1Te 2:5-12) e ser de real ajuda aos espiritualmente doentes. — Gál 6:1; Tg 5:13-16; veja ANCIÃO; MINISTRO; SUPERINTENDENTE.

Portanto, assim como Jeová organizou a congregação de Israel sob anciãos, cabeças, juízes e oficiais (Jos 23:2), assim Ele cuidou da supervisão da congregação cristã, por fazer com que se designassem anciãos para cargos de confiança nela. (At 14:23) E, assim como homens de responsabilidade às vezes atuavam de modo representativo pela inteira congregação de Israel, como em casos judiciais (De 16:18), Deus providenciou que cada congregação cristã individual fosse similarmente representada em tais assuntos por homens de responsabilidade, colocados em cargos de autoridade pelo espírito santo. (At 20:28; 1Co 5:1-5) No entanto, se surgissem dificuldades entre membros da congregação cristã de Deus, as palavras de Jesus Cristo registradas em Mateus 18:15-17 (proferidas antes de a congregação judaica de Deus ter sido rejeitada por Jeová, e assim inicialmente aplicáveis a ela) serviriam de base para resolver tais problemas.

Jeová Deus tem posto os membros no "corpo" espiritual de Cristo "assim como lhe agradou". E Paulo declarou: "Deus tem colocado os respectivos na congregação, primeiro apóstolos; segundo profetas; terceiro instrutores; depois obras poderosas; depois dons de curar; serviços prestimosos, capacidades de dirigir, línguas diferentes." Nem todos realizavam as mesmas funções, mas todos eram necessários para a congregação cristã. (1Co 12:12-31) Paulo explicou que a provisão de apóstolos, profetas, evangelizadores, pastores e instrutores para a congregação cristã estava "visando o reajustamento dos santos para a obra ministerial, para a edificação do corpo do Cristo, até que todos alcancemos a unidade na fé e no conhecimento exato do Filho de Deus, como homem plenamente desenvolvido, à medida da estatura que pertence à plenitude do Cristo". — Ef 4:11-16.

Proveram-se à congregação de Israel as leis de Deus e ela chegou a reconhecer que "o homem não vive somente de pão, mas que o homem vive de toda expressão da boca de Jeová". (De 8:1-3) Também Jesus Cristo reconheceu que o homem não pode viver só de pão, "mas de cada pronunciação procedente da boca de Jeová". (Mt 4:1-4) Portanto, fez-se provisão adequada para que a congregação cristã tivesse o necessário alimento espiritual, o próprio Cristo mencionando o "escravo" por meio de quem esse alimento seria servido aos "domésticos" cristãos. Jesus, como parte da sua profecia sobre a sua própria presença e a "terminação do sistema de coisas", mostrou que, ao chegar, o "amo" designaria este "escravo fiel e discreto" "sobre todos os seus bens". — Mt 24:3, 45-47.

As reuniões para a adoração de Jeová e a consideração da sua lei eram importantes na congregação de Israel. (De 31:12; Ne 8:1-8) De modo similar, as reuniões para a adoração de Jeová e o estudo das Escrituras são um aspecto essencial da congregação cristã de Deus, sendo que o escritor da carta aos hebreus admoestou os destinatários da sua carta a não deixarem de se ajuntar assim. (He 10:24, 25) As atividades nas sinagogas da posterior história judaica incluíam a leitura e o ensino das Escrituras, o proferimento de orações e a apresentação de louvor a Deus. Esses aspectos passaram a ser adotados em lugares de reunião cristã, embora sem os acréscimos ritualistas que com o tempo se desenvolveram nos serviços na sinagoga. Na sinagoga não se distinguia nenhuma classe sacerdotal, estando a participação na leitura e na explanação das Escrituras franqueada a qualquer varão judeu devoto. De modo comparável, não existia nenhuma divisão entre clérigos e leigos, ou algo similar, na primitiva congregação cristã. Naturalmente, nem nela, nem na sinagoga, as mulheres ensinavam ou exerciam autoridade sobre os homens. — 1Ti 2:11, 12.

A manutenção da devida ordem nas reuniões da congregação cristã de Deus harmonizava-se com o fato de que Jeová, que fez a provisão do arranjo congregacional entre os seguidores de Cristo, "não é Deus de desordem, mas de paz". Este arranjo ordeiro resultou também em grandes benefícios espirituais para todos os presentes. — 1Co 14:26-35, 40; veja ASSEMBLEIA.

CONGRESSO. Ajuntamento ou reunião de pessoas para um fim específico; uma assembleia. Nas Escrituras, o termo "congresso" é a tradução da palavra hebraica miq·rá', que significa o ato de "reunir", ou "ajuntar; convocar". Uma tradução alternativa desta palavra hebraica é "convocação". Confirmando o sentido básico, há o uso dela em Números 10:2, que transmite a ideia de convocar a assembleia de Israel. — Veja Is 1:13 n.

Os "santos congressos" foram programados do seguinte modo: (1) Todo sábado (Le 23:3); (2) o primeiro e o sétimo dia da Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados, durante nisã, o primeiro mês (março-abril) (Núm 28:18, 25; Le 23:6-8); (3) A Festividade das Semanas ou Festividade da Colheita, mais tarde conhecida por Pentecostes, realizada no terceiro mês, sivã (maio-junho) (Le 23:15-21); (4) o primeiro e o décimo dia do sétimo mês, etanim ou tisri (setembro-outubro), sendo este último dia o Dia da Expiação (Le 23:23-27; Núm 29:1, 7); (5) o primeiro dia da Festividade das Barracas, que começava no 15.º dia do sétimo mês, etanim ou tisri, também o dia depois desta festividade de sete dias. — Le 23:33-36.

Uma particularidade única de todos estes "santos congressos" era que durante eles o povo não devia fazer nenhum trabalho laborioso. Por exemplo, o primeiro e o sétimo dia da Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados eram "santos congressos", a respeito dos quais Jeová declarara: "Não se deve fazer nenhuma obra neles. Somente o que cada alma necessitar para comer, só isto pode ser feito para vós." (Êx 12:15, 16) No entanto, durante os "santos congressos", os sacerdotes estavam atarefados em oferecer sacrifícios a Jeová (Le 23:37, 38), o que certamente não era nenhuma violação da ordem contra se fazer o trabalho cotidiano normal. Essas ocasiões tampouco eram períodos de ociosidade para o povo em geral, mas eram tempos de grandes benefícios espirituais. No sábado semanal, o povo se reunia para adoração e instrução públicas. Era assim edificado pela leitura e explicação públicas da Palavra escrita de Deus, assim como se fazia nas sinagogas posteriores. (At 15:21) Portanto, embora o povo não fizesse nenhum trabalho laborioso no sábado ou nos outros "santos congressos", devotava-se então à oração e à meditação sobre o Criador e seus propósitos. — Veja ASSEMBLEIA.

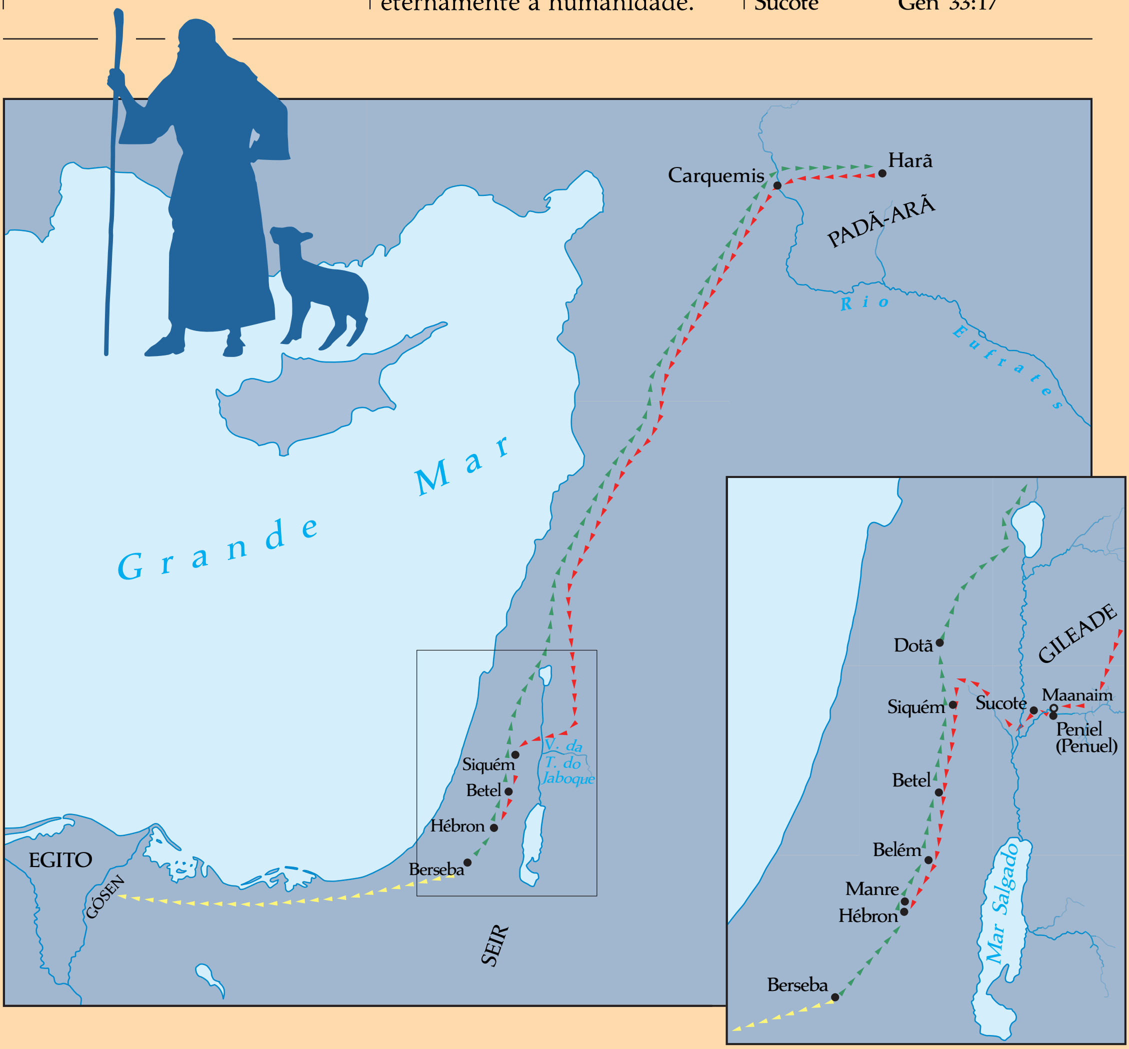
Eventos na Vida de Jacó

JACÓ foi favorecido por Deus porque demonstrou profundo apreço pelas coisas sagradas. (He 12:16, 17) Jeová assegurou a Jacó que a descendência dele herdaria a terra prometida a Abraão, e acrescentou: "Todas as famílias do solo hão de abençoar a si mesmas . . . por meio de tua descendência." — Gên 28:4, 10-15.

Embora Jacó fosse abençoado com riqueza material e com 12 filhos, a vida dele não era sem dificuldades. Todavia, Jacó nunca perdeu sua fé em Jeová e na confiabilidade da Sua palavra. Mesmo no seu leito de morte, expressou fé na promessa messiânica. (Gên 49:10) Dentre os descendentes de Jacó nasceu Jesus Cristo, por meio de quem Deus abençoará eternamente a humanidade.

LUGARES NO MAPA
Com Textos Relacionados

Lugar	Textos
Belém	Gên 35:16-20
Berseba	Gên 28:10
Betel	Gên 28:11-19; 35:6-15
Dotã	Gên 37:13, 17-36
Egito	Gên 46:5-7, 28-30; 48:1–49:33
Harã	Gên 29:4–31:18
Maanaim	Gên 32:1, 2
Manre	Gên 35:27
Penuel	Gên 32:24-32
Siquém	Gên 33:18–34:31
Sucote	Gên 33:17



Ruínas da antiga Siquém. Ali, a associação da filha de Jacó com moças cananeias levou a ser ela violentada. (Gên 34:1, 2)

Beitin, perto das ruínas da antiga Betel. Em Betel, Deus disse duas vezes a Jacó que ele era herdeiro do pacto abraâmico. (Gên 28:13-19; 35:6-13)

Pirâmide dos Degraus em Sacara, no Egito; ela evidentemente existia nos dias de Jacó. Jacó passou os últimos 17 anos da sua vida no Egito.

O Antigo Egito

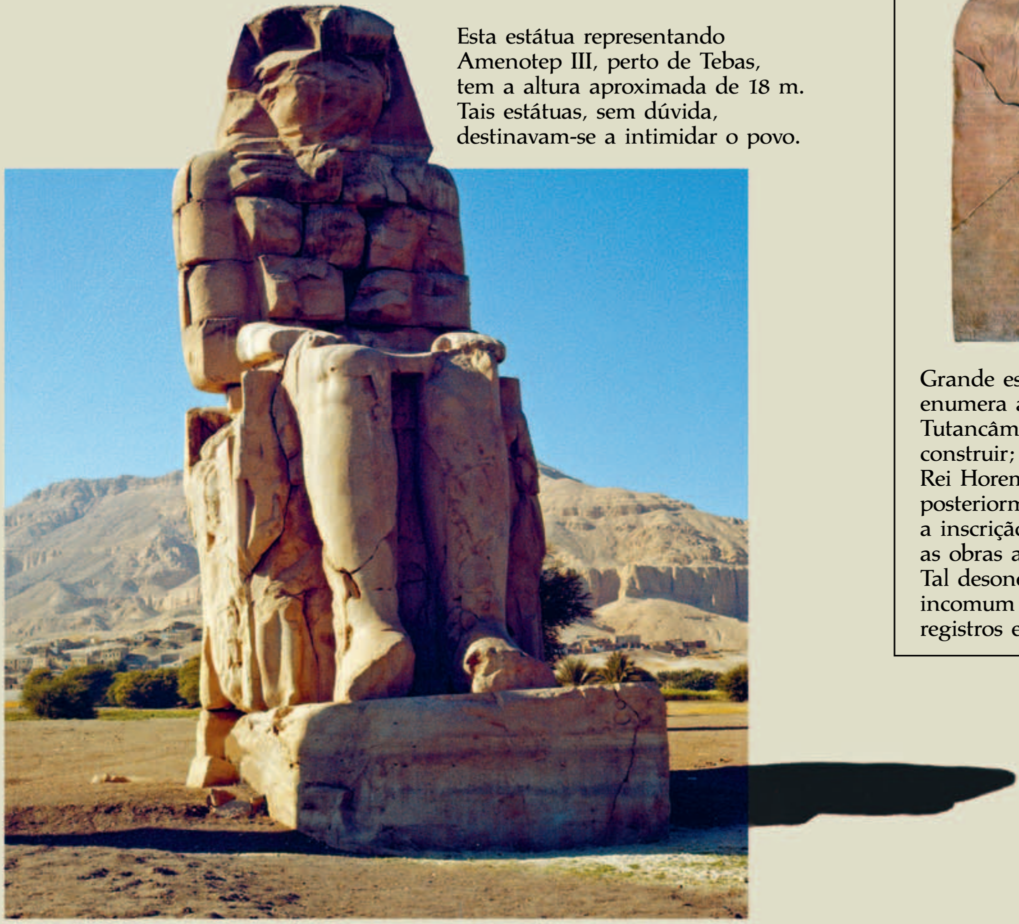
EM VISTA do repetido contato de Israel com o Egito, a Bíblia contém muitos pormenores a respeito desta terra. O próprio nome de Jeová foi maravilhosamente magnificado por acontecimentos ocorridos no Egito.

O Egito era uma terra em que se adoravam muitos deuses. Certos animais eram encarados como deuses; outros eram considerados como sagrados para deuses egípcios específicos. É de admirar que Moisés dissesse que, se Israel oferecesse a Jeová sacrifícios de animais no Egito, isso resultaria em violência pela mão do povo? (Êx 8:26) Podemos também compreender por que, quando o coração de Israel, no ermo, se voltou para o Egito, os israelitas usaram a estátua fundida dum bezerro no que chamaram de "festividade para Jeová". — Êx 32:1-5.

Outro aspecto destacado da adoração egípcia era a crença na vida após a morte. Esta crença se manifestava na prática do embalsamamento dos mortos e na construção de enormes túmulos em honra deles.

Apesar de Moisés ter sido "instruído em toda a sabedoria dos egípcios", os mandamentos a respeito da adoração de Jeová, registrados por ele, de modo algum foram manchados pelas crenças egípcias. (At 7:22) O que ele escreveu não era de origem humana, mas fora inspirado por Deus.

Esta estátua representando Amenotep III, perto de Tebas, tem a altura aproximada de 18 m. Tais estátuas, sem dúvida, destinavam-se a intimidar o povo.



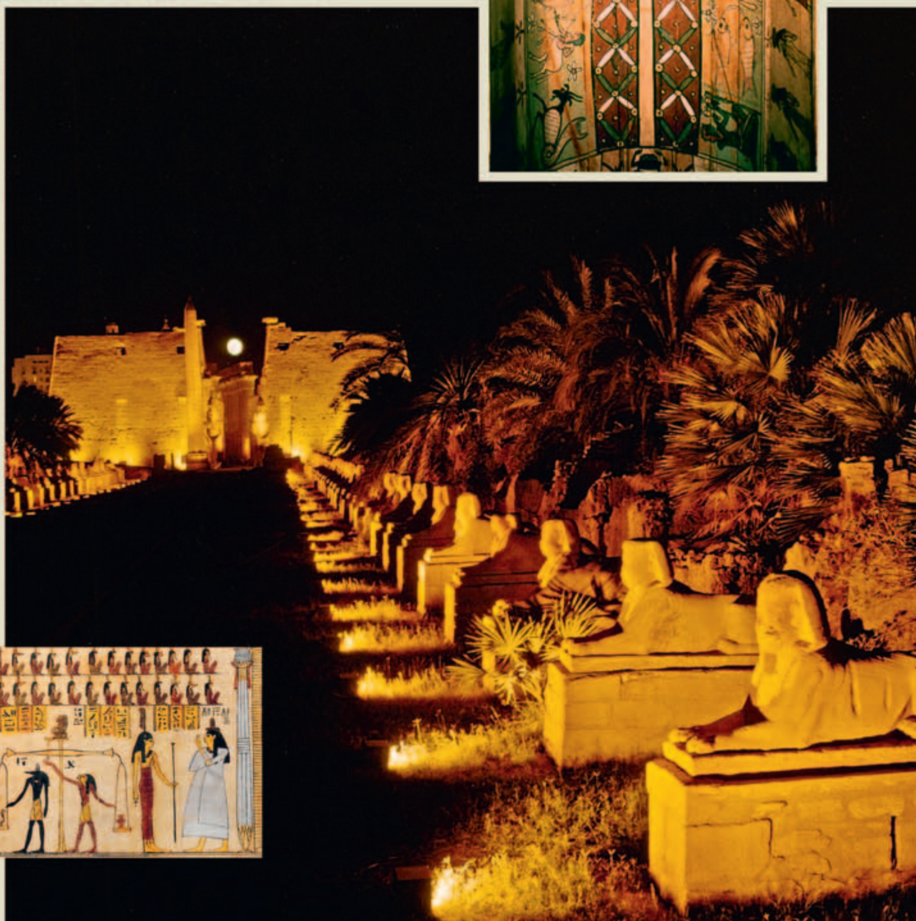
Grande estela que enumera as obras que Tutancâmen mandou construir; mas o Rei Horemheb mandou posteriormente alterar a inscrição para atribuir as obras a si mesmo. Tal desonestidade não é incomum nos antigos registros egípcios.

Uma tríade, mostrando Ramsés II entre o deus Amon e a deusa Mut. Faraó era encarado como deus, o Hórus vivo.

O Faraó Taarca curvando-se diante de Hórus, cuja encarnação professava ser. Os animais tinham destaque na religião do Egito.

Abaixo: As impressionantes colunas de templo em Lúxor.
Abaixo, à direita: Uma avenida de esfinges levando ao templo de Amon-Rá, em Lúxor.

A deusa do céu, Nut, cercada pelos signos do zodíaco. A astrologia, originária de Babilônia, tornou-se elemento da religião egípcia.



Uma parte do "Livro dos Mortos" (abaixo), colocado junto a uma múmia; ele continha encantamentos escritos, destinados a ser recitados pelo falecido para a sua proteção e para guiá-lo no julgamento na vida após a morte.

O Egito dependia do estreito vale fértil ao longo do rio Nilo. (Esta região fértil está em verde no mapa da página 531.) No fundo pode-se ver a mudança abrupta de vegetação para deserto.

Um faraó no seu carro. Tais carros faziam parte do equipamento militar do Egito e até mesmo eram vendidos a outras nações.

Nas paredes do templo de Amon-Rá em Karnak, Seti I registrou seus triunfos militares; mostram-se cativos agarrados pelo cabelo. Conforme é de esperar, as vitórias eram orgulhosamente registradas em monumentos egípcios.

OS EVENTOS durante o período de mais de dois séculos em que os antepassados da nação de Israel estavam no Egito constituem uma parte importante do registro bíblico.

José, filho de Jacó, foi vendido como escravo e levado ao Egito. (Gên 37:28, 36) Alguns anos mais tarde, por motivo duma intervenção divina, ele veio à atenção do Faraó, e, como administrador de alimentos, recebeu autoridade secundária apenas à do próprio Faraó. (Gên 41:38-45) Mas, com o tempo, ascendeu no Egito um novo rei que não respeitou a lembrança de José e que impôs uma escravidão tirânica aos descendentes de Jacó (Israel). (Êx 1:8-14) A história egípcia, secular, omite completamente tudo isso, inclusive a posição destacada de José. Deve isso surpreender?

Esta falta de qualquer menção do destaque de José e da servidão de Israel não surpreende os familiarizados com os registros inscritos nos monumentos do antigo Egito. Era comum governantes ou escribas religiosos posteriores removerem nomes inscritos em monumentos anteriores, ou por considerá-los indesejáveis, ou para aumentar sua própria proeminência. Por exemplo, o Rei Horemheb alterou inscrições, a fim de atribuir a si mesmo as construções feitas por Tutancâmen. (FOTO, Vol. 1, p. 532) O Museu do Cairo, no Egito, e o Instituto Oriental na Universidade de Chicago (EUA) contêm numerosos exemplos de tal desonestidade.

Em contraste com isso, o registro bíblico fornece todos os indícios de autenticidade. É bem pouco provável que alguma nação afirmasse que sua origem remontava a escravos num país estrangeiro, se não fosse verdade. O relato bíblico a respeito destes eventos contém uma abundância de pormenores sobre a vida egípcia, que só poderiam ter sido transmitidos por alguém que viveu ali. Além disso, a Páscoa é anualmente celebrada pelos judeus até o dia de hoje, celebração que a Bíblia relata como tendo início enquanto os antepassados deles estavam no Egito, e em resultado do que ocorrera ali. Qualquer afirmação de que o verdadeiro relato sobre estes assuntos desapareceu e que o único registro em existência é falso é contrário a toda a razão.

Tijolos secados ao sol, feitos com palha, no Egito, assim como no tempo da escravidão de Israel ali. (Êx 1:14; 5:7)

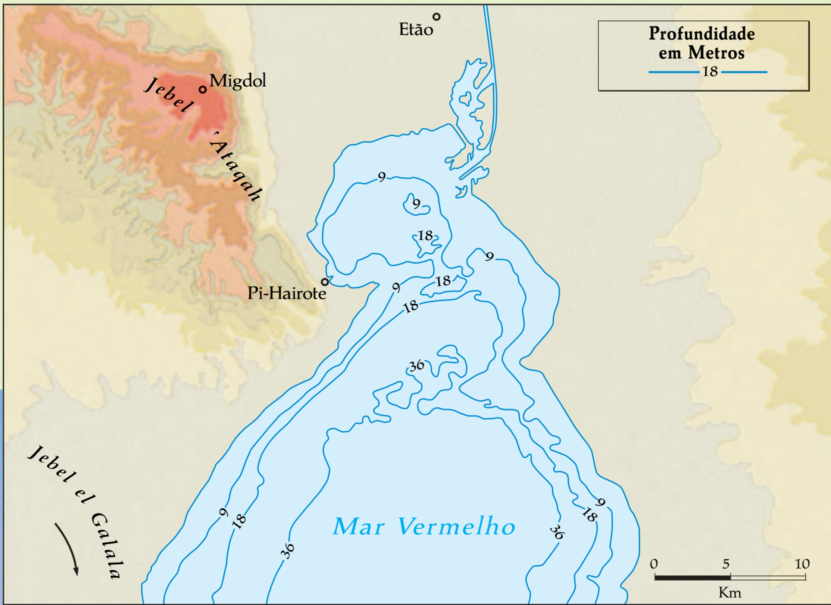
O Êxodo do Egito

JEOVÁ determinou que Moisés comparecesse perante Faraó, e, falando em nome de Jeová, dissesse: "Manda embora meu povo." (Êx 5:1) Faraó negou-se a isso. Não queria perder uma nação de escravos. Além disso, Faraó não conhecia ou não reconhecia a Jeová como o verdadeiro Deus. (Êx 5:2) Faraó adorava os deuses do Egito e até considerava a si mesmo um deus! Assim se levantou a questão: Quem é o verdadeiro Deus? Jeová, por meio de dez pragas, executou julgamento "em todos os deuses do Egito", o que resultou na libertação de Israel e forneceu evidência de que Jeová é o Deus vivo e verdadeiro. — Êx 12:12.

Israel, como grupo, partiu de Ramessés, no Egito, em 15 de nisã de 1513 AEC. Ao passo que a multidão avançava para o leste, sem dúvida se juntaram a ela outros de Gósen. Depois de chegarem a Etão, Jeová ordenou que 'voltassem e se acampassem diante de Pi-Hairote junto ao mar'. Aos egípcios parecia que o povo se havia perdido. (Êx 13:20; 14:1-3) Parecia estar encurralado entre o Mar Vermelho e as montanhas. Tendo atrás de si os carros de guerra do Egito, não parecia haver saída! Foi nestas circunstâncias que Jeová libertou Israel, e destruiu Faraó e seu exército. (Êx 14:13-31) Jeová demonstrou assim seu grande poder e causou que se falasse "em toda a terra" daquilo que fez por Israel. — Êx 9:16; Jos 2:10; 9:9.

LUGARES NO MAPA
Com Textos Relacionados

Etão	Êx 13:20; Núm 33:6
Gósen	Gên 47:27; Êx 8:22
Mar Vermelho	Êx 14:9, 16, 21-30
Mênfis (?)	Êx 12:30-32
Migdol	Êx 14:2; Núm 33:7
Pi-Hairote	Êx 14:2, 9
Ramessés	Êx 12:37
Sucote	Êx 12:37; 13:20

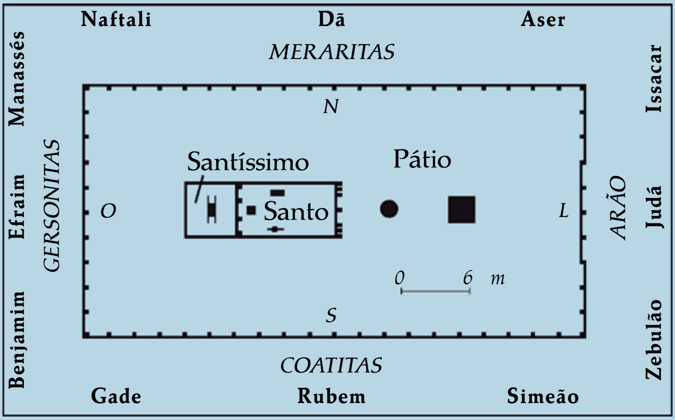


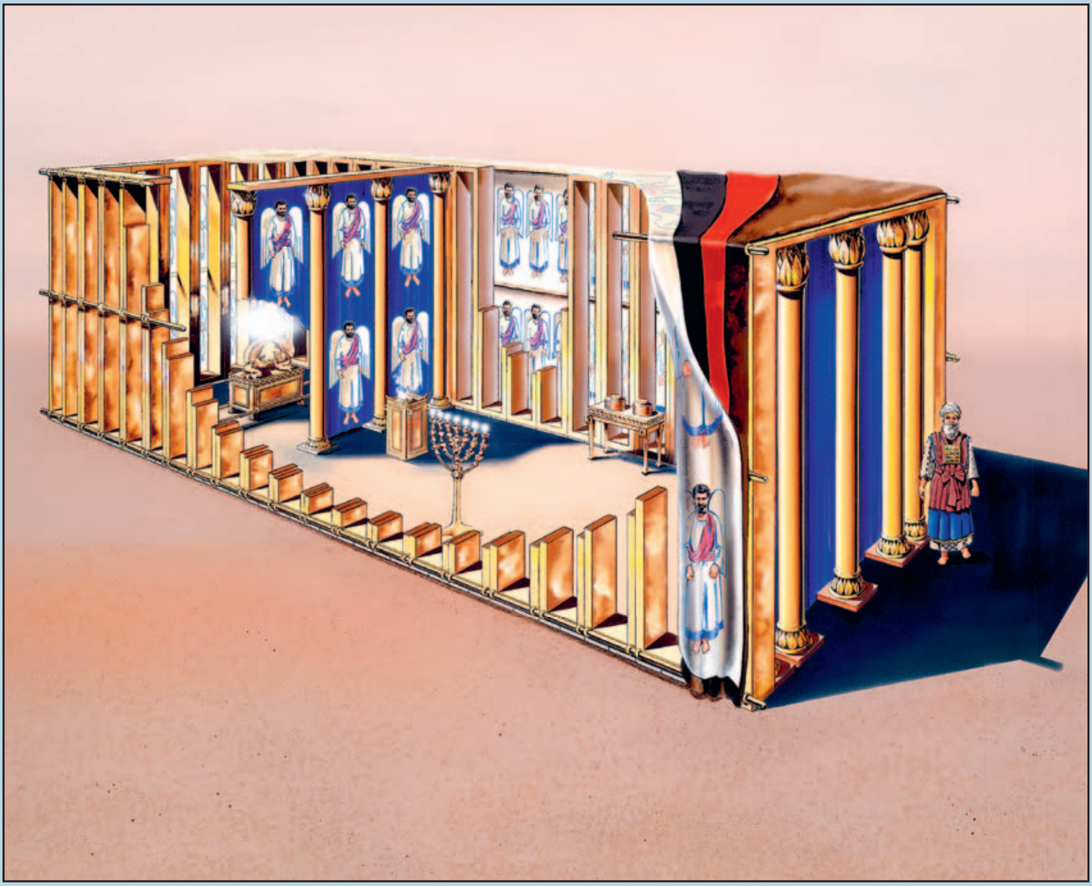
Atual topografia do leito do Mar Vermelho onde Israel evidentemente o atravessou. Fizeram-se algumas dragagens para aprofundar o canal, mas o leito do mar desce gradualmente em ambas as margens. De margem a margem, a distância é de cerca de 10 km.

Vista do Mar Vermelho no provável lugar em que Jeová dividiu as águas para que Israel pudesse atravessá-lo em terra seca.

O Tabernáculo

ÀS ORDENS de Jeová, o tabernáculo foi pela primeira vez erigido em 1512 AEC, no ermo junto ao monte Sinai. Era para Israel o centro da verdadeira adoração; encontrava-se também no centro do acampamento israelita. O apóstolo Paulo explica que o tabernáculo era uma ilustração profética “da tenda maior e mais perfeita”, o grandioso lugar de adoração de Deus. — He 9:9, 11.

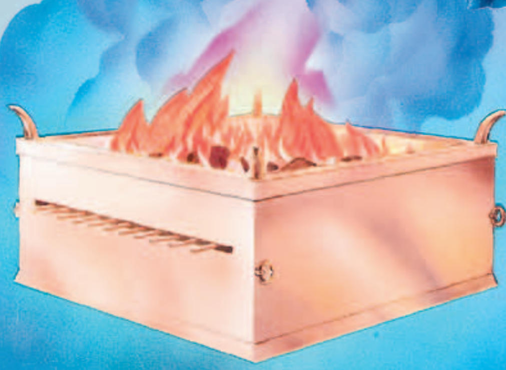




O sumo sacerdote prefigurava Jesus Cristo. (He 4:14; 9:11)

O sumo sacerdote aspergia o sangue dos sacrifícios de animais diante da Arca do Pacto. Isto prefigurava apresentar Jesus o valor de seu perfeito sacrifício humano no céu, na presença de Deus. (He 9:13, 14, 24)

Os sacrifícios de animais, ordenados por Deus, apontavam para a morte sacrificial de Jesus Cristo como resgate para a humanidade. (Mt 20:28; He 10:5-10)



As Peregrinações de Israel no Ermo

DEPOIS da sua libertação do Egito, Israel peregrinou por 40 anos no Sinai, na maior parte do tempo bem afastado das movimentadas rotas comerciais. Era um "grande e atemorizante ermo de serpentes venenosas e de escorpiões, e de terra sedenta sem água". (De 8:15) Por que tiveram de passar por tal experiência penosa?

Junto ao monte Sinai (no provável lugar mostrado abaixo), Jeová reuniu os israelitas após a partida deles do Egito, deu-lhes as suas leis por meio de Moisés e organizou-os numa nação. A seguir, dentro de pouco tempo, poderiam ter entrado na Terra da Promessa, mas não o fizeram. Por que não? Apesar de tudo o que Jeová fizera por eles, deixaram de exercer fé e se rebelaram contra Moisés, a quem Deus designara para guiá-los. Preferindo crer num relato mau sobre Canaã, os israelitas ansiavam ser levados de volta ao Egito! (Núm 14:1-4) Isto trouxe o pronto julgamento de Jeová: Passar-se-iam quarenta anos antes de a nação entrar na Terra da Promessa. Naquele tempo, os membros sem fé daquela geração já teriam morrido.

O que se passou com Israel no ermo é um forte aviso para os atuais cristãos, no sentido de evitarem o laço da falta de fé. — He 3:7-12.

Grande Mar
Rio Jordão
Planícies de Moabe
Mte. Nebo
Almom-Diblataim
Mar Salgado
Díbon (Díbon-Gade)
Arade
Ermo de Zim
Caminho para a terra dos filisteus
Ijé-Abarim
Mte. Hor
Zalmona
Bene-Jaacã
Punom
Cades
Caminho para Sur
Estrada Real
Ermo de Etão
Ermo de Parã
Hor-Hagidgade
Rissa
Jotbata
Rota El Haj
Abrona
Eziom-Géber
Rimom-Peres
Mara
Elim
Ermo de Zim
Dofca
Hazerote
Quibrote-Ataavá
Refidim
Mte. Sinai
Mar Vermelho
Rota Seguida pelos Israelitas
Principais Rotas Comerciais
0 20 40 50
Km
OS PRINCIPAIS LUGARES
Com Textos Relacionados
Cades Núm 12:16–14:35; 20:1-21
Ermo de Sim Êx 16:1-36
Hazerote Núm 12:1-16
Mara Êx 15:23-26
Monte Hor Núm 20:22-29; 33:37-39
Monte Nebo De 34:1-4
Monte Sinai Êx 18:5–40:38; Le 1:1–27:34; Núm 1:1–10:32
Planícies de Moabe Núm 22:1–36:13; De 1:1–33:29
Quibrote-Ataavá Núm 11:4-34
Refidim Êx 17:1-16

Os oásis eram poucos e distantes um do outro nesta terra descrita como "sem água".

Era um "grande e atemorizante ermo" no qual Israel peregrinou por 40 anos.

A cabeceira do golfo de Acaba. Os israelitas acamparam aqui perto do fim dos seus 40 anos no deserto.

Plantas da Bíblia

OLIVEIRAS, amendoeiras, alcaparreiras, tamareiras — estas são apenas algumas das quase cem plantas e árvores mencionadas nas Escrituras Sagradas. Sabermos algo a respeito destas plantas da Bíblia fornece-nos uma base útil, lançando luz sobre o sentido de certas declarações bíblicas.

Tome, por exemplo, a oliveira — uma das mais valiosas plantas nos tempos bíblicos (veja a ilustração à direita). Esta bela árvore, amiúde retorcida, nodosa e calosa, é bastante resistente, frequentemente vivendo por séculos. Ela é mencionada logo cedo nas Escrituras. Após o Dilúvio, uma pomba retornou a Noé na arca, "e eis que havia no seu bico uma folha de oliveira, recém-arrancada". Isto indicou a Noé que as águas do Dilúvio haviam retrocedido. — Gên 8:11.

O salmista bíblico aludiu a algumas das características da oliveira ao prometer àqueles que temem a Jeová: "Teus filhos serão como mudas de oliveiras ao redor da tua mesa." (Sal 128:1-3) Mudas cortadas duma oliveira crescida muitas vezes são usadas para plantar novas árvores. Além disso, nas oliveiras velhas talvez brotem rebentos das suas raízes, perpetuando-se elas assim a si mesmas. Os filhos, semelhantes a tais rebentos, rodeariam o pai, contribuindo a sua parte para a felicidade da família.

A sempre-verde oliveira era especialmente apreciada pelo seu óleo. O azeite de oliva constituía um alimento básico da comida israelita, e era amplamente usado como cosmético e como combustível, e era uma mercadoria importante. Costumava ser aplicado a machucaduras e feridas para suavizá-las e mitigá-las. (Lu 10:33, 34) Aplicado na cabeça, o azeite é igualmente calmante e refrescante. Neste respeito, admoesta-se os anciãos da congregação cristã a orar por alguém espiritualmente doente, de modo figurativo "untando-o com óleo em nome de Jeová" — aplicando a Palavra de Deus para acalmar, corrigir e consolar a pessoa. — Tg 5:13-15.

Malva

Cominho-Preto (Nigela)

Flor de Alcaparra

A amendoeira é uma das primeiras árvores frutíferas a florescer em Israel. Suas amêndoas são uma iguaria apreciada.

A mandrágora, da família da batata, tem um fruto amarelo aproximadamente do tamanho duma ameixa.

A sulamita comparou os cachos de cabelo de seu amado pastor a cachos de tâmaras.

O papiro, uma alta planta aquática da qual se fabricava papel.

Uma das muitas variedades de bálsamo, que produz um óleo aromático.

Linho, a planta usada para fazer o tecido de linho.

CONHECIMENTO. Essencialmente, conhecimento significa a familiaridade com fatos colhidos por experiência pessoal, observação ou estudo. A Bíblia insta fortemente que se busque e entesoure o conhecimento correto, recomendando este em vez de o ouro. (Pr 8:10; 20:15) Jesus enfatizou a importância de se realmente conhecer a ele e seu Pai, e o conhecimento é repetidamente salientado nos livros das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. — Jo 17:3; Fil 1:9; 2Pe 3:18.

Fonte do Conhecimento. Jeová é realmente a Fonte básica do conhecimento. A vida, naturalmente, procede dele, e a vida é essencial para que se tenha algum conhecimento. (Sal 36:9; At 17:25, 28) Além disso, Deus criou todas as coisas, de modo que o conhecimento humano se baseia num estudo da obra de Deus. (Re 4:11; Sal 19:1, 2) Deus inspirou também a sua Palavra escrita, da qual o homem pode aprender a vontade e os propósitos divinos. (2Ti 3:16, 17) De modo que o ponto focal de todo o verdadeiro conhecimento é Jeová, e aquele que o busca deve ter um temor de Deus, que o torne cuidadoso para não incorrer no desagrado de Jeová. Tal temor é o princípio do conhecimento. (Pr 1:7) Esse temor piedoso coloca a pessoa em condições de obter conhecimento exato, ao passo que aqueles que não tomam a Deus em consideração prontamente tiram conclusões erradas das coisas que observam.

A Bíblia repetidas vezes vincula Jeová e o conhecimento, chamando-o de "Deus de conhecimento" e descrevendo-o como "perfeito em conhecimento". — 1Sa 2:3; Jó 36:4; 37:14, 16.

O papel que Jeová designou ao seu Filho na realização dos Seus propósitos é de tal importância, que se pode dizer de Jesus: "Cuidadosamente ocultos nele se acham todos os tesouros da sabedoria e do conhecimento." (Col 2:3) A menos que se exerça fé em Jesus Cristo como o Filho de Deus, não se pode compreender o sentido real das Escrituras, nem ver como os propósitos de Deus se cumprem em harmonia com o que Ele predisse.

Para reconhecer mais plenamente o significado e a importância do conhecimento, é de ajuda examinar as palavras hebraicas e gregas frequentemente traduzidas por "conhecimento", bem como notar a relação entre o conhecimento e a sabedoria, o entendimento, o raciocínio e o discernimento.

Significado do Termo. Nas Escrituras Hebraicas, diversas palavras (substantivos) que podem ser traduzidas por "conhecimento" são aparentadas com o verbo básico ya·dháʽ, que significa "conhecer [ou: saber] (por ser informado)", "conhecer (por observar)", "conhecer (por estar a par ou por experiência pessoal)" ou "ser experiente, perito". A nuança exata do significado, e muitas vezes a maneira em que cada palavra deve ser traduzida, têm de ser deduzidas do contexto. Por exemplo, Deus disse que ele 'conhecia' Abraão e assim tinha certeza de que esse homem de fé daria ordens corretas à sua descendência. Jeová não disse simplesmente que se apercebia da existência de Abraão, mas, antes, que Ele se familiarizara bem com Abraão, por ter observado por muitos anos a obediência de Abraão e seu interesse na verdadeira adoração. — Gên 18:19, NM, Al; Gên 22:12; veja JEOVÁ (Emprego Inicial do Nome e Seu Significado).

Assim como se dá com o verbo ya·dháʽ (conhecer), a principal palavra hebraica traduzida por "conhecimento" (dá·ʽath) contém a ideia básica de conhecer fatos ou de ter informação, mas às vezes inclui mais do que isso. Por exemplo, Oseias 4:1, 6, diz que, em certa época, não havia "conhecimento de Deus" em Israel. Isto não significa que o povo não sabia que Jeová era Deus, e que ele libertara e guiara os israelitas no passado. (Os 8:2) Mas, pelo seu proceder de assassínio, furto e adultério, mostravam que rejeitavam o verdadeiro conhecimento, visto que não agiam em harmonia com ele. — Os 4:2.

Ya·dháʽ às vezes denota relações sexuais, como em Gênesis 4:17, onde algumas traduções a vertem literalmente por "conhecer" (Al; BJ; CBC; IBB), ao passo que outras dizem apropriadamente que Caim "coabitou" ou 'teve relações' com sua esposa. (ALA; AT; NM) O verbo grego gi·nó·sko é usado de modo similar em Mateus 1:25 e Lucas 1:34.

Depois que Adão e Eva comeram do fruto proibido (Gên 2:17; 3:5, 6), Jeová disse ao seu associado na obra criativa (Jo 1:1-3): "Eis que o homem se tem tornado como um de nós, sabendo o que é bom e o que é mau." (Gên 3:22) Isto evidentemente não significava apenas ter conhecimento do que era bom e do que era mau para eles, porque o primeiro homem e a primeira mulher tinham este conhecimento em razão das ordens que Deus lhes dera. Outrossim, as palavras de Deus em Gênesis 3:22 não se podem referir a passarem a saber então por experiência própria o que era mau, porque Jeová disse que se haviam tornado como ele, e ele não tinha aprendido o que é mau por praticá-lo. (Sal 92:14, 15) Evidentemente, Adão e Eva chegaram a saber o que era bom e o que era mau no sentido especial de então julgarem por si mesmos o que era bom e o que era mau. De forma idólatra, colocaram seu próprio critério acima do de Deus, desobedientemente estabelecendo como que a sua própria lei, em vez de obedecer a Jeová, que tem tanto o direito como a sabedoria necessários para determinar o que é bom e o que é mau. De modo que o conhecimento, ou padrão, independente deles quanto ao que era bom e o que era mau diferia do de Jeová. Antes, só lhes trouxe miséria. — Je 10:23.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs há duas palavras comumente traduzidas por "conhecimento", gnó·sis e e·pí·gno·sis. Ambas são aparentadas com o verbo gi·nó·sko, que significa "conhecer; saber; entender; perceber". O modo em que este verbo é usado na Bíblia, porém, mostra que pode indicar uma relação favorável entre a pessoa e aquele a quem "conhece". (1Co 8:3; 2Ti 2:19) O conhecimento (gnó·sis) é colocado numa luz bem favorável nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. No entanto, nem tudo aquilo que os homens possam chamar de "conhecimento" deve ser buscado, porque existem filosofias e conceitos que são um "falsamente chamado 'conhecimento' ". (1Ti 6:20) O conhecimento recomendado é sobre Deus e seus propósitos. (2Pe 1:5) Este envolve mais do que apenas conhecer os fatos, que muitos ateus conhecem; subentende uma devoção pessoal a Deus e a Cristo. (Jo 17:3; 6:68, 69) Ao passo que o conhecimento (apenas a informação) poderia produzir um sentimento de superioridade, nosso conhecimento do "amor do Cristo, que ultrapassa o conhecimento", isto é, conhecer este amor por experiência, porque pessoalmente imitamos os seus modos amorosos, equilibrará e dará direção sadia ao nosso uso de qualquer informação que tenhamos obtido. — Ef 3:19.

E·pí·gno·sis, uma forma reforçada de gnó·sis (e·pí significando "adicional"), muitas vezes pode ser entendida do contexto como significando "conhecimento preciso, exato ou pleno". De modo que Paulo escreveu a respeito de alguns que estavam aprendendo (obtendo conhecimento), "contudo, nunca podendo chegar a um conhecimento exato ["conhecimento real", TC; "conhecimento pessoal", Ro; "pleno conhecimento", IBB] da verdade". (2Ti 3:6, 7) Ele orou também para que os da congregação colossense, que obviamente tinham algum conhecimento da vontade de Deus, pois tornaram-se cristãos, ficassem "cheios do conhecimento exato da sua vontade, em toda a sabedoria e compreensão espiritual". (Col 1:9) Tal conhecimento exato deve ser buscado por todos os cristãos (Ef 1:15-17; Fil 1:9; 1Ti 2:3, 4), sendo importante para se revestirem da "nova personalidade" e obterem paz. — Col 3:10; 2Pe 1:2.

Atributos Relacionados. Frequentemente, na Bíblia, o conhecimento é relacionado com outros atributos, tais como sabedoria, entendimento, discernimento e raciocínio. (Pr 2:1-6, 10, 11) Compreender as diferenças básicas entre estas palavras ilumina grandemente muitos textos. Deve-se reconhecer, porém, que não se pode dizer que as palavras originais envolvidas tenham invariavelmente seu correspondente em certas palavras portuguesas. As circunstâncias e o uso da palavra afetam o sentido. Todavia, certas diferenças interessantes surgem quando se notam as referências bíblicas a conhecimento, sabedoria, entendimento, discernimento e raciocínio.

Sabedoria. A sabedoria é a habilidade de pôr o conhecimento em prática, ou de usá-lo, sendo a aplicação inteligente do que se aprendeu. Alguém talvez tenha considerável conhecimento, mas não sabe usá-lo, por lhe faltar sabedoria. Jesus relacionou a sabedoria com a consecução ao dizer: "A sabedoria é provada justa pelas suas obras." (Mt 11:19) Salomão pediu e recebeu de Deus não só conhecimento, mas também sabedoria. (2Cr 1:10; 1Rs 4:29-34) No caso de duas mulheres que reivindicavam a mesma criança, Salomão conhecia a devoção duma mãe ao filho; demonstrou sabedoria por usar seu conhecimento para resolver a disputa. (1Rs 3:16-28) "Sabedoria é a coisa principal", porque sem ela, o conhecimento é de pouco valor. (Pr 4:7; 15:2) Jeová abunda tanto em conhecimento como em sabedoria, e os provê. — Ro 11:33; Tg 1:5.

Entendimento (Compreensão). O entendimento (ou a compreensão) é a habilidade de ver como as partes ou os aspectos de determinada coisa se relacionam entre si, de ver o assunto inteiro e não apenas fatos isolados. O radical do verbo hebraico bin tem o sentido básico de "diferenciar" ou "distinguir", e frequentemente é traduzido por "entender" ou "discernir". Algo similar se dá com a palavra grega sy·ní·e·mi. Assim, em Atos 28:26 (citando Is 6:9, 10) poder-se-ia dizer que os judeus ouviram, mas não entenderam, ou não associaram as coisas. Não compreenderam como os pontos ou as ideias se ajustavam a fim de ter sentido para eles. Provérbios 9:10, ao dizer que "o conhecimento do Santíssimo é o que é entendimento", mostra que o verdadeiro entendimento de alguma coisa envolve o apreço da sua relação com Deus e dos propósitos dele. Visto que alguém com entendimento é capaz de relacionar novas informações com o que já sabe, pode-se dizer que "para o entendido o conhecimento é coisa fácil". (Pr 14:6) O conhecimento e o entendimento se aliam, e ambos devem ser buscados. — Pr 2:5; 18:15.

Discernimento. A palavra hebraica frequentemente traduzida por "discernimento" (tevu·náh) é aparentada com a palavra bi·náh, traduzida "entendimento" ou "compreensão". Ambas aparecem em Provérbios 2:3, que a Tradução do Novo Mundo verte: "Se . . . clamares pela própria compreensão e emitires a tua voz pelo próprio discernimento . . ." Como no caso da compreensão ou entendimento, o discernimento envolve ver ou reconhecer coisas, mas dá ênfase a se diferenciar as partes, pesando ou avaliando uma à luz das outras. Quem une o conhecimento com o discernimento controla aquilo que diz e é de espírito frio. (Pr 17:27) Quem se opõe a Jeová demonstra falta de discernimento. (Pr 21:30) Deus, por meio do seu Filho, dá discernimento (pleno entendimento ou perspicácia). — 2Ti 2:1, 7, NM, NE.

Raciocínio. O conhecimento relaciona-se também com o que às vezes é traduzido por "raciocínio" (hebr.: mezim·máh). A palavra hebraica pode ser usada em mau sentido (ideias, tramas, ardis maldosos) ou em sentido favorável (argúcia, sagacidade). (Sal 10:2; Pr 1:4) Assim, a mente e os pensamentos podem ser orientados para um fim admirável, reto, ou exatamente para o contrário. Por se prestar detida atenção a como Jeová faz as coisas e por se inclinar os ouvidos a todos os diversos aspectos da Sua vontade e propósitos, salvaguarda-se o próprio raciocínio, orientando-o para os canais corretos. (Pr 5:1, 2) O raciocínio corretamente usado, harmonioso com a sabedoria e o conhecimento piedosos, guardará a pessoa contra ser enlaçada por engodos imorais. — Pr 2:10-12.

Cautela na Adquisição de Conhecimento. Aparentemente, Salomão colocou o conhecimento numa luz negativa, ao dizer: "Porque na abundância de sabedoria há abundância de vexame, de modo que aquele que incrementa o conhecimento incrementa a dor." (Ec 1:18) Isto pareceria contrário ao conceito geral sobre o conhecimento que se encontra na Bíblia. No entanto, aqui, Salomão enfatiza de novo a vaidade dos empenhos humanos em todos os assuntos que não se relacionam com o cumprimento das ordens de Deus. (Ec 1:13, 14) Assim, alguém talvez obtenha conhecimento e sabedoria em muitos campos, ou talvez explore a fundo algum campo especializado, e esse conhecimento e sabedoria talvez sejam corretos em si mesmos, embora não diretamente relacionados com o propósito declarado de Deus. No entanto, com tal conhecimento e sabedoria aumentados, ele talvez se aperceba mais vivamente quão limitadas são as suas oportunidades de usar seu conhecimento e sabedoria em vista da curta duração da sua vida, e por causa dos problemas e das más condições que o confrontam e se lhe opõem na sociedade humana imperfeita. Isto é vexame, dando uma penosa sensação de frustração. (Compare isso com Ro 8:20-22; Ec 12:13, 14; veja ECLESIASTES.) Assim, também, o conhecimento obtido pela 'devoção a muitos livros', a menos que seja relacionado e usado no cumprimento das ordens de Deus, "é fadiga para a carne". — Ec 12:12.

CONIAS. Veja JOAQUIM.

CONJURADOR. A palavra hebraica 'ash·sháf (aramaica: 'a·sháf; vertida "astrólogos", Al) é corretamente definida como "conjurador, necromante, encantador". (A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento], de Brown, Driver e Briggs, 1980, pp. 80, 1083; Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de Koehler e Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, pp. 95, 1055) Conjurar significa "jurar junto", por juramento ou invocação, como quando se convoca ou invoca solenemente os assim chamados espíritos de mortos. Necromante literalmente significa "adivinho dos mortos", alguém que procura predizer e influenciar eventos futuros por meio da comunicação com os mortos.

Qualquer forma de pretensa comunicação com os mortos era condenada por Deus. "E caso vos digam: 'Recorrei aos médiuns espíritas ou aos que têm espírito de predição, que chilram e fazem pronunciações em voz baixa', não é a seu Deus que qualquer povo devia recorrer? Acaso se deve recorrer a pessoas mortas a favor de pessoas vivas?" (Is 8:19) Embora proscrita em Israel, a 'dona de mediunidade espírita em En-Dor', que o infiel Rei Saul visitou, era alguém que contatava os demônios como conjuradora dos mortos. — 1Sa 28:7; Le 20:27.

Os conjuradores proliferavam especialmente entre os babilônios. Daniel e seus três companheiros, que haviam sido levados cativos a Babilônia, depois de um treinamento especial de três anos na língua caldeia, mostraram ser "dez vezes melhores [em sabedoria e compreensão] do que todos os sacerdotes-magos e os conjuradores" no domínio. — Da 1:3-20.

Cerca de oito anos mais tarde, Nabucodonosor convocou todos os ramos de adivinhos, não apenas os conjuradores, e exigiu que primeiro lhe revelassem certo sonho que tivera e depois lhe fornecessem a interpretação. (Da 2:1-3, 27) O rei tinha suspeita deles, porque disse: "Concordastes em dizer-me uma palavra mentirosa e errada." Estava igualmente bem apercebido que eles queriam ganhar tempo, esperando que a situação mudasse. Assim, para ter alguma garantia de que seus sábios podiam prover uma interpretação real da sua espantosa visão, Nabucodonosor insistiu em que primeiro lhe contassem o sonho. "Dizei-me o próprio sonho", declarou o rei, "e saberei que podeis mostrar a própria interpretação dele". (Da 2:4-9) Quando os conjuradores e seus coadivinhos não puderam dar a resposta, o rei, irado, ordenou que todos os sábios de Babilônia fossem destruídos. Todavia, Daniel soube do edito do rei (que teria incluído Daniel e seus companheiros), de modo que, depois que Deus 'revelou-lhe o segredo', Daniel apressou-se a contá-lo ao rei, rejeitando qualquer crédito para si mesmo, porque, conforme disse, "não é por meio de qualquer sabedoria que haja em mim mais do que em quaisquer outros viventes que este segredo me foi revelado". — Da 2:19-30.

Décadas mais tarde, Belsazar ficou chocado com a 'escrita na parede', que ele não conseguia ler. Depois que o rei "clamou em voz alta que fizessem chegar os conjuradores, os caldeus e os astrólogos", ele fez uma generosíssima oferta: "Qualquer homem que ler esta escrita e que me mostrar a própria interpretação dela será vestido de púrpura, com um colar de ouro em volta do pescoço, e ele dominará como o terceiro no reino." (Da 5:5-7) Esses conjuradores, junto com os demais adivinhos espíritas, fracassaram, e novamente foi o Deus de Daniel, Jeová, quem forneceu a interpretação. — Da 5:8-29.

CONSCIÊNCIA. Esta palavra traduz a grega sy·nei·de·sis, que deriva de syn (com) e ei·de·sis (conhecimento), e assim significa coconhecimento, ou conhecimento consigo mesmo. A consciência é a capacidade de examinar a si mesmo e fazer um julgamento sobre si mesmo, dar testemunho de si mesmo. O apóstolo Paulo expressa a operação da sua consciência do seguinte modo: "A minha consciência dá testemunho comigo, em espírito santo." — Ro 9:1.

A consciência é inerente no homem, tendo sido feita parte dele por Deus. É uma percepção ou senso íntimo do que é certo e do que é errado, que desculpa ou acusa a pessoa. Portanto, a consciência julga. Ela pode também ser treinada por pensamentos e atos, convicções e regras, implantados na mente da pessoa por estudo e experiência. Baseada nestas coisas, a consciência faz uma comparação com o proceder adotado ou pretendido. Daí soa o alarme quando as regras e o proceder estão em conflito, a menos que a consciência esteja "cauterizada", tornada insensível por contínuas violações dos seus avisos. A consciência pode ser um instrumento de segurança moral, no sentido de que gera prazer ou inflige dor pela conduta boa ou má da própria pessoa.

Desde o início, o homem tem tido uma consciência. Adão e Eva manifestaram isso assim que violaram a lei de Deus e se esconderam. (Gên 3:8) Lemos em Romanos 2:14, 15: "Pois, sempre que pessoas das nações, que não têm lei, fazem por natureza as coisas da lei, tais pessoas, embora não tenham lei, são uma lei para si mesmas. Elas é que são quem demonstra que a matéria da lei está escrita nos seus corações, ao passo que a sua consciência lhes dá testemunho e nos seus próprios pensamentos são acusadas ou até mesmo desculpadas." Pode-se assim ver que a consciência não foi eliminada nem mesmo entre não cristãos. Isto se dá porque toda a humanidade descende de Adão e Eva, em quem a consciência era inerente. Muitas leis das nações estão em harmonia com a consciência do cristão, no entanto, essas nações e seus legisladores talvez não tenham sido absolutamente influenciados pelo cristianismo. As leis foram feitas segundo a orientação da própria consciência deles. Todos têm a faculdade da consciência, e é para esta que o proceder de vida e a pregação dos cristãos apelam. — 2Co 4:2.

A consciência precisa ser esclarecida; do contrário, pode ser enganosa. Ela não é guia seguro se não tiver sido treinada nas normas justas, segundo a verdade. Seu desenvolvimento pode ser influenciado de modo errado pelo ambiente, pelos costumes, pela adoração e pelos hábitos locais. Poderá julgar as coisas como certas ou erradas segundo estas normas ou valores incorretos. Um exemplo disso é dado em João 16:2, onde Jesus predisse que homens até mesmo matariam servos de Deus, pensando prestar um serviço a Ele. Saulo (mais tarde Paulo, o apóstolo) realmente saiu com intenções assassinas contra discípulos de Cristo, achando que estava servindo zelosamente a Deus. (At 9:1; Gál 1:13-16) Os judeus foram seriamente desencaminhados para lutar contra Deus, por falta de apreço pela Palavra de Deus. (Ro 10:2, 3; Os 4:1-3; At 5:39, 40) Somente uma consciência devidamente treinada pela Palavra de Deus pode corretamente avaliar e endireitar cabalmente assuntos da vida. (2Ti 3:16; He 4:12) O cristão precisa ter uma norma estável, correta — a norma de Deus.

Boa Consciência. Precisa-se chegar a Jeová com uma consciência limpa. (He 10:22) O cristão precisa constantemente esforçar-se a ter uma consciência honesta em todas as coisas. (He 13:18) Quando Paulo declarou: "Exercito-me continuamente para ter a consciência de não ter cometido ofensa contra Deus e homens" (At 24:16), ele queria dizer que continuamente orientava e corrigia seu rumo na vida segundo a Palavra de Deus e os ensinos de Cristo, porque sabia que, afinal de contas, Deus, e não a sua própria consciência, seria o derradeiro juiz. (1Co 4:4) Seguir a consciência treinada pela Bíblia pode resultar em perseguição, mas Pedro aconselha consoladoramente: "Porque, se alguém, por causa da consciência para com Deus, aguenta coisas penosas e sofre injustamente, isto é algo agradável." (1Pe 2:19) O cristão precisa 'ter uma boa consciência' em face de oposição. — 1Pe 3:16.

A Lei, com seus sacrifícios de animais, não podia aperfeiçoar alguém quanto à sua consciência a ponto de ele se considerar livre de culpa; todavia, por meio da aplicação do resgate de Cristo aos que têm fé, a consciência da pessoa pode ser purificada. (He 9:9, 14) Pedro indica que aqueles que recebem a salvação têm de ter esta consciência boa, limpa e correta. — 1Pe 3:21.

Consideração com a Consciência de Outros. Visto que a consciência precisa ser plena e precisamente treinada pela Palavra de Deus para fazer avaliações corretas, a consciência não treinada pode ser fraca. Quer dizer, pode ser fácil e imprudentemente suprimida, ou a pessoa pode ofender-se com as ações ou palavras de outros, mesmo em casos em que talvez não haja transgressão. Paulo apresentou exemplos disso em conexão com comer, beber e a consideração de certos dias superiores a outros. (Ro 14:1-23; 1Co 8:1-13) Ordena-se ao cristão que tem conhecimento e uma consciência treinada que ele dê consideração e faça concessões a alguém com consciência fraca, não usando toda a sua liberdade, nem insistindo em todos os seus "direitos" pessoais, ou sempre fazendo o que bem quiser. (Ro 15:1) Quem fere a consciência fraca dum concristão está "pecando contra Cristo". (1Co 8:12) Por outro lado, Paulo dá a entender que, embora não quisesse fazer nada para ofender o irmão fraco, induzindo-o assim a julgar Paulo, o fraco também deve ter consideração com seu irmão, esforçando-se a atingir a madureza por obter mais conhecimento e treinamento, para que a sua consciência não se ofenda facilmente, induzindo-o a encarar os outros de modo errado. — 1Co 10:29, 30; Ro 14:10.

Má Consciência. É possível violar a consciência a ponto de ela não mais ser limpa e sensível. Quando isso acontece, ela não pode dar avisos, nem prover orientação segura. (Tit 1:15) A conduta do homem é então controlada pelo temor de ser exposto e de sofrer punição, em vez de pela boa consciência. (Ro 13:5) A referência de Paulo a uma consciência marcada como que por um ferro de marcar indica que ela ficaria como carne cauterizada, coberta por tecido cicatrizado e desprovido de terminais nervosos, e, portanto, sem o sentido do tato. (1Ti 4:2) Quem tem tal consciência não pode perceber o certo ou o errado. Não reconhece a liberdade que Deus lhe concede, e, rebelando-se, torna-se escravo da má consciência. É fácil macular a consciência. O objetivo do cristão deve ser o indicado em Atos 23:1: "Irmãos, eu me comportei perante Deus com uma consciência perfeitamente limpa, até o dia de hoje."

CONSELHO, CONSELHEIRO. Alguém que faz recomendações é conselheiro. Conselho é a recomendação que ele faz.

Dentre as diversas palavras hebraicas e aramaicas usadas nas Escrituras para expressar a ideia de "conselho", o substantivo hebraico ʽe·tsáh e o verbo aparentado ya·ʽáts aparecem mais vezes. Embora usualmente traduzido por "conselho", ʽe·tsáh também foi vertido por "plano". (Is 8:10) Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, o conceito de "conselho" como substantivo é expresso por bou·lé e sym·boú·li·on. Bou·lé é também traduzido por "desígnio" (Lu 23:51; At 5:38), "vontade expressa" (At 13:36) e "resolução" (At 27:42).

De modo que o termo "conselho" pode também indicar "vontade", "propósito", "resolução", "desígnio", como no caso em que Jeová declara: "Meu próprio conselho ficará de pé." (Is 46:10) São os "conselhos dos corações", a saber, os planos, desígnios, propósitos ou resoluções do íntimo da pessoa, que são expostos quando o Senhor Jesus Cristo vem para fazer o julgamento. (1Co 4:5) Em Efésios 1:11, a frase "segundo o modo aconselhado por sua vontade" (literalmente: "segundo o conselho da vontade dele") pode ser entendida como significando "segundo o propósito, ou resolução, que é expressão da vontade de Deus". O apóstolo Paulo disse que estava livre da culpa de sangue porque não se refreara de ensinar "todo o conselho de Deus" ("todo o desígnio de Deus", ALA; "integralmente a vontade de Deus", LEB), isto é, tudo o que é essencial para a salvação. — At 20:27.

Homens conhecidos pela sua sabedoria eram muito apreciados como conselheiros reais. (Veja 2Sa 16:23.) Por causa da sua posição, ofereciam-selhes às vezes subornos, a fim de que usassem a sua influência de modo corrupto. Quando os inimigos dos judeus contrataram conselheiros, talvez fizessem isso por subornar persas que serviam nesta qualidade. — Esd 4:5.

Nenhum humano é repositório de todo o conhecimento. Portanto, quem acata conselho sadio é sábio. (Pr 12:15) Rejeitar o bom conselho de conselheiros experientes, como fez o Rei Roboão, é o cúmulo da tolice. — 1Rs 12:8.

Jeová é dono da sabedoria em sentido absoluto. Só ele não precisa que se lhe aconselhe. (Is 40:13; Ro 11:34) Seu Filho é capaz de agir como "Maravilhoso Conselheiro", provendo orientação e direção, porque recebeu e seguiu conselho do seu Pai e tem o espírito de Deus. (Is 9:6; 11:2; Jo 5:19, 30) Isto enfatiza que, se o conselho há de ser de proveito, tem de tomar a Jeová em consideração. Qualquer conselho que está em oposição ao Altíssimo não tem valor. Não é conselho. — Pr 19:21; 21:30.

CONSTRUTOR, CONSTRUÇÃO. O verbo "construir" significa edificar ou fabricar por reunir materiais. A palavra hebraica para "construir" é ba·náh. Dela deriva bin·yán ("edifício"; Ez 41:12), miv·néh ("estrutura"; Ez 40:2) e tav·níth ("modelo" [Êx 25:40]; "representação" [De 4:16]; "plano arquitetônico" [1Cr 28:11]). Oi·ko·do·mé·o é o verbo grego costumeiro para "construir"; a forma substantiva aparentada, oi·ko·do·mé, significa "edifício". — Mt 16:18; 1Co 3:9.

Jeová Deus, como Criador de todas as coisas, é o Construtor por excelência. (He 3:4; Jó 38:4-6) O Logos (Palavra), que se tornou Jesus Cristo, foi o Mestre de obras que Ele usou na criação de todas as coisas. (Jo 1:1-3; Col 1:13-16; Pr 8:30) O homem não pode criar, mas tem de construir com materiais já existentes. A capacidade de planejar, de fabricar instrumentos e de construir foi implantada no homem por ocasião da sua criação e se manifestou logo cedo na história humana. — Gên 1:26; 4:20-22.

Caim, primeiro filho de Adão e Eva, é o primeiro homem mencionado na Bíblia como construtor duma cidade, dando-lhe o nome de seu filho, Enoque. (Gên 4:17) Noé foi o construtor duma arca, cujo modelo lhe fora dado por Jeová. (Gên 6:13, 14) Ninrode, "poderoso caçador em oposição a Jeová", foi o construtor de diversas cidades, a saber, Babel, Ereque, Acade, Calné, bem como Nínive, Reobote-Ir, Calá e Resem. — Gên 10:9-12.

Quando os israelitas eram escravos no Egito, construíram cidades como lugares de armazenagem para Faraó, a saber, Pitom e Ramsés. (Êx 1:11) Quando foram conduzidos por Jeová para a Terra da Promessa, encontraram ali cidades construídas pelos habitantes cananeus. Muitas destas cidades, com suas casas, foram tomadas e usadas pelos israelitas. — De 6:10, 11.

No ermo, Moisés supervisionou a construção do tabernáculo com todos os seus utensílios, sendo o modelo divinamente provido. (Êx 25:9) Quem tomou a dianteira na fabricação e construção foram Bezalel e Ooliabe, cujas habilidades foram acentuadas pelo espírito santo de Deus, de modo que a obra acabada era exatamente assim como Deus ordenara a Moisés. — Êx 25:40; 35:30-36:1.

Depois de Davi tomar a cidade de Jerusalém dos jebuseus, ele fez muitas construções ali, inclusive construindo uma casa para si mesmo. (2Sa 5:9-11) Seu filho Salomão foi construtor de renome, sendo o templo de Jeová seu projeto principal. Os planos arquitetônicos para este templo haviam sido dados a Davi por inspiração. (1Cr 28:11, 12) Davi ajuntara muitos materiais para a construção do templo, ouro, prata, cobre, ferro, madeira, pedra e pedras preciosas, contribuídos pelo povo e também dos próprios recursos de Davi. (1Cr 22:14-16; 29:2-8) Hirão, rei de Tiro, agiu para com Salomão assim como fizera para com Davi, suprindo materiais, especialmente madeira de cedro e de junípero, bem como muitos trabalhadores. (1Rs 5:7-10, 18; 2Cr 2:3) O Rei Hirão mandou também um homem chamado Hirão (Hirão-Abi), filho dum homem tírio e duma mulher israelita, um trabalhador muito perito em ouro, prata, cobre, ferro, pedras, madeira e tecidos. — 1Rs 7:13, 14; 2Cr 2:13, 14.

Salomão fez outras extensas obras de construção, inclusive uma casa para si mesmo, bem como a Casa da Floresta do Líbano, o Pórtico das Colunas e o Pórtico do Trono. A construção do templo e de outros edifícios governamentais levou 20 anos. (1Rs 6:1; 7:1, 2, 6, 7; 9:10) Depois, Salomão empreendeu um programa nacional de construção, inclusive de Gezer e Bete-Horom Baixa, Baalate e Tamar no ermo, junto com cidades-armazéns, cidades para carros e cidades para cavaleiros. (1Rs 9:17-19) Escavações feitas na Palestina, especialmente em Hazor, Megido e Gezer, descobriram portões de cidade e fortificações que os arqueólogos atribuem a Salomão.

Um notável construtor entre os reis de Israel e de Judá foi o filho de Salomão, Roboão. Suas obras incluíam a reconstrução de Belém, Étão, Tecoa, Bete-Zur, Soco, Adulão, Gate, Maressa, Zife, Adoraim, Laquis, Azeca, Zorá, Aijalom e Hébron. Roboão também reforçou e aprovisionou as fortificações. (2Cr 11:5-11) Outros construtores foram o Rei Baasa, de Israel, que "começou a construir Ramá"; o Rei Asa, de Judá, que construiu Geba, em Benjamim, e Mispá; Hiel, o betelita, que perdeu dois filhos quando reconstruiu a arruinada Jericó — Abirão, seu primogênito, ao lançar os alicerces dela, e Segube, seu mais moço, ao pôr-lhe as portas — conforme Josué havia profetizado (1Rs 15:17, 22; 16:34; Jos 6:26); e o Rei Acabe, de Israel, que construiu uma casa de marfim, além de diversas cidades (1Rs 22:39).

O Rei Uzias, de Judá, foi um grande construtor. (2Cr 26:9, 10) Uzias deu evidências de ser um gênio militar ao fortificar Jerusalém com "máquinas de guerras, invenção de engenheiros". (2Cr 26:15) Cenas em relevos murais, retratando o ataque de Senaqueribe contra Laquis, mostram um tipo especial de fortificações nas torres, atribuído pelos arqueólogos a Uzias.

Jotão fez muitas construções. (2Cr 27:3, 4) E Ezequias fortificou consideravelmente Jerusalém, escavando em conexão com isso um túnel de água desde a fonte de Giom, para levar água para dentro da cidade. (2Cr 32:2-5, 30) Este túnel de água ainda pode ser visto pelos que visitam Jerusalém.

Após o exílio, Zorobabel viajou de Babilônia com cerca de 50.000 homens e começou a reconstruir o templo de Jeová em Jerusalém. Este foi completado em 6 de março de 515 AEC. Mais tarde, em 455 AEC, Neemias veio de Susã para reconstruir a muralha da cidade. — Esd 2:1, 2, 64, 65; 6:15; Ne 6:1; 7:1.

O Rei Nabucodonosor, de Babilônia, é conhecido principalmente por suas façanhas militares. Não obstante, ele foi um grande construtor. Em Babilônia, ele construiu muitos templos a falsos deuses. Foi também notável construtor de obras públicas. Suas inscrições não se referem às suas façanhas militares, mas aos seus projetos de construção, incluindo templos, palácios, ruas, diques e muralhas. Ele tornou Babilônia a cidade maravilhosa do mundo antigo, e em toda a terra de Babilônia não havia edifício que se comparasse com os famosos Jardins Suspensos que o Rei Nabucodonosor construiu para amainar as saudades que sua rainha meda tinha da terra dela. Esses jardins foram classificados como uma das sete maravilhas do mundo antigo.

O Rei Herodes, o Grande, reconstruiu o segundo templo de Jeová em Jerusalém. Por causa da desconfiança por parte dos judeus, ele se viu obrigado a trazer primeiro os materiais, depois nivelar o segundo templo aos poucos, ao passo que construía o novo. Os judeus, por causa da sua desconfiança e aversão a Herodes, não o consideram como o terceiro templo, embora muitas vezes seja assim chamado por outros. No ano 30 EC, a reconstrução na área do templo já estava em andamento por 46 anos (Jo 2:20), e continuou ainda por muitos anos. Herodes construiu também uma cidade portuária artificial, Cesareia, e reconstruiu Samaria, realizando outros vastos projetos de construção dentro da Palestina, bem como em outras terras.

Jesus, enquanto na terra, tinha por ofício a construção, sendo chamado de "carpinteiro". — Mr 6:3.

Os materiais de construção usados nos tempos bíblicos eram terra, madeira de diversos tipos, pedra, pedras preciosas, metais, tecidos, estuque, argamassa e betume. Usava-se também cal para caiação, bem como tintas para decorar madeira, e corantes para tecidos. Às vezes, tijolos eram pintados ou esmaltados. — Veja TIJOLO.

Diversas ferramentas e instrumentos para construção são mencionados na Bíblia, inclusive o machado (De 19:5), o martelo (Jz 4:21), o malho, a bigorna, pregos (Is 41:7), a serra (Is 10:15), a serra de pedra (1Rs 7:9), o cordel ou a corda de medir (Za 1:16; 2:1), a cana de medir (Ez 40:3; Re 21:15), o prumo (Am 7:7, 8; Za 4:9, 10), o nível (2Rs 21:13; Is 28:17), a raspadeira, o compasso (Is 44:13), o podão (Is 44:12; Je 10:3), a talhadeira (Êx 20:25) e a balança (Is 40:12).

Uso Figurado. A congregação cristã é considerada como casa ou templo construído sobre o alicerce dos apóstolos e profetas, tendo a Cristo Jesus por pedra angular de alicerce. É chamada de "edifício de Deus", "lugar para Deus habitar por espírito". (1Co 3:9; Ef 2:20-22) Jesus aplicou o cumprimento do Salmo 118:22 a si mesmo, como "a pedra" que os líderes religiosos judaicos e seus seguidores, como "construtores", haviam rejeitado. (Mt 21:42; Lu 20:17; At 4:11; 1Pe 2:7) Os membros individuais da congregação são chamados de "pedras viventes". (1Pe 2:5) A glorificada congregação, também conhecida como a noiva de Jesus Cristo, é retratada como cidade, a Nova Jerusalém. — Re 21:2, 9-21.

Jesus comparou seus ouvintes a dois tipos de construtores, dos quais um construiu sua personalidade e seu modo de vida sobre a rocha de obediência a Cristo, e, portanto, era capaz de suportar as tormentas da oposição e tribulação. O outro, construindo sobre areia, era incapaz de resistir ao surgirem pressões. (Mt 7:24-27) A edificação da personalidade cristã de outros também é considerada pelo apóstolo Paulo, 'diretor de obras'. (1Co 3:10-15) Em certa ocasião, Jesus disse aos judeus: "Demoli este templo, e em três dias o levantarei." (Jo 2:19) Os judeus pensavam que estivesse falando do templo de Herodes e usaram isto contra ele no seu julgamento, testemunhando contra ele por dizer: "Nós o ouvimos dizer: 'Derrubarei este templo feito por mãos e em três dias construirei outro, não feito por mãos.'" (Mr 14:58) Jesus usava de linguagem figurada, falando "do templo do seu corpo". Ele foi morto e depois ressuscitado no terceiro dia. (Jo 2:21; Mt 16:21; Lu 24:7, 21, 46) Ele foi ressuscitado pelo seu Pai, Jeová Deus, em outro corpo, não feito por mãos, como o templo de Jerusalém, mas um corpo espiritual feito (construído) pelo seu Pai. (At 2:24; 1Pe 3:18) Este uso de construção como aplicando-se ao corpo da pessoa não é extraordinário, pois, falando-se a respeito da criação de Eva, foi dito: "E da costela que havia tirado do homem, Jeová Deus passou a construir uma mulher." — Gên 2:22.

Jesus Cristo predisse que, nos "últimos dias", as pessoas estariam envolvidas em construções e em outras atividades da vida, indiferentes ao verdadeiro significado dos tempos, assim como eram nos dias de Ló, e que a destruição as apanharia desprevenidas no meio destas atividades. — Lu 17:28-30; veja ARQUITETURA; FORTIFICAÇÕES.

CONTAS. Pequenos ornamentos perfurados, feitos de materiais tais como vidro, gemas, ouro e prata. São geralmente usadas como colares e têm sido encontradas em múmias egípcias, em sepulturas gregas e romanas, e em ruínas de templos assírios, bem como em Megido, Asdode e Bete-Semes.

Diz-se a respeito da linda moça sulamita, de O Cântico de Salomão: "Lindas são as tuas faces entre as tranças de cabelo, teu pescoço num colar de contas." (Cân 1:10) É evidente, pois, que colares de contas faziam parte dos adornos usados pelas mulheres hebreias dos tempos antigos. — Veja ENFEITES (ORNAMENTOS).

CONTENDA. Veja RIXA.

CONTRIBUIÇÃO. Dádiva, dinheiro ou ajuda dada por uma ou mais pessoas a outrem. A palavra hebraica teru·máh significa "contribuição; porção sagrada; oferta movida". (Êx 25:2, n.; 29:27, n.) Deriva do verbo rum, que literalmente significa "ser alto; estar exaltado; erguer" (Jó 22:12; 1Sa 2:1; Gên 14:22), e que, na forma causativa, pode significar "fazer erguer [como contribuição]", portanto, "contribuir". — Le 22:15.

Uma contribuição pode, ou não, envolver uma dádiva material. Paulo agradeceu a Deus a contribuição que os cristãos filipenses fizeram para as boas novas. Além da sua participação pessoal na divulgação das boas novas, eles haviam ajudado de modo material a Paulo e provavelmente a outros, apoiando assim lealmente a pregação das boas novas também desta maneira. — Fil 1:3-5; 4:16-18.

Os israelitas tiveram o privilégio de fazer contribuições para erguer e equipar construções para a verdadeira adoração. Doaram materiais para o tabernáculo e sua mobília (Êx 25:1-9; 35:4-9), "uma oferta voluntária a Jeová", que teve de ser sustada porque a doação "mostrou-se suficiente para toda a obra a ser feita, e mais do que suficiente". (Êx 35:20-29; 36:3-7) As contribuições do Rei Davi para a construção do prospectivo templo incluíam sua "propriedade especial" de ouro e prata, numa quantia superior a US$ 1.202.000.000. Os príncipes e os chefes do povo, por sua vez, tiveram prazer em contribuir mais de US$ 1.993.000.000 em ouro e prata, além de cobre, ferro e pedras. — 1Cr 29:1-9.

Algumas contribuições eram exigidas sob a Lei. Quando Moisés fez o recenseamento dos israelitas, todo varão de 20 anos de idade para cima tinha de dar um resgate pela sua alma, "meio siclo [provavelmente US$ 1,10] segundo o siclo do lugar santo". Era a "contribuição pertencente a Jeová", a fim de fazer expiação pelas suas almas e "em benefício do serviço da tenda de reunião". (Êx 30:11-16) Segundo o historiador judeu Josefo (The Jewish War [A Guerra Judaica], VII, 218 [vi, 6]), este "imposto sagrado" foi dali em diante pago anualmente. — 2Cr 24:6-10; Mt 17:24; veja IMPOSTO.

Para o sustento dos levitas, a tribo sacerdotal, Deus providenciou que os israelitas contribuíssem as "décimas partes" dos produtos da terra. Os levitas, por sua vez, contribuíam uma décima parte ao sumo sacerdote, para o sustento dele e sua família. (Núm 18:26-28; veja DÍZIMO.) Jeová confiou a Arão, o sumo sacerdote, a custódia das contribuições que os israelitas faziam a Deus, permitindo a ele e aos seus filhos comer e beber dessas ofertas, e do azeite, do vinho, dos cereais e das primícias maduras da terra, que o povo dava a Jeová, concedendo-lhes também porções dos sacrifícios de animais. Entregava-se ao sumo sacerdote um imposto sobre os despojos de guerra como "contribuição pertencente a Jeová", e uma porção dos despojos também era destinada aos levitas. — Núm 31:1, 2, 28-30.

Os israelitas faziam diversas ofertas e sacrifícios a Jeová, alguns deles especificamente requeridos pela Lei. Outras ofertas, porém, eram inteiramente voluntárias, tais como as ofertas de agradecimento e de voto. — Le 7:15, 16; veja OFERTAS.

Nos dias do Rei Jeoás, colocou-se um cofre no portão da casa de Jeová, para receber as contribuições para o extenso trabalho de conserto no templo. Os príncipes e o povo alegraram-se então em trazer "o imposto sagrado", com o qual foi possível fazer forte a casa de Deus, e fazer utensílios para o templo. — 2Cr 24:4-14.

Não israelitas também contribuíam para a adoração verdadeira. Quando Esdras e o restante judaico partiram de Babilônia para Jerusalém, em 468 AEC, levaram consigo prata, ouro e utensílios, uma contribuição para a casa de Deus, feita pelo Rei Artaxerxes, da Pérsia, seus conselheiros, seus príncipes e os israelitas em Babilônia. Esses objetos valiosos foram confiados aos cuidados de homens escolhidos, durante a viagem. — Esd 7:12-20; 8:24-30.

Na realização do ministério, Jesus Cristo e seus apóstolos aceitavam ajuda material contribuída. (Lu 8:1-3) Especialmente cristãos na Macedônia e na Acaia demonstraram grande disposição de ajudar seus irmãos necessitados, 'agradando-se em partilhar as suas coisas por meio duma contribuição para os pobres que são dos santos em Jerusalém', evidentemente por contribuir dinheiro. — Ro 15:26; veja COLETA.

Em Romanos 15:26 e 2 Coríntios 9:13, a palavra grega para "contribuição" (koi·no·ní·a) pode ser encarada como significando literalmente "partilhar". Esta mesma palavra grega é usada em Hebreus 13:16: "Não vos esqueçais de fazer o bem e de partilhar as coisas com outros, porque Deus se agrada bem de tais sacrifícios."

Muitos judeus e prosélitos de outros lugares, que se haviam tornado cristãos na época de Pentecostes de 33 EC, evidentemente permaneceram por algum tempo em Jerusalém para aprender mais sobre a fé. A fim de que ninguém passasse necessidades, eles contribuíram voluntariamente seus pertences; "tinham todas as coisas em comum". (At 4:32-37; compare isso com At 5:1-4.) Mais tarde, a congregação de Jerusalém fazia uma distribuição diária de alimentos para as viúvas necessitadas. (At 6:1-3) Paulo deu instruções sobre o uso dos fundos contribuídos para se cuidar das viúvas que realmente mereciam ajuda. — 1Ti 5:9, 10; veja SOCORROS.

Não era compulsório fazer contribuições na primitiva congregação cristã. Neste respeito, Paulo escreveu: "Faça cada um conforme tem resolvido no seu coração, não de modo ressentido, nem sob compulsão, pois Deus ama o dador animado." — 2Co 9:7.

O montante duma contribuição não necessariamente fornece o quadro verdadeiro da generosidade do dador. Certa vez, Jesus Cristo observava as pessoas depositar dinheiro nos cofres do tesouro do templo. Os ricos lançavam neles muitas moedas, mas Jesus ficou impressionado com a generosidade de todo o coração duma viúva necessitada, que lançou neles apenas duas pequenas moedas de muito pouco valor, dizendo ele: "Esta viúva, embora pobre, lançou neles mais do que todos eles. Porque todos estes lançaram neles dádivas do que lhes sobrava, mas esta mulher, de sua carência, lançou neles todo o seu meio de vida." (Lu 21:1-4; Mr 12:41-44) No que se referia a fazer contribuições para ajudar pobres concrentes, Paulo observou: "Se houver primeiro a prontidão, é especialmente aceitável segundo o que a pessoa tem, não segundo o que a pessoa não tem." — 2Co 8:12.

Embora ninguém possa realmente enriquecer a Jeová, a quem pertencem todas as coisas (1Cr 29:14-17), fazer contribuições é um privilégio que oferece ao adorador a oportunidade de demonstrar seu amor a Jeová. As contribuições feitas, não para publicidade ou por motivos egoístas, mas com a atitude correta e para promover a verdadeira adoração, resultam em felicidade, junto com a bênção de Deus. (At 20:35; Mt 6:1-4; Pr 3:9, 10) A pessoa pode assegurar-se parte nesta felicidade por regularmente pôr de lado algo de seus bens materiais, para apoiar a adoração verdadeira e ajudar os merecedores. — 1Co 16:1, 2.

Jeová oferece o melhor exemplo de dar, porque concedeu à humanidade "vida, e fôlego, e todas as coisas" (At 17:25), deu seu Filho unigênito a favor da humanidade (Jo 3:16), e enriquece os cristãos para todo tipo de generosidade (2Co 9:10-15). De fato, "toda boa dádiva e todo presente perfeito vem de cima, pois desce do Pai das luzes celestiais". — Tg 1:17; veja DÁDIVAS, PRESENTES.

Veja também CONTRIBUIÇÃO SAGRADA.

CONTRIBUIÇÃO SAGRADA. Um lote de terra na visão de Ezequiel sobre a divisão da Terra da Promessa.

Cada uma das 12 tribos, exceto a de Levi (Efraim e Manassés representando José, perfazendo assim as 12), recebeu um lote que atravessava o país de L a O. Ao S do lote de Judá, que era o sétimo a partir da extremidade setentrional, encontrava-se uma faixa administrativa. (Ez 48:1-8) O termo setentrional desta faixa de terra estendia-se ao longo do termo meridional do lote de Judá; era limitado ao S pela parte de Benjamim, que era o quinto lote a partir da extremidade meridional. (Ez 48:23-28) Esta faixa administrativa tinha 25.000 côvados (13 km) de largura, de N a S. Devia ser doada pelo povo para uso governamental. — Ez 48:8.

O santuário de Jeová estava situado no meio duma "contribuição" quadrada de 25.000 côvados de cada lado dentro da faixa administrativa. O restante da faixa, ao L e ao O desta "contribuição", consistia em duas partes para o maioral. (Ez 48:20-22; veja MAIORAL.) A "contribuição" quadrada estava dividida do seguinte modo: uma faixa ao longo do termo setentrional, de 10.000 côvados (5,2 km) de largura, para os levitas não sacerdotais. Nada desta designação de terra devia ser vendido ou trocado, "pois é algo sagrado para Jeová". (Ez 48:13, 14) Beirando a parte levita ao S havia uma faixa de 10.000 côvados, uma "contribuição sagrada para os sacerdotes". Esta parte sacerdotal continha o santuário ou templo de Jeová. (Ez 48:9-12) Isto deixava sobrar uma faixa de 5.000 côvados (2,6 km) de largura ao sul. Esta parte era "algo profano para a cidade, para morada e para pastio". (Ez 48:15) No centro desta parte havia de estar a cidade chamada "O Próprio Jeová Está Ali". Esta cidade quadrada tinha 4.500 côvados (2,3 km) de cada lado, 12 portões, e um pastio de 250 côvados (130 m) de largura ao redor. A parte remanescente do quadrado de 25.000 côvados de cada lado, a saber, 10.000 côvados ao L da cidade e 10.000 côvados ao O (de 5.000 côvados de largura), também era considerada profana e devia ser cultivada pelas tribos de Israel, a fim de prover alimento à cidade. — Ez 48:15-19, 30-35.

Assim, "a contribuição sagrada" tinha realmente 25.000 côvados de L a O, e 20.000 côvados de N a S. Consistia em duas faixas de 10.000 côvados de largura, uma designada aos sacerdotes e a outra aos levitas. O restante da contribuição de 25.000 côvados de cada lado era "algo profano", usado "para a cidade, para morada e para pastio". — Ez 48:10, 13-15, 18, 20, 21.

CONVERSÃO. Veja ARREPENDIMENTO (Conversão — Um Retorno).

COPEIRO. Oficial da corte real que servia vinho e outras bebidas ao rei. (Gên 40:1, 2, 11; Ne 1:11; 2:1) Os deveres do copeiro-mor incluíam às vezes provar o vinho antes de dá-lo ao rei. Isto se dava porque sempre havia a possibilidade de um atentado contra a vida do rei por envenenar-lhe o vinho.

A principal qualificação para este cargo era ser inteiramente digno de confiança, visto que a vida do rei estava em jogo. O cargo era um dos mais honrosos na corte. O copeiro-mor frequentemente estava presente em conferências e palestras reais. Por ter uma relação íntima e usualmente de confiança com o rei, ele muitas vezes exercia considerável influência junto ao monarca. Foi o copeiro de Faraó quem recomendou José. (Gên 41:9-13) O Rei Artaxerxes da Pérsia, tinha em alta estima o seu copeiro, Neemias. (Ne 2:6-8) Quando Neemias viajou a Jerusalém, Artaxerxes proveu-lhe uma escolta militar. — Ne 2:9.

Figurarem muitas vezes copeiros em antigas ilustrações indica a importância do seu cargo. A rainha de Sabá ficou muito impressionada com o "serviço de bebida e o vestuário deles" na corte de Salomão. — 2Cr 9:4.

COPISTA. Em linguagem bíblica, o termo "copista" aplica-se a alguém que transcrevia matéria escrita ou fazia cópias dela, especificamente das Escrituras. A palavra hebraica traduzida por "copista" é so·fér, que tem que ver com contagem e registro. Tem diversos significados. Pode denotar um escriba (Jz 5:14) ou um secretário. (Je 36:32; Ez 9:2, 3) O escriba era um escrevente público que assentava por escrito o que outras pessoas ditavam, ou secretário, ou copista, ou então instrutor da Lei. Todavia, o termo "copista" é especialmente apropriado quando aplicado a alguém que trabalhava em copiar a Lei e outras partes das Escrituras Sagradas. Especificamente identificados como copistas são Safã, certo Zadoque e o sacerdote Esdras. — Je 36:10; Ne 13:13; 12:26, 36.

O sacerdote Esdras, que foi de Babilônia a Jerusalém junto com o restante judaico, no sétimo ano do rei persa Artaxerxes (468 AEC), é identificado como "copista destro da lei de Moisés" e como "copista das palavras dos mandamentos de Jeová e dos seus regulamentos para com Israel". (Esd 7:6, 7, 11) No seu tempo, os escribas judeus passaram a destacar-se como grupo de copistas das Escrituras. Milhares de judeus haviam permanecido em Babilônia, e outros haviam sido espalhados por migrações e por motivos de negócios. Salões de assembleia locais, conhecidos como sinagogas, surgiram em diversos lugares, e para estes os copistas tinham de fazer a mão cópias dos manuscritos bíblicos. Faziam isso com grande cuidado. — Veja ESCRIBA.

Foi Esdras, o destro copista sacerdotal, quem leu "o livro da lei de Moisés" para a congregação na restaurada Jerusalém. A competente explanação e instrução dada por Esdras e seus ajudantes, naquela ocasião, resultaram em "grande alegria" e em ricas bênçãos para o povo reunido. — Ne 8.

O salmista, com o coração 'palpitante por causa de um assunto bom' a respeito do Rei messiânico de Deus, disse: "Seja a minha língua o estilo de um destro copista." (Sal 45:1-5) Tinha o desejo de que a sua língua se mostrasse eloquente, à altura do enaltecido tema da sua composição, inspirada por Deus. Assim, o salmista desejava que sua língua funcionasse com eficiência, igual ao estilo na mão dum treinado e destro copista, alguém habilidoso.

COPO. Veja VASOS.

CORÁ [possivelmente: Calvo; Calvície].

1. Um dos três filhos de Esaú com sua esposa heveia, Oolibama; nasceu em Canaã antes da retirada de Esaú para a região montanhosa de Seir. (Gên 36:2, 5-8, 14; 1Cr 1:35) Corá era xeque na terra de Edom. — Gên 36:18.

Um "Xeque Corá" está alistado em Gênesis 36:16 como filho de Elifaz e neto de Esaú. No entanto, o nome não aparece entre os descendentes de Elifaz, em Gênesis 36:11, 12, ou 1 Crônicas 1:36. O Pentateuco Samaritano omite o nome em Gênesis 36:16, e alguns peritos sugerem que seu aparecimento no texto massorético talvez seja erro de copista.

2. Um dos filhos de Hébron, da tribo de Judá. — 1Cr 2:43.

3. Levita coatita, da família de Izar. (Êx 6:16, 18, 21; 1Cr 6:1, 2, 22 [Aminadabe talvez fosse nome alternativo de Izar.]) Durante a peregrinação de Israel pelo ermo, Corá rebelou-se contra a autoridade de Moisés e Arão, fazendo-o em conluio com os rubenitas Datã, Abirão e Om, e também com 250 "maiorais da assembleia" ou "homens de fama". (Núm 16:1, 2) Eles sustentavam que "a assembleia inteira, todos eles, são santos e Jeová está no seu meio", perguntando: "Então, por que vos devíeis erguer acima da congregação de Jeová?" (Núm 16:3-11) Mais tarde, Moisés mandou chamar Datã e Abirão, mas eles se negaram a comparecer, achando que Moisés não tinha direito de convocá-los. (Núm 16:12-15) Disse-se a Corá, à sua assembleia e ao Sumo Sacerdote Arão que se apresentassem perante Jeová, todos supridos de porta-lumes e queimando incenso. — Núm 16:16, 17.

No dia seguinte, Corá e os 250 homens com ele, todos levando porta-lumes com incenso queimando, ficaram de pé à entrada da tenda de reunião, junto com Moisés e Arão. A glória de Jeová apareceu a toda a assembleia, e Deus falou a Moisés e a Arão, dizendo-lhes que se separassem do meio da assembleia, "para que eu os extermine num instante". Todavia, Moisés e Arão intercederam pelo povo, e Deus mandou então que Moisés fizesse a assembleia afastar-se dos tabernáculos de Corá, Datã e Abirão. Isto foi feito. (Núm 16:18-27) Pouco depois, "a terra passou a abrir a sua boca e a tragar tanto a eles como os da sua casa, e todo o gênero humano que pertencia a Corá, e todos os bens". Eles, e todos os que lhes pertenciam, desceram vivos ao Seol, e a terra os cobriu. — Núm 16:28-34.

Aqueles que se encontravam diante da tenda de reunião com os porta-lumes cheios de incenso não escaparam, porque "saiu fogo da parte de Jeová e passou a consumir os duzentos e cinquenta homens que ofereciam incenso". (Núm 16:35) O próprio Corá se encontrava com eles na ocasião, e assim pereceu naquele fogo da parte de Deus. — Núm 26:10.

Os porta-lumes daqueles que haviam conspirado com Corá foram transformados em lâminas de metal com que se revestiu o altar. Isto foi feito "porque os apresentaram perante Jeová, de modo que se tornaram sagrados; e devem servir de sinal para os filhos de Israel". (Núm 16:36-40) Apesar desta poderosa evidência de julgamento divino, logo no dia seguinte toda a assembleia de Israel resmungou contra Moisés e Arão, queixando-se: "Vós é que fizestes morrer o povo de Jeová." Isto suscitou indignação da parte de Deus, e, apesar dos rogos de Moisés e Arão, 14.700 morreram em resultado dum flagelo da parte de Jeová, que só cessou depois de Arão ter feito expiação pelo povo. (Núm 16:41-50) Depois, o cargo sacerdotal de Arão foi confirmado por florescer o bastão dele. — Núm 17.

Que os filhos de Corá não acompanharam seu pai na rebelião parece evidente do registro bíblico, que declara: "No entanto, os filhos de Corá não morreram." (Núm 26:9-11) Os descendentes de Corá obtiveram mais tarde destaque no serviço levítico. — Veja CORAÍTA.

O escritor do livro de Judas relaciona Caim, Balaão e Corá, ao advertir os cristãos para que se guardassem contra homens animalescos que "pereceram na conversa rebelde de Corá". Evidentemente, Corá procurava obter glória para si mesmo. Desafiou os designados por Jeová, tornando-se rebelde, e assim sofreu com justiça a morte, em consequência do seu proceder impróprio. — Ju 10, 11.

CORAÇÃO. Órgão importante do corpo, cuja função principal é bombear o sangue para nutrir as células do organismo. — Le 17:14.

O coração recebe destaque nas Escrituras, sendo mencionado cerca de mil vezes, de uma ou outra maneira. As palavras hebraicas (lev, le·váv) e a grega (kar·dí·a) para "coração" são usadas pelos escritores bíblicos tanto de modo literal como figurativo.

O Coração Literal. Em comparativamente poucos casos referem-se os escritores bíblicos ao órgão literal, o coração. Assim, quando Jeú passou a flechar Jeorão "entre os braços . . . a flecha lhe saiu pelo coração". — 2Rs 9:24; veja também Êx 28:30.

O Coração Figurativo. Na grande maioria das suas ocorrências nas Escrituras, a palavra "coração" é usada figurativamente. Diz-se que representa "a parte central em geral, o íntimo, e assim o homem interior, conforme se manifesta em todas as suas diversas atividades, nos seus desejos, afeições, emoções, paixões, objetivos, seus pensamentos, percepções, imaginações, sua sabedoria, conhecimento, habilidade, suas crenças e seus raciocínios, sua memória e sua consciência de si mesmo". — Journal of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis (Revista da Sociedade de Literatura e Exegese Bíblicas), 1882, p. 67.

Portanto, nas Escrituras, o coração figurativo não se restringe a ser a sede das afeições e motivações, nem se limita ao intelecto. "Entre os semitas . . . tudo o que era peculiar do homem, tanto na categoria dos sentimentos como do intelecto e da vontade, era atribuído ao coração." Ele é "a totalidade do homem interior, em contraste com a carne, que é o homem exterior e tangível". — O Uso Metafórico dos Nomes das Partes do Corpo no Hebraico e no Acadiano, de E. Dhorme, Paris, 1963, pp. 113, 114, 128 (em francês).

O que conta para Deus, que examina o coração, não é a mera aparência externa, mas o que a pessoa realmente é no íntimo. (Pr 17:3; 24:12; Sal 17:3; 1Sa 16:7) De modo que as Escrituras aconselham: "Mais do que qualquer outra coisa a ser guardada, resguarda teu coração [o inteiro homem interior], pois dele procedem as fontes da vida." (Pr 4:23) E insta-se com as esposas cristãs a dar atenção primária, não ao adorno externo, mas à "pessoa secreta do coração, na vestimenta incorruptível dum espírito quieto e brando, que é de grande valor aos olhos de Deus". — 1Pe 3:3, 4.

Na Bíblia, em diversos casos em que ocorre o termo "coração", evidentemente chama-se atenção para a faculdade de pensar, mas não num sentido que isolaria esta faculdade de tudo o mais que constitui a pessoa interior. Moisés exortou os israelitas: "Tens de recordar no teu coração ["tens de recordar na mente", n.] que Jeová é o verdadeiro Deus." E, mais tarde, disse-lhes: "Jeová não vos deu um coração ["mente", n.] para saber." (De 4:39; 29:4) Mostrando que o coração, às vezes, conforme mencionado tanto nas Escrituras Hebraicas como nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, inclui o intelecto, há casos em que ele é associado com "imaginar" (Mt 9:4), "raciocinar" (Mr 2:6), "entender, compreender" (1Rs 3:12; Mr 6:52) e "conhecimento" (Pr 15:14).

Motivação, a força impulsora por trás de nossa conduta, é mais um aspecto vital da pessoa interior, conforme representado pelo "coração". Assim, aqueles que faziam contribuições para a construção do tabernáculo "vieram então, todo aquele cujo coração o impelia". (Êx 35:21, 26, 29; 36:2) O iníquo Hamã "se afoitou" (literalmente: o encheu quanto ao seu coração) a tramar contra os judeus. (Est 7:5 n.; At 5:3) Hebreus 4:12 explica que a palavra de promessa de Deus, igual a uma espada afiada, é capaz de "discernir os pensamentos e as intenções do coração". Também Jesus indicou que do coração procede a força motivadora por trás da nossa conduta, quer boa, quer má. (Mt 15:19; Lu 6:45) Visando cultivarmos as motivações corretas, a Bíblia nos adverte a não permitir que nossos tratos com outros sejam maculados por um desejo de lucro egoísta (Ju 16), nem deixar que o amor ao dinheiro, a ânsia de obter riquezas, determine nosso proceder na vida. (1Ti 6:9, 10; Pr 23:4, 5) Antes, ela nos exorta a cultivar genuíno amor a Deus como base para nosso serviço prestado a ele (1Jo 5:3; De 11:13) e amor altruísta como guia nos tratos com concrentes (Jo 15:12, 13); incentiva-nos também a ter por hábito amar o próximo assim como a nós mesmos (Lu 10:27-37; Gál 6:10). Obviamente, cultivar tais motivações envolve o uso da faculdade de pensar. — Sal 119:2, 24, 111.

A condição de nosso coração figurativo se reflete na nossa disposição, nossa atitude, quer orgulhosa, quer humilde. (Pr 16:5; Mt 11:29) Nossos sentimentos e emoções também fazem parte desse homem interior. Estes incluem amor (De 6:5; 1Pe 1:22), alegria (De 28:47; Jo 16:22), dor e tristeza (Ne 2:2; Ro 9:2), ódio (Le 19:17). Assim, o coração pode estar "ansioso" (Is 35:4), "traspassado" de aflição (Sal 109:22), "derreter-se" de medo de aflições (De 20:8). Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, quando se menciona a mente junto com o coração, "mente" refere-se ao intelecto, ao passo que "coração" se refere às emoções, aos desejos e aos sentimentos da pessoa interior. Por exemplo, Jesus disse: "Tens de amar a Jeová, teu Deus, de todo o teu coração, de toda a tua alma e de toda a tua mente." (Mt 22:37) Mostrou assim que os desejos, sentimentos e emoções da pessoa têm de expressar seu amor a Deus, mas que ela também tem de expressar este amor pela maneira em que usa sua faculdade de pensar, como por absorver conhecimento de Deus e de Cristo. — Jo 17:3.

Todas essas funções, capacidades, emoções e qualidades são atribuídas, não ao coração como órgão literal, mas ao coração figurativo, representando a inteira personalidade interior.

O Coração Pode Ser "Traiçoeiro". Adão, embora perfeito, deixou seu coração ser engodado; ele rejeitou a verdade e se desviou de Deus. (Veja Tg 1:14, 15.) Em consequência, todos os humanos, os descendentes do decaído Adão, foram concebidos em pecado e dados à luz em erro. (Sal 51:5) Depois do Dilúvio, Deus disse a respeito da pecaminosa humanidade em geral: "A inclinação do coração do homem é má desde a sua mocidade." — Gên 8:21.

Deus disse à rebelde nação de Judá: "O coração é mais traiçoeiro do que qualquer outra coisa e está desesperado." (Je 17:9) Isto constitui um sério aviso no sentido de que aqueles que buscam agradar a Deus têm de dar atenção não apenas ao que outros humanos veem neles, mas à espécie de pessoa que realmente são, o homem interior. Alguém talvez tenha sido cristão por muitos anos, tenha bom conhecimento da Bíblia e se sinta confiante quanto a saber lidar com qualquer situação que possa surgir. No entanto, embora saiba muito bem que certo ato é errado e especificamente condenado pela lei de Deus, os pensamentos e desejos que secretamente vem nutrindo podem induzi-lo a uma ação pecaminosa.

Por estes motivos, o cristão, embora conheça a verdade e possa considerar-se maduro, tem de lembrar-se da traição que seu coração pode revelar e, por isso, precisa ter muito cuidado de não se colocar no caminho duma tentação. — Mt 6:13; 1Co 10:8-12.

Servir de "Pleno Coração". O coração literal tem de estar inteiro para funcionar normalmente, mas o coração figurativo pode estar dividido. Davi orou: "Unifica meu coração para temer o teu nome", o que sugere que o coração da pessoa pode ficar dividido com respeito às suas afeições e aos seus temores. (Sal 86:11) Tais pessoas podem ter "corações divididos" — ser mornas na adoração de Deus. (Sal 119:113, BJ; Re 3:16) Alguém pode também ter "coração dúplice" (literalmente: com um coração e um coração), tentando servir a dois amos, ou dizendo enganosamente uma coisa, ao passo que pensa outra. (1Cr 12:33; Sal 12:2 n.) Jesus denunciou fortemente tal hipocrisia dúplice. — Mt 15:7, 8.

Quem procura agradar a Deus não deve ser nem dúbio, nem dúplice, mas tem de servi-lo de pleno coração. (1Cr 28:9) Isto exige esforço diligente, visto que o coração está desesperado e inclinado à maldade. (Je 17:9, 10; Gên 8:21) As ajudas para manter o coração pleno são: oração feita de coração (Sal 119:145; La 3:41), estudo regular da Palavra de Deus (Esd 7:10; Pr 15:28), participação zelosa na pregação das boas novas (veja Je 20:9) e a associação com outros, cujo coração é pleno para com Jeová. — Veja 2Rs 10:15, 16.

O que significa ser "falto de coração"?

As Escrituras falam diversas vezes de alguém ser "falto de coração". O Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento, de Koehler e Baumgartner, Leiden 1958, p. 470) diz que isto significa ser "sem inteligência". A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (Léxico Hebraico e Inglês do Velho Testamento), de William Gesenius (traduzido por E. Robinson, 1836, p. 517), diz que tal pessoa tem "falta de entendimento". "Falto de coração" é aquele que não tem bom juízo ou discernimento. Neste respeito, o "falto de coração" é contrastado com o "entendido" (Pr 10:13), e com o de "discernimento". (Pr 11:12, 15:21) Em outros casos, o "falto de coração" mostra ser "inexperiente", 'tolo', sem sabedoria. (Pr 7:7; 9:1-9, 16; 10:21) Por usar o termo "coração", estes textos mostram que as qualidades positivas da inteira pessoa interior são deficientes.

Que a expressão "falto de coração" inclui a ideia de falta de bom senso ou discernimento é evidente do contexto em que é usada nas Escrituras. Em Provérbios 6:32, o sábio diz que quem comete adultério "é falto de coração". Outras traduções rezam aqui: "carece de senso" (CBC), "sem juízo" (BJ, BLH), "falto de entendimento" (Al, IBB), "insensato" (MC, PIB). O adúltero é "insensato" em vista dos frutos amargos de tal imoralidade sexual. (Pr 1:2-4; 6:23-35; 7:7, 21-27) Por fora ele talvez pareça ser alguém de boa reputação, mas o homem interior tem séria falta de desenvolvimento correto.

Outro provérbio diz: "O homem falto de coração ["destituído de senso", CBC] dá apertos de mão [gesto usado para ratificar um acordo], prestando plena fiança diante do seu companheiro." (Pr 17:18) Talvez levado pelo sentimentalismo, tal homem entra num acordo que poderá muito bem resultar em perda de dinheiro e em sérias dificuldades econômicas para ele. Embora talvez seja bem intencionado ou tenha motivação louvável, não obstante revela falta de bom senso.

Em contraste com alguém "falto de coração", os provérbios também falam daquele que "adquire coração". Conforme diz Provérbios 19:8: "Quem adquire coração ama a sua própria alma. Quem guarda o discernimento vai achar o bem." É alguém que dá séria consideração ao que ele realmente é bem no íntimo. Usa a mente para obter conhecimento exato de Deus e dos caminhos dele; medita nessas coisas e procura aplicá-las. Amolda cuidadosamente seus desejos, suas afeições, suas emoções e seus objetivos na vida em harmonia com aquilo de que se dá conta que será aprovado por Deus. Por fazer isso, beneficia-se a si mesmo, demonstrando que "ama a sua própria alma". Edificando assim a pessoa interior, "guarda o discernimento", porque fortifica de modo sadio os fatores que fortemente influenciam sua própria capacidade de pensar claramente e agir sabiamente.

O Coração de Deus. Jeová revela que ele tem afeições e emoções, sendo descrito na Bíblia como tendo "coração". No tempo do Dilúvio, "sentiu-se magoado no coração", deplorando que os homens haviam rejeitado Seu governo justo, tornando necessário que ele deixasse de ser benfeitor para se tornar destruidor deles. (Gên 6:6) Em contraste, o "coração" de Deus 'alegra-se' quando seus servos são fiéis. (Pr 27:11) Coisas tais como a cruel oferta de humanos como sacrifícios queimados, praticada por alguns dos israelitas desviados, nunca subiram ao coração de Deus, mostrando também que ele não pode ser um Deus de tormento eterno. — Je 7:31; 19:5.

Centro ou Meio de Algo. Visto que o coração literal é um órgão central do organismo, o termo "coração" é às vezes aplicado ao centro ou meio de alguma coisa, como o "coração da terra" (Mt 12:40), o "coração do mar" (Êx 15:8; Jon 2:3), e o "coração da grande árvore" (2Sa 18:14). Em Deuteronômio 4:11, a expressão "o meio do céu" significa literalmente "o coração dos céus". — Veja NM n.

Profético. O uso simbólico do "coração" ocorre de modo profético em Daniel 7:4, onde um animal leonino, representando o reino de Babilônia, foi posto em dois pés e foi-lhe dado "um coração de homem", querendo dizer que não mais possuía o corajoso "coração do leão". (2Sa 17:10) Foi então derrotado pelo simbólico "urso", a Medo-Pérsia. — Da 7:5; veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.

CORAGEM. A qualidade de ser forte, destemido, ousado e valente. A coragem é o contrário do medo, da timidez e da covardia. — Mr 6:49, 50; 2Ti 1:7.

O verbo hebraico que mais frequentemente expressa o sentido de ser corajoso é hha·záq. Significa basicamente "ser forte". (2Sa 13:28; 2Cr 19:11; Ez 3:14) Muitas vezes, hha·záq é usado junto com 'a·máts, que também significa "ser forte". Ambos os verbos são encontrados nas expressões: "Sede corajosos e fortes" (Jos 10:25) e: "Sede corajosos e fortifique-se o vosso coração." — Sal 31:24.

A ideia de enfraquecer ou debilitar é expressa pelo termo hebraico ra·fáh, que às vezes pode significar 'perder a coragem' (Je 49:24) ou 'mostrar-se desanimado'. (Pr 24:10) Quando traduzido por 'abaixar-se', como na frase: "Não se abaixem as tuas mãos", tem o sentido de "perder a coragem, tornar-se fraco demais para agir". — Sof 3:16; Is 13:7; Ez 7:17.

Em grego, a condição de ser destemido ou corajoso é expressa pelos verbos thar·ré·o (2Co 5:8) e thar·sé·o. (Mt 9:2) O verbo tol·má·o é diversamente traduzido por 'atrever-se' (Ju 9), 'ter coragem' (Mr 12:34), 'aventurar-se' (Ro 15:18), 'ser ousado' (2Co 11:21), dando ênfase à manifestação de coragem ou destemor num empreendimento.

Os servos de Deus sempre tiveram necessidade de coragem para permanecer fiéis ao Altíssimo. Assim, quando os israelitas estavam prontos para entrar na Terra da Promessa, Moisés disse-lhes: "Sede corajosos e fortes", e ele repetiu a mesma admoestação ao seu sucessor designado, Josué. (De 31:6, 7) Reforçando estas palavras de Moisés, o próprio Jeová disse mais tarde a Josué: "Sê corajoso e forte . . . Somente sê corajoso e muito forte." (Jos 1:6, 7, 9) Para ter a necessária coragem, a nação tinha de escutar e aprender a lei de Jeová, e obedecer a ela. (De 31:9-12) De modo similar, para se tornar corajoso e forte, mandou-se que Josué lesse regularmente a lei de Deus e cuidasse em aplicá-la. — Jos 1:8.

As Escrituras contêm muitas ordens expressas para se ter coragem, e elas mostram também como obtê-la. (Sal 31:24) A associação com coadoradores pode ser de grande ajuda. (At 28:15) No Salmo 27:14, Davi, ele mesmo homem de coragem, disse: "Sê corajoso e fortifique-se o teu coração." Nos versículos precedentes do Salmo 27, ele revela o que o ajudou a ser corajoso: Estribar-se em Jeová como "o baluarte" da sua vida (v. 1), experiências anteriores de como Jeová lidou com os adversários dele (vv. 2, 3), apreço pelo templo de adoração de Jeová (v. 4), confiar na proteção de Jeová, e na sua ajuda e na libertação por ele (vv. 5-10), instrução contínua nos princípios dos caminhos justos de Deus (v. 11), e as qualidades de fé e esperança (vv. 13, 14).

O cristão precisa ter coragem para continuar incontaminado pelas atitudes e ações do mundo em inimizade com Jeová Deus, e para permanecer fiel a Ele, apesar de ter de enfrentar o ódio do mundo. Jesus Cristo disse aos seus discípulos: "No mundo tereis tribulação, mas, coragem! eu venci o mundo." (Jo 16:33) O Filho de Deus nunca cedeu à influência do mundo, mas triunfou sobre o mundo por não se tornar em nenhum sentido igual a ele. O exemplo primoroso de Jesus Cristo, como vencedor, e o resultado do seu proceder impecável pode encher a pessoa da necessária coragem para imitá-lo em permanecer separada do mundo e sem mácula dele. — Jo 17:16.

CORAÍTA [De (Pertencente a) Corá]. Descendente do Corá que se rebelou nos dias de Moisés. Os coraítas eram uma casa paterna dos levitas coatitas e descendiam de Corá por meio dos seus três filhos, Assir, Elcana e Abiasafe. (Êx 6:18, 21, 24; Núm 16:1-3) "Os filhos de Corá não morreram" junto com seu pai (Núm 26:10, 11), evidentemente porque não o acompanharam na rebelião.

No recenseamento de Israel feito nas planícies de Moabe, "a família dos coraítas" foi registrada junto com as famílias levitas. (Núm 26:57, 58) Enquanto Davi ainda estava sob as restrições impostas pelo Rei Saul, certos coraítas estavam entre os poderosos que se juntaram a ele em Ziclague. (1Cr 12:1, 6) O cantor levita Hemã e o profeta Samuel eram coraítas (1Cr 6:33-38), e o Rei Davi organizou membros da família de Hemã como cantores. (1Cr 15:16, 17; 16:37, 41, 42; 25:1, 4-6) Havia coraítas entre os porteiros da casa de Jeová (1Cr 26:1-9, 19), e, nos dias de Jeosafá, "se levantaram os levitas dos filhos dos coatitas e dos filhos dos coraítas para louvar a Jeová, o Deus de Israel, com voz extraordinariamente alta", por causa da promessa de serem libertos das forças conjuntas de Moabe, Amom e Seir. — 2Cr 20:14-19.

Os cabeçalhos dos Salmos 42, 44-49, 84, 85, 87 e 88 mencionam especificamente os filhos de Corá. Embora seu antepassado tivesse sido rebelde, Jeová não culpou os filhos de Corá pelo erro dele, e por causa da fidelidade deles, foram abençoados e honrados com serviço no templo.

CORAL. Depósitos calcários de certos organismos marinhos chamados pólipos. Vivendo em colônias, estas diminutas criaturas de águas tépidas absorvem do mar os sais de cálcio e com eles constroem estruturas arbustivas, belamente ramificadas, que são duras como pedra. Com o tempo, as formações de alguns tipos de coral podem constituir grandes recifes coralinos e os alicerces de ilhas coralinas. Há corais de cores diferentes, havendo variedades de branco, preto e vermelho, estas últimas sendo os corais mais caros e os mais desejados nos tempos antigos. (Veja La 4:7.) Tiro, em certa época, era famosa por seu comércio de corais, colhidos do Mediterrâneo, do Mar Vermelho e do oceano Índico. (Ez 27:16) Do coral natural, artesãos modelavam artisticamente diversos adornos muito apreciados.

Por causa do grande valor dado ao coral, a Bíblia faz diversas comparações interessantes. O conhecimento e a sabedoria certamente ultrapassam o valor dos corais. (Jó 28:18; Pr 3:15; 8:11; 20:15) O mesmo se dá com a esposa capaz; "seu valor é muito maior do que o de corais". — Pr 31:10.

CORANTES, TINGIR. A arte de repassar determinadas tonalidades e matizes a fios, tecidos e outros materiais por meio de corantes era conhecida e praticada antes dos dias de Abraão, e provavelmente é tão antiga como a arte de tecelagem. Os israelitas usavam materiais tais como fio azul, fibras carmíneas e lã tingida de roxo para o tabernáculo e para as vestimentas sacerdotais. (Êx caps. 25-28, 35, 38, 39) A tingidura, mormente uma atividade doméstica nos tempos primitivos, com o tempo tornou-se um empreendimento comercial de vulto em diversos lugares. Os antigos egípcios eram famosos pelos seus tecidos tingidos de cores especialmente brilhantes (Ez 27:7), e após o declínio do Egito, Tiro e outras cidades fenícias tornaram-se importantes centros de tingidura.

Processos Antigos. Os processos de tingidura variavam de lugar em lugar. Às vezes tingia-se o fio, ao passo que em outros casos o corante era aplicado ao tecido. Parece que o fio era banhado duas vezes no corante, sendo espremido depois da segunda remoção do tanque, para que se pudesse conservar o valioso corante. O fio era então estendido para secar.

Conchas do múrice; o molusco no interior era fonte dum altamente prezado corante roxo ou púrpuro.

Cada tecido tinha de ser tratado de modo diferente. Às vezes, embora raramente, o corante tinha uma afinidade natural com a fibra a ser tingida. Mas, quando isso não acontecia, era necessário tratar o tecido primeiro com um mordente, uma substância que possui atração tanto pela fibra como pelo corante. Para servir como mordente, a substância precisa pelo menos ter atração pelo corante, para combinar com ele, a fim de formar um composto colorido insolúvel. As descobertas revelam que os egípcios usavam mordentes nos processos de tingidura. Por exemplo, o vermelho, o amarelo e o azul eram três das cores que eles usavam, e diz-se que esses corantes não podiam ter sido fixados sem o uso de óxidos de arsênico, ferro e estanho como mordentes.

Evidentemente, peles de animais eram primeiro curtidas e depois tingidas. Até mesmo recentemente, na Síria, peles de carneiro têm sido curtidas em sumagre e depois tingidas. Depois de o corante secar, as peles eram esfregadas com óleo e então polidas. Sapatos e outros artigos de couro usados pelos beduínos têm sido tingidos de vermelho assim, e bem que nos podem lembrar as "peles de carneiros tingidas de vermelho" usadas no tabernáculo. — Êx 25:5.

Relacionado com materiais tingidos, é interessante a inscrição num prédio do rei assírio Tiglate-Pileser III. Depois de contar as suas campanhas militares contra a Palestina e contra a Síria, ele declara que recebeu tributo de certo Hirão, de Tiro, e de outros governantes. Os objetos alistados incluem "vestes de linho com enfeites multicoloridos, lã tingida de azul, lã tingida de roxo, . . . também cordeiros, cujas peles esticadas eram tingidas de roxo, (e) aves silvestres, cujas asas estendidas eram tingidas de azul". — Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, pp. 282, 283.

Fontes de Corantes. Os corantes eram adquiridos de diversas fontes. Na Palestina, os corantes amarelos eram obtidos das folhas de amendoeira e da casca moída de romã, embora os fenícios usassem também curcumina e açafroa. Os hebreus podiam obter corante preto da casca da romãzeira, e o vermelho das raízes da garança (Rubia tinctorum). Anileiras (Indigofera tinctoria) que provavelmente foram introduzidas na Palestina procedentes do Egito ou da Síria, podiam ser usadas para obter o corante azul. Parte de um método usado para tingir a lã de tonalidades púrpuras consistia em deixar a lã de molho em suco de uva por uma noite e polvilhar sobre ela garança pulverizada.

Corantes carmíneos e carmesins tinham por fonte o corante mais antigo conhecido, um inseto parasítico homóptero da família dos coccídeos (o Coccus ilicis). Visto que a fêmea viva, aproximadamente do tamanho dum caroço de cereja, parece uma frutinha, os gregos aplicavam-lhe sua palavra kók·kos, que significa "baga", ou "grão". O nome árabe do inseto é qirmiz ou kermez, da qual deriva a palavra "carmesim". Este inseto é encontrado em todo o Oriente Médio. Apenas seus ovos contêm o corante carmíneo, rico em ácido quermésico. Perto do fim de abril, a fêmea sem asas, cheia de ovos, prende-se por meio do seu probóscide a galhos, e às vezes a folhas, do carvalho-quermes (Quercus coccifera). As larvas, ou quermes, são ajuntadas e secas, e o valioso corante é obtido por fervê-las em água. Este é o corante vermelho que foi extensivamente usado para os acessórios do tabernáculo e para as vestes usadas pelo sumo sacerdote de Israel.

O corante roxo ou púrpuro era obtido de mariscos ou moluscos tais como o Murex trunculus e o Murex brandaris. No pescoço destas criaturas existe uma pequena glândula que contém apenas uma gota do fluido chamado de a flor. Inicialmente tem a aparência e a consistência de creme, mas exposto ao ar e à luz, muda gradualmente para uma intensa cor violeta ou roxa. Esses mariscos são encontrados ao longo do litoral do mar Mediterrâneo, e os matizes adquiridos deles variam segundo a sua localização. Os espécimes maiores eram abertos individualmente, e o precioso fluido era removido com cuidado, ao passo que os menores eram triturados com pilão. Visto que a quantidade de fluido retirado de cada marisco era bem pequena, acumular uma quantidade considerável era um processo dispendioso. Por isso, este corante era caro, e vestimentas tingidas de roxo tornaram-se distintivo de pessoas abastadas ou dos em alta posição. (Est 8:15; Lu 16:19) Sugeriu-se outro marisco (o mexilhão cerúleo) como fonte do corante azul.

A antiga Tiro ficou famosa pelo corante púrpuro ou roxo conhecido como púrpura tíria ou imperial. Embora se diga que os tírios empregavam um método de tingimento duplo, desconhece-se a fórmula exata usada para obter esta cor. O corante era evidentemente obtido dos moluscos Murex e Purpura, tendo sido encontradas pilhas de conchas vazias do Murex trunculus ao longo do litoral de Tiro e na vizinhança de Sídon. A cidade fenícia de Tiro é descrita por Jeová como tendo lã tingida de roxo e outros materiais coloridos, bem como negociando com tais mercadorias. — Ez 27:2, 7, 24; veja CORES.

CORAZIM. Cidade entre as que foram repreendidas por Jesus, situada junto à extremidade N do mar da Galileia. (Mt 11:21; FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 739) Os peritos costumam identificá-la com Khirbet Kerazeh (Korazim), apenas a uns 3 km ao NNO do lugar sugerido para a antiga Cafarnaum (Mt 11:23), cidade que Jesus evidentemente usava como base de operações durante o seu grande ministério galileu, de mais de dois anos de duração. Jesus proferiu um vindouro "ai" para os habitantes judeus de Corazim, os quais, durante aquele período, eram testemunhas de "obras poderosas" que teriam induzido os pagãos de Tiro e de Sídon ao arrependimento, e que, não obstante, deixaram de agir em harmonia com a mensagem de Jesus. Depois disso, no outono setentrional de 32 EC, quando Jesus enviou os 70 discípulos durante a última parte do seu ministério na Judeia, ele inseriu na sua palestra uma referência à atitude impenitente de Corazim, evidentemente para salientar o grande mal que sobreviria às cidades indiferentes, contra as quais os seus discípulos deviam 'tirar o pó' dos pés. — Lu 10:10-16.

CORBÃ. Conforme explicado em Marcos 7:11, "corbã" é "uma dádiva dedicada a Deus". A palavra grega aqui traduzida "corbã" é kor·bán, o equivalente da palavra hebraica qor·bán, que significa uma oferta. Qor·bán é usada em Levítico e em Números, e aplica-se tanto às ofertas com sangue como às exangues. (Le 1:2, 3; 2:1; Núm 5:15; 6:14, 21) Esta palavra hebraica é também usada em Ezequiel 20:28 e 40:43. Aparentada com a palavra grega kor·bán é kor·ba·nás, que aparece em Mateus 27:6, onde se relata que os principais sacerdotes disseram que seria ilícito tomar o dinheiro de traição, que Judas havia lançado dentro do templo, e deitar estas peças de prata "no tesouro sagrado [uma forma de kor·ba·nás]", porque eram "o preço de sangue".

Na época do ministério de Jesus Cristo na Terra, já se desenvolvera uma prática condenável com relação a dádivas dedicadas a Deus. Neste respeito, Jesus denunciou os fariseus como hipócritas, porque punham as suas próprias tradições à frente da lei de Deus. Professando resguardar para Deus aquilo que havia sido declarado "corbã", eles desconsideravam o requisito divino de honrar os pais. (Mt 15:3-6) Alguém talvez simplesmente dissesse: 'Seja corbã', ou: 'Isto é corbã', a respeito da sua propriedade ou de parte dela. Os fariseus daquela época ensinavam que, uma vez que alguém tivesse declarado seus bens como "corbã", ou uma dádiva dedicada a Deus, ele não podia usá-los para satisfazer as necessidades de seus pais, não importando quão necessitados eles estivessem, embora ele mesmo pudesse usufruir esses bens até a sua própria morte, se quisesse fazer isso. Assim, embora esses fariseus professassem honrar a Deus, seu coração não estava em harmonia com os requisitos justos dele. — Mr 7:9-13.

O historiador Josefo associou "corbã" com pessoas, declarando: "Aqueles que se descrevem como 'Corbã' para Deus — significando o que os gregos chamariam de 'dádiva' — quando se querem livrar desta obrigação, têm de pagar um preço estipulado aos sacerdotes." (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], IV, 73 [iv, 4]) Todavia, o termo "corbã" era geralmente aplicado mais à propriedade dedicada como dádiva a Deus.

CORÇA [hebr.: 'ai·ya·láh; 'ai·yé·leth]. A fêmea do corço (gamo); membro da família dos cervídeos. A corça é uma criatura esbelta e graciosa, tímida, de andar seguro e veloz. Quando prestes a dar à luz, as corças se retiram para os recessos da floresta, e depois continuam em retiro, cuidando ternamente dos filhotes e protegendo-os até que possam cuidar de si mesmos. — Jó 39:1; Sal 29:9.

A graciosa e mansa corça consta das metáforas vívidas da Bíblia. (Pr 5:18, 19; Cân 2:7; 3:5; veja GAZELA.) Faz-se alusão à velocidade e ao andar seguro deste animal, que o habilitam a fugir dos seus inimigos. (2Sa 22:1, 34; Sal 18:32, 33; Hab 3:19) Possivelmente uma alusão à habilidade e rapidez na guerra, Jacó descreveu profeticamente a tribo de Naftali como "corça esbelta". (Gên 49:21) O salmista, quando privado do livre acesso ao santuário, compara seu anseio por Deus ao da cerva por regos de água. (Sal 42:1-4) O quadro da corça, ou gama, abandonar seu filhote, algo tão contrário à sua bem conhecida solicitude para com os seus filhotes em condições normais, indica a severidade das secas que sobreviriam a Judá. — Je 14:1, 2, 5.

CORÇO [hebr.: yahh·múr]. Macho da corça, duma variedade de pequeno porte, parecida com a gazela. O corço (Capreolus capreolus) atinge mais de 60 cm na espádua e tem cerca de 1,2 m de comprimento. Só os machos possuem armações, e estas caem todo ano. No verão, o corço tem pele castanho-avermelhada, e isto talvez tenha sido a base para o seu nome hebraico, yahh·múr, que se considera derivar dum radical que significa "ser vermelho". Este animal não costuma ser gregário. Pequenos grupos de três ou quatro, o macho, a fêmea e um ou dois filhotes podem ser vistos pastando juntos. O corço tem apenas uma fêmea para toda a vida.

Sendo ruminante e tendo casco partido, o corço era aceitável como alimento, segundo os termos da Lei mosaica. (De 14:5, 6) A carne desta criatura era uma das regularmente providas para a mesa do Rei Salomão. — 1Rs 4:22, 23.

CORDÃO, CORDA. Diversas palavras hebraicas e uma grega são usadas nas Escrituras para indicar linha, cordel, cordão e corda, de diversos tipos. A palavra hebraica mais empregada é hhé·vel. A palavra hhé·vel é usada tanto em sentido literal como figurativo para indicar cordão e corda. (2Sa 17:13; Ec 12:6; Os 11:4) Entre outras coisas, pode indicar uma "corda" para medir (2Sa 8:2) e assim é às vezes usada como termo topográfico para uma área medida, um "lote" (Jos 17:5, 14; 19:9), ou para uma "região". — De 3:4, 13, 14.

A única palavra grega usada nas Escrituras para indicar uma corda é skhoi·ní·on, aplicada a um cordão ou a uma corda, e pode denotar uma corda feita de canas ou juncos. Jesus Cristo, em justa indignação, "depois de fazer um chicote de cordas, expulsou do templo a todos com as ovelhas e o gado", evidentemente não usando o chicote de cordas em homens, mas nos animais. — Jo 2:13-17.

Alguns cordões e cordas dos tempos antigos eram feitos de linho, outros de fibras de cânhamo, de fibras de rami, ou das da tamareira. Cordas fortes, grossas, feitas de fibras de casca de palmeira, foram descobertas em Eziom-Géber. Juncos e canas de vários tipos evidentemente também eram usados, e entre os materiais empregados pelos egípcios havia tiras entrelaçadas de couro, que constituíam uma corda muito forte. As fibras de rami (Boehmeria nivea, uma planta asiática da família das urticáceas) produziam cordas muito fortes, bastante úteis para redes de pesca.

Cordões eram às vezes usados como acessórios da roupa. Por exemplo, Judá parece ter levado seu anel de chancela num "cordão". (Hebr.: pa·thíl [Gên 38:18, 25]) "Correntinhas trançadas, como trabalho de cordas, de ouro puro", foram enfiadas nas duas argolas nas extremidades do peitoral usado pelo sumo sacerdote de Israel. (Êx 39:15-18) Objetos palaciais do rei persa Assuero incluíam "linho, fino algodão e pano azul, seguros com cordas de tecido fino". — Est 1:6.

"Cordões de tenda" (do hebr.: meh·thár) eram usados para segurar tendas. (Is 54:2; Êx 39:40) Havia "cordas" de carroça (hebr.: ʽavóth [Is 5:18]) e cordões para ser usados como "corda de arco". (Hebr.: yetha·rím [Jó 30:11; Sal 11:2]) Cordas e cordões eram também usados para amarrar cativos. (Jz 15:13-15; Ez 3:25) Cordas serviam para aprestar navios. (Is 33:23) Raabe foi mandada atar um "cordão [do hebr.: tiq·wáh] de fio [hebr.: hhut] escarlate" na janela, para que ela e os da sua casa fossem poupados durante a destruição de Jericó. — Jos 2:18-21.

Uso Figurado. O congregante disse: "Um cordão tríplice não pode ser prontamente rompido em dois." (Ec 4:12) Desfiando-se um cordão tríplice, é possível romper prontamente cada fio. Mas, se continuam trançados, o resultante "cordão tríplice" não pode ser facilmente rompido em dois. De modo similar, os servos de Deus, como que entrelaçados um com o outro em união de conceito e de objetivo, têm maior força espiritual, tal qual é necessária para lidar com oposição. O congregante instou também a lembrar o Criador na juventude, "antes que se remova a corda de prata" (Ec 12:1, 6), "a corda de prata" evidentemente referindo-se à medula espinhal, cuja ruptura resulta na morte.

Davi, referindo-se a um tempo em que a morte violenta parecia iminente e parecia certo que o Seol o aguardava, disse que "cercaram-me as cordas da morte" e "rodearam-me as próprias cordas do Seol". Evidentemente, ele se sentia como se tivesse sido envolto por cordas que o puxavam para a sepultura, levando-o à morte e ao Seol. — Sal 18:4, 5.

Isaías disse: "Ai dos que puxam o erro com cordas de inveracidade, e o pecado como que com cordas de carroça", talvez para indicar o apego deles ao erro e ao pecado de maneira similar à em que animais são amarrados com cordas, ou com cordões, às carroças que puxam. — Is 5:18.

Num ato evidentemente simbólico de servil sujeição e humilhação, os sírios derrotados "cingiram-se de serapilheira sobre os seus lombos, com cordas sobre as suas cabeças, e entraram até o rei de Israel", procurando a indulgência de Acabe para com o rei sírio Ben-Hadade II. Cada um deles talvez usasse uma corda como tira em volta da cabeça ou do pescoço. — 1Rs 20:31-34.

Assim como governantes e nações pagãos, que não queriam tornar-se vassalos dos israelitas, ajuntaram-se contra Deus e seu ungido, nos tempos antigos, assim a profecia messiânica predisse que os reis da terra e os dignitários se aglomerariam "à uma contra Jeová e contra o seu ungido, dizendo: 'Rompamos as suas ligaduras e lancemos de nós as suas cordas!'" Quaisquer restrições impostas por Jeová e seu Ungido sofreriam oposição por parte dos governantes e das nações. Todavia, seus esforços de romper tais ligaduras e lançar de si tais cordas haviam de ser fúteis. — Sal 2:1-9.

Cordões de tenda rompidos e assim não mais podendo manter a tenda em pé são usados de modo figurativo numa descrição de desolação. (Je 10:20) Mas, há uma garantia profética de exatamente o oposto, de restauração e favor de Jeová, nas seguintes palavras: "Contempla Sião, a vila de nossas festividades! Teus próprios olhos verão Jerusalém, lugar de permanência sem perturbação, tenda que ninguém enfardará. Nunca serão arrancadas as suas estacas de tenda, e nenhuma das suas cordas se romperá." — Is 33:20.

CORDEIRO. Veja OVELHA.

CORDEL DE MEDIR. Linha, corda ou cordel usado para medir. (1Rs 7:15, 23; Am 7:17; Za 2:1, 2) Alguns cordéis de medir, pelo que parece, estavam marcados em côvados. (2Cr 4:2) A extensão de determinado terreno era medida por se estender ou lançar um cordel de medir sobre a sua superfície. (Veja Jó 38:4, 5; Sal 78:55; Miq 2:4, 5.) Construtores o usavam, por exemplo, para planejar uma cidade (Je 31:38, 39; Za 1:16), e o escultor de madeira talvez o usasse para fixar as dimensões dum objeto. (Is 44:13) Em certa ocasião, o Rei Davi parece ter medido os derrotados moabitas para separar aqueles que deviam ser mortos daqueles que deviam ser preservados vivos. — 2Sa 8:2.

Uso Figurado. Em sentido figurado, o "cordel de medir" indica uma regra ou norma de ação. (Is 28:10, 13) Por exemplo, Jeová fez do "juízo [justiça] o cordel de medir" ao lidar com seu povo infiel. (Is 28:17) Aplicar ele a Jerusalém o mesmo cordel de medir que aplicara a Samaria indicou para Jerusalém uma desolação similar. (2Rs 21:13; La 2:8) Estender ele sobre Edom "o cordel de medir do vácuo" igualmente pressagiava destruição, e o uso deste cordel de medir significava repartir a terra aos animais que começariam a morar nas regiões desoladas de Edom. — Is 34:5-17.

Davi considerava a sua relação com Jeová como seu quinhão na vida. Esta era uma herança muito satisfatória, induzindo-o a dizer: "As próprias cordas para medir caíram para mim em lugares aprazíveis." — Sal 16:5, 6; compare isso com Núm 18:20.

Os corpos celestes atestam a atividade criativa de Deus, e visto que seu testemunho silencioso enche a terra, o salmista podia dizer a respeito deles: "Seu cordel de medir saiu por toda a terra." — Sal 19:1-4; Ro 1:20.

Veja CANA, II.

CORE.

1. Levita coatita "dos filhos de Asafe", e descendente de Corá. (Êx 6:16, 18, 21; 1Cr 9:19; 26:1) Salum, um dos "guardas das portas da tenda", é descrito como "filho de Core, filho de Ebiasafe, filho de Corá", em 1 Crônicas 9:19. Este texto não menciona todas as gerações entre Salum e Ebiasafe, mas os nomes fornecidos pertencem a esta mesma genealogia. Primeiro Crônicas 26:1 chama o porteiro Meselemias de "filho de Core".

2. Levita, "filho de Imná" e "porteiro ao leste" do templo nos dias do Rei Ezequias. Ele estava "encarregado das ofertas voluntárias do verdadeiro Deus, para dar a contribuição de Jeová e as coisas santíssimas", e tinha outros homens sob o seu controle. — 2Cr 31:14-16.

CORES. As palavras e expressões bíblicas que indicam a cor não usam as dezenas de termos precisos encontrados nas modernas tabelas de cores. Os escritores bíblicos transmitiam a ideia da cor por descrever o objeto em consideração, ou por comparar coisas pouco conhecidas com outras bem conhecidas. (Êx 16:31; Re 1:14) A aparência de coisas comuns, tais como sangue, neve, certas aves, fogo, pedras preciosas, e assim por diante, era usada como referência a cores. (2Rs 3:22; Sal 51:7; Cân 5:11; Mt 16:2, 3; Re 9:17) Cores eram também empregadas em sentido figurado, e ideias específicas às vezes eram associadas com cores específicas.

Amarelo e amarelo sulfurino são mencionados. — Le 13:30, 32, 36; Re 9:17.

Azul descreve diversos tipos de materiais tingidos, tais como linha, cordéis, pano e vestimenta. (Êx 26:4, 31, 36; 39:22; Núm 4:7) Um cordel azul devia ser colocado acima das franjas da aba da veste de todo israelita. (Núm 15:38, 39) Azul jacintino é uma das belas cores que decoravam as couraças mencionadas em Revelação 9:17.

Branco é a cor mais mencionada nas Escrituras. Além de seu uso descritivo, serve também de símbolo da justiça e da pureza espiritual. (Re 3:4; 7:9, 13, 14) O cavalo branco, conforme retratado em Revelação (Apocalipse) 6:2 e 19:11, simboliza guerra limpa, justa, travada sob a direção de Jesus Cristo.

Vestes brancas eram usadas pelos pobres e também pelos de posição superior. Quando se menciona a vestimenta dos anjos, usualmente eles são retratados trajados de branco. (Mr 16:5; Jo 20:12; Re 19:14) Algumas outras coisas descritas como brancas são cabelos (Le 13:3; Mt 5:36), carne (Le 13:16), campos de cereais prontos para a colheita (Jo 4:35) e o trono de julgamento justo, de Deus (Re 20:11). Jesus comparou os escribas e os fariseus a sepulcros caiados. (Mt 23:27) Ele tirou esta ilustração do costume de caiar os sepulcros na vizinhança de Jerusalém antes da Páscoa, para proteger o povo que vinha celebrar a Páscoa contra tornar-se impuro por tocar neles. Diferenciam-se na Bíblia graus de brancura, como, por exemplo, branco avermelhado (Le 13:19, 24) e branco baço. — Le 13:39.

Carmesim era uma das cores de dispendiosos panos tingidos. (2Cr 2:7, 14; 3:14; Na 2:3) Os pecados são também comparados à viva cor carmesim. — Is 1:18.

Cor de fogo simbolicamente descreve a aparência do grande dragão, Satanás, o Diabo. (Re 12:3) Um cavalo desta cor simboliza guerra entre nações, conforme retratado em Revelação 6:4.

Escarlate, um vermelho de matiz muito vivo, é encontrado em referências a cordões ou linhas, panos e vestes; também para o pecado. (Gên 38:28, 30; Núm 4:8; Jos 2:18; Je 4:30; Mt 27:28; Is 1:18) A “fera” descrita em Revelação 17 é de cor escarlate (v. 3), diferente da “fera” do capítulo 13 A meretriz sentada na fera cor de escarlate está vestida de púrpura e de escarlate. (Re 17:3-5) A visão simboliza assim num quadro as reivindicações régias feitas pela “fera”, e o luxo e a realeza usufruídos pela mulher montada nela.

Grisalho (ou cãs) é usualmente empregado com referência ao cabelo de pessoas idosas. (Gên 42:38; Le 19:32; Pr 20:29) Lã cara às vezes era de cor cinzento-avermelhada. — Ez 27:18.

Marrom é encontrado apenas numa descrição de carneiros. — Gên 30:32, 33, 35, 40.

Preto é mencionado na descrição de cabelos (Le 13:31; Mt 5:36), de cavalos (Za 6:2, 6), da pele (Jó 30:30) e do sol (Re 6:12). Em Revelação 6:5, 6, o cavalo preto representa a fome. As Escrituras mencionam também “mármore negro” e “pintura preta”. — Est 1:6; Je 4:30.

Púrpura e roxo são muitas vezes mencionados nas Escrituras, embora não se faça distinção entre as muitas variedades de matizes de púrpura produzidas por diferentes corantes ou métodos de tingimento. (Êx 25:4; Núm 4:13; Ez 27:7, 16; Da 5:7, 29; Mr 15:17, 20; Lu 16:19; Re 17:4) Por ser dispendiosa, esta cor frequentemente era associada com riqueza, honra e majestade régia, ou as simbolizava.

Verde é frequentemente encontrado nas Escrituras, mas raras vezes se refere estritamente à cor. Antes, traz à mente o frescor e o vigor de vegetação em crescimento, ou denota a condição saudável e próspera de coisas. (Gên 1:30; 9:3; Êx 10:15; 2Rs 19:26; Re 8:7) Verde-amarelado é usado com referência à cor de coisas tais como manchas leprosas em panos ou em casas de pedra e argamassa, ou na descrição de ouro refinado. — Le 13:49; 14:37; Sal 68:13.

Vermelhão (Je 22:14; Ez 23:14) refere-se a um tipo de tinta avermelhada feita de óxidos de ferro ou de chumbo. Parece ter sido introduzido primeiro pelos fenícios, que o importavam de depósitos naturais encontrados na África do Norte. Numa época posterior, exploraram-se depósitos similares no Oriente Médio.

Vermelho, rubro e baio são termos usados para descrever diversas coisas, tais como cabelo (Gên 25:25), peles de carneiro tingidas (Êx 25:5), animais (Núm 19:2; Jz 5:10; Za 1:8), vestimenta (Is 63:2) e o céu vespertino (Mt 16:2, 3). A palavra hebraica para “vermelho” (’a·dhóm) deriva de dam, que significa “sangue”. — Gên 25:30; 9:6.

Cores mistas. Além das cores mais específicas, há diversas expressões na Bíblia que descrevem objetos com cores bastante indefinidas ou com uma mistura de cores — por exemplo: cor malhada (Gên 30:32, 33; 31:10, 12; Za 6:3, 6), cores brilhantes (Is 63:1), cores variadas (Je 12:9; Ez 16:16; 17:3; 27:7, 16, 24), cores variegadas (Za 6:3, 7), ruivo (1Sa 16:12), corado (Cân 5:10), listrado (Gên 37:3; 2Sa 13:19), trigueiro (Cân 1:6) e duas cores (Ez 27:24). — Veja CORANTES, TINGIR.

O Manto de Cristo. A cor do manto com que Jesus Cristo foi vestido no dia da sua execução tem induzido alguns a argumentar que existe uma discrepância no registro bíblico com referência a esta veste. Mateus disse que os soldados “puseram sobre ele um manto escarlate” (Mt 27:28), ao passo que Marcos e João dizem que era púrpuro. (Mr 15:17; Jo 19:2) No entanto, em vez de ser uma discrepância, esta variação na descrição da cor da veste apenas fornece evidência da individualidade dos escritores dos Evangelhos e do fato de que não estavam em conluio. Mateus descreveu o manto assim como lhe parecia, isto é, segundo a sua avaliação da cor, e ele enfatizou a tonalidade vermelha da veste. João e Marcos amenizaram a tonalidade vermelha, chamando-a de púrpura. "Púrpuro" pode ser aplicado a qualquer cor de componentes tanto azul como vermelho. De modo que Marcos e João concordam com Mateus no sentido de que a veste até certo ponto era vermelha. Naturalmente, o fundo ambiental e o reflexo da luz podem ter-lhe dado matizes diferentes. Uma massa de água muda de cor em ocasiões diferentes, dependendo da cor específica do céu e do reflexo da luz em determinado momento. Portanto, considerando-se esses fatores, vê-se que os escritores dos Evangelhos não estavam em conflito ao descrever a cor do manto com que os zombadores soldados romanos vestiram Cristo, no último dia da sua vida humana.

CORÍNTIOS, CARTAS AOS. Duas cartas canônicas inspiradas, escritas pelo apóstolo Paulo aos cristãos na Grécia, durante o primeiro século EC. As cartas ocupam respectivamente o sétimo e o oitavo lugar na maioria das versões em português das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. Paulo identifica-se como escritor de ambas as cartas, dirigindo a Primeira aos Coríntios "à congregação de Deus que está em Corinto", e a Segunda aos Coríntios "à congregação de Deus que está em Corinto, junto com todos os santos que estão em toda a Acaia". — 1Co 1:1, 2; 2Co 1:1.

Que Paulo realmente escreveu Primeira e Segunda Coríntios não pode ser seriamente questionado. Além do testemunho do próprio apóstolo, a autenticidade e a aceitação geral de ambas as cartas são atestadas por testemunho externo. As duas cartas são atribuídas a Paulo e citadas por escritores do primeiro ao terceiro séculos. Também, o que se conhece por "O Cânon de Atanásio" (367 EC) alista, entre "quatorze cartas de Paulo, o apóstolo", "duas aos coríntios". Esta lista é o primeiro exemplo do catálogo de livros das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs como os temos hoje, antecedendo em 30 anos a lista publicada pelo Concílio, ou Sínodo, de Cartago, África, em 397 EC.

O Ministério de Paulo em Corinto. Paulo chegou a Corinto por volta de 50 EC. Inicialmente, ele proferia todo sábado um discurso na sinagoga

DESTAQUES DE PRIMEIRA CORÍNTIOS

Carta enviada por Paulo à congregação em Corinto, depois de ele ter recebido relatórios chocantes sobre dissensões e imoralidade, e em resposta a uma indagação sobre casamento.

Escrita de Éfeso, por volta de 55 EC.

Exortação à união. (1:1–4:21)

- Seguir homens resulta em divisões.
- O que conta é o conceito de Deus sobre o que é sábio e o que é tolo.
- Não se jactar de homens, mas de Jeová, que supre todas as coisas por meio de Cristo.
- Ser pessoas espirituais, maduras, reconhecendo que Deus causa o crescimento espiritual e que Cristo é o alicerce sobre o qual se edifica a personalidade cristã.
- Que ninguém se enfune, pensando que é melhor do que os concristãos.

Manter a congregação moralmente limpa. (5:1–6:20)

- Desassociar todos os que se tornam fornicadores, gananciosos, idólatras, injuriadores, beberrões ou extorsores.
- Melhor deixar-se defraudar do que levar um concristão ao tribunal perante incrédulos.
- A impureza moral avilta o templo de Deus, impede que alguém entre no Reino.

Conselho a respeito do casamento e do estado de solteiro. (7:1-40)

- Cumprir com os deveres conjugais, mas com consideração.
- O casamento é melhor do que o estado de solteiro para os inflamados de paixão.
- Os cristãos casados não se devem separar do cônjuge incrédulo; talvez se ajude, por fim, o cônjuge a alcançar a salvação.
- Não é necessário mudar de estado civil ao se tornar cristão.
- O casamento traz maior ansiedade; o estado de solteiro pode ser vantajoso para aquele que deseja servir ao Senhor sem distração.

Consideração para com o bem-estar espiritual dos outros. (8:1–10:33)

- Não fazer outros tropeçar por comer alimentos que foram oferecidos a ídolos.
- Para evitar impedir alguém de aceitar as boas novas, Paulo não usou de seu direito de receber ajuda material.
- Tomar a peito os exemplos de aviso do que se passou com Israel no ermo — em proveito próprio e para não fazer outros tropeçar.
- Embora lícitas, nem todas as coisas edificam.

Ordem congregacional. (11:1–14:40)

- Respeito pela chefia cristã; o uso de cobertura na cabeça pelas mulheres.
- Mostrar respeito pela Refeição Noturna do Senhor.
- Usar os dons do espírito com apreço pela sua fonte e seu objetivo.
- O amor é um caminho que ultrapassa tudo.
- Manter ordem nas reuniões congregacionais.

Certeza da esperança da ressurreição. (15:1–16:24)

- A ressurreição de Cristo constitui garantia.
- Cristãos ungidos têm de morrer para ser ressuscitados para a imortalidade e incorrupção.
- Seu labor não é em vão em conexão com o Senhor; manter-se firmes na fé.

"e persuadia judeus e gregos". (At 18:1-4) Todavia, depois de enfrentar oposição e linguagem ultrajante entre os presentes na sinagoga, o apóstolo voltou sua atenção para "pessoas das nações", os gentios em Corinto. As reuniões de Paulo com eles foram transferidas para uma casa ao lado da sinagoga, e muitos "começaram a crer e a ser batizados". Informado pelo Senhor numa visão: "Tenho muito povo nesta cidade", o apóstolo permaneceu ali por um ano e seis meses, "ensinando entre eles a palavra de Deus". (At 18:5-11) Visto que Paulo atuara em estabelecer uma congregação cristã em Corinto, ele podia dizer-lhes: "Pois, embora tenhais dez mil tutores em Cristo, certamente não tendes muitos pais; porque eu me tornei vosso pai em Cristo Jesus por intermédio das boas novas." — 1Co 4:15.

Em Corinto praticava-se crassa imoralidade, e, com o tempo, isso até afetou a congregação cristã naquela cidade. Paulo achou necessário censurar a congregação numa carta, porque entre eles surgira um caso de "fornicação tal como nem há entre as nações", porque certo homem havia tomado a esposa de seu pai. (1Co 5:1-5) Usando uma ilustração que eles podiam entender, ele os exortou também à fidelidade. Sabia que eles conheciam as competições atléticas nos Jogos Ístmicos realizados perto de Corinto. De modo que escreveu: "Não sabeis que os corredores numa corrida correm todos, mas apenas um recebe o prêmio? Correi de tal modo, que o possais alcançar. Além disso, cada homem que toma parte numa competição exerce autodomínio em todas as coisas. Ora eles, naturalmente, fazem isso para obterem uma coroa corruptível, mas nós, uma incorruptível." — 1Co 9:24, 25.

Primeira Coríntios. Durante a sua terceira viagem missionária, Paulo passou bastante tempo em Éfeso. (At 19:1) Provavelmente durante o último ano da sua estada ali, o apóstolo recebeu notícias perturbadoras sobre as condições na congregação coríntia. Paulo fora informado "pelos da casa de Cloe" de que havia dissensões entre os coríntios. (1Co 1:11) Estéfanas, Fortunato e Acaico também chegaram de Corinto e talvez fornecessem algumas informações sobre a situação ali. (1Co 16:17, 18)

DESTAQUES DE SEGUNDA CORÍNTIOS

Uma carta subsequente a respeito da ação tomada para manter a congregação limpa, para estimular o desejo de ajudar os irmãos na Judeia e para frustrar a influência de falsos apóstolos.

Escrita por Paulo em 55 EC, alguns meses antes de ele chegar a Corinto para sua segunda e última visita.

A preocupação amorosa de Paulo, e a posição de Paulo e de Timóteo com relação aos seus irmãos. (1:1–7:16)

- A tribulação sofrida por Paulo e Timóteo como cristãos levou-os perto da morte, mas a libertação deles por Deus pode consolar outros.
- Comportaram-se com santidade e sinceridade piedosa; não amos da fé dos outros, mas colaboradores para a alegria deles.
- A primeira carta foi escrita em amor e com muitas lágrimas; agora, o homem anteriormente imoral devia ser perdoado e consolado.
- Paulo e seus associados são habilitados por Deus como ministros do novo pacto; os coríntios são sua carta de recomendação, escrita no coração destes ministros.
- No cumprimento deste ministério, eles não adulteram a palavra de Deus, mas pregam Cristo como Senhor; essas boas novas estão veladas somente entre os cegados pelo deus deste sistema de coisas.
- Embora em tendas terrestres, Paulo e Timóteo, bem como os coríntios, compartilham a esperança de eternas moradias celestiais; mas cada um tem de ser manifestado perante a cadeira de juiz do Cristo.
- Quem está em união com Cristo é uma nova criação; todos esses participam no ministério da reconciliação; todos, como embaixadores, exortam: "Sede reconciliados com Deus."
- Paulo e seus associados são recomendados como ministros de Deus por aquilo que suportaram no seu ministério, por darem evidência do espírito de Deus na sua vida.
- Com coração alargado apelam para que seus irmãos se alarguem nas suas afeições, para que evitem entrar em jugo desigual com incrédulos, para que se limpem de todo o aviltamento da carne e do espírito.
- O grande consolo de Paulo diante do relatório da excelente reação deles ao conselho na sua primeira carta.

Encorajamento para ajudar irmãos que sofrem adversidade na Judeia. (8:1–9:15)

- Os macedônios, embora muito pobres, rogaram poder participar.
- Cristo tornou-se pobre para que os coríntios (e outros) pudessem tornar-se ricos.
- Os coríntios são elogiados pela sua prontidão de participar.
- Faça cada um conforme resolveu no coração; Deus ama o dador animado.

Argumentos para anular a influência dos falsos apóstolos. (10:1–13:14)

- Respostas a opositores quanto a Paulo ser 'fraco', 'em território que pertencia a eles', "inferior", "imperito na palavra", "desarrazoado", e à afirmação deles, de que ele mostrara não ser apóstolo igual a eles quando se humilhou para fazer trabalho secular.
- Paulo igual em genealogia; superior em antecedentes de suportar perseguição e dificuldades pela causa de Cristo, em preocupação amorosa para com as congregações, em visões, em sinais de apostolado.
- Persistam em examinar se estão na fé.

Paulo recebera também uma carta de indagação da congregação cristã em Corinto. (1Co 7:1) Assim, com profunda consideração pelo bem-estar espiritual de seus concrentes ali, Paulo escreveu esta primeira carta à congregação cristã em Corinto, por volta de 55 EC. Que Éfeso era o lugar da escrita é confirmado pelas palavras de Paulo registradas em 1 Coríntios 16:8: "Mas, vou permanecer em Éfeso até a festividade de Pentecostes."

Na introdução da Primeira aos Coríntios, Paulo menciona um associado, Sóstenes, que talvez escrevesse a carta conforme ditada por Paulo. Isto é provável, visto que perto da sua conclusão lemos: "Aqui está o meu cumprimento, o de Paulo, pela minha própria mão." — 1Co 1:1; 16:21.

Segunda Coríntios. Paulo escreveu a sua segunda carta aos coríntios provavelmente durante o fim do verão ou começo do outono setentrionais de 55 EC. O apóstolo escrevera a primeira carta em Éfeso, onde provavelmente ficou, assim como planejara, até Pentecostes daquele ano, ou ainda mais tempo. (1Co 16:8) Paulo partiu então para Trôade, onde ficou desapontado por não se encontrar ali com Tito, que havia sido enviado a Corinto para ajudar na coleta para os santos na Judeia. De modo que Paulo passou para a Macedônia, onde Tito se juntou a ele com um relatório sobre a reação dos coríntios à sua primeira carta. (2Co 2:12, 13; 7:5-7) Paulo escreveu-lhes então a segunda carta, da Macedônia, evidentemente enviando-a pela mão de Tito. Daí, depois de alguns meses, tiveram êxito seus esforços de visitar Corinto. De modo que Paulo realmente visitou os coríntios duas vezes. Após a sua primeira visita, ocasião em que estabeleceu a congregação, fez planos para uma segunda visita, que não se realizou. Mas, na "terceira vez" que planejou ou 'estava pronto' foi bem-sucedido, porque conseguiu vê-los de novo, por volta de 56 EC. (2Co 1:15; 12:14; 13:1) Durante esta segunda visita a Corinto, ele escreveu sua carta aos romanos.

Razões da escrita. Tito trouxera a Paulo um relatório favorável. A primeira carta aos coríntios despertara neles uma tristeza de modo piedoso, arrependimento, seriedade, o desejo de se limparem, indignação, temor e o endireitamento do erro. Paulo respondeu na sua segunda carta elogiando-os por sua aceitação favorável e aplicação do conselho, exortando-os a 'perdoar bondosamente e a consolar' o homem arrependido, ao qual evidentemente haviam expulsado da congregação. (2Co 7:8-12; 2:1-11; compare isso com 1Co 5:1-5.) Paulo quis também encorajá-los a continuar com a obra de socorros para os seus concrentes necessitados na Judeia. (2Co 8:1-15) Também, havia alguns na congregação que continuavam a desafiar a posição e a autoridade de Paulo como apóstolo, tornando necessário que ele defendesse a sua posição apostólica; na realidade, não foi para si mesmo, mas "foi para Deus", quer dizer, para salvar a congregação que pertencia a Deus, que Paulo falou em termos bem fortes na sua carta e 'jactou-se' das suas credenciais como apóstolo. — 2Co 5:12, 13; 10:7-12; 11:16-20, 30-33; 12:11-13.

Lançada Luz sobre Escrituras Anteriores. Paulo reforçou seus argumentos por usar as Escrituras Hebraicas nas suas inspiradas cartas aos coríntios. Ao expor a tolice da sabedoria mundana, conforme exibida pelos falsos apóstolos, ele provou a importância de se obter a sabedoria superior de Deus. Fez isso por salientar o que o salmista havia dito séculos antes a uma geração, que "os pensamentos dos homens . . . são apenas como exalação" (Sal 94:11; 1Co 3:20), e por perguntar o que Isaías havia perguntado aos judeus rebeldes: "Quem mediu as proporções do espírito de Jeová, e quem . . . pode fazê-lo saber alguma coisa?" (Is 40:13; 1Co 2:16) Paulo provou que o ministro cristão tem o direito de receber ajuda material, por mostrar que Deuteronômio 25:4: "Não deves açaimar o touro quando debulha", na realidade foi escrito primariamente por causa dos ministros. (1Co 9:9, 10) Demonstrou que Deus há muito prometeu uma ressurreição, por recorrer às declarações em Isaías 25:8 e Oseias 13:14, a respeito de a morte ser tragada. (1Co 15:54, 55) Além disso, lançou muita luz sobre a Refeição Noturna do Senhor, por sua consideração detalhada das palavras de Jesus proferidas na ocasião em que Ele estabeleceu a observância. — Lu 22:19, 20; 1Co 11:23-34.

Paulo demonstrou qual a atitude que Deus sempre teve para com a pureza espiritual, por citar ou aludir a Deuteronômio 17:7; Levítico 26:11, 12; Isaías 43:6; 52:11; e Oseias 1:10. (1Co 5:13; 2Co 6:14-18) Mostrou que o assunto da dádiva material não havia sido desconsiderado pelos servos de Deus no passado, e que o cristão generoso é encarado com favor por Jeová. (Sal 112:9; 2Co 9:9) E indicou que o princípio expresso na Lei, de se estabelecer todo assunto pela boca de duas ou três testemunhas, tem aplicação na congregação cristã. (De 19:15; 2Co 13:1) Estas e outras referências a escrituras anteriores ilustram esses textos e nos esclarecem a sua aplicação.

CORINTO. Uma das mais antigas e mais destacadas cidades da antiga Grécia, situada a uns 5 km ao SO da cidade moderna. A importância de Corinto resultara em grande parte da sua localização estratégica na extremidade ocidental do istmo, ou faixa estreita de terra, que liga a parte central ou continental da Grécia com a península meridional, o Peloponeso. Todo o tráfego terrestre norte-sul, comercial ou não, tinha de passar por Corinto ao atravessar o istmo, o qual, no seu ponto mais estreito, tem apenas uns 6 km de largura. Mas o tráfego marítimo internacional também era atraído a Corinto, porque os navegadores geralmente preferiam utilizar este istmo entre o golfo de Corinto e o golfo Sarônico, em vez de arriscar a longa e perigosa viagem em torno dos cabos tempestuosos na extremidade meridional da península. Assim, navios da Itália, da Sicília e da Espanha velejavam através do mar Jônico, pelo golfo de Corinto, e atracavam no porto de águas fundas de Lecaion, cidade portuária ocidental ligada a Corinto por duas muralhas contínuas. Os navios procedentes da Ásia Menor, da Síria e do Egito atravessavam o mar Egeu e ancoravam no porto oriental de Cencreia, ou talvez no porto menor de Schoenus. (Ro 16:1) As mercadorias de navios grandes eram descarregadas num porto e transportadas por terra os poucos quilômetros até o outro porto, onde eram reembarcadas. Barcos menores, com a sua carga a bordo, eram puxados através do istmo numa espécie de via para barcos chamada dí·ol·kos (literalmente: "puxar para o outro lado"). Com boa razão, o istmo de Corinto era conhecido como a ponte do mar.

História. Corinto já florescia no sétimo século AEC, quando os Jogos Ístmicos, celebrados cada dois anos e usados pelo apóstolo Paulo para algumas das suas mais notáveis ilustrações, foram estabelecidos no templo de Posseidon (o deus grego do mar e equivalente ao Netuno romano). (1Co 9:24-27) A partir do quarto século AEC, Corinto encontrava-se geralmente sob domínio macedônio, até a sua libertação pelos romanos, em 196 AEC. Como cidade-estado independente, juntou-se a outras cidades na Liga Acaiana (ou Acaia), ficou envolvida na oposição a Roma e foi destruída pelo cônsul romano L. Múmio, em 146 AEC; seus homens foram massacrados, e suas mulheres e os filhos foram vendidos como escravos. Durante um século, ficou relativamente desolada, até que Júlio César, em 44 AEC (alguns dizem 46 AEC), fundou de novo a cidade como colônia romana, Colonia Laus Julia Corinthiensis. A Acaia, conforme os romanos chamavam a Grécia à parte da Macedônia, tornou-se província senatorial romana durante o reinado de César Augusto, e Corinto foi constituída em sua capital.

Indústria e Edificações. A cidade de Corinto, à qual Paulo chegou por volta do ano 50 EC, portanto, era uma movimentada encruzilhada de comércio e centro político. Os pedágios cobrados sobre as cargas que atravessavam o istmo contribuíam muito para a riqueza de Corinto, mas ela era também um centro industrial, famoso por sua cerâmica e seus artefatos de bronze. A própria cidade foi construída em dois terraços, um deles a uns 30 m acima do outro. No seu centro havia a espaçosa ágora, ou praça de mercado, ladeada por colunatas e edifícios públicos. Fileiras de lojas davam para a praça, sendo que algumas das ruínas descobertas dão evidência de lojas usadas para a venda de carne e de outros comestíveis, bem como de vinho. A palavra macellum foi aplicada numa inscrição a uma das lojas. Este termo é o equivalente latino da palavra grega má·kel·lon, usada por Paulo ao se referir ao "açougue", em 1 Coríntios 10:25. Outra inscrição encontrada num degrau rezava "Lúcio, o açougueiro".

Perto do centro da ágora, as escavações revelaram uma tribuna oratória, elevada, ao ar livre, chamada de bema, ou rostra, estendendo-se do terraço que dividia os níveis superior e inferior da ágora. Construída de mármore branco e azul, e ricamente decorada com entalhes delicados, a tribuna tinha duas salas de espera ao lado, com pisos de mosaico e assentos de mármore. Acredita-se que o bema seja "a cadeira de juiz" à qual os judeus opostos à mensagem cristã levaram Paulo para uma audiência perante o Procônsul Gálio. (At 18:12-16) Uma inscrição encontrada em Delfos, uma cidade ao lado N da baía de Corinto, leva o nome de Gálio e indica que ele era procônsul. — Veja GÁLIO.

Ao NO da praça de mercado havia um teatro com capacidade para umas 15.000 pessoas. Ao NE também havia um anfiteatro. Os cristãos coríntios podiam bem avaliar a referência de Paulo a serem os apóstolos "um espetáculo teatral para o mundo". (1Co 4:9) Numa praça pública perto do teatro, arqueólogos encontraram uma inscrição mencionando certo Erasto, que tinha o título latino de aedile, palavra traduzida por alguns como "comissário de obras públicas". Este Erasto talvez fosse "o mordomo da cidade", com o mesmo nome mencionado por Paulo ao escrever de Corinto aos romanos. (Ro 16:23) O termo grego usado por Paulo para "mordomo" (oi·ko·nó·mos) significa basicamente "administrador ou gerente doméstico". — Compare isso com Gál 4:2 n. e Int; veja ERASTO N.º 2.

Religião e Cultura. Não importa quão notável tenha sido Corinto como sede de autoridade governamental e como principal cidade comercial da Grécia, na mente de muitos a cidade simbolizava a licenciosidade e a luxúria dissoluta, tanto assim, que a expressão "corintianizar" passou a ser usada no sentido de "praticar imoralidade". Esta sensualidade era produto da adoração coríntia, especialmente da deusa Afrodite (equivalente à Vênus romana, à Astarte [Astarteia] fenícia e cananeia, e à Istar babilônica). Um templo dedicado à adoração dela encimava o Acrocorinto, um íngreme morro rochoso elevando-se a 513 m acima da ágora.

(FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 336) Paulo tinha bons motivos para dar aos cristãos coríntios fortes conselhos e avisos a respeito da conduta moral. (1Co 6:9-7:11; 2Co 12:21) Corinto, naturalmente, tinha templos dedicados a muitos outros deuses e deusas. No templo de Asclépio, o deus da medicina, arqueólogos encontraram representações, de terracota cor de carne, de partes do corpo humano. Estas eram deixadas no templo como ofertas votivas pelos adoradores, cada oferta representando o membro específico afligido (mão, pé, olho, e assim por diante) do adorador.

Além dos gregos, havia um considerável segmento de italianos, descendentes de anteriores colonizadores. Muitos dos discípulos coríntios tinham nome latino, tal como Justo, Tércio, Quarto, Gaio, Crispo, Fortunato e Acaico. (At 18:7; Ro 16:22, 23; 1Co 1:14; 16:17) Grande número de judeus se fixara ali e estabelecera uma sinagoga, atraindo alguns adeptos gregos. (At 18:4) A presença de judeus em Corinto é indicada por uma inscrição grega num dintel de mármore encontrado perto do portão que dava para Lecaion. A inscrição, que reza "[Sy·na·]gogé He·br[ai·on]", significa "Sinagoga dos Hebreus". Havia também um constante fluxo de viajantes e comerciantes, além daqueles que buscavam prazeres neste centro de diversão e atletismo. Sem dúvida, isto contribuiu para uma atitude mais liberal do que a prevalecente em outras cidades visitadas pelo apóstolo, inclusive Atenas, centro da cultura grega. Paulo recebeu uma visão que lhe assegurou que em Corinto havia muitas pessoas de disposição justa, e assim passou um ano e seis meses neste estratégico lugar de encontro entre o Oriente e o Ocidente. (At 18:9-11) Durante este tempo, provavelmente, escreveu as suas duas cartas aos tessalonicenses.

Congregação Cristã. Os associados de Paulo na fabricação de tendas, e concristãos, Áquila e Priscila, acompanharam-no quando ele finalmente navegou do porto oriental de Cencreia através do mar Egeu para Éfeso, na Ásia Menor. (At 18:18, 19) O eloquente Apolo, por outro lado, deu prosseguimento à atividade de Paulo, regando as sementes lançadas em Corinto. (At 18:24-28; 19:1; 1Co 3:6) Paulo mostrou profunda preocupação com a congregação que havia formado em Corinto, enviando Tito para representá-lo ali em duas visitas, bem como escrevendo as suas duas ponderosas cartas à congregação coríntia. (2Co 7:6, 7, 13; 8:6, 16, 17; 12:17, 18) Não podendo fazer uma planejada escala para visitá-los em caminho para a Macedônia (2Co 1:15, 16, 23), Paulo, não obstante, passou mais tarde três meses na Grécia, provavelmente em 55-56 EC, e passou parte desse tempo em Corinto, escrevendo dali a sua carta aos romanos. — At 20:2, 3; Ro 16:1, 23; 1Co 1:14.

CORNÉLIO. Oficial do exército (centurião, Al) no comando de 100 soldados do destacamento italiano. (Veja OFICIAL DO EXÉRCITO.) Lotado em Cesareia, ele tinha a sua própria casa. Seu nome romano sugere que talvez tenha pertencido a uma família nobre na cidade imperial. Era "homem devoto", que "fazia muitas dádivas de misericórdia ao povo e fazia continuamente súplica a Deus", "homem justo e temente a Deus, de boa reputação da parte de toda a nação dos judeus". Foi a este homem que apareceu em visão um anjo, no outono setentrional de 36 EC, dizendo: "Tuas orações e dádivas de misericórdia têm ascendido como memória perante Deus." O anjo disse também a Cornélio que mandasse alguém a Jope para buscar Pedro. — At 10:1-22.

Quando Pedro chegou, Cornélio, na presença de "seus parentes e amigos íntimos", disse ao apóstolo: "Estamos aqui todos presentes perante Deus para ouvir todas as coisas que foste mandado dizer por Jeová." (At 10:24, 33) "Enquanto Pedro ainda falava . . . caiu o espírito santo sobre todos os que ouviam a palavra." Assim, os deste grupo do qual Cornélio é mencionado como o mais notável, tornaram-se os primeiros gentios incircuncisos, ou não judeus, a receber "a dádiva gratuita do espírito santo". (At 10:44, 45) Seguiu-se imediatamente o batismo em água. Nada mais se sabe sobre a vida e a atividade de Cornélio depois disso.

Por que foi a conversão de Cornélio um evento especialmente digno de nota?

Cornélio não era membro prosélito da comunidade judaica, conforme alguns afirmam, embora conhecesse os escritos dos profetas, desse dádivas de misericórdia aos judeus, temesse a Deus, orasse continuamente e usasse o nome de Jeová. As Escrituras provam conclusivamente que este oficial do exército era gentio incircunciso no mais pleno sentido. Se Cornélio tivesse sido prosélito, Pedro não teria dito que não era lícito que ele, um judeu, se associasse com este "homem de outra raça", em vista do que estava escrito na Lei a respeito dum residente forasteiro. (Le 19:33, 34; At 10:28) Se tivesse sido prosélito, os outros seis judeus com Pedro não teriam ficado "pasmados" ao ver o espírito santo derramado "sobre pessoas das nações". (At 10:45; 11:12) Se tivesse sido prosélito, então por que contenderiam com Pedro "os patrocinadores da circuncisão" sobre este assunto? — At 11:2.

Na realidade, Cornélio foi as primícias dos não judeus incircuncisos a tornar-se cristão, mostrando que, naquele tempo, não era necessário que os gentios se tornassem prosélitos judaicos, assim como o eunuco etíope, antes de serem aceitos na congregação cristã. "Certamente", exclamou Pedro nesta ocasião histórica, "percebo que Deus não é parcial, mas, em cada nação, o homem que o teme e que faz a justiça lhe é aceitável". (At 10:34, 35) Visto que Pedro fora o primeiro a abrir O Caminho para os judeus, em Pentecostes, assim, neste caso, ele foi o primeiro a levar as boas novas de salvação a gentios incircuncisos. Tiago também concordou que foi "pela primeira vez" que Deus voltara sua atenção para "as nações". — At 15:7, 14.

CORO. Medida de secos e também usada para medir azeite. O coro correspondia ao ômer e continha dez batos. (1Rs 4:22; 5:11; 2Cr 2:10; Ez 45:14) Calculando o bato equivalente a 22l, o coro equivalia a 220l.

COROA. Adorno ou cobertura para a cabeça, simples ou ornada, usada por pessoas de distinção, tais como reis, rainhas, outros governantes, sacerdotes e pessoas a serem especialmente honradas ou recompensadas. Depois do Dilúvio, as coroas vieram a ser usadas como símbolos de autoridade, dignidade, poder, honra e recompensa.

A forma mais primitiva da coroa, evidentemente, era a do diadema (hebr.: né·zer), uma simples faixa, provavelmente no começo usada para segurar o cabelo longo de quem a usava. No entanto, foi adotada como ornato régio para a cabeça mesmo entre povos que usavam cabelo curto. Tais fitas são representadas em esculturas do Egito, de Nínive e de Persépolis. Em tempos posteriores, fazia-se uma diferenciação quanto a quem era honrado pelo uso de diademas de diversas cores e tipos de trançado ou desenho. Algumas destas faixas tinham cerca de 5 cm de largura e eram feitas de linho, de seda, e até de prata e de ouro. O diadema era às vezes usado por cima dum gorro. Havia também diademas radiados (tendo em todo o redor pontas que se projetavam como raios), e havia os engastados com pedras preciosas.

A palavra hebraica né·zer, além de significar "diadema" (2Cr 23:11), pode referir-se a algo seleto, separado ou dedicado, como no caso do sumo sacerdote, que tinha sobre si "o sinal de dedicação, o óleo de unção de seu Deus". (Le 21:10-12; compare isso com De 33:16 n.) Em vista deste significado básico, a Tradução do Novo Mundo apropriadamente verte né·zer às vezes por 'sinal de dedicação', com referência à lâmina de ouro usada pelo sumo sacerdote de Israel sobre o seu turbante. Nesta lâmina de ouro havia inscritas as palavras: "A santidade pertence a Jeová." — Êx 29:6; 39:30 n.; Le 8:9.

Diademas como símbolos de realeza foram usados por reis hebreus tais como Saul. (2Sa 1:10) No entanto, a principal palavra hebraica denotando uma coroa, no sentido costumeiro, e geralmente traduzida por "coroa" é 'ata·ráh, de 'a·tár, que significa "cercar". (Veja Sal 5:12.) Não se refere necessariamente a um diadema. A coroa ('ata·ráh) que Davi tomou como prêmio de guerra dos amonitas, em Rabá, originalmente era mantida na cabeça do ídolo Malcão. A forma desta coroa não é revelada, mas era de "um talento de ouro em peso [c. 34 kg], e nela havia pedras preciosas". "Ela veio a ficar na cabeça de Davi", sendo que ele possivelmente colocou esta coroa pesada apenas brevemente na cabeça, talvez para indicar seu triunfo sobre a falsa deidade. — 1Cr 20:2; veja MOLOQUE.

Algumas coroas eram feitas de ouro refinado (Sal 21:3); outras eram adicionalmente cravejadas de pedras preciosas. (2Sa 12:30) Ocasionalmente, diversas faixas, ou diademas, eram conjugadas, e isto parece ter sido a usual natureza de "uma grandiosa coroa". (Jó 31:36) A expressão "grandiosa coroa", em Zacarias 6:14, literalmente é "coroas", no hebraico, mas está acompanhada por um verbo no singular. Portanto, parece estar no plural de excelência ou grandiosidade.

Jeová decretou a respeito do infiel Zedequias, último rei de Judá: "Remove o turbante e retira a coroa." Isto talvez se refira ao turbante régio, sobre o qual se usava uma coroa de ouro. (Veja Sal 21:3; Is 62:3.) Ambos estes símbolos de poder real ativo foram removidos, e o decreto de Deus indicava que o governo ativo sobre o "trono de Jeová" (1Cr 29:23) ficaria suspenso até a vinda do Rei messiânico de Deus. — Ez 21:25-27; Gên 49:10.

Em Ester 1:11; 2:17; 6:6-10, menciona-se um "toucado real" do Império Persa. A palavra hebraica para "toucado" (ké·ther), neste relato, deriva de ka·thár (cercar). (Veja Jz 20:43.) A Bíblia não descreve o "toucado real" persa, embora o próprio monarca persa costumasse usar um que consistia num barrete firme, talvez de pano ou de feltro, com uma faixa azul e branca em volta, sendo a faixa realmente um diadema.

Quando o Alto e o Baixo Egito foram unidos sob um só monarca, a cobertura real, egípcia, para a cabeça tornou-se uma coroa combinada. A coroa do Baixo Egito (um barrete vermelho, chato, com um ponto elevado na parte de trás e uma projeção de ponta espiralada estendendo-se diagonalmente para a frente) foi sobreposta à do Alto Egito (um barrete cônico redondo, alto, branco, com um botão na ponta). Usualmente, na frente da coroa aparece o uraeus (a áspide sagrada dos egípcios). A cobertura real para a cabeça do rei assírio, que tem sido descrita como uma mitra alta, frequentemente era adornada com figuras tais como flores, e arranjada em tiras de seda ou de linho. Era uma espécie de barrete cônico, algo similar ao moderno fez, embora mais alto. As coroas gregas e romanas eram mais simples; às vezes eram diademas radiados ou tinham forma de grinalda.

Jeová falou de homens pondo pulseiras nas mãos de Oolá e Oolibá, e "belas coroas" sobre as suas cabeças. (Ez 23:36, 42) Em séculos recentes, mulheres árabes de destaque e riquezas têm usado coroas de aros de ouro com joias (em volta de barretes de forma abobadada). Um tipo similar de toucado talvez tenha sido usado por certas mulheres da antiguidade.

A palavra grega sté·fa·nos é traduzida por "coroa". Soldados romanos, zombando da posição régia de Cristo, e provavelmente também para aumentar a sua agonia, trançaram uma coroa de espinhos e a colocaram na cabeça de Jesus. (Mt 27:29; Mr 15:17; Jo 19:2) Fizeram-se diversas sugestões quanto à planta usada. Todavia, os escritores dos Evangelhos não mencionam a planta.

Coroas ou grinaldas de flores eram usadas em conexão com eventos atléticos. (2Ti 2:5) Os vencedores nos jogos gregos recebiam coroas ou grinaldas usualmente feitas de folhas de árvores. Por exemplo, nos Jogos Píticos, os vencedores recebiam uma coroa de louros; os vencedores nos Jogos Olímpicos recebiam coroas de folhas de oliveira brava; e os vitoriosos nos Jogos Ístmicos (realizados perto de Corinto) recebiam coroas feitas de pinheiro ou de aipo seco.

A palavra inglesa para "coroa" também é aplicada, entre outras coisas, ao alto da cabeça. Neste sentido é usada em certas versões das Escrituras. — Gên 49:26; De 28:35; Sal 68:21.

Uso Figurado. A esposa capaz é considerada "uma coroa para o seu dono", porque sua boa conduta dá honra ao seu marido, elevando-o na estima dos outros. (Pr 12:4) A simbólica mulher Sião havia de tornar-se "uma coroa de beleza" na mão de Jeová, possivelmente indicando que ela era produto do seu trabalho, erguido como que na sua mão para que outros pudessem vê-la com admiração. — Is 62:1-3.

O ministério de Paulo e de seus companheiros viajantes resultou na formação duma congregação cristã em Tessalônica, de que Paulo se alegrou como se fosse uma "coroa de exultação", sendo ela um dos principais motivos de alegria para ele. — 1Te 2:19, 20; veja Fil 4:1.

As cãs são como uma gloriosa "coroa de beleza quando se acham no caminho da justiça", uma vida gasta no temor de Jeová, bela do ponto de vista dele e merecendo o respeito de todos os humanos, como bom exemplo. (Pr 16:31; veja Le 19:32.) A sabedoria, qual coroa, enaltece seu possuidor e lhe granjeia respeito. (Pr 4:7-9) Jesus Cristo, que havia sido feito "um pouco menor que os anjos", foi "coroado de glória e de honra [como criatura espiritual, celestial, enaltecida muito acima dos anjos] por ter sofrido a morte". (He 2:5-9; Fil 2:5-11) No céu, os seguidores ungidos de Jesus recebem como recompensa pela fidelidade "a coroa imarcescível da glória", uma "incorruptível". (1Pe 5:4; 1Co 9:24-27; 2Ti 4:7, 8; Re 2:10) Mas a infidelidade que resulta em alguém perder os interesses do Reino na Terra também significa para ele perder a coroa celestial. Por isso, o glorificado Jesus Cristo admoestou: "Persiste em apegar-te ao que tens, para que ninguém tome a tua coroa." — Re 3:11.

Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, a palavra grega di·á·de·ma é traduzida por "diadema" em traduções modernas. Este é sempre usado como símbolo de dignidade régia, quer real, quer apenas pretensa. O "grande dragão cor de fogo" (Satanás, o Diabo) tem um diadema em cada uma das suas sete cabeças. (Re 12:3, 9) Um diadema adorna cada um dos dez chifres da simbólica "fera" de sete cabeças, que ascende do "mar". (Re 13:1) Aquele que é chamado de Fiel e Verdadeiro, a saber, Jesus Cristo, tem na cabeça "muitos diademas", procedentes de Jeová, a legítima Fonte de autoridade e poder. (Re 19:11-13; 12:5, 10) Também em Revelação (Apocalipse) 6:2 e 14:14, Jesus Cristo é retratado como usando uma coroa (sté·fa·nos).

CORPO. A estrutura física dum humano ou dum animal. A palavra hebraica gewi·yáh refere-se a um corpo, quer vivo (Gên 47:18), quer morto. (1Sa 31:10; Sal 110:6) A palavra hebraica neve·láh deriva do verbo radical na·vél ("murchar"; Sal 1:3) e é traduzida variadamente por "corpo morto" e "cadáver". (Le 5:2; De 14:8; Is 26:19) Ba·sár, a palavra hebraica para carne, pode representar o corpo inteiro. (Compare isso com Sal 16:9; veja CARNE.) A costumeira palavra grega para "corpo" é só·ma (Mt 5:29), mas khros, literalmente "pele", é traduzido por "corpo" em Atos 19:12. A palavra grega ptó·ma, que deriva do verbo radical pí·pto (cair), refere-se a um corpo caído, ou "cadáver". (Mt 14:12) As diferentes espécies de corpos físicos são compostas de diferentes espécies de carne, junto com a força da vida. — 1Co 15:39; Tg 2:26; Gên 7:22; veja ALMA.

Corpos Espirituais. Assim como há corpos físicos, visíveis e palpáveis, há também corpos espirituais, invisíveis aos olhos humanos e inteiramente além do alcance dos sentidos humanos. (1Co 15:44) Os corpos de pessoas espirituais (Deus, Cristo, os anjos) são gloriosos. "Ninguém jamais viu a Deus." (1Jo 4:12) O homem não pode ver a Deus e continuar vivo. (Êx 33:20) Quando o apóstolo Paulo teve apenas um relance da manifestação de Jesus Cristo após a ressurreição deste, ele caiu ao solo e foi cegado pelo brilho, sendo preciso um milagre para lhe restaurar a vista. (At 9:3-5, 17, 18; 26:13, 14) Igualmente, os anjos são muito mais poderosos do que os homens. (2Pe 2:11) São entes gloriosos, brilhantes, e apareceram assim em manifestações físicas. (Mt 28:2-4; Lu 2:9) Estes filhos espirituais de Deus possuem uma visão suficientemente forte para ver e suportar o brilho do Deus Todo-Poderoso. — Lu 1:19.

Visto que não podemos ver a Deus com nossos olhos físicos, ele usa certas expressões antropomorfas para nos ajudar a entender e a apreciar coisas sobre ele próprio. A Bíblia fala dele como tendo olhos (Sal 34:15; He 4:13); braços (Jó 40:9; Jo 12:38); pés (Sal 18:9; Za 14:4); coração (Gên 8:21; Pr 27:11); mãos (Êx 3:20; Ro 10:21); dedos (Êx 31:18; Lu 11:20); nariz, narinas (Ez 8:17; Êx 15:8); e ouvidos (1Sa 8:21; Sal 10:17). Não se deve supor que ele possua literalmente esses órgãos do modo como nós os conhecemos. O apóstolo João, que tinha esperança de vida no céu, disse a co-herdeiros da vida celestial: "Amados, agora somos filhos de Deus, mas ainda não está manifesto o que havemos de ser. Sabemos que, quando ele for manifestado, seremos semelhantes a ele, porque o veremos assim como ele é." (1Jo 3:2) Será um corpo conforme o "corpo glorioso" de Jesus Cristo (Fil 3:21), que é "a imagem do Deus invisível", "o reflexo da sua glória e a representação exata do seu próprio ser". (Col 1:15; He 1:3) Portanto, receberão corpos incorruptíveis, com imortalidade, diferentes daqueles dos anjos em geral e da humanidade, os quais são mortais. — 1Co 15:53; 1Ti 1:17; 6:16; Mr 1:23, 24; He 2:14.

O Corpo Carnal de Cristo. Na instituição da Refeição Noturna do Senhor, Jesus ofereceu o pão não fermentado aos 11 apóstolos fiéis, dizendo: "Isto significa meu corpo que há de ser dado em vosso benefício." (Lu 22:19) O apóstolo Pedro disse mais tarde: "Ele mesmo [Jesus] levou os nossos pecados no seu próprio corpo, no madeiro." — 1Pe 2:24; He 10:10; veja REFEIÇÃO NOTURNA DO SENHOR.

Para Jesus ser "o último Adão" (1Co 15:45) e ser um "resgate correspondente por [toda a humanidade]", seu corpo carnal tinha de ser um verdadeiro corpo humano, não uma encarnação. (1Ti 2:5, 6; Mt 20:28) Tinha de ser perfeito, pois devia ser sacrificado, a fim de se apresentar a Jeová Deus o valor de compra. (1Pe 1:18, 19; He 9:14) Nenhum humano imperfeito podia prover o valor necessário. (Sal 49:7-9) Por este motivo, Jesus disse a seu Pai, quando se apresentou para o batismo, a fim de iniciar seu proceder sacrificial: "Preparaste-me um corpo." — He 10:5.

Não se permitiu que o corpo físico de Jesus Cristo se decompusesse em pó, assim como aconteceu com os corpos de Moisés e de Davi, homens usados para prefigurar a Cristo. (De 34:5, 6; At 13:35, 36; 2:27, 31) Quando seus discípulos foram ao túmulo, bem cedo no primeiro dia da semana, o corpo de Jesus havia desaparecido, e as faixas com que seu corpo fora enrolado foram deixadas no túmulo, seu corpo, sem dúvida, tendo-se desintegrado sem passar pelo processo da decomposição. — Jo 20:2-9; Lu 24:3-6.

Depois da sua ressurreição, Jesus apareceu em corpos diferentes. Maria confundiu-o com o jardineiro. (Jo 20:14, 15) Ele apareceu de novo, entrando numa sala de portas trancadas, em um corpo que tinha marcas de feridas. (Jo 20:24-29) Diversas vezes manifestou-se e foi reconhecido, não por sua aparência, mas por suas palavras e ações. (Lu 24:15, 16, 30, 31, 36-45; Mt 28:16-18) Certa vez, um milagre realizado sob a sua direção abriu os olhos dos seus discípulos para com sua identidade. (Jo 21:4-7, 12) Jesus, depois de ressuscitado como espírito (1Pe 3:18), podia materializar um corpo para a ocasião específica, assim como anjos fizeram em tempos passados, quando apareceram quais mensageiros. (Gên 18:2; 19:1, 12; Jos 5:13, 14; Jz 13:3, 6; He 13:2) Durante os dias antes do Dilúvio, os anjos "que não conservaram a sua posição original, mas abandonaram a sua própria moradia correta", realizaram uma encarnação e tomaram esposas humanas. Que estes filhos angélicos de Deus não eram realmente humanos, mas haviam materializado corpos, é demonstrado pelo fato de que o Dilúvio não destruiu esses anjos, mas eles se desmaterializaram e retornaram ao domínio espiritual. — Ju 6; Gên 6:4; 1Pe 3:19, 20; 2Pe 2:4.

Uso Simbólico. Fala-se de Jesus Cristo como a Cabeça da "congregação, a qual é o seu corpo". (Ef 1:22, 23; Col 1:18) Este corpo cristão de pessoas não apresenta divisões raciais, nacionais ou outras, havendo representados nele judeus e pessoas de todas as nações. (Gál 3:28; Ef 2:16; 4:4) Todos são batizados por espírito santo em Cristo e na sua morte. Portanto, todos são batizados em um só corpo. (1Co 12:13) Assim, todo o corpo segue a cabeça, tendo a mesma espécie de morte e recebendo a espécie de ressurreição que Ele teve. — Ro 6:3-5; veja BATISMO (Batismo em Cristo Jesus, na Sua Morte).

O apóstolo Paulo usa o funcionamento do corpo humano para ilustrar a operação da congregação cristã, comparando os membros vivos na terra, em qualquer tempo específico, a um corpo, tendo a Cristo como Cabeça invisível. (Ro 12:4, 5; 1Co 12) Ele enfatiza a importância do lugar que cada membro ocupa, a interdependência, o amor e o cuidado mútuos, e a realização de trabalho. Deus colocou cada um na sua respectiva posição no corpo, e, por meio das várias operações do espírito santo, o corpo realiza o que é necessário. A Cabeça, Jesus Cristo, como membro de ligação, por meio das “juntas e ligamentos”, supre aos membros do corpo as coisas de que precisam, os meios e arranjos para prover alimento espiritual, bem como comunicação e coordenação, para que “o corpo” seja espiritualmente bem nutrido e cada parte dele seja informada sobre a tarefa a executar. — Col 2:19; Ef 4:16.

Uso Correto do Nosso Corpo. O cristão deve ter apreço pelo corpo que Deus lhe deu e deve amar a si mesmo a ponto de cuidar devidamente do seu corpo, a fim de que possa apresentá-lo em serviço sagrado, aceitável a Deus. (Ro 12:1) Isto requer usar o raciocínio e sustentar o corpo com alimento e outras necessidades, bem como manter asseio físico, mas outros tipos de cuidados são ainda mais importantes. Estes envolvem a espiritualidade, buscar o Reino e a justiça de Deus, e praticar a retidão moral. (Mt 6:25, 31-33; Col 2:20-23; 3:5) O apóstolo aconselha: “O treinamento corporal é proveitoso para pouca coisa, mas a devoção piedosa é proveitosa para todas as coisas, visto que tem a promessa da vida agora e daquela que há de vir.” — 1Ti 4:8.

Alguém que é membro ungido da congregação cristã, o corpo de Cristo, e que comete fornicação, retira um membro do Cristo e o torna membro duma meretriz. Qualquer cristão desses que comete fornicação está introduzindo aviltamento moral e também “está pecando contra o seu próprio corpo” carnal. Coloca-se em perigo de ser removido do corpo de Cristo, a organização-templo, e expõe-se ao perigo de contrair doenças repugnantes. (1Co 6:13, 15-20; Pr 7:1-27) Pode ser ‘entregue pela congregação a Satanás, para a destruição da carne’. — 1Co 5:5.

Quem é membro do corpo de Cristo, bem como outras pessoas dedicadas, associadas com estes espiritualmente gerados membros do corpo, têm de evitar não apenas a fornicação física, mas também a fornicação espiritual. As Escrituras chamam aquele que tem amizade com o mundo de ‘adúltera’. (Tg 4:4) Jesus disse a respeito de seus discípulos: “Não fazem parte do mundo, assim como eu não faço parte do mundo.” (Jo 17:16) Portanto, Jesus cuida de que os membros do seu corpo sejam moral e espiritualmente limpos. (Ef 5:26, 27) Diz-se deles que têm seus “corpos banhados com água limpa”. (He 10:22) Conforme diz o apóstolo Paulo, ao falar sobre maridos: “Deste modo, os maridos devem estar amando as suas esposas como aos seus próprios corpos. Quem ama a sua esposa, ama a si próprio, pois nenhum homem jamais odiou a sua própria carne; mas ele a alimenta e acalenta, assim como também o Cristo faz com a congregação, porque somos membros de seu corpo. ‘Por esta razão deixará o homem seu pai e sua mãe e se apegará à sua esposa, e os dois se tornarão uma só carne.’ É grande este segredo sagrado. Agora estou falando com respeito a Cristo e à congregação.” — Ef 5:28-32.

Veja as partes do corpo sob os seus respectivos nomes.

CORREDORES (BATEDORES). Velozes correios a pé, ou servos duma pessoa proeminente, que corriam à frente do seu carro. A palavra traduz uma forma participial da palavra hebraica ruts, que significa “correr”. Ela é vertida “soldados (de infantaria)”, “guardas” e “cursores” em algumas traduções. Mas existe outra palavra para “soldados (de infantaria)” ou “os que vão a pé”, a saber, ragh·lí, ou mais plenamente, ’ish ragh·lí.

“Corredores” pode referir-se a quaisquer mensageiros rápidos ou pessoas velozes, tais como Asael, irmão de Joabe, e Aimaás, filho de Zadoque. (2Sa 2:18; 18:19, 23, 27) Em certa ocasião, Elias correu talvez pelo menos 30 km para chegar do Carmelo a Jezreel antes do carro do Rei Acabe. Isto se deu porque “a própria mão de Jeová mostrou estar sobre Elias”. — 1Rs 18:46.

Em sentido oficial, batedores eram homens velozes escolhidos para correr à frente do carro do rei. Quando Absalão e mais tarde Adonias conspiraram para usurpar o reinado, cada um deles empregou 50 batedores à frente do seu carro, para aumentar o prestígio e a dignidade do seu complô. (2Sa 15:1; 1Rs 1:5) Batedores serviam como força pessoal do rei, um tanto parecido aos atuais guarda-costas. (1Sa 22:17; 2Rs 10:25) Serviam de guardas à entrada da casa do rei e acompanhavam o rei da sua casa ao templo. (1Rs 14:27, 28; 2Rs 11:6-8, 11; 2Cr 12:10) Levavam mensagens para o rei. (2Cr 30:6) Nos dias do rei persa Assuero, correios a pé foram evidentemente substituídos por homens montados em velozes cavalos de posta. — Est 3:13, 15; 8:10, 14.

Uso Ilustrativo. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, há algumas referências a se correr simplesmente com pressa. (Mt 28:8; Mr 9:15, 25; 10:17; Jo 20:2) Todavia, o apóstolo Paulo usou a corrida de modo ilustrativo. Ele escreveu à congregação de Corinto: “Não sabeis que os corredores numa corrida correm todos, mas apenas um recebe o prêmio? Correi de tal modo, que o possais alcançar. Além disso, cada homem que toma parte numa competição exerce autodomínio em todas as coisas. Ora eles, naturalmente, fazem isso para obterem uma coroa corruptível, mas nós, uma incorruptível. Portanto, corro de modo nada incerto; dirijo os meus golpes de modo a não golpear o ar; mas, surro o meu corpo e o conduzo como escravo, para que, depois de ter pregado a outros, eu mesmo não venha a ser de algum modo reprovado." — 1Co 9:24-27.

Os competidores nos jogos gregos recebiam estrênuo treinamento, e a disciplina era rígida; observavam-se de perto a alimentação e o comportamento. As regras da corrida eram rigidamente aplicadas pelos juízes. Se um corredor chegasse primeiro, mas tivesse violado as regras, sua corrida foi em vão; conforme o apóstolo o expressou: "Além disso, quando alguém compete, mesmo nos jogos, não é coroado a menos que tenha competido segundo as regras." (2Ti 2:5) Os corredores fixavam os olhos no prêmio situado na linha de chegada. Paulo 'corria' deste modo singelo, de todo o coração. (Gál 2:2; Fil 2:16; 3:14) Perto do fim da sua vida, ele pôde dizer: "Tenho travado a luta excelente, tenho corrido até o fim da carreira, tenho observado a fé. Doravante me está reservada a coroa da justiça." — 2Ti 4:7, 8.

Ao considerar os modos como Deus lidou na escolha dos que constituem o Israel espiritual, Paulo explicou que o Israel segundo a carne contava com seu parentesco carnal com Abraão. (Ro 9:6, 7, 30-32) Imaginavam que eram os escolhidos e 'corriam', ou buscavam a justiça, mas de modo errado. Procurando estabelecer a sua justiça pelas suas próprias obras, não se sujeitavam à justiça de Deus. (Ro 10:1-3) Paulo chama atenção para a justiça de Deus em rejeitar o Israel carnal como nação e em formar um Israel espiritual. Em conexão com esta consideração, ele faz a declaração de que "depende, então, não daquele que deseja, nem daquele que corre, mas de Deus, que tem misericórdia". — Ro 9:15, 16.

CORREIO. Homem especialmente escolhido dentre a guarda pessoal real para entregar decretos reais e outra correspondência urgente do rei a regiões distantes do seu domínio. A rapidez da entrega, por parte dos correios (hebr.: ra·tsím; literalmente: corredores) era de importância primária. Desde os tempos antigos, tais homens eram chamados de "correios". São chamados assim em 2 Crônicas 30:6, 10; Jeremias 51:31.

No Império Persa usavam-se cavalos velozes, junto com estações de muda, ou postas, onde novos correios e cavalos descansados aguardavam levar avante as mensagens importantes. (Est 3:13-15; 8:10, 14) Levavam correndo as mensagens ao seu destino, noite e dia, e em qualquer tempo. No Império Romano havia a cada poucos quilômetros postas para os correios, onde se mantinham constantemente 40 cavalos. Os correios romanos podiam percorrer uns 160 km por dia, o que era uma velocidade considerável naqueles tempos. Com tal sistema de cavalos de posta, as mensagens reais podiam ser despachadas até os confins dum império num período relativamente curto.

CORTES. Entre os antigos era evidentemente uma prática comum fazer cortes na carne, ou arranhar os braços, as mãos e a face em ocasiões de luto. (Je 47:5; 48:37) Talvez se fizesse isso com o objetivo de apaziguar ou propiciar as deidades que se cria presidirem aos mortos. Com referência a esta prática entre os citas, por ocasião da morte de seu rei, o historiador grego Heródoto (IV, 71, Clássicos Jackson, Vol. XXIII) escreveu: "Cortam uma parte da orelha, raspam o cabelo em torno da cabeça, fazem incisões nos braços, fendem a fronte e o nariz e passam flechas através da mão esquerda."

Infligir lacerações na carne, porém, não se limitava a ritos de luto. Na esperança de que seu deus respondesse a seus apelos, os profetas de Baal cortaram-se "com punhais e com lanças, segundo o seu costume, até derramarem sangue sobre si". (1Rs 18:28) Ritos similares também eram praticados por outros povos antigos. Por exemplo, Heródoto (II, 61) menciona que durante a festa de Ísis, os carianos, ou cários, residentes no Egito cortavam a fronte com facas ou espadas.

A Lei de Deus proibia especificamente que se fizessem cortes na carne por causa dos mortos. (Le 19:28; 21:5; De 14:1) O motivo disso era que Israel era um povo santo para Jeová, uma propriedade especial. (De 14:2) Como tal, Israel devia permanecer livre de todas as práticas idólatras. Outrossim, tais demonstrações extremas de luto, acompanhadas por lacerações infligidas pela pessoa em si mesma, eram bem impróprias para um povo plenamente apercebido da verdadeira condição dos mortos, bem como da esperança da ressurreição. (Da 12:13; He 11:19) Também, a proibição da automutilação inculcaria nos israelitas o devido respeito pela criação de Deus, o corpo humano.

Evidentemente, porém, os israelitas ocasionalmente desconsideravam a lei de Deus com respeito a fazerem cortes na sua carne. — Je 41:5; compare isso com Miq 5:1.

CORUJA (MOCHO) [hebr.: tahh·más; kohs (mocho); yan·shúf (mocho-orelhudo); 'ó·ahh (corujão)]. Ave de rapina noturna, mencionada várias vezes no relato bíblico. Antigamente considerada parte da família dos falcões, as corujas são hoje geralmente associadas com outras aves que se alimentam à noite, tais como uma espécie de bacurau e o curiango, ou noitibó.

A coruja tem bico curto, curvo, e fortes garras aduncas, parecidas às do falcão, mas difere por ter uma cabeça larga, grandes olhos e orelhas, bem como em cada pé um dedo reversível, de modo que, ao passo que os outros dedos apontam para a frente, este dedo externo pode ser virado para fora ou mesmo para trás, habilitando assim essa ave a agarrar firmemente objetos diversos. Os olhos grandes, com sua íris que se expande, aproveitam ao máximo possível a fraca luz à noite, e, dessemelhante da maioria das outras aves, ambos os olhos da coruja encaram a frente, habilitando-a a ver um objeto com ambos os olhos ao mesmo tempo. Sua plumagem macia é uma mistura de matizes de marrom, cinza, preto e branco, com uma intricada disposição das penas, e geralmente dá ao corpo da ave a impressão de um volume exagerado. Segundo um artigo na revista Scientific American (abril de 1962, p. 78), as asas da coruja são ultrassonicamente silenciosas; a penugem nas superfícies superiores e as franjas plumosas nas bordas dianteiras e traseiras das asas evidentemente servem para reduzir a turbulência do fluxo de ar. Assim, a coruja investe sem barulho através da escuridão e mergulha silenciosamente sobre a sua insuspeita presa, matando principalmente roedores, embora algumas também comam aves menores e insetos. Os gritos da coruja vão desde um guincho estridente até um som retumbante.

A palavra hebraica tahh·más denota uma espécie de coruja e está incluída na lista das aves 'impuras'. (Le 11:13, 16; De 14:15) Esta palavra hebraica, aparentada com um verbo que significa "fazer violência", é apropriada para a coruja, que vive da caça de pequenos roedores e aves. Esta espécie de coruja tem sido identificada com o mocho-pequeno-de-orelhas (Otus brucei).

Igualmente incluída entre as aves 'impuras' está a hebraica kohs, palavra vertida por alguns como "mocho", e designada como Athene noctua. (De 14:16, ALA, CBC, NM; veja também Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Livros [Léxico dos Livros do Velho Testamento], de L. Koehler e W. Baumgartner, Leiden, 1958, p. 428.) Este mocho (conhecido hoje também como mocho-galego), de uns 25 cm de comprimento, é uma das corujas mais difundidas na Palestina, encontrada em moitas, olivais e ruínas desoladas. O salmista, na sua solitária aflição, sentiu-se como "o mocho dos lugares desolados". (Sal 102:6) Apropriadamente, o nome árabe desta variedade de coruja significa "mãe de ruínas".

Outra ave alistada na Lei mosaica como 'impura' é a hebraica yan·shúf, nome considerado por alguns como indicando um som de "bufo" ou "forte sopro" (a palavra hebr. para "sopro" é na·sháf). Outros a relacionam com o "crepúsculo" (hebr.: né·shef), como indicando simplesmente uma ave noturna. (Le 11:17; De 14:16) Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros (p. 386) identifica esta ave com o "mocho-orelhudo" (Asio otus). O mocho-orelhudo, uma ave pequena de uns 38 cm de comprimento, é chamado assim por causa de tufos eréteis de penas semelhantes a orelhas em ambos os lados da sua larga cabeça. Frequenta áreas arborizadas e desoladas, e é descrito como uma das criaturas a habitar as ruínas de Edom. — Is 34:11.

Predisse-se que as casas abandonadas nas ruínas de Babilônia 'encher-se-iam de corujões [plural de 'ó·ahh]'. (Is 13:21) Estas circunstâncias e o nome hebraico, entendido como indicando uma criatura que "uiva" com um pio plangente, se ajusta bem ao corujão. Alguns identificariam 'ó·ahh com o Bubo bubo aharonii, uma variedade de corujão que habita as regiões desérticas da Palestina. Todavia, a identificação com o corujão egípcio (ou de deserto escuro) (Bubo bubo ascalaphus), encontrado desde o Marrocos até o Iraque, harmoniza-se bem com o lugar registrado na profecia de Isaías 13. O corujão é a maior e mais forte das corujas destas regiões. Seu grito é um alto, prolongado e forte pio. Igual a outras corujas, à noite, seus grandes olhos têm um brilho luminescente, vermelho-amarelado, quando refletem luz, e, junto com seu grito lamentoso, esta característica sem dúvida contribuiu para ele servir de símbolo de mau agouro entre supersticiosos povos pagãos.

Alguns peritos acreditam que o termo li·líth, usado em Isaías 34:14 como estando entre as criaturas que frequentariam as ruínas de Edom, aplica-se a algum tipo de coruja. Diz-se que o nome é hoje usado "para Strix, a coruja fulva". (The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible [O Dicionário Bíblico do Intérprete], editado por G. A. Buttrick, 1962, Vol. 2; p. 252) Todavia, veja o artigo CURIANGO (NOITIBÓ).

CORVO [hebr.: 'o·rév; gr.: kó·rax]. A primeira ave especificamente mencionada na Bíblia. (Gên 8:7) Sendo a maior das aves corvídeas, o corvo tem cerca de 60 cm de comprimento e pode ter uma envergadura de asas de mais de 1 m. Sua plumagem lustrosa é notável pela sua cor preta retinta (Cân 5:11), com tonalidades iridescentes de azul-metálico e púrpura, tendo as partes inferiores às vezes um toque de verde. Sua alimentação é extremamente variada, comendo tudo, desde nozes, frutinhas e cereais, até roedores, répteis, peixes e filhotes de aves. Embora ataque os jovens e os fracos entre os animais menores, é primariamente necrófago. Quando consome um cadáver, tem por hábito comer os olhos e outras partes moles da vítima, antes de rasgar o abdome com seu bico forte. (Pr 30:17) É um poderoso voador, batendo forte e constantemente suas asas, ou planando sem esforço em amplos círculos, ao passo que espreita a área embaixo em busca de alimento. Sua contínua busca de alimento o leva a sobrevoar uma área extraordinariamente grande.

Corvo-marinho; uma ave que não devia ser consumida, segundo a Lei mosaica.

Os naturalistas consideram o astucioso corvo uma das aves mais adaptáveis e engenhosas. Em vista disso, bem como por sua força de voo e habilidade de sobreviver com uma ampla variedade de alimentos, inclusive carniça, o corvo era candidato adequado para ser a primeira criatura a ser enviada por Noé para fora da arca, quando as águas do Dilúvio haviam começado a baixar. O texto indica que o corvo, depois, permaneceu fora da arca, usando-a apenas como lugar de pouso. — Gên 8:5-7.

O corvo foi declarado impuro no pacto da Lei (Le 11:13, 15; De 14:12, 14), e a frase "segundo a sua espécie" é entendida como abrangendo as gralhas e outras aves corvídeas, evidentemente aparentadas, tais como a gralha-calva, a gralha-de-nuca-cinzenta e a gralha-de-bico-vermelho, uma vez que todas são encontradas na Palestina.

O corvo, diferente da gralha, usualmente é ave de regiões agrestes, frequentemente habitando em regiões montanhosas e até mesmo em desertos. Estava entre as criaturas visionadas por Isaías como habitando o vácuo e o vazio do arruinado Edom. (Is 34:11) O corvo tem também por hábito armazenar sobras de alimento em fendas de rochas ou enterrá-las debaixo de folhas. Estas aves foram assim uma escolha apropriada quando Deus as usou milagrosamente para levar pão e carne duas vezes por dia a Elias, enquanto o profeta se escondia no vale da torrente de Querite. — 1Rs 17:2-6.

Os corvos nidificam em penhascos ou em promontórios rochosos, bem como em árvores altas; acasalam-se por toda a vida e são pais devotos. Jeová Deus, o verdadeiro Provisor para todas as Suas criaturas, dirigiu a atenção de Jó a si mesmo com a pergunta: "Quem prepara para o corvo o seu alimento quando seus próprios filhotes clamam a Deus por ajuda, vagueando por não haver nada para comer?" (Jó 38:41) O salmista mostrou também que o alimento trazido pelas aves paternas em voos longínquos para satisfazer os estridentes pios da sua cria faminta se deve às provisões bondosas do Criador (Sal 147:7-9), ao passo que Jesus se referiu aos corvos em sentido similar, para assegurar aos seus seguidores que Aquele que cuida de tais aves do ar certamente proveria as necessidades de Seus servos humanos. — Lu 12:24; compare isso com Sal 104:27, 28; Mt 6:26.

Evidentemente, por causa do seu impressionante tamanho, suas cores sombrias e seu grasnido lamentoso, povos pagãos encaravam antigamente o corvo como uma espécie de ave de mau agouro e de presságio da morte. Entre os gregos, o atrevido e muitas vezes impudente corvo era encarado como ave profética, talvez por causa da sua reputação de astúcia e sagacidade. Era tido como sagrado para o deus Apolo e para uma ordem oracular de sacerdotes, alguns dos quais se trajavam de preto.

Um príncipe de Midiã, nos dias do juiz Gideão, tinha o nome de Orebe, que significa "Corvo". — Jz 7:25.

CORVO-MARINHO [hebr.: sha·lákh]. Grande ave aquática palmípede que apanha peixes por mergulhar. Esta ave só aparece na lista de aves impuras sob a Lei mosaica, lista esta que proíbe o consumo de aves que na maioria são essencialmente aves de rapina e necrófagas. (Le 11:17; De 14:17) Os tradutores da Septuaginta grega entenderam que a ave era o ka·tar·rá·ktes, nome grego para o corvo-marinho, ao passo que a Vulgata latina usa mergulus ("mergulhador") para indicar essa ave. O corvo-marinho (Phalacrocorax) é bastante comum na Palestina, especialmente ao longo da costa do Mediterrâneo e também em certas águas interioranas, tais como o mar da Galileia. O corvo-marinho é aparentado com aves da família dos pelicanos. Tendo usualmente um corpo alongado e de cor escura, o corvo-marinho é veloz e ágil na água, nadando sob a água principalmente pelo uso de seus pés palmados. Seu bico aguçado e curvo na ponta o torna um bom pescador, e, desde tempos antigos, os corvos-marinhos têm sido treinados por pescadores do Oriente e de partes da Índia para pescar peixes para o seu dono, colocando-se um anel razoavelmente folgado em volta do pescoço da ave, para impedir que engula algo mais do que peixes muito pequenos.

CÓS. Capital da ilha do mesmo nome, situada na extremidade NE dela. Encontra-se ao SO da costa da Ásia Menor. Sua posição vantajosa dava a Cós uma elevada importância comercial e naval desde tempos antigos.

Embora o apóstolo Paulo, pelo visto, navegasse ao largo desta cidade, quando viajou de Éfeso para Cesareia, no fim da sua segunda viagem missionária, por volta de 52 EC (At 18:21, 22), é só no fim da sua terceira viagem, uns quatro anos mais tarde, que a ilha é mencionada por nome, em Atos. Depois que Paulo conseguiu 'separar-se a muito custo' dos superintendentes efésios, a quem havia falado em Mileto (At 20:17, 36-38), o navio em que ele e Lucas embarcaram 'tomou um rumo direto', isto é, velejou de vento em popa, sem ziguezaguear, e com ventos favoráveis, até 'chegar a Cós', uma viagem de uns 75 km costa abaixo. Alguns comentadores calcularam que, com os costumeiros ventos NO prevalecentes no Egeu, essa distância podia ser coberta em cerca de seis horas, permitindo assim, conforme Lucas indica, que o navio de Paulo chegasse a Cós no mesmo dia em que partiu de Mileto. Parece provável que este navio passasse a noite ancorado ao largo da costa L de Cós e que chegasse a Rodes "no dia seguinte", depois de partir de manhã numa viagem de uns 120 km. — At 21:1.

A ilha de Cós tem fama de já ter sido por longo tempo um centro judaico no Egeu. Era um estado romano livre na província da Ásia, e, segundo Tácito, recebera de Cláudio, em 53 EC, eximição da tributação.

COSÃ. Descendente de Natã, filho de Davi; filho de Elmadã e pai de Adi; e antepassado de Maria, mãe de Jesus. — Lu 3:28.

COSBI. Filha de Zur, maioral midianita. Na ocasião em que 24.000 israelitas morreram por causa de imoralidade, em conexão com Baal de Peor, Cosbi, junto com o simeonita Zinri, que a havia levado à sua tenda, foi morta por Fineias traspassar-lhe as partes genitais. (Núm 25:1, 6-9, 15, 18) Pouco depois, o pai de Cosbi também foi morto. — Núm 31:7.

COSMÉTICOS. Substâncias ou tratamentos aplicados à face ou a outras partes do corpo humano para alterar a aparência, para embelezar ou realçar o atrativo da pessoa. Tais preparados podem ser aplicados à pele, às unhas ou ao cabelo. A palavra portuguesa "cosmético" deriva da palavra grega ko·sme·ti·kós, que significa "hábil em adornar".

Havia fabricantes e misturadores de unguentos entre os israelitas (Êx 30:25; 1Sa 8:13; Ne 3:8), e unguentos (muitas vezes perfumados) eram amplamente usados, talvez mais do que outros cosméticos. Quando aplicados à pele ou ao cabelo em clima quente e seco, os unguentos ajudavam a lidar com a secura. Usavam-se óleos perfumados, sendo que uma pecadora certa vez ungiu os pés de Jesus Cristo com tal óleo. (Lu 7:37, 38) Também, poucos dias antes da morte de Jesus, Maria, irmã de Lázaro, "veio . . . com um vaso de alabastro com óleo perfumado, nardo genuíno, muito dispendioso", e ungiu-o. — Mr 14:3; Jo 12:3; Mt 26:6, 7; veja UNGUENTO E PERFUMES.

Quando Jeú veio a Jezreel, Jezabel, além de pentear o cabelo ou de arrumar belamente a cabeça, "passou a pintar os seus olhos de preto". (2Rs 9:30) Pelo menos algumas mulheres em Israel, iguais às de outras terras do Oriente Médio da antiguidade, costumavam pintar os olhos. (Ez 23:40) A pintura para os olhos frequentemente era preta, cor que criaria um contraste com o branco dos olhos e faria os olhos parecer maiores. (Je 4:30) As referências bíblicas a pintar os olhos não associam este costume com mulheres fiéis de Israel em geral, embora uma das filhas de Jó fosse chamada de Querém-Hapuque, que possivelmente significa "Chifre de Pintura Preta (Para os Olhos) [quer dizer, recipiente para maquiagem]". — Jó 42:14.

As Escrituras não condenam o uso modesto e com bom gosto de cosméticos e objetos de adorno. Todavia, Paulo e Pedro admoestaram as mulheres cristãs a se adornarem "com modéstia e bom juízo, . . . dum modo próprio das mulheres que professam reverenciar a Deus", e a deixar que o seu adorno seja "a pessoa secreta do coração, na vestimenta incorruptível dum espírito quieto e brando, que é de grande valor aos olhos de Deus". (1Ti 2:9, 10; 1Pe 3:3, 4) E, na avaliação inspirada duma boa esposa, declara-se apropriadamente: "O encanto talvez seja falso e a lindeza talvez seja vã; mas a mulher que teme a Jeová é a que procura louvor para si." — Pr 31:30.

COSTELA. Há no corpo humano 24 destes longos, delgados e curvos ossos que encerram a cavidade torácica. Dispostos em 12 pares, constituem uma caixa que protege o coração e os pulmões. Sangue é produzido no tutano das costelas.

Ao criar a mulher, Deus não a fez separada e distinta do homem por formá-la do pó do solo, assim como fizera na criação de Adão. Ele tomou uma costela do lado de Adão, e dela construiu para Adão um perfeito equivalente, a mulher Eva. (Gên

2:21, 22) No entanto, Adão continuou a ser homem perfeito, agora unido como 'osso do osso e carne da carne' com sua esposa. (Gên 2:23; De 32:4) Outrossim, isso não afetou as células reprodutivas de Adão, a ponto de influir na estrutura das costelas de seus filhos, meninos ou meninas. Tanto o homem como a mulher têm 24 costelas.

É de interesse notar que uma costela que foi removida volta a crescer, substituindo-se, desde que permaneça o periósteo (a membrana de tecido conjuntivo que envolve o osso). O registro não declara se Jeová Deus seguiu este proceder ou não; no entanto, como Criador do homem, Deus certamente estava a par desta qualidade incomum das costelas.

A palavra 'costela' é encontrada novamente na Bíblia no relato de Daniel sobre uma visão que Deus lhe dera durante o governo do Rei Belsazar, de Babilônia. Surgiu um primeiro animal, representando a dinastia de governantes de Babilônia, seguido por um animal semelhante a um urso, que representava o próximo 'rei', ou linhagem de governantes mundiais, a saber, os da Medo-Pérsia. Este animal ursino tinha três costelas na boca. Estas costelas podem indicar que o 'rei' simbolizado pelo urso avançou nas suas conquistas em três direções, assim como fez a Medo-Pérsia. Visto que o número três é usado nas Escrituras como símbolo de intensidade ou ênfase, as três costelas podem também enfatizar a avidez deste urso simbólico por conquistas territoriais. — Da 7:5, 17; veja ANIMAIS SIMBÓLICOS.

COSTURA. Ato de unir com pontos de agulha; cosedura. Desde os tempos mais antigos, a costura, inclusive a bordadura, tem desempenhado um papel destacado nas atividades da humanidade. (Êx 26:1; 35:35; Jó 16:15; Ec 3:7; Ez 13:18) O primeiro homem e a primeira mulher, Adão e Eva, "coseram folhas de figueira e fizeram para si coberturas". (Gên 3:7) Isto talvez signifique simplesmente que prenderam juntas grandes folhas de figueira, usando para isso raminhos de figueira.

Cristo Jesus, ao explicar por que seus discípulos não jejuavam assim como os fariseus e os discípulos de João, salientou que costurar um remendo de pano não pré-encolhido numa roupa velha só pioraria o rasgão. (Mr 2:18, 21) Ao ser lavado, o remendo encolheria, e, nesse processo, esgarçaria a roupa velha, rasgando-a. Esta ilustração deveria ter ajudado os que ouviram as palavras de Jesus a entender que era então tempo de se tornarem seus seguidores e que era errado tentarem impor as práticas deles aos discípulos de Jesus. O próprio João explicara anteriormente que sua obra era preparatória para a vinda de Cristo, e, portanto, era de natureza temporária. — Jo 3:27-30.

COTA DE MALHA. Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA.

COURAÇA. Veja ARMAS, ARMADURA.

COVA (POÇO). Um lugar fundo ou buraco, quer natural, quer artificial. Os poços de betume nos quais caíram os reis de Sodoma e de Gomorra evidentemente eram buracos naturais da região (Gên 14:10); ao passo que a cova em que os irmãos de José o lançaram evidentemente era uma cisterna escavada por homens. (Gên 37:20-29) As duas palavras hebraicas principais para cova (poço) são bohr (que também significa "cisterna") e shá·hhath.

A palavra hebraica she'óhl é traduzida por "cova" na versão Figueiredo. (Gên 44:31) No entanto, Seol realmente se refere à sepultura comum da humanidade, em vez de a uma sepultura individual. Em Jó 17:13-16, encontramos Seol e cova (hebr.: shá·hhath) usados em paralelo por Jó, como lugares de escuridão e pó. De modo similar, a oração de Davi a Deus, no Salmo 30:3, diz: "Ó Jeová, fizeste subir a minha alma do próprio Seol; mantiveste-me vivo, para que eu não descesse ao poço." No Salmo 88:3-5 se faz referência ao Seol, ao poço e à sepultura, nesta ordem. — Veja também Jó 33:18-30; Sal 30:3, 9; 49:7-10, 15; 88:6; 143:7; Pr 1:12; Is 14:9-15; 38:17, 18; 51:14; veja SEOL; SEPULTURA (SEPULCRO).

Jonas também usou a palavra para "cova" em sentido figurado, quando comparou o interior do peixe com o "ventre do Seol" e também com a "cova". (Jon 2:2, 6) Esta associação da cova com a morte e a sepultura era bastante natural, em vista do antigo costume de usar ou escavar uma cova como lugar de sepultamento.

Covas evidentemente eram usadas como armadilha para pegar ou apanhar desprevenido um inimigo, ou para capturar animais, e por isso são usadas em sentido figurado para representar perigosas situações ou intrigas que afligem os servos de Deus. (Sal 7:15; 40:2; 57:6; Pr 26:27; 28:10; Je 18:20, 22) Às vezes, as covas tinham redes para enlaçar a vítima apanhada nelas. (Sal 35:7, 8) Segundo a Lei, se um animal doméstico caísse num poço escavado e morresse, o dono do poço tinha de fazer compensação ao dono do animal. — Êx 21:33, 34.

A prostituta e "a boca da mulher estranha" são chamadas de "cova funda". Isto se dá porque a prostituta, muitas vezes por conversa persuasiva, enlaça homens para terem relações sexuais com ela. — Pr 22:14; 23:27.

As cisternas usadas pelos hebreus e por outros orientais para armazenar água eram basicamente poços escavados. Muitas vezes tinham forma de garrafa; a boca geralmente era estreita, de apenas uns 30 cm de diâmetro no primeiro metro, e, depois, a parte inferior abria-se numa cavidade bulbosa. — Veja CISTERNA.

A palavra grega fré·ar, "cova", na expressão usada em Revelação (Apocalipse) 9:1, 2, "cova do abismo", é a mesma palavra que João usa no seu relato evangélico para descrever "o poço" na fonte de Jacó, onde Jesus encontrou a mulher samaritana. (Jo 4:11, 12) Fré·ar no seu sentido mais simples refere-se a tal poço ou cova escavada na terra; no entanto, pode ser usada para se referir a qualquer cova ou abismo, inclusive aquela de fundura insondável de que ascendem os gafanhotos de Revelação. (Re 9:3; veja ABISMO.) A palavra grega bó·thy·nos, vertida "cova" também pode significar "vala". (Mt 12:11; 15:14, n.; Lu 6:39) Pedro, em 2 Pedro 2:4, fala dos anjos demoníacos como restritos em "covas [gr.: sei·rois] de profunda escuridão". — Veja TÁRTARO.

Veja também COVA DOS LEÕES.

COVA DOS LEÕES. Lugar de execução no qual o profeta Daniel foi lançado, mas do qual, mais tarde, foi retirado incólume, tendo tido proteção angélica. (Da 6:7, 12, 13, 16-24) Esta cova tinha uma abertura que podia ser coberta com uma pedra. (Da 6:17) Evidentemente, era um lugar fundo ou subterrâneo, porque Daniel "foi retirado da cova". — Da 6:23.

CÔVADO. Medida linear que corresponde aproximadamente à distância entre o cotovelo e a ponta do dedo médio. (De 3:11) Há indícios de que os israelitas usavam comumente um côvado de cerca de 44,5 cm, e os cálculos apresentados nesta publicação são feitos de acordo com isso. A Inscrição de Siloé, por exemplo, dá como 1.200 côvados o comprimento do túnel de água construído pelo Rei Ezequias. Segundo medições modernas, este túnel tem 533 m de comprimento. Assim, pelo valor nominal, este algarismo representa um côvado de 44,4 cm. Também, diversos prédios e recintos escavados na Palestina podem ser medidos em números redondos desta unidade, fornecendo uma base adicional para se calcular o côvado como tendo uns 44,5 cm.

Evidentemente, os israelitas usavam também um côvado maior, que era uma largura de mão (7,5 cm) mais comprido do que o côvado "comum". Este côvado maior, de uns 51,8 cm, consta na medição do templo visionário de Ezequiel. (Ez 40:5) Pode ter havido também um côvado menor, de uns 38 cm, medido desde o cotovelo até os nós dos dedos da mão fechada. — Jz 3:16 n.

COXA. Aquela parte da perna que vai dos quadris até o joelho. Visto que se acha na parte lateral da pessoa, a palavra hebraica também pode referir-se ao lado de alguma coisa, como o "lado" do tabernáculo, ou dum altar. — Êx 40:24; 2Rs 16:14.

A espada era usada do lado, sobre a coxa. (Êx 32:27; Jz 3:16, 21; Cân 3:8; Sal 45:3) Em Revelação (Apocalipse) 19:11-21, Cristo Jesus é representado como cavalgando uma montaria branca de guerra para batalhar contra a "fera" e os reis da terra com seus exércitos. Seu título "Rei dos reis e Senhor dos senhores" é claramente anunciado por escrito na sua roupa exterior, sobre a coxa, onde geralmente se usa a espada de autoridade.

Os calções dos sacerdotes em Israel iam dos quadris até a coxa, isto é, até o fim da coxa, de modo que sua nudez estava bem coberta, quando serviam no santuário e no altar de Jeová. Do contrário, morreriam. — Êx 28:42, 43.

Ao fazer um juramento, o costume ocasionalmente seguido era de o jurador colocar sua mão sob a coxa da pessoa a quem jurava. (Gên 24:2-4, 9; 47:29-31) Quanto ao significado disso, veja ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS (Juramento). O costume de bater na coxa indicava pesar, tristeza ou remorso. — Je 31:19; Ez 21:12.

Órgãos Reprodutivos. Estando a coxa situada na parte geral do corpo em que se encontram os órgãos reprodutivos, diz-se que a prole procede 'da parte superior da coxa'. (Gên 46:26; Êx 1:5; Jz 8:30) Isto lança luz sobre a natureza da punição que sobreviria à mulher culpada de adultério secreto.

Se um marido suspeitasse infidelidade da parte da sua esposa, ele devia levá-la perante o sacerdote. O sacerdote fazia a mulher ficar de pé perante Jeová, apanhava um pouco de água santa (evidentemente água fresca, pura), punha dentro desta um pouco do pó do chão do tabernáculo, e lavava ou esfregava para dentro dela as maldições que ele havia escrito. Depois de ela jurar a sua inocência, ela tinha de beber a água. Se era culpada, 'sua coxa decaía' e seu ventre inchava. Se era inocente, não lhe sobrevinha nenhum dano. — Núm 5:12-31.

O que significava 'decair a coxa' duma mulher adúltera?

Evidentemente, a coxa é usada nesta passagem como substituto eufemístico para se referir aos órgãos sexuais. (Veja Gên 46:26.) Logicamente, a punição afetava estes órgãos envolvidos na transgressão. (Veja Mr 9:43-47.) A expressão "decair" é entendida como significando "definhar" (MC), 'consumir-se' (IBB) ou 'murchar' (BJ), e pode sugerir que os órgãos sexuais se atrofiavam, e que havia perda da fertilidade e da capacidade de conceber. O fato de que a esposa inocente tinha de ser engravidada pelo marido parece indicar que uma futura gravidez seria negada à mulher adúltera. (Núm 5:28) Outrossim, o ventre da esposa culpada incharia por causa da maldição, mas não em resultado da bênção da gravidez.

De modo algum se tratava dum julgamento por ordálio, que às vezes exigia um verdadeiro milagre para se sobreviver, assim como se praticava na Era do Obscurantismo. Não havia nada na própria água que causasse a aflição. Todavia, era água santa e tinha nela terra ou pó santo, e a escrita da maldição lavada para dentro dela. Portanto, continha poderosos simbolismos, e era bebida perante Jeová e com um solene juramento a ele. Não havia incerteza quanto ao resultado da questão. Se a mulher era culpada, Jeová fazia com que a bebida tivesse poder milagroso para produzir o resultado merecido. O adultério acarretava a pena de morte, mas, neste caso, não havia as duas testemunhas exigidas. (Núm 35:30; De 19:15) Também, usualmente, em tal caso, não se revelara a identidade do homem culpado, que igualmente mereceria a morte.

COXO, CLAUDICAÇÃO. Deficiência física que impede a pessoa de andar normalmente. A claudicação pode ser de nascença, por defeitos congênitos (At 3:2; 14:8), mas, na maioria dos casos é causada por acidente ou por doença.

Sacerdócio Arônico. Qualquer coxo descendente de Arão não podia servir no sacerdócio, embora se lhe permitisse comer das coisas providas para o sustento do sacerdócio. (Le 21:16-23) Jeová fixou um padrão elevado de aptidão física para seu sacerdócio, porque este o representava no seu santuário. Do mesmo modo, também Cristo, o grande Sumo Sacerdote, era "leal, cândido, imaculado, separado dos pecadores". — He 7:26.

Sacrifícios. Sob a Lei, também era proibido oferecer como sacrifício um animal que tivesse o defeito de ser coxo, pois prefigurava o sacrifício perfeito de Cristo. (De 15:21; Le 22:19, 20) Esta lei era violada pelos israelitas apóstatas, motivo pelo qual Deus os repreendeu, dizendo: "Ao apresentardes um animal coxo . . . [para ser sacrificado, dizeis]: 'Não é mau.' Leva-o perto ao teu governador, por favor. Terá ele prazer em ti ou receber-te-á bondosamente? . . . Posso eu ter prazer nele da vossa mão?" (Mal 1:8, 13) O apóstolo evidentemente aplica este requisito em sentido espiritual aos cristãos, suplicando-lhes: "[Apresentai] os vossos corpos como sacrifício vivo, santo e aceitável a Deus, um serviço sagrado com a vossa faculdade de raciocínio." — Ro 12:1.

A Claudicação de Jacó. Quando Jacó tinha cerca de 97 anos de idade, passou pela experiência de engalfinhar-se a noite inteira com um materializado anjo de Deus. Conseguiu deter o anjo até que este lhe deu uma bênção. Durante a luta, o anjo tocou na concavidade da articulação da coxa de Jacó, deslocando-a. Em resultado disso, Jacó andava mancando. (Gên 32:24-32; Os 12:2-4) Depois disso, Jacó tinha o lembrete de que, embora tivesse 'contendido com Deus [o anjo de Deus] e com homens, de modo que [ele] por fim prevaleceu', como disse o anjo, realmente não derrotara um poderoso anjo de Deus. Foi apenas segundo o propósito e a permissão de Deus que se permitiu a Jacó contender com o anjo, a fim de fornecer prova do grande apreço de Jacó pela necessidade que tinha da bênção de Deus.

Consideração. As Escrituras inculcam a consideração para com os coxos. Jó observou que, mesmo na sua condição próspera, "tornei-me . . . pés para o coxo". (Jó 29:15) Jesus e seus discípulos tinham compaixão pelos doentes e coxos, realizando muitas curas de tais pessoas. — Mt 11:4, 5; 15:30, 31; 21:14; At 3:1-10; 8:5-7; 14:8-10.

Usos Ilustrativos e Figurados. Os jebuseus ilustraram sua confiança jactanciosa na segurança da sua cidadela quando escarneceram de Davi: "'Aqui não entrarás, mas os cegos e os coxos hão de repelir-te', pensando: 'Davi não entrará aqui.'" Talvez colocassem realmente tais pessoas na muralha como defensores, conforme declarado por Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], VII, 61 [iii, 1]), e este talvez fosse o motivo de Davi dizer: "Aquele que golpear os jebuseus estabeleça contato por meio do túnel de água tanto com os coxos como com os cegos que são odiosos para a alma de Davi!" Esses coxos e cegos eram símbolo do insulto dos jebuseus contra Davi, e, o que era mais sério, seu escárnio contra os exércitos de Jeová. Davi odiava os jebuseus, junto com seus coxos e cegos, por causa dessa arrogância. Talvez até mesmo chamasse os próprios líderes jebuseus de 'coxos e cegos', em desprezo. — 2Sa 5:6-8.

Sobre a declaração no versículo 8: "Por isso é que se diz: 'O cego e o coxo não entrarão na casa'", foram oferecidas diversas explicações. No texto, esta declaração não é atribuída a Davi, e pode significar que outros criaram este dito proverbial com respeito àqueles que, iguais aos jebuseus, se jactavam ou tinham confiança excessiva na sua posição segura. Ou, o ditado pode ter significado: 'Ninguém que mantém relações com gente desagradável assim como os jebuseus entrará.' Outros verteriam o texto: "Porque os cegos e os coxos continuaram a dizer: Ele não entrará nesta casa", ou: "Porque disseram, sim, os cegos e os coxos: Ele não entrará na casa." — Synopsis of Criticism (Sinopse de Crítica), de Barrett, Londres, 1847, Vol. II, Parte II, p. 518; KJ margem.

Numa ocasião posterior, Elias perguntou aos israelitas: "Até quando ficareis mancando em duas opiniões diferentes? Se Jeová é o verdadeiro Deus, ide segui-lo; mas se é Baal, ide segui-lo.” Naquela ocasião, os israelitas afirmavam adorar a Jeová, mas ao mesmo tempo adoravam a Baal. Seu rumo era instável e vacilante, como o dum homem coxo. Na competição resultante, quando os profetas de Baal tentaram em vão, desde a manhã até o meio-dia, conseguir uma resposta de seu deus, “eles continuaram a mancar em volta do altar que tinham feito”. Isto talvez fosse uma descrição zombeteira da ritualística dança ou coxeadura dos fanáticos adoradores de Baal, ou talvez manquejassem de cansaço em vista do seu longo e fútil rito. — 1Rs 18:21-29.

O mancar, o coxear e o tropeçar são usados em linguagem figurada para indicar uma vacilante irregularidade ou instabilidade no proceder de vida, objetivo ou fala da pessoa. Bildade, supostamente avisando Jó sobre os perigos que o aguardavam, disse a respeito de alguém que adotava um proceder iníquo: “O desastre está pronto para fazê-lo mancar.” (Jó 18:12) Em linguagem figurada similar, Davi e Jeremias falaram sobre seus inimigos como esperando que dessem um passo vacilante, a espreita de que manquejassem, para que, conforme os adversários de Jeremias diziam, “possamos prevalecer contra ele e vingar-nos dele”. (Je 20:10; Sal 38:16, 17) Os inimigos de Jesus Cristo queriam vê-lo tropeçar, ou mancar, na sua fala, a fim de enlaçá-lo. — Mt 22:15.

Uso proverbial. “Como alguém que mutila seus pés [o que o tornaria coxo], como alguém que bebe apenas violência, é aquele que confia assuntos à mão de um estúpido”, disse o sábio Rei Salomão. Deveras, o homem que emprega alguém estúpido para cuidar de um projeto dele faz violência aleijadora aos seus próprios interesses. Com certeza verá entrar em colapso a obra que se propõe fazer, com dano para si mesmo. — Pr 26:6.

Os Provérbios continuam com uma ilustração similar: “Acaso as pernas do coxo puxaram água? Então há um provérbio na boca de gente estúpida.” (Pr 26:7) Nos tempos antigos, especialmente nas cidades construídas sobre aterros, muitas vezes era necessário descer uma escada ou escadaria longa para tirar água dum poço. Tentar o estúpido falar ou aplicar um provérbio é tão desajeitado e ineficaz como um coxo tentar carregar água escadaria acima.

A nação antiga de Deus. Ao falar da restauração de seu povo, Jeová prometeu fortalecê-lo para partir de Babilônia e empreender a perigosa viagem de volta para a desolada Jerusalém. Qualquer claudicação, hesitação ou indecisão espiritual seria removida. Deus os incentivou por meio do profeta Isaías: “Naquele tempo o coxo estará escalando como o veado.” (Is 35:6) A nação de Deus havia mancado e havia caído no cativeiro, mas, “naquele dia”, disse Jeová, “vou ajuntar aquela que manquejava; . . . e certamente constituirei aquela que manquejava em um restante e aquela que fora removida para longe em uma nação poderosa”. — Miq 4:6, 7; Sof 3:19.

Consolando adicionalmente seu povo, Jeová prometeu, como seu Rei, protegê-los contra agressores. Descreveu a impotência dos inimigos de Sião como navio com seu cordame solto, seu mastro balouçando e sem velas. Daí, ele disse: “Naquele tempo, até mesmo o despojo [do inimigo] em abundância terá de ser dividido; os próprios coxos tomarão realmente um grande saque.” Haveria tanto despojo, que mesmo aqueles que usualmente não poderiam ter parte no saque poderiam naquele tempo participar nele. — Is 33:23.

Consideração com os espiritualmente coxos. O escritor cristão da carta aos hebreus salientou que entre eles havia muitos espiritualmente imaturos, que deveriam fazer mais progresso. (He 5:12-14) Daí, depois de falar sobre a disciplina, ele disse: “Persisti em endireitar as veredas para os vossos pés, para que o coxo não fique desconjuntado, mas, antes, para que sare.” (He 12:13) Até mesmo os mais fortes deveriam vigiar cuidadosamente como andam no seu proceder cristão, para que os mais fracos, os espiritualmente “coxos”, não tropeçassem ou se ferissem. Se os mais fortes na fé usassem sua liberdade espiritual para fazer certas coisas que eram lícitas, os mais fracos na fé poderiam tropeçar por causa das ações deles. — Ro 15:1.

O apóstolo Paulo apresenta como exemplo deste princípio a questão de comer e beber. (Ro 14:13-18, 21) Nesta passagem, ele aconselha, em parte: “Tomai esta decisão, de não pordes diante dum irmão uma pedra de tropeço ou uma causa para cair.” Ele diz: “É bom não comer carne, nem beber vinho, nem fazer algo que faça teu irmão tropeçar.” — Veja 1Co 8:7-13.

Por outro lado, conforme o apóstolo mostra, o cristão deve fortalecer suas próprias ‘pernas’ espirituais para não mancar ou tropeçar por causa do que ocorre ou do que outro faz. Deve tornar-se forte, para manter-se firme no proceder cristão. Paulo diz: “Quem come não menospreze ao que não come, e quem não come não julgue aquele que come, pois Deus tem acolhido a esse.” (Ro 14:3) Este princípio foi expresso pelo salmista: “Paz abundante pertence aos que amam a tua lei, e para eles não há pedra de tropeço.” (Sal 119:165) Não há coisa alguma que faça os que amam a lei de Deus mancar com claudicação espiritual.

Cura Completa. A claudicação tem provocado muitas lágrimas. Assim como Jesus Cristo curou muitos mancos e aleijados quando estava na terra, até mesmo restaurando partes ressequidas do corpo (Mr 3:1, 5; compare isso com Lu 22:50, 51), o Filho de Deus, por meio dum "novo céu", realizará novamente curas similares. Fará isso cabalmente como Sumo Sacerdote e Rei designado por Deus, enxugando toda lágrima dos olhos da humanidade. — Mt 8:16, 17; Re 21:1, 4.

COZ [Espinho]. Descendente de Judá. Coz "tornou-se pai de Anube, e de Zobeba, e das famílias de Aarel, filho de Harum". — 1Cr 4:1, 8.

COZEBA [provavelmente: Mentiroso]. Lugar em Judá onde descendentes de Selá, filho de Judá, residiam. (1Cr 4:21, 22) A maioria dos peritos acha que Cozeba é Aczibe ("Quezibe" em algumas versões), mencionada em Gênesis 38:5 e em Josué 15:44, e nesta base é tentativamente identificado com Tell el-Beida (Horvat Lavnin), a 5 km ao OSO de Adulão. Os homens de Cozeba parecem ter sido incluídos na expressão "eles foram os oleiros". — 1Cr 4:23; veja ACZIBE N.º 1.

COZER (ASSAR), PADEIRO. "Cozer" ou "assar" significa submeter à ação do fogo (em seco; tostar). O termo hebraico mais comum para "cozer" é 'a·fáh, raiz de 'o·féh (padeiro). (Gên 19:3; 40:2) Outra palavra hebraica para "cozer" ('ugh; Ez 4:12) evidentemente é aparentada com 'u·gháh, que significa "bolo redondo". — Gên 18:6; veja BOLO.

No lar hebraico, cozer pão e bolos era um dos principais deveres das mulheres, embora escravos o fizessem em lares maiores. Falando por Jeová, Samuel disse aos israelitas, que haviam solicitado um rei humano: "Tomará as vossas filhas para misturadoras de unguento, e cozinheiras, e padeiras." (1Sa 8:13) Todavia, homens talvez supervisionassem esse trabalho ou o fizessem eles mesmos, conforme indicado pelas ações de Ló quando dois anjos o visitaram em Sodoma. "Cozeu pães não fermentados, e eles passaram a comer" o banquete preparado. — Gên 19:1-3.

O pão, nos tempos bíblicos, era geralmente cozido em fornos. (Veja FORNO.) Ocasionalmente, porém, o cozimento era feito por se acender um fogo sobre pedras ajuntadas. Quando estas estavam bem quentes, retiravam-se as cinzas e colocava-se a massa nas pedras. Depois de um tempo, a massa era virada e deixada nas pedras até que o pão estivesse cabalmente cozido. (Os 7:8) Os viajantes talvez cozessem pão simples em covas rasas cheias de pedrinhas quentes, sobre as quais se acendera um fogo. Depois de remover as brasas, colocava-se a massa nas pedras quentes, sendo talvez virada diversas vezes enquanto o pão cozia. — 1Rs 19:6.

As ofertas de cereais feitas pelos israelitas frequentemente eram "algo cozido no forno", tiradas "de cima da assadeira" ou "da frigideira funda". (Le 2:4-7) A assadeira era um prato grosso de cerâmica com depressões (similares ao moderno grill), embora se usassem também assadeiras de ferro. — Ez 4:3.

Padeiros profissionais operavam nas cidades. Enquanto Jeremias estava em detenção no Pátio da Guarda, em Jerusalém, na época de escassez antes da queda desta cidade, em 607 AEC, ele recebia uma ração diária de um pão redondo "da rua dos padeiros", enquanto o suprimento durou. (Je 37:21) Portanto, os padeiros comerciais, evidentemente, ocupavam determinada rua em Jerusalém. Anos mais tarde, quando as muralhas de Jerusalém foram restauradas sob a supervisão de Neemias, também foi consertada a "Torre dos Fornos". (Ne 3:11; 12:38) É incerto exatamente como esta torre veio a ser chamada assim, mas é possível que recebesse este nome incomum porque se encontravam ali os fornos dos padeiros comerciais.

O padeiro real evidentemente era homem de certa importância no antigo Egito. Um mural no túmulo de Ramsés III, no Vale dos Reis, em Tebas, retrata uma padaria real egípcia em pleno funcionamento, mostrando a massa ser trabalhada com os pés, a produção de pães e a preparação do forno. Conforme relatado em Gênesis, um padeiro real egípcio ficou especialmente notório por ter pecado contra o rei e ter sido lançado na prisão. Ali teve um sonho, no qual viu a si mesmo carregando três cestos de pão na cabeça, com aves comendo do cesto superior. Este "chefe dos padeiros" foi retirado no terceiro dia e 'pendurado', cumprindo assim a interpretação de José: "Os três cestos são três dias. Daqui a três dias, Faraó te levantará a cabeça de cima de ti e certamente te pendurará num madeiro; e as aves hão de comer a tua carne de cima de ti." — Gên 40:1-3, 16-22.

COZINHAR, UTENSÍLIOS DE COZINHA. A preparação de alimentos por ferver, assar ou cozer era usualmente considerada dever das mulheres na casa hebraica, mas, em certas ocasiões, as refeições eram preparadas por homens. (Gên 18:6-8; 27:3-9, 14, 30, 31; 1Sa 8:13; 2Sa 13:8) Quando moravam em tendas, os hebreus provavelmente cozinhavam na maior parte ao ar livre. Quando se fixaram em Canaã, morando em casas de pedra, cozinhavam em parte dentro de casa, especialmente durante tempo inclemente. (Jz 6:19; 2Sa 13:7-11) Cozinhava-se principalmente para a refeição noturna, a mais importante refeição do dia. (Lu 14:12; Re 3:20) Nada podia ser cozinhado no sábado regular, porque a Lei proibia até mesmo acender fogo. — Êx 35:3.

Os hebreus empregavam diversos utensílios e equipamentos na preparação de alimentos. Havia o moinho manual, operado pelas mulheres no lar. (De 24:6; Mt 24:41; veja MOINHO, MÓ.) Para especiarias ou pequenas quantidades de cereais bastava o gral e o pilão. (Núm 11:8; veja GRAL.) A massa de pão era misturada numa amassadeira (Êx 12:34) e cozida num fogão ou num forno. — Êx 8:3; 1Cr 9:31.

No tabernáculo e mais tarde no templo usavam-se garfos. (Êx 27:3; 2Cr 4:16) Faz-se menção dum garfo de três dentes usado pelos sacerdotes. (1Sa 2:12-14) As cozinheiras domésticas talvez usassem um garfo similar para tirar carne duma panela. Dispunham de diversos tipos de faca para cortar a carne a ser cozinhada. Não há nenhum indício bíblico de que usavam facas e garfos para comer.

As panelas usadas para cozinhar em geral eram de barro, embora algumas fossem de cobre, as quais são mencionadas em especial em conexão com o santuário. (Le 6:28) Entre os utensílios domésticos de cozinha havia panelas, vasilhas redondas, variando consideravelmente em tamanho. Panelas de bronze com pernas são retratadas em pinturas em túmulos egípcios, e é possível que os israelitas queixosos, no ermo, pensassem em tais panelas quando falaram de estar "sentados junto às panelas de carne", no Egito. (Êx 16:3) A palavra hebraica traduzida por "panelas", nesta passagem, é a geralmente usada para indicar a panela de boca larga, que podia ser usada para lavar (Sal 60:8) ou para cozinhar nela. (2Rs 4:38-41; Ez 24:3-5) Estas tinham diversos tamanhos, desde o tamanho médio, de uns 30 cm de diâmetro, até as bem grandes. Antigas amostras deste tipo relativamente raso de panela não apresentam alças, mas durante o tempo do reino dividido, em Israel, passou a ser usado um tipo com duas alças.

Têm sido encontradas panelas de boca estreita, de uma ou duas alças. Tinham uma forma mais ou menos redonda, de uns 10 a 36 cm de diâmetro.

Os israelitas possuíam também potes ou panelas fundas, e também assadeiras. Frequentemente, as ofertas de cereais eram preparadas nelas. (Le 2:5, 7; 7:9; 1Cr 23:29) Exemplos de assadeiras de barro foram descobertos em Gezer. Estas tinham pequenas depressões, comparáveis às dos atuais pequenos grills. Usavam-se também assadeiras de ferro. — Ez 4:1-3.

As Escrituras às vezes usam panelas em sentido figurado. Jerusalém, que estava para ser destruída em 607 AEC, foi comparada a uma panela de boca larga, tendo nela seus habitantes como carne. — Ez 11:1-12; 24:6-14; veja VASOS.

CRESCENTE [do lat., significando: "Que Cresce; Que Aumenta"]. Um homem mencionado por Paulo na sua segunda carta a Timóteo como tendo ido à Galácia. — 2Ti 4:10.

CRETA, CRETENSES. A quinta maior ilha do Mediterrâneo, e seus habitantes. A ilha tem uns 250 km de comprimento e varia em largura de 13 a 56 km. Creta está situada na extremidade meridional do mar Egeu, a uns 100 km ao SE da Grécia. Montes, alguns cobertos de neve durante parte do ano, estendem-se por toda a extensão da ilha estreita. Perto do centro de Creta, o monte Ida elevase a 2.456 m acima do nível do mar. A costa N tem alguns bons portos, mas o litoral meridional é mais regular e em grande parte dele os montes descem de forma íngreme até o mar. Assim, a costa S provê poucos lugares adequados para portos, conforme indicado no relato da viagem de Paulo a Roma, considerada mais adiante.

Aceita-se em geral que Creta era a "Caftor" mencionada nas Escrituras Hebraicas, e portanto, o lugar do qual os filisteus emigraram para Canaã. (Je 47:4; Am 9:7) Alguns peritos relacionam também os "queretitas" com os cretenses; a Septuaginta grega reza "cretenses", em vez de "queretitas", tanto em Ezequiel 25: 15-17 como em Sofonias 2:5-7. (Veja QUERETITAS.) Se a identificação de Caftor com Creta for aceita, conforme parece razoável, então os primitivos habitantes da ilha eram descendentes de Mizraim, cujo nome é biblicamente equivalente a Egito. — Gên 10:13, 14.

A civilização desenvolvida pelos cretenses era bem distinta daquelas da Mesopotâmia e do Egito, mas igualmente resplendente. A religião cretense dava ênfase ao elemento feminino, recebendo uma deusa-mãe o maior destaque. Assim como em outras religiões de fertilidade, a serpente está regularmente presente nas representações da deusa, quer segurada nas mãos dela, quer enroscada no corpo dela. Uma inferior deidade masculina é usualmente associada com ela, talvez na relação de mãe e filho frequentemente encontrada neste tipo de culto. Em Cnosso foi encontrada uma cruz de mármore, sendo a cruz igualmente um antigo símbolo sexual. A civilização antiga desapareceu perto dos últimos séculos do segundo milênio. Durante o primeiro milênio AEC, Creta, por fim, veio a estar sob domínio grego. Por volta do segundo século AEC, a ilha se havia tornado reduto e esconderijo de piratas, que atacavam a navegação no Mediterrâneo. Daí, em 67 AEC, Pompeu subjugou Creta, e ela tornou-se província romana, junto com Cirene, na África do Norte.

A Atividade de Paulo Ali. Judeus ou prosélitos cretenses estavam entre os presentes em Jerusalém em Pentecostes de 33 EC. (At 2:5, 11) Talvez em resultado disso introduziu-se o cristianismo em Creta.

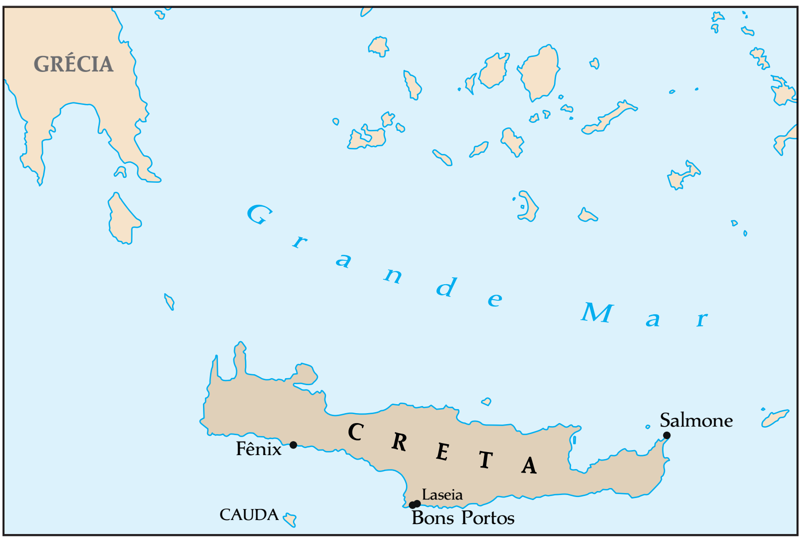
O apóstolo Paulo, em caminho a Roma para ser julgado, passou por Creta a bordo dum navio graneleiro de Alexandria, aproximadamente no outono setentrional do ano 58 EC. O navio, com 276 pessoas a bordo, navegou "sob o abrigo de Creta", quer dizer, ao largo do lado meridional da ilha, a sota-vento, onde o navio estava protegido contra os ventos adversos do NO. De Salmone, na costa L de Creta, o navio avançou devagar em direção ao O até chegar a Bons Portos, uma pequena baía que provia ancoragem num ponto pouco antes de o litoral meridional curvar-se agudamente para o N. Ali, contrário ao conselho de Paulo, tomou-se a decisão de tentar chegar a Fênix, outro porto a uns 65 km costa acima. Contornando o cabo Littinos (Matala), o navio 'costeou o litoral de Creta', quando um tempestuoso vento ENE, de repente soprando desde as alturas motanhosas, se abateu sobre o navio, obrigando-o a pôr-se à capa e tomar o rumo do vento. Dali, o navio foi impelido para além da ilha de Cauda, a uns 65 km de Bons Portos. — At 27:6-16, 37, 38.

A evidência é que, depois de dois anos de encarceramento em Roma, Paulo visitou Creta e se empenhou em atividade cristã ali durante o período final do seu ministério. Ao partir, ele designou Tito para permanecer em Creta, a fim de corrigir certas condições existentes nas congregações, fazendo designações de anciãos "numa cidade após outra". (Tit 1:5) Mais tarde, ao considerar problemas congregacionais numa carta a Tito, Paulo citou as palavras dum profeta cretense, no sentido de que "os cretenses são sempre mentirosos, feras prejudiciais, glutões desempregados". (Tit 1:10-12) Pensa-se que estas palavras sejam de Epimênides, poeta cretense do sexto século AEC. Esta avaliação dos antigos cretenses era compartilhada pelos gregos, entre os quais o nome cretense tornou-se sinônimo de mentiroso.



CRIAÇÃO. O ato de criar, ou trazer à existência, alguém ou alguma coisa. Pode também referir-se àquilo que foi criado ou trazido à existência. A palavra hebraica ba·rá' e a grega ktí·zo, ambas significando "criar", são usadas exclusivamente com referência à criação divina.

Em todas as Escrituras, Jeová Deus é identificado como o Criador. Ele é "o Criador dos céus, . . . o Formador da terra e Aquele que a fez". (Is 45:18) Ele é "o Formador dos montes e o Criador do vento" (Am 4:13) e é "Aquele que fez o céu e a terra, e o mar, e todas as coisas neles". (At 4:24; 14:15; 17:24) "Deus . . . criou todas as coisas." (Ef 3:9) Jesus Cristo reconheceu a Jeová como Aquele que criou os humanos, fazendo-os macho e fêmea. (Mt 19:4; Mr 10:6) Portanto, Jeová é apropriada e exclusivamente chamado de "o Criador". — Is 40:28.

É por causa da vontade de Deus que todas as coisas "existiram e foram criadas". (Re 4:11) Jeová, que tem existido por todo o tempo, estava sozinho antes de a criação ter começo. — Sal 90:1, 2; 1Ti 1:17.

Ao passo que Jeová, que é Espírito (Jo 4:24; 2Co 3:17), sempre tem existido, isto não se dá com a matéria da qual o universo é feito. Portanto, ao criar os literais céus e terra, Jeová não usou material preexistente. Isto é evidente de Gênesis 1:1, que diz: "No princípio Deus criou os céus e a terra." Se a matéria sempre tivesse existido, teria sido impróprio usar o termo "princípio" com respeito às coisas materiais. Todavia, depois de criar a terra, Deus formou "do solo todo animal selvático do campo e toda criatura voadora dos céus." (Gên 2:19) Ele formou também o homem "do pó do solo", soprando nas narinas dele o fôlego de vida, de modo que o homem se tornou uma alma vivente. — Gên 2:7.

O Salmo 33:6 diz apropriadamente: "Pela palavra de Jeová foram feitos os próprios céus, e pelo espírito de sua boca, todo o exército deles." Quando a terra ainda estava "sem forma e vazia", havendo "escuridão sobre a superfície da água de profundeza", era a força ativa de Deus que se movia por cima da superfície das águas. (Gên 1:2) Deus usou assim a sua força ativa, ou "espírito" (hebr.: rú·ahh), para realizar seu propósito criativo. As coisas que ele criou testificam não só o seu poder, mas também a sua Divindade. (Je 10:12; Ro 1:19, 20) E, visto que Jeová "não é Deus de desordem, mas de paz" (1Co 14:33), sua obra criativa é assinalada pela ordem, em vez de por caos ou acaso. Jeová lembrou a Jó que Ele havia tomado medidas específicas ao fundar a terra e ao bloquear o mar, e indicou que existem "estatutos dos céus". (Jó 38:1, 4-11, 31-33) Além disso, as obras criativas e outras obras de Deus são perfeitas. — De 32:4; Ec 3:14.

A primeira criação de Jeová foi seu "Filho unigênito" (Jo 3:16), "o princípio da criação de Deus". (Re 3:14) Este, "o primogênito de toda a criação", foi usado por Jeová na criação de todas as outras coisas, as nos céus e as na terra, "as coisas visíveis e as coisas invisíveis". (Col 1:15-17) O testemunho inspirado de João a respeito deste Filho, a Palavra, é que "todas as coisas vieram à existência por intermédio dele, e à parte dele nem mesmo uma só coisa veio à existência", e o apóstolo identifica a Palavra como Jesus Cristo, que se havia tornado carne. (Jo 1:1-4, 10, 14, 17) Como a sabedoria personificada, Este é representado como dizendo: "O próprio Jeová me produziu como princípio do seu caminho", e falando sobre a sua associação com Deus, o Criador, como "mestre de obras" de Jeová. (Pr 8:12, 22-31) Em vista da íntima associação de Jeová e seu Filho unigênito na atividade criativa, e porque este Filho é "a imagem do Deus invisível" (Col 1:15; 2Co 4:4), foi evidentemente ao Seu Filho unigênito e mestre de obras (ou mestre em obras) que Jeová falou, dizendo: "Façamos o homem à nossa imagem." — Gên 1:26.

Depois de criar seu Filho unigênito, Jeová usou-o para trazer à existência os anjos celestiais. Isto antecedeu à fundação da terra, conforme Jeová revelou ao interrogar Jó e perguntar-lhe: "Onde vieste a estar quando fundei a terra . . . quando as estrelas da manhã juntas gritavam de júbilo e todos os filhos de Deus começaram a bradar em aplauso?" (Jó 38:4-7) Foi depois da criação destas criaturas espirituais, celestiais, que foram feitos ou trazidos à existência os céus e a terra materiais, e todos os elementos. E, visto que Jeová é o primariamente responsável por todas essas obras criativas, estas são atribuídas a ele. — Ne 9:6; Sal 136:1, 5-9.

As Escrituras, ao declararem: "No princípio Deus criou os céus e a terra" (Gên 1:1), deixam o assunto indefinido quanto ao tempo. Este uso do termo "princípio", portanto, é inatacável, não importa que idade os cientistas queiram atribuir ao globo terrestre, aos diversos planetas e a outros corpos celestes. O próprio tempo da criação dos céus e da terra materiais pode ter sido há bilhões de anos.

Outras Atividades Criativas Que Envolviam a Terra. Gênesis, capítulo 1, até capítulo 2, versículo 3, depois de falar da criação dos céus e da terra materiais (Gên 1:1, 2), fornece um esboço de outras atividades criativas na terra. O capítulo 2 de Gênesis, começando no versículo 5, contém um relato paralelo a partir de um ponto no terceiro "dia", depois do surgimento da terra seca, mas antes de se criarem plantas terrestres. Apresenta pormenores não fornecidos no esboço geral encontrado no capítulo 1 de Gênesis. O Registro inspirado fala de seis períodos criativos chamados "dias", e de um sétimo período, ou "sétimo dia", em que Deus parou com as suas obras criativas terrestres e passou a repousar. (Gên 2:1-3) Embora o relato de Gênesis sobre a atividade criativa relacionada com a terra não apresente especificações botânicas e zoológicas pormenorizadas, conforme são comuns hoje em dia, os termos empregados nele abrangem adequadamente as principais categorias de vida, e mostram que estas foram criadas e feitas para se reproduzirem apenas segundo as suas respectivas "espécies". — Gên 1:11, 12, 21, 24, 25; veja ESPÉCIE.

A tabela que segue apresenta as atividades criativas de Deus durante os seis "dias" esboçados em Gênesis.

OBRAS CRIATIVAS TERRESTRES DE JEOVÁ

Dia N.º	Obras Criativas	Textos
1	Luz; separação entre dia e noite.	Gên 1:3-5
2	Expansão, separação das águas debaixo da expansão das águas por cima dela.	Gên 1:6-8
3	Terra seca; vegetação.	Gên 1:9-13
4	Luzeiros celestes tornam-se discerníveis da Terra.	Gên 1:14-19
5	Almas aquáticas e criaturas voadoras.	Gên 1:20-23
6	Animais terrestres; homem.	Gên 1:24-31

Gênesis 1:1, 2, refere-se a um tempo anterior aos seis "dias" esboçados acima. Quando estes "dias" começaram, o sol, a lua e as estrelas já existiam, mencionando-se a sua criação em Gênesis 1:1. No entanto, antes destes seis "dias" de atividade criativa, "a terra mostrava ser sem forma e vazia, e havia escuridão sobre a superfície da água de profundeza". (Gên 1:2) Pelo visto, uma faixa de camadas de nuvens ainda envolvia a terra, impedindo que a luz atingisse a sua superfície.

Quando Deus disse no Primeiro Dia: "Venha a haver luz", evidentemente uma luz difusa passou a atravessar as camadas de nuvens, embora as fontes desta luz ainda não pudessem ser discernidas da superfície da terra. Parece ter-se tratado dum processo gradativo, conforme indicado pelo tradutor J. W. Watts: "E a luz veio gradualmente à existência." (Gên 1:3, A Distinctive Translation of Genesis [Tradução Distintiva de Gênesis]) Deus fez com que houvesse uma separação entre a luz e a escuridão, chamando a luz de Dia e a escuridão de Noite. Isto indica que a terra girava em torno do seu eixo, ao orbitar em torno do sol, de modo que seus hemisférios, oriental e ocidental, podiam usufruir períodos de luz e de escuridão. — Gên 1:3, 4.

No Segundo Dia, Deus fez uma expansão por causar uma separação "entre águas e águas". Algumas águas permaneceram na terra, mas uma grande quantidade de água foi elevada muito acima da superfície da terra, e no espaço intermediário entre elas veio a haver uma expansão. Deus chamou a expansão de Céu, mas isto com relação à terra, visto que não se diz que as águas suspensas acima da expansão envolvessem estrelas ou outros corpos dos céus externos. — Gên 1:6-8; veja EXPANSÃO.

No Terceiro Dia, pelo poder operador de milagres de Deus, as águas na terra foram ajuntadas e apareceu a terra seca, chamando-a Deus de Terra. Foi também neste dia que Deus, por nenhum fator casual ou processos evolutivos, agiu para sobrepor o princípio de vida a átomos de matéria, de modo que se trouxeram à existência relva, vegetação e árvores frutíferas. Cada uma destas três categorias gerais era capaz de reproduzir-se segundo a sua "espécie". — Gên 1:9-13.

A vontade divina a respeito dos luzeiros foi realizada no Quarto Dia, declarando-se: "Deus passou a fazer os dois grandes luzeiros, o luzeiro maior para dominar o dia e o luzeiro menor para dominar a noite, e também as estrelas. Assim, Deus os pôs na expansão dos céus para iluminarem a terra e para dominarem de dia e de noite, e para fazerem separação entre a luz e a escuridão." (Gên 1:16-18) Em vista da descrição desses luzeiros, o luzeiro maior evidentemente era o sol, e o luzeiro menor, a lua, embora o sol e a lua só sejam especificamente mencionados na Bíblia depois do seu relato do Dilúvio dos dias de Noé. — Gên 15:12; 37:9.

Anteriormente, no primeiro "dia", usou-se a expressão: "Venha a haver luz." A palavra hebraica para "luz" ali é 'ohr, significando luz em sentido geral. Mas, no quarto "dia", a palavra hebraica muda para ma·'óhr, que se refere a um luzeiro ou fonte de luz. (Gên 1:14) Portanto, no primeiro "dia", uma luz difusa evidentemente atravessava as faixas envolventes, mas as fontes desta luz não poderiam ser vistas por um observador terrestre. Agora, no quarto "dia", as coisas evidentemente mudaram.

É também digno de nota que em Gênesis 1:16 não se usa o verbo hebraico ba·rá', que significa "criar". Antes, emprega-se o verbo hebraico 'a·sáh, que significa "fazer". Visto que o sol, a lua e as estrelas estão incluídos nos "céus" mencionados em Gênesis 1:1, eles foram criados muito antes do Quarto Dia. No quarto dia, Deus passou a "fazer" com que esses corpos celestes ocupassem uma nova relação para com a superfície da terra e a expansão por cima dela. Quando se diz: "Deus os pôs na expansão dos céus para iluminarem a terra", isto indica que se tornaram então discerníveis da superfície da terra, como se estivessem na expansão. Também, os luzeiros deviam "servir de sinais, e para épocas, e para dias, e para anos", provendo assim mais tarde diversas maneiras de orientação para o homem. — Gên 1:14.

O Quinto Dia ficou marcado pela criação das primeiras almas não humanas na terra. Pelo poder divino não foi produzida apenas uma criatura que Deus tivesse o propósito que evoluísse para outras formas, mas literalmente enxames de almas viventes. Declara-se: "Deus passou a criar os grandes monstros marinhos e toda alma vivente que se move, que as águas produziram em enxames segundo as suas espécies, e toda criatura voadora alada segundo a sua espécie." Satisfeito com o que Ele tinha produzido, Deus os abençoou, e, na realidade, disse-lhes que 'se tornassem muitos', o que era possível, porque estas criaturas, de muitas famílias de espécies diferentes, foram divinamente dotadas da faculdade de reproduzir-se "segundo as suas espécies". — Gên 1:20-23.

No Sexto Dia, "Deus passou a fazer o animal selvático da terra segundo a sua espécie, e o animal doméstico segundo a sua espécie, e todo animal movente do solo segundo a sua espécie", obra que era boa, assim como todas as anteriores obras criativas de Deus. — Gên 1:24, 25.

Perto do fim do sexto dia de atividade criativa, Deus trouxe à existência uma espécie inteiramente nova de criatura, superior aos animais, embora inferior aos anjos. Tratava-se do homem, criado à imagem de Deus e segundo a Sua semelhança. Ao passo que Gênesis 1:27 declara brevemente a respeito da humanidade que Deus 'os criou macho e fêmea', o relato paralelo de Gênesis 2:7-9 mostra que Jeová Deus formou o homem do pó do solo, soprou nas narinas dele o fôlego de vida, e o homem tornou-se uma alma vivente, provendo-se-lhe um lar paradísico e alimento. Neste caso, Jeová usou os elementos da terra na obra criativa, e então, tendo formado o homem, Ele criou a fêmea do gênero humano, usando uma das costelas de Adão como base. (Gên 2:18-25) Com a criação da mulher, o homem estava completo como "espécie". — Gên 5:1, 2.

Deus abençoou então a humanidade, dizendo ao primeiro homem e sua mulher: "Sede fecundos e tornai-vos muitos, e enchei a terra, e sujeitai-a, e tende em sujeição os peixes do mar, e as criaturas voadoras dos céus, e toda criatura vivente que se move na terra." (Gên 1:28; compare isso com Sal 8:4-8.) Para a humanidade e para as outras criaturas terrestres, Deus fez provisões adequadas por dar-lhes "toda a vegetação verde por alimento". Relatando o resultado de tal obra criativa, o Registro inspirado declara: "Depois, Deus viu tudo o que tinha feito, e eis que era muito bom." (Gên 1:29-31) Tendo o sexto dia chegado com bom êxito ao seu término e tendo Deus completado esta obra criativa, "passou a repousar no sétimo dia de toda a sua obra que fizera". — Gên 2:1-3.

Na conclusão do retrospecto das realizações em cada um dos seis dias de atividade criativa ocorre a declaração: "E veio a ser noitinha e veio a ser manhã" do primeiro, segundo, terceiro dia, e assim por diante. (Gên 1:5, 8, 13, 19, 23, 31) Visto que a duração de cada dia criativo era maior do que 24 horas (conforme será considerado mais adiante), esta expressão não se aplica a noite e dia literais, mas é figurativa. Durante o período noturno, as coisas estariam indistintas; mas na manhã tornar-se-iam claramente discerníveis. Durante a "noitinha", ou começo, de cada período ou "dia" criativo, o propósito de Deus para com aquele dia, embora plenamente conhecido a ele, estaria indistinto para quaisquer observadores angélicos. Todavia, com a chegada da "manhã", haveria plena luz para ver o que Deus se havia proposto para aquele dia, tendo-o já realizado nesta ocasião. — Veja Pr 4:18.

Duração dos Dias Criativos. A Bíblia não especifica a duração de cada um dos períodos criativos. No entanto, todos os seis já terminaram, dizendo-se com respeito ao sexto dia (como no caso de cada um dos cinco dias precedentes): "E veio a ser noitinha e veio a ser manhã, sexto dia." (Gên 1:31) Entretanto, não se faz esta declaração com respeito ao sétimo dia, em que Deus passou a repousar, indicando que este continuava. (Gên 2:1-3) Também, mais de 4.000 anos depois do começo do sétimo dia, ou dia de repouso de Deus, Paulo indicou que esse ainda estava em andamento. Em Hebreus 4:1-11, ele recorreu às anteriores palavras de Davi (Sal 95:7, 8, 11) e a Gênesis 2:2, instando: "Façamos, portanto, o máximo para entrar naquele descanso." No tempo do apóstolo, o sétimo dia já havia continuado por milhares de anos e ainda não havia terminado. O Reinado Milenar de Jesus Cristo, o qual biblicamente é identificado como "Senhor do sábado" (Mt 12:8), evidentemente faz parte do grande sábado, o dia de repouso de Deus. (Re 20:1-6) Isto indica a passagem de milhares de anos desde o começo do dia de repouso de Deus até o seu fim. A semana de dias, apresentada em Gênesis 1:3 a 2:3, dos quais o último é um sábado, parece paralelizar a semana em que os israelitas dividiam seu tempo, observando o sábado no sétimo dia dela, em harmonia com a vontade divina. (Êx 20:8-11) E, visto que o sétimo dia tem continuado por milhares de anos, pode-se razoavelmente concluir que cada um dos seis períodos, ou dias, criativos era de pelo menos milhares de anos de duração.

Que um dia pode ter mais de 24 horas de duração é indicado em Gênesis 2:4, que fala de todos os períodos criativos como um só "dia". Isto também é indicado pela observação inspirada de Pedro, de que "um só dia é para Jeová como mil anos, e mil anos, como um só dia". (2Pe 3:8) Atribuir-se não apenas 24 horas, mas um período mais longo, milhares de anos, a cada um dos dias criativos harmoniza-se melhor com a evidência encontrada na própria terra.

Coisas Criadas Antecederam às Invenções do Homem. Milhares de anos antes de aparecerem em cena muitas das invenções do homem, Jeová já havia provido suas criações com suas próprias versões delas. Por exemplo, o voo das aves precedeu em milênios o desenvolvimento de aviões. O náutilo, dotado de câmaras, e o siba usam tanques de flutuação para descer e subir no oceano, assim como fazem os submarinos. O polvo e a lula recorrem à propulsão a jato. Morcegos e golfinhos são peritos no uso do sonar. Diversos répteis e aves marinhas têm embutidos neles suas próprias "usinas de dessalinização", que os habilitam a beber a água do mar.

Pelos ninhos engenhosamente projetados e pelo uso de água, os cupins refrigeram o ar das suas moradias. Plantas microscópicas, insetos, peixes e árvores usam sua própria forma de "anticongelante". Pequenas frações de mudança de temperatura são registrados pelos termômetros embutidos de algumas serpentes, mosquitos, e as aves leipoa e megápode. Marimbondos, vespas e vespas amarelas produzem papel.

Thomas Edison recebe o crédito pela invenção da lâmpada elétrica, mas a perda de energia dela por causa do calor é um inconveniente. As criações de Jeová — esponjas, fungos, bactérias, vaga-lumes, insetos, peixes — produzem luz fria e em muitas cores.

Muitas aves migratórias não somente têm bússola na cabeça, mas possuem também relógio biológico. Algumas bactérias microscópicas possuem motor rotativo que podem fazer funcionar para a frente ou no reverso.

Não é sem bom motivo que o Salmo 104:24 diz: "Quantos são os teus trabalhos, ó Jeová! A todos eles fizeste em sabedoria. A terra está cheia das tuas produções."

Alguns procuram associar o relato bíblico da criação com relatos mitológicos, pagãos, tais como a bem conhecida Epopeia da Criação babilônica. Na realidade, havia diversas histórias sobre a criação na antiga Babilônia, mas aquela que ficou bem conhecida é um mito relacionado com Marduque, deus nacional de Babilônia. Em suma, a história fala sobre a existência da deusa Tiamat e do deus Apsu, que se tornaram os pais de outras deidades. As atividades destes deuses tornaram-se tão aflitivas para Apsu, que ele decidiu destruí-los. Todavia, Apsu foi morto por um desses deuses, Ea, e quando Tiamat procurou vingar Apsu, ela foi morta pelo filho de Ea, Marduque, o qual partiu então o corpo dela, usando metade deste para formar o céu e a outra metade em conexão com o estabelecimento da terra. Os atos subsequentes de Marduque incluíam a criação da humanidade (com a ajuda de Ea), usando o sangue de outro deus, Quingu, diretor das hostes de Tiamat.

Aproveitou-se a Bíblia das histórias babilônicas sobre a criação?

P. J. Wiseman salienta no seu livro que, quando as tabuinhas babilônicas da criação foram descobertas, alguns peritos esperavam que descobertas e pesquisas adicionais mostrassem que havia uma correspondência entre elas e o relato da criação em Gênesis. Alguns achavam que se tornaria evidente que o relato de Gênesis aproveitou algo do babilônico. Entretanto, descobertas e pesquisas adicionais apenas tornaram evidente que existe uma grande lacuna entre os dois relatos. Não há paralelo entre eles. Wiseman cita The Babylonian Legends of the Creation and the Fight Between Bel and the Dragon (As Lendas Babilônicas sobre a Criação e a Luta Entre Bel e o Dragão), publicado pelos Curadores do Museu Britânico, que afirmam que "os conceitos fundamentais dos relatos babilônico e hebraico são essencialmente diferentes". Ele mesmo observa: "É muitíssimo lamentável que muitos teólogos, ao invés de se manterem em dia com a moderna pesquisa arqueológica, continuem a repetir a teoria, já refutada, de que os hebreus 'se aproveitaram' das fontes babilônicas." — Creation Revealed in Six Days (Criação Revelada em Seis Dias), Londres, 1949, p. 58.

Embora alguns tenham indicado o que para eles pareciam ser similaridades entre a epopeia babilônica e o relato de Gênesis sobre a criação, em vista da consideração da narrativa bíblica da criação, que se acaba de fazer, e do epítome acima, do mito babilônico, é prontamente evidente que realmente não são nada similares. Portanto, é desnecessária uma detalhada análise comparativa entre eles. Todavia, ao considerar aparentes similaridades e diferenças (tais como a ordem dos eventos) nesses relatos, o Professor George A. Barton observou: "Uma diferença mais importante está nos conceitos religiosos dos dois. O poema babilônico é mitológico e politeísta. Seu conceito sobre a deidade de modo algum é elevado. Seus deuses amam e odeiam, tramam e maquinam, lutam e destroem. Marduque, o campeão, vence apenas depois duma feroz luta, que exige o máximo dos seus poderes. Gênesis, por outro lado, reflete o mais enaltecido monoteísmo. Deus domina tão cabalmente todos os elementos do universo, que estes lhe obedecem à mínima palavra. Ele controla tudo sem esforço. Diz uma coisa, e ela é feita. Admitindo-se, como faz a maioria dos peritos, que há uma conexão entre as duas narrativas, não há melhor medida da inspiração do relato bíblico do que colocá-lo lado a lado com o babilônico. Ao lermos hoje o capítulo em Gênesis, este ainda nos revela a majestade e o poder de um só Deus, e cria no homem moderno, assim como fazia nos antigos hebreus, uma atitude de adoração para com o Criador." — Archaeology and the Bible (Arqueologia e a Bíblia), 1949, pp. 297, 298.

Declarou-se a respeito de antigos mitos de criação em geral: "Nenhum mito foi ainda encontrado que se refira explicitamente à criação do universo, e aqueles que falam sobre a organização do universo e seu processo cultural, sobre a criação do homem e o estabelecimento da civilização são caracterizados pelo politeísmo e pelas lutas entre deidades visando a supremacia, o que faz notório contraste com o monoteísmo hebreu dos capítulos primeiro e segundo do livro de Gênesis." — O Novo Dicionário da Bíblia, editado por J. Douglas, em português por R. P. Shedd, 1966, Edições Vida Nova, p. 348.

"Uma Nova Criação." Depois do sexto período ou "dia" criativo, Jeová cessou sua atividade criativa terrestre. (Gên 2:2) Mas ele tem realizado coisas grandiosas em sentido espiritual. Por exemplo, o apóstolo Paulo escreveu: "Se alguém estiver em união com Cristo, ele é uma nova criação." (2Co 5:17) Estar "em" ou "em união com" Cristo aqui significa usufruir união com ele como membro do seu corpo, sua noiva. (Jo 17:21; 1Co 12:27) Para tal relação vir à existência, Jeová Deus atrai a pessoa ao seu Filho e a gera com espírito santo. Como filho de Deus, gerado pelo espírito, tal pessoa é "uma nova criação", tendo a perspectiva de compartilhar com Jesus Cristo o Reino celestial. — Jo 3:3-8; 6:44.

Recriação. Jesus falou aos seus apóstolos também sobre uma "recriação" e associou esta com o tempo em que "o Filho do homem se assentar no seu glorioso trono". (Mt 19:28; Lu 22:28-30) A palavra grega traduzida por "recriação" é pa·lin·ge·ne·si·a, composta de elementos que significam "novamente; de novo; mais uma vez", e "nascimento; origem". Filo usou o termo com referência à reconstituição do mundo após o Dilúvio. Josefo usou-o com respeito ao restabelecimento de Israel após o exílio. O Theological Dictionary of the New Testament (Dicionário Teológico do Novo Testamento), editado por G. Kittel, diz que o uso de pa·lin·ge·ne·si·a, em Mateus 19:28, "está de pleno acordo com o de Filo e Josefo". (Traduzido para o inglês por G. Bromiley, 1964, Vol. I, p. 688) De modo que a referência não é feita a uma nova criação, mas a uma regeneração, ou renovação, por meio da qual se realiza plenamente o propósito de Jeová para com a terra. — Veja TRIBO ("Julgando as Doze Tribos de Israel").

Sob o domínio do Reino, asseguram-se grandiosas bênçãos à humanidade obediente, "a criação" que "será liberta da escravização à corrupção e terá a liberdade gloriosa dos filhos de Deus". (Ro 8:19-21; veja FILHO[S] DE DEUS [Liberdade Gloriosa dos Filhos de Deus].) No sistema de coisas prometido e criado por Deus "há de morar a justiça". (2Pe 3:13) A certeza do seu estabelecimento é enfatizado pela visão apocalíptica de João e sua declaração: "Eu vi um novo céu e uma nova terra." — Re 21:1-5.

CRIANÇA (FILHO), CRIANCINHAS. Para se referir à prole humana, usam-se termos hebraicos e gregos que transmitem uma variedade de pormenores úteis. O termo hebraico comum para criança (em português também "filho", "menino") é yé·ledh. (Gên 21:8) A palavra aparentada yal·dáh refere-se a uma "menina" ou a uma "jovem". (Jl 3:3; Gên 34:4; Za 8:5) Ambas as palavras derivam do radical ya·ládh, que tem o sentido de "produzir; dar à luz; parir". Duas outras palavras hebraicas para criança, filho ou bebê ('oh·lél e 'oh·lál), derivam da raiz verbal 'ul, que significa "amamentar; aleitar". (1Sa 22:19; Je 6:11; Gên 33:13) O costumeiro termo hebraico para rapaz, jovem ou moço, é ná·'ar. (Gên 19:4; Jz 8:20) No entanto, este termo é também usado com referência a bebês tais como Moisés, de três meses de idade. (Êx 2:6; compare isso com 2Sa 12:16.) A palavra hebraica taf (criancinhas; pequeninos) transmite a ideia básica de quem anda "com passinhos miúdos". (Gên 43:8; 45:19; Is 3:16) Entre os termos gregos estão té·knon (filho), te·kní·on (filhinho), pai·dí·on (criancinha) e ár·sen (filho varão). (Mt 10:21; Jo 13:33; Mt 2:8; Re 12:13) A palavra grega né·pi·os refere-se a um "pequenino" (1Co 13:11), e a palavra grega bré·fos refere-se a uma "criança". — Lu 1:41; veja FILHO.

O Criador, Jeová, providenciou que houvesse a multiplicação da raça humana pelo nascimento de crianças, as quais, por sua vez, se tornariam adultos, e, com o tempo, também se tornariam pais. O mandato de procriação está expresso em Gênesis 1:28. É um desejo normal das pessoas ter filhos. Os antigos israelitas estavam especialmente interessados em ter filhos, por causa da promessa de Deus, de torná-los uma nação poderosa, e porque, por meio deles, viria a semente (ou descendente) de Abraão, mediante quem todas as famílias da terra abençoariam a si mesmas. (Gên 28:14) Ter muitos filhos era considerado uma bênção de Deus. (Sal 127:3-5; 128:3-6) A esterilidade era considerada como vitupério. — Gên 30:23.

Nos tempos bíblicos, o nascimento dum menino usualmente era uma ocasião mais feliz do que o duma menina, embora no círculo familiar a menina fosse amada pelos pais tanto quanto o menino. A preferência pelo menino residia no fato de que este assegurava a continuação da linhagem e do nome da família, e assegurava a retenção da propriedade dela. A prioridade do varão é também indicada pelo fato de que o período de purificação, sob a Lei, era duas vezes maior no caso do nascimento de meninas. (Le 12:2-5) O filho primogênito pertencia a Jeová e devia ser remido com uma oferta. — Êx 13:12, 13; Núm 18:15.

Antigamente, o bebê, por ocasião do nascimento, era primeiro lavado com água e então esfregado com sal. (Ez 16:4) Fazia-se isso para tornar a pele seca, rija e firme. O bebê era envolto firmemente em cueiros ou faixas. (Jó 38:9; Lu 2:12) A mãe amamentava-o por dois anos e meio ou três anos, ou mais tempo. Em circunstâncias excepcionais, como no caso de a mãe falecer ou não poder suprir leite, usavam-se amas.

Na antiguidade, o nome era dado às crianças por ocasião do nascimento, quer pelo pai (Gên 5:29; 16:15; 21:3; 35:18), quer pela mãe (Gên 4:25; 29:32; 1Sa 1:20), mas em tempos posteriores, em Israel, os meninos recebiam o nome por ocasião da circuncisão, que era feita no oitavo dia. (Lu 1:59; 2:21) Às vezes, o nome do menino era o mesmo que o do pai, mas usualmente o nome tinha de ver com as circunstâncias que precediam ou acompanhavam o nascimento, ou era um nome relacionado com o nome de Jeová. Com o passar do tempo, certos nomes passaram a ser meramente tradicionais e não tinham nada que ver com o significado original.

As mães usavam diversos métodos de carregar os filhinhos. Às vezes, a criança era amarrada nas costas ou carregada sobre o ombro. Jeová, por meio de Isaías, alude a mães segurando o filho no colo, levando-o sobre o ombro ou carregando-o sobre o lado, um pouco acima do quadril. (Is 49:22; 66:12) As palavras de Moisés também indicam que crianças eram carregadas ao colo. — Núm 11:12.

Os meninos eram cuidados mormente pela mãe até uns cinco anos de idade. Naturalmente, cabia ao pai a responsabilidade principal de ensinar ao filho as Escrituras desde a infância, e a mãe ajudava nisso. (De 6:7; Pr 1:8; Ef 6:4; 2Ti 3:15) Ao passo que os filhos ficavam mais velhos, recebiam treinamento prático do pai em lavoura, em pecuária ou num ofício tal como a carpintaria. Tanto José como Davi eram pastores enquanto meninos. — Gên 37:2; 1Sa 16:11.

As meninas estavam sob os cuidados diretos da mãe, naturalmente, sujeitas à jurisdição do pai. Enquanto em casa, ensinavam-se-lhes prendas domésticas que seriam de valor na vida adulta. Raquel era pastora. (Gên 29:6-9) Moças trabalhavam nos campos durante a ceifa de cereais (Ru 2:5-9), e a sulamita diz que seus irmãos fizeram dela guardiã dos vinhedos. — Cân 1:6.

As crianças em Israel conheciam a alegria da descontração e diversão, às vezes brincando nas feiras, imitando coisas que haviam observado adultos fazer. — Mt 11:16, 17; Za 8:5.

Mas os bem treinados jovens israelitas lembravam-se do seu Criador nos dias da sua idade viril, e alguns até mesmo serviam-no como ministros. Samuel, como menino, foi usado para ministrar a Jeová no tabernáculo. (1Sa 2:11) Jesus interessava-se muito no serviço do seu Pai quando tinha apenas 12 anos de idade, aprendendo tudo o que podia por conversar com os instrutores no templo. (Lu 2:41-49) Uma mocinha hebreia, que tinha fé implícita em Jeová e no seu profeta Eliseu, foi responsável por encaminhar Naamã a Eliseu, a fim de ser curado da lepra. (2Rs 5:2, 3) No Salmo 148:12, 13, ordena-se tanto a rapazes como a moças louvar a Jeová. Meninos, por causa do treinamento que receberam na Bíblia, puderam clamar ao verem Jesus no templo, dizendo: "Salva, rogamos, o Filho de Davi!" e Jesus os elogiou. — Mt 21:15, 16.

Os pais eram responsáveis pela educação e treinamento de seus filhos, sendo eles mesmos os instrutores e orientadores, tanto por palavra como por exemplo. O programa educativo era o seguinte: (1) Ensinava-se o temor a Jeová. (Sal 34:11; Pr 9:10) (2) O filho era admoestado a honrar pai e mãe. (Êx 20:12; Le 19:3; De 27:16) (3) Disciplina ou instrução na Lei, seus mandamentos e ensinos, e a educação em atividades e verdades reveladas de Jeová eram diligentemente inculcados na mente impressionável dos filhos jovens. (De 4:5, 9; 6:7-21; Sal 78:5) (4) Enfatizava-se o respeito pelos mais velhos. (Le 19:32) (5) Incutia-se indelevelmente na mente do jovem a importância da obediência. (Pr 4:1; 19:20; 23:22-25) (6) Dava-se ênfase ao treinamento prático para a vida adulta, tal como ensinar às meninas fazer coisas no lar, ou ensinar aos meninos o ofício do pai, ou outro. (7) Ensinava-se ler e escrever.

Após o exílio babilônico, existiam sinagogas na maioria das cidades, e, em tempos posteriores, os meninos eram ali ensinados por instrutores. Além disso, dava-se instrução religiosa quando os pais levavam os filhos consigo a assembleias, realizadas com o objetivo de adorar e louvar a Jeová. (De 31:12, 13; Ne 12:43) Os pais de Jesus levaram-no a Jerusalém para a Páscoa. Na viagem de volta, deram pela falta dele e encontraram-no no templo, "sentado no meio dos instrutores, e escutando-os e interrogando-os". — Lu 2:41-50; veja EDUCAÇÃO.

Quando acontecia que um filho se tornava absolutamente rebelde e incorrigível, depois de repetidas advertências e a necessária disciplina, adotava-se uma medida ainda mais rigorosa. O filho era levado perante os anciãos da cidade, e depois do testemunho dos pais, de que ele era ofensor incorrigível, o delinquente sofria a pena capital por apedrejamento. Este arranjo evidentemente se referia ao filho além da idade usualmente atribuída a uma criança, porque as Escrituras o descrevem como "glutão e beberrão". (De 21:18-21) Quem espancasse o pai ou a mãe, ou invocasse o mal sobre eles, era morto. O motivo de tais medidas fortes era que a nação eliminasse do seu meio o que era mau, e que 'todo o Israel ouvisse e deveras ficasse com medo'. Portanto, a punição aplicada a tais ofensores seria um grande fator dissuasório na nação para a tendência de delinquência juvenil ou de desrespeito pela autoridade parental. — Êx 21:15, 17; Mt 15:4; Mr 7:10.

Grande desrespeito foi demonstrado para com Eliseu, profeta designado de Deus, por um grupo de pequenos rapazes que faziam troça dele, clamando: "Sobe, careca! Sobe, careca!" Eles queriam que Eliseu, que usava a vestimenta conhecida de Elias, subisse até Betel, ou então subisse da terra assim como Elias supostamente havia feito. (2Rs 2:11) Não o queriam por perto. Eliseu finalmente se voltou e invocou o mal sobre eles, em nome de Jeová. "Saíram então da floresta duas ursas e dilaceraram quarenta e dois meninos deles." — 2Rs 2:23, 24.

Jesus profetizou que filhos se levantariam contra os pais e os pais contra os filhos, por causa da posição que tomariam como seguidores dele. (Mt 10:21;

Mr 13:12) O apóstolo Paulo predisse que os grandes problemas que marcariam os "últimos dias" incluiriam filhos desobedientes aos pais e a ausência de afeição natural. — 2Ti 3:1-3.

Ao apresentar as qualificações para superintendentes e servos ministeriais na congregação cristã, o apóstolo Paulo especificou que os filhos dos homens escolhidos para estes cargos deviam ser "filhos crentes, não acusados de devassidão nem indisciplinados", e que estes tinham de estar em sujeição com toda a seriedade; pois, disse Paulo, "deveras, se um homem não souber presidir à sua própria família, como tomará conta da congregação de Deus"? — Tit 1:6; 1Ti 3:4, 5, 12.

Autoridade Parental. A autoridade dos pais, especialmente do pai na família, tinha alcance bastante amplo. Enquanto o pai vivia e podia administrar a família, os filhos varões estavam sujeitos a ele. Todavia, se um filho por fim estabelecia um lar independente, então ele se tornava o chefe da sua própria família. Os filhos podiam ser vendidos em servidão temporária pelo pai, em pagamento de dívidas contraídas. (Êx 21:7; 2Rs 4:1; Mt 18:25) A autoridade do pai sobre a filha era tal, que ele podia anular um voto feito pela filha. Entretanto, sua autoridade não podia ser usada para proibir que sua filha adorasse a Jeová, ou para que não obedecesse às ordens de Jeová, visto que o pai, como membro da nação de Israel, estava dedicado a Deus e plenamente sob a lei de Deus. (Núm 30:3-5, 16) A autoridade parental manifestava-se também no casamento, visto que os pais escolhiam a esposa para seus filhos, ou faziam os arranjos para o casamento. (Gên 21:21; Êx 21:8-11; Jz 14:1-3) A viúva ou a divorciada podia voltar para a casa do pai e tornar-se novamente sujeita a ele. — Gên 38:11.

Os direitos de herança passavam pelo pai. Quando nasciam gêmeos, tomava-se muito cuidado de distinguir o filho que vinha primeiro ao mundo (Gên 38:28), visto que o primogênito recebia duas partes da herança do pai, ao passo que o outro filho só recebia uma parte. (De 21:17; Gên 25:1-6) Usualmente, o filho mais velho assumia a responsabilidade pelo sustento das mulheres na família, após a morte do pai. O filho nascido por meio dum casamento levirato era criado como filho do homem falecido e herdava a propriedade dele. — De 25:6; Ru 4:10, 17.

Usos Figurados. As palavras "criança", "filho" e "criancinhas", conforme usadas na Bíblia, têm uma considerável latitude de significado. Os descendentes de Israel eram chamados de "filhos na carne", também "filhos da transgressão", por Isaías, por causa do seu proceder rebelde contra Jeová. (Ro 9:8; Is 57:4) Nos dias dos apóstolos, os iníquos eram classificados como "filhos amaldiçoados" e "filhos do Diabo". (2Pe 2:14; 1Jo 3:10) Em contraste, os que exercem fé em Cristo e se tornam gerados pelo espírito são chamados de "filhos de Deus". (Jo 1:12; Ro 8:16) Discípulos muitas vezes são chamados de filhinhos ou criancinhas. — Jo 13:33; He 2:13.

Os privilegiados a receber a ressurreição dentre os mortos são chamados de "filhos da ressurreição" (Lu 20:36); também, aqueles que são co-herdeiros de Cristo são "os filhos da promessa" (Ro 9:8) ou filhos "da livre" (Gál 4:31). Todos os que querem obter a vida no Reino do céu têm de demonstrar as qualidades juvenis de humildade, docilidade e confiança. (Mt 18:2-4) Homens e mulheres que se esforçam a obedecer a Deus por manifestar a luz da verdade na sua vida são descritos como "filhos obedientes" e como "filhos da luz". — 1Pe 1:14; Ef 5:8.

Paulo aconselhou os da congregação em Corinto assim como a filhos, para que se 'alargassem' na afeição; antes disso, ele os havia incentivado a não se tornar criancinhas na capacidade de entendimento. — 2Co 6:13; 1Co 14:20.

CRIATURA PULULANTE. [hebr.: shé·rets]. O radical de que este termo é derivado significa "pulular" ou "proliferar". (Gên 8:17; Êx 8:3) O substantivo parece aplicar-se a pequenas criaturas encontradas em grandes números. (Êx 8:3; Sal 105:30; compare isso com Êx 1:7.) Ocorre primeiro em Gênesis 1:20, com o aparecimento inicial de almas viventes, no quinto dia criativo, quando as águas começaram a pulular com almas viventes. O Dilúvio destruiu 'criaturas pululantes' terrestres fora da arca. — Gên 7:21.

A lei a respeito das coisas puras e impuras mostra que o termo pode ser aplicado a criaturas aquáticas (Le 11:10); criaturas aladas, inclusive morcegos e insetos (Le 11:19-23; De 14:19); criaturas terrestres, inclusive roedores, lagartos, camaleões (Le 11:29-31); bem como criaturas que se locomovem sobre o "ventre" e criaturas de muitos pés (Le 11:41-44). Muitas destas, mas não todas elas, eram "impuras" como alimento, sob a Lei.

CRIATURAS VOADORAS. Veja AVES N.º 2.

CRIME E PUNIÇÃO. Desde os tempos mais primitivos, o homem, feito à imagem do Deus de justiça (Gên 1:26; Sal 37:28; Mal 2:17), possui o atributo da justiça. (Is 58:2; Ro 2:13-15) A primeira sentença proferida por Jeová, para aplicar a justiça, foi dada ao primeiro casal humano e à serpente, que representava o Diabo. A sanção imposta pela desobediência a Deus, que equivalia a uma rebelião contra a soberania do Governante do universo, era a morte. (Gên 2:17) Mais tarde, sabendo que os homens possuíam o atributo da justiça, Caim se deu conta de que eles iriam querer matá-lo para vingar a morte do seu irmão Abel. Mas, Jeová não designou nem autorizou ninguém a executar Caim, reservando a si mesmo a administração da retribuição. Fez isto por cortar a linhagem de Caim no Dilúvio. (Gên 4:14, 15) Cerca de 700 anos antes do Dilúvio, Enoque declarou a vindoura execução, por parte de Deus, daqueles que haviam cometido atos ímpios. — Gên 5:21-24; Ju 14, 15.

Após o Dilúvio. Após o Dilúvio, Deus emitiu leis adicionais, entre elas a primeira autorização dada ao homem de executar a pena por assassínio. (Gên 9:3-6) Mais tarde, Jeová declarou a respeito de Abraão: "Pois fui familiarizar-me com ele, para que ordenasse aos seus filhos e aos da sua casa depois dele que guardassem o caminho de Jeová para fazer a justiça e o juízo." (Gên 18:19) Isto mostra que a sociedade patriarcal estava sob as leis de Deus, com as quais estava familiarizada.

Jeová revelou seu conceito sobre o adultério e a punição dele quando disse a Abimeleque que a bem dizer já estava morto por tomar Sara com a intenção de torná-la sua esposa (embora Abimeleque não soubesse que ela pertencia a Abraão). (Gên 20:2-7) Judá decretou a pena de morte para Tamar, por meretrício. — Gên 38:24.

A Lei de Deus para Israel. Quando Israel foi organizado como nação, Deus tornou-se seu Rei, Legislador e Juiz. (Is 33:22) Deu-lhe as "Dez Palavras", ou "Dez Mandamentos", como costumam ser chamados, especificando princípios nos quais se baseava o conjunto de mais umas 600 leis. Ele iniciou as "Dez Palavras" com a declaração: "Eu sou Jeová, teu Deus, que te fiz sair da terra do Egito." (Êx 20:2) Isto serve como motivo básico para se obedecer a toda a Lei. A desobediência não somente era uma violação da lei do Chefe do governo, mas também uma ofensa contra o Chefe da religião, seu Deus, e blasfemar a Deus era lesa-majestade, traição.

Sob a Lei, aplicavam-se os mesmos princípios que governaram a sociedade patriarcal. A Lei, porém, era mais detalhada e abrangia todas as esferas das atividades do homem. A Lei inteira, que é apresentada no Pentateuco, era de uma tão elevada norma de moral, que nenhum homem podia tentar seguir a Lei inteira sem achar que ela o condenava como pecador, imperfeito. "O mandamento é santo, e justo, e bom", e "a Lei é espiritual", diz o apóstolo Paulo. "Ela foi acrescentada para tornar manifestas as transgressões." (Ro 7:12, 14; Gál 3:19) Era a inteira lei de Deus para Israel, especificando os princípios e as decisões oficiais de Jeová, não apenas uma simples coletânea dum conjunto de casos que poderiam surgir ou que já haviam surgido.

As sanções sob a Lei, portanto, ajudariam a mostrar que o pecado era "muito mais pecaminoso". (Ro 7:13) A pena de talião, exigindo igual por igual, estabelecia uma norma de justiça exata. A Lei servia para dar paz e tranquilidade à nação, preservando-a quando Israel obedecia, e protegia a pessoa contra o malfeitor, compensando-a quando sua propriedade era furtada ou destruída.

Os Dez Mandamentos, conforme declarados em Êxodo 20 e Deuteronômio 5, não especificam expressamente a sanção para cada violação. No entanto, essas penalidades são definitivamente declaradas em outros lugares. Para a violação dos primeiros sete mandamentos, a penalidade era a morte. A punição por furto era a restituição e a compensação àquele de quem se furtara a propriedade; para o testemunho falso, a retribuição. O último mandamento, contra a cobiça ou o desejo errado, não acarretava uma sanção aplicável pelos juízes. Transcendia as leis humanas no sentido de fazer todo homem seu próprio policial espiritual, e atingia a raiz, ou fonte, da violação de todos os mandamentos. Se alguém se entregasse ao desejo errado, este finalmente se manifestaria numa violação de um dos outros nove mandamentos.

Os principais crimes sob a Lei. Crimes capitais. Sob a Lei, a pena de morte era aplicada por (1) blasfêmia (Le 24:14, 16, 23); (2) adoração de qualquer outro deus, em vez de a Jeová, idolatria em qualquer forma (Le 20:2; De 13:6, 10, 13-15; 17:2-7; Núm 25:1-9); (3) feitiçaria, espiritismo (Êx 22:18; Le 20:27); (4) profecia falsa (De 13:5; 18:20); (5) violação do sábado (Núm 15:32-36; Êx 31:14; 35:2); (6) assassínio (Núm 35:30, 31); (7) adultério (Le 20:10; De 22:22); (8) mulher que se casava afirmando falsamente ser virgem (De 22:21); (9) relações sexuais com moça noiva (De 22:23-27); (10) incesto (Le 18:6-17, 29; 20:11, 12, 14); (11) sodomia (Le 18:22; 20:13); (12) bestialidade (Le 18:23; 20:15, 16); (13) sequestro (Êx 21:16; De 24:7); (14) espancar ou vituperar pai ou mãe (Êx 21:15, 17); (15) dar falso testemunho, num caso em que acarretaria a pena de morte para aquele contra quem se testemunhava (De 19:16-21); (16) aproximar-se do tabernáculo sem autorização (Núm 17:13; 18:7).

Em muitos casos, a pena mencionada é 'decepamento', usualmente executada por apedrejamento. Além de se ordenar isso para um pecado deliberado, e falatório ultrajante e desrespeitoso contra Jeová (Núm 15:30, 31), mencionam-se muitas outras coisas que acarretavam esta penalidade. Algumas delas são: deixar de ser circuncidado (Gên 17:14; Êx 4:24); deliberada inobservância da Páscoa (Núm 9:13); inobservância do Dia da Expiação (Le 23:29, 30); fabricar ou usar o óleo de santa unção para fins comuns (Êx 30:31-33, 38); consumir sangue (Le 17:10, 14); comer um sacrifício numa condição impura (Le 7:20, 21; 22:3, 4, 9); comer pão levedado durante a Festividade dos Pães Não Fermentados (Êx 12:15, 19); oferecer um sacrifício em qualquer outro lugar, em vez de no tabernáculo (Le 17:8, 9); comer a oferta de participação em comum no terceiro dia depois do dia do sacrifício (Le 19:7, 8); inobservância da purificação (Núm 19:13-20); tocar ilegalmente em coisas sagradas (Núm 4:15, 18, 20); ter relações sexuais com uma mulher durante a menstruação (Le 20:18); comer a gordura dos sacrifícios. — Le 7:25; veja DECEPAMENTO.

Punições impostas pela Lei. As punições sob a Lei dada por Jeová mediante Moisés serviam para manter a terra livre de aviltamento à vista de Deus; aqueles que praticavam coisas detestáveis eram eliminados dentre o povo. Também, as punições dissuadiam do crime e mantinham o respeito pela santidade da vida, pela lei do país, pelo Legislador, Deus, e pelo próximo. E, quando obedecida, a Lei preservava a nação do fracasso econômico e da decadência moral, com suas subsequentes doenças repugnantes e degeneração física.

Não havia punições bárbaras prescritas pela Lei. Ninguém podia ser punido pelos delitos de outro. Os princípios estavam claramente especificados. Concedia-se certa latitude aos juízes, que consideravam cada caso pelos seus próprios méritos, examinando as circunstâncias, bem como os motivos e as atitudes dos acusados. A justiça tinha de ser aplicada estritamente. (He 2:2) O assassino deliberado de modo algum podia escapar da pena de morte por pagar dinheiro. (Núm 35:31) Quando um homem era homicida acidental, ele podia fugir para uma das cidades de refúgio providas. Confinado dentro dos limites da cidade, ele era obrigado a reconhecer que a vida é sagrada e que mesmo o homicídio acidental não podia ser encarado levianamente, mas exigia uma compensação. Todavia, por trabalhar produtivamente na cidade de refúgio, ele não era um encargo financeiro para a comunidade. — Núm 35:26-28.

As sanções por delitos destinavam-se a aliviar e compensar a vítima dum ladrão ou de alguém que danificou sua propriedade. Se o ladrão não podia pagar a quantia estipulada, ele podia ser vendido como escravo, quer à vítima, quer a outro, reembolsando assim a vítima e obrigando o criminoso a trabalhar para o seu sustento, de modo que o estado não precisava cuidar dele, como quando se pratica o encarceramento. Essas leis eram justas e serviam para reabilitar o criminoso. — Êx 22:1-6.

Sob a Lei, a sentença de morte era executada por apedrejamento. (Le 20:2, 27) Ocasionalmente usava-se a espada, em especial quando era grande o número dos a serem executados. (Êx 32:27; 1Rs 2:25, 31, 32, 34) Quando uma cidade se tornava apóstata, todos os habitantes da cidade deviam ser devotados à destruição pela espada. (De 13:15) Em Êxodo 19:13 alude-se à morte por lança ou possivelmente por flecha. (Veja Núm 25:7, 8.) Menciona-se a decapitação, embora talvez a execução fosse realizada por outros meios e o cadáver decapitado. (2Sa 20:21, 22; 2Rs 10:6-8) Para os crimes mais detestáveis, a Lei prescrevia a queima e pendurar em madeiro. (Le 20:14; 21:9; Jos 7:25; Núm 25:4, 5; De 21:22, 23) Estas sentenças eram executadas só depois de a pessoa primeiro ter sido morta, conforme os textos mencionados claramente indicam.

Cativos de guerra usualmente eram executados pela espada, se eram pessoas devotadas à destruição por ordem de Deus. (1Sa 15:2, 3, 33) Outros, que se rendiam, eram submetidos a trabalhos forçados. (De 20:10, 11) Traduções mais antigas da passagem de 2 Samuel 12:31 dão a entender que Davi havia torturado os habitantes de Rabá de Amom, mas, traduções modernas indicam que ele apenas os submeteu a trabalhos forçados. — Veja NM; CBC; IBB.

Lançar alguém de cima dum penhasco ou lugar alto não era ordenado por lei, mas o Rei Amazias, de Judá, aplicou esta punição a 10.000 homens de Seir. (2Cr 25:12) O povo de Nazaré tentou fazer isso com Jesus. — Lu 4:29.

A justiça estrita era feita vigorar pela pena de talião, ou retaliação, igual por igual, quando os ferimentos tinham sido causados deliberadamente. (De 19:21) Há pelo menos um caso registrado da execução desta penalidade. (Jz 1:6, 7) Mas os juízes tinham de decidir, à base da evidência, se o crime era deliberado ou se era devido a negligência ou acidente, e assim por diante. Uma exceção à pena de talião era a lei que tratava da situação em que uma mulher tentou ajudar o marido numa luta por agarrar os testículos do outro homem. Neste caso, em vez de se destruir os órgãos reprodutivos dela, amputava-se-lhe a mão. (De 25:11, 12) Esta lei demonstra a consideração de Deus para com os órgãos reprodutivos. Também, visto que a mulher pertencia a um marido, esta lei misericordiosamente tomava em consideração o direito do marido, de ter filhos com a esposa.

A Míxena menciona quatro métodos de aplicar a pena de morte: apedrejamento, queima, decapitação e estrangulamento. Mas, estes últimos três métodos nunca foram autorizados, nem ordenados sob a Lei. Os métodos prescritos na Míxena fazem parte das tradições acrescentadas, excedendo os mandamentos de Deus. (Mt 15:3, 9) Um exemplo das práticas bárbaras a que isso levou os judeus é seu método de executar a pena da queima. "A ordenança daqueles que devem ser queimados [é a seguinte]: colocam-no em esterco até os joelhos e põem uma toalha de pano grosso dentro de outra de pano macio, e a enrolam no seu pescoço; uma [testemunha] puxa uma extremidade para si e a outra puxa a outra extremidade para si, até que ele abra a boca; uma mecha [segundo a Guemara (52a) era uma tira de chumbo] é acesa e lançada na sua boca, e ela desce ao seu estômago e queima suas entranhas." — Sanhedrin (Sinédrio) 7:2; traduzido ao inglês por H. Danby.

Visto que o homem, desde o início, tem sido governado por lei, quer por lei divina, quer pela lei da consciência divinamente implantada, a verdade é que, quanto mais os homens se apegavam à verdadeira adoração, tanto mais razoáveis e humanitárias eram as punições aplicadas pelas suas leis, e quanto mais se afastavam dela, tanto mais se corrompia seu senso de justiça. Isto se torna evidente quando se comparam as leis de nações antigas com as de Israel.

Egípcias. Pouco se sabe sobre as punições aplicadas pelos egípcios. Eles administravam espancamentos (Êx 5:14, 16), afogamento (Êx 1:22), decapitação e subsequente suspensão numa estaca (Gên 40:19, 22), e a execução pela espada, bem como o encarceramento. — Gên 39:20.

Assírias. As punições sob o Império Assírio eram bem severas. Incluíam a morte, a mutilação (como por cortar orelhas, nariz, lábios, ou por castração), pendurar em estaca, vetar o enterro, golpes com vara, pagamento de certo peso de chumbo, e corveia real (trabalho forçado). Sob a lei assíria, o assassino era entregue ao parente mais próximo do assassinado, e segundo a sua escolha, este podia matar o assassino ou tomar a sua propriedade. Isto podia levar a vendetas sangrentas, porque havia pouco controle sobre a questão, e não havia cidades de refúgio, como em Israel. A punição do adultério ficava ao critério do marido. Ele podia matar a esposa, mutilá-la, puni-la conforme achasse apropriado, ou deixá-la ir livre. O que fazia à esposa, ele também tinha de fazer ao homem adúltero. Muitos prisioneiros de guerra eram esfolados vivos, cegados, ou se lhes arrancava a língua; eram pendurados em estaca, queimados, e mortos de outra maneira.

Babilônicas. O código de Hamurábi (chamado assim, mas não um código como os juristas o definem hoje), admitidamente baseado em legislação anterior, é uma coleção de decisões ou "registros de casos" em tabuinhas de argila, mais tarde copiadas (talvez em estilo diferente de escrita) numa estela colocada no templo de Marduque em Babilônia. Provavelmente se guardavam cópias em outras cidades. Esta estela, mais tarde levada a Susa por um conquistador, foi descoberta ali em 1902.

Era o código de Hamurábi um "ancestral" da Lei mosaica?

Dessemelhante da Lei mosaica, não procura estabelecer princípios. Antes, seu objetivo parece ser o de ajudar os juízes a decidir certos casos por fornecer-lhes precedentes ou alterar decisões anteriores para mostrar o que se devia fazer em casos futuros. Por exemplo, não especifica uma sanção para o assassínio, porque já havia uma punição reconhecida para este e sem dúvida para outros crimes comuns. Hamurábi não tentava abranger todo o escopo da lei. Cada uma das regras do "código" começa com a fórmula: 'Se um homem fizer assim e assim.' Visto que se relaciona com casos específicos, em vez de estabelecer princípios, apenas estipula que julgamento se tem de fazer para se enquadrar num certo conjunto simples de fatos. Baseia-se principalmente em leis já existentes, apenas pormenorizando-as para se ajustar a determinadas situações difíceis, comuns na civilização babilônica daquele tempo.

O código de Hamurábi de modo algum mostra ser ancestral da Lei mosaica. Por exemplo, existia no código de Hamurábi uma punição "solidária". Uma das regras declara: "Se [um pedreiro] causou a morte do filho do dono da casa [porque a casa é falha e desmorona], matarão o filho desse pedreiro." A lei de Deus dada por meio de Moisés, ao contrário, declarava: "Os pais não devem ser mortos por causa dos filhos e os filhos não devem ser mortos por causa dos pais." (De 24:16) A penalidade pelo furto de objetos de valor geralmente não era a restituição, como na Lei mosaica, mas a morte. Em certos casos de furto, exigia-se a restituição de até 30 vezes mais. Quando um homem não podia pagar, ele devia ser morto. Nabucodonosor empregou o desmembramento, também usou a punição por fogo, como no caso dos três jovens hebreus, que mandou lançar vivos numa fornalha superaquecida. — Da 2:5; 3:19, 21, 29; Je 29:22.

Persas. Sob Dario, o Medo, Daniel foi sentenciado à cova dos leões, e os que o acusaram falsamente sofreram a retribuição quando eles, seus filhos e suas esposas morreram por este meio. (Da 6:24) Mais tarde, o Rei Artaxerxes, da Pérsia, instruiu Esdras no sentido de que podia executar o julgamento em todo aquele que não cumprisse a lei do Deus de Esdras ou a do rei, "quer para a morte, quer para o desterro, quer para uma multa de dinheiro, quer para o encarceramento". (Esd 7:26)

Assuero usou um madeiro de 50 côvados (22 m) de altura para pendurar Hamã. Assuero pendurou também os dois porteiros que haviam conspirado contra a sua vida. — Est 7:9, 10; 2:21-23.

Encontraram-se algumas tabuinhas que contêm as leis determinadas por Dario I, da Pérsia. Nelas, a punição prescrita para o homem que atacou outro com uma arma e o feriu ou o matou era o açoitamento, com 5 até 200 chicotadas. Pendurar a pessoa numa estaca era a punição às vezes administrada. De acordo com escritores gregos sobre leis persas, os delitos contra o estado, o rei, sua família ou sua propriedade usualmente acarretavam a pena de morte. Estas punições às vezes eram horríveis. Não há muita informação sobre crimes comuns, mas a mutilação das mãos ou dos pés, ou cegar a pessoa, parecem ter sido punições comuns.

Outras Nações na Região da Palestina. À parte de Israel, as outras nações dentro e ao redor da Terra da Promessa, usavam encarceramento e laços, mutilação, cegar, matar cativos de guerra pela espada, estripar mulheres grávidas e despedaçar criancinhas contra um muro ou uma pedra para morrer. — Jz 1:7; 16:21; 1Sa 11:1, 2; 2Rs 8:12.

Romanas. Além da execução pela espada, que incluía a decapitação (Mt 14:10), entre as punições mais comuns havia: espancamento; açoitamento com açoite que às vezes tinha ossos ou pedaços pesados de metal amarrados nele, ou tinha ganchos nas extremidades; enforcamento; lançar a pessoa do alto dum rochedo; afogamento; exposição a feras na arena; obrigar à participação em competições gladiatoriais; e queimar. Os prisioneiros muitas vezes eram presos em troncos (At 16:24) ou acorrentados a um soldado de guarda. (At 12:6; 28:20) A Lex Valeria e a Lex Porcia isentavam os cidadãos romanos do açoitamento — a Lex Valeria, quando o cidadão apelava para o povo; a Lex Porcia, sem este apelo.

Gregas. As punições gregas em muitos casos eram as mesmas que as impostas pelos romanos. Jogar a pessoa dum penhasco ou dentro duma caverna funda, espancamento até a morte, afogamento, envenenamento e a morte pela espada eram punições infligidas aos criminosos.

Para mais detalhes, veja crimes e punições sob os respectivos nomes.

CRISÓLITO. Pedra semipreciosa, transparente ou transluzente, amarela ou verde, composta de silicatos de magnésio e de ferro. Ocorre geralmente em rochas vulcânicas (também em dolomito e em alguns tipos de pedra calcária) em forma sólida, cristalina ou granular. "Crisólito" deriva da palavra grega khry·só·li·thos, significando "pedra de ouro", e parece que pelo menos alguns dos antigos aplicavam este nome a diversas gemas de cor amarela. Cristais de crisólito de fina qualidade são encontrados no Egito.

Em acatamento das instruções de Jeová, colocou-se um crisólito (hebr.: tar·shísh; LXX: khry·só·li·thos) na primeira posição na quarta fileira do "peitoral do julgamento" de Arão, para representar uma das 12 tribos de Israel. (Êx 28:2, 15, 20, 21; 39:13) O crisólito estava também incluído nas pedras preciosas que serviam de "cobertura" para o rei de Tiro. — Ez 28:12, 13.

Quando Ezequiel recebeu duas visões separadas, envolvendo quatro rodas, ele notou que a aparência das rodas era "como o brilho de crisólito". (Ez 1:15-21; 10:9) A donzela sulamita comparou as mãos do seu amado pastor a "cilindros de ouro, cheios de crisólito". Talvez os cilindros de ouro se referissem aos dedos, e o enchimento de crisólito, às unhas. (Cân 5:14) De modo similar, Daniel usou crisólito para descrever o corpo de "certo homem vestido de linho" que veio contar ao profeta o que sobreviria ao povo dele "na parte final dos dias". (Da 10:5, 6, 14) O apóstolo João, na sua visão da Nova Jerusalém, observou que o sétimo alicerce da muralha da cidade era de crisólito, e que havia gravado nele o nome de um "dos doze apóstolos do Cordeiro". — Re 21:2, 10, 14, 20; veja JOIAS E PEDRAS PRECIOSAS.

CRISÓPRASO. Gema semipreciosa, transluzente, variedade verde-maçã de calcedônia. A cor é produzida por traços de níquel no minério. A única referência bíblica ao crisópraso (gr.: khry·só·pra·sos) encontra-se em Revelação (Apocalipse), onde é mencionado como constituindo o décimo alicerce da muralha da "cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém". — Re 21:2, 20.

CRISPO [do lat., significando: "Crespo"]. Presidente da sinagoga em Corinto, a quem o apóstolo Paulo batizou pessoalmente e cuja família inteira se tornou cristã. — At 18:8; 1Co 1:14.

CRISTAL. Conforme usado na Bíblia, o cristal refere-se a um mineral claro, transparente, provavelmente uma variedade de quartzo, atualmente chamado de cristal de rocha. O cristal de rocha é quartzo na sua forma mais pura, composto de silício e de oxigênio. É encontrado na sua característica forma hexagonal em quase todos os tipos de rocha, e tem aspecto incolor, claro e vítreo. O cristal de rocha é muito mais duro do que outros minerais comuns, e às vezes é lapidado para servir de joia.

O valor comparativo do "cristal de rocha" (hebr.: ga·vísh), nos dias de Jó, pode ser deduzido pela sua avaliação dele junto com corais e pérolas, e, no entanto, ele considerou a todos estes de valor inferior ao da sabedoria. (Jó 28:18) Revelação (Apocalipse) usa cristal claro, brilhante e puro (gr.: krý·stal·los), para descrever "um mar vítreo, semelhante a cristal", o brilho da cidade santa, Nova Jerusalém, como "pedra de jaspe, brilhando como cristal", e "um rio de água da vida, límpido como cristal". — Re 4:6; 21:11; 22:1.

CRISTÃO. O latinizado termo grego Khri·sti·a·nós, encontrado apenas três vezes nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, designa os seguidores de Cristo Jesus, os exponentes do cristianismo. — At 11:26; 26:28; 1Pe 4:16.

"Foi primeiro em Antioquia [Síria] que os discípulos, por providência divina, foram chamados cristãos." (At 11:26) É possível, então, que este nome já fosse usado desde 44 EC, quando ocorreram os eventos que cercam este texto, embora a estrutura gramatical desta frase não necessariamente indique isso; alguns acham que foi um pouco mais tarde. De qualquer modo, por volta de 58 EC, na cidade de Cesareia, o termo era bem conhecido e usado até mesmo por autoridades públicas, porque, naquela época, o Rei Herodes Agripa II disse a Paulo: "Em pouco tempo me persuadirias a tornar-me cristão." — At 26:28.

Os escritores bíblicos, dirigindo-se a concrentes ou descrevendo seguidores de Cristo, usaram expressões tais como "crentes no Senhor", "irmãos" e "discípulos" (At 5:14; 6:3; 15:10), "escolhidos" e "fiéis" (Col 3:12; 1Ti 4:12), "escravos de Deus" e "escravos de Cristo Jesus" (Ro 6:22; Fil 1:1), "santos", "congregação de Deus" e os "que invocam o Senhor". (At 9:13; 20:28; 1Co 1:2; 2Ti 2:22) Estes termos com sentido doutrinal eram usados primariamente como designações congregacionais internas. Para os de fora, o cristianismo era chamado de "O Caminho" (At 9:2; 19:9, 23; 22:4), e os opositores chamavam-no de "seita dos nazarenos" ou simplesmente de "esta seita". — At 24:5; 28:22.

Foi primeiro na Antioquia da Síria que os seguidores de Cristo ficaram conhecidos como cristãos. É bem pouco provável que os judeus fossem os primeiros a chamar os seguidores de Jesus de "cristãos" (em grego) ou "messianistas" (em hebraico), porque não rejeitariam a Jesus como o Messias, ou Cristo, para depois reconhecê-lo tacitamente como o Ungido, ou Cristo, por classificar os seguidores dele de "cristãos". Alguns acham que a população pagã talvez os apelidasse de cristãos por brincadeira ou desprezo, mas a Bíblia mostra que se tratava dum nome dado por Deus; eles, "por providência divina, foram chamados cristãos". — At 11:26.

O verbo grego khre·ma·tí·zo, neste texto, costuma ser traduzido simplesmente "foram chamados", e isto é o que se faz em Atos 11:26 na maioria das traduções. Todavia, há traduções que indicam que Deus tinha algo que ver com a escolha do nome "cristão". Dignas de nota, neste respeito, são a Tradução do Novo Mundo, Young's Literal Translation e The Simple English Bible. A tradução de Young reza: "Os discípulos também foram divinamente chamados de cristãos pela primeira vez em Antioquia."

A palavra grega khre·ma·tí·zo, conforme usada nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs, é sempre associada com algo sobrenatural, oracular ou divino. A Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible (Concordância Exaustiva da Bíblia), de Strong, no seu dicionário grego (1890, p. 78 [105]) define-a como "proferir um oráculo . . . i.e., intimar divinamente". O Greek and English Lexicon (Léxico Grego e Inglês, 1885, p. 786) de Edward Robinson, dá o sentido: "Falada em relação a uma resposta, um oráculo, uma declaração divinos, dar resposta, falar como oráculo, avisar da parte de Deus." O Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament (Léxico Grego-Inglês do Novo Testamento, 1889, p. 671), de Thayer: "Dar uma ordem ou admoestação divina, ensinar desde o céu . . . ser divinamente ordenado, admoestado, instruído . . . ser o porta-voz de revelações divinas, promulgar as ordens de Deus." Thomas Scott, nas suas Explanatory Notes (Notas Explanatórias, 1832, Vol. III, p. 419), diz o seguinte sobre este texto: "A palavra dá a entender que isto foi feito por revelação divina: pois geralmente possui este significado no Novo Testamento, e é traduzida 'avisado da parte de Deus' ou 'avisado por Deus', mesmo quando não existe nenhuma palavra para DEUS no grego." A respeito de Atos 11:26, o Commentary (Comentário) de Clarke diz: "A palavra [khre·ma·tí·sai] em nosso texto comum, que traduzimos foram chamados, significa no Novo Testamento: designar, avisar ou nomear, por direção divina. É neste sentido que a palavra é usada em Mat. ii. 12 . . . Se, portanto, o nome foi dado por designação divina, é bem provável que Saulo e Barnabé fossem mandados aplicá-lo; e que, assim sendo, o nome cristão procede de Deus." — Veja Mt 2:12, 22; Lu 2:26; At 10:22; Ro 7:3, Int; He 8:5; 11:7; 12:25, onde este verbo grego ocorre.

As Escrituras falam de Jesus Cristo como Noivo, Cabeça e Marido dos seus seguidores ungidos. (2Co 11:2; Ef 5:23) Apropriadamente, pois, assim como a esposa tem prazer em levar o nome do esposo, assim esta classe da "noiva" de Cristo teve prazer em receber um nome que identificava seus membros como pertencentes a ele. Deste modo, os que observavam estes cristãos do primeiro século prontamente os reconheciam não só pela sua atividade, mas também pelo seu nome, como inteiramente diferentes dos praticantes do judaísmo; era uma crescente associação em que não havia nem judeu, nem grego, mas todos eram um só debaixo de seu Cabeça e Líder, Jesus Cristo. — Gál 3:26-28; Col 3:11.

O Que Significa Ser Cristão. Jesus fez o convite de se ser seu seguidor, dizendo: "Se alguém quer vir após mim negue-se a si mesmo e apanhe a sua estaca de tortura, e siga-me continuamente." (Mt 16:24) Aqueles que são verdadeiros cristãos têm plena fé em que Jesus Cristo é o especialmente Ungido e o unigênito Filho de Deus, a Semente [Descendente] Prometida, que sacrificou sua vida humana como resgate, foi ressuscitado e enaltecido para a mão direita de Jeová, e recebeu autoridade para subjugar seus inimigos e defender a soberania de Jeová. (Mt 20:28; Lu 24:46; Jo 3:16; Gál 3:16; Fil 2:9-11; He 10:12, 13) Os cristãos encaram a Bíblia como a inspirada Palavra de Deus, a verdade absoluta, proveitosa para ensinar e para disciplinar a humanidade. — Jo 17:17; 2Ti 3:16; 2Pe 1:21.

Dos verdadeiros cristãos exige-se mais do que a mera profissão de fé. É necessário que a crença seja demonstrada por obras. (Ro 10:10; Tg 2:17, 26) Nascidos pecadores, os que se tornam cristãos arrependem-se, dão meia-volta, dedicam a vida a Jeová para adorá-lo e servi-lo, e então se submetem ao batismo em água. (Mt 28:19; At 2:38; 3:19) Precisam manter-se livres da fornicação, da idolatria e de comer sangue. (At 15:20, 29) Despem-se da velha personalidade com seus acessos de ira, conversa obscena, mentira, furto, bebedice e "coisas semelhantes a estas", e harmonizam sua vida com os princípios bíblicos. (Gál 5:19-21; 1Co 6:9-11; Ef 4:17-24; Col 3:5-10) Que "nenhum de vós", escreveu Pedro aos cristãos, "sofra como assassino, ou como ladrão, ou como malfeitor, ou como intrometido nos assuntos dos outros". (1Pe 4:15) Os cristãos devem ser bondosos e mostrar consideração, ser brandos e longânimes, exercendo amorosamente autodomínio. (Gál 5:22, 23; Col 3:12-14) Fazem provisões para os seus e cuidam deles, e amam seu próximo como a si mesmos. (1Ti 5:8; Gál 6:10; Mt 22:36-40; Ro 13:8-10) A principal qualidade identificadora pela qual os verdadeiros cristãos são reconhecidos é o notável amor que têm entre si. "Por meio disso", disse Jesus, "saberão todos que sois meus discípulos, se tiverdes amor entre vós". — Jo 13:34, 35; 15:12, 13.

Os verdadeiros cristãos imitam o exemplo de Jesus como o Grande Instrutor e Testemunha Fiel de Jeová. (Jo 18:37; Re 1:5; 3:14) "Ide . . . fazei discípulos de pessoas de todas as nações" é a ordem do seu Líder. (Mt 28:19, 20) Cumprindo-a, os cristãos 'dão testemunho publicamente e de casa em casa', instando com as pessoas em toda a parte a fugir de Babilônia, a Grande, e a depositar sua esperança e confiança no Reino de Deus. (At 5:42; 20:20, 21; Re 18:2-4) Estas são realmente boas novas, mas a proclamação de tal mensagem acarreta para os cristãos grande perseguição e sofrimento, assim como aconteceu com Jesus Cristo. Seus seguidores não estão acima dele; basta serem semelhantes a ele. (Mt 10:24, 25; 16:21; 24:9; Jo 15:20; 2Ti 3:12; 1Pe 2:21) Se alguém "sofrer como cristão, não se envergonhe, mas persista em glorificar a Deus neste nome", aconselhou Pedro. (1Pe 4:16) Os cristãos dão a "César" o que é das autoridades superiores deste mundo — honra, respeito, impostos — mas ao mesmo tempo permanecem separados dos assuntos deste mundo (Mt 22:21; Jo 17:16; Ro 13:1-7), e o mundo os odeia por isso. — Jo 15:19; 18:36; 1Pe 4:3, 4; Tg 4:4; 1Jo 2:15-17.

É compreensível por que pessoas de tão elevados princípios de moral e de integridade, acompanhados duma eletrizante mensagem transmitida com ardente zelo e franqueza, prontamente atraíram a atenção no primeiro século. As viagens missionárias de Paulo, por exemplo, eram como um fogo de pradaria que se espalha rapidamente, incendiando cidade após cidade — Antioquia, na Pisídia, Icônio, Listra, Derbe e Perge, em uma viagem; Filipos, Tessalônica, Bereia, Atenas e Corinto, em outra — fazendo as pessoas parar, pensar e tomar sua posição, quer aceitando quer rejeitando as boas novas do Reino de Deus. (At 13:14-14:26; 16:11-18:17) Muitos milhares abandonaram suas organizações de religião falsa, abraçando de todo o coração o cristianismo, e empreenderam zelosamente a atividade de pregação em imitação de Cristo Jesus e dos apóstolos. Isto, por sua vez, os tornou objeto de ódio e perseguição, instigados principalmente por líderes da religião falsa e por governantes políticos mal informados. Seu líder, Jesus Cristo, o Príncipe da Paz, fora morto sob a acusação de sedição; agora, os cristãos amantes da paz eram acusados de 'perturbar nossa cidade', de 'subverter a terra habitada' e de serem gente "que em toda a parte se fala contra ela". (At 16:20; 17:6; 28:22) Na época em que Pedro escreveu a sua primeira carta (c. 62-64 EC) parece que a atividade dos cristãos já era bem conhecida em lugares tais como "Ponto, Galácia, Capadócia, Ásia e Bitínia". — 1Pe 1:1.

Testemunho Não Cristão. Escritores seculares dos primeiros dois séculos também reconheceram a presença e influência dos primitivos cristãos no seu mundo pagão. Por exemplo, Tácito, historiador romano nascido por volta de 55 EC, fala do rumor que acusava Nero de ser o responsável pelo incêndio de Roma (64 EC), e então diz: "Assim Nero, para desviar as suspeitas, procurou achar culpados, e castigou com as penas mais horrorosas a certos homens que, já dantes odiados por seus crimes [conforme os romanos encaravam a questão], o vulgo chamava cristãos. . . . Em primeiro lugar se prenderam os que confessavam ser cristãos, e depois pelas denúncias destes uma multidão inumerável, os quais todos não tanto foram convencidos de haverem tido parte no incêndio como de serem os inimigos do gênero humano. O suplício destes miseráveis foi ainda acompanhado de insultos, porque ou os cobriram com peles de animais ferozes para serem devorados pelos cães, ou foram crucificados, ou os queimaram de noite para servirem como de archotes e tochas ao público." (Anais, XV, XLIV, em Clássicos Jackson, Vol. XXV, pp. 408, 409) Suetônio, outro historiador romano, nascido perto do fim do primeiro século EC, relata eventos que ocorreram durante o reinado de Nero, dizendo: "Punições foram infligidas aos cristãos, uma classe de homens dada a uma superstição nova e nociva." — The Lives of the Caesars (A Vida dos Césares; Nero, XVI, 2).

Flávio Josefo, na sua obra Jewish Antiquities (Antiguidades Judaicas, XVIII, 64 [iii, 3]), menciona certos eventos na vida de Jesus, acrescentando: "E a tribo dos cristãos, chamados segundo ele, ainda não desapareceu até o dia de hoje [cerca de 93 EC]." Plínio, o Moço, governador da Bitínia em 111 ou 112 EC, confrontado com o 'problema cristão', escreveu ao Imperador Trajano, delineando os métodos que ele usava e pedindo conselhos. "Tenho-lhes perguntado pessoalmente se são cristãos", escreveu Plínio. Se admitiam sê-los, eram punidos. Todavia, outros "negaram que eram ou haviam sido cristãos". Postos à prova, estes não somente ofereceram sacrifícios pagãos, mas até mesmo "injuriaram o nome de Cristo: nenhuma das coisas, segundo entendo, se consegue induzir o verdadeiro cristão a fazer". Respondendo a esta carta, Trajano elogiou Plínio pelo modo em que cuidava do assunto: "Seguiste o proceder certo . . . no seu exame dos casos dos acusados de serem cristãos." — The Letters of Pliny (As Cartas de Plínio), X, XCVI, 3, 5; XCVII, 1.

O cristianismo do primeiro século não possuía templos, não construía altares, não usava crucifixos, e não patrocinava clérigos de batina e com títulos. Os primitivos cristãos não celebravam feriados estatais e recusavam todo serviço militar. "Uma cuidadosa análise de toda a informação disponível mostra que, até o tempo de Marco Aurélio [que governou em 161-180 EC], nenhum cristão tornou-se soldado; e nenhum soldado, depois de tornar-se cristão, permanecia no serviço militar." — The Rise of Christianity (A Ascensão do Cristianismo), de E. Barnes, 1947, p. 333.

Não obstante, conforme indicado na carta de Plínio, nem todos os que levavam o nome cristão o eram de modo intransigente quando postos à prova. Exatamente conforme fora predito, o espírito de apostasia já operava antes de os apóstolos adormecerem na morte. (At 20:29, 30; 2Pe 2:1-3; 1Jo 2:18, 19, 22) Dentro dum período de menos de 300 anos, o campo de trigo do cristianismo havia sido invadido pelo joio de anticristos apóstatas a ponto de o iníquo Constantino, o Grande (ele mesmo incriminado de assassinar nada menos do que sete de seus amigos íntimos e parentes), figurar nos eventos que levaram ao desenvolvimento duma religião estatal, disfarçada de "cristianismo".

CRISTO. Este título, derivado do grego Khristós, equivale ao hebraico Ma·shí·ahh, "Messias; Ungido". (Veja Mt 2:4, n.) "Cristo" não é mero apelido acrescentado para diferenciar o Senhor Jesus de outros do mesmo nome; é um título oficial. — Veja JESUS CRISTO; MESSIAS.

A vinda de Cristo, aquele a quem Jeová ungiria com seu espírito para ser o Rei messiânico, havia sido predita séculos antes de Jesus nascer. (Da 9:25, 26) Todavia, por ocasião do seu nascimento, Jesus não era ainda o Ungido, ou Cristo. Predizendo seu nascimento, o anjo instruiu José: "Terás de dar-lhe o nome de Jesus." (Mt 1:21) Mas, quando os pastores perto de Belém receberam o anúncio angélico, em antecipação do papel futuro desempenhado por Jesus, disse-se-lhes: "Hoje vos nasceu . . . um Salvador, que é Cristo, o Senhor", isto é, "que há de ser Cristo, o Senhor". — Lu 2:11, n.

O nome pessoal de Jesus, seguido pelo título Cristo, pode chamar atenção para a própria pessoa, e que ele é aquele que se tornou o Ungido de Jeová. Isto ocorreu quando ele atingiu cerca de 30 anos de idade, foi batizado em água e foi ungido com o espírito de Jeová, observado visivelmente na forma duma pomba descendo sobre ele. (Mt 3:13-17) Este é o ponto frisado por Pedro em Pentecostes: "Deus o fez tanto Senhor como Cristo, a este Jesus", evidentemente relembrando a expressão que ouvira dos lábios de Jesus, quem primeiro usou o termo "Jesus Cristo". (At 2:36-38; Jo 17:3) Esta expressão, "Jesus Cristo", é também usada nas palavras iniciais das Escrituras Gregas Cristãs. — Mt 1:1.

Por outro lado, colocar o título à frente do nome e dizer "Cristo Jesus", em vez de "Jesus Cristo", dá maior ênfase ao cargo ou posição ocupada por Jesus. Chama atenção primariamente para o cargo, e secundariamente para o detentor dele, como ao se dizer Rei Davi ou Governador Zorobabel. Lembraria a posição oficial singular ocupada por Jesus como o Ungido de Jeová, posição honrosa não compartilhada com outros dos seus seguidores, que também são ungidos. Apenas o Filho amado de Jeová tem o título "Cristo Jesus". Paulo usou esta expressão na sua primeira carta inspirada.

(1Te 2:14) Lucas também a usou, uma vez, em Atos 24:24 (NM; ALA), ao falar sobre Paulo dar testemunho.

O uso do artigo "o" junto com o título ("o Cristo") é outra maneira de se às vezes chamar atenção para o cargo ocupado por Jesus. (Mt 16:16; Mr 14:61) A estrutura gramatical da sentença, porém, pode ser um fator que determina o uso, ou não, do artigo, porque W. E. Vine diz: "Falando-se em geral, quando o título [Cristo] é o sujeito duma sentença, leva o artigo; quando constitui parte do predicado, inexiste o artigo." — Vine's Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words (Dicionário Expositivo de Palavras do Velho e do Novo Testamento, de Vine), 1981, Vol. 1, p. 190.

Nas Escrituras, nunca se multiplicam títulos antes ou depois do nome de Jesus; mas, quando um título precede o nome pessoal, então qualquer outro título é acrescentado somente depois do nome. Nunca encontramos uma combinação tal como o Senhor Cristo Jesus, ou o Rei Cristo Jesus, mas encontramos o Senhor Jesus Cristo. A expressão, "nosso Salvador, Cristo Jesus", em 2 Timóteo 1:10, no texto grego tem a expressão "de nós" entre "Salvador" e "Cristo", para identificar quem é o Salvador, em harmonia com a expressão "Cristo Jesus, nosso Salvador [literalmente: "Cristo Jesus, o Salvador de nós"]". (Tit 1:4) No texto de 1 Timóteo 2:5 faz-se menção de "um homem, Cristo Jesus", como o Mediador, mas "um homem", não é título. A expressão apenas explica que Cristo Jesus foi certa vez homem na Terra.

Um emprego excepcional do título "Cristo" ocorre na referência de Paulo a Moisés, em vez de a Jesus, ao escrever: "[Moisés] estimava o vitupério do Cristo [Khri·stoú, "Ungido"] como riqueza maior do que os tesouros do Egito, pois olhava atentamente para o pagamento da recompensa." (He 11:26) Moisés nunca foi ungido com algum óleo literal, assim como foram os sumos sacerdotes e reis de Israel. (Êx 30:22-30; Le 8:12; 1Sa 10:1; 16:13) Mas tampouco o foram Jesus ou seus seguidores, e ainda assim as Escrituras falam deles como tendo sido ungidos. (At 10:38; 2Co 1:21) Nestes últimos casos, sua unção com o espírito santo de Deus serviu de designação por Deus, ou uma comissão, embora não se usasse literal óleo de unção. Assim, num sentido similar, Moisés recebeu uma designação especial. Portanto, Paulo podia dizer a respeito de Moisés que este era o ungido, ou Cristo, de Jeová, designatário da comissão que lhe foi dada junto ao espinheiro ardente, designação que considerou como riqueza maior do que todos os tesouros do Egito. — Êx 3:2-4:17.

O termo "Cristo" também é usado ao se falar da congregação cristã e da sua relação com o Senhor Jesus Cristo. "Ora, vós sois corpo de Cristo e membros individualmente", em sentido espiritual. (1Co 12:27) Os 'batizados em Cristo Jesus foram batizados na sua morte', com a esperança de serem "coherdeiros de Cristo" do Reino celestial. (Ro 6:3-5; 8:17) Compartilham os "sofrimentos do Cristo", sendo "vituperados pelo nome de Cristo". (1Pe 4:13, 14; 5:1) Esta relação é diversas vezes descrita como "união com Cristo" ou "em Cristo", e usa-se também a expressão inversa, "Cristo em união convosco", com suas implicações diferentes. (Ro 8:1, 2; 16:10; 1Co 15:18; 1Te 4:16; Col 1:27) Os fracos nesta associação, que deviam ser fortes, são chamados de "pequeninos em Cristo". (1Co 3:1) No decorrer do tempo, todas as coisas no céu e na Terra são ajuntadas novamente "no Cristo". — Ef 1:10.

Falsos Cristos. Nas suas profecias sobre a terminação do sistema de coisas, Cristo avisou seus seguidores: "Olhai para que ninguém vos desencaminhe; pois muitos virão à base do meu nome, dizendo: 'Eu sou o Cristo', e desencaminharão a muitos. Porque surgirão falsos cristos [gr.: pseu·dó-khri·stoi] e falsos profetas, e farão grandes sinais e prodígios, a fim de desencaminhar, se possível, até mesmo os escolhidos." (Mt 24:4, 5, 24) Tais iníquos, que falsamente reivindicam o título e cargo do Senhor Jesus Cristo, estão incluídos no an·ti·khri·stos (grego para "anticristo"), mencionado cinco vezes pelo apóstolo João. — 1Jo 2:18, 22; 4:3; 2Jo 7; veja ANTICRISTO.

Outros Usos do Termo "Cristo". A tradução Septuaginta das Escrituras Hebraicas usa a mesma palavra grega khri·stós mais de 40 vezes, frequentemente como título de sacerdotes, reis e profetas ungidos. Arão, o sumo sacerdote, era "o ungido", comissionado e "designado a favor dos homens sobre as coisas referentes a Deus". (Le 4:3, 5, 16; 8:12; He 5:1) Jeová, ao expressar seu julgamento sobre a casa de Eli, prometeu suscitar um sacerdote fiel que andaria perante o ungido (khri·stós) de Deus para sempre. — 1Sa 2:35.

Os reis compartilhavam este mesmo título honroso por causa da sua relação com Jeová no seu cargo régio. De modo que Samuel falou de Saul como khri·stós, em 1 Samuel 12:3, na Septuaginta grega. "É inconcebível, da minha parte", exclamou Davi, "estender a minha mão contra [Saul] o ungido [LXX: khri·stón] de Jeová!" (1Sa 26:11) E Davi não permitiu que seu sobrinho Abisai tocasse em Saul. (1Sa 26:8, 9) Davi mandou também matar o amalequita por este ter dito que havia matado Saul, "o ungido [LXX: khri·stón] de Jeová". (2Sa 1:13-16) Este título e a comissão de ser rei também foram conferidos a Davi, e depois ele falava de si mesmo como o "ungido [LXX: khri·stoi]" de Jeová. (1Sa 16:12, 13; 2Sa 22:51) O Rei Zedequias, que se sentou no trono como herdeiro de Davi, também foi chamado de "o ungido [khri·stós] de Jeová". — La 4:20.

Também os profetas receberam o título de ungidos de Jeová, conforme indicado pelo paralelismo no Salmo 105:15. Jeová deu ao seu profeta Elias a ordem: "A Eliseu . . . deves ungir como profeta em teu lugar", embora não se registrassem os pormenores da própria unção. — 1Rs 19:16.

Há outros casos em que a Septuaginta grega usa khri·stós em sentido profético. Há dez referências a khri·stós no livro dos Salmos, sendo especialmente digna de nota a do Salmo 2:1, 2: Nações em tumulto e reis da terra aglomerando-se "contra Jeová e contra o seu ungido". Os apóstolos citaram esta profecia e aplicaram o título ao 'santo servo Jesus, a quem Jeová havia ungido'. (At 4:24-27) Um exemplo mais incomum é a aplicação do termo ao rei persa Ciro. Antes do seu nascimento, a profecia de Isaías (45:1-3) declarava: "Assim disse Jeová ao seu ungido [LXX: khri·stoi], a Ciro, cuja direita tomei." Ciro nunca foi ungido literalmente com óleo santo assim como foram os reis de Israel, mas, como em outros casos na Bíblia, a expressão "ungido" é uma forma de título que lhe foi dada por causa da sua comissão e designação por Deus. — Veja UNGIDO, UNÇÃO.

CROCODILO. Veja LEVIATÃ.

CRÔNICAS, OS LIVROS DAS. Dois livros inspirados das Escrituras Hebraicas, os quais, pelo visto, constituíam um único volume no original cânon hebraico. Os massoretas os consideravam uma única obra, e são considerados como um só livro nas relações que consideram as Escrituras Hebraicas como compostas de 22 ou 24 livros, e como dois livros na relação que considera o número total de livros como 39. A divisão em dois livros parece ter-se originado com os tradutores da Septuaginta grega. Nos manuscritos hebraicos, a divisão em dois começou no século 15. No texto hebraico, Crônicas aparece no fim da seção chamada de Escritos. O nome hebraico, Div·réh Hai·ya·mím, significa "Os Assuntos dos Dias". Jerônimo sugeriu o nome de Khro·ni·kón, do qual deriva Crônicas, na Bíblia em português. Uma crônica é um registro de acontecimentos na ordem em que ocorreram. O título grego (na Septuaginta) é Pa·ra·lei·po·mé·non, que significa "Coisas Passadas por Alto (Não Ditas; Omitidas)", isto é, dos livros de Samuel e dos Reis. No entanto, deve-se notar que as Crônicas de modo algum são mero suplemento destes livros.

Escritor, Tempo, e Período Abrangido. Por várias razões, considera-se o sacerdote judeu Esdras como o escritor. A tradição judaica há muito tem sustentado este conceito. É também apoiado pela notável semelhança entre o estilo de escrita de Crônicas e o estilo do livro de Esdras. Há uma repetição no fim de Segundo Crônicas e no começo de Esdras, virtualmente palavra por palavra. Além disso, a declaração do decreto de Ciro encontrada no fim de Segundo Crônicas é apresentada na íntegra no livro de Esdras, indicando que o escritor encerrou o livro de Crônicas com a intenção de escrever outro livro (Esdras), que trataria mais plenamente do decreto e da sua execução. Crônicas foi concluído por volta de 460 AEC. Evidentemente, apenas dois livros do cânon hebraico foram terminados depois de 460 AEC, a saber, Neemias e Malaquias.

Além das listas genealógicas, que começam com Adão, as Crônicas abrangem o período desde a morte do Rei Saul até os exilados serem levados para Babilônia, falando a conclusão do decreto de Ciro, no fim do exílio de 70 anos.

Fontes. Esdras presumiu que seus leitores estivessem a par dos livros de Reis, e, portanto, não tentou abranger os mesmos assuntos. A matéria que usou, que em alguns casos reza exatamente ou quase que igual a partes de Reis, está incluída apenas para reter aquilo que, pela sua relação com o assunto, dá sentido às informações adicionais em Crônicas. Esdras talvez usasse como fontes os livros de Samuel e Reis, bem como outras partes da Bíblia, mas parece que, na maioria dos casos, se não em todos, ele teve acesso a escritos cuja existência se desconhece agora. Alguns destes talvez fossem documentos de estado, tanto de Israel como de Judá, registros genealógicos, e obras históricas escritas por profetas, bem como documentos de posse de chefes tribais ou familiares. Parte das fontes usadas, sem dúvida, era obra de cronistas profissionais. — 1Rs 4:3.

Esdras cita ou descreve algumas das fontes que usou, do seguinte modo:

(1) O Livro dos Reis de Judá e de Israel (2Cr 16:11; 25:26).

(2) O Livro dos Reis de Israel e de Judá (2Cr 27:7; 35:27).

(3) O Livro dos Reis de Israel (2Cr 20:34). (As fontes supracitadas talvez fossem a mesma coleção de documentos estatais, com formas variadas de se indicar o título, ou poderiam referir-se aos livros dos Reis na Bíblia.)

(4) O Livro dos Reis de Israel (evidentemente uma obra genealógica) (1Cr 9:1).

(5) A explanação do Livro dos Reis (2Cr 24:27) (para informações sobre Jeoás, de Judá).

(6) Os assuntos dos reis de Israel (2Cr 33:18) (para informações sobre Manassés).

(7) As palavras de Samuel, o vidente, e de Natã, o profeta, e de Gade, o visionário (1Cr 29:29) (para informações sobre Davi). (Esta talvez fosse uma só obra, ou duas ou três; ou talvez se referisse a Juízes e aos livros de Samuel.)

(8) As palavras de Natã, o profeta (2Cr 9:29) (para informações sobre Salomão).

(9) A profecia de Aijá, o silonita (2Cr 9:29) (sobre Salomão).

(10) "Semaías . . . assentou . . . por escrito" (1Cr 24:6) (sobre Davi), e as palavras de Semaías, o profeta, e de Ido, o visionário, segundo o registro genealógico (2Cr 12:15) (sobre Roboão) (talvez duas ou três fontes).

(11) As palavras de Jeú, filho de Hanani, que foram incluídas no Livro dos Reis de Israel (2Cr 20:34) (sobre Jeosafá).

(12) O resto dos assuntos de Uzias, por Isaías, filho de Amoz, o profeta (2Cr 26:22).

(13) As palavras dos visionários (de Manassés) (2Cr 33:19).

(14) Endechas (de Jeremias e possivelmente de cantores) (2Cr 35:25) (sobre Josias).

(15) A explanação do profeta Ido (2Cr 13:22) (sobre Abias).

(16) A narração dos assuntos dos dias do Rei Davi (1Cr 27:24).

(17) O mandamento de Davi e de Gade, e de Natã, o profeta (2Cr 29:25) (conforme feito vigorar por Ezequias).

(18) O que foi escrito por Davi e por Salomão, seu filho (2Cr 35:4) (conforme mencionado por Josias).

(19) O mandamento de Davi, e de Asafe, e de Hemã, e de Jedutum, visionário do rei (2Cr 35:15) (mencionado em conexão com os atos de Josias).

(20) O escrito de Elias ao Rei Jeorão, de Judá (2Cr 21:12-15).

(Em Crônicas, há também referências a escritos, especialmente genealogias, que talvez indiquem outras fontes usadas por Esdras.)

É evidente que Esdras era extremamente cuidadoso, fazendo pesquisa meticulosa, repassando todas as fontes documentárias a que tinha acesso, evidentemente investigando todo documento que lançasse luz sobre o assunto. Ele documenta seus escritos não apenas como prova de exatidão quanto ao que escreveu, mas também para indicar ao leitor daquela época outras fontes para obter mais pormenores. A extrema meticulosidade de Esdras devia recomendar as Crônicas como dignas de nossa máxima confiança na sua exatidão e autenticidade histórica. Mas, acima de tudo, saber que Esdras escreveu sob inspiração (2Ti 3:16) e o fato de que as Crônicas estão incluídas no cânon hebraico, plenamente aceito por Jesus e os apóstolos (Lu 24:27, 44), asseguram a sua fidedignidade. Além disso, as Crônicas constituem parte da completa Palavra escrita de Deus, cuja pureza ele protegeu para os seguidores do seu Filho, Jesus Cristo. Estes fatos recomendam altamente Crônicas como fonte de fé.

Objetivo. A obra de Esdras não visava meramente preencher o que fora omitido nos livros de Samuel e dos Reis; antes, ele discerniu entre os exilados que voltaram a necessidade de tal sumário da sua história nacional. A obra, sem dúvida, foi

DESTAQUES DE PRIMEIRO CRÔNICAS

Genealogia e pormenores sobre a verdadeira adoração no templo de Jeová, especialmente necessários após o exílio em Babilônia.

Escrito talvez 55 anos depois de Zorobabel reconstruir o templo, e antes da restauração das muralhas de Jerusalém.

Genealogias de Adão em diante. (1:1–9:44)

A posteridade de Judá através de Davi e Salomão (vital para a identificação do Messias).

A posteridade de Levi (necessária para identificar aqueles que corretamente podiam servir no templo) e seus diversos deveres no templo.

A infidelidade de Saul resulta na sua morte. (10:1-14)

Aspectos do reinado de Davi. (11:1–29:30)

Novamente ungido rei enquanto em Hébron; captura Sião; mais tarde constituído rei sobre todo o Israel.

Arca do Pacto mudada incorretamente, em carroça; Uzá morre por tocar na Arca; a Arca é finalmente levada à Cidade de Davi com regozijo.

Davi expressa o desejo de construir um templo para Jeová; em vez disso, Jeová faz com Davi um pacto para a casa real por tempo indefinido.

Inimigos de Israel são derrotados em todos os lados.

Davi é instigado por Satanás a fazer um censo de Israel; 70.000 morrem.

Extensos preparativos para a construção do templo; Davi organiza os levitas, providencia 24 turmas de sacerdotes, designa também cantores, porteiros; entrega os planos arquitetônicos inspirados a Salomão; Davi e o povo contribuem generosamente.

Davi morre depois de Salomão começar a sentar-se no "trono de Jeová".

DESTAQUES DE SEGUNDO CRÔNICAS

Vívido resumo da história sob reis da casa real de Davi, destacando as consequências da obediência a Deus e da desobediência.

Originalmente parte de um único rolo junto com Primeiro Crônicas.

O reinado de Salomão. (1:1–9:31)

Sua sabedoria, prosperidade; mas, imprudentemente, adquire muitos cavalos do Egito e toma por esposa a filha de Faraó.

Construção do templo; oração de dedicação de Salomão.

Visita da rainha de Sabá.

Eventos associados com o reinado de outros reis da casa real de Davi, e seu resultado. (10:1–36:23)

Após a resposta rude de Roboão, dez tribos separam-se sob Jeroboão e voltam-se para a adoração do bezerro; Roboão também abandona a lei de Deus, sendo deixado à mercê de Sisaque, do Egito.

Por Abias estribar-se em Jeová, Judá é vitorioso contra o exército de Israel, que confia na superioridade numérica e na adoração de bezerros de ouro; 500.000 são mortos.

Quando Asa se estriba em Jeová, derrota um milhão de etíopes invasores; Asa tolamente faz aliança com a Síria e fica irado ao ser censurado pelo profeta de Jeová.

Jeosafá institui programa de educação na lei de Deus; imprudentemente faz aliança matrimonial com Acabe.

Moabe, Amom e Seir invadem Judá; Jeosafá recorre a Jeová em busca de ajuda; é lembrado: ‘A batalha é de Deus!’

Jeorão (cuja esposa é filha de Acabe e Jezabel) age de modo iníquo, assim como seu filho Acazias; daí, a assassina Atalia, viúva de Jeorão, usurpa o trono.

Jeoás começa bem, sob a influência do sumo sacerdote Jeoiada; mais tarde torna-se apóstata e manda apedrejar o fiel Zacarias.

Amazias começa bem, depois adora ídolos de Seir; derrotado por Israel, é assassinado.

Uzias também começa bem; mais tarde, orgulhosamente tenta oferecer incenso no templo, é atacado de lepra.

Jotão procede bem, mas o povo age ruinosamente.

Acaz se volta para a adoração de Baal; a nação sofre severamente.

Ezequias limpa o templo; Senaqueribe invade Judá, zomba de Jeová; Ezequias estriba-se em Jeová; 185.000 assírios são mortos por um anjo.

Manassés pratica crassa idolatria e derrama muito sangue inocente; levado cativo pelos assírios; arrepende-se, é restabelecido no seu trono por Jeová.

Amom segue o mau exemplo do seu pai Manassés; não se humilha.

Josias dirige reforma religiosa zelosa, conserta templo; insiste em combater o Faraó Neco e é morto.

Jeoacaz governa brevemente, depois é levado cativo para o Egito.

Jeoiaquim age de modo detestável; seu filho e sucessor, Joaquim, é levado cativo para Babilônia.

Zedequias rebela-se contra o jugo de Babilônia; judeus são levados ao exílio; terra fica desolada por 70 anos.

Ciro, da Pérsia, emite decreto libertando os judeus para retornarem a Jerusalém a fim de reconstruir o templo.

---

preparada para os recém-retornados do exílio, visto que lhes faltava grande parte do conhecimento da sua história e costumes sagrados. Precisavam saber da adoração no templo e dos deveres dos levitas, e Esdras proveu estas informações. E para os exilados retornados, poucas coisas poderiam ser de maior interesse do que suas genealogias ancestrais, às quais Esdras devotou muita atenção. Israel funcionava novamente como nação, na sua terra, com templo, sacerdócio e governador, embora não tivesse rei. Continuaria como nação até a vinda do Messias. Precisavam das informações que Crônicas lhes fornecia, a bem da unidade e da verdadeira adoração.

Tanto Samuel como Jeremias eram historiadores, mas eram também levitas. Jeremias era profeta e sacerdote. Esdras era sacerdote. Mas é um engano dizer que Jeremias estaria especialmente interessado no cumprimento de profecias e não tanto nos assuntos da adoração no templo, e que Esdras estaria especialmente interessado no serviço dos levitas e não tanto nas profecias. Ambos eram servos de Deus e preocupavam-se com as palavras dele, seus tratos com seu povo e todo aspecto da sua adoração. O fato é que Esdras foi inspirado por Jeová para produzir os livros de Crônicas e de Esdras com um objetivo especial.

Os judeus que retornaram de Babilônia em 537 AEC não fizeram isso para estabelecer independência política, mas para restabelecer a verdadeira adoração, seu primeiro trabalho sendo erigir o altar e então reconstruir o templo. Portanto, era apropriado que Esdras falasse muito sobre a adoração, e os serviços do sacerdócio e dos levitas. As genealogias também eram importantes. Esdras 2:59-63 mostra que alguns, inclusive certos filhos de sacerdotes, não conseguiram encontrar seu registro para confirmar publicamente sua genealogia. Lá em Babilônia, essas genealogias talvez não fossem tão importantes, mas agora eram o meio de recuperar os bens de herança de seus antepassados. Este é um dos motivos das listas de genealogia compiladas por Esdras, que também são hoje de grande valor para os estudantes da Bíblia.

Vemos assim que Esdras, ao escrever Crônicas, queria fortalecer seus contemporâneos na fidelidade a Jeová. Incentivou-os a cumprir com seus deveres pactuados por enfocar a história passada de Israel, e, especialmente pelo uso de exemplos históricos reais ele salientou, por um lado, o resultado da aderência fiel à verdadeira adoração, e, por outro lado, a calamidade de se abandonar a adoração de Jeová Deus.

Valor dos Livros. É muito bom para a nossa fé e o nosso entendimento da Bíblia que os livros de Crônicas foram escritos. Esdras acrescentou muito a respeito da adoração no templo e os arranjos dos sacerdotes, levitas, porteiros, cantores e músicos. Ele nos forneceu muitos pormenores que têm que ver com a verdadeira adoração: ser a Arca levada por Davi a Jerusalém (1Cr caps. 15, 16); os preparativos de Davi para o templo e o serviço nele (1Cr caps. 22-29); permanecerem os sacerdotes com Roboão na época da secessão das dez tribos (2Cr 11:13-17); a guerra entre Abias e Jeroboão (2Cr 13); as reformas em favor da verdadeira religião, sob Asa (2Cr caps. 14, 15), Jeosafá (2Cr caps. 17, 19, 20), Ezequias (2Cr caps. 29-31) e Josias (2Cr caps. 34, 35); ser Uzias atacado de lepra por sua presunção (2Cr 26:16-21) e o arrependimento de Manassés (2Cr 33:10-20).

Esdras mostra que não se interessa apenas nos assuntos sacerdotais, mas também nos profetas. (2Cr 20:20; 36:12, 16) Ele usa as palavras "profeta", "vidente" ou "visionário" cerca de 45 vezes, e fornece informações adicionais sobre muitos profetas e pessoas cujos nomes, de outra maneira, não são mencionados nas Escrituras. Uns poucos desses são Ido, Eliézer, filho de Dodavaú, Jaaziel, filho de Zacarias, diversas pessoas chamadas Zacarias, e o Odede do tempo do Rei Acaz, de Judá.

Nas Crônicas há muitas informações que ajudam a complementar nosso conhecimento da história de Judá; por exemplo, o registro sobre a doença e o sepultamento de Asa, e sobre a má conduta de Jeoás, depois da morte de Jeoiada, o sumo sacerdote. Depois há as genealogias vitais para se determinar a linhagem de Cristo. Os livros são também de ajuda em determinar uma cronologia exata. Podemos ver nisso a sabedoria de Jeová, o Autor da Bíblia, em fazer com que seu servo Esdras escrevesse estas coisas para complementar o necessário para os crentes na Bíblia terem o mais completo e harmonioso registro da história do homem.

CRONISTA. Oficial de muita responsabilidade na corte real de Israel. O título traduz uma forma da palavra hebraica za·khár (recordar) e significa literalmente "recordador". (2Sa 8:16 n.) A Bíblia não descreve os deveres dele, mas parece que era o cronista oficial do reino, fornecendo ao rei informações sobre os acontecimentos no domínio, e também lembrando-lhe assuntos importantes que exigiam a atenção dele, oferecendo conselho sobre estes.

Ocasionalmente, o cronista representava o rei em importantes assuntos nacionais. Joá, filho de Asafe, foi um dos oficiais do Rei Ezequias que saíram para falar ao assírio Rabsaqué, quando este ameaçou Jerusalém. (2Rs 18:18, 37) Outro cronista, Joá, filho de Joacaz, oficiava em conexão com o conserto do templo. (2Cr 34:8) Menciona-se também um cronista nas cortes de Davi e de Salomão. — 2Sa 8:16; 20:24; 1Rs 4:3; veja ESCRIVÃO DA CIDADE.

CRONOLOGIA. A palavra portuguesa "cronologia" vem da grega khro·no·lo·gí·a (de khró·nos, tempo, e lé·go, dizer ou contar), isto é, "o cômputo do tempo". A cronologia torna possível situar os eventos na sua sequência ou associação ordeira, e atribuir datas corretas a eventos específicos.

Jeová é "o Antigo de Dias" e o Deus da Eternidade. (Da 7:9; Sal 90:2; 93:2) Que ele é um Cronometrista exato é evidente não só na magnífica precisão manifesta nos movimentos dos corpos estelares, mas também no registro divino dos seus atos. No cumprimento das suas promessas ou profecias, ele fez ocorrer eventos no momento preciso conforme predito, quer o tempo decorrido fosse apenas um dia (Êx 9:5, 6), um ano (Gên 17:21; 18:14; 21:1, 2; 2Rs 4:16, 17), décadas (Núm 14:34; 2Cr 36:20-23; Da 9:2), séculos (Gên 12:4, 7; 15:13-16; Êx 12:40, 41; Gál 3:17) ou milênios (Lu 21:24; veja TEMPOS DESIGNADOS DAS NAÇÕES). Assegura-se-nos que seus propósitos para o futuro terão cumprimento certo no tempo predeterminado, precisamente no dia e na hora determinados. — Hab 2:3; Mt 24:36.

Deus se propôs que o homem, feito à imagem e semelhança do Criador dele (Gên 1:26), medisse o fluxo do tempo. A Bíblia logo cedo declara que os "luzeiros na expansão dos céus" deviam servir para "fazerem separação entre o dia e a noite; e . . . servir de sinais, e para épocas, e para dias, e para anos". (Gên 1:14, 15; Sal 104:19) (Uma consideração do modo em que estas separações têm sido observadas desde o começo da história do homem pode ser encontrada nos artigos ANO; CALENDÁRIO; DIA; LUA; SEMANA.) O cálculo e o registro de períodos de tempo pelos homens têm continuado desde os dias de Adão até agora. — Gên 5:1, 3-5.

Eras. A cronologia exata exige que se fixe determinado ponto na corrente do tempo como marco a partir do qual contar quer para a frente, quer para trás, em unidades de tempo (tais como horas, dias, meses, anos). Este ponto inicial poderia ser simplesmente o nascer do sol (para medir as horas do dia), ou uma lua nova (para medir os dias de um mês), ou o início da primavera (para medir o espaço de um ano). Para a contagem de períodos mais longos, os homens têm recorrido à fixação de determinada "era", usando algum evento notável como ponto inicial, a partir do qual medem períodos de muitos anos. Assim, nas nações da cristandade, quando alguém diz que 'hoje é o 1.º de outubro de 1987 EC (Era Comum)', ele quer dizer que 'hoje é o primeiro dia do décimo mês do ano mil novecentos e oitenta e sete, contado a partir do que alguns creem ter sido o tempo do nascimento de Jesus'.

Essa utilização de eras na história secular é relativamente recente. A era grega, supostamente o mais antigo caso secular de tal cômputo cronológico, aparentemente só foi posta em prática por volta do quarto século AEC (Antes da Era Comum). Os gregos calculavam o tempo por meio de períodos de quatro anos, chamados Olimpíadas, a partir da primeira Olimpíada, que se calcula ter ocorrido em 776 AEC. Adicionalmente, eles às vezes identificavam anos específicos pelo período de gestão de determinada autoridade. Os romanos, com o tempo, estabeleceram uma era, calculando os anos desde a data tradicional da fundação da cidade de Roma (753 AEC). Também designavam anos específicos pelos nomes de dois cônsules que ocupavam cargos naquele ano. Foi somente no sexto século EC que um monge chamado Dionísio Exíguo calculou o que agora é popularmente conhecido como Era Cristã, ou mais corretamente, Era Comum. Entre os povos maometanos (muçulmanos; islâmicos), os anos são contados a partir da Hégira (fuga de Maomé de Meca, em 622 EC). Os antigos egípcios, assírios e babilônios, porém, não fornecem nenhuma evidência de terem usado constantemente tal sistema de eras durante um longo período de tempo.

No que se refere ao registro bíblico, não se apresenta nenhum arranjo específico de era como ponto de partida, pelo qual se datassem todos os eventos posteriores. Isto por si só não significa que não havia tabela cronológica para atribuir a eventos passados sua localização específica e exata na corrente do tempo. Poderem os escritores bíblicos, ao relatar eventos específicos, citar dados precisos referentes a períodos de vários séculos demonstra que não faltava interesse na cronologia entre o povo de Israel ou seus antepassados. Assim, Moisés pôde escrever que "sucedeu, ao fim dos quatrocentos e trinta anos [a contar do tempo de Abraão atravessar o Eufrates em caminho para a terra de Canaã, ocasião em que, evidentemente, Deus validou o pacto com Abraão], sim, sucedeu neste mesmo dia que todos os exércitos de Jeová saíram da terra do Egito". (Êx 12:41; veja ÊXODO; compare isso com Gál 3:16, 17.) Novamente, em 1 Reis 6:1, o registro declara que foi "no quadringentésimo octogésimo ano depois da saída dos filhos de Israel da terra do Egito" que o Rei Salomão começou a construir o templo em Jerusalém. Ainda assim, nem a validação do pacto abraâmico, nem o Êxodo, passaram a ser usados de modo geral como início de eras, ao se registrarem outros eventos.

Portanto, não se deve esperar que fatores cronológicos, na Bíblia, se harmonizem com exatidão com os sistemas modernos pelos quais todos os eventos são datados matematicamente em relação a determinado ponto fixo do passado, tal como o início da Era Comum. Na maioria das vezes, os eventos eram situados na corrente do tempo de maneira bastante similar a como as pessoas costumam fazer na vida cotidiana. Assim como hoje talvez se fixe um evento por se dizer que ocorreu "no ano depois da seca", ou "cinco anos depois da Segunda Guerra Mundial", assim os escritores bíblicos relacionavam os acontecimentos que registraram com marcos de tempo relativamente recentes da época.

Com respeito a alguns pontos cronológicos, não se pode chegar a uma conclusão definitiva, visto que nem sempre sabemos exatamente qual o ponto de partida ou marco de tempo usado pelo escritor bíblico. Por outro lado, também, o escritor talvez usasse mais de um de tais pontos de partida para datar eventos ao tratar de determinado período histórico. Esta variação nos pontos de partida não significa indefinição ou confusão da parte do escritor; não podemos adequadamente julgar os métodos dele simplesmente à base da nossa própria opinião sobre a maneira correta de se registrarem eventos, baseados em procedimentos atuais. E embora erros de copistas possam estar envolvidos em alguns dos pontos mais difíceis, não é sábio presumi-los, quando não há evidência sólida na forma de variantes em antigas cópias de manuscritos das Escrituras. A evidência disponível demonstra convincentemente a notável exatidão e cuidado que distinguiram a produção de cópias dos livros bíblicos, resultando na preservação da sua integridade interna. — Veja ESCRIBA; MANUSCRITOS DA BÍBLIA.

Cronologia Bíblica e História Secular. Muitas vezes se expressa preocupação com a necessidade de tentar "harmonizar" ou "conciliar" o relato bíblico com a cronologia encontrada em antigos registros seculares. Visto que a verdade é aquilo que se harmoniza com fatos ou realidades, tal coordenação seria deveras vital — se se pudesse demonstrar que os antigos registros seculares são inequivocamente exatos e coerentemente fidedignos, sendo assim um padrão de exatidão que serve de base para se julgar. Visto que a cronologia bíblica foi tantas vezes representada pelos críticos como inferior àquela das nações pagãs, vale a pena examinar alguns dos antigos registros de nações e povos, cujas atividades e vida se interligavam com as pessoas e os eventos registrados na Bíblia.

A Bíblia é um livro histórico, destacando-se nisso entre escritos antigos. As histórias dos antigos egípcios, assírios, babilônios, medos, persas e outros são, na maior parte, fragmentárias; seus primórdios ou são obscuros ou são obviamente míticos, da forma como são apresentados por eles. Assim, o antigo documento conhecido como A Lista dos Reis Sumerianos começa: "Quando o reinado foi baixado do céu, o reinado estava (primeiro) em Eridu. (Em) Eridu, A-lulim (tornou-se) rei e regeu 28.800 anos. Alalgar regeu 36.000 anos. Dois reis o regeram (assim) por 64.800 anos. . . . (Em) Bad-tibira, En-men-lu-Anna regeu 43.200 anos; En-men-gal-Anna regeu 28.800 anos; o deus Dumu-zi, um pastor, regeu 36.000 anos. Três reis o regeram (assim) por 108.000 anos." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts (Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo), editado por J. B. Pritchard, 1974, p. 265.

O que se sabe, de fontes seculares, sobre estas nações antigas tem sido laboriosamente ajuntado de migalhas de informações obtidas de monumentos e tabuinhas, ou de escritos posteriores dos chamados historiógrafos clássicos, dos períodos grego e romano. Embora os arqueólogos tenham recuperado dezenas de milhares de tabuinhas de argila com inscrições cuneiformes assiro-babilônicas, bem como grande número de rolos de papiro do Egito, a vasta maioria destes são textos religiosos ou documentos comerciais, consistindo em contratos, notas de venda, escrituras e matéria similar. O número consideravelmente menor de escritos históricos das nações pagãs, preservados quer em forma de tabuinhas, cilindros, estelas, quer em inscrições em monumentos, consiste principalmente em matéria que glorifica seus imperadores e relata as campanhas militares deles em termos grandiloquentes.

A Bíblia, em contraste, fornece uma história extraordinariamente coerente e pormenorizada, que se estende por uns 4.000 anos, pois, não somente registra eventos com notável continuidade, desde o começo da existência do homem até o tempo da governança de Neemias, no quinto século AEC, mas também pode ser considerada como provendo uma cobertura básica do período entre Neemias e o tempo de Jesus e dos seus apóstolos, por meio da profecia (história escrita de antemão) de Daniel, no capítulo 11 de Daniel. A Bíblia apresenta um relato vívido e fiel à realidade sobre a nação de Israel, desde o seu nascimento, retratando com candura sua força e suas fraquezas, seus êxitos e seus fracassos, sua adoração correta e sua adoração falsa, suas bênçãos e seus julgamentos adversos, e suas calamidades. Embora esta honestidade, por si só, não garanta uma cronologia exata, oferece deveras uma base sólida para se ter confiança na integridade dos escritores bíblicos e na sua sincera preocupação de registrar a verdade.

É evidente que registros pormenorizados estavam à disposição dos cronistas bíblicos, tais como os escritores de Primeiro e Segundo Reis, e de Primeiro e Segundo Crônicas. Isto se evidencia nas extensas genealogias que puderam compilar, ascendendo a muitas centenas de nomes; também a apresentação interligada e factual dos reinados de cada um dos reis de Judá e de Israel, inclusive seu relacionamento com outras nações e entre si. Historiadores hodiernos ainda expressam incerteza sobre o posicionamento correto de certos reis assírios e babilônios, mesmo de alguns em dinastias posteriores. Mas, não há tal incerteza com respeito à sequência dos reis de Judá e de Israel.

Há referências ao "livro das Guerras de Jeová" (Núm 21:14, 15), ao "livro dos assuntos dos dias dos reis de Israel" (1Rs 14:19; 2Rs 15:31), ao "livro dos assuntos dos dias dos reis de Judá" (1Rs 15:23; 2Rs 24:5), ao "livro dos assuntos de Salomão" (1Rs 11:41), bem como numerosas referências a anais ou registros oficiais similares, citados por Esdras e por Neemias. Estas mostram que as informações registradas não se baseavam em mera recordação ou tradição oral, mas foram cuidadosamente pesquisadas e plenamente documentadas. Os historiadores bíblicos citam também registros governamentais de outras nações, assim como partes da Bíblia foram escritas em terras fora de Israel, inclusive o Egito, Babilônia e a Pérsia. — Veja ESDRAS, LIVRO DE; ESTER, LIVRO DE; LIVRO.

Um fator que, sem dúvida, contribuiu para a contagem exata da passagem dos anos, pelo menos ao ponto em que os israelitas guardavam fielmente a Lei mosaica, foi a sua observância dos anos sabáticos e de jubileu, dividindo assim o tempo em períodos de 7 e de 50 anos. — Le 25:2-5, 8-16, 25-31.

O que especialmente distingue o registro bíblico dos escritos contemporâneos das nações pagãs é o senso do tempo, não apenas do passado e do presente, mas também do futuro, que permeia suas páginas. (Da 2:28; 7:22; 8:18, 19; Mr 1:15; Re 22:10) O elemento profético ímpar tornava a exatidão cronológica uma questão de importância mui-to maior para os israelitas do que para quaisquer das nações pagãs, visto que as profecias frequentemente envolviam períodos de tempo específicos. A Bíblia, como Livro de Deus, destaca a pontualidade dele no cumprimento da Sua palavra (Ez 12:27, 28; Gál 4:4) e mostra que profecias exatas eram prova da sua Divindade. — Is 41:21-26; 48:3-7.

É verdade que alguns dos documentos não bíblicos são vários séculos mais antigos do que as cópias manuscritas mais antigas da Bíblia até agora descobertas. Gravados em pedra e inscritos em argila, alguns dos antigos documentos pagãos talvez pareçam muito impressionantes, mas isto não assegura sua exatidão, nem sua isenção de falsidades. Não é o material usado na escrita, mas o escritor, seu objetivo, seu respeito pela verdade e sua devoção a princípios justos — estes são os fatores importantes que fornecem uma base sólida para se ter confiança tanto em assuntos cronológicos como em outros. A grande antiguidade dos documentos seculares certamente é sobrepujada pela qualidade vastamente inferior do seu conteúdo, quando comparados com a Bíblia. Visto que os registros bíblicos evidentemente foram feitos em materiais perecíveis, tais como papiro e velino, seu contínuo uso e o efeito deteriorante das condições climáticas em grande parte de Israel (diferente do clima extraordinariamente seco do Egito) pode muito bem explicar a ausência da existência de cópias originais hoje em dia. Todavia, visto que a Bíblia é o Livro inspirado de Jeová, ela foi cuidadosamente copiada e preservada integralmente até hoje. (1Pe 1:24, 25) A inspiração divina, por meio da qual os historiadores bíblicos conseguiram escrever seus registros, assegura a fidedignidade da cronologia bíblica. — 2Pe 1:19-21.

Ilustrando bem por que as histórias seculares não se habilitam como norma de exatidão pela qual julgar a cronologia bíblica há a declaração do escritor arqueológico C. W. Ceram, comentando a ciência moderna da datação histórica: "Quem quer que se ponha a estudar a história antiga pela primeira vez deve ficar impressionado com o modo positivo pelo qual os historiadores modernos datam acontecimentos que se verificaram há milhares de anos. No decurso de maiores estudos, essa admiração só poderá aumentar. Pois, se examinarmos as fontes da história antiga, veremos quão escassos, inexatos ou inteiramente falsos eram os registros, mesmo na época em que foram escritos pela primeira vez. E, se originalmente eram pobres, mais pobres ainda foram ficando até chegar a nós: semidestruídos pelos dentes do tempo, ou pelo descuido e tosco uso dos homens." Ele descreve adicionalmente a estrutura da história cronológica como "puramente hipotética, e que, além disso, ameaça desmoronar em cada junção". — O Segredo dos Hititas, trad. de Milton Amado, p. 134, Ed. Itatiaia Ltda.

Esta avaliação pode parecer extrema, mas, no que se refere a registros seculares, não é sem fundamento. As informações que se seguem tornarão claro por que não há motivo de se duvidar da exatidão da cronologia bíblica simplesmente porque certos registros seculares divergem dela. Ao contrário, é somente quando a cronologia secular se harmoniza com o registro bíblico que se pode ter certa medida de confiança nessa datação secular antiga. Ao se considerarem os registros dessas nações pagãs, que tiveram relacionamentos com a nação de Israel, deve-se ter em mente que algumas das aparentes discrepâncias nos seus registros talvez se devam simplesmente à incapacidade dos hodiernos historiadores de interpretar corretamente os métodos usados antigamente, similar à sua incapacidade de interpretar corretamente os métodos usados pelos historiadores bíblicos. No entanto, há consideráveis evidências de definitiva negligência e inexatidão, ou mesmo de deliberada falsificação, por parte dos historiadores e cronólogos pagãos.

Cronologia Egípcia. A história egípcia mistura-se com a de Israel em diversos pontos. Nesta publicação, mostramos a data de 1728 AEC para a entrada de Israel no Egito, e para o Êxodo, 215 anos mais tarde, 1513 AEC. O ataque do Faraó Sisaque contra Jerusalém ocorreu durante o quinto ano de Roboão, em 993 AEC; o Rei Sô, do Egito, era contemporâneo do reinado de Oseias (c. 758-740 AEC); e a batalha do Faraó Neco que resultou na morte de Josias provavelmente ocorreu em 629 AEC. (1Rs 14:25; 2Rs 17:4; 2Cr 35:20-24) A diferença entre as datas acima e as geralmente atribuídas pelos historiadores hodiernos chega a um século, ou mais, quanto ao Êxodo, e depois se reduz a uns 20 anos no tempo do Faraó Neco. A seguinte informação mostra por que preferimos apegar-nos à cronologia baseada no cálculo bíblico.

Os historiadores hodiernos baseiam-se principalmente em certos documentos na forma de listas ou anais de reis egípcios. Entre estas estão: a fragmentária Pedra de Palermo, apresentando o que se considera serem as primeiras cinco "dinastias" da história egípcia; o Papiro de Turim, muito fragmentário, apresentando uma lista de reis e seus reinados desde o "Antigo Império" até mesmo no "Novo Império"; e inscrições adicionais em pedra, igualmente fragmentárias. Estas listas separadas e outras inscrições independentes foram coordenadas em ordem cronológica por meio dos escritos de Mâneto (Manetão, Maneton), sacerdote egípcio do terceiro século AEC. As obras dele, tratando da história e da religião egípcias, agrupam os reinados dos monarcas egípcios em 30 dinastias, arranjo ainda usado por egiptólogos hodiernos. Estas fontes, junto com cálculos astronômicos, baseados em textos egípcios que tratam das fases lunares e do nascimento da Estrela do Cão (Sírio; Sothis), têm sido usadas para produzir uma tabela cronológica.

Problemas da cronologia egípcia. As incertezas são muitas. As obras de Mâneto, usadas para estabelecer ordem nas listas fragmentárias e outras inscrições, são preservadas apenas nos escritos de historiadores posteriores, tais como Josefo (primeiro século EC), Sexto Júlio Africano (terceiro século EC, portanto, mais de 500 anos depois do tempo de Mâneto), Eusébio (quarto século EC) e Sincelo (de fins do oitavo ou começo do nono século EC). Conforme declarou W. G. Waddell, as citações deles dos escritos de Mâneto são fragmentárias e muitas vezes distorcidas, e, portanto, "é extremamente difícil chegar-se a ter certeza quanto ao que é Mâneto autêntico e ao que é espúrio ou corrupto". Depois de mostrar que a matéria de fonte de Mâneto incluía algumas tradições e lendas não históricas, que "introduziam reis como seus heróis, sem considerar a ordem cronológica", ele diz: "Desde o princípio havia muitos erros na obra de Mâneto: nem todos eles se devem às deturpações de escribas e revisores. Verificou-se que muitas das durações de reinados são impossíveis: em alguns casos, os nomes e a sequência dos reis, conforme apresentados por Mâneto, mostraram-se insustentáveis à luz de evidência monumental." — Manetho (Mâneto), introdução, pp. vii, xvii, xx, xxi, xxv.

A probabilidade de que reinos coincidentes em vez de sucessivos sejam responsáveis por muitos dos períodos excessivamente longos de Mâneto é demonstrada no livro Studies in Egyptian Chronology (Estudos de Cronologia Egípcia), de T. Nicklin (Blackburn, Ingl., 1928, p. 39): "As dinastias manetonianas . . . não são listas de governantes de todo o Egito, mas listas parcialmente de príncipes mais ou menos independentes, parcialmente . . . de linhagens principescas das quais surgiram posteriormente governantes de todo o Egito." O Professor Waddell (pp. 1-9) observa que "talvez diversos reis egípcios governassem ao mesmo tempo; . . . de modo que não se tratava duma sucessão de reis, ocupando o trono um após outro, mas diversos reis reinando ao mesmo tempo em regiões diferentes. Daí surgiu o grande total de anos."

Visto que a Bíblia aponta o ano 2370 AEC como a data do Dilúvio global, a história egípcia deve ter começado depois dessa data. Os problemas da cronologia egípcia mostrados acima sem dúvida são responsáveis pelos algarismos apresentados por hodiernos historiadores, que remontariam a história egípcia até o ano 3000 AEC.

Maior confiança é depositada por egiptólogos nas próprias inscrições antigas. No entanto, o cuidado, a veracidade e a integridade moral dos escribas egípcios de modo algum estão acima de suspeita. Conforme declara o Professor J. A. Wilson: "É preciso que se faça uma advertência sobre o valor histórico exato das inscrições egípcias. Aquele era um mundo de . . . mitos e milagres divinos." Daí, após sugerir que os escribas não estavam acima de alterar a cronologia dos eventos para aumentar o louvor ao monarca específico no poder, ele diz: "O historiador aceitará seus dados segundo o seu valor aparente, a menos que haja uma razão clara para desconfiança; mas, ele precisa estar pronto para modificar a sua aceitação assim que alguma nova matéria coloque a interpretação anterior numa nova luz." — The World History of the Jewish People (A História Mundial do Povo Judaico), 1964, Vol. 1, pp. 280, 281.

Ausência de informações sobre Israel. Isto não surpreende, visto que os egípcios não somente se negavam a registrar assuntos desabonadores para eles, mas também não estavam acima de apagar registros dum monarca anterior, se a informação nestes registros se mostrava desagradável para o então reinante faraó. Assim, depois da morte da Rainha Hatshepsut, Tutmés III mandou retirar com cinzel o nome e as representações dela dos relevos monumentais. Esta prática, sem dúvida, explica por que não há registros egípcios conhecidos sobre os 215 anos da residência dos israelitas no Egito, nem sobre o seu Êxodo.

Não se dá na Bíblia o nome do faraó que governava na época do Êxodo; portanto, os esforços para identificá-lo baseiam-se em conjecturas. Isto explica parcialmente por que os cálculos dos hodiernos historiadores a respeito da data do Êxodo variam de 1441 a 1225 AEC, uma diferença de mais de 200 anos.

Cronologia Assíria. Desde o tempo de Salmaneser III (primeira parte do primeiro milênio AEC), inscrições assírias mencionam contatos com os israelitas, às vezes fornecendo o nome de certos reis de Judá e de Israel. As inscrições assírias incluem epígrafes, tais como as encontradas em paredes de palácios; anais régios; listas de reis, como a de Corsabade; e as listas de limmu, ou epônimos.

Epígrafes e anais assírios. Albert Olmstead, na sua obra Assyrian Historiography (Historiografia Assíria, 1916, pp. 5, 6), descreve as epígrafes assírias como segue: "Podemos . . . usar a Epígrafe para preencher lacunas nos Anais [crônicas reais alistando ano por ano os eventos], mas ela não tem a mínima autoridade quando discorda com seu original.” Depois de mostrar que o objetivo principal dessas epígrafes não era prover uma história coerente do reinado, ele acrescenta: “Igualmente sério é que raras vezes estão em ordem cronológica. . . . É óbvio que devem ser usadas com cautela.”

Ele diz a respeito dos anais: “Temos aqui uma cronologia regular, e caso às vezes se encontrem erros, intencionais ou não, pelo menos a cronologia relativa é geralmente correta. . . . Mas, seria um grave erro presumir que os anais sempre são dignos de confiança. Os primitivos historiadores aceitaram suas declarações de modo demasiado geral, a menos que tivessem prova definitiva de inexatidão. Nos últimos poucos anos, descobriu-se uma enorme quantidade de material novo, que podemos usar para a crítica dos documentos referentes a Sargão. . . . Acrescente-se a isso as referências de fontes estrangeiras, tais como as hebraicas ou babilônicas, e dificilmente precisamos fazer um estudo interno para nos convencer de que os anais estão longe de serem dignos de confiança.”

A isto se pode acrescentar o testemunho de D. D. Luckenbill: “Descobre-se logo que a transcrição exata dos eventos conforme ocorreram, ano após ano, durante o reinado do rei, não era a motivação orientadora dos escribas reais. Às vezes, as diferentes campanhas parecem ter sido deslocadas sem motivo aparente, mas, na maioria das vezes, torna-se claro que a vaidade real exigia que se tomassem liberdades com a exatidão histórica.” — Ancient Records of Assyria and Babylonia (Registros Antigos da Assíria e de Babilônia), 1926, Vol. I, p. 7.

Os anais reais tiveram usualmente uma série de edições, conforme a progressão do reinado do rei. Edições posteriores apresentavam novos eventos, mas também parecem ter alterado fatos e algarismos dos anos anteriores para satisfazer o capricho do rei. O Professor Olmstead faz referência a “[Assurbanipal] inescrupulosamente atribuir a si mesmo pouco a pouco as últimas duas campanhas egípcias de seu pai, até que, na edição final, não há nada que ele não atribua a si mesmo”. — Assyrian Historiography, p. 7.

Exemplos de tal evidente falta de fidedignidade, deliberada ou não, poderiam ser multiplicados muitas vezes. Os compiladores das listas tributárias não estavam acima de alistar um rei vassalo como pagando tributo, embora os registros mostrassem que na época ele já estava morto. George Smith, depois de citar um caso em que a mesma lista tributária de Esar-Hadom é atribuída ao seu filho, Assurbanipal, 13 anos mais tarde, diz que esta lista posterior é “mui provavelmente uma cópia literal do documento anterior, sem nenhuma tentativa de determinar se esses reis ainda reinavam e se realmente pagavam tributo”. — The Assyrian Eponym Canon (O Cânon de Epônimos Assírios), Londres, 1875, p. 179.

Listas de epônimos* (limmu). Apesar da evidência supracitada, os cronólogos hodiernos, em geral, afirmam que as listas de epônimos, ou limmu, de algum modo ficaram isentas de tal corrupção, de modo a serem virtualmente impecáveis na sua isenção de erros. Estas listas de epônimos são simples listas de nomes e cargos de autoridades, ou listas desses nomes acompanhados por uma breve menção duma campanha guerreira ou de outro evento digno de nota. Por exemplo, um trecho duma lista de epônimos reza:

Bel-Harran-Bel-Usur	(governador) de Guzana	contra Damasco
	Salmaneser	assentou-se no trono
Marduque-Bel-Usur	(governador) de Amedi	no país
Mahde	(governador) de Nínive	contra [Samaria]
Assur-Ishmeani	(governador) de [Kakzi]	contra [Samaria]
Salmaneser	rei da Assíria	contra [Samaria]

Pode-se ver disso que não se fornecem propriamente datas, mas acha-se que cada nome represente um ano, aparentemente permitindo assim uma contagem de ano após ano. Historiadores hodiernos empenham-se em sincronizar a história assíria com a bíblica por meio destas listas de epônimos, especialmente referentes ao período de 911 a 649 AEC, ao qual dão os nomes ou epônimos que aparecem nas listas. Como ponto fundamental, baseiam-se na referência a um eclipse do sol, mencionado numa anotação ao lado do nome de certo Bur-Sagale, governador de Guzana. O eclipse ocorreu no mês de sivã (maio-junho) e os historiadores costumam fixá-lo como ocorrido em 15 de junho de 763 AEC. A fidedignidade desta data, e a sincronização da história assíria com a de Judá e Israel, que basearam nela, será considerada mais adiante, sob o título “Cálculos Astronômicos”.

Em vista das extremamente escassas informações contidas nas listas de epônimos (em comparação com os anais e outras inscrições), é óbvio que diminuem consideravelmente os meios de se descobrirem erros. Quando se encontram aparentes contradições entre as listas de epônimos e os anais, tais como a colocação de certa campanha num ano diferente do reinado do rei, ou durante um epônimo diferente, os historiadores hodiernos usualmente atribuem o erro aos anais, em vez de às listas de epônimos. Todavia, nem mesmo quanto à chamada história sincronística assíria, uma famosa tabuinha contendo um relato conciso do relacionamento entre a Assíria e Babilônia num período de séculos, se reivindica uma exatidão positiva. A. T. Olmstead, depois de apresentar evidência para mostrar que este documento é apenas uma cópia de uma epígrafe anterior, diz: "De modo que não podemos considerar nosso documento nem mesmo como história no verdadeiro sentido da palavra, mas apenas uma inscrição erguida para a glória de Assur [principal deus da Assíria] e do seu povo . . . Quando adotamos este conceito, não nos perturbam mais os numerosos erros, mesmo no que diz respeito à ordem dos reis, erros que reduzem tão grandemente o valor do documento onde seu testemunho é mais necessário." — Assyrian Historiography, p. 32.

Deve ser evidente que tal arranjo variável, conforme se apresenta nas listas de epônimos, tornaria extremamente difícil para os peritos hodiernos chegarem a uma cronologia exata, especialmente quando a compilação de dados que abrangem diversos séculos foi feita por escribas aos quais evidentemente pouco importava a meticulosidade e a exatidão histórica. É também evidente que os historiadores hodiernos se sentem justificados em ajustar ou desconsiderar a contagem das listas assírias de epônimos quando outros fatores ou evidências tornam isso aconselhável.

As informações acima levam à conclusão de que a historiografia assíria ou não é corretamente entendida pelos historiadores hodiernos, ou é de qualidade bem inferior. De qualquer modo, não nos sentimos compelidos a coordenar a cronologia bíblica com a história conforme apresentada nos registros assírios. Portanto, mostramos apenas os sincronismos mais específicos entre a Assíria, e Israel e Judá, conforme indicados no relato bíblico.

Cronologia Babilônica. A Babilônia entra no quadro bíblico principalmente a partir do tempo de Nabucodonosor II. O reinado de Nabopolassar, pai de Nabucodonosor, marcou o início do que é conhecido como Império Neobabilônico; terminou com os reinados de Nabonido e de seu filho Belsazar, e a derrubada de Babilônia por Ciro, o persa. Este período é de grande interesse para os peritos bíblicos, visto que abrange o tempo da destruição de Jerusalém por Babilônia e a maior parte do período de 70 anos do exílio dos judeus.

Jeremias 52:28 diz que, no sétimo ano de Nabucodonosor (ou Nabucodorosor), o primeiro grupo de exilados judaicos foi levado para Babilônia. Em harmonia com isso, uma inscrição cuneiforme da Crônica Babilônica (Museu Britânico 21946) declara: "O sétimo ano: No mês de quisleu, o rei de Acade reuniu seu exército e marchou até Hatu. Acampou-se contra a cidade de Judá, e no segundo dia do mês de adar ele capturou a cidade (e) capturou (seu) rei [Joaquim]. A um rei da sua própria escolha [Zedequias] ele designou na cidade (e) tomando o enorme tributo, ele levou este a Babilônia." (Assyrian and Babylonian Chronicles [Crônicas Assírias e Babilônicas], de A. K. Grayson, 1975, p. 102; veja 2Rs 24:1-17; 2Cr 36:5-10.) (FOTO, Vol. 2, p. 326) Para os últimos 32 anos do reinado de Nabucodonosor não há registros históricos em forma de crônica, exceto uma inscrição fragmentária sobre uma campanha contra o Egito, no 37.º ano de Nabucodonosor.

Referente a Avil-Marduque (Evil-Merodaque, 2Rs 25:27, 28), encontraram-se tabuinhas que datam até o seu segundo ano de governo. Referente a Neriglissar, considerado ser o sucessor de Avil-Marduque, sabe-se de tabuinhas de contratos datados do seu quarto ano.

Certa tabuinha babilônica de argila é útil para relacionar a cronologia babilônica com a cronologia bíblica. Esta tabuinha contém a seguinte informação astronômica sobre o sétimo ano de Cambises II, filho de Ciro II: "Ano 7, tamuz, noite de 14, 1⅔ hora dupla [três horas e vinte minutos] após o cair da noite, um eclipse lunar; visível no seu trajeto inteiro; abrangeu a parte setentrional do disco [da lua]. Tebete, noite de 14, duas e meia horas duplas [cinco horas] à noite, antes da madrugada [na última parte da noite], o disco da lua ficou eclipsado; o trajeto inteiro visível; o eclipse atingiu as partes meridional e setentrional." (Inschriften von Cambyses, König von Babylon [Inscrições de Cambises, Rei de Babilônia], de J. N. Strassmaier, Leipzig, 1890, N.º 400, linhas 45-48; Sternkunde und Sterndienst in Babel [Astronomia e Veneração das Estrelas em Babel], de F. X. Kugler, Münster, 1907, Vol. I, pp. 70, 71) É evidente que estes dois eclipses lunares podem ser identificados com os eclipses lunares visíveis em Babilônia em 16 de julho de 523 AEC e em 10 de janeiro de 522 AEC. (Canon of Eclipses [Cânon de Eclipses], de Oppolzer, traduzido para o inglês por O. Gingerich, 1962, p. 335) De modo que essa tabuinha indica que foi na primavera de 523 AEC que começou o sétimo ano de Cambises II.

Visto que o sétimo ano de Cambises II começou na primavera de 523 AEC, seu primeiro ano de governo foi 529 AEC, e seu ano de ascensão, e o último ano de Ciro II como rei de Babilônia, foi 530 AEC. A mais recente tabuinha datada no reinado de Ciro II é do 5.º mês, do 23.º dia do seu 9.º ano. (Babylonian Chronology, 626 B.C.–A.D. 75 [Cronologia Babilônica, 626 A.C.–A.D. 75], de R. Parker e W. Dubberstein, 1971, p. 14) Visto que o nono ano de Ciro II como rei de Babilônia foi 530 AEC, seu primeiro ano, segundo este cálculo, foi 538 AEC, e seu ano de ascensão foi 539 AEC.

Beroso. No terceiro século AEC, Beroso, sacerdote babilônio, escreveu uma história de Babilônia na língua grega, evidentemente baseada em registros cuneiformes. O Professor Olmstead disse a respeito dos escritos dele: "Apenas meros fragmentos, abstratos ou traços chegaram até nós. E os mais importantes destes fragmentos foram transmitidos por uma tradição quase sem paralelo. Hoje em dia, precisamos consultar uma tradução latina moderna de uma tradução armênia do original grego perdido da Crônica de Eusébio, que se aproveitou em parte de Alexandre Polistor, que se aproveitou diretamente de Beroso, e em parte de Abideno, o qual, evidentemente, se aproveitou de Juba, que se aproveitou de Alexandre Polistor, e, portanto, de Beroso. Para tornar ainda pior a confusão, em alguns casos, Eusébio não reconheceu o fato de que Abideno é apenas um fraco eco de Polistor, e citou os relatos de ambos lado a lado! E isso ainda não é o pior. Embora seu relato de Polistor seja em geral preferível, Eusébio parece ter usado um manuscrito inferior daquele autor." (Assyrian Historiography, pp. 62, 63) Josefo, historiador judeu do primeiro século EC, também afirma citar Beroso. Mas, parece evidente que os dados cronológicos supostamente procedentes de Beroso dificilmente podem ser considerados como conclusivos.

Outros fatores que admitem diferenças. Estudantes casuais da história antiga muitas vezes têm o conceito errôneo de que as tabuinhas cuneiformes (tais como talvez fossem usadas por Beroso) foram sempre escritas no mesmo período ou pouco depois dos eventos que registram. Mas, exceto os muitos documentos comerciais cuneiformes realmente contemporâneos, os textos históricos babilônicos e até mesmo muitos textos astronômicos frequentemente dão evidência de serem dum período bem posterior. Assim, segundo o assiriólogo D. J. Wiseman, uma parte da chamada Crônica Babilônica, abrangendo o período desde o governo de Nabu-nasir até Samas-sum-iuquin (período datado por historiadores seculares como 747-648 AEC), é "uma cópia feita no vigésimo segundo ano de Dario [a nota de rodapé diz: I.e., 500/499 A.C. se for Dario I], de um texto mais antigo e danificado". (Chronicles of Chaldaean Kings [Crônicas de Reis Caldeus], Londres, 1956, p. 1) Portanto, este escrito não só estava separado dos eventos registrados nele por uns 150 a 250 anos, mas também era uma cópia de um documento anterior, defeituoso, que talvez fosse ou não um original. A respeito dos textos da Crônica Neobabilônica, abrangendo o período de Nabopolassar até Nabonido, o mesmo autor declara: "Os textos da Crônica Neobabilônica se acham escritos numa escrita pequena de um tipo que não admite em si mesmo qualquer data precisa, mas que pode significar que foram escritos em qualquer tempo desde quase que contemporaneamente com os próprios eventos até o fim da regência dos aquemênidas." Isto admite a possibilidade de terem sido escritos só no fim do Império Persa, que ocorreu em 331 AEC, uns 200 anos depois da queda de Babilônia. Já vimos que dados, inclusive números, podem facilmente sofrer alteração ou mesmo deturpação às mãos de escribas pagãos, no decorrer de uns poucos séculos. Em vista de todos esses fatores, certamente não é sábio insistir em que as cifras tradicionais para os reinados dos reis neobabilônicos sejam aceitas como definitivas.

Tanto a falta de registros históricos contemporâneos como a facilidade com que dados podem ser alterados, definitivamente admitem a possibilidade de um ou mais dos governantes neobabilônicos terem tido um reinado mais longo do que mostram os algarismos tradicionais. Não se terem encontrado tabuinhas que abrangessem os últimos anos de tal reinado não pode sempre ser usado como forte argumento contra tal possibilidade. Há casos de reis cujos reinados ocorreram muito mais tarde na corrente do tempo e para os quais não se encontraram tais tabuinhas confirmadoras. Por exemplo, referente tanto a Artaxerxes III (Oco) (o qual, segundo os historiadores, governou por 21 anos [358 a 338 AEC]) como a Arses (a quem se atribui um governo de 2 anos [337 a 336 AEC]) não existe nenhuma evidência cuneiforme contemporânea que ajude a determinar a duração dos seus reinados.

Na realidade, os historiadores não sabem onde colocar certos reis babilônicos a respeito dos quais existem registros. O Professor A. W. Ahl (Outline of Persian History [Bosquejo da História Persa], 1922, p. 84) declara: "Nas Tabuinhas de Contratos, encontradas em Borsipa, aparecem os nomes de reis babilônicos que não ocorrem em nenhum outro lugar. Com toda a probabilidade, pertencem aos últimos dias de Dario I, estendendo-se até os primeiros dias de Xerxes I, conforme conjectura Ungnad." Todavia, continua sendo apenas conjectura.

Cronologia Persa. Diversos eventos bíblicos importantes ocorreram durante o período persa: a queda de Babilônia, seguida pela soltura dos judeus por Ciro e o fim dos 70 anos de desolação de Judá; a reconstrução do templo em Jerusalém, completada "no sexto ano do reinado de Dario [I, o persa]"; a reconstrução das muralhas de Jerusalém por Neemias, de acordo com o decreto emitido no 20.° ano de Artaxerxes Longímano. — 2Cr 36:20-23; Esd 3:8-10; 4:23, 24; 6:14, 15; Ne 2:1, 7, 8.

Pode-se chegar à data de 539 AEC para a queda de Babilônia não somente pelo cânon de Ptolomeu, mas também por outras fontes. O historiador Diodoro, bem como Africano e Eusébio, mostram que o primeiro ano de Ciro, como rei da Pérsia, correspondia à Olimpíada 55, ano 1 (560/559 AEC), ao passo que o último ano de Ciro é situado na Olimpíada 62, ano 2 (531/530 AEC). Tabuinhas cuneiformes atribuem a Ciro um governo de nove anos sobre Babilônia, o que, portanto, corroboraria o ano 539 como a data em que ele conquistou Babilônia. — Handbook of Biblical Chronology (Manual de Cronologia Bíblica), de Jack Finegan, 1964, pp. 112, 168-170; Babylonian Chronology, 626 B.C.–A.D. 75, p. 14; veja os comentários acima sob "Cronologia Babilônica", também PÉRSIA, PERSAS.

Diversas inscrições de reis persas chegaram até nós, mas não são úteis para se determinar a duração dos reinados dos reis persas. Por exemplo, várias tabuinhas datadas foram encontradas em Persépolis, mas elas não incluem os nomes dos reis.

Cálculos Astronômicos. Faz-se a afirmação de que "confirmações astronômicas podem converter uma cronologia relativa [que apenas estabelece a sequência dos eventos] numa cronologia absoluta, especificamente, um sistema de datas relacionadas com o nosso calendário". (The Old Testament World [O Mundo do Antigo Testamento], de Martin Noth, 1966, p. 272) Embora os corpos celestes sejam o meio provido pelo Criador do homem para a medição do tempo pelos humanos, não obstante, a correlação entre os dados astronômicos e os eventos humanos no passado está sujeita a diversos fatores e interpretações humanas que admitem uma margem de erro.

Muitas das chamadas sincronizações de dados astronômicos com acontecimentos ou datas da história antiga baseiam-se em eclipses solares ou lunares. No entanto, qualquer "vila ou cidade tinha em média cerca de 40 eclipses lunares e 20 eclipses solares parciais num período de 50 anos, [embora] apenas um eclipse solar total em 400 anos". (Encyclopædia Britannica [Enciclopédia Britânica], 1971, Vol. 7; p. 907) Portanto, apenas no caso de um eclipse solar total especificamente mencionado, visível numa área específica, havia poucos motivos para dúvida na determinação duma data histórica específica por tais meios. Em muitos casos, a matéria de antigos textos cuneiformes (ou de outras fontes) a respeito de eclipses não fornece informações específicas deste tipo.

Um exemplo disso é o eclipse solar em que historiadores se baseiam para correlacionar a cronologia assíria com a cronologia bíblica. Ele é mencionado nas listas de epônimos assírios como tendo ocorrido no terceiro mês (a contar da primavera setentrional) durante o epônimo de Bur-Sagale. Os cronologistas hodiernos calculam tratar-se do eclipse ocorrido em 15 de junho de 763 AEC. Contando para trás 90 anos (ou 90 nomes nas listas de epônimos) a partir desta data, chegam a 853 AEC como data para a batalha de Carcar, no sexto ano de Salmaneser III. Afirmam que Salmaneser alista o Rei Acabe, de Israel, na coalizão inimiga que confrontava a Assíria naquela batalha, e que 12 anos depois (o 18.º ano de Salmaneser), o rei assírio menciona o Rei Jeú, de Israel, como pagando tributo. Deduzem então que o ano 853 AEC assinalou a data do último ano de Acabe e 841 AEC como o início do reinado de Jeú. Quão abalizados são estes cálculos?

Primeiro, embora se presuma que o eclipse solar tenha sido total, a lista de epônimos não diz isso. E, ao passo que a maioria dos historiadores, hoje, aplicaria esta referência ao eclipse de 763 AEC, nem todos os peritos o fizeram, alguns preferindo o ano 809 AEC, ano em que ocorreu um eclipse que pelo menos teria sido parcialmente visível na Assíria (assim como se deu também em 857 e em 817 AEC, etc.). (Canon of Eclipses, de Oppolzer, tabelas 17, 19, 21) Embora os historiadores hodiernos objetem a qualquer desvio da ideia do eclipse solar de 763 AEC, seguindo o argumento de que isso 'introduziria confusão na história assíria', já observamos que os próprios assírios introduziram considerável confusão na sua própria história.

Além disso, a presença do Rei Acabe na batalha de Carcar é bem improvável. Assim, mesmo que os reinados de Acazias e de Jeorão (que transcorreram entre Acabe e Jeú) pudessem ser reduzidos a apenas 12 anos (veja 1Rs 22:40, 51; 2Rs 1:2, 17; 3:1), a evidência é contrária a qualquer sincronização precisa da batalha de Carcar com Acabe. A menção de Jeú por Salmaneser, portanto, pode muito bem não se referir ao primeiro ano do governo de Jeú. A acusação de que os assírios alteraram os anos das suas campanhas e creditaram reis com o recebimento de tributos de pessoas que não mais viviam poderia reduzir ainda mais o suposto valor da sincronização. A tabela de "Datas de Destaque Durante o Período dos Reis de Judá e de Israel", que acompanha este artigo, mostra que a morte de Acabe ocorreu aproximadamente em 920 AEC, contando-se o reinado de Jeú mais ou menos a partir de 904 AEC.

O cânon de Ptolomeu. Cláudio Ptolomeu foi um astrônomo grego que viveu no segundo século EC, ou mais de 600 anos depois do fim do período neobabilônico. Seu cânon, ou lista de reis, relaciona-se com uma obra sobre astronomia produzida por ele. A maioria dos historiadores hodiernos aceita as informações de Ptolomeu sobre os reis neobabilônicos e a duração dos seus reinados.

Evidentemente, Ptolomeu baseou suas informações históricas em fontes que remontam ao período selêucida, que começou mais de 250 anos depois de Ciro capturar Babilônia. Portanto, não surpreende que as cifras de Ptolomeu concordem com as de Beroso, um sacerdote babilônio do período selêucida.

Eclipses lunares. Estes têm sido usados na tentativa de consubstanciar as datas apresentadas para determinados anos dos reis neobabilônicos à base do cânon de Ptolomeu e de dados nos registros cuneiformes. Mas, embora Ptolomeu talvez computasse com exatidão ou registrasse as datas de certos eclipses no passado (um astrônomo hodierno verificou que três quintos das datas de Ptolomeu são corretos), isto não prova que sua transmissão de dados históricos seja correta, quer dizer, que sua correlação de eclipses com os reinados de certos reis seja sempre baseada em fatos históricos verídicos.

A data da morte de Herodes, o Grande, fornece uma ilustração dos problemas que se podem encontrar na datação de eclipses lunares. Os escritos de Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], XVII, 167 [vi, 4]; XVII, 188-214 [viii, 1–ix, 3]) mostram que a morte de Herodes ocorreu pouco depois dum eclipse lunar e não muito tempo antes da época da Páscoa. Muitos peritos datam a morte de Herodes em 4 AEC e citam como prova o eclipse lunar de 11 de março (13 de março, calendário juliano) daquele ano. Por causa deste cálculo, muitos cronologistas hodiernos situam o nascimento de Jesus já em 5 AEC.

No entanto, esse eclipse em 4 AEC era da magnitude de apenas 36 por cento e teria atraído a atenção de poucos no início da madrugada em que ocorreu. Dois outros eclipses ocorreram em 1 AEC, sendo que qualquer um deles se ajustaria ao requisito de ter ocorrido um eclipse pouco antes da Páscoa. O eclipse lunar parcial de 27 de dezembro (29 de dezembro, calendário juliano) daquele ano talvez pudesse ser observado em Jerusalém, mas provavelmente não era um evento que se destacasse. Segundo os cômputos no Canon of Eclipses, de Oppolzer (p. 343), a lua saía da sombra da terra quando o crepúsculo caía sobre Jerusalém, e, quando já era escuro, a lua brilhava de novo integralmente. Por outro lado, este não se encontra incluído na lista abrangente de Manfred Kudlek e Erich Mickler. Portanto, até que ponto esse eclipse era visível em Jerusalém, ou se era mesmo visível, não é certo neste ponto na história. Mais notável do que qualquer dos dois já mencionados foi o eclipse lunar, tarde da noite, que ocorreu nas primeiras horas de 8 de janeiro de 1 AEC (10 de janeiro, calendário juliano). Era um eclipse total, em que a lua ficou obscurecida por 1 hora e 41 minutos. Teria sido notado por qualquer pessoa acordada, mesmo que o céu estivesse encoberto. De modo que, durante os anos considerados aqui, mais de um eclipse ocorreu pouco antes da Páscoa. Encarado à base das informações agora disponíveis, parece que o eclipse mais provável a ter sido notado foi o de 8 de janeiro de 1 AEC. — Solar and Lunar Eclipses of the Ancient Near East From 3000 B.C. to 0 With Maps (Eclipses Solares e Lunares do Antigo Oriente Próximo de 3000 A.C. a 0 com Mapas), de M. Kudlek e E. H. Mickler; Neukirchen-Vluyn, Alemanha; 1971, Vol. I, p. 156.

Todavia, nem todos os textos usados pelos historiadores para datar eventos e períodos da história antiga se baseiam em eclipses. Encontraram-se diários astronômicos que indicam a posição da lua (em relação com certas estrelas ou constelações) no princípio e no fim da sua visibilidade num dia específico em Babilônia (por exemplo: "a lua encontrava-se a um côvado adiante da pata traseira do leão"), junto com a posição de certos planetas na mesma ocasião. Cronologistas hodiernos salientam que tal combinação de posições astronômicas não se repetiria em milhares de anos. Esses diários astronômicos contêm referências aos reinados de certos reis e parecem coincidir com as cifras fornecidas no cânon de Ptolomeu. Embora, para alguns, isso talvez pareça ser evidência incontestável, há fatores que reduzem grandemente o seu peso.

O primeiro é que as observações feitas em Babilônia podem ter contido erros. Os astrônomos babilônios mostraram a maior preocupação com eventos ou fenômenos celestes que ocorriam perto do horizonte, ao nascer ou ao pôr da lua ou do sol. No entanto, o horizonte, conforme visto de Babilônia, frequentemente é obscurecido por tempestades de areia. Comentando este fato, o Professor O. Neugebauer declara que Ptolomeu se queixou da "falta de observações planetárias fidedignas [da antiga Babilônia]. Ele [Ptolomeu] comenta que as observações antigas foram feitas com pouca competência, porque se preocupavam com aparecimentos e desaparecimentos, e com pontos estacionários, fenômenos que pela sua própria natureza são muito difíceis de observar". — The Exact Sciences in Antiquity (As Ciências Exatas na Antiguidade), 1957, p. 98.

Segundo, é fato que a grande maioria dos diários astronômicos encontrados não foram escritos na época dos impérios neobabilônicos ou persas, mas no período selêucida (312-65 AEC), embora contenham dados relacionados com aqueles períodos anteriores. Os historiadores presumem que se trata de cópias de documentos anteriores. Na realidade, faltam textos astronômicos contemporâneos pelas quais se possa determinar a plena cronologia dos períodos neobabilônico e persa (desde os fins do sétimo até os fins do quarto século).

Finalmente, como no caso de Ptolomeu, embora as informações astronômicas (como agora interpretadas e entendidas) nos textos descobertos sejam basicamente exatas, isto não prova que a informação histórica acompanhante seja exata. Assim como Ptolomeu usou os reinados de reis antigos (conforme ele os entendia) simplesmente como estrutura em que colocar seus dados astronômicos, assim também os escritores (ou copistas) dos textos astronômicos do período selêucida talvez simplesmente inserissem nos seus textos astronômicos aquilo que então era a cronologia aceita, ou "popular", daquele tempo. Esta cronologia aceita, ou popular, talvez contivesse erros nos pontos críticos já considerados neste artigo. Para ilustrar isso, certo astrônomo (ou escriba) antigo talvez declarasse que certo evento celeste ocorreu no ano que, segundo nosso calendário, seria 465 AEC, e a declaração dele talvez se mostre correta quando se fazem computações exatas para verificá-la. Mas ele talvez também declarasse que o ano em que o evento celestial ocorreu (465 AEC) era o 21.º ano do Rei Xerxes, e nisso estar inteiramente errado. Em termos simples, a exatidão na astronomia não prova exatidão na história.

Datação Arqueológica. Problemas que envolvem a datação baseada em artefatos encontrados em escavações são considerados sob o verbete ARQUEOLOGIA. Em suma, pode-se dizer que, na ausência de inscrições realmente datadas, a datação por artefatos, tais como cacos de cerâmica, nunca pode ser mais do que algo comparativo. Isto é, o arqueólogo só pode dizer que 'este estrato específico e seu conteúdo nesta elevação evidentemente pertence ao mesmo período geral de um certo estrato naquela elevação (ou antes ou depois dele)'. Assim se desenvolve uma sequência cronológica geral, mas sempre sujeita a correções e mudanças, mudanças que às vezes ascendem a centenas de anos. Por exemplo, em 1937, o arqueólogo Barton atribuiu cerâmica da "Primitiva Idade do Bronze" ao período de 2500-2000 AEC, ao passo que, no ano seguinte, W. F. Albright alistou o mesmo período como 3200-2200 AEC.

Por isso, conforme declarou G. Ernest Wright: "Neste campo, raras vezes podemos trabalhar com certezas. Antes, é necessário elaborar hipóteses, as quais sempre possuem maior ou menor grau de probabilidade. A verdade nelas baseia-se na habilidade deles [dos arqueólogos] de interpretar e conjugar uma variedade de dados discrepantes, mas, a qualquer momento, uma informação nova pode tornar necessário mudar determinada hipótese, ou fazer o perito expressá-la de modo um pouco diferente." — Shechem, The Biography of a Biblical City (Siquém, a Biografia Duma Cidade Bíblica), 1965, prefácio, p. xvi.

O que ilustra isso ainda mais é uma declaração feita em Chronologies in Old World Archaeology (Cronologias na Arqueologia do Velho Mundo), editado por Robert Ehrich, impresso em 1965 para substituir uma obra anterior de 1954, e contendo um compêndio de conceitos sobre "a rede flutuante de cronologias relativas", conforme expressos por destacados arqueólogos. O prefácio (p. vii) diz: "O objetivo deste livro é apresentar, em série, as cronologias de diversas áreas contíguas, conforme parecem em 1964 aos olhos de especialistas regionais. Apesar das novas informações, a situação geral ainda é instável, e novos dados tornarão obsoletas algumas das conclusões, possivelmente até mesmo antes de este volume sair impresso." Deve-se ter isto em mente quando se avaliam datas que arqueólogos atribuem à idade de certas cidades, tais como Jericó, ou ao período a que atribuem a conquista da Palestina por Israel.

Historiadores do Período Clássico. O termo "clássico", aqui, aplica-se ao período e à cultura dos antigos gregos e romanos. Além de serem fonte da história grega e romana, os escritos de certos historiadores clássicos são tomados por historiadores hodiernos como base para preencher lacunas ou para confirmar certos dados no registro dos antigos Egito, Assíria, Babilônia, Pérsia, Síria e Palestina. Os antigos historiadores gregos incluem: Heródoto (c. 484-425 AEC); Tucídides (c. 471-401 AEC); Xenofonte (c. 431-352 AEC); Ctésias (quinto-quarto século AEC); e, mais tarde, Estrabão, Diodoro da Sicília e Alexandre Polistor, do primeiro século AEC; e Plutarco, do primeiro e segundo séculos EC. Os historiadores romanos incluem Tito Lívio (59 AEC–17 EC); Cneu Pompeio Trogo, contemporâneo de Lívio; Plínio, o Velho (23-79 EC); e Sexto Júlio Africano (terceiro século EC), provavelmente nascido na Líbia. Além destes, principais fontes de informações são Mâneto e Beroso (já considerados); Josefo, historiador judeu, cujos escritos (embora às vezes contraditórios na sua forma atual) são bastante úteis para informações sobre o primeiro século EC; e Eusébio, historiador eclesiástico e bispo de Cesareia (c. 260-340 EC).

Todos estes viveram depois do período assírio e neobabilônico, e apenas os primeiros quatro mencionados viveram durante o período do Impé-rio Persa. Para os períodos assírio e neobabilônico, portanto, nenhum destes escritores apresenta informações baseadas em conhecimento pessoal, mas, antes, eles registram os conceitos tradicionais de que souberam, ou, em alguns casos, talvez lessem e copiassem. A exatidão de seus dados obviamente depende da exatidão das fontes usadas.

Não só isso, mas aquilo que sabemos sobre os escritos deles depende atualmente de cópias de cópias, a cópia mais antiga remontando às vezes apenas ao período medieval da Era Comum. Já notamos como as cronologias de Mâneto e de Beroso foram mutiladas pelos copistas. A respeito das qualificações e da fidedignidade dos outros historiadores antigos do período clássico, merece ser notado o seguinte:

A maneira de Heródoto tratar da história — fazer perguntas, procurar informações relevantes e depois tirar uma conclusão — é tida em alta conta. Mas, diz-se também que, às vezes, "seus dados eram insatisfatórios", e que "ele oferece uma explanação racional lado a lado da irracional". Diz-se também que ele pertence "nitidamente à escola romântica", e assim era tanto contador de histórias como historiador. (The New Encyclopædia Britannica [A Nova Enciclopédia Britânica], edição de 1985, Vol. 5, pp. 881, 882; edição de 1910, Vol. XIII, p. 383) Quanto a Xenofonte, diz-se que "objetividade, meticulosidade e pesquisa não eram seu forte", e que ele enfeitava suas narrativas com "conversas fictícias". (The New Encyclopædia Britannica, 1987, Vol. 12, p. 796) George Rawlinson acusa Ctésias de deliberadamente estender o período da monarquia média "pelo uso consciente de um sistema de duplicação". Declara adicionalmente: "Cada rei, ou período, em Heródoto, ocorre duas vezes na lista de Ctésias — um artifício óbvio, desajeitadamente encoberto pelo expediente vulgar da invenção liberal de nomes." — The Seven Great Monarchies of the Ancient Eastern World (As Sete Grandes Monarquias do Antigo Mundo Oriental), 1885, Vol. II, p. 85.

Sobre a história romana do período dos reis (que precedeu ao estabelecimento da república) lemos que ela "remonta aos domínios de pura mitologia. É pouco mais do que uma coleção de fábulas contadas com quase nenhuma tentativa de crítica, e sem mais consideração para com a sequência cronológica do que era necessário para fazer o conto seguir suavemente ou para preencher lacunas tais como as existentes entre a fuga de Eneias de Troia e o suposto ano da fundação de Roma". Mesmo no período depois do estabelecimento da república (c. 509 AEC), os historiadores ainda estavam prontos para assentar por escrito tradições populares ao lado de fatos históricos, sem fazer questão e diferenciá-los. "Inventaram-se linhagens, inseriram-se exercícios de consulados [a datação romana frequentemente era feita por consulados [tempo do exercício deste cargo]] e triunfos fictícios, e tradições familiares . . . foram formalmente incorporadas na história do estado." Somos informados sobre os escritores romanos de anais: "Copiavam aquilo que encontravam escrito; as lacunas eram preenchidas pela imaginação, quando não havia experiência pessoal." — The Encyclopædia Britannica, 1911, Vol. XVI, pp. 820, 821.

Tucídides. Tucídides é amplamente considerado como exceção à regra geral de inexatidão e descuido de que se acusam tantas vezes os historiadores clássicos. Tucídides se destaca pela sua meticulosa pesquisa. The New Encyclopædia Britannica (1987, Vol. 11, p. 741) diz a respeito dele: "Sua autoridade dificilmente é igualada pela de qualquer outro historiador. Ele se ateve a um esquema estritamente cronológico, e, nos pontos em que este pode ser testado com exatidão pelos eclipses que ele menciona, ajusta-se muito bem."

Precisa-se às vezes recorrer aos historiadores clássicos para obter informações necessárias, especialmente para o período persa (conforme tratado nos livros de Esdras, Neemias e Ester) e até os tempos apostólicos. Os escritos deles são também de ajuda na determinação do tempo e dos eventos em cumprimento de partes das visões proféticas de Daniel (caps. 7-9, 11), que se estendem até mesmo além do período apostólico. No entanto, as informações apresentadas anteriormente mostram que não há motivo para se colocarem as histórias e as cronologias deles no mesmo nível da própria Bíblia. Quando surgem diferenças, pode-se confiantemente depender do registro bíblico, escrito quer por testemunhas oculares, quer por aqueles que, iguais a Lucas, têm "pesquisado todas as coisas com exatidão, desde o início". (Lu 1:1-4) As informações cronológicas exatas nos relatos de Lucas e de outros tornam possível fixar as datas dos principais eventos na vida de Jesus e do período apostólico. — Mt 2:1, 19-22; Lu 3:1-3, 21-23; e muitos outros.

A Contagem Bíblica do Tempo. Os antigos registros seculares obviamente precisam todos ser usados com a devida cautela. Sabe-se que contêm inexatidões em muitos assuntos, e é bem pouco provável que suas cronologias de algum modo tenham ficado isentas de tais inexatidões. A Bíblia, em contraste, mostrou-se fiel em todos os campos envolvidos, apresentando em muito o quadro mais exato dos tempos antigos de que trata. Sua cronologia também é fidedigna. — Veja BÍBLIA (Autenticidade).

Na medição dos períodos bíblicos em harmonia com os métodos modernos de datação, é preciso lembrar que números cardinais e ordinais diferem. Os números cardinais, tais como 1, 2, 3, 10, 100, e assim por diante, têm valor pleno. Mas, no caso dos números ordinais, tais como 3.º, 5.º e 22.º, é necessário subtrair um para se obter o número pleno. Assim, na referência ao "décimo oitavo ano de Nabucodorosor", o termo "décimo oitavo" é um número ordinal e representa 17 anos plenos, mais alguns dias, semanas ou meses (conforme o tempo decorrido desde o fim do 17.º ano). — Je 52:29.

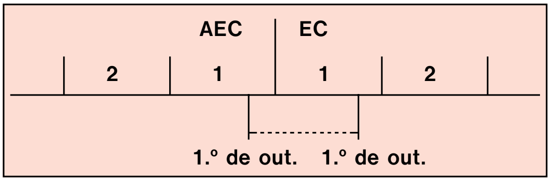
Quando se conta certo número de anos a partir duma data do calendário no período "AEC" até uma no período "EC", deve-se ter presente que de uma data tal como 1.º de outubro do ano 1 AEC até 1.º de outubro do ano 1 EC decorreu apenas um ano, não dois, como se pode ver no seguinte diagrama:



Isto se dá porque as datas dos anos são números ordinais. Assim, de 1.º de outubro do ano 2 AEC (tempo aproximado do nascimento de Jesus) até 1.º de outubro de 29 EC (data aproximada do batismo de Jesus) há um total de 30 anos, quer dizer, um ano inteiro e mais 3 meses no período AEC, e 28 anos inteiros mais 9 meses no período EC. — Lu 3:21-23.

Desde a Criação Humana Até o Presente. Historiadores hodiernos não conseguem determinar qualquer data certa para o início do "período histórico" da humanidade. Quer recorram à história da Assíria, de Babilônia ou do Egito, a cronologia se torna cada vez mais incerta e instável ao remontarem ao segundo milênio AEC, e, no terceiro milênio AEC, veem-se confrontados com confusão e trevas. A Bíblia, em contraste, fornece uma história interligada, que permite uma contagem metódica para trás, até o início da história humana, contagem facilitada por referências bíblicas a certos períodos grandes, tais como o período de 479 anos inteiros desde o Êxodo até o começo da construção do templo durante o reinado de Salomão. — 1Rs 6:1.

Para fazer essa contagem em termos de datação do moderno calendário, temos de usar algum ponto fixo ou data fundamental com que começar, quer dizer, uma data na história que tenha uma sólida base de aceitação e que corresponda a determinado evento registrado na Bíblia. A partir de tal data como ponto fixo podemos computar para trás e para a frente, e atribuir datas do calendário a muitos dos eventos mencionados na Bíblia.

Uma dessas datas, que se harmoniza tanto com a história bíblica como com a secular, é o ano 29 EC, cujos primeiros meses estavam no 15.º ano de Tibério César, que foi nomeado imperador pelo Senado romano em 15 de setembro de 14 EC (calendário gregoriano). Foi no ano 29 EC que João, o Batizador, iniciou sua pregação, e também quando ele batizou Jesus, talvez uns seis meses mais tarde. — Lu 3:1-3, 21, 23; 1:36.

Outra data que pode ser usada como ponto fixo é o ano 539 AEC, apoiada por diversas fontes históricas como o ano da derrubada de Babilônia por Ciro, o persa. (Fontes seculares para o reinado de Ciro incluem Diodoro, Africano, Eusébio e Ptolomeu, bem como as tabuinhas babilônicas.) Durante o primeiro ano de Ciro emitiu-se seu decreto de livrar os judeus do exílio. E, conforme considerado no artigo sobre CIRO, é bem provável que o decreto fosse emitido no inverno setentrional de 538 AEC, ou perto da primavera de 537 AEC. Isto permitiria que os judeus tivessem tempo para os necessários preparativos, fizessem a viagem de quatro meses até Jerusalém e ainda chegassem ali no sétimo mês (tisri, ou por volta de 1.º de outubro) de 537 AEC. — Esd 1:1-11; 2:64-70; 3:1.

Recorrendo a tais datas fundamentais, podemos então relacionar um número muito grande de eventos bíblicos com datas específicas do calendário. O esquema básico em que essa cronologia se enquadra é o seguinte:

Evento	Data do Calendário	Período Entre os Eventos
Desde a criação de Adão	4026 AEC
Até o início do Dilúvio	2370 AEC	1.656 anos
Até a validação do pacto abraâmico	1943 AEC	427 anos
Até o Êxodo do Egito	1513 AEC	430 anos
Até o início da construção do templo	1034 AEC	479 anos
Até a divisão do reino	997 AEC	37 anos
Até a desolação de Judá	607 AEC	390 anos
Até a volta dos judeus do exílio	537 AEC	70 anos
Até a reconstrução das muralhas de Jerusalém	455 AEC	82 anos
Até o batismo de Jesus	29 EC	483 anos
Até a atualidade	1987 EC	1.958 anos
Período total desde a criação de Adão até 1987 EC		6.012 anos

Então, qual é a base bíblica, e, em alguns casos, a história secular que apoia tal cronologia? Fornecemos aqui outros pormenores que mostram como se determina cada período alistado.

Desde a criação de Adão até o Dilúvio. Os 1.656 anos deste período são delineados em Gênesis 5:1-29; 7:6, e podem ser esquematizados como mostrado na tabela que segue:

Desde a criação de Adão até o nascimento de Sete	130 anos
Daí até o nascimento de Enos	105 anos
Até o nascimento de Quenã	90 anos
Até o nascimento de Malalel	70 anos
Até o nascimento de Jarede	65 anos
Até o nascimento de Enoque	162 anos
Até o nascimento de Metusalém	65 anos
Até o nascimento de Lameque	187 anos
Até o nascimento de Noé	182 anos
Até o Dilúvio	600 anos
Total	1.656 anos

Os dados apresentados para o período antediluviano são os encontrados no texto massorético, em que se baseiam as modernas traduções das Escrituras Hebraicas. Estes dados diferem dos encontrados na Septuaginta grega, mas a evidência de exatidão claramente favorece o texto massorético.

A obra Commentary on the Holy Scriptures (Comentário sobre as Escrituras Sagradas; Gênesis, p. 272 n.), de Lange, diz: "Mostra-se que a evidência interna está decididamente a favor do hebraico em vista da sua proporcional coerência. Os dados na LXX evidentemente seguem um plano ao qual foram ajustados. Isto não parece ser o caso no hebraico, e favorece grandemente ser ele um autêntico registro genealógico. . . . Também em bases fisiológicas, deve-se preferir o hebraico; visto que a duração da vida de modo algum exige uma humanidade tão tardia como esses dados [na Septuaginta] parecem dar a entender. . . . Os 100 anos acrescentados, em cada caso, pela Septuaginta, mostram a intenção de achegá-los a uma norma proporcional mais próxima, baseada em alguma suposta noção fisiológica. . . . A tudo isso tem de se acrescentar o fato de que o hebraico tem mais direito de ser considerado o texto original, em vista do cuidado escrupuloso, e até supersticioso, com que tem sido textualmente preservado." — Traduzido para o inglês e editado por P. Schaff, 1976.

Ao passo que historiadores hodiernos tendem a estender o período da habitação humana na terra muito mais para trás do que 4026 AEC, os fatos são decididamente contra a posição que adotam. Os milhares de anos de "pré-história" a favor dos quais argumentam dependem de especulação, conforme se pode ver da seguinte declaração do famoso cientista P. E. Klopsteg, que declarou: "Acompanhe-nos agora, se assim desejar, numa excursão especulativa à pré-história. Faça de conta que está na era em que a espécie sapiens emergiu do gênero Homo . . . avance velozmente através dos milênios, sobre os quais as informações atuais dependem na maior parte de conjectura e de interpretação, até a era dos primeiros registros escritos, dos quais se podem colher alguns fatos." (O grifo é nosso.) — Science, 30 de dezembro de 1960, p. 1914.

O período da era pós-diluviana começa com o ano 2369 AEC. Ao passo que alguns gostariam de atribuir certos escritos pictográficos ao período de 3300 a 2800 AEC (New Discoveries in Babylonia About Genesis [Novas Descobertas em Babilônia sobre Gênesis], de P. J. Wiseman, 1949, p. 36), não se trata realmente de documentos datados, e sua suposta idade baseia-se apenas em conjecturas arqueológicas.

Ao passo que às vezes se apela para datações baseadas na técnica do radiocarbono (C-14), este método de datação tem definitivamente limitações. A revista Science, de 11 de dezembro de 1959, p. 1630, noticiou: "O que está para tornar-se um exemplo clássico da 'irresponsabilidade com o C^{14}', é a extensão de 6000 anos de 11 determinações para Jarmo . . ., uma aldeia pré-histórica no nordeste do Iraque, que, à base de toda evidência arqueológica, não foi ocupada por mais de 500 anos consecutivos." De modo que não há nenhuma evidência sólida ou comprovável a favor de uma data anterior a 2369 AEC para o início da sociedade humana pós-diluviana.

Desde 2370 AEC até o pacto com Abraão. A estrutura cronológica deste período pode ser resumida como segue:

Desde o início do Dilúvio até o nascimento de Arpaxade	2 anos
Daí até o nascimento de Selá	35 anos
Até o nascimento de Éber	30 anos
Até o nascimento de Pelegue	34 anos
Até o nascimento de Reú	30 anos
Até o nascimento de Serugue	32 anos
Até o nascimento de Naor	30 anos
Até o nascimento de Tera	29 anos
Até a morte de Tera, quando Abraão tinha 75 anos	205 anos
Total	427 anos

A base para estes dados é Gênesis 11:10 a 12:4. A expressão "após o dilúvio" (Gên 11:10), usada com relação ao nascimento de Arpaxade, logicamente se referia à própria queda das águas, que marcou o início do Dilúvio (2370 AEC), em vez de simplesmente à continuação das águas sobre a terra por algum período depois. O termo hebraico para "dilúvio" também indica isso. — Veja Gên 6:17; 7:4-6, 10-12, 17; 9:11.

A data da tentativa da construção da Torre de Babel não consta no registro. Gênesis 10:25 indica que, em algum ponto durante 'os dias de Pelegue', ocorreu a divisão resultante da confusão de línguas ali. Não se segue necessariamente que este evento ocorreu quando Pelegue nasceu. A expressão "nos seus dias", de fato, indicaria que esta divisão não ocorreu por ocasião do nascimento de Pelegue ou logo depois, mas em algum tempo durante a sua vida, que se estendeu de 2269 a 2030 AEC. Se cada genitor varão pós-diluviano aos 30 anos começasse a gerar filhos na proporção de um filho a cada três anos, com a média de um filho varão a cada seis anos, e se continuasse assim até os 90 anos, então num período de cerca de 180 anos, desde o fim do Dilúvio (isto é, por volta de 2189 AEC), a população poderia ter aumentado até o total de mais de 4.000 varões adultos. Este total conservador seria suficiente para se enquadrar nas circunstâncias que cercaram a construção da torre e a dispersão dos povos.

Evidentemente, na época em que Abraão cruzou o Eufrates em caminho para a terra de Canaã, Jeová validou com ele o que passou a ser conhecido como o pacto abraâmico. Visto que a partida de Abraão de Harã e sua entrada em Canaã seguiram-se à morte de seu pai Tera, a data da validação deste pacto é fixada em 1943 AEC. — Gên 11:32; 12:1-5.

Desde 1943 AEC até o Êxodo. Êxodo 12:40, 41, declara que "a morada dos filhos de Israel, que haviam morado no Egito, foi de quatrocentos e trinta anos. E sucedeu, ao fim dos quatrocentos e trinta anos, sim, sucedeu neste mesmo dia que todos os exércitos de Jeová saíram da terra do Egito". Ao passo que a maioria das traduções verte o versículo 40 de modo a fazer que os 430 anos se apliquem inteiramente à morada no Egito, o original hebraico admite a tradução acima. Também, em Gálatas 3:16, 17, Paulo associa este período de 430 anos com o tempo entre a validação do pacto abraâmico e a celebração do pacto da Lei. Evidentemente, quando Abraão atuou segundo a promessa de Deus, cruzando o Eufrates em 1943 AEC, em caminho para Canaã, e realmente entrou nesta "terra" à qual Deus o dirigiu, foi validado o pacto abraâmico. (Gên 12:1; 15:18-21) Exatamente 430 anos depois deste evento, seus descendentes foram libertos do Egito, em 1513 AEC, e naquele mesmo ano se fez com eles o pacto da Lei. Evidência de que, desde tempos primitivos, se entendeu que o período mencionado em Êxodo 12:40, 41, começou a contar desde o tempo em que os antepassados da nação passaram a ir para Canaã é indicada pela versão da Septuaginta grega: "Mas a morada dos filhos de Israel, que moraram na terra do Egito e na terra de Canaã, [foi] de quatrocentos e trinta anos de duração."

O período desde a mudança de Abraão para Canaã até Jacó descer ao Egito foi de 215 anos. Este dado deriva dos seguintes fatos: Passaram-se 25 anos desde a partida de Abraão de Harã até o nascimento de Isaque (Gên 12:4; 21:5); desde então, até o nascimento de Jacó, decorreram 60 anos (Gên 25:26); e Jacó tinha 130 anos quando entrou no Egito (Gên 47:9); resultando assim no total de 215 anos (desde 1943 a 1728 AEC). Isto significa que os israelitas passaram então no Egito um período igual de 215 anos (desde 1728 a 1513 AEC). Que era possível os israelitas se terem multiplicado suficientemente em 215 anos para ter uma população com 600.000 "varões vigorosos" é demonstrado sob o verbete ÊXODO. — Êx 12:37.

Jeová disse a Abrão (Abraão): "Sabe com certeza de que o teu descendente [lit.: semente] se tornará residente forasteiro numa terra que não é sua; e eles terão de servir-lhes, e estes certamente os atribularão por quatrocentos anos." (Gên 15:13; veja também At 7:6, 7.) Isto foi declarado antes do nascimento do prometido herdeiro, ou "descendente [semente]", Isaque. Em 1932 AEC, nasceu a Abraão Ismael, da serva egípcia Agar, e em 1918 AEC nasceu Isaque. (Gên 16:16; 21:5) Contar para trás 400 anos, desde o Êxodo, que marcou o fim da 'atribulação' (Gên 15:14), nos leva a 1913 AEC, e naquele tempo Isaque tinha cerca de cinco anos de idade. Parece que foi então que Isaque foi desmamado, e, já sendo "residente forasteiro" numa terra que não era dele, passou a sofrer o começo da predita atribulação na forma de Ismael 'fazer caçoada' dele, quando Ismael tinha cerca de 19 anos. (Gên 21:8, 9) Embora, nos tempos modernos, caçoar Ismael do herdeiro de Abraão talvez seja encarado como sem importância, não era assim nos tempos patriarcais. Isto é evidenciado pela reação de Sara e pela aprovação de Deus dada à insistência dela de que Agar e seu filho Ismael fossem mandados embora. (Gên 21:10-13) O mero fato de que este incidente foi registrado em pormenores, no registro divino, também indica que isso marcou o começo do profetizado período de 400 anos de atribulação que só terminaria com o Êxodo. — Gál 4:29.

Desde 1513 AEC até a divisão do reino. Foi no "quadringentésimo octogésimo ano depois da saída dos filhos de Israel da terra do Egito", no quarto ano do reinado de Salomão, que foi iniciada a construção do templo em Jerusalém. (1Rs 6:1) "Quadringentésimo octogésimo" é número ordinal, representando 479 anos inteiros, mais algum tempo adicional, neste caso, um mês. Contar 479 anos desde o Êxodo (em nisã de 1513 AEC) leva-nos a 1034 AEC, iniciando-se a construção do templo no segundo mês, zive (correspondendo a parte de abril e parte de maio). Visto ter sido este o quarto ano (outro número ordinal) do governo de Salomão, seu reinado começou três anos inteiros antes, em 1037 AEC. Seu governo de 40 anos evidentemente se estendeu de nisã de 1037 a nisã de 997 AEC, ocorrendo a divisão do reino neste último ano. O esquema cronológico para este período, portanto, seria conforme indicado na tabela abaixo.

Evento	Data	Período Entre os Eventos
Desde o Êxodo	1513 AEC
até
a entrada de Israel em Canaã	1473 AEC	40 anos
até
o fim do período dos juízes e o início do reinado de Saul	1117 AEC	356 anos
até
o início do reinado de Davi	1077 AEC	40 anos
até
o início do reinado de Salomão	1037 AEC	40 anos
até
a divisão do reino	997 AEC	40 anos
Total de anos desde o Êxodo até a divisão do reino (1513 a 997 AEC)		516 anos

Estes dados têm por base textos tais como Deuteronômio 2:7; 29:5; Atos 13:21; 2 Samuel 5:4; 1 Reis 11:42, 43; 12:1-20. Alguns críticos trazem à atenção os quatro períodos de 40 anos cada um, ocorrendo neste espaço de tempo, afirmando que isto é evidência de 'mera busca de simetria' por parte dos escritores bíblicos, em vez de cronologia exata. Ao contrário, ao passo que a peregrinação dos israelitas antes da sua entrada em Canaã foi de quase exatamente 40 anos, em cumprimento do julgamento divino registrado em Números 14:33, 34 (veja Êx 12:2, 3, 6, 17; De 1:31; 8:2-4; Jos 4:19), os outros três períodos podem todos ter incluído frações. Assim, mostra-se que o reinado de Davi durou realmente 40½ anos, de acordo com 2 Samuel 5:5. Caso se tenham calculado anos de reinado destes reis à base de nisã a nisã, conforme parece ter sido o costume, isto significaria que o reinado do Rei Saul durou apenas 39½ anos, mas atribuindo-se os meses restantes até o próximo nisã ao reinado de Saul, e, assim, não incluídos oficialmente nos 40 anos de reinado de Davi. Este, pelo menos, é o costume conhecido existente entre governantes semíticos na Mesopotâmia, chamando-se os meses intermediários, entre a morte de um rei e o nisã seguinte, de "período de ascensão" do rei sucessor, mas o primeiro ano oficial de governo dele só começava a ser contado com a chegada do mês de nisã.

O espaço de tempo decorrido entre a entrada em Canaã até o fim do período dos juízes não é especificamente declarado, chegando-se a ele apenas por dedução. Quer dizer, por se subtraírem os 123 anos dos períodos conhecidos (da peregrinação no ermo, de Saul e de Davi, e dos primeiros três anos do reinado de Salomão) dos 479 anos intermediários entre o Êxodo e o quarto ano de Salomão, restam 356 anos.

Como estes 356 anos (desde a entrada de Israel em Canaã, em 1473 AEC, até o início do reinado de Saul, em 1117 AEC) devem ser repartidos não é declarado nas Escrituras. Evidentemente, porém, há uma considerável sobreposição de períodos. Por quê? Contados em sucessão, os diversos períodos de opressão, de juízes e de paz, conforme alistados no livro de Juízes, somariam 410 anos. Para estes períodos se enquadrarem no espaço de tempo de 356 anos já mencionado, alguns períodos devem ter sido coincidentes, em vez de sucessivos, e esta é a opinião da maioria dos comentadores. As circunstâncias descritas nos relatos bíblicos ajustam-se a esta explicação. As opressões envolviam diferentes regiões daquela terra e afetavam tribos diferentes. (MAPA, Vol. 1, p. 743) De modo que a expressão "o país teve sossego", usada depois dos relatos de vitórias dos israelitas sobre seus opressores, talvez não abrangesse em todo caso a região inteira ocupada por todas as 12 tribos, mas pode aplicar-se à parte primariamente afetada por determinada opressão. — Jz 3:11, 30; 5:31; 8:28; compare isso com Jos 14:13-15.

Em Atos, capítulo 13, o apóstolo Paulo recapitulou os tratos de Deus com Israel desde a 'escolha dos seus antepassados' e durante o período no Egito, o Êxodo, a peregrinação no ermo, a conquista de Canaã e a distribuição da terra, e depois declarou: "Tudo isso durante cerca de quatrocentos e cinquenta anos. E, depois destas coisas, deu-lhes juízes, até Samuel, o profeta." (At 13:20) Considerável mal-entendido resultou da tradução deste texto na versão Almeida (revista e corrigida), que reza: "E, depois disto por quase quatrocentos e cinquenta anos, lhes deu juízes, até ao profeta Samuel." Entretanto, os manuscritos mais antigos (inclusive o Sinaítico, o Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209 e o Alexandrino), bem como a maioria das traduções modernas (tais como ALA, BJ, BLH, e outras; vv. 19, 20, CBC, IBB), favorecem todos a primeira tradução, que mostra que o período dos juízes ocorreu depois dos 450 anos. Visto que o período de "cerca de quatrocentos e cinquenta anos" teve seu início com a 'escolha dos antepassados' de Israel por Deus, parece que teve início no ano 1918 AEC, com o nascimento de Isaque, a 'semente' original prometida a Abraão. Portanto, terminaria aproximadamente em 1467 AEC, quando a conquista inicial de Canaã chegou ao seu término, permitindo passar-se à distribuição de terras. Visto que se declara que o número é aproximado, a diferença de um ou dois anos não teria importância.

Desde 997 AEC até a desolação de Jerusalém. Uma ajuda útil para se saber a duração geral deste período dos reis é encontrada em Ezequiel 4:1-7, na simulação do sítio de Jerusalém, realizada pelo profeta Ezequiel a mando de Deus. Ezequiel devia deitar-se sobre o seu lado esquerdo por 390 dias, a fim de "levar o erro da casa de Israel", e sobre o seu lado direito por 40 dias, a fim de "levar o erro da casa de Judá", e mostrou-se que cada dia representava um ano. Os dois períodos (de 390 anos e de 40 anos) assim simbolizados evidentemente representavam a duração da tolerância de Jeová para com os dois reinos no proceder idólatra deles. O entendimento judaico desta profecia, conforme apresentado na obra Soncino Books of the Bible (Livros da Bíblia, de Soncino; comentário sobre Ezequiel, pp. 20, 21), é: "A culpa do Reino Setentrional se estendeu por um período de 390 anos ([de acordo com] Seder Olam [a crônica pós-exílica mais antiga preservada na língua hebraica], [e os Rabinos] Rashi e Ibn Ezra). Abarbanel, citado por Malbim, calcula o período da culpa de Samaria desde o tempo em que ocorreu o cisma, sob Roboão . . . até a queda de Jerusalém. . . . O direito [lado em que Ezequiel se deitou] indica o sul, i.e., o Reino de Judá, situado ao sul ou à direita. . . . A corrupção de Judá durou quarenta anos, começando logo depois da queda de Samaria. De acordo com Malbim, o tempo é contado a partir do décimo terceiro ano do reinado de Josias . . . quando Jeremias começou seu ministério. (Jer. i. 2)." — Editada por A. Cohen, Londres, 1950.

Desde a divisão do reino, em 997 AEC, até a queda de Jerusalém, em 607 AEC, passaram-se 390 anos. Embora seja verdade que Samaria, a capital do reino setentrional, já tinha caído diante da Assíria em 740 AEC, no sexto ano de Ezequias (2Rs 18:9, 10), é provável que parte da população já tivesse fugido para o reino meridional antes do avanço dos assírios. (Note também a situação em Judá depois da divisão do reino, conforme descrita em 2Cr 10:16, 17.) No entanto, o que é mais importante, o fato de que Jeová Deus continuou a manter em vista os israelitas do exilado reino setentrional, e que as mensagens dos Seus profetas continuaram a incluí-los muito tempo depois da queda de Samaria, mostra que os interesses deles ainda estavam sendo representados na capital, Jerusalém, e que a queda desta, em 607 AEC, foi expressão do julgamento de Jeová não apenas contra Judá, mas contra a nação de Israel como um todo. (Je 3:11-22; 11:10-12, 17; Ez 9:9, 10) Quando a cidade caiu, a esperança da nação inteira (com exceção dos poucos que mantiveram a verdadeira fé) entrou em colapso. — Ez 37:11-14, 21, 22.

Na tabela que segue, adere-se a este período de 390 anos como válido guia cronológico. A soma dos anos alistados referentes a todos os reinos dos reis de Judá, desde Roboão até Zedequias, apresenta o total de 393 anos. Ao passo que alguns cronólogos bíblicos procuram sincronizar os dados a respeito dos reis por meio de numerosas corregências e "interregnos" do lado de Judá, parece necessário mostrar apenas uma corregência. Trata-se do caso de Jeorão, a respeito de quem se declara (pelo menos no texto massorético e em alguns dos manuscritos mais antigos da Bíblia) ter-se tornado rei "enquanto Jeosafá era rei de Judá", fornecendo assim alguma base para se presumir uma corregência. (2Rs 8:16) Deste modo, o período geral cai dentro do limite dos 390 anos.

Não se pretende que a tabela seja encarada como cronologia absoluta, mas, antes, como apresentação sugerida dos reinados dos dois reinos. Os antigos escritores inspirados tratavam de fatos e de números bem conhecidos por eles e pelo povo judeu de então, e os diferentes conceitos cronológicos adotados pelos escritores em certos pontos não apresentavam problema. Isso não se dá hoje, e por isso podemos satisfazer-nos com simplesmente apresentar um arranjo que se harmoniza razoavelmente com o registro bíblico.

Desde 607 AEC até o retorno do exílio. A duração deste período é fixada pelo próprio decreto de Deus a respeito de Judá, de que "toda esta terra terá de tornar-se um lugar devastado, um assombro, e estas nações terão de servir ao rei de Babilônia por setenta anos". — Je 25:8-11.

A profecia bíblica não permite a aplicação desse período de 70 anos a qualquer outro tempo, senão ao situado entre a desolação de Judá, acompanhada pela destruição de Jerusalém, e o retorno dos exilados judaicos à sua pátria, em resultado do decreto de Ciro. Especifica claramente que os 70 anos seriam anos de devastação da terra de Judá. O profeta Daniel entendeu a profecia assim, porque declarou: "Eu, Daniel, compreendi pelos livros o número de anos a respeito dos quais viera a haver a palavra de Jeová para Jeremias, o profeta, para se cumprirem as devastações de Jerusalém, a saber, setenta anos." (Da 9:2) Depois de descrever a conquista de Jerusalém por Nabucodonosor, 2 Crônicas 36:20, 21, declara: "Além disso, ele levou cativos a Babilônia os que foram deixados pela espada, e eles vieram a ser servos dele e dos seus filhos até o começo do reinado da realeza da Pérsia; para se cumprir a palavra de Jeová pela boca de Jeremias, até que a terra tivesse saldado os seus sábados. Todos os dias em que jazia desolada, guardava o sábado, para cumprir setenta anos."

Jerusalém passou a sofrer o sítio final no 9.º ano de Zedequias (609 AEC), e a cidade caiu no seu 11.º ano (607 AEC), correspondendo ao 19.º ano de governo real de Nabucodonosor (contado a partir do seu ano de ascensão, em 625 AEC). (2Rs 25:1-8) No quinto mês daquele ano (o mês de ab, correspondente a partes de julho e de agosto), a cidade foi incendiada, as muralhas foram demolidas e a maioria do povo foi levada ao exílio. No entanto, permitiu-se que "alguns do povo da terra, de condição humilde", permanecessem ali, e estes ficaram até o assassínio de Gedalias, a quem Nabucodonosor designou, fugindo depois para o Egito, deixando assim, por fim, Judá completamente desolada. (2Rs 25:9-12, 22-26) Isto ocorreu no sétimo mês, etanim (ou tisri, correspondendo a partes de setembro e de outubro). Portanto, a contagem dos 70 anos de desolação deve ter começado por volta de 1.º de outubro de 607 AEC, terminando em 537 AEC. Foi por volta do sétimo mês deste último ano que os primeiros judeus repatriados chegaram novamente a Judá, 70 anos desde que começou a desolação total da terra. — 2Cr 36:21-23; Esd 3:1.

Desde 537 AEC até a conversão de Cornélio. No segundo ano após o retorno do exílio (536 AEC), foi novamente lançado o alicerce do templo em Jerusalém, mas o templo reconstruído só ficou pronto no sexto ano do reinado de Dario I (persa). (Esd 3:8-10; 6:14, 15) Visto que Dario só se estabeleceu em Babilônia depois de derrotar o rebelde Nabucodonosor III em dezembro de 522, e pouco depois capturá-lo e matá-lo em Babilônia, pode-se encarar o ano de 522 AEC como ano de ascensão do Rei Dario I. Seu primeiro ano de reinado, portanto, começou na primavera setentrional de 521 AEC. (Babylonian Chronology, 626 B.C.–A.D. 75, p. 30) Assim, o sexto ano de Dario começou em 12 de abril de 516 AEC e continuou até o fim de março de 515 AEC. Nesta base, a reconstrução do templo de Jeová por Zorobabel foi completada em 6 de março de 515 AEC.

A próxima data de grande importância é o 20.º ano de Artaxerxes (Longímano), o ano em que Neemias recebeu permissão para ir e reconstruir Jerusalém. (Ne 2:1, 5-8) O motivo de se preferir a data de 455 AEC para tal ano, em contraste com a data popular de 445 AEC, é considerado no artigo PÉRSIA, PERSAS. Os eventos desse ano, envolvendo a reconstrução de Jerusalém e da sua muralha, marcam o ponto de partida da profecia a respeito das "setenta semanas" de Daniel 9:24-27. Estas semanas são claramente "semanas de anos" (Da 9:24, BJ, CBC, MC notas), totalizando 490 anos. Conforme demonstrado sob o artigo SETENTA SEMANAS, a profecia apontava para o aparecimento de Jesus como o Messias no ano 29 EC; sua morte "na metade da semana", ou no meio da última semana de anos, quer dizer, em 33 EC; e o fim do período de favor especial de Deus para com os judeus, em 36 EC. Assim, as 70 semanas de anos terminaram com a conversão de Cornélio, 490 anos contados a partir do ano 455 AEC. — At 10:30-33, 44-48; 11:1.

O aparecimento de Jesus como o Messias se deu exatamente no ano predito, talvez cerca de seis meses depois de João, o Batizador, ter começado a sua pregação "no décimo quinto ano do reinado de Tibério César". (Lu 1:36; 3:1, 2, 21-23) Visto que o Senado romano nomeou Tibério imperador em 15 de setembro de 14 EC, seu 15.º ano estendeu-se desde a última parte de 28 EC e até 29 EC adentro. (Veja TIBÉRIO.) Portanto, a evidência indica que o batismo e a unção de Jesus ocorreram no outono setentrional do ano 29 EC.

Visto que Jesus tinha "cerca de trinta anos de idade" por ocasião do seu batismo em 29 EC (Lu 3:23), seu nascimento se deu 30 anos antes, ou por volta do outono do ano 2 AEC. Ele nasceu durante o reinado de César Augusto e a governança síria de Quirino. (Lu 2:1, 2) O governo de Augusto estendeu-se de 27 AEC até 14 EC. O senador romano P. Sulpício Quirino foi duas vezes governador da Síria, a primeira vez evidentemente depois de P. Quintílio Varo, cujo termo como legado da Síria terminou em 4 AEC. Alguns peritos colocam a primeira governança de Quirino em 3-2 AEC. (Veja REGISTRO.) Herodes, o Grande, era então rei da Judeia, e já vimos que há evidência indicando o ano 1 AEC como provável tempo da sua morte. Assim, todas as evidências disponíveis, e especialmente as referências bíblicas, indicam o outono setentrional de 2 AEC como época do nascimento humano do Filho de Deus.

DATAS DE DESTAQUE
Durante o Período dos Reis de Judá e de Israel

O REINO DAS DOZE TRIBOS

	Datas AEC
SAUL começou a reinar sobre todas as 12 tribos (40 anos)	1117
Profeta: Samuel
Sumos sacerdotes: Aijá, Aimeleque
Nascimento de Davi	1107
Samuel completou o livro de Juízes	c. 1100
Samuel completou o livro de Rute	c. 1090
Completado o livro de 1 Samuel	c. 1078
DAVI começou a reinar sobre Judá, em Hébron (40)	1077
Profetas: Natã, Gade, Zadoque
Sumo sacerdote: Abiatar
Davi tornou-se rei sobre todo o Israel; fez de Jerusalém sua capital	1070
Gade e Natã completaram 2 Samuel	c. 1040
SALOMÃO começou a reinar (40)	1037
Profetas: Natã, Aijá, Ido
Sumos sacerdotes: Abiatar, Zadoque
Iniciada a construção do templo de Salomão	1034
Completado o templo construído por Salomão em Jerusalém	1027
Salomão escreveu o Cântico de Salomão	c. 1020
Salomão escreveu o livro de Eclesiastes	a. 1000

NOTA: Esta tabela destina-se a fornecer um esboço útil dos eventos principais relacionados com os reis de Judá e de Israel. Deixou-se que o registro bíblico a respeito dos anos que os reis de Judá governaram regesse a fixação de outras datas. As datas apresentadas para o governo dos reis de Judá vão da primavera setentrional do ano mencionado, até a primavera do ano seguinte. As datas para os reinados dos reis do reino de Israel foram coordenadas com as de Judá. Proveem-se na Bíblia diversos sincronismos, e estes foram tomados em conta para se chegar a essas datas.

Sumos sacerdotes e profetas mencionados no registro bíblico em conexão com os diversos reis estão alistados aqui. Mas a lista de modo algum é completa. O sacerdócio arônico oficiava primeiro no tabernáculo e depois no templo, evidentemente sem interrupção na linhagem até o tempo do exílio babilônico. E a Bíblia indica que, além dos profetas mencionados, muitos outros serviram neste cargo sagrado. — 1Rs 18:4; 2Cr 36:15, 16.

REINO DE JUDÁ		REINO DE ISRAEL
ROBOÃO começou a reinar (17 anos); nação dividida em dois reinos	997	JEROBOÃO começou a reinar sobre as 10 tribos setentrionais, pelo visto primeiro em Siquém, depois em Tirza (22 anos)
Profetas: Semaías, Ido		Profeta: Aijá
Sisaque, do Egito, invadiu Judá e apoderou-se dos tesouros do templo em Jerusalém	993
ABIAS (ABIJÃO) começou a reinar (3)	980
Profeta: Ido
ASA evidentemente começou a reinar (41), mas seu primeiro ano de reinado conta a partir de 977	978
Profetas: Azarias, Odede, Hanani
	c. 976	NADABE começou a reinar (2)
	c. 975	BAASA assassinou Nadabe e começou então a reinar (24)
		Profeta: Jeú (filho de Hanani)
Zerá, o etíope, veio guerrear contra Judá	967
	c. 952	ELÁ começou a reinar (2)
	c. 951	ZINRI, chefe militar, assassinou Elá e reinou então (7 dias)
	c. 951	ONRI, chefe do exército, começou a reinar (12)
	c. 951	Tibni tornou-se rei sobre parte do povo, dividindo ainda mais a nação
	c. 947	Onri vence oposição de Tibni e tornou-se único governante em Israel
	c. 945	Onri comprou o monte de Samaria e construiu ali sua capital
	c. 940	ACABE começou a reinar (22)
		Profetas: Elias, Micaías

REINO DE JUDÁ	Datas AEC	REINO DE ISRAEL
JEOSAFÁ evidentemente começou a governar (25), mas o seu primeiro ano de reinado conta a partir de 936	937
Profetas: Jeú (filho de Hanani), Eliézer, Jaaziel
Sumo sacerdote: Amarias
	c. 920	ACAZIAS, filho de Acabe, 'tornou-se rei' (2); evidentemente seu pai ainda vivia;
		Os anos de governo de Acazias talvez contem a partir de c. 919
		Profeta: Elias
Jeorão, filho de Jeosafá, ficou de algum modo associado com seu pai no governo	c. 919
	c. 917	JEORÃO, filho de Acabe, começou a governar como rei único de Israel (12); mas, pelo menos em um texto, o breve reinado do seu irmão Acazias, que morreu sem filhos varões, talvez também fosse creditado a Jeorão
		Profeta: Eliseu
JEORÃO tornou-se oficialmente corregente de Jeosafá, ponto em que se pode contar o reinado de Jeorão (8)	913
Profeta: Elias
Jeosafá morreu e Jeorão tornou-se governante único	c. 911
ACAZIAS, filho de Jeorão, começou a governar (1) embora talvez fosse ungido para o reinado em c. 907	c. 906
Sumo sacerdote: Jeoiada
ATALIA usurpou o trono (6)	c. 905	JEÚ, chefe militar, assassinou Jeorão e então começou a governar (28); mas parece que seus anos de reinado só contam a partir de c. 904
		Profeta: Eliseu
JEOÁS, filho de Acazias, começou a reinar (40)	898
Sumo sacerdote: Jeoiada
	876	JEOACAZ começou a reinar (17)
	c. 862	Jeoás, evidentemente, ficou associado no reinado com seu pai, Jeoacaz
	c. 859	JEOÁS, filho de Jeoacaz, começou a governar como rei único de Israel (16)
		Profeta: Eliseu
AMAZIAS começou a reinar (29)	858
Jeoás, de Israel, capturou Amazias, brechou a muralha de Jerusalém, e levou tesouros do templo	d. 858
	c. 844	JEROBOÃO II começou a reinar (41)
		Profetas: Jonas, Oseias, Amós
		Escrito o livro de Jonas
UZIAS (AZARIAS) começou a reinar (52)	829
Profetas: Oseias, Joel (?), Isaías
Sumo sacerdote: Azarias (II)
Possível escrita do livro de Joel	c. 820
Uzias 'tornou-se rei' em algum sentido especial, possivelmente então livre do domínio de Jeroboão II	c. 818
Escrito o livro de Amós	c. 804
	c. 803	ZACARIAS 'começou a reinar' em algum sentido, mas evidentemente, o reinado só foi plenamente confirmado como seu em c. 792 (6 meses)
	c. 791	SALUM assassinou Zacarias e então reinou (1 mês)
	c. 791	MENAÉM assassinou Salum e então começou a governar, mas parece que seus anos de reinado só contam a partir de c. 790 (10)
	c. 780	PECAÍAS começou a reinar (2)
	c. 778	PECA assassinou Pecaías e então começou a reinar (20)
		Profeta: Odede

REINO DE JUDÁ	Datas AEC	REINO DE ISRAEL
JOTÃO começou a reinar (16)	777
Profetas: Miqueias, Oseias, Isaías
ACAZ, evidentemente, começou a reinar (16), mas o seu primeiro ano de reinado só conta a partir de 761	762
Profetas: Miqueias, Oseias, Isaías
Sumo sacerdote: Urija (?)
Acaz, evidentemente, tornou-se tributário de Tiglate-Pileser III da Assíria	c. 759
	c. 758	OSEIAS assassinou Peca e então 'começou a reinar' em lugar dele, mas parece que seu controle ficou firmemente estabelecido ou, possivelmente, ele recebeu o apoio do monarca assírio, Tiglate-Pileser III, em c. 748 (9 anos)
EZEQUIAS evidentemente começou a governar (29), mas o seu primeiro ano de reinado só conta a partir de 745	746
Profetas: Miqueias, Oseias, Isaías
Sumo sacerdote: Azarias (II ou III)
	d. 745	Completado o livro de Oseias
	742	O exército assírio começou a sitiar Samaria
	740	A Assíria conquistou Samaria, subjugou Israel; fim do reino setentrional
Senaqueribe invadiu Judá	732
Completado o livro de Isaías	d. 732
Completado o livro de Miqueias	a. 717
Completada a compilação de Provérbios	c. 717
MANASSÉS começou a reinar (55)	716
AMOM começou a reinar (2)	661
JOSIAS começou a reinar (31)	659
Profetas: Sofonias, Jeremias, a profetisa Hulda
Sumo sacerdote: Hilquias
Escrito o livro de Sofonias	a. 648
Escrito o livro de Naum	a. 632	NOTA: Após a captura de Samaria, as dez tribos do reino de Israel foram levadas ao exílio. Mas a terra não foi deixada desolada, como no caso de Judá após a destruição de Jerusalém em 607 AEC. O rei da Assíria transferiu pessoas de Babilônia, Cuta, Ava, Hamate e Sefarvaim para morarem nas cidades de Israel. Os descendentes deles ainda se encontravam ali quando os judeus retornaram a Jerusalém, em 537 AEC, para reconstruir o templo. — 2Rs 17:6, 24; Esd 4:1, 2.
JEOACAZ reinou (3 meses)	628
JEOIAQUIM começou a reinar, tributário do Egito (11)	628
Profetas: Habacuque (?), Jeremias
Possível escrita do livro de Habacuque	c. 628
Nabucodonosor II torna Jeoiaquim tributário de Babilônia	620
JOAQUIM começou a reinar (3 meses, 10 dias)	618
Nabucodonosor II levou cativos judeus, e tesouros do templo, para Babilônia	617
ZEDEQUIAS começou a reinar (11)	617
Profetas: Jeremias, Ezequiel
Sumo sacerdote: Seraías
Nabucodonosor II invadiu novamente Judá; começou sítio de Jerusalém	609
Brechadas as muralhas de Jerusalém no 9.º dia do 4.º mês	607
Incendiada Jerusalém e o templo no 10.º dia do 5.º mês	607
Últimos judeus abandonaram Judá em meados do 7.º mês	607
Jeremias escreveu o livro de Lamentações	607
Escrito o livro de Obadias	c. 607

O posterior período apostólico. É possível fixar datas aproximadas para diversos eventos ocorridos neste período. A profecia sobre uma grande fome, proferida pelo profeta cristão Ágabo, e a subsequente perseguição instigada por Herodes Agripa I, resultando na morte do apóstolo Tiago e no encarceramento de Pedro, evidentemente ocorreram por volta de 44 EC. (At 11:27-30; 12:1-4) Herodes Agripa morreu naquele ano, e existe evidência que indica que a fome predita ocorreu por volta do ano 46 EC. Esta última data provavelmente assinala o tempo da subministração de socorros executada por Paulo e Barnabé. — At 12:25.

A primeira visita de Paulo a Corinto pode ser datada mediante o proconsulado de Gálio. (At 18:1, 11-18) Conforme explicado no artigo GÁLIO, este proconsulado parece ter decorrido do verão setentrional de 51 EC até o verão de 52 EC, embora alguns peritos prefiram 52/53 EC. Assim, os 18 meses de atividade de Paulo em Corinto provavelmente começaram no outono de 50 EC, terminando na primavera de 52 EC. Isto é adicionalmente confirmado pelo fato de dois dos associados de Paulo em Corinto, Áquila e Priscila, terem chegado ali pouco antes da Itália, por causa do edito do imperador Cláudio, exigindo que todos os judeus saíssem de Roma. (At 18:2) Paulo Orósio, historiador do quinto século, declara que esta ordem foi dada no nono ano de Cláudio, isto é, em 49 ou no começo de 50 EC.

Os dois anos que Paulo passou na prisão em Cesareia ocorreram durante os últimos dois anos da governança de Félix, sendo Paulo depois enviado a Roma pelo sucessor de Félix, Pórcio Festo. (At 21:33; 23:23-35; 24:27) A data da ascensão de Festo é um tanto incerta, visto que nem todas as evidências históricas levam à mesma conclusão. Todavia, o ano 58 EC parece ser o mais provável. A subsequente chegada de Paulo a Roma pode ser fixada entre 59 e 61 EC.

O grande incêndio que assolou Roma ocorreu em julho de 64 EC e foi seguido por feroz perseguição movida aos cristãos, às instâncias de Nero. É provável que o segundo encarceramento de Paulo e sua execução tenham ocorrido pouco depois. (2Ti 1:16; 4:6, 7) O exílio de João para a ilha de Patmos é em geral considerado como tendo ocorrido durante o reinado do imperador Domiciano. (Re 1:9) A perseguição movida aos cristãos atingiu o auge durante o governo dele (81-96 EC), especialmente nos últimos três anos. O conceito tradicional é de que João foi solto do exílio após a morte de Domiciano, e de que ele faleceu em Éfeso, por volta do fim do primeiro século EC. Assim, escrever João as suas epístolas, por volta deste tempo, completou o cânon bíblico e encerrou o período apostólico.

CRUZ. Veja ESTACA DE TORTURA.

CUBE. Povo não identificado, incluído entre os aliados do Egito. Cube está alistado junto com a Etiópia, Pute, Lude e "os filhos da terra do pacto" (que talvez se refira aos israelitas que fugiram para o Egito após o assassínio de Gedalias, em 607 AEC), todos eles destinados a 'cair pela própria espada'. (Ez 30:4, 5) Alguns acham que Cube se refira à Líbia, e é vertido assim em algumas traduções. — LXX; RS.

CUCHE. Veja CUS.

CUCHITA. Veja CUSITA.

CUCO [hebr., plural: bar·bu·rím]. Na Bíblia, este nome ocorre apenas uma vez, em 1 Reis 4:23, onde a lista das provisões diárias de alimentos para a corte de Salomão inclui "cucos [bar·bu·rím]". (BJ; NM) Ao passo que outras versões (Al, ALA, MC) rezam aqui "aves", bar·bu·rím parece referir-se a um tipo específico de ave, em vez de simplesmente ser um termo geral. Embora alguns a tenham identificado com o capão, com a galinha d'angola ou com o ganso, o lexicógrafo W. Baumgartner (Hebräisches und Aramäisches Lexikon zum Alten Testament [Léxico Hebraico e Aramaico do Velho Testamento], Leiden, 1967, p. 147) sugere o "cuco", e isto parece ser indicado pelo nome árabe desta ave, abu burbur.

Tanto o cuco comum (Cuculus canorus) como o cuco-rabilongo (Clamator glandarius) passam pela Palestina na sua migração para o N, chegando ali no começo de março. O cuco é uma ave de tamanho moderado, parecendo-se a um pequeno gavião, com bico ligeiramente curvo, afiado e pontudo. Os cucos costumam ter cor inconspícua, tal como cinza-claro, ou de marrom-claro a marrom-avermelhado, ou preta. As partes inferiores frequentemente são esbranquiçadas, com estreitas listras pretas.

Ao passo que alguns consideram o cuco como ave um tanto pequena para ser usada no cardápio de Salomão, deve-se notar que mesmo pardais depenados eram antigamente vendidos nos mercados do Oriente Médio. (Mt 10:29) Além disso, esses cucos eram "cevados", e sobre esses diz The American Cyclopædia (A Ciclopédia Americana): "No outono estão gordinhos e são muito apreciados como alimento; os antigos eram grandes apreciadores deles, e supunha-se que a carne deles tinha valiosas propriedades medicinais." — 1883, Vol. V, p. 557.

O cuco não come carniça, nem é ave de rapina, mas é valioso insetívoro. Era legalmente "puro" e próprio para uso na mesa real de Salomão. Embora "o cuco" esteja incluído na versão Almeida, revista e corrigida, entre as aves impuras, em Levítico 11:16 e em Deuteronômio 14:15, tal tradução (da palavra hebraica shá·hhaf) não é mais considerada aceitável. — Veja GAIVOTA.

CULPA. Veja CAUSA JURÍDICA.

CULPA DE SANGUE. A palavra hebraica para "sangue" (dam; plural: da·mím) às vezes refere-se à culpa incorrida por se derramar sangue inocente, e assim é traduzida por "culpa de sangue". — Êx 22:2 n.; 1Rs 2:37 n.

"Mãos que derramam sangue inocente" têm sido uma das coisas mais detestáveis para Jeová, desde que o sangue do justo Abel clamou do solo. (Pr 6:16, 17; Gên 4:10; Sal 5:6) Também os homens já por muito tempo estão apercebidos da santidade do sangue; quando Noé e sua família saíram da arca, foram informados das graves consequências que sobreviriam àqueles que tivessem culpa de sangue. — Gên 9:6; 37:21, 22; 42:22.

No devido tempo, divulgaram-se leis que especificavam o que constituía crime que acarretava a morte, e, deste modo, todos podiam evitar aquilo que faria recair culpa de sangue sobre a sua própria cabeça. Decretou-se legislação adicional como salvaguarda preventiva para que não se derramasse sangue inocente. Tinham de construir parapeitos na beira dos terraços das casas, para que ninguém caísse dali. (De 22:8) O homem tinha de tomar medidas para impedir que seu touro escornasse alguém. (Êx 21:29) Se um ladrão fosse morto enquanto arrombava à noite, não havia culpa de sangue; mas, se fosse morto à luz do dia, o caso era diferente. (Êx 22:2, 3) Estabeleceram-se cidades de refúgio para proteger o homicida involuntário contra o vingador do sangue. (Núm 35:25; De 19:9, 10; Jos 20:2, 3; veja VINGADOR DO SANGUE.) Se Ezequiel não cumprisse o seu dever como vigia de Israel, o sangue dos habitantes recairia sobre ele. (Ez 3:18, 20; 33:6, 8) Com isto em mente, podemos compreender o que o apóstolo Paulo queria indicar ao dizer que estava isento da culpa de sangue. — At 18:6; 20:26.

A Bíblia alista tanto aqueles que estavam livres da culpa de sangue como os que não estavam livres dela, e estes servem muito bem de exemplos de aviso. Houve o caso de Saul, que em certa ocasião escapou da culpa de sangue por se refrear de matar Davi; no entanto, mais tarde, Saul trouxe culpa de sangue sobre toda a sua casa quando tolamente matou alguns dos gibeonitas. (1Sa 19:5, 6; 2Sa 21:1) Houve também outros que de um ou outro modo tiveram culpa de sangue. (Jz 9:24; 2Sa 1:16; 4:6-12) Davi, por outro lado, escapou de tal culpa quando acatou o aviso de Jeová dado a ele por meio de Abigail. (1Sa 25:24-26, 31, 33) A cidade de Jerusalém foi destruída em 607 AEC por motivo de grave culpa de sangue. (Ez 22:2-4; 23:37, 45) Os líderes religiosos falsos dos dias de Jesus não podiam negar sua culpa de sangue assim como tampouco podiam os líderes do tempo de Jeremias, porque, em ambos os casos, suas saias estavam vermelhas do sangue dos fiéis a Jeová. (Je 2:34; Mt 23:35, 36; 27:24, 25; Lu 11:50, 51) A grande "meretriz", Babilônia, a Grande, é tão culpada de sangue, que se diz que ela está embriagada com o sangue do povo de Jeová. — Re 17:5, 6; 18:24.

Deveras, esses culpados de sangue não merecem nem viver metade da sua vida, como disse Davi. (Sal 55:23) Assim como Davi, todos devem igualmente orar para que Jeová os livre tanto da culpa de sangue como dos culpados de sangue. (Sal 51:14; 59:2; 139:19) Conforme predisse a profecia de Revelação, em breve virá o tempo em que um poderoso coro de louvor ascenderá a Jeová, porque os últimos elementos de Babilônia, a Grande, terão sido destruídos e o sangue de todos esses inocentes terá sido vingado para sempre. — Re 19:1, 2.

As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs delineiam três modos distintos em que o cristão poderia ter culpa de sangue perante Deus: (1) por derramamento de sangue, assassinato — isto incluiria os que ativa ou tacitamente apoiam as atividades duma organização culpada de sangue (tal como Babilônia, a Grande [Re 17:6; 18:2, 4], ou outras organizações que derramaram muito sangue inocente [Re 16:5, 6; compare isso com Is 26:20, 21]); (2) por, de alguma forma, comer ou beber sangue (At 15:20); e (3) por deixar de pregar as boas novas do Reino, retendo assim as informações salvadoras de vida que elas contêm. — At 18:6; 20:26, 27; compare isso com Ez 33:6-8.

CUM. Uma das cidades do Rei Hadadezer, de Zobá, da qual Davi tomou grande quantidade de cobre, mais tarde usado na construção do templo. (1Cr 18:8) No relato paralelo, em 2 Samuel 8:8, aparece em seu lugar o nome Berotai, e talvez se refira ao mesmo lugar. Outros sugerem que Kuna, em Ras Baʽalbek, 43 km ao NE de Bereitan, localização sugerida de Berotai, possivelmente deva ser identificada com a Cum bíblica. — Veja BEROTA, BEROTAI.

CUMPRIMENTO. Veja ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS.

CURA. O restabelecimento da saúde dos doentes; tornar sadio, ou inteiro, aquilo que foi quebrado ou ferido; sarar diversas doenças e defeitos; fazer a pessoa retornar ao estado de bem-estar geral. O verbo hebraico ra·fá' e o verbo grego i·á·o·mai são as palavras principais, na Bíblia, que descrevem essa cura, tanto em sentido literal como figurativo.

O verbo grego the·ra·peú·o é traduzido por 'curar'. (Mt 4:23, 24) Às vezes, a cura era um processo gradual; em outras ocasiões, era instantânea.

Entre as bênçãos que Jeová concedeu a todos os humanos está a faculdade regeneradora do seu organismo físico, a capacidade do corpo de curar a si mesmo quando ferido ou enfermo. O médico talvez recomende certas medidas para acelerar a recuperação, mas, na realidade, é a faculdade recuperadora dada por Deus, inerente ao corpo, que efetua a cura. Por isso, o salmista Davi reconheceu que, embora ele nascesse imperfeito, seu Criador era capaz de sustentá-lo durante enfermidades e curá-lo de todos os seus males. (Sal 51:5; 41:1-3; 103:2-4) Jeová restabeleceu a saúde física do afligido Jó (Jó 42:10) e Ele proveu também curas físicas para o seu povo Israel. — Êx 15:26.

A respeito de Jeová está escrito que ele tanto fere como cura, e que faz isso literal e figurativamente. Portanto, para ele há um tempo para ferir e um tempo para curar. (De 32:39; compare isso com Ec 3:1, 3.) O infiel Jeorão, rei de Judá, por exemplo, foi punido por Jeová com um distúrbio físico, intestinal, para o qual não havia cura. (2Cr 21:16, 18, 19) Moisés reconheceu que foi Jeová quem golpeou Miriã com lepra; por isso, suplicou ao Único que podia curá-la, dizendo: "Ó Deus, por favor! Sara-a, por favor!" (Núm 12:10, 13) Na questão de ter filhos, Jeová curou o Rei Abimeleque, sua esposa e suas escravas, depois de ter passado a crise envolvendo Sara e o descendente, ou semente, da promessa. — Gên 20:17, 18.

Na Bíblia, o quebrantamento espiritual, mais do que o quebrantamento físico, e, por sua vez, a cura espiritual, são assuntos de especial significância. Traz-se à atenção a responsabilidade dos líderes do Israel natural nestes assuntos. "Desde o profeta até mesmo ao sacerdote, cada um [agia] de modo falso" nos dias de Jeremias, fingindo ao mesmo tempo sarar o quebrantamento do povo de Deus, afirmando que tudo estava bem. (Je 6:13, 14; 8:11) Neste respeito, eram muito semelhantes aos consoladores de Jó, "médicos sem valor algum". — Jó 13:4.

Em poucos casos, objetos inanimados eram curados, no sentido de serem recuperados outra vez, assim como o altar derrubado que Elias restaurou. (1Rs 18:30) Também, o profeta Eliseu curou as águas perto de Jericó, de modo que não mais causaram abortos. (2Rs 2:19-22) Jeremias, porém, destroçou a botija de oleiro tão completamente, que não podia ser consertada, isto é, estava além de restauração, e deste modo proveu uma bela ilustração. "Assim", declarou Jeová, "destroçarei este povo e esta cidade, como alguém destroça o vaso do oleiro de modo que não possa ser consertado [uma forma de ra·fá'; literalmente: curado]". — Je 19:11; compare isso com 2Cr 36:15-17.

Jesus e Seus Cocuradores. Jesus Cristo reconheceu que 'ensinar e pregar as boas novas do reino' era de importância primária no seu ministério, e que 'curar toda sorte de moléstias e toda sorte de enfermidades entre o povo' era secundário. Era por isso que sentia pena das multidões, primariamente "porque andavam esfoladas e empurradas dum lado para outro como ovelhas sem pastor". — Mt 4:23; 9:35, 36; Lu 9:11.

Este Grande Instrutor teve também compaixão para com as multidões que o seguiam porque esperavam que lhes curasse os padecimentos físicos. (Mt 12:15; 14:14; 19:2; Lu 5:15) Sua obra de curas milagrosas servia de sinal visível para a sua geração e fornecia evidência adicional do seu messiado, conforme profetizado. (Mt 8:16, 17) Prefigurava também as bênçãos de cura concedidas à humanidade sob o governo do Reino de Deus. (Re 21:3, 4) Jesus, em sentido bem real, curou e restabeleceu a saúde de muitas pessoas — coxos, aleijados, cegos, mudos (Mt 15:30, 31), epilépticos, paralíticos (Mt 4:24), uma mulher que sofria de hemorragia (Mr 5:25-29), alguém com uma mão ressequida (Mr 3:3-5), um homem com hidropisia (Lu 14:2-4), e, em muitas ocasiões, os possessos por demônios foram libertos da sua escravização e servidão satânica. — Mt 12:22; 15:22-28; 17:15, 18; Mr 1:34; Lu 6:18; 8:26-36; 9:38-42; At 10:37, 38.

A maneira de Jesus curar as pessoas assumiu várias formas, em ocasiões diferentes. "Levanta-te, apanha a tua maca e anda", foi tudo o que Jesus disse em certa ocasião, e o homem doente, perto do reservatório de água de Betsata foi curado. (Jo 5:2-9) Em outro caso, Jesus apenas proferiu a palavra e o enfermo, embora a certa distância, foi curado. (Mt 8:5-13) Em outras ocasiões, ele tocava no doente com a mão (Mt 8:14, 15), ou tocava na ferida e curava-a. (Lu 22:50, 51) Diversos doentes simplesmente tocaram em Jesus, ou mesmo só na aba da sua veste, e foram curados. (Mt 14:36; Mr 6:56; Lu 6:19; 8:43-47) E não fazia diferença que a pessoa já estivesse sofrendo muitos anos da doença. — Mt 9:20-22; Lu 13:11-13; Jo 5:5-9.

Alguns opunham-se a Jesus, não reconhecendo a maravilhosa obra de cura que ele fazia. Os líderes religiosos ficavam muito irados quando Jesus curava pessoas no sábado. (Mt 12:9-14; Lu 14:1-6; Jo 5:10-16) Numa dessas ocasiões, Jesus silenciou os oponentes por dizer: "Hipócritas, não é que cada um de vós, no sábado, desata da baia o seu touro ou o seu jumento e o leva para dar-lhe de beber? Não era então apropriado que esta mulher, que é filha de Abraão, e a quem Satanás manteve amarrada, ora! por dezoito anos, fosse solta deste laço no dia de sábado?" — Lu 13:10-17.

O que curava os doentes não era a aplicação do poder, do conhecimento ou da sabedoria do próprio Jesus. Tampouco era a hipnoterapia, a psicoterapia ou algum método similar. Antes, era o espírito e o poder de Jeová que realizava essas curas. (Lu 5:17; 9:43) Nem todos, porém, eram suficientemente gratos a ponto de dar a Deus a glória por essas curas. (Lu 17:12-18) Hoje, nem todos reconhecem os benefícios eternos de cura disponíveis por meio do sacrifício de resgate de Cristo. — 1Pe 2:24.

Jesus delegou esse poder divino de cura a outros, intimamente associados com ele no seu ministério. Quando enviou os 12 apóstolos, e, mais tarde, os 70 discípulos, estes receberam o poder de curar os doentes. (Mt 10:5, 8; Lu 10:1, 8, 9) Depois de Pentecostes de 33 EC, alguns, inclusive Pedro, João, Filipe e Paulo, receberam este poder divino de curar completamente. (At 3:1-16; 4:14; 5:15, 16; 8:6, 7; 9:32-34; 28:8, 9) Depois de o cristianismo ficar firmemente arraigado, e com o desaparecimento dos apóstolos do cenário, cessaram também esses "dons de curar". — 1Co 12:8, 9, 28, 30; 13:8, 13.

Era importante que aquele que realizasse a cura tivesse plena fé e confiança em Jeová, e reconhecesse, assim como Jesus fazia, que a cura era realizada pelo poder de Deus. (Mt 17:14-20; Jo 5:19) Não era necessário, porém, que os que padeciam tivessem fé antes de ser curados. (Jo 5:5-9, 13) Muitos, porém, tinham deveras forte fé. — Mt 8:5-13; 15:28; Mr 5:34; Lu 7:1-10; 17:19; At 14:8-10; veja FÉ.

A cura milagrosa devia servir de "sinal" do apoio divino. (At 4:22, 29, 30) Aqueles que se negavam a reconhecer e admitir este sinal eram espiritualmente cegos e surdos. (Is 6:10; Jo 12:37-41) Portanto, visto que as curas divinas deviam servir de sinal para os incrédulos, não costumavam ser realizadas a favor dos que já eram cristãos gerados pelo espírito. Assim, quando Timóteo tinha problemas estomacais, em vez de realizar uma cura milagrosa, Paulo recomendou-lhe tomar um pouco de vinho para o seu padecimento. — 1Ti 5:23.

Cura Espiritual. Por outro lado, a verdadeira cura espiritual provém de Jeová para os arrependidos. Significa retornar ao Seu favor e usufruir novamente Suas bênçãos. (Is 19:22; 57:17-19; Je 33:6) Tal cura tem o efeito de fortalecer as mãos fracas e os joelhos vacilantes, abrir olhos cegos, restaurar a audição aos surdos, curar os coxos e dar fala aos mudos, em sentido espiritual. (Is 35:3-6) Mas os que são incorrigíveis na sua apostasia nunca recebem cura, ou restabelecimento da boa saúde e prosperidade espiritual. (2Cr 36:15-17; Is 6:10; Je 30:12, 13; At 28:24-28) De modo similar, não haveria cura para o Egito, para o seu Faraó e para o "rei da Assíria". — Je 46:11; Ez 30:21; Na 3:18, 19.

As Escrituras receitam o remédio para as pessoas espiritualmente doentes. — He 12:12, 13; Tg 5:14-16; Re 3:18.

CURIANGO (NOITIBÓ) [hebr.: li·lith]. Criatura que aparece na descrição da completa desolação de Edom e das coisas que habitariam suas ruínas. (Is 34:14) A palavra hebraica tem sido traduzida de forma diversa por "corujas" (PIB), "fantasmas" (ALA), "curiango" (NE, NM) e "espectro noturno" (CBC), ao passo que A Bíblia de Jerusalém prefere simplesmente transliterar o nome como "Lilit".

Muitos peritos esforçam-se a mostrar que o termo hebraico é uma palavra tomada do antigo sumeriano e acadiano, e que deriva do nome duma mitológica demônia do ar (Lilitu). O Professor G. R. Driver, porém, considera que a palavra hebraica (li·lith) deriva dum radical denotando "toda espécie de movimento de torcedura ou objeto retorcido", assim como a palavra hebraica lá·yil (ou lai·lah), significando "noite", sugere "enrolar-se ao redor de ou envolver a terra". Esta derivação de li·líth, sugere ele, provavelmente indica o curiango (ou noitibó), tanto como ave que se alimenta à noite, como notável pelo seu rápido voo de contorção e reviravolta, ao perseguir traças, besouros e outros insetos de voo noturno. Conforme citado por Driver, o naturalista Tristram descreveu os curiangos como "bem ativos ao anoitecer, quando caçam como o falcão a grande velocidade e dão intricadas reviravoltas ao procurar seu alimento". — Palestine Exploration Quarterly (Revista Trimestral sobre a Exploração da Palestina), Londres, 1959, pp. 55, 56.

O curiango tem quase 30 cm de comprimento, com uma envergadura de 50 cm, ou mais; sua plumagem se parece à da coruja, macia e delicadamente salpicada de cinza e marrom. As penas macias das asas permitem um voo sem ruído. Sua grande boca evidentemente é o motivo de ser também chamado de munge-cabra, uma antiga lenda sustentando que a ave mamava o leite das cabras.

Quanto à probabilidade de a ave ser encontrada na região árida de Edom, sabe-se que certas variedades desta ave habitam lugares incultos. Um noitibó egípcio (Caprimulgus aegyptius) vive quase que exclusivamente no deserto, ocupando bosquetes de acácias e de tamargueiras, buscando seu alimento no crepúsculo. Outro (Caprimulgus nubicus) é encontrado à beira do deserto entre Jericó e o Mar Vermelho, portanto, em regiões parecidas à de Edom.

CURTIDOR. Alguém perito na profissão de curtir, a arte de converter peles de animais em couros que possam ser usados na fabricação de artigos de várias espécies. (2Rs 1:8; Mt 3:4) Sem dúvida, o processo de curtimento, no passado, era realizado assim como recentemente no Oriente Médio — num curtume de uma ou duas peças, que abrigavam ferramentas e tonéis para a preparação das peles. O processo básico do curtimento envolvia (1) soltar os pelos, usualmente com uma solução de cal, (2) remover os pelos, pedacinhos de carne e de gordura aderentes às peles, e (3) curtir o couro com uma solução feita de coisas tais como casca de sumagre ou de carvalho, ou de outras espécies de planta.

Pedro passou "muitos dias em Jope com um certo Simão, que era curtidor", cuja casa ficava à beira do mar. — At 9:43; 10:32.

CURVAR-SE. Veja ATITUDES, POSTURAS E GESTOS.

CUS.

1. Primeiro filho mencionado de Cã e pai de seis filhos: Sebá, Havilá, Sabtá, Raamá, Sabteca e Ninrode. (Gên 10:6-8; 1Cr 1:8-10) Cus e seus descendentes citados por nome estão incluídos entre aqueles de quem "as nações se espalharam pela terra, depois do dilúvio". (Gên 10:32) Assim, embora no relato de Gênesis não se forneçam pormenores sobre a pessoa de Cus, seu nome é usado em todas as Escrituras Hebraicas como representando seus descendentes e as terras ou regiões que povoaram, conforme descrito no N.º 2.

Pode-se notar aqui, porém, que Cus bem evidentemente é o principal progenitor (talvez junto com Pute) do ramo de tez escura da família humana (Je 13:23), conforme indicado pelas regiões de colonização de certos dos seus descendentes. Isto refuta a teoria proposta por aqueles que incorretamente procuram aplicar aos povos negros a maldição proferida sobre Canaã, porque Canaã, irmão de Cus, não produziu nenhuns descendentes negroides, mas, antes, foi o antepassado das diversas tribos cananeias da Palestina. (Gên 9:24, 25; 10:6) Portanto, não há nenhuma ligação bíblica entre a tez escura de certos descendentes de Cus e a maldição proferida sobre Canaã.

2. Além dos relatos genealógicos no capítulo 10 de Gênesis e no capítulo 1 de 1 Crônicas, e o uso do nome no cabeçalho do Salmo 7, considerado no N.º 3, o nome Cus é usado em todos os outros textos para se referir à progênie daquele filho de Cã e ao lugar da sua morada.

O nome Cus, através do seu filho Ninrode, é associado com Babel, e o reino que Ninrode estabeleceu nos tempos pós-diluvianos. (Gên 10:8-12) Alguns relacionam o nome de Cus com a cidade antiga de Quis, revelada por escavações feitas na baixa Mesopotâmia, perto de Babilônia, e supostamente a cidade da qual imperadores do terceiro milênio AEC, em Babilônia, assumiram o título de "rei do mundo". "A Lista dos Reis Sumerianos", um registro antigo, embora altamente lendário, contém a declaração: "Depois de o Dilúvio ter assolado (a terra) (e) quando o reinado novamente foi baixado do céu, o reinado estava (primeiro) em Quis." (Ancient Near Eastern Texts [Textos Antigos do Oriente Próximo], editado por J. Pritchard, 1974, p. 265) Referindo-se a esta antiga cidade, o Professor Albright comenta: "A menos que Quis seja o protótipo do Cus de Gên. 10:8, como é bem possível, não é mencionada na Bíblia. Ninrode, de qualquer modo, foi provavelmente considerado como o primeiro governante de Quis." (Analytical Concordance to the Bible [Concordância Analítica da Bíblia], de Young, Suplemento sobre "Descobertas Recentes em Terras Bíblicas", de W. Albright, 1955, p. 14) Assim, embora Babilônia viesse depois totalmente sob domínio semítico, parece haver alguma evidência histórica que se harmoniza com o registro bíblico sobre o domínio cusita naquela região, numa época primitiva.

A "Terra de Cus". A "terra de Cus", mencionada em Gênesis 2:13 como a terra originalmente circundada pelo rio Giom, uma das quatro cabeceiras do "rio saindo do Éden", é de localização incerta. (Gên 2:10) Os tradutores da Septuaginta verteram a palavra hebraica para "Cus" pelo nome grego de Etiópia, neste texto. O nome Cus tornou-se mais ou menos sinônimo da antiga Etiópia, já bem cedo, no entanto, não se pode dizer arbitrariamente que este seja mesmo o caso em Gênesis 2:13. Josefo, seguindo a versão da Septuaginta, associou o rio Giom com o Nilo. (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], I, 39 [i, 3]) Todavia, visto que o Giom tinha nascente comum com os rios Eufrates e Tigre, isto certamente não parece permitir tal identificação, a menos que se presuma que o Dilúvio global tenha realizado mudanças extremas na topografia daquela região.

O termo "Cus", em Gênesis 2:13, portanto, é relacionado por alguns peritos com os kassu ou cassitas das inscrições assírias, povo de origem incerta que habitava a região planaltina da Ásia central. Um artigo de P. English, em Journal of Near Eastern Studies (Revista de Estudos do Oriente Próximo; 1959, Vol. XVIII, pp. 49-53) apresenta evidência de uma população negra, nos tempos antigos, na região da extremidade SE do Mar Negro, e, mais tarde, na região do Cáucaso, mais ao N. Ela sugere uma relação entre os nomes das regiões de Abcásia e Cazaria, habitadas por tais tribos, e a bíblica Cus. Naturalmente, existe a possibilidade de que a referência a Cus, em Gênesis 2:13, se aplique a algum segmento da família cusita, que não migrou para o sul, junto com o grupo principal dos cusitas, mas que se fixou na região da Ásia Menor, acima descrita.

Ainda outros sugerem que a “terra de Cus”, circundada pelo Giom, encontrava-se na península Arábica, visto que o nome “Cusã” é usado em paralelo com a “terra de Midiã”, em Habacuque 3:7, localizando-se Midiã em geral na vizinhança do golfo de ʽAqaba. Possivelmente é com referência a tal “Cus” árabe que a esposa midianita de Moisés, Zípora, era chamada de “cusita”. — Êx 18:1-5; Núm 12:1.

Após a Torre de Babel. Depois da dispersão em Babel, por causa da confusão das línguas, o grupo principal dos descendentes de Cus parece ter migrado para o sul. Não é certo se chegaram à África por primeiro passarem para a península Arábica e depois atravessarem o pequeno estreito conhecido como Bab el-Mandeb, ou se inicialmente se estabeleceram na África e depois passaram para a Arábia, embora a associação básica de “Cus” com a África talvez favoreça esta migração posterior. O nome de Sebá, filho de Cus, é associado com a África Oriental, ao passo que os de Havilá, Sabtá, Raamá e Sabteca em geral são associados com regiões da península Arábica. (Veja os artigos respectivos, sob os nomes dos filhos.) Deve-se notar que, embora os nomes desses filhos parecem ter sido perpetuados por tribos descendentes deles, este não parece ser o caso com o nome de Ninrode, cujo nome aparece na história antiga apenas como o duma pessoa. Isto talvez indique que Ninrode não teve filhos.

Embora cusitas pudessem ser encontrados na Arábia, o nome Cus, conforme usado na Bíblia, na maioria dos casos se refere claramente a uma região na África, e, onde esta relação é óbvia, os tradutores vertem “Cus” simplesmente por “Etiópia”. É regularmente associado com o Egito (Is 20:3-5; 43:3; Je 46:7-9) e também com a Líbia. (2Cr 12:2, 3; Da 11:43; Na 3:9) Isaías 11:11 apresenta as antigas designações geográficas das divisões regionais que se estendiam para o sul a partir do delta do Nilo: “Egito” (ou “Mizraim”, aqui, Baixo Egito), “Patros” (Alto Egito) e “Cus” (Núbia-Etiópia). Ezequiel 29:10 fala da devastação do Egito “desde Migdol até Siene, e até o termo da Etiópia [Cus]”. De modo que Cus, ou a antiga Etiópia, parece ter estado situada além de Siene (a moderna Assuã), e, segundo a evidência arqueológica, prosseguia para o S, talvez até a moderna Cartum. Cus abrangia assim o que hoje é o Sudão e a parte mais ao sul do Egito moderno. Sugeriu-se que os “rios da Etiópia [Cus]” tenham sido o Nilo Azul e o Nilo Branco, que confluem em Cartum, e também o rio Atbara, que se junta ao Nilo ao S da quinta catarata. — Sof 3:10.

Os “árabes que estavam do lado dos etíopes [Kushím]” (2Cr 21:16) possivelmente eram aquelas tribos árabes que ocupavam a costa SO da península Arábica e assim se defrontavam com a África através do Mar Vermelho.

Grande parte da terra de Cus evidentemente era deserto árido. A “região dos rios da Etiópia” é descrita como “terra dos insetos zumbidores com asas” (Is 18:1), talvez referindo-se aos gafanhotos que voam em enxames na Etiópia e no Egito; todavia, alguns sugerem os mosquitos, e outros salientam que a palavra hebraica para “zumbidores” (tselatsál) se parece ao som do nome dado à mosca tsé-tsé (tsaltsalya) pelas tribos oromo (povo camítico que vive na moderna Etiópia). Marfim, ébano, ouro, pedras preciosas, ferro e substâncias aromáticas eram produtos do país, e a Bíblia faz menção de “mercadores da Etiópia” (Is 45:14) e do “topázio de Cus”. — Jó 28:19.

História Posterior. Cus, ou Etiópia, passou a estar sob domínio egípcio por volta do tempo do Êxodo de Israel do Egito, e continuou assim por uns 500 anos. O vice-rei que administrava este domínio sob o faraó egípcio era conhecido pelo título de “Filho do Rei, de Cus”. Evidentemente, perto do fim do segundo milênio AEC, a Etiópia libertou-se do controle egípcio. A capital etíope ficou depois situada primeiro em Napata, perto da quarta catarata, e mais tarde em Méroe, a uns 210 km a NNE de Cartum.

Guerreiros etíopes constituíam parte das forças do Faraó Sisaque que atacaram Judá no quinto ano de Roboão (993 AEC). (2Cr 12:2, 3) Após o décimo ano do Rei Asa, ou por volta de 967 AEC, o etíope Zerá marchou contra Judá com um milhão de homens, mas sofreu uma derrota total em Maressa. — 2Cr 14:1, 9-15; 16:8.

A história secular mostra que na última parte do oitavo século AEC a Etiópia conquistou o Egito e dominou-o por uns 60 anos. Isto ocorreu durante a “Vigésima Quinta Dinastia (Etíope)”, que incluía nos seus governantes o Rei Taarca, chamado Tiraca na Bíblia. Este rei veio contra as forças de Senaqueribe, durante a invasão deste de Judá (732 AEC), mas, segundo inscrições assírias, foi derrotado em Eltequé. — 2Rs 19:9; Is 37:8, 9.

Os imperadores assírios Esar-Hadom e Assurbanipal invadiram o Egito durante os seus respectivos reinados, e a destruição de Tebas, no Alto Egito (chamada Nô-Amom em Na 3:8-10), por Assurbanipal (c. 684 AEC), subjugou totalmente o Egito e acabou também com o domínio etíope sobre o vale do Nilo. Isto cumpriu a profecia proferida cerca de meio século antes pelo profeta Isaías. — Is 20:3-6.

Na batalha de Carquemis, em 625 AEC, as forças etíopes faziam parte do exército do Faraó Neco, o qual sofreu ali derrota às mãos de Nabucodonosor. (Je 46:2, 9) A posterior invasão do Egito por Nabucodonosor (possivelmente em 588 AEC) causou "dores agudas" em Cus e foi "fazer tremer a Etiópia [Cus] confiante em si própria". — Ez 29:19; 30:4-9.

O rei persa Cambises II (529-522 AEC) conquistou o Egito durante os dias do Faraó Psamético III, e isto abriu o caminho para levar a Etiópia sob controle persa; assim, podia-se dizer que Assuero (Xerxes I) governava "desde a Índia até a Etiópia [Cus]". (Est 1:1; 8:9) Confirmando isso, Xerxes declara numa inscrição: "Estes são os países — em adição à Pérsia — sobre os quais sou rei . . . Índia . . . (e) Cus." — Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 316.

Predisse-se que os exilados de Judá retornariam à sua pátria procedentes de países longínquos, inclusive Cus. (Is 11:11, 12; veja Sof 3:10.) Na profecia de Daniel a respeito do "tempo do fim", o agressivo "rei do norte" é descrito como tendo a Etiópia e a Líbia 'acompanhando os seus passos', isto é, acatando suas ordens. (Da 11:40-43) A Etiópia (Cus) também tem lugar nas iníquas forças de batalha de "Gogue da terra de Magogue", no seu tempestuoso ataque contra os reajuntados de Jeová, "na parte final dos anos". (Ez 38:2-5, 8) Todavia, o salmista prediz favoravelmente que Cus seria contado entre os que trariam dádivas a Deus. — Sal 68:29-32.

3. O cabeçalho do Salmo 7 declara que este salmo é "referente às palavras de Cus, o benjaminita". Não se faz outra menção desta pessoa. Se o salmo se referir ao período inicial da história de Davi, a referência talvez seja a um opositor de Davi na corte de Saul; se se referir a um período posterior, o nome talvez tenha sido usado para se referir enigmaticamente a Simei, o benjaminita, que amaldiçoou a Davi. — 2Sa 16:5-8.

CUSÃ. Cusã aparece em Habacuque 3:7 em paralelo com a "terra de Midiã", e, por isso, evidentemente é outro nome de Midiã, ou se relaciona com um país vizinho. Conforme mostrado no artigo CUS (N.º 2), alguns descendentes de Cus parecem ter-se estabelecido na península Arábica; e o nome Kusi ou Kushim era antigamente usado para descrever certos povos árabes daquela região.

CUSAÍAS. Levita da família de Merari e pai ou antepassado de Etã, um do grupo dos cantores e músicos levitas nos dias de Davi. (1Cr 15:16, 17) Cusaías evidentemente é chamado Quisi em 1 Crônicas 6:44.

CUSÃ-RISATAIM [possivelmente: Cusita (Etíope) da Dupla Iniquidade]. Rei da Mesopotâmia, de cujo domínio Otniel libertou os israelitas depois de oito anos de servidão. Ele é também chamado de "o rei da Síria". (Jz 3:7-11) Alguns consideram a segunda metade ("Risataim") deste nome composto como nome dum lugar ou duma região, ao passo que outros o traduzem no sentido de "Dupla Iniquidade". "Cusã" é usado em Habacuque 3:7 em paralelo com Midiã; todavia, declara-se que o Rei Cusã-Risataim era da Mesopotâmia (hebr.: 'Arám na·hará·yim, veja Gên 24:10, onde o mesmo termo é usado para descrever a localização da cidade de Naor, na Síria). Uma lista do Faraó Ramsés III menciona um distrito na Síria setentrional chamado Qusanaruma, e alguns peritos sugerem ter este sido a possível sede do domínio deste rei. Cusã-Risataim foi o primeiro grande opressor de Israel durante o período dos juízes.

CUSI [Cusita, Etíope].

1. Pai do profeta Sofonias. — Sof 1:1.

2. Antepassado de Jeudi, que serviu na corte do Rei Jeoiaquim. — Je 36:14.

CUSITA [De (Pertencente a) Cus (Etiópia)]. O termo cusita pode referir-se aos habitantes da terra de Cus, na África, ou pode, em alguns casos, aplicar-se a pessoas residentes na península Arábica. Esta última identificação evidentemente se aplica à esposa de Moisés, Zípora. (Êx 18:1-5; Núm 12:1) Zípora era queneia, cuja linhagem ancestral não está definida. (Gên 15:18, 19; Jz 4:11) A expressão, em 2 Crônicas 21:16, "do lado dos etíopes [cusitas]", como aplicando-se a certos árabes, pode também significar "sob o controle dos etíopes", e isto talvez forneça uma base para se aplicar o nome "cusita" a pessoas que não descendiam de Cus. Crê-se que diversos dos filhos de Cus se estabeleceram na península Arábica. — Veja HAVILÁ N.º 3; SABTÁ.

Basicamente, porém, "cusita" refere-se a africanos residentes na região antigamente chamada Etiópia. Além de "Zerá, o etíope [cusita]" e "Tiraca, rei da Etiópia" (2Cr 14:9; 2Rs 19:9), outros cusitas mencionados na Bíblia são Ebede-Meleque (Je 38:7-12; 39:16-18), o eunuco etíope que se tornou converso do cristianismo, e a rainha a que ele servia, Candace. (At 8:26, 27) O general Joabe escolheu um corredor cusita, cujo nome não é mencionado, (chamado Cusi, na Al) em vez de um israelita, para levar a Davi a notícia da derrota e morte do filho deste, Absalão. — 2Sa 18:19-32; veja CUS N.º 2.

CUSTÓDIA, DETENÇÃO. A guarda e retenção de alguma coisa; a detenção de alguém por processo legal ou por autoridade; o próprio encarceramento.

A lei bíblica que mais claramente explica as responsabilidades do guardião encontra-se delineada em Êxodo 22:10-13, envolvendo animais confiados aos cuidados de outra pessoa. Esta lei, sem dúvida baseada numa anterior lei patriarcal (Gên 31:39), declara: "Caso um homem dê ao seu próximo . . . qualquer animal doméstico para guardar, e este deveras morra ou fique aleijado, ou seja levado embora quando ninguém está olhando, . . . o outro não deve dar compensação. Mas, se de fato lhe foram roubados, deve dar uma compensação ao seu dono. Se de fato foi dilacerado por uma fera, deve trazê-lo como evidência. Não deve dar compensação por algo dilacerado por uma fera." — Veja Gên 30:31.

Quando um pastor ou vaqueiro dizia que cuidaria ou guardaria um rebanho ou uma manada, ele indicava a aceitação legal da custódia destes animais. Garantia assim ao dono que esses seriam alimentados e não roubados, senão pagaria uma compensação. Todavia, a responsabilidade dele não era absoluta, porque a lei acima absolvia o guardião da responsabilidade em caso duma ocorrência além de controle humano normal, tal como ataques por animais selvagens. Para ficar livre da responsabilidade da custódia, porém, ele tinha de apresentar ao dono uma evidência tal como, por exemplo, a carcaça dilacerada. O dono, ao examinar essa evidência, era obrigado a declarar inocente o guardião.

O mesmo princípio se aplicava, em geral, a qualquer propriedade dada em custódia, mesmo nos relacionamentos familiares, sendo, por exemplo, o irmão mais velho considerado o guardião legal dos seus irmãos e irmãs mais novos. Por isso podemos entender a preocupação que Rubem, como filho mais velho, tinha com a vida de José, conforme registrado em Gênesis 37:18-30, quando os outros irmãos falaram em matá-lo. "Disse: 'Não golpeemos fatalmente a sua alma.' . . . 'Não derrameis sangue. . . . não deiteis mão violenta nele.' Seu objetivo era livrá-lo da mão deles, a fim de o restituir a seu pai." E quando Rubem se deu conta da ausência de José, sua ansiedade foi tão grande, que 'rasgou as suas vestes' e exclamou: "O menino despareceu! E eu — para onde é que irei eu?" Ele sabia que podia ser considerado responsável pela perda de José. A fim de escapar da responsabilidade, os irmãos astutamente forjaram evidência no sentido de que José tinha sido morto por uma fera selvagem. Fizeram isso por mergulhar a túnica listrada de José no sangue dum bode. Depois apresentaram a evidência a Jacó, seu pai e juiz patriarcal, o qual absolveu Rubem de qualquer responsabilidade, porque, à base da veste de José, manchada de sangue, que os irmãos deste apresentaram como evidência, Jacó concluiu que José havia sido morto. — Gên 37:31-33.

Em Gálatas 3:19-25, faz-se uma aplicação espiritual dos termos "guardados" e "detenção". Paulo diz que a Lei tornava as transgressões manifestas e que "a Escritura entregou todas as coisas juntas à detenção pelo pecado". Mas, ele continua: "No entanto, antes de chegar a fé, estávamos sendo guardados debaixo de lei, entregues junto à detenção, aguardando a fé que estava destinada a ser revelada." Ele enfatizou assim como o Israel natural se encontrava em detenção ou custódia espiritual, sendo guardado ou mantido pela Lei, até que chegasse a fé para com Cristo.

A custódia, em alguns casos, conforme usada na Bíblia, refere-se à detenção duma pessoa. Um exemplo disso é o meio-israelita que ultrajou o nome de Jeová enquanto estava no acampamento de Israel. Depois de ele ter transgredido a Lei, o relato declara: "Puseram-no então em detenção até que se lhes desse um esclarecimento segundo a declaração de Jeová." (Le 24:10-16, 23) Por via de regra, Israel não mantinha os criminosos em prolongada detenção, porque tinha de executar prontamente a justiça. (Jos 7:20, 22-25) Todavia, neste caso, bem como no caso do violador do sábado, em Números 15:32-36, aguardava-se um esclarecimento da lei; mas, assim que a declaração de Jeová sobre o assunto ficou clara, a sentença foi executada imediatamente. De modo similar, Pedro e os outros apóstolos foram postos em detenção, embora injustamente, à espera do julgamento perante o Sinédrio, no dia seguinte. (At 4:3; 5:17, 18) As Escrituras mencionam também que Jeremias foi injustamente posto em custódia, não apenas à espera dum julgamento, mas realmente encarcerado. — Je 37:21.

CUTE, CUTA. Tanto "Cute" como "Cuta" referem-se à mesma pátria original dum povo trasladado pelo rei da Assíria para as cidades de Samaria, após o exílio de Israel em 740 AEC. (2Rs 17:23, 24, 30) Os deportados de Cuta e de outros lugares, porém, foram afligidos por leões que matavam gente, e, ao apelarem para o rei assírio para dar ajuda, deu-se-lhes um sacerdote que anteriormente era do reino setentrional de Israel. Visto que a adoração praticada em Israel já por muito tempo tinha sido desaprovada por Deus (1Rs 13:33, 34; 16:31-33), os ofícios deste sacerdote não produziram genuínos adoradores de Jeová, de modo que esses colonos "mostraram ser adoradores dos seus próprios deuses", sendo que os de Cuta continuaram a servir seu deus Nergal. A raça constituída por casamentos mistos do 'povo de Cuta' e de outras nações com os israelitas remanescentes passou a ser chamada em geral de "samaritanos". De acordo com Josefo, eram "chamados de chuthaioi (cutins) na língua hebraica, e samareitai (samaritanos) pelos gregos". (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], IX, 290 [xiv, 3]) A designação

"cutins" evidentemente foi usada por causa da predominância do povo de Cuta entre os colonos originais. — 2Rs 17:24-41.

A descoberta de tabuinhas de contratos em Tell Ibrahim (Imam Ibrahim), a uns 50 km ao NE de Babilônia, que contêm o nome Kutu (equivalente acadiano de Cute), tem levado a maioria dos geógrafos a identificar Tell Ibrahim com a Cuta bíblica. Há indícios de que Cuta, antigamente, estava entre as mais importantes cidades do Império Babilônico e provavelmente era também bastante grande, visto que a elevação que hoje indica sua localização tem uns 18 m de altura e 3 km de circunferência. O lugar que se pensa ter sido ocupado por um antigo templo dedicado a Nergal é indicado no meio dessas ruínas, em harmonia com a declaração bíblica de que "os homens de Cute" eram devotos deste deus. — 2Rs 17:29, 30.

CUTELO. Veja FACA, CUTELO.

CUZA. "Encarregado" de Herodes Ântipas, possivelmente de assuntos domésticos. A esposa de Cuza, Joana, ministrava a Jesus. — Lu 8:3; veja JOANA.

D

DÃ [Juiz].

1. O 5.º dos 12 filhos varões de Jacó; nascido em Padã-Arã. (Gên 35:25, 26) Dã era o primogênito de sua mãe Bila, serva da sua senhora estéril, Raquel, substituindo-a como esposa secundária de Jacó. Foi por esta razão que Raquel adotou logo o menino e lhe deu o nome de Dã, dizendo: "Deus tem agido como meu juiz . . . de modo que me deu um filho." (Gên 30:6) O nome do irmão germano de Dã era Naftali. Na época em que Jacó se mudou para o Egito, levando consigo todos os da sua casa, o próprio Dã já tinha um filho de nome Husim (chamado Suão em Núm 26:42). (Gên 46:7, 23, 26) Dezessete anos mais tarde, quando o moribundo Jacó chamou os filhos à sua cabeceira, Dã tinha plena condição legal ao lado dos outros 11 como chefes de família das 12 tribos de Israel. Abençoando-o, Jacó disse: "Dã julgará seu povo como uma das tribos de Israel. Mostre-se Dã uma serpente à beira da estrada, uma cobra cornuda à beira da vereda, que morde os talões do cavalo, de modo que o seu cavaleiro cai para trás. Deveras aguardarei a salvação procedente de ti, ó Jeová." — Gên 49:16-18.

2. Uma das tribos de Israel, levando o nome do 5.º filho de Jacó. Husim, filho de Dã, era também chamado de Suão, e os suamitas eram a única família alistada de Dã. (Núm 26:42) Quando entrou no Egito, Dã tinha apenas este único filho, mas, uns dois séculos mais tarde, depois de sair da escravidão, a tribo somava 62.700 homens de 20 anos de idade para cima. (Gên 46:23; Núm 1:1, 38, 39) Era a segunda tribo mais populosa quanto a homens em idade de ir à guerra. No ermo, a tribo de Dã, tendo a Aiezer por maioral, foi designada para acampar ao N do tabernáculo, ao lado das tribos de Aser e Naftali. Ao partirem, a tribo marchava na importantíssima posição de retaguarda, um elogio à sua coragem, lealdade e confiabilidade. — Núm 2:25-31; 10:25.

Quando a Terra da Promessa foi repartida, sendo Dã representada pelo maioral Buqui, filho de Jogli, resultou que esta tribo recebeu um dos menores territórios, apesar de numericamente ainda ser a segunda maior. Sua sorte, porém, a sétima, saiu para um solo bem desejável, fronteiro às tribos de Judá, Efraim e Benjamim, uma terra que se estendia desde os vales férteis da Sefelá até as planícies costeiras do Mediterrâneo. Mas, por não ter expulsado as nações que a ocupavam, conforme Jeová ordenara, Dã sofreu severamente. (Núm 26:43; 34:22; Jos 19:40-46; Jz 1:34) Foi por este motivo que parte da tribo se mudou para a extremidade setentrional da Palestina e tomou a cidade de Lesem, ou Laís, e chamou-a de "Dã". (Jos 19:47, 48; Jz 18:11-31) No decorrer desta façanha, os danitas roubaram dum homem chamado Micá a sua imagem esculpida e a estabeleceram como seu próprio deus, apesar de que membros de Dã, anos antes, haviam sido escolhidos para ficar de pé para as maldições proclamadas desde o monte Ebal, as quais incluíam: "Maldito o homem que fizer uma imagem esculpida ou uma estátua fundida, uma coisa detestável para Jeová." (De 27:13-15) Dã ficou conspícuo por não dar apoio ao juiz Baraque contra as forças de Sísera. — Jz 5:17.

Na história bíblica, certas pessoas da tribo de Dã destacaram-se. Havia Ooliabe, filho de Aisamaque, que recebeu sabedoria divina para ajudar Bezalel; era um homem muito hábil como bordador e tecelão de materiais caros para guarnecer o tabernáculo. (Êx 31:1-6; 35:34, 35; 38:22, 23) Sansão, fiel servo de Jeová como juiz de Israel durante 20 anos, mostrou ser verdadeira tanto a profecia de leito de morte de Jacó ("Dã julgará seu povo") como a predição de Moisés ("Dã é filhote de leão"). (Gên 49:16; De 33:22; Jz 13:2, 24, 25; 15:20) Quando Davi se tornou rei, 28.600 danitas faziam parte das suas tropas leais. Mais tarde menciona-se Azarel, filho de Jeroão, como destacado príncipe da tribo. (1Cr 12:35; 27:22) A mãe do "homem hábil" que o rei de Tiro enviou para ajudar Salomão na construção do templo era da tribo de Dã. — 2Cr 2:13, 14.

3. Cidade no extremo N da Palestina. Antes de sua captura pela tribo de Dã era chamada de Lesem, ou Laís, pelos habitantes pagãos. (Jos 19:47; Jz 18:7, 27) Os danitas reconstruíram a cidade destruída e chamaram-na de "Dã, segundo o nome de seu pai, Dã". (Jz 18:28, 29) No entanto, a cidade é mencionada cerca de quatro séculos antes pelo nome de Dã, no relato sobre Abraão ir "até Dã" no encalço de Quedorlaomer e seus aliados. (Gên 14:14) Não há nenhum argumento contrário à existência deste nome, Dã, como aplicado à região indicada no tempo de Abraão. A correspondência deste nome primitivo com o do antepassado da tribo de Dã pode ter sido coincidência ou mesmo ter sido divinamente dirigida.

O nome Dã aparece de novo no Pentateuco, em Deuteronômio 34:1, onde está incluído entre as extremidades do território visto por Moisés na sua última vista da Terra da Promessa, da sua posição no monte Nebo. Visto que Dã ficava ao sopé das montanhas Antilíbano (e não muito longe do monte Hermom), isto talvez signifique que Moisés podia enxergar aquela cadeia de montanhas. O uso do nome de Dã, aqui, talvez corresponda ao seu uso no caso de Abraão, ou simplesmente seja resultado de Josué ter registrado a parte final do livro, que inclui eventos ocorridos depois da morte de Moisés.

Dã ficava "na baixada que pertencia a Bete-Reobe", e, esta região, ao N das águas de Merom e pouco abaixo do Líbano, era fértil e muito desejável, bem regada. (Jz 18:28) O lugar tem sido identificado com Tell el-Qadi (Tel Dan), nome árabe que significa "Outeiro do Juiz", preservando assim o significado do hebraico "Dã". Duas nascentes ali se juntam para formar o Nahr el-Leddan, que é a mais caudalosa das correntes que se unem uns poucos quilômetros mais abaixo para formar o Jordão. A cidade encontrava-se numa grande elevação perto do sopé meridional do monte Hermom e dominava a espaçosa bacia de Hulé. Sua posição era também estratégica, visto que se encontrava na importante rota comercial entre Tiro e Damasco.

Dã passou a ser sinônimo do extremo N de Israel, conforme mostra a frequente expressão "desde Dã até Berseba". (Jz 20:1; 1Sa 3:20; 2Sa 3:10; 1Rs 4:25; 2Cr 30:5) Na realidade, havia outras cidades mais ao N de Dã, assim como havia diversas cidades mais ao S de Berseba, mas, pelo que parece, Dã era uma cidade de grande importância no N, assim como Berseba era no S. Por causa da sua posição, era logicamente uma das primeiras a sofrer quando o país era invadido desde o N, como na invasão pelo sírio Ben-Hadade. (1Rs 15:20; 2Cr 16:4) Isto, sem dúvida, é refletido nas expressões proféticas de Jeremias, em Jeremias 4:15; 8:16. Após a divisão do reino, Jeroboão erigiu bezerros de ouro em Dã e em Betel, no empenho de manter seus súditos afastados do templo em Jerusalém. — 1Rs 12:28-30; 2Rs 10:29.

DABERATE [Pasto]. Cidade mencionada na lista da fronteira de Zebulão (Jos 19:10, 12), mas considerada como pertencente à tribo vizinha de Issacar, ao ser mais tarde aquinhoada, junto com seus pastios, aos levitas da família de Gérson (Gersom). (Jos 21:27, 28; 1Cr 6:71, 72) Daberate não está incluída na lista dos lugares designados a Issacar, mas, muitos geógrafos acham provável ser ela representada por Rabite, em Josué 19:20, conceito que encontra apoio no texto do Manuscrito Vaticano N.º 1209. — Veja RABITE.

Ruínas da área do santuário e um altar reconstruído na cidade de Dã. Aqui no norte, perto das nascentes do rio Jordão, Jeroboão estabeleceu o segundo centro para a adoração de bezerros.

Daberate é hoje identificada com as ruínas em Khirbet Dabura (Horvat Devora), perto da aldeia de Dabburiya, no sopé NO do monte Tabor.

DABESETE [Corcova]. Cidade de Zebulão. (Jos 19:11) Sua localização exata é desconhecida; no entanto, o lugar de Tell esh-Shammam (Tel Shem), a uns 5 km ao L de Jocneão, na planície de Jezreel, parece enquadrar-se no contexto bíblico.

DÁDIVAS, PRESENTES. Desde os tempos mais remotos, dar presentes tem desempenhado um papel importante na vida diária. O servo idoso de Abraão deu joias de presente a Rebeca, após ter visto a evidência de que Jeová a escolhera como esposa para Isaque. (Gên 24:13-22) Daí, ao receber de Labão e Betuel a aprovação do casamento, o servo de Abraão deu presentes adicionais a Rebeca e também "coisas seletas ao irmão dela e à mãe dela". (Gên 24:50-53) Mais tarde, Abraão entregou a Isaque todos os seus bens, mas deu dádivas aos filhos das suas concubinas e mandou-os embora. — Gên 25:5, 6; compare isso com 2Cr 21:3.

Talvez fosse costume nos tempos patriarcais dar presentes aos que tivessem sofrido adversidade. Quando Jeová fez recuar a condição cativa de Jó, seus irmãos, suas irmãs e seus anteriores conhecidos não só vieram consolá-lo, mas cada um deles deu-lhe "uma peça de dinheiro, e, cada um, uma argola de ouro". — Jó 42:10, 11.

Dar Presentes Como Meio de Obter Benefícios. Muitas vezes davam-se presentes com o objetivo de obter algo desejável. Jacó aprontou um impressionante presente de gado para Esaú, a fim de obter favor aos olhos do seu irmão. (Gên 32:13-18; 33:8) A insistência de Jacó em que Esaú aceitasse este presente pode ser entendida melhor quando se considera que, segundo o costume oriental, recusar um presente indicava que não se concederia nenhum favor. (Gên 33:10) Também, para granjear a boa vontade do ríspido administrador de alimentos do Egito (que na realidade era seu próprio irmão José), os filhos de Jacó acataram a recomendação de seu pai, de levar um presente dos melhores produtos do país. (Gên 42:30; 43:11, 25, 26) O Rei Asa enviou um presente de prata e ouro a Ben-Hadade, a fim de induzi-lo a romper seu pacto com Baasa, rei de Israel. — 1Rs 15:18, 19.

A respeito dos benefícios advindos para o presenteador, o provérbio diz: "A dádiva do homem fará para ele uma grande abertura e o guiará até mesmo perante gente grande." (Pr 18:16) Uma dádiva pode aplacar a ira, mas não abrandará o furor dum varão vigoroso contra aquele que cometeu adultério com a sua esposa, não importa quão grandioso seja o presente oferecido pelo adúltero. — Pr 21:14; 6:32-35.

Dádivas a Reis, Profetas e Outros. Há indícios de que era costume que aqueles que iam à presença dum rei levassem presentes. "Homens imprestáveis", que não tinham nenhum respeito por Saul, são destacados como não lhe trazendo nenhum presente. Salomão, em especial, recebeu presentes em grande abundância daqueles que vinham de terras distantes para ouvir a sabedoria dele. Os astrólogos que vieram ver "aquele que nasceu rei dos judeus" simplesmente seguiam este costume quando presentearam o menino Jesus com dádivas. (1Sa 10:27; 1Rs 10:10, 24, 25; Mt 2:1, 2, 11; veja também 2Rs 20:12; 2Cr 17:5.) Similarmente, os que consultavam um profeta às vezes levavam consigo uma dádiva. (1Sa 9:7; 2Rs 8:8, 9) Mas os profetas de Deus não esperavam nem buscavam um presente pelos seus serviços, conforme se evidencia na recusa de Eliseu, de aceitar "um presente de bênção" da mão de Naamã. — 2Rs 5:15, 16.

Frequentemente se davam presentes para recompensar os que realizaram com bom êxito certa tarefa. (2Sa 18:11; Da 2:6, 48; 5:16, 17, 29) Segundo a Lei, o escravo emancipado não devia ser mandado embora de mãos vazias, mas devia receber um presente, algo do rebanho, da eira, e do lagar de azeite e de vinho. (De 15:13, 14) Também, ocasiões de grande regozijo talvez fossem acompanhadas por se darem presentes. — Est 9:20-22; compare isso com Re 11:10.

Em Relação ao Santuário. Deus tomou os levitas como dádiva para a casa de Arão, como os dados a Jeová para executar os serviços no santuário. (Núm 18:6, 7) Também os gibeonitas e outros, constituídos servos no santuário, eram chamados netineus, que significa "Os Dados". (Jos 9:27; 1Cr 9:2; Esd 8:20) Além disso, as contribuições pela execução do serviço no santuário e também os sacrifícios eram chamados de dádivas. — Êx 28:38; Le 23:37, 38; Núm 18:29; Mt 5:23, 24; Lu 21:1.

Por Jeová ser o Criador, ele é dono de tudo. Portanto, quando o dador dá coisas materiais para a promoção da verdadeira adoração, ele apenas devolve uma parte do que originalmente recebeu de Deus. — Sal 50:10; 1Cr 29:14.

Admoestação a Respeito de Dádivas. Visto que dádivas em forma de subornos podem destruir o coração e perverter a justiça, as Escrituras admoestam que se odeiem tais dádivas. Os que correm atrás de dádivas são condenados. (De 16:19, 20; Ec 7:7; Pr 15:27; Is 1:23; veja SUBORNO.) Além disso, o "homem que se jacta falsamente de uma dádiva", não agindo em harmonia com a sua jactância, é comparado a nuvens vaporosas e ao vento sem aguaceiro. (Pr 25:14) Aquele que dá presentes talvez tenha muitos companheiros, mas as suas dádivas não lhe podem assegurar uma amizade duradoura. — Pr 19:6.

As Escrituras Gregas Cristãs censuram fortemente certas práticas relacionadas com dar presentes. Jesus condenou os escribas e os fariseus por violarem o mandamento de honrar pai e mãe. Segundo eles, quando alguém declarava que suas coisas materiais eram uma dádiva dedicada a Deus, ele estava livre da obrigação de usá-las para ajudar seus pais, embora ele mesmo pudesse continuar a usá-las. (Mt 15:1-6; veja CORBÃ.) Não há nenhum mérito em dar presentes quando se espera algo em troca. (Lu 6:30-36; 14:12-14) Para se agradar a Jeová, os presentes devem ser dados altruistamente e sem ostentação. — Mt 6:2-4; 1Co 13:3.

Dádivas Cristãs. Os primitivos cristãos faziam dádivas, ou contribuições, para seus irmãos necessitados. (Ro 15:26; 1Co 16:1, 2) Todavia, todas essas dádivas eram voluntárias, conforme indicado pelas palavras de Paulo: "Faça cada um conforme tem resolvido no seu coração, não de modo ressentido, nem sob compulsão, pois Deus ama o dador animado." (2Co 9:7) Adicionalmente, ajudavam aqueles que se devotavam inteiramente ao ministério cristão, como fazia o apóstolo Paulo. Entretanto, embora apreciasse muito as dádivas que seus irmãos lhe enviavam, Paulo não buscava receber presentes. — Fil 4:15-17.

Os cristãos podem dar coisas mais valiosas do que presentes materiais. Podem dar de seu tempo e de suas habilidades para edificar e fortalecer outros mental e espiritualmente, o que dá maior felicidade. A maior dádiva que se pode oferecer a outro é o entendimento da Palavra de Deus, porque este pode conduzir o beneficiado à vida eterna. — Jo 6:26, 27; 17:3; At 20:35; 2Co 12:15; Re 22:17; veja DÁDIVAS DE MISERICÓRDIA.

DÁDIVAS DE DEUS. Veja DONS DADOS POR DEUS.

DÁDIVAS DE MISERICÓRDIA. Trata-se de coisas dadas a alguém necessitado para aliviar a situação dele. Embora "dádivas de misericórdia" (em algumas traduções: "esmolas" ou "atos de caridade") não sejam mencionadas por este nome nas Escrituras Hebraicas, a Lei dava orientações específicas aos israelitas sobre as suas obrigações para com os pobres. Não deviam ter mão fechada, mas sim ser generosos ao lidarem com seus irmãos necessitados. — De 15:7-10.

Provisões para os Pobres em Israel. A Lei permitia que se entrasse no vinhedo e no campo de cereais de outro, comendo ali para satisfazer a fome; mas não se devia levar nada embora. (De 23:24, 25) Na colheita, os israelitas não deviam ceifar totalmente as beiradas dos seus campos, nem respigar seus campos, seus olivais e seus vinhedos, porque a respiga era para o residente forasteiro, para o menino órfão de pai e para a viúva. — Le 19:9, 10; De 24:19-21.

Cada terceiro ano, os israelitas deviam trazer toda a décima parte dos seus produtos naquele ano e depositá-la dentro dos seus portões, para o sustento dos levitas, dos residentes forasteiros, dos órfãos e das viúvas. — De 14:28, 29; veja DÍZIMO.

Todo 7.º e todo 50.º ano, ou ano de jubileu, a terra devia ficar de pousio, para usufruir um inteiro sábado de descanso, e não havia colheita regular das safras. Neste caso, o que quer que crescesse por si só devia servir de alimento para os pobres, embora o proprietário do terreno, seus escravos e seus trabalhadores contratados também tivessem direito de comer disso. Evidentemente, porém, os israelitas em geral, durante o ano sabático, recorriam aos seus suprimentos armazenados. — Êx 23:10, 11; Le 25:1-7, 11, 12, 20-22.

Os princípios relativos às obrigações de Israel para com os pobres, conforme especificados na Lei, são repetidos em outras partes das Escrituras Hebraicas. (Jó 31:16-22; Sal 37:21; 112:9; Pr 19:17; Ec 11:1, 2) Aqueles que agiam com consideração para com os de condição humilde eram chamados felizes e garantia-se-lhes uma bênção. (Sal 41:1, 2; Pr 22:9) Nos dias de Isaías, exortou-se os israelitas infiéis a repartir seu pão com os famintos, a levar para sua casa os desabrigados e a vestir os despidos — proceder que traria o favor divino. (Is 58:6, 7) Jeová disse por meio de Ezequiel a respeito do homem justo: "Deu o seu próprio pão ao faminto e cobriu com roupa ao que estava nu." — Ez 18:7-9.

Na realidade, não deveria ter havido pobres entre os israelitas, porque Jeová prometera abençoar seu povo. Mas a ausência da pobreza dependia da obediência à Lei. Portanto, em vista da imperfeição humana e da desobediência à lei de Deus, os israelitas sempre teriam pobres no seu meio. (De 15:4, 5, 11) Não obstante, a mendicância evidentemente era rara em Israel, porque uma das calamidades preditas a sobrevir ao iníquo era que seus filhos se veriam obrigados a mendigar. — Sal 109:10; compare isso com Sal 37:25; veja POBRE.

Conceitos Incorretos sobre Dádivas. Com o tempo, oferecer dádivas de misericórdia passou a ser encarado pelos judeus não só como meritório em si, mas também como tendo poder de expiar pecados. Provérbios 11:4, que diz: "Coisas valiosas de nada aproveitarão no dia da fúria, mas a justiça é que livrará da morte", passou a ser explicado como significando, em harmonia com a concepção talmúdica: "Água apaga o fogo chamejante; assim dar esmolas expia pecados." (The Jewish Encyclopedia [A Enciclopédia Judaica], 1976, Vol. I, p. 435) Evidentemente, quando Jesus Cristo estava na terra, havia os que faziam dádivas com muita ostentação, o que o induziu a falar contra tal prática no Sermão do Monte. — Mt 6:2-4.

Dádivas de Misericórdia Cristãs. Os do "pequeno rebanho" de Jesus foram incentivados a 'vender as coisas que lhes pertenciam e fazer dádivas de misericórdia'. (Lu 12:32, 33) Jesus deu ao jovem governador rico um conselho similar, acrescentando: "E vem, sê meu seguidor." (Mt 19:16-22; Lu 18:18-23; veja também Jo 13:29.) Jesus colocou ênfase em se darem "como dádivas de misericórdia as coisas que estão no íntimo". Referiu-se com isso talvez às qualidades do coração, em vista da ênfase que deu à justiça e ao amor logo depois. — Lu 11:39-42.

Medidas de socorro organizadas. Em resultado do acréscimo de uns 3.000 judeus e prosélitos à congregação cristã, no dia de Pentecostes, e do contínuo aumento numérico pouco depois, surgiu entre os cristãos uma situação incomum, que exigiu uma conjugação temporária de recursos financeiros. Destinava-se a ajudar os que tinham vindo à festividade procedentes de terras distantes a permanecer mais tempo do que haviam planejado, a fim de que pudessem aprender mais sobre a sua nova fé. Assim, os que tinham bens os venderam e entregaram o produto da venda aos apóstolos, para ser distribuído entre os necessitados. "Todos os que se tornavam crentes estavam unidos em terem todas as coisas em comum." Mas, todo este arranjo era voluntário, conforme evidencia a pergunta que Pedro fez a Ananias: "Enquanto permanecia contigo, não permanecia teu, e depois de ter sido vendido, não continuou a estar sob o teu controle?" — At 2:41-47; 4:4, 34, 35; 5:4.

Parece que, com o tempo, o alcance destas medidas de socorro diminuiu, mas ainda se distribuíam alimentos às viúvas necessitadas na congregação. Em conexão com isso, os judeus que falavam grego começaram a resmungar contra os judeus que falavam hebraico, "porque as suas viúvas estavam sendo passadas por alto na distribuição diária". Para remediar a situação, os apóstolos recomendaram que a congregação escolhesse sete homens qualificados, "cheios de espírito e de sabedoria", para distribuir os alimentos. Os homens escolhidos foram apresentados aos apóstolos, os quais, depois de oração, os designaram. O trabalho deles, sem dúvida, envolvia o manejo de dinheiro, compras e a guarda de certos registros na distribuição de alimentos. (At 6:1-6) Quando Paulo escreveu a sua primeira carta a Timóteo, ainda estava em operação um arranjo de cuidar das viúvas, conforme evidenciam as suas instruções a Timóteo sobre as qualificadas para receber tal ajuda financeira. — 1Ti 5:3-16.

Além de cuidar de viúvas, a congregação do primeiro século organizava medidas de socorro a favor de outros crentes necessitados. De novo, tais doações organizadas, embora dirigidas por homens designados da congregação, eram inteiramente voluntárias. — At 11:28-30; Ro 15:25-27; 1Co 16:1-3; 2Co 9:5, 7; veja SOCORROS.

Importância relativa da doação material. Nas Escrituras Gregas Cristãs dá-se incentivo a ser hospitaleiro e a compartilhar com outros, mas, além disso, mostra-se que prover para os membros da própria família e ajudar irmãos necessitados são requisitos cristãos. (Ro 12:13; 1Ti 5:4, 8; Tg 2:15, 16; 1Jo 3:17, 18) A preocupação sincera para com os pobres caracteriza a religião verdadeira. (Tg 1:27; 2:1-4) De fato, conforme indicado por Jesus, fazer bem aos "mínimos destes [seus] irmãos" é o que diferencia as "ovelhas" dos "cabritos". (Mt 25:31-46) Todavia, em vez de serem meros atos de humanitarismo, as ajudas dadas pelas "ovelhas" são motivadas por reconhecerem a posição dos seguidores de Cristo. — Mt 10:40-42.

Para que a dádiva resulte em verdadeira felicidade para o dador, ela tem de ser feita sem resmungar, não de modo ressentido ou sob compulsão. "Deus ama o dador animado." (2Co 9:7; At 20:35; 1Pe 4:9) Também, as dádivas materiais de misericórdia não bastam em si mesmas para se ganhar a vida eterna, e Jesus Cristo não lhes dava importância primária. — Jo 17:3; 12:1-8.

DAGOM. Deus dos filisteus. A existência de cidades chamadas "Bete-Dagom" (provavelmente chamadas pelo nome do deus Dagom) nos territórios de Judá e de Aser, sugere que a adoração desta deidade estava bem estabelecida em Canaã na época da conquista da Terra da Promessa por Israel. (Jos 15:41; 19:27) Crê-se que os filisteus adotaram dos cananeus a adoração de Dagom.

Não há acordo sobre a derivação do nome Dagom. Alguns peritos associam-no com a palavra hebraica dagh (peixe), ao passo que outros preferem relacionar o nome com a palavra hebraica daghán (cereal). Em 1 Samuel 5:4 declara-se a respeito do Dagom caído: "Só se deixara nele a parte de peixe [literalmente: "Somente Dagom"]", tendo sido decepadas a cabeça e as palmas das mãos dele.

A palavra hebraica que literalmente significa "Dagom", neste texto, tem sido vertida variadamente por alguns tradutores como "corpo" (BLH), "tronco" (Al; ALA; CBC), "o tronco de Dagon" (BJ; PIB), "o próprio Dagom" (Ro), ao passo que outros a traduziram por "tronco de peixe" (Da), "parte píscea" (Yg) ou "parte de peixe" (NM).

Às vezes, Dagom consta nas narrativas bíblicas. Sansão, apoiando-se nas duas colunas sustentadoras centrais, causou em Gaza o colapso da casa usada para a adoração de Dagom, matando os filisteus reunidos ali. (Jz 16:21-30) Os filisteus depositaram a Arca sagrada de Jeová na casa de Dagom em Asdode, como troféu de guerra. A imagem de Dagom caiu duas vezes com a face por terra diante da Arca. Na segunda vez, o próprio ídolo se quebrou. Talvez para não profanar o lugar em que os pedaços de seu deus caíram, os sacerdotes e outros, entrando no templo de Dagom, em Asdode, exerciam cuidado para não pisar no limiar. (1Sa 5:2-5) Sofrendo os dolorosos efeitos de hemorroidas e da ruína na sua terra por gerbos, os filisteus chegaram a reconhecer que a mão do Deus de Israel fora dura contra eles e seu deus Dagom. (1Sa 5:6, 7; 6:5) Quando o Rei Saul foi achado entre os mortos em Gilboa, os filisteus cortaram-lhe a cabeça. Depois de informar as casas de seus ídolos, bem como o povo na sua terra, prenderam o crânio de Saul à casa de Dagom. — 1Sa 31:8-10; 1Cr 10:8-10.

É possível que os filisteus carregassem ídolos de seu deus Dagom à batalha. — 2Sa 5:21.

DÃ-JAÃ. Lugar mencionado apenas uma vez, na rota seguida por Joabe quando fez o censo ordenado por Davi. (2Sa 24:1-6) A descrição parece situá-lo no extremo N de Israel, visto que se declara que "seguiram para Dã-Jaã e deram volta até Sídon". Mencionar-se Berseba no versículo seguinte (2Sa 24:7) traz à mente a expressão costumeira "desde Berseba até Dã", usada por Davi ao instruir Joabe a respeito do censo. (1Cr 21:2) Portanto, Dã-Jaã talvez se refira à cidade de Dã ou possivelmente a um subúrbio desta cidade setentrional. — Compare isso com Jz 18:28, 29, onde Dã e Sídon também são mencionadas juntas; veja também DÃ N.º 3.

DÁLETE [ד]. Quarta letra do alfabeto hebraico. Há uma considerável similaridade entre as letras dálete [ד] e rexe [ר], admitindo possíveis erros de escribas ao fazerem cópias. Isto talvez explique algumas diferenças de grafia, tais como a de "Rodanim" em 1 Crônicas 1:7 e a de "Dodanim" em Gênesis 10:4.

No hebraico, esta quarta letra é usada como letra inicial da primeira palavra de cada um dos oito versículos do Salmo 119:25-32. — Veja HEBRAICO.

DALFOM. Um dos dez filhos varões de Hamã. — Est 9:7, 10; veja HAMÃ.

DALILA [possivelmente: Oscilante; Pendente]. Mulher que morava no vale da torrente de Soreque. Dalila aparece no relato bíblico perto do fim dos 20 anos de juizado de Sansão, como objeto do amor dele. — Jz 16:31.

Os senhores do eixo dos filisteus, ansiosos de destruir Sansão, ofereceram cada um 1.100 peças de prata (se foram siclos, US$ 2.422) a Dalila para que descobrisse para eles em que consistia o grande poder de Sansão. Ela cooperou por interrogar Sansão sobre o que o deixaria sem forças. Cada vez que Sansão respondia, ela avisava os filisteus e ocultava guerreiros filisteus na sua casa, prontos para dominar Sansão, se perdesse a sua força. Depois de três respostas enganosas de Sansão, Dalila continuou a importuná-lo, e 'assediava-o todo o tempo com as suas palavras e instava com ele, [a ponto de que] a alma dele ficou impaciente até à morte'. Ele falou-lhe então sobre o seu nazireado, e que nunca viera navalha sobre a sua cabeça. Certa de que desta vez soubera da verdade, ela mandou chamar os senhores do eixo filisteus, e eles vieram trazer-lhe o dinheiro. Enquanto Sansão dormia sobre os joelhos dela, um ajudante cortou-lhe as sete tranças. Ao acordar, Sansão descobriu que esta vez perdera seu divinamente provido poder. Os filisteus escondidos agarraram-no, cegaram-no e levaram-no preso. (Jz 16:4-21) Dalila não mais é mencionada no relato bíblico.

A Bíblia não diz que tivesse havido relações sexuais entre Dalila e Sansão, ou que ela fosse prostituta. A prostituta mencionada em Juízes 16:1, 2, não era Dalila. Essa prostituta morava em Gaza, ao passo que Dalila morava no vale da torrente de Soreque. Também, a seguinte evidência indica que Dalila possivelmente fosse israelita, não filisteia: Quando os senhores do eixo fizeram a sua proposta, esta se baseava numa extraordinária soma de dinheiro, e não em sentimentos patrióticos. — Jz 16:5.

DALMÁCIA. Área na região montanhosa ao L do mar Adriático na península Balcânica. O nome era usado para descrever o ponto mais ao sul da província romana de Ilírico. Depois de 9 AEC, quando essa região se tornou uma província separada, tanto "Dalmácia" como "Ilírico" eram usados para se referir ao mesmo lugar. Com o tempo, "Dalmácia" passou a ser o novo nome da província. Tito, companheiro de Paulo, partiu para a Dalmácia algum tempo antes da execução do apóstolo, que se presume ter ocorrido por volta de 65 EC. (2Ti 4:6-10) No mesmo versículo em que se diz que Demas "abandonou" Paulo, menciona-se Tito como indo para lá. Todavia, embora não existam declarações específicas sobre o objetivo da missão de Tito na Dalmácia, parece que partiu com a aprovação de Paulo. Visto que Paulo, perto do fim da sua terceira viagem missionária, uns nove anos antes, dissera que seu circuito se estendia ao N até o Ilírico (Ro 15:19), alguns peritos arrazoam que Tito estava agora sendo mandado para essa região para regular seus assuntos congregacionais e empenhar-se em atividades missionárias. Neste caso, agiria numa qualidade similar à exercida por ele em Creta. (Tit 1:5) Paulo, na sua carta a Tito, pedira-lhe que deixasse Creta (Tit 3:12), e parece provável que Tito esteve com o apóstolo até a sua designação para a Dalmácia.

DALMANUTA. Uma área para a qual Jesus se retirou com seus discípulos de barco, após a alimentação milagrosa de 4.000 homens, perto do mar da Galileia. (Mr 8:1-10) Embora se tenham sugerido diversos lugares para Dalmanuta, o nome não ocorre em outras fontes bíblicas ou não bíblicas, de modo que a sua localização exata permanece incerta. Alguns peritos acham que Dalmanuta talvez seja uma alteração de escriba, visto que a narrativa paralela em Mateus 15:29-39 dá "Magadã", e certos manuscritos antigos do relato de Marcos também usam "Magadã" ou "Magdala", em vez de Dalmanuta. Todavia, visto que os melhores manuscritos gregos têm Dalmanuta, parece melhor preservar Dalmanuta, do que considerar o termo um erro de texto. Pode ser que Dalmanuta simplesmente tenha sido outro nome para Magadã, ou talvez fosse uma área vizinha, cujo nome, embora pouco usado ou não muito conhecido, não obstante foi preservado para nós no Evangelho de Marcos.

DÂMARIS. Mulher que ouviu a defesa de Paulo no Areópago (Colina de Marte) ateniense e se tornou crente. (At 17:33, 34) É possível que Dâmaris não fosse grega, visto que na sociedade ateniense as mulheres costumavam ficar reclusas. Por ser Dâmaris a única mulher mencionada, talvez ela fosse uma pessoa de certo destaque. Não há nenhuma base válida para se concluir que ela estava casada com Dionísio, só porque os dois são mencionados juntos.

DAMASCENOS [De (Pertencentes a) Damasco]. Habitantes de Damasco. (2Co 11:32) Paulo usou este termo ao relatar, uns 20 anos depois de ocorrido, como escapou por um triz daquela cidade, conforme narrado em Atos 9:23-25.

DAMASCO. Antiga e importante cidade da Síria. Damasco (a atual esh-Sham, ou Dimashq) encontra-se ao sopé da cordilheira do Antilíbano, estendendo-se diante dela para o L o vizinho deserto siro-árabe. (Cân 7:4) Ao SO da cidade, eleva-se o monte Hermom, de cume nevado, a 2.814 m, marcando a extremidade meridional da cordilheira do Antilíbano.

As encostas atrás de Damasco, na direção O, são bastante descampadas, mas as águas frescas do rio Barada (o Abana de 2Rs 5:12) descem velozmente através duma garganta nas montanhas e fluem para a planície onde se encontra a cidade. Depois, a irrigação cria um oásis luxuriante de uns 16 km de largura e 48 km de comprimento. Este abundante suprimento de água fez de Damasco um ponto-chave nas antigas rotas militares e comerciais entre as terras mediterrâneas orientais, os países da Mesopotâmia e o Oriente. O que também canaliza o tráfego por Damasco são as cordilheiras do Líbano e do Antilíbano, visto que atuam como barreiras naturais para o tráfego de caravanas na viagem ida e volta à costa do Mediterrâneo.

À NE da cidade há uma passagem que corta a cordilheira do Antilíbano. Desde tempos antigos, essa passagem se conectava à estrada principal pelo vale Coele-Syria (Beqaʽ). Essa estrada ia para o S até Hazor, daí descia ao longo do lado O do mar da Galileia, passando pelas planícies de Megido até o litoral, e continuava para o S atravessando a Filístia até chegar ao Egito. À L da cordilheira do Antilíbano, havia uma estrada que ia de Damasco até Hazor (na direção S) e uma estrada que ia de Damasco até Hamate, Alepo e Carquemis (na direção N). Outra estrada importante, normalmente chamada de Estrada Real (veja Núm 21:22), passava ao S de Damasco, acompanhando a beira do planalto ao L do Jordão e indo até o Mar Vermelho e a península Arábica. Por essas estradas marcharam os exércitos do Egito, da Assíria, de Babilônia e da Pérsia. Em ainda outra direção, caravanas que iam para a Mesopotâmia primeiro passavam pelo L de Damasco em direção a Tadmor, e dali para a região do Eufrates.

A planície onde se encontra Damasco é uma região planaltina de uns 700 m acima do nível do mar, e a cidade tem um clima agradável, com temperaturas médias que variam de cerca de 7°C no inverno a 29°C no verão. A terra muito fértil produz bons pomares de oliveiras, figueiras e damasqueiras, bem como ricos campos de cereais. A prosperidade da cidade, porém, resultou primariamente do tráfego comercial e também porque ela era o centro natural de negócios para as tribos nômades. Damasco é chamada de 'mercador de Tiro' pelo profeta Ezequiel, evidentemente cambiando vinho procedente da vizinha cidade de Helbom e lã de cor cinzento-avermelhada pelos produtos manufaturados exportados por Tiro. (Ez 27:18) As "ruas" que Ben-Hadade II ofereceu designar a Acabe em

Damasco evidentemente se destinavam ao estabelecimento de bazares, ou mercados, para promover os interesses comerciais de Acabe na capital síria. — 1Rs 20:34.

História. Desconhece-se o início da história de Damasco. Josefo (Jewish Antiquities [Antiguidades Judaicas], I, 145 [vi, 4]) apresenta o conceito judaico tradicional de que Damasco foi fundada por Uz, filho de Arã e neto de Sem, embora haja indicações duma localização mais sulina dos descendentes de Uz. (Gên 10:21-23; veja Uz N.º 4.) Abraão provavelmente passou perto de Damasco ou a atravessou em caminho para a Terra da Promessa. Eliézer, servo de Abraão que não tinha filhos, era "um homem de Damasco". (Gên 15:2) Abraão perseguiu os reis invasores até um lugar ao N de Damasco, chamado Hobá, para recuperar Ló, seu cativo sobrinho. — Gên 14:1-16.

Opõe-se a Israel. Depois disso, Damasco desaparece do relato bíblico por quase mil anos, e quando reaparece é geralmente como opositora da nação de Israel. Então já era centro de um dos muitos reinos arameus da Síria. Quando Davi combateu e derrotou o rei de Zobá, "a Síria de Damasco" veio ajudar os vencidos. Davi também a derrotou, estabeleceu guarnições no reino damasceno e tornou Damasco tributário de Israel. (2Sa 8:3-6; 1Cr 18:5, 6) Durante o reinado de Salomão, porém, um fugitivo de nome Rezom, do reino arameu de Zobá, obteve o controle sobre Damasco, estabelecendo-se como rei. Deu vazão ao seu ódio a Israel por meio de atos de agressão. — 1Rs 11:23-25.

O Rei Ben-Hadade I, de Damasco, depois de primeiro ter feito um pacto com Baasa, do reino setentrional de Israel, bandeou-se para Asa, de Judá (977-937 AEC) e invadiu o território do seu anterior aliado. (1Rs 15:18-20; 2Cr 16:2-4) Seu sucessor, Ben-Hadade II, à frente de uma coalizão de 32 reis, também invadiu o reino setentrional de Israel. Ele tentou novamente, com seu exército reorganizado debaixo de 32 governadores, mas foi derrotado nas duas vezes. (1Rs 20:1, 16-34) Embora capturado na segunda tentativa, foi solto pelo Rei Acabe (c. 940-920 AEC), e, mais tarde, na batalha de Ramote-Gileade, dirigiu sua força de carros de guerra contra as forças conjuntas de Judá e Israel, derrotando-as e causando a morte de Acabe. (1Rs 22:29-37) Durante o reinado de Jeorão, de Israel (c. 917-905 AEC), Ben-Hadade II fez uma tentativa final de capturar Samaria, mas foi milagrosamente posto em debandada. — 2Rs 6:24; 7:6, 7.

